I would appreciate a detailed explanation as to how the individuals who entered this clause ever conceived it would work in practice. 2. Planners, applicants and objectors will have to employ an army of economists to make sense of all the claims and counterclaims. 3. By what measure is economic growth to be measured? 		<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. See response to Issue 9 – Clause 2. 2. See response to Issues 9 & 11 – Clause 2. 3. Economic development is viewed by the Department as a policy intervention endeavour with aims of economic and social well-being of people, while economic growth is more a phenomenon of market productivity and measured by GDP. Clause 6 does not make reference to ‘economic growth’ however Clause 2 sets an objective for the Department of, inter alia, promoting ‘economic development’, thereby contributing towards growth in the economy.

	insert— “(1A) Without prejudice to the generality of subsection (1), the reference in that subsection to material considerations includes a reference to considerations relating to any economic advantages or disadvantages likely to result from the granting of or, as the case may be, the refusal of planning permission.”.		4. Natural disasters such as flooding or mudslide increase GDP but will certainly not be welcomed by the population at large. Should planning facilitate such disasters in the interests of a narrow definition of economic growth? 5. If jobs are a main determinant of economic development then by what are they measured? Are 12 part time jobs in one application better than the 6 full time jobs promised by another? How will the planning service enforce these applicant’s claims of future jobs? (CH)		Further guidance will be provided in the SPPS with respect to economic development. 4. No, this is not the purpose or intention of the planning system. The intention of the Bill is to speed up reforms and modernise the planning system before the majority of planning powers transfer to local government in 2015. 5. Potential (sustainable / long-term) job creation of is but one measure in considering the economic advantages of any proposed development. Moreover, the planning system does not exist to protect the private interests of one person against the activities of another, although private interests may coincide with the public interest in some cases. The basic question is whether the proposal would unacceptably affect amenities and the existing use of land and buildings that ought to be protected in the public interest. The economic advantages / disadvantages of any particular

			6. The Department should not proceed with the additional provisions without public consultation. How is the Department justifying the inclusion of additional provisions that have not been subject to public scrutiny and impact assessments? (UAF) (ABCNM) (AT)(ABC) 7. Who identified provisions for economic development as 'desirable additions'? (UAF)		proposal will therefore be relevant to the wider community as a whole i.e. in the public interest. Further policy and guidance will be published by the Department which may direct as to the scale of development to which such considerations will require greater scrutiny. The proposed SPPS will set out details on economic considerations based upon a balanced and proportionate approach which works in the public interest. 6. While the Bill does include some additional provisions over the 2011 Act, the Assembly legislative process ensures that all stakeholders will have the opportunity to comment on and influence the Bill. 7. The Minister, after discussions with the Executive Committee agreed these additions be included to the Bill.

			8. Will singling out economic considerations from the ‘any other material considerations’ give such considerations additional weight above unnamed material considerations? If not, why is it specified and why are social and environmental considerations not specified? Concerns that the perceived economic aspect would take precedent. (LVG) (UAF) 9. This is consistent with Clause 2 and is welcome (CEF) 10. What is the risk of excluding the phrase ‘as the case may be’ on each of the 2 occasions it is used in Clause 6? (DG) 11. 			(large supermarket versus local shops). (LVG) 12. The inclusion of consideration relating to economic advantages/disadvantages creates significant scope for litigation and escalating challenges between competing developers. This clause should be removed from the Bill. (SCNI)(MK) (DB) (GD) (CONF) (DN) 13. This will also require further training and guidance for planners and potentially the employment of specialist economists in the Department of the Environment. 14. It is not clear what sort of economic assessment will be required, although the across Government the most commonly accepted is a Green Book Assessment and it is difficult to see how anything less than this could provide the complete picture of the economic impact of a development. (GE) (BCAW) (BCT) (JC)		12. See response to Issue 5 above and Issue 9 Clause 2. Personal financial circumstances are not a material consideration in the planning decision making process. 13. Guidance and training will be provided by the Dept. The Department also employs economists. 14. The Department is not advocating the use of Green Book Assessment to assist it in determining the economic advantage / disadvantage (as the case may be) of any particular proposal. See also Comment 5 above. Further policy and guidance will be published by the Department which will set out details on economic considerations and a balanced, proportionate approach which works in the public interest.

