I recognise the efforts of the Minister for Social Development to encourage benefit uptake through the development of specific programmes and campaigns, such as Make the Call, which increase benefit uptake numbers. The Social Security Agency's activities and information pamphlets have also gone some way to inform claimants of additional benefits, especially our society's most vulnerable, but we still have more to do to ensure that the people in our society know what benefits they could be entitled to.

I am pleased that we are shining a light on this important issue today. I understand that the consultation on the discussion paper 'Maximising Incomes and Outcomes' ended on 26 February, and I look forward to the implementation of the strategy. I support the call for the advice services strategy and further funding for independent advice providers, just like each of the Members who spoke today and are supportive of the motion

Mark H Durkan spoke on the importance of advice centres, the service that they deliver and their importance to the public representatives. He spoke about the increasing demand that there will be with welfare reform change and said that 53% of over-16s are claiming benefits. He also spoke about the appeals, the work capability assessments and the way things could be lost in the systems without the advice sector. He spoke about safeguarding those who are entitled to benefits, the mistrust of the statutory authorities, the new systems, like the IT processing systems, the community-based advice centres and the support that is needed for them.

Alex Maskey outlined the thoughts of the Committee on the key element of welfare reform. He talked about proper access to independent advice and how important that is for the claimant getting their benefits and entitlements, particularly around fuel poverty and childcare, where there is a lack of awareness around entitlements.

Paula Bradley spoke about the incoming welfare reforms, the misunderstanding around the changes, the scaremongering in local communities and the independent advice centres like Citizens Advice. She spoke about how good an example that is, and said that people need to be aware of where to go to for advice.

Michael Copeland also spoke on the advice sector, the lack of resources and the vision for that sector. He spoke about the crucial role of independent advice centres, the 250,000 enquiries on the Welfare Reform Bill and the uncertainty around that.

Judith Cochrane spoke about the ongoing recession and the strain that it is causing. People are worried about the changes and need clarification around those. She also mentioned the appeals, the office cost expenditure decreasing and the increases that will cause to the advice services that come from constituency offices. The finances that will need to be available for the training were also mentioned.

Pam Brown spoke about how critical it is that every assistance is available to manage change in welfare reform, particularly around vulnerable groups and their future entitlement to benefits. She also spoke about the importance of awareness of childcare vouchers and thanked the Members for tabling the motion.

Mickey Brady spoke about the importance of advice centres and the shambles of work capability assessments. He spoke about welfare reform, universal credit and the cross-community work of advice centres. He also spoke about the closure of three community offices and how important those were to rural areas.

Colum Eastwood said that he was glad that there was support for the motion across the House. He spoke about the 120,000 children in poverty and said that there is no sense that that figure will get better. He talked about the concerns around welfare reform and said that we need to do everything that we can to help the 232,000 families who were not aware that they were entitled to childcare benefits.

Sydney Anderson spoke about the complex changes to welfare reform, the importance of advice centres and the 80,000 people who claim incapacity benefit. He went on to talk about how 50% of those cases were reviewed and the outcome of that. He also spoke about public access to, and advice about, benefits and the importance of that, particularly for the vulnerable in this society and people in rural areas. He spoke about the £3·5 million that was allocated to advice services in October 2012. The Minister also touched on that.

I am glad that the Minister has come here and spoken positively on the motion. After all, it is about helping people and communities. I am pleased that he is looking at measures. I welcome his commitments, his positive response to the motion and his recognition of the challenges ahead. I acknowledge his response about the strategy being in place, but it needs to be reviewed and revised in the context of welfare reform. I would like to think that the Minister will take that on board. I liked his attitude when he said that those who need help will get help. I have no doubt that everybody in the House will hold you to that comment.

I thank those who took part in the debate for all their support.

Question put and agreed to.

Resolved:

That this Assembly recognises the challenges facing the advice sector and the need for individuals to have access to advice and assistance in relation to their welfare rights; and calls on the Minister for Social Development to devise an advice services strategy, to develop an awareness campaign for individuals and to provide adequate funding for independent advice providers.

Draft Northern Ireland (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Business Committee has agreed to allow up to one hour and 30 minutes for the debate. The proposer of the motion will have 10 minutes in which to propose and 10 minutes to make a winding-up speech. One amendment has been selected and published on the Marshalled List. The proposer of the amendment will have 10 minutes in which to propose and five minutes to make a winding-up speech. All other Members who wish to speak will have five minutes.

Mr Nesbitt: I beg to move

That this Assembly notes the publication of the draft Northern Ireland (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill by the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland; supports the commitment to bring to an end the practice of dual mandates; welcomes the recognition within the Bill that political donations in Northern Ireland require sensitivity; acknowledges that further work is needed on measures that are still under consideration for potential inclusion in the Bill, including the creation of a formal Opposition in the Assembly, the size of the Assembly and the length of the Assembly term; and calls on all political parties which support inclusive and consensual politics to play a full role at Westminster or to forfeit the expenses that they claim from Parliament.

Mr Deputy Speaker, I hope that you will give me a little latitude to begin by paying tribute to Sir George Quigley, who very sadly passed away quite suddenly yesterday. Sir George was a remarkable man. He was a leading civil servant, then a leading a businessman and, in a third career, a leading civic leader for Northern Ireland. Sir George Quigley was a true polymath. I had hoped that we would discuss him as a matter of the day. I am irked, and I think that it is deeply ironic, that what we ended up discussing was the mortar find in Londonderry, which focused us on people who have nothing to offer Northern Ireland as opposed to Sir George, who spent a lifetime trying to build a better future. I pay tribute to him and send the sympathies of the party to Lady Moyra.

The draft Northern Ireland (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill is an opportunity to build a better future, and I hope that we will not let it slip because it is a true opportunity to take the next bold steps towards normalisation and the introduction of normal politics in this House and for these institutions. It is timely, coming 15 years after the Belfast Agreement, which brought the original Assembly to the Chamber. However, the arrangements of 15 years ago were always meant to be transitional, to help us on a journey, which we are still on, towards normalisation.

Therefore, when defining the success of the draft Bill, we need to focus on the underlying values and principles that we supported 15 years ago: the spirit of the agreement; the fact that Northern Ireland is secure as part of the United Kingdom for as long as the majority of the people here so wish; the primacy of the rule of law; politics is for all, but terror is for none, although, sadly, some still think that terrorism is the way forward; mutual respect; inclusivity; and consensual politics. Those elements make up the spirit of the Belfast Agreement, which my party continues to support. The time is ripe to review how far we have come in the past 15 years and how far we have yet to go.

As I said, the 2013 draft Bill is an opportunity to reflect on where we are and where we need to go.

We have tinkered with, some would say corrupted, what was put in place and agreed by referendum in 1998. At St Andrews in 2006, many changes were introduced that we could not support as a party, not least the corruption of the election on a joint ticket of the First and the deputy First Ministers, which parties now play to their advantage at election time. Another change was the introduction of checks and balances, which some Ministers have mentioned in the past couple of weeks. That is one reason why the processes of the Executive and the House are so slow that people fail to see any semblance of delivery.

In 2010, of course, we had Hillsborough and the decision to devolve policing and justice powers, which the Ulster Unionist Party opposed. We feel vindicated in the rationale for our opposition on hearing over the past few weeks the debate about the National Crime Agency (NCA) and the fact that Northern Ireland is to be the only part of the United Kingdom where the agency will not operate to protect our citizens' lives and well-being.

So, in short, although the draft Bill presents an opportunity, as currently constituted, it lacks a certain ambition. We should be more ambitious in calling on the Secretary of State to take those steps to normalisation, and the biggest and most significant single step that she could take would be to support the establishment of an official opposition in the House: an opposition loyal to the institutions of devolution.

What would that mean? It would not mean a return to majority rule. The Ulster Unionist Party is clear that, if we introduce an official opposition, you will still need a cross-community Government. That is guaranteed as far as this party is concerned. An official opposition would offer choice and would be given some resources, so we are not talking about a party simply walking away from the Executive, which is an idea that some of my former colleagues have promoted. We are talking about the establishment of an officially recognised opposition. What does that mean? It means having the same as in Dublin, London, Cardiff and Edinburgh: supply days, speaking rights, research resources and all the normal support that an opposition has.

I said that, 15 years ago, we went for a set of transitional arrangements. The challenge back then was to get everybody into the political tent. Now that we are all in, the challenge is to look at and acknowledge the unmet challenges from 1998: dealing with the past, reconciliation and a truly shared future. All might be best addressed by the formation of a Government and an official opposition. I call on the Secretary of State to review her draft Bill and to push ahead to create the space called "opposition" that will take us on that huge step towards normalisation in this House.

The Bill should be about more than moving to end dual mandates and transparency on political donations, important as those are. The Ulster Unionist Party has led the way in the ending of dual mandates at some cost to itself — [Interruption.] The Member may find that amusing, but history will not.

Mr McDevitt: I think that electorate sorted that out for you.

Mr Nesbitt: That is a very cheap shot coming in from South Belfast. The party took a principled stand, as we did in 1998, and we were prepared to take the cost to our party to stand on principle.

1.45 pm

I will move on to transparency in political donations. I think that every party would like to see transparency, but we must have the conditions that allow it. In our view, those conditions do not exist, and we direct you to Londonderry and the events of the past 24 hours. Terrorism is still a threat in many ways.

If we are looking for true transparency, let us have transparency from our own Executive, which still will not tell us how many people accompanied the First and deputy First Minister on their trade mission to China, what hotels they stayed in, what class of travel they undertook or the cost to the taxpayer. The same Executive will not publish business cases so that Members of this Assembly can examine, scrutinise and decide whether a robust case was put forward for the spending of public money on, for example, the Victims and Survivors Service. That Executive will not even publish the research that they commissioned from Colliers International into whether Maze/Long Kesh should be the venue for a peace-building and reconciliation centre. What do they have to hide that means that they cannot be transparent? So, the Ulster Unionist Party wishes to see provision for opposition in the Northern Ireland (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill.

We also call for those who support inclusive and consensual politics to play a full role at Westminster or to sacrifice their expenses. According to the Independent Parliamentary Standards Authority, expenses claimed by Sinn Féin MPs in the financial year 2011-12 were as follows: Pat Doherty claimed £135,000; Michelle Gildernew claimed £99,000; Martin McGuinness, the deputy First Minister, claimed £108,000; Paul Maskey claimed £92,000; and Conor Murphy claimed £131,000. That is a total of £569,000. In addition, there was £100,000 in the equivalent of short money. Clearly, those are matters for the House of Commons, but it will not be lost on that House that Sinn Féin's decision to stand down its double-jobbing MPs and MLAs was about maxing office cost allowances and expenses.

If I were an Irish republican, I could imagine how I could have made an argument some time ago for abstentionism, particularly at Westminster. Perhaps the conditions at one point existed for that. However, they do not exist any more — not since the Belfast Agreement and not since people such as Peter Brooke talked about the United Kingdom not having any further "selfish ... or strategic interest" in Northern Ireland. As a tactic, abstentionism has had its day.

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is almost up.

Mr Nesbitt: I say to the Members on the opposite Benches: take your seats or give up your expenses. I encourage all those who will vote in Mid Ulster on Thursday to vote for a candidate who will be a full-time Member of Parliament.

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is up.

Mr Dickson: I beg to move the following amendment:

Leave out from "welcomes" to "sensitivity" and substitute

"believes that the declaration and publication of donations to political parties in Northern Ireland should be handled in the same manner as donations to political parties in Great Britain".

Currently, Members of this House must report to the Electoral Commission details of any donations from permissible sources over £1,500, and political parties in Northern Ireland have to contribute information to the commission about donations of over £7,500 from a single source. However, the names of donors are not made public, as they are in the rest of the United Kingdom.

My party, the Alliance Party, has made a voluntary commitment to publish information in line with the United Kingdom arrangements and has followed through on that commitment. In April last year, my party colleague Naomi Long MP asked the Prime Minister to commit to changing the legislation to make local parties publish their list of significant donors. We believe that the public in Northern Ireland should have access to the same information as people in England, Scotland and Wales on how political parties are funded and who their major donors are. The public can then judge for themselves whether those donors have any undue influence on party policy. It is important that parties be open and transparent about how they are funded.

Legislation designed for the worst of the Troubles needs now to be amended to reflect the fact that Northern Ireland has moved significantly. We cannot, on the one hand, talk about normalisation and tell people that Northern Ireland has transformed into a safe destination for inward investment and tourism and require companies to publish their accounts and details of their directors and shareholders, and, on the other hand, use security concerns as a reason to avoid being transparent about party political donations. The time for that is over. Now is the time, and the challenge that I give to every party in this House, bar one that has done the same as the Alliance Party, is to publish your donations in line with the commission's recommendations. Stop hiding your donations.

It is worth noting that the vast majority of donors would not be affected in any way by the change bringing us into line with Great Britain, because only larger donations need to be declared. It is important to recognise that similar information is already in the public domain, because the names of those who nominate and sign nomination papers for election are published and always have been published, right through all the terrible times that we have come through. Therefore, the security argument simply does not wash. If others are serious about openness and transparency, I encourage them to support our amendment and to join us in supporting a change in the law at Westminster to bring Northern Ireland into line with the rest of the United Kingdom. In the interim, I urge all parties to follow our example and publish that information voluntarily.

I turn now to the rest of the motion. The Alliance Party has also acted voluntarily to end MP/MLA mandates, with Naomi Long stepping down within weeks of being elected to Westminster. We do not believe that MPs should be permitted to continue as Members of the Assembly. It was argued that the instability of the Assembly structures put the mandate of senior political figures at risk in the event of the collapse of these institutions following a resignation from Westminster. That is arguably redundant, given that we are well into the second successive uninterrupted term of the Assembly. No Members of the Scottish Parliament or Welsh Assembly sit in the House of Commons, and we should follow suit. An MLA and an MP are two separate, distinct and full-time jobs, requiring a focus that cannot be effectively achieved if a representative has a dual mandate and, consequently, competing demands on his or her time. The situation is further exacerbated where that MP is also a Minister in the Executive

As MLAs, we must be here in Stormont to vote on legislation, to question our Ministers, to attend and engage with Committees and to hold the Executive to account. That is what we were elected to this House to do. Equally, MPs are required in Westminster for a large proportion the week to vote, scrutinise and provide a voice for their constituents in that place. Although there are many considerable overlaps in the constituency casework element of both, the location and time of those parliamentary duties make it incompatible for any Member to fulfil both roles simultaneously. They are simply not doing their job, and I challenge any Members of Parliament or of the Assembly who hold that dual role to tell me that they are doing their job effectively.

No person can be in two places at once. That is evidenced by the attendance and voting record of those who have held or continue to hold dual mandates in this Parliament compared with those who do not. Moreover, ending dual mandates provides an opportunity for parties to introduce new talent and to make our parliamentary Chambers more representative. We talk an awful lot about trying to get people interested in politics. Here is a way of freeing up some jobs and encouraging new talent into the pool of politics in Northern Ireland. It is a step that we can take to achieve that aim.

Finally, the reduction in the amount of office cost expenditure available to an MLA who is also an MP means that the number of staff members and the amount of resources available to someone with a dual mandate is greatly reduced when compared with two representatives undertaking each role separately. Some may argue that that allows for efficiency in expenditure, but we are concerned that constituents in areas represented by those holding dual mandates will have less access to, and potentially less assistance from, offices of elected representatives.

Related to that is the level of representation provided by those who do not take their seat in Westminster. They may argue that they have a mandate for that stance; indeed, that may be what the majority view of those who elected you is. However, what about all those constituents who have not voted for you but are entitled to equal representation? That representation requires you to go to Westminster and represent them. They are meant to represent all their constituents; after all, few, if any, elected representatives tell us that they do anything else other than represent all their constituents. What about the important issues, such as welfare reform, that are being debated and decided at Westminster? The position of not taking one's seat is extremely irresponsible. The people of those constituencies deserve better.

On the size of the Assembly, we have made our position clear on a number of occasions. Others need to bring similar clarity to the table, if we are going to move forward, and also on the issue of the extension of the term of the Assembly to avoid unnecessary clashes with other elections.

Finally, on the subject of an opposition, it has long been the view of the Alliance Party, throughout the talks that led to the Good Friday Agreement and the subsequent negotiations and reforms, that democracy in Northern Ireland would be best served by a properly funded, properly structured, formal opposition. We are not opposed to enabling legislation being put in place. However, we are possibly many years away from that actually being formulated. Opposition is already enshrined, to an extent, in the Committee system in the House. Evidence we recently received at the Assembly and Executive Review Committee (AERC) made clear the difficulties faced in establishing an effective and formal opposition here.

It is clear that that will require significant debate and discussion. I welcome the fact that that debate is ongoing. However, given the divided nature of society, it would be a sign of politics maturing if we were able to effect a transition towards a Government and opposition model of governance. We recognise that the current system was endorsed as part of the Good Friday Agreement, that any transition requires the consent of the Assembly and that we certainly need to move beyond the sectarian headcount style of politics that has been demonstrated recently, if we are to facilitate an effective and formal opposition based on a voluntary agreement. Remember, one of the tenets of an opposition is the ability to one day become the Government. We support the motion and encourage Members to support our amendment.

