

Re: Consultation on Opt-Out Organ Donation

I am writing to voice my concern regarding the introduction of the Opt-Out Donation System which is being considered for implementation in Northern Ireland.

Many people would consider being able to help another person by donating an organ as a good thing but this is a decision that should be made voluntarily and not something that is being dictated by a third party instead of a family member.

This is another instance in which our human rights are very subtly being taken away from individual and being placed in the hands of a government health department.