			15. Clause 6 appears to be attempting to use the planning system for a purpose for which it is not legally designed to do. Because planning is strictly about the use and development of land, to try and use it for a purpose that is not strictly related to this – such as reviving the broader regional economy, could be judged as being ultra vires and of course, open to challenge in the courts. 16. The Bill also appears to introduce the dangerous precedent of having to routinely consider personal circumstances when deciding		15. The Department's guiding principle in determining planning applications is that development should be permitted, having regard to the development plan and all other material considerations, unless the proposed development will cause demonstrable harm to interests of acknowledged importance. In such cases the Department has power to refuse planning permission. See also Comment 9, Clause 2. Within this context, this provision is not attempting to 'revive the broader regional economy', but neither should the planning system operate in isolation in a manner which acts as an impediment to development and economic progress.. Planning has an important role in facilitating sustainable development and economic development. Good planning, quick decisions, balanced by a favourable planning environment are key to economic growth and new jobs. . 16. See Comment 5 above.
--	--	--	---	--	--

			planning decisions. 17. A further consequence of this is it that it provides opportunities for objections on “non-planning” grounds. Clause 6 broadens the issues that planners have to take into account when deciding planning applications and this will be open to exploitation from both applicants and objectors. 18. If it is claimed that a development will result in 100 jobs, this could become a key criteria for awarding planning permission. However, there is no legal mechanism to ensure the claimed benefits actually occur as such. Clause 6 should be removed from the Bill. (GE)(BCAW)(BCT)(DGBA)(BHC)(FOE) (MG) (MMcC) (MC) (MT) (SS) MS)(NIEL) (BCT)(RG)(SBRG) (AN)(BMRG)(DP)(JA)(LINI)(L		17. Case Law has ruled that Economic considerations are already a material planning considerations. See Comment 5 above and Comment 9, Clause 2. 18. See 5 above. The Department will only impose conditions that, in its opinion, are necessary, relevant to planning, relevant to the development being permitted, precise, enforceable and reasonable in all other respects.

			C)(WHJ)(BNF$(BD)(FJ)(GC)(JMcG)(LS)(QUBPACE) 19. The key issue is how much weight, relative to other factors, is to be given to economic considerations. More guidance is needed from the DOE on how this will be assessed. (CBC)(BCC) 20. We recommend that this clause is removed and that guidance on the assessment of economic considerations be addressed through the planning policy development process and following public consultation. Who will assess the figures put forward? 23. How will economic data be judged against environmental and social data? What time scales will be considered? 24. The terms used in Clause 6, including 'promoting', 'sustainable development', 'well-being', economic advantages' and 'economic disadvantages' are not clearly defined, and as such are open to a wide range of different interpretations. At the very least we consider that there should be a screening process to assess any likely effects, as		23. See comment 14 above. Planners have to weigh all material factors (including environmental and social) policies, laws, evidence and precedents and come to the balanced judgment call based on that evidence. Remarkably the Partial Regulatory Assessment which accompanies the Bill fails to consider these potential costs. How could Planners adjudicate on the economic		25. As good practice dictates a Partial RIA was required and undertaken for the Planning Bill as part of the process of policy development and implementation. The Department in preparing the Partial RIA would be required to make an assessment of the likely benefits or costs on small business, charities, social economic enterprises or the voluntary sector associated with clause 2. As the RIA is an iterative process the Partial RIA can and should be developed to further consider the likely impacts of the provisions in the Planning Bill, including clause 2, as they are developed through the Assembly process. Further assessments should be prepared for the associated subordinate legislation and planning policies necessitated by the implementation of the policies when the Planning Bill is enacted. 26. The use of outside consultants to assess the application is unlikely to be of any benefit as we have never heard of a case where such consultants have failed to agree with an applicant. (HCG) 28. The wording, “considerations relating to any economic advantages or disadvantages likely to result” if not removed entirely (which would be our preference as we consider that the matter is covered within Clause 2) should be amended to read “considerations relating to any public or private economic effects likely to result” 29. 			move into this next phase of planning legislation and planning practice and the devolution of planning to local government. (NIBG) 30. NILGA would query whether the Planning Bill is the appropriate vehicle to strengthen economic development considerations whilst recognising and supporting the need to sustainably develop local economies. The key issue is how much weight, relative to other factors, is to be given to economic considerations. (NILGA) 31. NIRIG welcomes the emphasis on economic benefits as consistent with PPS18 and the genuine benefit from investment in renewable energy infrastructure. (NIRIG) 32. 			especially for their own Officers to follow. (QPANI) 33. It is not clear what sort of economic assessment will be required under clause 6 when submitting applications for individual projects that sit within the integrated programme. The University's development strategy will be critical in helping to support the Programme for Government and in growing a sustainable local economy. (QUB) 34. Clause 6 provides optimum conditions for developers of competing schemes, to become embroiled in lengthy battles regarding the economic advantages and disadvantages of each of their schemes leading to a slowing down of the planning system and increased legal challenge – all contrary to the objectives of planning reform. 35. More worrying however from an RSPB perspective, is the situation where economic advantages will time after time take precedence over the		33. 			unnamed material consideration of the environment. The balancing of any other material considerations will be lost. Clause 2 and Clause 6 collectively threaten sustainable development. 36. Other concerns relate to the fact that there are presently no economists in DOE. In the absence of such experts, DOE will not be qualified to assess the economic advantage or disadvantage presented. 37. Furthermore, the RSPB would welcome clarity on how the Department actually proposes to legally enforce such economic claims (e.g. job creation, or revenue generation for an area). As far as the RSPB is aware there is no legal mechanism to secure such benefits through planning conditions as they lie outwith the scope of planning. For all these reasons, the RSPB believes that Clause 6		36. See response to Issue 9 and 11 on Clause 2. 37. See response to Issues 18 & 23 above.