Mr Givan: I welcome the opportunity to speak to the motion. I will just pick up on a couple of points that the proposer of the motion outlined. It is an opportunity for normal politics to be established. However, I think that the proposer of the motion would need to check with his party as to why, in the Belfast Agreement, it did not put in that it was only ever going to be transitional. If it had, we would not now be requiring a change to come through Westminster. Had that been achieved at the Belfast Agreement, one could take more credence with the argument about this being a transitional arrangement. However, I agree with the argument that this should be transitional. A more normalised form of democracy in Northern Ireland is something that we would wish to see.

(Mr Deputy Speaker [Mr Dallat] in the Chair)

The proposer indicated that the St Andrews Agreement corrupted the Belfast Agreement. We reject that. He indicated that, at Hillsborough, the party was right to oppose the devolution of policing and justice at that time. I remind the Member that the Ulster Unionist Party had signed up to policing and justice, many years before, at a previous deal that was done. Then, the elections happened, and that did not happen. It is important that we put forward arguments but that we do not expose ourselves to the inconsistent approach that is being taken now to try to rewrite a little bit of history.

That having been said, the motion is an opportunity for the Bill going through Westminster to try to make changes. I agree with the argument that we have overlapping elections. It is not, for one moment, that we disagree, for our own political advantage, with Westminster and Assembly elections taking place at the same time. Indeed, one could argue that, in those types of elections, our big hitters usually poll better than Assembly Members and that, therefore, we would get a bounce in the Assembly if that were the case.

So, it certainly is not from the point of view of political advantage, but we take the argument that there is overlapping and that it is better to have an election on a separate date. It is what happens in Scotland and Wales, and we think it should happen in Northern Ireland so that we get that distinction. We can then have an election based on Assembly issues, as opposed to being clouded between a Westminster election and the Assembly. That is something that I would like to see the Bill change.

2.00 pm

Mr Agnew: I thank the Member for giving way. I agree that we should decouple Westminster elections from Assembly elections. However, does he not agree that it would be better to bring Assembly elections forward, rather than putting them back a year? I do not think that we can have too much democracy, but I think that there is a genuine issue of a democratic deficit, were we to be in term for a year longer than we were elected to be.

Mr Givan: The Member makes a point that is worth considering. One may say that Members stood for election for a four-year term, and to shorten that is not why we put ourselves before the electorate. However, this party fears no election being called early. That certainly is not an issue for us. From an electoral point of view, we are confident that the positions that we have taken resonate with the people. However, the Member's point is certainly worth considering.

We do not wish to have a return to majority rule. That is an argument that we made at the Assembly and Executive Review Committee (AERC). That is not what we want. We have outlined where we think we can reach some kind of consensus around a type of weighted majority system that would ensure that a minority community will always be protected. It may be develop a better form of democracy than that which currently exists in this place, and that is something that I think should be explored.

It is important to say that, if we can get agreement in the Assembly, it is much more likely that we can make the point to the Secretary of State in taking the Bill through. She has made it clear that she will not force through some sort of change. So the onus is on us, in the Assembly, to find common ground so that we can make agreements that, ultimately, the Secretary of State can implement. That is something that we would wish to see happen. Those discussions are ongoing, and I encourage everybody to be part of them in a positive manner.

It is worth pointing out that this party, which has Members of Parliament, has led the way with respect to dual mandates. It is easy for the Ulster Unionist Party to take a principled stand on this, now that the electorate has taken care of any MPs that it had. However, we have withdrawn most of our MPs from the Assembly. We led on that, and it is our policy that, ultimately, that should be carried into effect

The Conservative Party, however, would do well, when it talks about double-jobbing, to look at its Front Bench and identify how many Tory Ministers are also on executive boards. Some of those Ministers receive much more financial gain from the activities that they are involved in outside of politics, and then that party could take a more principled position in talking about double-jobbing. It would be consistent if the Conservative Party were to take that forward in the Bill as well, and deal with those Members of Parliament who are not doing their job in the Conservative Party, when it comes to focusing solely on their duties at Westminster.

We can have an opposition here. However, I say to Members that the two smaller parties in the Executive have access to confidential papers which then seem to make their way into the public domain. So there is a sham fight taking place; the smaller parties want an opposition on one hand but, when they get information, they do not subject themselves to collectivity the way the rest of us, the two bigger parties that are trying to push Northern Ireland forward, have to do. So, if the smaller parties take themselves out of the Executive, they can have their opposition. I agree that should be properly resourced and we should have an official-type opposition. However, you cannot have it both ways. If you are in the Executive, take your collective agreements and sign up to that collectivity, or else you decide, officially —

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is up.

Mr Givan: — to go outside the Executive and be in the opposition.

Mr Sheehan: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I wish to speak against this motion.

From the outset, I thought that the speech by the leader of the UUP was going to be a thinly veiled attack on Sinn Féin. Those fears were confirmed in the last three minutes of his speech, which were aimed at Sinn Féin. He also raised the issue of the NCA. I do not want to stray from the motion too far, but I stand in awe of the Member's toughness against crime. I still wonder when he will come out and condemn the illegal blockading of our roads over the last few months, but we will wait for that. Also, I presume that the Member would like to write Sinn Féin's manifesto as well as his own. Sinn Féin is very clear in its manifesto: it has a clear policy on abstentionism, and I say that also to the Member from the Alliance Party. Do you expect us to say that we are an abstentionist party and then go and take our seats? Of course not. Do we still represent our constituents? Of course we do. Do we get paid expenses in the same way as every other party for representing constituents? Yes we do, and there is no reason why those expenses should be withdrawn.

I will look at a couple of other issues in the motion. There is the issue of political donations. Of course, Sinn Féin stands for transparency — complete transparency — unlike the other parties in the Assembly that are humming and hawing about it. Let us be clear: we want complete transparency, and I think that we are the only party in the Assembly that has called for that. When we talk about an opposition, it seems that the first item on the agenda is resources. Would the party show some principle now and again and say, "We are pulling out of the Executive and are going into opposition, whether or not we are resourced for it"? However, it is all about expenses going into the back pocket.

Mr Nesbitt: I thank the Member for giving way. I encourage him to read Hansard tomorrow, because he will see that the first issue that I raised was supply days, not resources or money.

Mr Sheehan: I will not quibble about whether it was said first or second. The Member said that an opposition should be given some resources.

I will move on to dual mandates and the great leadership that has been given by the other parties in the House about ending dual mandates. I must have missed something along the way, particularly from the Ulster Unionists and their leadership on ending dual mandates, because I thought that the electorate did that job for them. However, I will stand corrected on that if I am wrong. Sinn Féin is the only party in the House that has ended dual mandates. Let us be clear about this —

Mr Allister: Is that including the IRA?

Mr Sheehan: Let us be clear about double-jobbing because there seems to have been a redefinition somewhere along the line.

Mr Deputy Speaker: Order. The Member will resume his seat. I heard remarks from the back that were not appropriate to the debate. I do not expect to hear them again. The Member may continue.

Mr Allister: On a point of order, Mr Deputy Speaker. Is it in order in the House — certainly it should not be done from a sedentary position, I understand that — to point out the duplicity of Sinn Féin? I am referring to the double mandate that it claimed for years for terror, manifest in membership both of the IRA and Sinn Féin.

Mr Deputy Speaker: I take it that the Member wished to make a contribution to the debate. That certainly was not a point of order. My function is to ensure, as far as possible, that Members stay on the motion, and I am sure that all Members will support me in that.

Mr Sheehan: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. We are used to that type of sniping from the Back Benches. Nevertheless, we will try to carry on as best we can.

There has been a redefinition of dual mandates, or double-jobbing, somewhere along the line, which I have missed. It is not only the double-jobbing of Westminster MPs and MLAs in the Assembly but the double-jobbing of MLAs and councillors. I wonder whether the leader of the Ulster Unionists would like to stand up now — I will give way if he wants me to — and tell me whether he has done away with that double-jobbing. That is as important as double-jobbing between MPs and MLAs.

We do not support the motion, and we do not think that the amendment from the Alliance Party makes any substantive change to it. On that basis, we will oppose both.

Mr McDevitt: To date, the debate has been slightly bizarre. There is a Committee in the House called the Assembly and Executive Review Committee. I am a member of it, Mr Sheehan is a member of it and Mr Givan is a member of it. I cannot remember whether the leader of the Ulster Unionist Party is currently a member, but he certainly has been. What has that Committee been tasked to do for the past six months but review the operation of Parts 3 and 4 of the Northern Ireland Act and deal with some of the issues provided for in the proposed legislation from Westminster? Why would any parliamentarian with any respect for any Committee in the House table a motion that seeks to pre-empt, compromise and prejudice the debate taking place in that Committee?

We know that the Ulster Unionist Party is confused about its commitment to the Good Friday Agreement. It is ironic that the Assembly and Executive Review Committee is one of only two Committees mentioned in the Northern Ireland Act that arose from the Good Friday Agreement, but you would think that, irrespective of how dodgy that party may be on the substantive issue of whether it is pro-agreement, anti-agreement, pseudo-agreement or post-agreement, it would at least respect the integrity of this institution and the Committees mandated by this Assembly and plenary to do certain jobs of work. On that ground alone, the motion deserves to be defeated today. The debate is not one for the Chamber; it is one for the Assembly and Executive Review Committee, which would prepare a report that should, and must, be debated in the Chamber in due course.

I have to say that hearing the leader of the Ulster Unionist Party appeal to the House to support the values of the Good Friday Agreement and then call for support and votes for the unionist unity candidate in Mid Ulster on Thursday was hearing a man say, on the left hand, that he is in favour of 1998 and, on the right hand, that an anti-agreement man should be voted into Westminster. Which is it? Whatever happened to the noble strand of Irish unionism that was proud to have made an honourable agreement with Irish nationalism, or is that now just the job of the Alliance Party?

Stewart Dickson said that we needed to do like the rest of Great Britain. We are not in Great Britain. That is the point. We may be in the UK by consent, but we are not in Great Britain, and we do not have to do the same as Great Britain. That is not the point of devolution. The point of devolution is that the House makes rules in the interests of the people of this region, and the people of this region live in Northern Ireland. It is constitutionally part of the UK and geographically part of Ireland, and coming to the House with amendments that confuse the two in the most cackhanded way possible is short-sighted.

Mr Agnew: Will the Member give way?

Mr McDevitt: I will in a second.

It is short-sighted and falls into the trap laid by the Ulster Unionist Party: "We want to sound pro-agreement but act anti-agreement. We want to sound like we stand for a shared future, but, in fact, we would quite like the tribalism to continue because it suits our politics." I will say to all parties in the House that they should be careful to play that game. Be careful to position yourself in a place that relies on everyone else being something else for you to be something. Be careful about undermining this institution and allowing an amendment to a motion, which anyone with a titter of wit knows is designed to prejudice and undermine the work of the Assembly and Executive Review Committee.

Mr Agnew: I thank the Member for giving way. I agree with his point that we do not have to follow GB for the sake of doing so, but, if the GB system, whereby all political donations above a certain level are published, is more democratic, does the Social Democratic and Labour Party not agree that that is a good idea?

Mr McDevitt: I thank Mr Agnew for his intervention. I will happily deal with the disclosure of donations. The SDLP's submission to the Northern Ireland Office consultation on this matter is absolutely clear: we do not oppose the disclosure of donations.

2.15 pm

However, we also live in Northern Ireland, and in Northern Ireland today there is extortion. It is taking place not necessarily in those constituencies where Mr Dickson may have some electoral presence but in others. It is a sad reality of where we are.

Let us remember that mortar bombs were seized last night on the way to attacking a police station. This, I wish I could say, is a stable democracy where we can abandon all the architecture of the Good Friday Agreement and live in some sort of democratic nirvana. However, the evidence suggests that it is not. The evidence suggests that we have a huge amount of work to do to eradicate violence, the threat of violence and a culture of coercion from our society. The evidence suggests —

Mr Dickson: Will the Member give way?

Mr McDevitt: I will not, Mr Dickson, because I have given way once already.

The evidence suggests that we have a lot more investment to make in upholding the institutions and true values of the Good Friday Agreement. Frankly, everyone in the House who is in office must —

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is almost up.

Mr McDevitt: — remember, acknowledge and honour the fact that they are in office only because of the Good Friday Agreement.

Mr Weir: I support the motion and oppose the amendment. Perhaps I could start with some of the remarks that the Member who spoke previously made. I find myself disagreeing with him on one point and probably agreeing with him on another.

If the motion were a clear attempt to undermine the AERC's work, we would not be supporting it. However, I think that it stands on its own merits. The motion refers to legislation that is potentially going through Westminster. I think that it is right that we comment on that. That does not undermine the good work that the AERC has to do. Indeed, the motion identifies a number of issues that the AERC will, I think, need to tackle.

I agree with the Member who spoke previously on the import of the amendment. It is clear that the amendment looks towards an idealised world that I am sure that we would all like to embrace. However, we have to deal with Northern Ireland as it is today. It is undoubtedly the case that elected representatives from across the Chamber and, indeed, others, have been subject to various attacks, intimidation and extortions. What confidence could we have in this society that full disclosure of political donations would not at least create the perception or, indeed, very real fear among a lot of people that they could be targeted by extremists, or, at the very least, that a businessperson making a donation to one party would then suffer a backlash or be boycotted?

The alternative is that, unless we see donations dealt with in a proper manner through normal procedures, we will be left back in a situation where we are depending more and more on the state to pay political parties. I think that that is something that —  $\,$

Mr Dickson: Will the Member give way?

Mr Weir: I will give way briefly.

Mr Dickson: That amuses me. I and my party have been subjected to abuse and intimidation over the past few months, yet I am standing here four-square supporting the open declaration of political donations. There is international terrorism in the rest of the United Kingdom. There are people from different backgrounds and communities right across England, Scotland and Wales who make donations to political parties and who will have people from their communities oppose what they do. The argument simply does not wash.

Mr Weir: I am glad that, if I have achieved at least one thing in this debate, I have amused Mr Dickson. The reality is that you cannot put the situation in Northern Ireland on a par with what happens across the water. The idea that parties there may be subject to international terrorism does not relate to what happens here. If we are talking about people being under threat, people from across the Chamber have been under threat from different sources for decades. That is nothing new, and that threat persists.

If the Member said that he was amused, I was somewhat amused by the reference by one of the Members on the opposite Benches that Sinn Féin declared that it is now in favour of complete transparency. That would be a very welcome development in this debate. Although it may or may not be in favour of complete transparency when it comes to donations, it seems to have a complete lack of transparency when it comes to anything to do with its past. A veil of amnesia comes down when anything is mentioned about past or current involvement in any activity. We need only look at the denials of some of the leaders of Sinn Féin, who must have been on holiday for the past 40 years, because they appear to have had no level of involvement whatsoever.

One of the key parts of the motion urges people to play a full role at Westminster. Criticism has been made of the joint unionist candidate in Mid Ulster. Along with others in the Chamber, I am proud to support that candidate. The reality is that that candidate is offering something else, which his main alternative cannot. He is offering representation at Westminster. I hope that he is elected. If he is not elected, I hope that the Members opposite will have a change of heart and that their Members will take —

Mrs D Kelly: Will the Member give way?

Mr Weir: No, I have given way already. If people are not doing their job, they should not be getting paid or getting allowances for it. Indeed, it is something that was raised by the Conservative Government in the past. I believe that it is something that should be carried through in this legislation. There is no doubt that the party opposite is very up front in its policy of abstention, but it should suffer the consequences of that. It should not be getting allowances for not doing its job, as would be the case if any one of us was boycotting this House.

The motion contains a range of other issues. Obviously, there is reference to a formal opposition. At present, there is the opportunity for anybody to be part of the opposition. If it would be helpful to have that in a more formalised or funded way, or in a more structured way for debates,

I would not have a particular problem with it. That is a matter that clearly needs to be discussed.

The number of Departments and the size of the Assembly are going to be issues for debate. From a financial point of view, a lot of people out there are suffering because of the austerity that has to be there. It is right that we look at our systems of government and ensure that we are providing the best value for money. We should look at the number of Departments, for example, and ask, "Can we deliver this in a better way?" If people are suffering on the ground, they want at least some of that pain to be shared all around. The House cannot be immune to that. Nor can we be so ossified in our views about our structures that 1998 can become some form of holy writ that cannot be changed.

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member will draw his remarks to a close

Mr Weir: As such, I have no problem, and I am happy to support the motion but oppose the amendment.

Ms Ruane: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Táimid i gcoinne an rúin agus an leasaithe. We are opposed to the motion and the amendment, as Pat Sheehan has already indicated.

Some would prefer to pretend that they do not support the Good Friday Agreement, but it is a very carefully crafted agreement, with its checks and balances to ensure maximum representation. It is important for people to look at the majority of constituencies in the North as currently represented, because they will see that we have representatives from a number of political parties.

The agreement also enshrines equality, mutual respect and parity of esteem. I listened to Paul Givan wax lyrical about how DUP Members are not for majority rule and how somehow they want to support equality. However, we just have to look at the way in which they abused power in the Assembly Commission in a desperate attempt during the recent flag debacle. Therefore, I am interested to see what the Members opposite can do to reassure people from the nationalist/republican community about how they would ensure equality, given the sad record over the past number of years, particularly prior to 1998, in this Building, when it was a very, very cold house for nationalists and republicans.

In any arrangements that we have, Sinn Féin wants to see maximum equality, maximum parity of esteem and fair play, not only for nationalists, unionists and republicans but for people from ethnic minorities and the new communities that have come to this part of Ireland.

I move now to political donations. I think that it is hilarious. We have Mike Nesbitt jumping up and down waxing lyrically about transparency, good governance and all the rest, yet it is obvious that he is not in favour of transparency when it comes to donations. Sinn Féin is not afraid of maximum transparency. We welcome it. It leads to good governance and to people understanding who the funders of parties are and why they might be funding them.

I note Mike Nesbitt's and, indeed, Paul Givan's comments. What we have heard are excuses. I also noted Conall McDevitt's comments. I am also a member of the Assembly and Executive Review Committee. Conall McDevitt is for transparency, yet he is using the excuse of security for not having transparency. Yes; there are issues with security. However, Stewart Dickson made a very valid point, which I will share. Members of my party, including me, have had threats. Members of his party have had threats. Yet, we are not afraid of transparency. We are not afraid to lead.

I am disappointed. Although I support the principle — I suppose, the spirit — of Stewart's amendment, I agree with points that were made by Conall McDevitt: it could have been crafted better. Had it been, my party would have supported it because we absolutely support transparency on political donations. I ask the Member to take that away for future amendments.

On dual mandates, I note that Mike Nesbitt did not take up Pat Sheehan's challenge. In fact, I remember when, in a previous Executive, a Bill was going through, and his party's two Ministers had to leave the Executive due to a conflict of interest. They were Ministers, MLAs and councillors. It is the same with the party opposite; there were Ministers who were MLAs and councillors. It was the same with the SDLP. That is nothing short of ludicrous. Those parties do not even have an abstentionist policy. How could those Members be expected to be at Westminster, Stormont and local councils? Well, the attendance record speaks for itself.

Sinn Féin has made no secret of its abstentionist policy. Just look at the party's history since its foundation. Since 1905, all party members who have been elected to Westminster have been elected on an abstentionist ticket. Our electorate know and understand that. They continue to vote for us. We do not agree with British interference in Ireland. We believe that there should be a united Ireland. We are actively working towards that and make no secret of the fact

Peter Weir went on about the past. I have yet to hear from his party a critique of the state forces and what they did in the past, which included collusion, the shoot-to-kill policy and torture.

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member must bring her remarks to a close

Ms Ruane: Sinn Féin has said, yes, let us deal with the past.

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is up.

Ms Ruane: Let us deal with it comprehensively.

Mr Deputy Speaker: Order. As Question Time begins at 2.30 pm, I suggest that the House takes its ease until then. The debate will continue after Question Time, when the next Member to speak will be Mr Raymond McCartney.

The debate stood suspended.

Oral Answers to Questions

lustice

Mr Deputy Speaker: Questions 8, 9, 10 and 11 have been withdrawn and require written answers.

Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust: Grafton Recruitment

1. Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Justice whether any members of the board of directors of the Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust have been involved, on behalf of the PSNI, in contractual negotiations, tender evaluations and/or approval of contracts with Grafton Recruitment for the provision of agency, consultancy and associate staff. (AQO 3515/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): The PSNI director of human resources joined the board of directors of the Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust (PRRT) in 2002 as the PSNI's representative. He was involved in the tender evaluation processes in 2002 and 2008 for the award of contracts to Grafton Recruitment for the provision of agency, consultancy and associate staff to the PSNI.

Ms Fearon: Go raibh maith agat. As the Minister knows, the PSNI recently awarded a contract to Grafton worth £20 million without open competition. Does he agree that the 'Managing Public Money' (MPM) guidelines raise serious questions about the role of a public servant in awarding contracts if they are a member of another organisation that has a relationship with that contractor? Can he confirm that the involvement of the trust in arranging training for retired police officers to be rehired is not what it is publicly funded to do by his Department?

Mr Ford: I thank Ms Fearon for that supplementary question. The reality is that there are two different issues. The first one is the issue that has been explored by the Audit Office and the Public Accounts Committee (PAC). We are waiting to see the final report on the operation of the PSNI in relation to the recruitment of agency staff. The second one is the PRRT issue, and nothing that I have seen suggests that PRRT has behaved inappropriately in the way it has managed its business.

Mr McDevitt: Maybe I will press the Minister a little bit on this issue. In the Minister's opinion, is it a conflict of interest if a senior official of a procuring authority is party to the decisions to procure services from another organisation in which he has a directorial role?

Mr Ford: No, I do not believe that there is a conflict of interest in the way that has been outlined. It is obviously for the individual directors of PRRT to note the issues as to whether there is a conflict of interest as they perceive their operation. In the context where the individual concerned is specifically there as a representative of the PSNI and has no direct personal financial interest, that clearly is not what would normally be regarded as a conflict of interest.

Mr Swann: In regard to the contract negotiations, can the Minister outline whether the contracts through Grafton for agency staff in the PSNI attract the same pay scale as those for regular police officers?

Mr Ford: The issue of pay scales is entirely between Grafton and its employees. On that basis, I, as Minister, do not have any information.

Burglaries: Foyle

2. Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Justice how many burglaries there have been in the Foyle constituency area over the past two years. (AQO 3516/11-15)

Mr Ford: Statistics on recorded crime are maintained by the PSNI. I am advised by the PSNI that there were 308 domestic burglaries in the Foyle policing area in 2011 and 405 in 2012. For burglaries in buildings other than dwellings, the figures were 208 in 2011 and 208 in 2012. The PSNI has advised that the in-year figures for 2012 are provisional and may be revised.

Mr Durkan: I thank the Minister for his answer. In the Chamber earlier today, many other Members and I praised the work of the police in Foyle in foiling an attempt on life last night. Will the Minister assure the House that police and community police in Foyle are adequately resourced to tackle day-to-day crimes such as burglary?

Mr Ford: The Chief Constable assures me that he has adequate resources to deal with his day-to-day policing pressures. Clearly, there are issues, and we have highlighted those in the Chamber many times. There are particular issues relating to Derry as the City of Culture and, as we sadly noted earlier this morning, there are specific issues relating to terrorist activity in Derry. However, the Chief Constable has assured me that he has adequate resources. It should be noted that things such as domestic burglary are continuing to decline significantly across Northern Ireland generally. However, in individual districts, there are the inevitable upward or downward blips year on year.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Does the Minister agree that if a focused team were in place in any constituency to deal with burglaries, the detection rate would be higher and the instances of burglaries would decrease?

Mr Ford: I certainly agree that Ms McLaughlin has a point in that regard. That is why a campaign relating to domestic burglary issues is being undertaken in Derry. There are issues that also come across to the policing and community safety partnership (PCSP). There is one major problem in that Derry has a difficulty that does not apply to other places: there is a very high rate of creeper burglaries because people simply do not lock doors and windows. Sadly, these days, particularly in urban areas, people cannot afford to be as trusting as that. That is one of the issues that has been highlighted most recently by the police there.

Mrs Overend: I recently held a farm crime watch and safety awareness day in my constituency office. Do the burglary figures include the theft of trailers and suchlike from farms? Will the Minister outline the strategies that are in place to reduce the number not only in the Foyle constituency but across Northern Ireland?

Mr Ford: I am not sure how many questions there were. In answer to the first one, burglary is theft from within premises. Unless Mrs Overend has constituents who store their tractors inside a dwelling house, they would not be covered by such figures. A very significant campaign is going on that involves police and PCSPs in different parts of Northern Ireland that shows a significant and welcome year-on-year reduction. The issue is about ensuring that local figures, through the operation of the PCSPs, are seen to be driven down by addressing the local needs that members of PCSPs see in conjunction with the police and the other relevant agencies.

Policing and Community Safety Partnerships

3. Mr Moutray asked the Minister of Justice for an update on progress on implementing the policing and community safety partnerships, including whether a review will take place to ensure that they are working effectively. (AQO 3517/11-15)

Mr Ford: Policing and community safety partnerships are taking forward initiatives that aim to make a real difference on the ground and empower local people to shape local solutions to policing and community safety issues. The Assembly recently approved an order designating a range of statutory bodies as members of all PCSPs. That order has now come into operation. The contribution that those organisations can make to enhancing community safety has now been formally recognised, and I look forward to seeing the further benefits that the partnerships can achieve through the strengthening of existing joint working.

The partnerships are planning for the future, taking forward the development of two-year partnership plans that will address issues identified through targeted consultation with local communities. The PCSP joint committee, which is my Department and the Policing Board working together, will continue to monitor their effectiveness on an ongoing basis, assessing partnership plans and tracking achievement against those on a quarterly basis to ensure that they address locally identified concerns.

The joint committee will, as part of that ongoing process, scope out a range of issues for review. The work of the joint committee will be complemented by a planned review of the general effectiveness of PCSPs by the Criminal Justice Inspection. The joint committee will also consider the outcomes and take any necessary action to ensure that the partnerships continue to deliver effectively for their communities.

Mr Moutray: I thank the Minister for his response. Will he outline the role of his Department to intervene should a PCSP not be functioning effectively, particularly when some members of one political party seek to impede progress?

Mr Ford: I suspect that Mr Moutray is hinting at a particular issue. If he wishes to raise that issue in correspondence with me, I will happily respond. The key issue is the role of the joint committee of the board and the Department to assess the work that is being done against the partnership plans and to ensure that those plans are in place and that action is being taken. That is the best way to address the issues raised and to ensure that the PCSPs are operating effectively. It is, of course, early days, but I want to ensure that we maximise the opportunities from bringing together district policing partnerships (DPPs) and community safety partnerships (CSPs).

Mr Sheehan: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as ucht a fhreagra. Will the Minister comment on the issue of voting rights on PCSPs and whether it is appropriate for designated agencies, such as the PSNI and the Housing Executive, to have a vote, taking into account that they are accountable for delivery on the partnerships?

Mr Ford: Mr Sheehan raises an interesting point, and how exactly that will operate is being considered by my officials and the Policing Board. In the meantime, I am sure that most Members will be aware that the statutory bodies are not exercising their rights in the first year of operation. That is one of the matters that will be considered as we review the working of the partnerships.

Mr McCarthy: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I must be very careful not to get my Ps and S's mixed up in my question. Since the establishment of the PCS —

Some Members: PCSPs

Mr McCarthy: No. The PCSPSs. Will the Minister remind us of the intended benefits of those organisations over the previous and separate DP and CSPs, if he can understand all those PS's, PQs and what have you?

Mr Deputy Speaker: I am sure that the Minister will do his best to understand.

Mr Ford: I am sure that my colleague meant to say DPPs and CSPs. If it is any consolation, people in the Department have also been known to trip over those letters.

As a local representative, I am not unique in having identified problems previously when very similar groups of people attended two different meetings a month in each district, one for the former community safety partnership and one for the former district policing partnership. Certainly, the accountability issue that was relevant to the police and administered through the DPPs remains, I believe, relevant so that the other agencies live up to their responsibilities in promoting community safety. That is why I welcome the fact that we were able to get the agreement of the House on the first Justice Bill that established the PCSPs, and the Act is now in operation. That ensures a much more holistic and joined-up way of working. It also ensures that the full range of organisations responsible for matters relating to community safety will now work together.

There have been some very good examples of work being done in PCSPs. However, it is important that all the relevant agencies play their part in every partnership.

Prison Review: Update Reports

Mr D Bradley: Ceist uimhir a ceathair, a LeasCheann Comhairle.

4. Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Justice when he intends to publish the update reports by the oversight team on the implementation of the prison review. (AQO 3518/11-15)

Mr Ford: Further —

Mr Deputy Speaker: Sorry, will the Member translate?

Mr Ford: The Minister can translate "question 4", Deputy Speaker.

Further to my response to a question asked in the House —

2.45 pm

A Member: On a point of order, Mr Deputy Speaker.

Mr Deputy Speaker: We do not take points of order during Question Time. To keep everyone calm, will the Member please translate?

Mr D Bradley: Sure, Mr Deputy Speaker. The Minister was correct. Question 4.

Mr Ford: Further to my response to a question asked in the House on 5 February, I am pleased to confirm that the four reports from the prison review oversight group have been provided to the Justice Committee, and a copy of each has been placed in the Assembly Library. The oversight group is also preparing its first annual report. That will be presented to the Justice Committee in May and will also be deposited in the Library. In recognition of the level of external interest in the reform programme, the four reports to date have also been published on the Northern Ireland Prison Service's website. Plans are also being developed to publish a stakeholder report in June that will outline progress to date and the next steps that will be taken to reform our prisons.

Mr D Bradley: Go raibh míle maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as ceist uimhir a ceithre a fhreagairt. Ba mhaith liom fiafraí de: cad é atá á dhéanamh aige le luas na n-athruithe a mhéadú?. I thank the Minister for answering question 4. What is the Minister doing to increase the speed of reform?

Mr Ford: I thank Mr Bradley for the question, although I suspect that it could have been asked on a number of occasions. Undoubtedly, aspects of the reform programme did not proceed as quickly as we might have hoped — for example, the necessary means to appoint the members of the change management team took rather longer than we had hoped— but there has been a significant speeding up of the reform programme in recent months.

We have now reached the point that four of the recommendations from the review team have been signed off by the oversight group, and a fifth recommendation will go to the oversight group for approval this month. In addition to those five points specifically covered, considerable progress has been made on staffing matters. As the House will know, I will report on the outcome of the estates review later this month, and work is ongoing to transform Hydebank Wood into a secure college. Those are all indications of a significant speeding up of the work. Although getting work off the ground may have been a little bit slower than we had hoped, progress is now extremely good.

Ms McCorley: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as a fhreagraí go dtí seo. Thank you very much, Mr Deputy Speaker. I thank the Minister for his answers up to now. Cuirim fáilte roimh an fhoireann seo agus a cuid oibre. I welcome the oversight team and its work. Will the Minister agree that the absence of an implementation plan undermines any process of accountability and any clear definition of what change is required?

Mr Ford: I am afraid that I cannot agree with Ms McCorley. I believe that we have a very firm, clear programme in the efficiency and effectiveness programme, which is underpinning the review team's work. Within that, there are a number of different work strands that spell out in great detail the work that is to be done. The fact that the oversight team is looking in detail at how each of those targets is met on a quarterly basis is an indication that we have a firm commitment to carry through on that reform process.

Mr Gardiner: Does the Minister accept that although accepting change is necessary, there are significant changes in losing too many prison staff within a short timescale?

Mr Ford: Mr Gardiner certainly has a point about that. That is why there has been a slight difficulty with some prison staff who would have hoped to leave earlier than has been possible. Staff are not being released without it being acceptable on operational grounds that they are able to be released. I am, however, glad to confirm that we have now received an approval from the Department of Finance that will allow all those who applied under the exit scheme to leave. There was a grant of funding that will enable a number — some 80 — to leave by the end of this month, and others will then leave as operational circumstances permit and new recruits come in. So, yes, there is an issue about the loss of experienced staff, but there is also an issue of their being replaced by well-qualified, enthusiastic, well-trained new staff. I believe that the Prison Service will be better for it and that those who served in difficult times will be able to get the early retirement that they deserve.

Hate Crime

5. Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the development of the action plan to address the recommendations arising out of the Challenge Hate Crime project. (AQO 3519/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Department, in conjunction with NIACRO, will shortly publish a number of documents detailing the findings of the Challenge Hate Crime project and research. Following the publication of those reports, I will convene a meeting of all stakeholders to consider how best to take forward the recommendations. At the Challenge Hate Crime conference in September 2012, I announced that an action plan would be developed in response to the range of issues raised by the Institute for Conflict Research's report on hate crime and the justice system. Similar issues have been highlighted in the January 2013 report by the Northern Ireland Council on Ethnic Minorities on race and the criminal justice system. I also note that the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission is conducting an investigation into how justice agencies manage race hate crime. In particular, a major problem that was highlighted for the Prison Service during the project was the identification of offenders who were convicted of offences aggravated by hostility under the terms of the Criminal Justice (No. 2) (Northern Ireland) Order 2004. Work is ongoing to introduce changes to facilitate better monitoring of the legislation and to identify offenders more effectively. Those changes are due to be introduced in the coming months, and they will be reviewed to ensure that the legislation is used effectively.

Mr Eastwood: I thank the Minister for his answer and for that update on some of the progress that he outlined. Given that many members of the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender community find themselves victims of hate crime, can the Minister tell me whether he is doing any work with the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister (OFMDFM) to ensure that the long-overdue sexual orientation strategy is finally published?