We would urge the committee to enact a policy of sustainable development as defined by the World Commission on Environment and Development 1987; “development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs”. (FFAN) 39. It’s debatable whether the duty of Economic promotion could be in direct opposition to EIA assessments as the process of an EIA may reduce a claimed economic advantage (TW) 40. 			than considering the achievement of a sustainable economy as part and parcel of an assessment of sustainable development, serves only to undermine, delay and thwart such an assessment. By way of illustration, we would point out that an attempt to fulfil this additional role would be hampered by the absence of a clear definition of the following: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • the meaning of economic development; • agreed criteria upon which a judgement of economic benefit is to be based - the most commonly accepted being those to be addressed by a suitably qualified expert as part of a Green Book Assessment; • who should benefit – specific individuals or society at large; • whether it is to be assessed in the long- or short-term; • staff adequately 		previous Assembly, in the 2011 Planning Act now means that the benefits can be realised sooner.

			skilled, trained and resourced to carry out such an assessment; The introduction of a specific requirement to promote economic development fundamentally alters this recognised role, and attempts thereby to use planning for a purpose for which is neither designed nor authorised under its legislation, opening up a potential area of legal conflict and challenge. 41. Furthermore, the Society is aware of the considerable amount of work yet to be done, and small staffing resources currently allocated, to ensure the successful completion of the outstanding Planning Policy Statements and Urban Design Guide scheduled to be made available for public consultation within the calendar year; and the amount of work yet to be done to draft the intended Single Planning Policy Statement and its supporting guidance. Additional resources may yet be required to achieve these		41. See response to Issue 40 above. The Dept considers current resources are adequate. However, this will be kept under review.

			agreed targets, and we would urge the Committee to ensure that this should take priority. The additional work that will inevitably be generated in association with Clauses 2 and 6 of the Planning Bill will inevitably introduce delays and further expense into the system, and hamper the achievement of existing targets. (UAHS) 42. The UWT considers that a specific reference to economic advantages and disadvantages should not be inserted into legislation, for the following reasons: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • economic considerations are already material to the decision making process. Case Law has demonstrated this; • this provision could potentially elevate economic considerations to a primary consideration, above all others. The Bill could lead to a system where the party with the greatest resources (in proving/disproving economic advantages to 		42. See response to Issue 9 on Clause 2.