Mr Ford: I certainly share the sentiment of Mr Eastwood's question, although I am afraid that the sexual orientation strategy is entirely a matter for OFMDFM. I am certainly concerned to ensure that, when we look at hate crime, we look at all aspects of it and not just at the more usual aspects of sectarianism and racism. The Department is committed to ensuring that we cover all aspects of hate crime as we look to the future.

Ms McGahan: Go raibh maith agat. Thank you for your answers so far. Does the Minister agree that, too often, tackling hate crime is undermined because we have no legislative definition of sectarianism in relation to hate crime?

Mr Ford: Ms McGahan raises an interesting issue about the difficulty of ensuring that we get the necessary acceptance of aggravation of hate crime. I am not sure, however, that the definition of sectarianism, as opposed to the proving of sectarianism, racism, homophobia or whatever, has been the difficult issue that has to be crossed. I certainly regret the fact that we were unable to reach that agreement when we discussed the issue in connection with sport while the Justice Bill was being debated in the Assembly's previous mandate.

Maghaberry Prison: Separated Prisoners

6. Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Justice, given that Roe House is now full, where he intends to hold prisoners who have signed the separation compact in Maghaberry. (AQO 3520/11-15)

Mr Ford: Applications from prisoners to be admitted to separated accommodation are considered by the Prison Service on behalf of the Secretary of State. I have no role to play in the consideration of such applications, and I am, therefore, neither consulted on nor informed about the grounds for approving or refusing individual applications.

Affiliated republican prisoners who apply for and meet the criteria for separation are held on two designated landings in Roe House. The Prison Service has to manage accommodation pressures daily and, therefore, needs to retain a degree of flexibility in where it houses the various categories of prisoners in its custody. There are currently accommodation pressures across Maghaberry prison, so every effort is made to maximise the transfer of prisoners to Magilligan prison. I am aware that a small number of potentially separated republican prisoners are currently held in normal accommodation at Maghaberry. However, I am satisfied that the Prison Service keeps prisoner accommodation arrangements under review.

Mrs D Kelly: The Minister mentioned Magilligan prison in his answer. What progress is there on a new prison? Since prisoners' families should not also suffer a sentence, does he have some level of empathy with the concern of such families about where prisoners are housed and the impact of that on travel time?

Mr Ford: I am well aware, as is the Prison Service, of the remoteness of Magilligan. Nonetheless, in the current circumstances and given the accommodation pressures, a number of prisoners have to be accommodated at Magilligan whose families do not necessarily live close to

it. However, I do not imagine that the House would wish me to entirely pre-empt the statement that I will make on the prison estate in a couple of weeks' time, when we will be able to look at the issue in a bit more detail.

Mr Lynch: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as a fhreagra. Does the Minister agree that the prison review team's recommendation to categorise Maghaberry into four miniprisons provides the best way forward for dealing with any accommodation issues related to Roe House?

Mr Ford: Mrs Kelly would be annoyed were I to answer that supplementary after declining to answer hers, other than to say that we will know in a couple of weeks' time when I discuss the prison estate strategy in the House.

Mr Givan: The Minister knows that there are more than 1,000 prisoners in Maghaberry, which is already struggling with capacity issues, and that hundreds of prisoners are already doubled up in cells. However, the demand on the republican side is to try to take the other landings in Roe House. Will he assure this place that he will resist those attempts by prisoners who continue to demand special status for the things that they have done, when they should be regarded in the same way as every other prisoner, and that is as a criminal.

Mr Ford: I refer Mr Givan to my initial comments: it is not for me either to resist or to support demands for separated accommodation. He may wish to raise those issues with the Secretary of State. I will ensure that the accommodation pressures are managed as best they can be in the interests of all prisoners, and that includes the wide variety of categories of prisoners currently accommodated in Maghaberry.

Prisons: Body Scanners

7. Mr Cree asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the outcome of the three-month testing of the new search technology at Magilligan prison and Hydebank Wood Young Offenders Centre. (AQO 3521/11-15)

Mr Ford: It is important to state that the objective of the process of technological evaluation was to establish whether a viable solution was available that would serve to reduce the level of intrusion inherent in our existing procedures. From the start, I was clear that any solution must, as a minimum, perform at least as well as our current processes and that the security and safety of all in our prisons was and remains paramount. Following an evaluation of the millimetre wave scanners at Magilligan and Hydebank Wood, the Prison Service found that there were limitations to the technology in the operational environment. There was a reliance on the compliance of the prisoner to be scanned, and current full-searching processes provided a higher level of security and, therefore, greater assurance.

It is important to remember that millimetre wave body scanners use technology that is primarily designed for the aviation industry. That use is different from that in our prisons. Such technology is not in use in any prison in the United Kingdom. I remain very grateful to the manufacturers for their help and support throughout the pilot. Although I share the Prison Service's disappointment at the outcome of the pilot, I am heartened by its determination to continue to seek a modern, viable alternative to our existing practice of full-body searching. To that end, I have just received the Prison Service's justification application seeking permission to pilot the use of transmission X-ray technology. After consideration, I shall, as required by the legislation, register it with the Department of Energy and Climate Change.

Finally, it is important to state that the requirement for full searching on entry to and exit from the prison and in some other circumstances must remain until a satisfactory alternative can be found.

Mr Cree: I thank the Minister for his response. Will he indicate whether there are any benefits for the Prison Service from the trials of those scanners, and will he outline what the likely costs were?

Mr Ford: The benefits were the benefits achieved by following through on the prison review team's report recommendation that we should seek an alternative to full body searching. That showed that the Prison Service was committed to following through on that, and I was fully supportive of those trials being carried through. However, as I highlighted, it showed that the technology developed for different circumstances was less than ideal in the Prison Service. Therefore, we are seeking to look at other methods of the kind that we have already suggested will be more appropriate for Maghaberry, although they might not have been needed for Magilligan or Hydebank Wood.

Mr McCartney: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as an fhreagra sin. I thank the Minister for his answers. Will he ensure that whatever technological piece of equipment is brought to assist searches, as recommended in Anne Owers's report, it is not seen as a stand-alone measure but will complement other aspects of searching?

Mr Ford: Indeed, Mr McCartney makes a valid point. It is not simply a matter of a machine; it is a matter of the full aspects of ensuring security and safety of prisoners and prison staff. That is something that we will bear in mind as we continue to look at other options.

Mr G Robinson: Will the Minister state whether there were any objections to the use of that new technology from prisoners or their visitors?

Mr Ford: I can tell Mr Robinson that it only affected prisoners, not visitors. There were some objections, probably on the basis that people had to receive a full body search anyway and it was a matter of covering the two options at the same time. Some people, therefore, objected to it, but the key issue was that, unfortunately, the technology did not prove to have the same benefits as a full body search.

Mr Deputy Speaker: I remind Members that questions 8, 9, 10 and 11 have been withdrawn and require written answers.

Community Safety College

12. Mr Craig asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the new Community Safety College at Desertcreat, including whether it is on target financially. (AQO 3526/11-15)

Mr Ford: The procurement process for the Community Safety College is still ongoing, and it is, therefore, inappropriate to comment at this time.

Mr Craig: I listened with interest to what the Minister had to say. [Laughter.] Can the Minister actually comment on any aspect of that project and whether the rumours that have been in the press about a 35% cost overrun are true?

Mr Ford: However inventive Mr Craig may be, as Minister I will comment on facts as and when appropriate, not on rumours.

Mr Deputy Speaker: Dr Alasdair McDonnell is not in his place to ask question 13. Mr Conall McDevitt is not in his place to ask question 14.

Criminal Justice: Payment by Results

15. Mr Hamilton asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the potential for introducing payment by results schemes in the criminal justice sector. (AQO 3529/11-15)

Mr Ford: We continue to monitor developments in England and Wales, but it is much too early to make a meaningful assessment of the effectiveness of payment by result schemes in the criminal justice context. In addition, Northern Ireland is a much smaller potential market, so it is not clear yet whether such schemes would be feasible. I understand that that view is shared by the Scottish Cabinet Secretary for Justice and the Irish Minister for Justice and Equality. We already achieve good outcomes in Northern Ireland as a result of our existing arrangements; for example, through the Probation Service working in partnership with the voluntary and community sector. Consequently, I am not considering the early introduction of payment by result schemes in Northern Ireland.

Environment

Mr Deputy Speaker: Question 4 has been withdrawn and requires a written answer.

Planning Bill: Rural Communities

1. Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment how his proposed Planning Bill will assist rural communities. (AQO 3530/11-15)

Mr Attwood (The Minister of the Environment): I thank Lord Morrow for his question. The reason why the Planning Act was passed was to reconfigure and reshape the planning system.

What I am doing through the Planning Bill is accelerating the proposals and the law passed in the previous mandate to ensure that, as soon as possible and in advance of the rundown to RPA, planning is more fit for purpose. Whether it is for an urban community, a rural community or any other community in the North of Ireland, requirements for consultees to respond within a certain time frame, statutory pre-application discussion around significant applications and fixed penalty notices by way of enforcement will serve the interests of the urban and rural dweller.

3.00 pm

Lord Morrow: I thank the Minister for his reply, but does he not agree that our countryside has been denuded to some degree by stringent rural planning objections? Does the Minister not accept that this was an ideal opportunity to make way for greater planning facilities in our rural countryside? I feel, and I hope that he agrees, that his Bill does not come up to expectations in that regard.

Mr Attwood: As I said, the purpose of my Bill is to bring into the life of planning in advance of RPA that which would otherwise come into life only at the time of or following RPA. I have no ambition greater than that, important though that ambition is.

In any case, I believe that what is now happening around planning policy statement 21 (PPS 21), which guides rural development, is reshaping our rural dispersed community in a helpful and sustainable way and one that is consistent with good planning and good environmental requirements. Let me give you an example: 83% of applications for rural dwellings, whether replacement or new dwellings, are now being approved. That demonstrates, especially now that there is new training in place, peer review and, indeed, appropriate ministerial review of planning applications where there may be some dispute. It demonstrates proper flexibility for rural dwellers when it comes to applications, which is consistent with good planning policy.

Mr Boylan: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as a fhreagra. Minister, clearly PPS 21 does not facilitate non-farming rural dwellers. Will you outline what you will bring forward in the new Planning Bill to facilitate those non-farming rural dwellers?

Mr Attwood: As I indicated to Lord Morrow, that is not the purpose of the Bill. The purpose of the Bill is to accelerate reform of the planning system in advance of RPA. Otherwise, that would have been put off until 2015. How do we accommodate rural dwellers? That is done through the proper application of PPS 21. Members have told me in previous times how they thought that there is inconsistency in planning decisions between divisional planning offices when it came to PPS 21. We are saying that the policies that guide replacement and new dwellings in the rural countryside were not being applied in a proper and prudent manner. That is the advice that I was given, and it is why I conducted, and continue to conduct, an operational review of PPS 21.

Perhaps MLAs have just gone quiet, but I do not now get a lorry load of correspondence in respect of individual PPS 21 applications in which Members bring to my attention concerns about the difference between application in one area and another. I do not get that any more. The reason is that we conducted training in the autumn of 2011. There is peer review by senior management of cases where there is some contention. Heretofore, cases have been referred to me. The consequence of that is that, in the round, the application of the policy now fulfils the spirit and substance of the policy and is accommodating of the rural dweller when it comes to approval decisions.

Mrs D Kelly: Now that the Minister has outlined what the Bill is not about, perhaps he will give us an indication of some of the benefits of the Planning Bill.

Mr Attwood: As I indicated, there will be a requirement on developers to undertake pre-application discussions in respect of significant developments. Why will that be significant? With the Windsor Park application, because of the piloting of pre-application discussions, when the planning application was eventually lodged by the football authorities, it was processed in 11 weeks. That demonstrates, in pilot form, the benefit of pre-application discussions. That will become a statutory requirement on the far side of the Planning Bill, whereby any developer will have to give 12 weeks' notice as to their planning intentions and will have to submit a report along with the planning application on how they conducted local community consultation. That, allied with proposals for enforcement, consultation, timelines and statutory consultees, the list for which will be much broader than the current list, and other interventions will make the planning system more fit for purpose and will see it turn more corners. It has turned many corners over the past 18

Planning: Renewable Energy

2. Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the average length of time before a decision is issued on renewable energy planning applications. (AQO 3531/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I thank the Member for his question. It is an important question because, as I keep saying, renewables are arguably Ireland's biggest economic opportunity. That includes Northern Ireland because of the quality of our wind, wave and tidal energy and the quality of the manufacturing, R&D and services that we can provide to take forward renewables applications.

On average, it takes 37 weeks to process a renewables application, which is too long. However, when you look at the scale of renewables applications that have gone to the point of decision, especially in the past 18 months, compared with any time heretofore, that tells a much bigger and better story. In the two quarters up until September 2012, 326 renewables applications were approved, building on the 401 renewables applications approved in 2011-12 and far in excess of the numbers in previous years. The scale of renewables application approvals and decisions demonstrates how the planning system is increasingly shaping itself to live up to the ambition of renewables being our single biggest economic opportunity.

Mr Nesbitt: I thank the Minister for his answer and note his commitment to renewables being the future. I am sure that he is aware of the 40% target for renewable electricity that the Executive have set. Is he aware that there are experts who believe that the first 20% will come at a cost of £80 million and that the second 20% will more likely cost in the region of £800 million? Is he content that consumers should foot the bill?

Mr Attwood: That is an important question because although we are on track to achieve our 40% renewable target by 2020, if all the wind developments that have been approved were built and the energy went to the national grid, that alone would account for 30% of electricity needs in the North. So we are on the right path.

The Member makes two valid points. First, if you have approvals but have not got connection, or if you have approvals but the cost of connection is disproportionate, there will be a risk to the renewable target of 40% being achieved by 2020. To a large degree, that is outwith my authority because it is an issue between the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, the industry and the regulator. I note and welcome the progress in that regard recently

Secondly, we are in a situation in the North in which, to borrow a phrase, we could reach a perfect storm. The Utility Regulator spoke about that at a recent conference in Belfast. There could be a perfect storm in that we might not have sufficient interconnection on the island of Ireland to keep the lights on in Northern Ireland. That is only one of the factors that could lead to a perfect storm. The issues of energy security, energy cost and, as the Member said, the cost of connection of renewables are ones on which we need to more collectively gather our thoughts.

Mr Spratt: Currently, wind turbine applicants appear to think that there is a considerable delay with the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA), which is one of the consultees. Given that the agency is within the remit of the Minister and his Department, will he ensure that the process for many of these outstanding applications is speeded up?

Mr Attwood: If the Member and other Members were to speak to people in the renewable energy industry, they would tell you how the process now compares with any time heretofore, not least because of the scale of renewables applications in the system, which cover nine categories. The applications are not only for wind turbines and wind farms but anaerobic digesters, solar plants, and so on. There is a historical backlog, and there has been a surge of applications, especially for wind turbines, of which there are over 700 in the planning system at present. The fact that so many are now coming to the point of decision, especially in the past four quarters, demonstrates that the planning system is increasingly able to manage that scale of application. It is getting decisions out on renewable energy and to enable farm diversification because many applications come from farmers.

I note what the Member says, and there have been a number of conversations, to put it mildly, in the Department between those in planning, the NIEA and me. Those in the planning offices and strategic planning know that they are the executive authority and that they make the decisions. It is for them to take into account all material considerations and to accept or not accept the advice that they are given by the NIEA as one of those with whom they consult. They know that, and I have stressed that point. On the other hand, you cannot run a coach and horses through advice from the NIEA, especially on the habitats directives from Europe, where we have a height responsibility. I will not allow that to happen. At the same time, I will encourage the planning system, as the executive authority, to make the right decision based on the right grounds, whatever the other advice might be.

Ms Lo: Will the Minister consider encouraging renewable companies to include community benefits in their funding applications?

Mr Attwood: That is a very important and timely question. We have asked a third-party organisation to run a summit on community benefits because, in the round, whether the applications are for renewables, wind farms or other categories, the potential for community benefits is not sufficiently embedded in our planning system for us to see, within the granting of consent, benefits to the community from renewables or significant other applications. We have something to learn in that regard, especially from Scotland, but with the important caveat that there cannot be a sense that attaching a potential community benefit to a significant planning or renewables application is, in some way, a means of getting preferable treatment in the planning system. No applicant must think that. That is not what I am talking about. I am talking about mainstreaming into the planning system benefits, to the community and the individual, of applications open to that sort of potential.

Chauffeur-driven Vehicles

3. Mr Mitchel McLaughlin asked the Minister of the Environment what provision will be made for chauffeur-driven limousine type vehicles within the regulations arising from the Taxis Act (NI) 2008. (AQO 3532/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I thank the Member for his question. I recently conducted a consultation on this matter because of the issue that the Member identifies. The consultation ended in January, and its conclusions will be brought to me shortly and then referred to the Committee. I conducted the consultation because, as was the point behind the question, those who provide chauffeur-type services might be treated differently under the Taxis Act regulation. I agree with the point. Consequently, and subject to full assessment of the consultation and to the Committee's views, it is my intention that, in 2014, when relevant regulations are tabled, those who provide chauffeur services and, indeed, other services, will not be subject to the full licensing regime that will be applicable to other forms of private hire. Therefore, those who offer booking in advance and who have a contract for a stated amount to provide chauffeur services will not, for example, have to display a roof sign.

3.15 pm

Mr Mitchel McLaughlin: I thank the Minister for that very comprehensive answer. Given that there has been a response from 75% of drivers on the regulations on taxis, does he see any particular need to address in the regulations that he is introducing that issue of full compliance?

Mr Attwood: No, I do not. The Member is quite right, and he is very up to date. The reason is that, to date, under the taxi-licensing regime that came into place in the autumn of last year, 76% of drivers have been captured, in that they have applied for a temporary licence or have received a full licence. Given the new regime and its requirements, if not its demands, a 76% compliance rate this early into a new regime is quite significant and quite high. We believe that, through other mechanisms, including audit of the licensed offices on a rolling basis and other mechanisms of encouragement and advice, more and more of those who are not within the system will be captured by it, particularly when licence holders go to get their PSV licence in April this year. That will not be in a way that will penalise people or cut down their commercial opportunities but in a way that will create a more open market with more certainty and better standards for people who use taxis.

Mrs McKevitt: Will the Minister outline any other significant concessions or exemptions in the reform of taxi regulations in the North?

Mr Attwood: There are already some exemptions for wedding and courtesy transport, and that will be no different going forward. As Mr McLaughlin's question indicates, that will be broadened. In any case, this is the Assembly's will through the Taxis Act, and we are now working through, in regulation, the implementation of that Taxis Act. I have done that in a way that, as best as possible, and without pleasing all the taxi drivers, has tried to protect the interests of all taxi drivers, especially the small. Although the regulations came into effect in September of last year, that is why there was a two-month window in which there was some flexibility in the new regime.

Even though the system is in place, by and large, a light touch enforcement policy is being adopted this time. However, that may escalate in the near future. We tried to reduce the amount of upfront costs, especially those for the small or individual operator. In those ways and in our management of the rolling-out of the further taxi legislation between now and the end of 2014, we will do that in a way that does not rush our fences but tries to reduce costs and that, at all times, brings about a situation where illegality is driven out of the business and standards and performance improve even beyond the significant improvements of recent times.

Mr Cree: Does the Minister agree to continue to receive representation from public hire taxi firms on the legislation?

Mr Attwood: As the Member may have indicated, I certainly do. Even last week, I sat down with representatives of the public hire taxi business. We had to adjourn that meeting because we ran out of time, so it is to be reconvened before Easter. Even those individuals, and those whom they represent, said that they did not dispute the fact that the legislation, in the round, is a good thing and that there needs to be more regulation and a changed regime when it comes to taxis generally in future. For them, it was all about the implementation and whether, in that implementation, public hire taxis were being squeezed to their disadvantage and to the advantage of private hire taxis. That is not the purpose of the legislation, as I indicated in previous answers. If weighty points are made by the public hire businesses, I will listen to them and, where I can, try to accommodate them. As long as they are weighty points.

Review of Public Administration: Transition Committees

5. Mrs Hale asked the Minister of the Environment whether he will take the fact that Lisburn represents 70% and Castlereagh 30% of the population into consideration when approving the make-up of the statutory transition committee for Lisburn/Castlereagh. (AQO 3534/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I am sorry to disappoint the Member, but, as I indicated to Mr McLaughlin, this is an occasion on which I will have to say no. I do appreciate that, across the clusters, different amalgamations are happening and that, for Lisburn and Castlereagh, there is a disproportion between the population sizes. Some would argue that that should be reflected in the membership of the statutory transition committee (STC). In my view, subject to what I am going to say, it is better to continue with the model of having equal representation. That has worked satisfactorily to date. To revisit the numerical balance on an STC compared with that on a voluntary transition committee (VTC) is not the way to go. If I did it for Lisburn and Castlereagh, there are clearly arguments around numbers and other criteria that mean that I would have to do it elsewhere. Although I have variations in the total numbers of STCs and VTCs for local reasons, I do not believe that there is a fundamental reason to revisit the overall numerical balance.

Mrs Hale: I thank the Minister for his answer. I ask my supplementary question knowing full well that I have a member of Castlereagh Borough Council right beside me. Does the Minister not recognise that the make-up of the new council area of Lisburn, which is much larger, with 27 wards, and Castlereagh, with only 13, is different from the other 10 new council groupings and that the membership of the VTC should reflect that?

Mr Attwood: I just do not understand why anybody who is an MLA is still sitting on any council anywhere in the North. I have made every effort to try to ensure that that practice ends. In the fullness of time, it will end, as a clause in the —

Mr McCarthy: It is a long commitment.

Mr Attwood: I do not know about other people, but I think that MLAs have more than enough commitment in this place. I am looking around the room, including not too far away from me. You could draw conclusions from some of that Although I understand the point that there is a differential, others could make the same and different arguments. Go up, for example, to the cluster on the north coast, where four different councils are coming together. Your colleague is nodding in some agreement with me. You could argue that you need to fine-tune that to reflect the scale of population in each area. In my view, it is not a matter of whether it is the right balance or, according to the Member, otherwise. The issue is whether the councils that are coming together in clusters — whether that be two councils or four councils, or whatever the configuration — are going to have the leap of imagination and practice to realise that, on the far side of 2015, they will be a unitary council that will have to behave as a unitary council, rather than trying to seek to protect their own historical council interests. That is the key. In that regard, a number of council clusters have yet to reach that point of imagination, never mind the practice of operation, when it comes to merger.

Mr Lunn: Given the fact that the DUP controls both those councils, and given the ambitious spending plans that Castlereagh has at the moment, does the Minister agree that perhaps the Lisburn DUP does not trust the Castlereagh DUP?

Mr Attwood: I would like to make it very clear that I do not think that that is the motivation behind the Member's question.

Mr D Bradley: Go raibh míle maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Seo í mo cheist ar an Aire. What is the Minister's latest thinking on how the issue of rates disparity can be tackled as the councils begin to merge into their new clusters?

Mr Attwood: As the Member is aware, the Executive decided three weeks ago that there would be a package of up to £30 million for rate convergence in order to reduce the burden, following reorganisation, on those councils where there is a significant differential when it comes to rates. That is led by DFP with support from DOE. When you collapse it down, we are looking at three models: support for individual ratepayers, support for council clusters, or differential rates for a period after RPA while convergence happens. The Executive, the Finance Minister and I have not settled on the final model, but at least the financial backing is there for it.

Review of Public Administration: Transition Committees

6. Mr McCartney asked the Minister of the Environment whether d'Hondt will be used for appointing political members to statutory transition committees. (AQO 3535/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I thank Mr McCartney for his question. It will be the case, with the formation of the new councils, that, built into the law in the re-organisation Bill that I hope will come to the Assembly very soon, there will be a statutory requirement to have a model of proportionality when it comes to positions within and outside a council cluster. The model will be d'Hondt, Sainte-Laguë or single transferable vote (STV), with the default being d'Hondt, in order to ensure that, although you would like people to aspire to and have the ambition for power-sharing across the life of the council and external bodies, you need to have the certainty of legislation. Given that, heretofore, it was left to the voluntary transition committees to reflect the party membership, my understanding is that d'Hondt has prevailed in that regard. I do not intend to legislate by way of regulation to have d'Hondt or another mechanism as a requirement under the regulations when the statutory transition committees are formed.

Mr McCartney: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire. I thank the Minister for his answer and his affirmation of proportionality. Will he give us an update on the consultation that has taken place with the councils on the formation of these new bodies?

Mr Attwood: There was a previous consultation in 2009 in that regard. It was my judgement to not have a fresh consultation but to conduct stakeholder events, and they have now concluded. On the basis of the conclusions of those stakeholder events, the regulations will come to the House in April. There was no formal consultation on the formation of the STCs — in my view, legally and operationally, that was not a requirement — but there was stakeholder engagement in order to ensure that there was understanding and ownership of the proposals that have been taken forward, not least because the powers of the STC will be very important. As I have said in many places and I repeat now, the STCs will also have the power of appointment. In my view, the sooner the senior management of the new council cluster is confirmed by power of appointment granted to it by the STCs, the better all the clusters will be.

Mr Deputy Speaker: That concludes Question Time.

Mr McDevitt: On a point of order, Mr Deputy Speaker. I understand that question 14 was reached during the questions to the Minister of Justice, and I was not in my place to ask that question. I apologise to you and colleagues in the House. It was entirely my own fault, and I am very sorry for not having been here to ask the question.

Private Members' Business

Draft Northern Ireland (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill

Debate resumed on amendment to motion:

That this Assembly notes the publication of the draft Northern Ireland (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill by the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland; supports the commitment to bring to an end the practice of dual mandates; welcomes the recognition within the Bill that political donations in Northern Ireland require sensitivity; acknowledges that further work is needed on measures that are still under consideration for potential inclusion in the Bill, including the creation of a formal Opposition in the Assembly, the size of the Assembly and the length of the Assembly term; and calls on all political parties which support inclusive and consensual politics to play a full role at Westminster or to forfeit the expenses that they claim from Parliament.

— [Mr Nesbitt.]

Which amendment was:

Leave out from "welcomes" to "sensitivity" and substitute

"believes that the declaration and publication of donations to political parties in Northern Ireland should be handled in the same manner as donations to political parties in Great Britain". — [Mr Dickson.]

Mr McCartney: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Beidh mé ag labhairt in éadan an rúin agus an leasaithe. I will speak against the motion and the amendment. The motion deals, in the main, with the Miscellaneous Provisions Bill, which the British Secretary of State said she was going to table in Westminster.

In all of those issues, we will be guided — as we have always been guided — by the core principles around equality, mutual respect and parity of esteem. We outlined that in our submission last week to the Select Committee, and we also outlined that, obviously as an Irish republican party, we are for the maximum transfer of powers, and we will seek to be in a position to legislate for those things ourselves in the future.

3.30 pm

I want to touch on a number of issues. Caitríona Ruane and Conall McDevitt made the point about the main bulk of the motion. Even the Select Committee realised, and last week it made it very clear, that large swathes of the Bill proposed by Owen Paterson will not now feature in the Bill as it goes forward, and quite rightly. We stated publicly at the time that Owen Paterson was, in a sense, encroaching on the work of the Assembly.

The Assembly and Executive Review Committee has a very clear remit. All the main parties in the Assembly are represented on the Committee. When issues that relate to the Assembly are discussed, the Chair has always made sure that some of the smaller parties outside the Committee that are not represented are given a status where they can come as observers or table questions to witnesses, and that is the way that it should be. Part of the motion tries to undermine the work of the Assembly. Perhaps there is the sense that the Ulster Unionists are real players when it comes to Westminster. I accept that they have no MPs, but that is another day's work. On that basis, we oppose the proposal.

I come to the part of the motion where we are asked to note the publication of the draft miscellaneous provisions Bill, but at the end of the motion we are told that, if you are a party that supports inclusive and consensual politics, you have to take your seat at Westminster. That is a very upside-down version of democracy. Stewart Dickson, surprisingly, indulged himself in that a little bit. If you talk about a shared future and respecting people's views, you should respect the views of the electorate. We will see on Thursday of this week. Sinn Féin will, very clearly, state its view of abstentionism —

Mr Dickson: Will the Member give way?

Mr McCartney: Yes.

Mr Dickson: I appreciate Mr McCartney's comments but, at the same time, if your party were to succeed in the election this week, a substantial minority of people in that constituency will have felt that their view will have been lost and that they will not have appropriate representation. What I am asking and suggesting to you is this: you have a duty of care to those who do not vote for you or those who actively vote against you, and that duty of care includes taking your seat in a democratic process, even though your party many not feel that that is the appropriate place for you to be.

Mr McCartney: You make that point. Your person will stand on that platform on Thursday, but bear this in mind: we have five Westminster MPs who offer a constituency service. I say on record that there are not too many people who have either come to us publicly, come to our constituency office or wrote to our MPs to say that we are not representing them and shown instances of where they have not been represented. People find different ways to represent their constituents, but when you have stated very clearly that you are not taking your seat, that is what you should do.

Even the defence that you used about the Welfare Reform Bill, when you said that people should be over there putting up a very good fight for it —

Mr Deputy Speaker: Order. I remind the Member to make his remarks through the Chair.

Mr McCartney: Sorry, Deputy Speaker. Through you, I remind Members that, collectively, the Westminster MPs who left here to defend us against the Welfare Reform Bill did not do a very good job of it. As a matter of fact, I have heard that some of them said this in their defence, "If only we were stronger. We are in a big House with 650 people, and we are overwhelmed". The Assembly is the place where that type of business should be conducted.

With regard to political donations, we were sympathetic with the shift in your amendment; I say that through the Chair. However, we think that the limit of £1,500 should be lowered. It should be £500. No one should fear finding out who gives a political donation. The public have a right to know, so that there is no sense of what went on in the past and, perhaps, still goes on, where people who give large political donations curry favour and can be rewarded. We have seen how that debacle has played out in Westminster and in other jurisdictions throughout Europe.

I note that the motion proposes that the Assembly support the commitment to bring to an end the practice of dual mandates. The best way to support anybody's commitment to do anything is to do what you feel is the tone or the input —

Mr Deputy Speaker: Will the Member bring his remarks to a close?

Mr McCartney: OK. Thank you.

Mrs D Kelly: I cannot help but be somewhat bemused by some of the contributions thus far. Mr McDevitt dealt adequately with the mixed messages that emanated from the Ulster Unionist Party. However, from a nationalist perspective, and from the position of being in a party that has always stood for equality and against violence, woe betide Sinn Féin to lecture others about equality given the recent judgements found against some of its most senior members.

Transparency is also an issue, given many Sinn Féin members stated dual membership of an organisation that extorted hundreds of thousands of pounds from the community that we all represent in the House. Nonetheless, the debate around the reform of the House should rightly be the business of the House. It demands the broadest support from the community in the North of Ireland, given that the institutions were roundly and overwhelmingly supported by the people of Ireland, North and South.

Our party made an extensive submission on the Bill, and, as you will know, Mr Deputy Speaker, members of Westminster's Northern Ireland Affairs Select Committee were over here to take evidence from the political parties on the Bill. Indeed, as Mr McDevitt pointed out, the Assembly and Executive Review Committee is also considering the role of the House, particularly the issue of an opposition.

Our party has made an extensive response as to how the institutions here can be improved and reformed at some point in the future. At all times, the reforms that we could and would support demand protection for all minorities and are based on the premise of equality, protection and safeguards so that we do not go back to the types of majority rule that people in Northern Ireland experienced in the past.

I am happy for our party's submission at Westminster to be the critique of that Bill. I firmly support the party's submission, and I ask those who support the motion to read the SDLP's response to the proposed legislation if they have not already done so.

Mrs Overend: I am pleased to speak to the motion, which has been tabled in my name and in the names of my Ulster Unionist colleagues. The draft Northern Ireland (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill is vital legislation, especially for the future operation of the Assembly.

I was fortunate enough to spend some time on the Assembly and Executive Review Committee, which considered a number of these issues in detail, and I am aware of the debate and, sometimes, differences of opinion between parties. However, the motion is important in allowing us to bring those issues to the Floor.

I believe that the Bill as it stands is not ambitious enough. However, two measures are to be particularly welcomed. First, the commitment to end dual mandates is a positive development. Before my time in the House, Dawn Purvis attempted to legislate to end that through a private Member's Bill that was voted down. In that respect, it is better late than never. Some parties have been slower than others to end the practice of dual mandates. However, I believe that all are committed to that in the short to medium term, and we need to ensure that those commitments are carried through.

The issue of having consistency on this point across Scotland and Wales was raised. Uniformity across the UK is needed on people being a Member of any devolved Administration and a Member of Parliament at Westminster at the same time. I am also of the opinion that a TD should not be able to be a Member of the House of Commons. Perhaps an amendment will be made to ensure that this anomaly will be closed off.

The Bill recognises that the issue of political donations to parties in Northern Ireland needs to be looked at sensitively. This party, more than most, has had to deal with the effects of a terrorist campaign. We are, therefore, fully aware of the heavy price that some have paid for their political support.

Although time has moved on and we have relative peace, the fact is that the dissident threat remains severe. The very recent murder of a prison officer from my constituency was a terrible reminder of the capabilities of some of these groups. Therefore, I fully support the continued anonymity of political donors in Northern Ireland and reject the amendment from the Alliance Party. However, in doing so, I recognise that moving towards full transparency is necessary, but that cannot be at the expense of individual security.

The Member for South Down Ms Ruane waxes lyrical about transparency on expenses, yet denies the people of Northern Ireland transparency on the past deeds of high-profile members of her party in the terrorist campaign.