			an application) is successful in achieving their desired outcome. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • it could lead to less weight or attention being given to environmental considerations such as landscape impact, habitat, impacts of climate change etc; • the planning authority may be obligated to specifically incorporate economic assessments into their determinations across the full spectrum of development projects; and • it could lead to increased pressure on staff resources, increase the need for external consultancy advice, and encourage a situation whereby applicants or objectors feel obliged to submit detailed economic appraisals in support of their case. 43. In short, there is simply no justification for the inclusion of this provision in		43. See also response to Issue 9 – Clause 2.

			legislation. (UWT) 44. It is proposed that article 25 of the 1991 Order and section 45 of the 2011 Act are both revised to include the following statement, “Without prejudice to the generality of paragraph (1), the reference in that paragraph to material considerations includes a reference to considerations relating to any economic advantages or disadvantages likely to result from the granting of or, as the case may be, the refusal of planning permission.”. 45. Unless this statement is fully qualified, we remain very concerned that this could grant permission to support development that damages, rather than enhances our natural environment. We therefore urge the Committee to consider a clear statement that ensures that economic development is not supported when it impinges upon delivering true sustainable development i.e. supporting development that enhances		44. See response to Issue 5 and on issue 9 on Clause 2. 45. See responses to Issues 5 & 23 above.

			and protects our natural environment rather than damages it. 46. In respect to Northern Ireland, we would state that this should cover all woods as listed on the Ancient Woodland Inventory. (WT) 47. In place of the economic development test, which accords equal status to beneficial and to destructive, dangerous and inequitable development, I would urge the committee to support a policy of sustainable development as defined by the World Commission on Environment and Development 1987; “development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs”. Such a policy would include the		46. This is a general issue. The Department’s policy in relation to the protection of trees is set out in PPS2: Planning and Nature Conservation. The Department will seek to protect trees, groups of trees, and woodland areas of particular importance because of their nature conservation value or their contribution to the amenity of a particular locality 47. See response to Issue 1 on Clause 2.

			principles of resource conservation, environmental and inter-generational justice, the precautionary principle, the polluter pays principle and meaningful public consultation. (ZK) 48. It is not necessary as economic development is already one of the important factors taken into account when assessing planning proposals. 49. The economic value of a proposed development would be impossible to assess accurately, especially by planners who are not trained as economists. 50. There is a contradiction between the primacy of economic factors and the responsibility to encourage and protect sustainable development. The favouring of the former over the latter would have disastrous consequences for Northern Ireland's vulnerable natural environment and the health and prosperity of our people.		48. See responses to Issue 9 on Clause 2, and to Issue 23 above. 49. See response to Issue 1 on Clause 2 and comment 5 above. 50. See response to issues 1 and 3 on clause 2.

			There would be no way of monitoring compliance with the economic conditions of planning approval. 51. No effective sanctions would be enforced against developers who reneged on their promises of economic benefit. (AR) (CAC) (DB) (DS) (DMW) (DCOD) (TF) (RI) (PP) 52. There is nothing in the draft Bill to suggest that this consideration will eclipse all others. This point was stressed by Minister Attwood in the Assembly on 22 January. We believe, therefore, that it is axiomatic that this provision should be included in the Bill. The key question, however, is how the proposed assessment will be made, who will make it and		51. See response to Issue 9 on Clause 2 and issue 18 above. 52. Noted. The Department remains committed to the furthering sustainable development as set out in clause 2.

			what form it will take. In this regard, the Minister has stated that, beyond the law, there will be a requirement to have further policy if not guidance. It is therefore crucial that careful thought is applied to the design of this policy and guidance and we in the IoD would be very happy to contribute to this process. (IOD) 53. The NIHE would like to see considerations on the environment and society given equal weight with economic considerations and these should be contained in the planning policy. 54. The NIHE considers the word 'promote' in relation to economic development is not suitable. The NIHE believes that the promotion of economic development would be better seated in a community planning framework which can support and integrate economic development programmes and regeneration, tailored to local circumstances and with community involvement. If this clause remains within		53. See response to Issue 3 and 9 on Clause 2. 54. Noted. See response to issue 9 on Clause 2.