The concluding part of our motion deals with the Sinn Féin practice of claiming expenses while not taking their seats at Westminster. This important issue should be included in the measures still under consideration for potential inclusion in the draft Northern Ireland (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill. It has been the long-standing policy of the Ulster Unionist Party to be against that position, and I will outline the reasons for that.

First, and most importantly, the people in the constituencies where Sinn Féin MPs are elected have no voice at Westminster on critical issues such as defence and financial services. I know that only too well from my constituency of Mid Ulster.

Secondly, if MPs do not take up their seat at Westminster and participate fully in proceedings there, why should their party be entitled to the expenses that Sinn Féin draws down? The Members on the Benches opposite spoke of how successful Sinn Féin is at representing their constituencies at Westminster. When I ask my neighbours from Mid Ulster whether they feel represented in that place, the answer is a resounding no.

My constituents may be rightly sceptical about Sinn Féin's decision to step down its double-jobbing representative in Mid Ulster, if only to boost its party's expenses intake. We are not talking about insignificant amounts but hundreds of thousands of pounds at taxpayers' expense for second homes in London, staff costs, administration and expenditure allowances. My colleague and party leader, Mike Nesbitt, referred to Sinn Féin claims of almost £700,000 last year.

The debate is also a timely reminder of the flawed position of Sinn Féin in the lead-up to the Mid Ulster by-election, where I hope that the people of my constituency will, in Nigel Lutton, elect an MP who will actually represent them

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is almost up.

Mrs Overend: — as opposed to simply claiming the expenses.

I reiterate the importance of the Bill and urge all parties to support the motion.

Mr A Maginness: Mr Nesbitt, in his opening address, said that the Good Friday Agreement was a transitional agreement and that we therefore had to look at the current situation within that context. I reject that absolutely. The Good Friday Agreement is not a transitional agreement. It is an agreement that was endorsed by the majority of people in Northern Ireland and the Republic. There was, therefore, a concurrent majority North and South, and the people who voted for that agreement were voting, very clearly, for a partnership arrangement within Northern Ireland, a partnership arrangement between North and South, and a partnership arrangement between Ireland and Britain.

3.45 pm

Mrs Overend: Will the Member give way?

Mr Agnew: Will the Member give way?

Mr A Maginness: Yes, I will give way.

Mr Agnew: There are two us.

Mr A Maginness: I will give way to Mrs Overend.

Mrs Overend: I thank the Member for giving way. You talk about the Ulster Unionists speaking about this as a transition. Surely, it has been a line from the opposite Benches that the Belfast Agreement is a transition to a united Ireland. Therefore, our line is surely equally viable.

Mr A Maginness: First of all, that is not the position that the SDLP has ever represented. We have said that we establish a partnership within Northern Ireland, between North and South, and between Britain and Ireland as a whole. Through that, we create a situation where we can achieve the conditions in which reconciliation takes place within Northern Ireland, between North and South, and between Ireland and Britain. We have seen that, Mr Deputy Speaker, in that we have seen the reconciliation take place between Ireland and Britain. We have seen the Queen's visit, we have seen the manifestations of reconciliation, and we have a seen a more equal relationship develop between Ireland and Britain. Indeed, that should serve as a model of achieving that within Northern Ireland and between North and South.

If we start unpicking the agreement, as Mr Nesbitt suggested — [Interruption.] He may shake his head, but, in fact, that is what he is going to do. If he pursues the line that it is a transitional agreement, he in fact he starts picking away at it.

Mr Nesbitt: Will the Member give way?

Mr A Maginness: I will give way, certainly, because I want to hear the point.

Mr Nesbitt: I thank the Member for giving way. It is a transitional set of arrangements. The next step to solidifying it and to moving towards normal politics is the introduction of opposition. Was it not Mr Durkan, when referring to the agreement, who talked about it being a process rather than a product?

Mr A Maginness: The agreement is a process — of course it is a process. It is a process of building partnership. That is why we should be building partnership within the Chamber, why we should be building partnership within the Executive and why we should be building partnership in the community. That is the way in which we will change the nature of our politics here and bring about reconciliation. That is the aim of the Good Friday Agreement, and that should be the aim of all of us. [Interruption.]

Mr Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I remind Members that the correct way to make your remarks is through the Chair

Mr A Maginness: It should be the aim of all of us, Mr Deputy Speaker, to try to achieve that reconciliation. Out of that reconciliation, we will look at a new society and a new politics, which will be creative and which will transform relationships not only in Northern Ireland but between North and South. It will also increase further the relationship changes between Britain and Ireland. That is the nature of the agreement. If you go messing about with the agreement, as you suggested, in terms that it is simply a —

Mr Deputy Speaker: Order. As I reminded Members, you make your remarks through the Chair, not in the second person.

Mr A Maginness: Certainly, Mr Deputy Speaker. Of course, I am addressing the whole House, and I am addressing your good self in particular, and, as your good self would understand, I use a few rhetorical flourishes to emphasise the point.

I think that it is necessary to remind people, first, of the mandate of the agreement from all the people of Ireland, and, secondly, that the agreement has a specific purpose, which is to achieve reconciliation. We must, therefore, deepen partnership to achieve that reconciliation. I do not see that reflected in the motion that the Ulster Unionists tabled today, nor do I see it in the leadership that the leader of the Ulster Unionists, Mr Nesbitt, has given his party. He had never mentioned the agreement, until today. It is something that may or may not have happened.

Mr A Maginness: However, he should emphasise the very emphasis and centrality of the agreement —

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is up.

Mr A Maginness: — if he wishes to give progressive leadership.

Mr Allister: Mr Deputy Speaker, you can relax now after that rule-bending speech by the Member from the SDLP. You know that I would not dare to do anything at all that approaches bending the rules of the House.

The draft Northern Ireland (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill is most notable for what it does not contain. Last week. I spoke to a politics class in one of our post-primary schools. [Interruption.] Yes, I do not know quite what the pupils had done to deserve it. However, there you are. I asked them to name two or three key things that denote a working democracy. It was no surprise to me that they said the right to free and fair elections; the right to change your Government; and the right to have an opposition. However, in respect of two of those — the right to change your Government, and, thereby, to vote a party out of Government, and the right to have an opposition — we have constructed, in the House, the very antithesis of that, causing me, in another place, to describe this House as a blot on the democratic landscape, and so it is. It functions by denying the very right of an opposition to exist and by telling Northern Ireland's voters, "Oh yes, you can vote, but you can never change your Government" and, "Oh yes, you can tinker with the pecking order in government, but you cannot vote a party out of government if it retains a handful of MLAs." That is not democracy: that is built on the very antithesis of democracy. It is little wonder that there is such a growing disconnect between the House and people, as has been demonstrated in so many ways, including by the falling turnout at elections.

Of course, when they were spinning and selling the St Andrews Agreement, some people told us — the some being those on the nearly empty DUP Benches — that by 2015, there was bound to be a review; that we would have to put up with it for only eight years, after which there would be voluntary coalition and an opposition; and that it was a small price to ask for a short time. Everyone knows, as I knew and said then, that it was a con. If the Secretary of State thinks that the House will self-regulate into a functioning democratic institution, she is even more deluded that I thought. The House will never address the issues that most in the House live off. There is not one politician in the Executive who is prepared to jettison the guarantee that, as of right, his or her party is for ever in government. Therefore, the House will never self-regulate.

Last year, there was a simple illustration of that in the Committee on Procedures. I made a most modest proposal in that Committee that the growing ranks of the unattached in the House — [Laughter.] — should have the rights that exist in other parliamentary institutions for a group — a technical group — of non-attached members so that, perish the thought, they could have representation on the Business Committee. We might just arrive at a situation in which we challenge the fact that only Executive parties are represented on the Business Committee and get to the point at which someone who is not in an Executive party just might get called and have the right to table an Adjournment topic or have a motion taken — something that never happens in the House. Who voted down that most basic, fundamental, starting-point proposition of a technical group? It was the cabal of the DUP and Sinn Féin.

Mr McDevitt: I thank Mr Allister for giving way. Perhaps the Members on those Benches would consider a samesex union of some form. That would be a way of being able to get it together.

I will ask Mr Allister a serious question. If the TUV were ever large enough to be entitled to a seat at the Executive under d'Hondt, will he give a commitment, here and now, that he would never take that seat?

Mr Allister: Absolutely. It would give me the greatest possible pleasure — [Laughter.] — to repudiate that corrupt system for the formation of a Government, where you do not have to agree anything to be in government, and it is, therefore, no surprise that when you are in government, you cannot and do not need to agree anything. It is a perverse system from start to finish.

Mr B McCrea: Will the Member give way?

Mr Allister: Unfortunately, I am running out of time.

We should have a Government formed by people — whoever they might be — who can agree what to do about the economy, health and education, provided that they can command the requisite majority, and those who cannot do that, whoever they might be, should form the opposition, but that threatens far too much of the vested interest in the House. That is why the House will never self-regulate itself into a working democratic institution and why it will cling to the hideous manifestations that demonstrate that it is a House not interested in people. —

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is almost up.

Mr Allister: — in democracy or in affording the fundamental rights that even schoolchildren can recognise: the right to vote a party out of Government and the right to have an opposition.

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is up. I call Mr Steven Agnew. Mr Agnew, I have to tell you that there is a mere two minutes left.

Mr Agnew: OK. Thank you very much, Mr Deputy Speaker. I will make the points quickly and simply.

In opening this debate, Mr Nesbitt said that we have an opportunity to move towards normalised Northern Ireland politics, but I fear that this is going to be an opportunity missed.

If we go into another region-wide election without transparency about political donations, it will be a disgrace, especially given that the next region-wide elections will elect our new councils, which are to have planning powers. We are going to have, as Mr Weir put it in a recent article in the 'County Down Spectator', councillors who will be judge, jury and executioner in making planning decisions, and yet they could still be, to the best that we know, funded by the very developers who put in those planning applications. To have such a system would be corrupt and undemocratic, but we have the opportunity to put that right, and we must do so

I have heard the various arguments that, for security reasons, we cannot go towards full transparency, and I do not buy them for a second. We have taken soldiers off the streets and taken down the watchtowers. In fact, we have called on people to join the police, when it is the police who are under attack at present, not political parties. We still say that it is safe to join the police but it is not safe to tell people who gives money to political parties.

It is very clear that the parties in the House — the DUP, the UUP and the SDLP — that have called for continued secrecy about political donations do so in their self-interest and the interest of their donors but not the interest of democracy. There is not a requirement to give money to political parties. Indeed, if political parties had a bit less money, we might have freer and fairer elections, as Jim Allister said. You cannot make an informed choice if you are not made fully aware of who you are voting in. Until people know who is funding their parties, they will not know who decisions are being made in honour of.

As Mr Dickson rightly pointed out, although Sinn Féin called for transparency —

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is up.

Mr Agnew: — it needs to step up and do it. Since 2010, the Green Party has —

Mr Deputy Speaker: Sorry; the Member's time is up.

Mr Agnew: — published its donations, and I encourage others to do the same.

Mr Lunn: I cannot help commenting that Mr Allister is not the first politician in the House to shout, "Never, never, never", and we know what happened there.

Mr Allister: [Interruption.]

Mr Lunn: I think Dr Paisley also meant it at the time.

Obviously, I support the amendment, but I am not going to spend too much time on it, because Mr Dickson has outlined our position, and it does not look as though we are going to get unqualified support around the House.

I will say once again that it has been 15 years since the Good Friday Agreement, and we really do not feel that it is necessary any more to protect people in this way. We are only talking about donations of over £7,500. We feel that the electorate has the right to know who is funding political parties, in particular corporate donors, which nobody mentioned; it is not always individuals.

We will move on from there. We managed to end the practice of double-jobbing almost immediately after the situation arose. In Westminster, I think that there are about 630 MPs, and, I think, only four — one, two, three, four — still double-job, and that indicates to me that 626 of them do not feel that it is possible.

No Member of the Welsh Assembly or the Scottish Parliament does it. It should be phased out sooner rather than later.

4.00 pm

We absolutely do not disagree with the principle of opposition. In fact, I am sure that every Member remembers the Alliance Party's paper that was issued in 2004. [Laughter.] I am sure that they will all remember it when I mention the title: it was called 'Agenda for Democracy' —

Mr Kennedy: Oh, that one?

Mr Lunn: Yes.

Mr Kennedy: We shredded that years ago.

Mr Lunn: Well, it was a thoughtful paper on the question of a formal opposition while incorporating power sharing and requiring qualified majority voting. We proposed that nine years ago.

The motion is quite wide-ranging. It calls for only one action, but there are a lot of suggestions in it. One is to do with the size of the Assembly. Our most recent two manifestos indicated that we would be perfectly comfortable with an Assembly of about 80 Members. That figure was based on 16 constituencies rather than 18, and five Members per constituency.

If we are talking about reform of the Assembly and all the various items that are mentioned in the motion, we might have a better chance of achieving some of them in a five-year time span rather than a three-year one. I heard Mr Agnew's suggestion, but as much as the electorate seems to be cynical about what goes on up here, I am not sure whether it would really want us to bring an election forward. We will leave that hanging.

The call for action in the motion is for:

"all political parties which support inclusive and consensual politics to play a full role at Westminster or to forfeit the expenses".

Mr Nesbitt gave us the figures in his opening remarks. Over £500,000 in expenses goes to Sinn Féin, and there is access to another £100,000 in short money. We are very familiar with Sinn Féin's stance; it has been going on for 100 years, and the party is totally implacable and dogmatic about it. I heard Pat Sheehan say that its MPs do the same job as everybody else. I contrast that with MLAs being elected here and not coming to the House. They would be more like councillors than MLAs. Westminster is a legislative assembly; perhaps far more so than this Assembly. If you are not there to involve yourself in legislation, Committees, scrutiny and all the other activities of the oldest Parliament in the world —

Mr B McCrea: Will the Member give way?

Mr Lunn: Yes.

Mr B McCrea: I take the point that the Member is making, but does he not think that it would be better if we heard from all the Members who turn up to this place? We really ought to extend debating time so that time is made to hear the views of all the people who are democratically elected here and have a mandate.

Mr Lunn: The Member has taken the opportunity to make his point. It was not really related to what I was talking about.

I wonder when Sinn Féin will finally accept that times have changed. There may come a time when it does not need to stick to that particular dogmatic stance and its MPs could do the job that they are elected to do. I remind Sinn Féin that the Queen has visited Dublin. Martin McGuinness has shaken hands with the Queen. Sinn Féin has voted to fly the Union flag at Belfast City Hall. Times are changing.

Mr Sheehan: Will the Member give way?

Mr Lunn: Yes.

Mr Sheehan: When Sinn Féin stands for Westminster elections, it does so on the basis of abstentionism. When people vote for Sinn Féin candidates and elect them, that is what is known as democracy.

Mr Lunn: I know that that is Sinn Féin's current policy. I am just making the suggestion that, some time in the not-too-distant future, perhaps it may think about —

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is almost up.

Mr Lunn: — reconsidering that policy.

I support the amendment. In the absence of support for that amendment, we will support the main motion.

Mr Elliott: It has been an interesting debate, and it is quite interesting that we are debating Westminster legislation in the Northern Ireland Assembly. We were supposed to be debating the Criminal Justice Bill tomorrow, which is meant to go through the Northern Ireland Assembly, but we cannot do that. It has been removed from the schedule because the Alliance Party Minister cannot get agreement between Sinn Féin and the SDLP on the amendments that he withdrew two weeks ago. Our debating of Westminster legislation is quite an unusual scenario.

I listened to Mr Allister, and maybe I will deal with his point first. Perhaps more people were interested that Mr Allister had addressed a post-primary education group at the Assembly, but I was more interested in his comments that followed. Mr Allister made it clear that he would not take a place at the Executive table, even if he were offered one. Mr Lunn then said that we have heard other people say, "never, never, never" in the House before. I assume that he was referring to another party, but he could also have been referring to his party. I recall the time that the Alliance Party was the bastion of opposition in the House. Members of that party said that they were the opposition. What happened? It was offered a place at the Executive table, and it refused it. No, sorry, they did not; they took it. My apologies to Mr Lunn; you took that place.

Mr Lunn: Will the Member give way?

Mr Elliott: You do not have to clarify, but I will give way to you.

Mr Lunn: Just to clarify, we never said, "never, never, never". [Interruption.] In the situation we were in at that time, we did our best to provide an example of how an opposition could work in this place. [Laughter.] We never said that we would not accept office if we qualified, were offered it, and the Assembly voted us into that position.

Mr Elliott: It heartens me greatly to hear that clarification from Mr Lunn that the Alliance Party grabbed the chance to take a place at the Executive table when it could and forgot about being the opposition. It just left the opposition behind. That is very interesting.

Mr Allister, I am only saying that you should beware in case you get smitten with the same bug.

Mr Allister: Will the Member give way?

Mr Elliott: I am happy to give way.

Mr Allister: I assure the honourable Member that some of us are made of sterner stuff than the Alliance Party. Members from that party boast about transparency. Yes, they are transparent: you can see right through them. [Laughter.]

Mr Elliott: That is all quite interesting.

I also listened to the points from Members of the SDLP. What Mr McDevitt, Mrs Kelly and Mr Maginness said about the Ulster Unionist Party was quite interesting. They said that we should be building partnerships. Of course we should be building partnerships. Mind you, the only people I see the SDLP building partnerships with are Sinn Féin Members. They have you on a little hanger, and when they say, "jump", you ask, "how high?"

Yes, Mr Maginness, we have often had opportunities to build relationships with your party, but those were rejected at every stage. When we needed your support to continue devolution, you let us down every time.

Mr McDevitt: Will the Member give way?

Mr Elliott: Go ahead, Mr McDevitt.

Mr McDevitt: On this idea of partnership and hangers, it is curious that the SDLP is, in fact, engaged in an electoral contest against Sinn Féin in Mid Ulster. The last time I checked, Patsy McGlone will do rather well on Thursday. It is a pity that we cannot say the same about the Ulster Unionist Party. I wonder who really is under the cosh this week, Mr Elliott.

Mr Elliott: Mr McDevitt, you really do —

Mr Deputy Speaker: Order. Before Mr Elliott concludes, I believe that we are now well off the subject of the motion. Perhaps we could take a leaf out of that school's book, which, I am sure, stuck rigidly to the motion.

Mr Elliott: Thank you very much for that guidance, Mr Deputy Speaker. Perhaps I should not have taken those interventions, but, as you well know, I am a kindly person and like to give people the opportunity to have their say.

We are well aware of Mr McDevitt and his party signing petitions of concern to support Sinn Féin. It stopped the National Crime Agency operating here and helped to name a play park after a convicted terrorist in the Newry and Mourne District Council area. If we are going to build real partnerships, those are the type of issues that we need to get away from. I am quite happy to listen to that if it is really genuine.

Coming back to the representatives of Sinn Féin, I have to say that they never cease to amaze me. They never cease to surprise me with their attitudes. Openness and transparency? Maybe they could tell us where the £26 million from the Northern Bank robbery has gone, or where some of the bodies that their comrades-in-arms in the IRA buried and which have disappeared are. Maybe they could tell us about some of the actions that they carried out since

Mr McCartney: On a point of order, Mr Deputy Speaker. It is not for me to tell the Chair what his responsibility is, but I think that you have to make a ruling on some of the comments made about Sinn Féin.

Mr Deputy Speaker: In fact, I can tell the Member that I was discussing the matter with the Clerks, and, of course, it is not your place to tell the Chair. [Laughter.] I remind the Member, please — this is the second time — that he has an important task, which is to sum up the debate and stick rigidly to it.

Mr McCartney: On a point of order, Mr Deputy Speaker. I think that it is my duty sometimes to remind those in the Chair of their responsibilities.

Mr Deputy Speaker: I do not think that I should let that go. You did not need to remind the Chair, because I was discussing the matter with my Clerks. It is a serious offence to challenge the Chair.

Mr McCartney: I am not challenging the Chair.

Mr Deputy Speaker: Thank you.

Mr Maskey: On a point of order, Mr Deputy Speaker. Following on from that interchange between you and my colleague, I want to say that he raised a point of order on the basis that there was no intervention from the Deputy Speaker after a number of scurrilous remarks were made by another Member against our party. So, as far as I am concerned, I stand by my colleague's need to make an intervention on our behalf. Whether that is an advising or reminding intervention is a moot point, but I ask the LeasCheann Comhairle to reflect on the fact that it took a Member from this side of the House, on behalf of our party, to make an intervention before the matter was dealt with, and I think that that is regrettable and not really acceptable.

Mr Deputy Speaker: It is important for the Member to accept and understand that I was in the process of doing that. I was about to remind Mr Elliott that he should not make remarks about a political party in connection with bank robberies and other things for which it is not accountable.

Mr Elliott: Thank you very much, Mr Deputy Speaker, for that guidance, and I would not question your authority. I was merely replying to the debate and to Members who had spoken in it. Openness and transparency were clearly one of the issues; openness and transparency about —

Mr Sheehan: On a point of order, Mr Deputy Speaker. I think that you should make a ruling on accuracy. The transparency being discussed today concerns donations to political parties, and the Member is straying off that point.

Mr Allister: How much of the £26 million did you get?

Mr Sheehan: I beg your pardon?

Mr Allister: How much of the £26 million did you get?

Mr Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

Mr Sheehan: That is three times today.

Mr Deputy Speaker: Order, please. My function here is to try to encourage Members to stick to the motion. I have endeavoured to do that, but I have not had the complete support of every Member, and that is to be regretted. I repeat that, at every stage, I have tried honestly to ensure that no political party should have any complaint. I am not happy with some of the remarks that were made, and I am most certainly not happy with the last remark that was made from a sedentary position. I trust that we can now, in a democratic way, complete the debate on the motion and go to the vote without any more disharmony.

Mr Maskey: On a point of order, Mr Deputy Speaker.

Mr Deputy Speaker: I am prepared to take one more point of order, and then I must proceed.

Mr Maskey: I appreciate that you referred to the last remark made by a Member from a sedentary position, but will the LeasCheann Comhairle advise the House that he will consider those remarks? They were totally unacceptable, and it is not good enough that they will simply be noted by the House. In fact, I think that action needs to be taken.

Mr Deputy Speaker: I most certainly intend to take up the issue with the Speaker after the debate because I am not happy. Sorry — Mr Elliott, continue.

Mr Elliott: Thank you very much, Mr Deputy Speaker. I was in the process of saying that I was responding to the openness and transparency aspects of the debate. Clearly, as indicated here in the debate, a number of people have paid the ultimate price for their actions and their involvement in political activities.

4.15 pm

That is one of the obvious concerns that we have about allowing total openness in the donations aspect of the Bill. Some people face intimidation. It is still happening. Some organisations and groups take intimidatory actions against some of those who are involved in not only political parties but wider cultural activities. That is very unfortunate. If we could get away from that, I would fully support total openness and transparency, and I know that the Ulster Unionist Party would also support it. Unfortunately, we are not at that stage, simply because we still have a terrorist threat in Northern Ireland, which is very unfortunate and concerning. One of the issues that we highlighted when speaking to the Northern Ireland Affairs Committee was the danger that the openness that it is looking for could bring about. If we can get to that stage, so be it and so much the better.

We clearly have to recognise that a number of those who lost their life in Northern Ireland because of their political involvement came from all sides of the community. It would be unfortunate if we let this pass without expressing and acknowledging that quite clearly. Mr Dickson was quite clear in what he said about that, and I accept where he is coming from. However, we obviously have a difference of opinion on that point.

We in the Ulster Unionist Party were criticised by other parties for bringing forward the motion. Why? Why should we not have this debate openly? Mr McDevitt argued that this was for the Assembly and Executive Review Committee, but it is also for the House to debate. We need to bring these things out into the open in this Chamber. The Assembly and Executive Review Committee has not brought forward any proposals on a number of these issues, so why should we not debate those aspects in the Chamber?

Mr Deputy Speaker, I apologise that the debate ended up in the fractious way that it did. However, you cannot accept that we and I will sit back and take some of the aggression that comes from other parties and that we will not have our say when making a winding-up speech. So, I make no apology for putting forward those aspects that I and the Ulster Unionist Party believe in. I hope that voters in Mid Ulster this week send back a representative in Nigel Lutton who will actually represent the people there. Thank you.

Question put, That the amendment be made.

The Assembly divided:

Resolved:

That this Assembly notes the publication of the draft Northern Ireland (Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill by the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland; supports the commitment to bring to an end the practice of dual mandates; welcomes the recognition within the Bill that political donations in Northern Ireland require sensitivity; acknowledges that further work is needed on measures that are still under consideration for potential inclusion in the Bill, including the creation of a formal Opposition in the Assembly, the size of the Assembly and the length of the Assembly term; and calls on all political parties which support inclusive and consensual politics to play a full role at Westminster or to forfeit the expenses that they claim from Parliament. (Mr Deputy Speaker [Mr Beggs] in the Chair)

Meat Products

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Business Committee has agreed to allow up to one hour and 30 minutes for the debate. The proposer of the motion will have 10 minutes to propose and 10 minutes in which to make a winding-up speech. All other Members who are called to speak will have five minutes.

Mr Irwin: I beg to move

That this Assembly notes Northern Ireland's excellent reputation for producing high-quality food; expresses concern at the ongoing incidents surrounding meat products; encourages retailers to source more food products from Northern Ireland; and calls on the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to work with retailers to ensure that processors and farmers get a better return for their products.

At the very outset, I declare an interest as a farmer and a primary producer.

4.45 pm

Northern Ireland's reputation as a premium producer of high-quality food products is a status that has been hard fought for. That reputation is a result of the farming community being wholly committed to the long-term survival and growth of the industry. The level of effort that is required for modern-day farming is not to be taken lightly. The farmer expends considerable resources to produce the food that we all enjoy every day, yet the reward that he receives is totally inadequate. Farmers must cope with an ever-changing marketplace, which, by all accounts, they have little control over. The red tape and regulations that are associated with farming require hours of paperwork and constant checking to ensure that everything is compliant. That is time lost without reimbursement. The farmer is not paid for that time, nor can he take it in lieu; it is part of the farmer's daily routine.

Input costs for running a farm, such as fuel and energy, continue to rise. Those costs are unable to be passed on to compensate the farmer. The farmer must somehow continue to swallow up those significant increases. That simply is not sustainable in the long term. Farmers across the Province have, no doubt, been heartened considerably by the spell of dry weather that we have experienced in recent days. I am of the firm belief that there will, of course, always be a seed time and harvest, although it has certainly been extremely challenging over the past 12 months. The weather is out of the farmer's control, and some might say that that is just as well. The extremely wet weather in recent months has had a massive effect on farming operations, such as planting, harvesting and getting animals to grass. There is a lack of feed for wintering, and there have been problems with slurry spreading prior to the closed period. Again, that has meant farmers having to spend more simply to stand still. In many other industries, a company is able to factor in such costs and, over a period of time, recoup such expenses. However, in the agrifood sector, the primary producer is limited in his or her ability to claw back those outgoings. Farmers are already making huge efficiencies in their operations to ensure that every move that is made is one that uses the least amount of resources while still allowing the farm to function as a business. However, that is with regard only to things that are within their control. As I said, farmers have no control over outside pressures.

The horse meat scandal has proven, without any doubt, the true value of our local agrifood industry. Our local butchers are certainly testimony to that in recent weeks, with many reporting a significant uptake in many products. Consumers are clearly very happy with our homegrown produce. The agrifood sector's strict traceability requirements have given the consumer a level of confidence that has been missing for some of the imported products that are bought in the larger supermarkets. Consumers have been setting the pace by visiting their local butcher in greater numbers or by choosing products from the meat counters in many of our supermarkets. Many consumers have rejected the cheaper, processed products that have been at the source of the recent investigations. Given that our traceability is among the most comprehensive in Europe, I am fully supportive of the call for retailers to source more meat products from our home industry.

It must be realised that there would not be a local agrifood sector were it not for the farmer as the primary producer. It is only fair and proper that, as the first and most vital link in the supply chain, the farmer is more fairly treated and receives a fair price for his produce. In contributions to the House last week, I stated the importance of our industry continuing to develop to add value to our local produce, including dairy and horticultural products. That remains a very important part of the growth strategy for the agrifood sector in Northern Ireland. I know that the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment has been active in helping to promote our fantastic local produce to a world market. Those efforts are not going unnoticed, so I urge her to continue in that important work. However, the farmer must be fairly paid in a way that reflects the efforts that are invested in bringing our local food to the table. Farm incomes fell alarmingly in 2012, by around 50%, owing to a wide range of factors, some of which I have covered already. That has taken a heavy toll on farmers, no doubt.

The supply chain must react to that hardship and move to a realistic pricing system that would see changes in how the bigger retailers source and price their lines. The Agri-Food Strategy Board must invest time and effort in confronting that make-or-break obstacle for our primary producers, and I urge the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to use her influence and offices to help to achieve the price security that our farmers deserve.

We have heard much of the quality of our local meat in the press in recent weeks. Now it is time to see farmers receive a fair return on the investment, time, money and effort involved in reaching that high level of quality. Our industry depends on it.

Mr Flanagan: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I commend the proposer of this timely motion for bringing it to the House. I also commend our local agriculture industry and primary producers, of which there are many in my constituency and in many other rural constituencies. The primary producers in our local agriculture sector are a good source of employment in local communities and are often the only source of income in many family homes, so their importance to our wider local economy cannot be overstated.

The recent questions over the quality of meat could have been disastrous for the entire agrifood sector, but it is my view that we have overcome the worst of that. We are now back on the path and can clearly state that all meat coming out of here is safe for people to consume. That is the important message that we all need to state. I know that the Chairperson of the Committee for Agriculture and Rural Development, along with many other people, has been keen to state that on every possible occasion. I join him in giving those reassurances. Even though our primary producers clearly have not been involved in this, they have unfortunately been affected by it and suffer greatly from its outworkings, so we need to see what can be done to assist those primary producers who may have been impacted on by the negative connotations that may be there, particularly towards red meat. We need to reassure people that meat is safe.

For a change, I went out for dinner last night with my wife and enjoyed a good steak. I am sure that there are many in our community who are not as well fed as I am, but I would like to tell people that that is a very rare occurrence — I usually eat chicken.

Our agriculture producers need greater support. They need support from government, and the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment and the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development have created the Agri-Food Strategy Board to see how best they can provide that support at an Executive level. Agriculture producers need support from Europe, and there are continuing negotiations on CAP reform and how it can best help our primary producers. However, they also need support from our local retailers and customers. Support local meat and local butchers, and ensure that whatever meat you are buying is sourced locally. In that way, you can be guaranteed of its quality and traceability.

In his opening contribution, William Irwin fully outlined many of the other challenges that face farmers, and I will not rehash any of his well-made points. He did a good job, so I will not bore people by doing that.

Finally, I welcome the Minister back from her recent trade mission, and I congratulate her and all those organisations that were away with her showcasing our projects. I wish all those companies who went with her, hoping for business, all the best.

Mr Byrne: I support the motion and congratulate those who tabled it. I had hoped to table an amendment, but there were logistical reasons as to why that did not happen.

The agrifood sector is very important to Northern Ireland, as it is now a £4 billion industry and has the potential to grow further. It continues to grow despite the recession. As you know, it sustains over 92,000 jobs, both directly and indirectly, and accounts for 20% of manufacturing. For those reasons, we cannot allow it to slide owing to uncertainty about the authenticity of any of our Northern Ireland food products. For it to continue to grow, we need to sustain its good reputation and ensure that consumers and purchasers have confidence in the industry. Reputation and confidence are paramount. For that to happen, we have to be more proactive than reactive, as the recent food crisis has demonstrated.

The recent samples that have shown various levels of horse DNA in processed meat products in these islands have caused grave concern among consumers. The question we must ask is this: how can we prevent this from happening in future?

We need a quality assured scheme that will do as it suggests: assure quality so that consumers get the level of quality and goodness that they are entitled to in the products that they buy in the supermarket. We have an excellent farm quality assurance scheme that relates to food products leaving the farm in Northern Ireland, but there are obvious gaps in the food traceability system from farm gate to supermarket shelf. We do not have national or EU-wide robust systems of food safety standards and quality assurance.

A number of agencies are involved in the food industry, but a disjointed traceability and verification system in the food chain pertains. We have environmental health officers in local councils in relation to all food premises and food hygiene, which comes under the auspices of the Department of the Environment (DOE); we have the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) veterinary inspection service that relates mainly to farms, marts, slaughtering houses and cutting premises, and that is obviously in DARD; we have meat processing plants with on-site meat inspectors, which come under the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (DETI); and we have the Food Standards Agency (FSA), which comes under the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS) and relates to food safety. food authenticity and labelling. Obviously, we have a very disjointed system.

The FSA says that it is committed to open and transparent working, and it has briefed the media regularly to reassure the public about food products on sale. It is important that consumers are assured by the public authorities and are given full information to make informed and confident decisions on the food that they buy.

We are all aware that DARD figures for 2011-12 show that farm incomes have dropped from £290 million to around £143 million, which is a drop of over 50%. Farmers are faced with increasing costs. Feed prices have risen, we have had poor weather, and we have had increases in fertiliser and fuel prices. Even the value of the single farm payment has fallen due to currency fluctuations between the euro and sterling. Quite simply, farmers need better prices at the farm gate. Currently, they are not recovering the cost of production. However, those higher production costs are not reflected in the price that the farmers receive. Food processors and retailers are caught in the dilemma that consumers want to buy food cheaply but, as the recent crisis has shown us, not at any cost. They want to be assured that the food that they and their families eat is of a certain quality and standard. The big retailers demand lower prices from the processing industry, and they exercise a lot of the purchasing power.

We need to get back to buying as much as possible locally. Many local butchers are enjoying more trade and turnover since the recent crisis. Food processors and retailers need to source as much as possible locally, so that consumers know that they are getting the best quality possible. That would ensure that the farmers and the processors get a better return, as well as giving consumers a good deal.