			legislation there will need to be detailed guidance on how the promotion of economic development will be assessed. (NIHE) 55. Concern that the introduction of this clause will enable applications that promote economic development to take precedent over the other elements of sustainable development. PPS 4: Planning and Economic Development, sets out the Department's planning policies for economic development uses and indicates how growth associated with such uses can be accommodated and promoted in development plans. 56. There is a concern from some members that through the RDS and PPS 4 there is sufficient policy structure in place to ensure that applications and proposals are given relevant consideration in light of promoting economic growth. The tension around the inclusion of the clause promoting		55. See response to Issue 9 – Clause 2. 56. Noted. See also response to Issue 9 – Clause 2.

			economic development is further heightened by the concern that some members expressed with regarding to introducing this ahead of RPA. It was felt that the clause will lead to conflict amongst councils who will be competing for development and will enable the approval of a proposal that may otherwise have been rejected. 57. In light of these concerns and the importance of both economic and sustainable development it is proposed that the relevant clauses should be included:– <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • ‘The core function being furthering sustainable development through the promotion of economic, social and environment objectives’ (RTPI) 58. There is an alternative – the ecosystem approach which represents a paradigm shift in the management of the natural environment and those of its constituent resources that derive from the functioning of component ecosystems. (GL) 63. The significance of the ecosystem approach rests on it establishing an alternative to more conventional approaches to the management of the natural environment. These tend to be driven by a set of capitalist market values based on exploitation and development for material production of goods and services. The driving forces have been a focus on economic growth, profit and based on short term perspectives. In contrast, then, the ecosystem approach is held to offer an alternative framework for achieving sustainable development and the utilisation of marine resources in ways that ensure that people and economic systems are integral parts of the solution as well as the sources of environmental		62. We are strongly opposed to this clause which poses many challenges: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • It puts an unwarranted additional focus on economic factors; • The range of factors to be assessed (economic advantage and disadvantage against both approval and refusal of an application) is complex, yet it is unclear what level of assessment would be required. This could range from detailed economic appraisal to unsubstantiated assertions about jobs and investment; • Currently there is limited expertise available in economic assessment and financial appraisal to assess such factors; a great deal of additional 		64. This will require additional staff at local council and departmental level. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • There is no framework or assessment criteria and therefore the clause will be open to vastly different interpretations. • The clause shifts the focus of the planning system from its core purpose of the orderly and appropriate development of land in the public interest, and expects the planning system to deliver something it is not designed to do; • While economic development brings public benefits, the issues of economic advantage or disadvantage are often focussed on private

Thus decisions weighted towards current economic advantage may fail to take into account longer term environmental costs or benefits. • In the event that this clause is applied and

Such decisions will be taken on a case specific basis and it will be a matter for the planning authority whether or not to determine an application in the absence of a response from a consultee. 14. More complex or larger scale applications e.g. those requiring an Environmental Impact Assessment, will need proper consideration and timeframes for responses will need to be appropriate to accommodate such circumstances. The Bill provides for an alternative timeframe to be agreed between the consultee and the Dept.

			15. Lack of expertise in the planning system has led to greater dependence on NIEA expertise. There should be in-house expertise in both the Planning Service and in local authority planning units in ecology, biodiversity and the ecosystem approach. (NIBG) 16. There is a difficulty with NIEA as a statutory consultee as part of the DoE and propose that an alternative statutory consultee is charged with commenting on the nature conservation, biodiversity, ecosystem, habitats and species aspects of planning applications as a support to a strong-in-house capacity. Legally, NIEA cannot be a statutory consultee to the Department. Longer-term, post-transfer of planning powers, the Department (including NIEA) may be a statutory consultee to councils as planning authorities. 17. The details of the new process will be specified in subordinate legislation which will be subject to the public consultation and Assembly scrutiny. The Dept is already closely engaging with the local government sector in relation to planning reform and transfer.

Wind farm applications should be considered to be regionally significant applications and should remain centrally within DOE (NIRIG) 19. Consideration needs to be given to the likelihood of consultees sending default responses requesting additional yet unnecessary information to 'buy them more time'. (RTPI)		18. The future proposed hierarchy of development will be the subject of other, separate subordinate legislation flowing from the Planning Act (NI) 2011. 19. Statutory consultees will be required to make a "substantive response" to inform the determination of an application, the nature of which will be specified in subordinate legislation. It is not envisaged that a holding response will be considered as a substantive response.