Some of the imported meat products have given rise to major concerns —

Mr Deputy Speaker: The Member's time is almost up.

Mr Byrne: — about quality and accurate or inaccurate labelling. EU-wide traceability is needed now more than ever. I thank the Minister for being present. Hopefully, we will hear some positive news.

Mrs Overend: I state my support for the motion at the outset. It is certainly timely, given the events surrounding the local meat producers and the challenges that they continue to face.

I am on record as clearly outlining my support for our local farmers and processors. I said in the House last week:

"In light of the recent horse meat scandal, I take this opportunity to put on record the fact that I have complete trust and confidence in our local quality assured beef." [Official Report, This Bound Volume 82, p250, col 2].

I repeat that sentiment today.

The motion rightly refers to the excellent reputation that Northern Ireland has for producing high-quality food, and there are many examples of that. I think specifically of Glenarm Beef, whose organic beef has already won several prestigious awards and is served in several leading Belfast restaurants and hotels. I think locally of the mid-Ulster area and McKee's Butchers and Ditty's Home Bakery, which has won several prestigious awards. In my constituency of Mid Ulster we also have the Karro Food Group, which is best known for its Cookstown sizzle. It is Northern Ireland's most popular pork products brand and is a major supporter of our agriculture industry. The success of Moy Park is also well documented as Northern Ireland's largest food processing business, and it remains one of our top companies employing more than 5,000 people here.

5.00 pm

Those are just some examples of what Northern Irish producers have to offer. None of it would be possible without the fantastic reputation that has been built up over the years. We must not let the ongoing situation regarding horse meat negatively affect those who are producing our local meat products because all evidence thus far suggests that they are complying with the relevant safety and quality regulations and bringing first-class local produce into the food chain. However, we cannot overlook the fact that incidents surrounding meat products are still ongoing. For example, my colleague Jo-Anne Dobson, following questions to the Agriculture Minister, was able to find out that horse meat had been found in burgers supplied to the Greenmount and Loughry campuses of the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise (CAFRE).

We have also been informed in recent weeks that burgers containing horse meat had been supplied to hospitals and schools in Northern Ireland. Massive chains such as Lidl, Tesco, Asda and Aldi all experienced incidents of potential contamination as well. Investigations must continue by the Food Standards Agency and, especially, by the retailers, who have displayed an alarming lack of vigilance in some cases in order to uncover the full extent of horse meat in food processed in Northern Ireland. Only then can we begin to restore and regain the confidence of consumers in the long term.

Perhaps the Minister will update the House today on the actions that she is taking in her responsibilities regarding the economy to ensure that the matter is being fully investigated. How is the Minister reassuring the many overseas importers of meat from our producers that our products remain at the high standards that we have all come to expect?

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment can act to ensure that our processors and farmers are getting as good a return as possible on their products, as the motion suggests. For example, the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills has confirmed that a groceries code adjudicator will, hopefully, be up and running by mid-2013. That new role must have the necessary powers, and its independence must not be in question. If enacted properly, it has the potential to benefit some 311,000 farms, and it must ensure that supermarkets treat all their suppliers fairly and within the law.

I ask the Minister for an update on the establishment of the adjudicator and what discussions she has had with the relevant officials at Westminster on that. I have mentioned the reputation of our produce, and the Minister can work to protect and grow that reputation.

To conclude, the main way for people to ensure that they are buying quality meat is to buy local. Therefore, it is fundamentally important that all of us, including the Minister, continue to encourage people to do that as much as possible.

Mr Lunn: I support the motion. It asks for two things: it encourages retailers to source more food products in Northern Ireland; and it calls on the Minister to try to ensure that our processors and farmers get a better return. I do not know how many times I have heard major supermarkets telling us how much produce they source locally; I am sure that they say it in every area where they set up a big store. The first thing that they tell us is that they will source as much of their produce locally as they possibly can. They give us all kinds of figures, but I wonder what percentage of their input actually comes from local producers.

Joe Byrne said that our farmers are being priced out. Even when they cannot cover their costs, they are still being underpriced by other producers around the world in the mad dash for the cheapest possible food. Pardon the pun, but, in the past few weeks, the chickens have come home to roost.

The supply chains for Tesco and others, which have been exposed as selling deficient goods, have been proven to be not adequately covered or checked, and the labelling is not right. Frankly, I would hope that the first thing that all supermarkets would do is acknowledge that there has been a problem in a particular supply chain, and close it down. If they have been importing goods from Romania or wherever and a percentage of horse meat or horse DNA was found in them, they should not buy any more from that supplier. It is as simple as that.

That would lead towards buying more local produce. It would certainly lead them to buying produce from countries that have an excellent record of traceability. I am not a farmer, but I am constantly assured that nowhere in the world is the traceability regime better than ours, so they should, obviously, be buying local, but that leads to the question of how much they are prepared to pay. It also leads to the question of how much the public is prepared to pay for such produce off the shelves.

There have been food scares over the years when public demand for a product dropped. At the moment, demand for processed meals such as lasagne and moussaka has gone through the floor, but I would guess that, in a year's time, demand will be back up because people like those things. Frankly, they are cheap and cheerful and perhaps people have to buy them in the present economic circumstances.

The next part of the motion calls on the Minister:

"to work with retailers to ensure that ... farmers get a better return".

I hope that the Minister can find some way to put pressure on the people who matter in that industry to do exactly that. At the end of the day, it is a free and very competitive market. I hope that market forces and competitive pressures do not gradually bring about this situation again. I hope that a situation in which we find horse meat in what is supposed to be a beef product will never recur. As somebody who kept a horse for a few years for my daughter, the very thought of that turns my stomach. I read an article in 'The Sunday Times' yesterday that stated that, if you went to Verona, I believe, you have a choice of about six horse meat dishes in an expensive restaurant. That just indicates how things can be completely different in other parts of the world.

It is not all to do with meat these days. I have a thing about the way that salmon is produced and farmed. I think it is downright disgusting. I watched a programme the other night about prawn production in Thailand — I do not know whether anybody here saw it — that is part of a campaign by Hugh what's-his-name about fish production and waste around the world. If you let them, such programmes would put you off food for life, and I am not sure what you would eat.

I will go back to the main point. Northern Ireland producers have the capacity to produce the best meat that there is. It is within the power of the local Tesco, Sainsbury's, Aldi or Marks and Spencer to try to buy that at a price —

Mr Deputy Speaker: Will the Member draw his remarks to a close, please?

Mr Lunn: — that gives them the opportunity to make a profit and also gives farmers the opportunity to make a turn on their hard work. I look forward to hearing what the Minister has to say on the issue.

Mr Dunne: I, too, welcome the opportunity to speak in support of the motion. Northern Ireland is renowned for producing high-quality farm produce, and we can rightly be proud of the continued success of our agrifood sector. That is one of our growth industries, and it is right and proper that we continue to protect and enhance it.

Some of our local products have gained world renown, especially those with Protected Geographical Indication (PGI) status under European Union law, such as Comber spuds and Lough Neagh eels. We must continually look to build on that.

The sector has great potential, as was demonstrated in the 'Appetite for Growth' document produced by the Northern Ireland Food and Drink Association in March 2012. The sector can play a real part in helping to rebalance and grow our economy. World markets are opening up more than ever, and I know that the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment is consistently working on potential new markets for our local products. We fully support that and look forward to new doors opening.

The agrifood sector is a huge employer across Northern Ireland and has been for many years. Therefore, it must continue to be supported in every way possible. Our farmers have come through many difficult times in the past and have continued to produce top-quality food. The year 2012 was very challenging for our farmers because of the cost of animal feedstuff, the increased costs of fertilisers and the ever-increasing costs of energy and fuel.

Our farm quality assurance scheme, operated by the Livestock and Meat Commission (LMC) in Northern Ireland, has proved to be effective. The fact that every cut of meat is labelled with traceability details in the abattoir, under regulated conditions, gives customers confidence. The real risk to consumers comes from processed meat, which, in law, is meat that is defined as fresh until it is minced. It effectively becomes processed when salt, herbs and other products are added.

The risk from processed meat is compounded by the fact that meat is sold as a commodity in the world market and is sold from dealer to dealer without their even seeing or verifying the standards of the produce. Such meat often starts at a low price, and quality can be compromised, but the responsibility for the quality of the raw material lies with processors. The processors who supply meat for burgers and ready meals must put in place an effective quality assurance system to give assurance to the customers that what is on the supermarket shelf is exactly what is specified on the label.

Supermarkets must ensure that processed products are supplied, as per a contract, from their suppliers, have systems in place to verify the quality of the product and take effective action against non-compliance. Supermarkets and their suppliers must be held to account for feeding non-compliant food to the hungry public.

We must continue to promote markets for local produce outside of the UK and get customers to further experience our quality produce with assurance. There is great potential for our local produce in the world markets, and I trust that there will be continued work between our producers and with Invest NI and InterTradeIreland. Trade shows and exhibits can often be beneficial in reaching out to new markets, and I know that our Minister has been leading on that for some time.

We have a great reputation for producing high-quality food. We are concerned at the ongoing incidents surrounding some meat products and call on retailers to place a greater emphasis on local produce. It is important that we continue to work with retailers to ensure that our farmers and processors get a fair deal for their product. I urge the House to support the motion.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I am a member of the ETI Committee and support the motion. I welcome the opportunity to speak to the motion and thank the proposer for tabling it.

It is useful to acknowledge the support that has been shown for the industry from a number of contributors today. A number of points have been made, which I do not think need to be repeated, but we must remind ourselves that the meat industry is worth £1 million annually in the North's economy. Farmers in the North of Ireland have certainly struggled with low prices and high costs for fertiliser, feed and fuel, so there is no doubt that the sector needs support. DETI, therefore, needs to work with DARD to ensure that that support and those mechanisms are in place.

The recent horse meat controversy has shaken consumers' confidence, but it must be stressed, as Members mentioned, that our local farmers and primary producers were not involved. As the proposer said, our local produce is fully traceable, and its quality is second to none. Consumers are seeking that quality here and abroad, so we need to support the sector and ensure that this is a key part of our export-led strategy towards economic recovery.

I support the motion and look forward to the Minister's response on how those practical measures can be put in place. Go raibh maith agat.

5.15 pm

Mr Gardiner: I thank the Members who brought the important motion to the House for debate. No one needs to be reminded of the huge problems that the agrifood sector has faced over recent weeks. People's trust in food has been shaken. Once that confidence is gone, it is, often, very difficult to get it back. However, it is very important to remember that although the industry may have been caught up in the scandal, producers, namely farmers, have done nothing wrong. I am as confident of the quality of meat that farmers produce today as I was a month ago. We must not allow a small number of cases to hold back an entire industry.

The motion, rightly, calls on retailers to source more food locally. Representing a constituency such as Upper Bann, which is a mix of towns and open countryside, has given me a wonderful insight into the very fine balance between the pressures of producing food on the farm and making it affordable for the wider public. I am pleased that there remains great trust in local farmers and that most consumers have realised that the problem originated in other member states of the European Union. Local farmers produce world-leading products, and, over recent years, the wider agrifood sector has become a beacon of hope in an otherwise difficult economic environment.

It would, however, be wrong for us to stand here today and demand that all food be sourced locally and bought only from local butchers. Although that may be the preferred choice for many people, we need to accept that for others, buying all of their meat in the traditional butcher's setting, with the extra cost, is just not an option.

Supermarkets are to be congratulated for making meat affordable and readily available. However, I believe that the balance has now tipped and that quality may be suffering for the sake of price. One really has to wonder about the contents of a box of burgers being sold for £1. The recent announcement that farm income fell by over 50% in 2012 means that any huge profits being made by supermarkets are, clearly, not being passed on to farmers.

The plight of dairy farmers is well known, but beef producers have also faced an incredibly difficult couple of years of rising costs for fuel, feed and fertiliser while farm-gate prices have not been keeping up. That is why I support the motion's call for the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to work with retailers to ensure that processors and farmers get a better return for their products.

I expect that, over time, and with the findings of the investigation, we will, one day, learn what went wrong and how it was allowed to happen. It is intolerable that people were deceived into thinking that what looked like perfectly good beef produce, going by the label, actually contained something very different. It is deeply regrettable that the situation was allowed to occur. There are many questions to be answered, not least by the Food Standards Agency and food processors. The number one priority right now, however, must be to ensure that the contents of the food on shelves are as stated on the label and that the wider agrifood sector is not shaken any more than it has been already. I support the motion.

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): I join Members in congratulating those who brought the motion to the Floor. It provides the Assembly with a timely opportunity to highlight all that is good about Northern Ireland's agrifood and to send a clear message to consumers, not just here in Northern Ireland but throughout the world, that the food produced here is among the best in the world.

I have no hesitation in endorsing the following statement in the motion:

"That this Assembly notes Northern Ireland's excellent reputation for producing high-quality food".

As the Member who moved the motion pointed out, that reputation has been hard won, and we must recognise that in the Chamber today.

My support for the agrifood sector is founded on practical experience. Coming from Fermanagh, I have been surrounded by agriculture all my life, and I have seen at first hand the high-quality produce that comes from our farms. As Enterprise Minister, I have had the opportunity to visit many food processors, large and small, and I have been continually impressed by their drive and concern for quality and excellence.

As Mr Flanagan mentioned, only last week I was with Northern Ireland food companies at the Gulfood show in Abu Dhabi — actually it was in Dubai; I was in Abu Dhabi about something else — and I assure you that there is clear demand in that region and, indeed, across the globe, for the excellent product that we have to offer. I was very encouraged by the contacts that were made and the networking that was achieved at the Gulfood event.

We can be justifiably proud that Northern Ireland has a long tradition of quality food production. That has resulted in a sector that has continued to grow, despite the recession, that has a turnover of some £4 billion and that accounts for almost 20% of total Northern Ireland manufacturing sales, most of which are sold to external markets. The sector also provides employment for approximately 50,000 people, 18,000 of whom are in food processing and many of whom are employed in rural areas. Indeed, as we heard, the Northern Ireland Food and Drink Association report has highlighted the potential for the creation of up to 15,000 new jobs in the sector by 2020.

So, in short, the sector is very important to the Northern Ireland economy. That is why it is recognised as a priority sector in our economic strategy, with the distribution of the sector's activity right across Northern Ireland supporting the economic strategy's cross-cutting principle of balanced subregional growth.

Agrifood has also been recognised as a priority in the Programme for Government for the very first time. The Programme for Government commits us to developing a strategic plan that will identify priorities for the sector through to 2020. The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development and I have appointed the Agri-Food Strategy Board to develop the strategic plan, and we anticipate receipt of that plan in the next few weeks. There is no doubt that the Executive fully recognise the importance and, more than that, the value of our agrifood sector. That is based on the excellent quality of the food that we produce.

That brings me to the second point in the motion, which is that the Assembly:

"expresses concern at the ongoing incidents surrounding meat products".

The revelations in recent weeks about the contamination of processed meat products highlight a problem that appears to extend the length and breadth of Europe, impacting, as many Members indicated, on consumer confidence. This is a European-wide issue. In fact, it is even outside Europe. The Environment Secretary, Owen Paterson, correctly described it as a Europe-wide scandal.

Food businesses throughout the United Kingdom, the Republic of Ireland and right across Europe have been the subject of what appears to be widespread and systematic fraud. I am encouraged that governments across Europe are taking action to resolve the issue, and EU-wide DNA testing of processed meat products is under way as a means to raise consumer confidence in such products.

We have confidence that the Commission is treating the meat contamination as a case of fraudulent misuse of the labelling system for economic gain, and it has tasked Europol with co-ordinating different criminal investigations right across Europe. Closer to home, the Food Standards Agency and the police, working with our counterparts across Europe, are involved in what is a complicated and far-reaching investigation. The FSA will continue to work closely with businesses and trade bodies along the whole food chain to try to get to the bottom of what is a totally unacceptable situation to root out any illegal activity and enforce good safety and authenticity regulation. It plans to take whatever action is necessary.

I assure the House that DETI and DARD are working closely with the FSA in Northern Ireland to ensure that all efforts will be made to protect that hard-won reputation of our home-grown produce and, indeed, its contribution to the economy. We cannot — this point was made by a couple of Members — allow the Europe-wide fraud to tarnish our long track record as a source of quality meat produce. The meat sector is an important part of our agrifood sector, and all efforts must be made to protect its reputation. I welcome the fact that, over the past six months, the price of beef throughout the UK has increased. Our quality beef, which is reared on a grass-based system, has a justified reputation as a premium product. Consumers can have absolute confidence that it is totally natural and of the highest quality available.

The traceability controls in our agrifood supply chain emphasise the benefits to consumers and businesses of purchasing local produce. There are environmental, economic and social benefits, and there is also the integrity and safety of our produce. The Northern Ireland beef and lamb farm quality assurance scheme celebrated its 20th anniversary this year. Therefore, we have a long and successful track record of delivering extensive traceability controls through the supply chain.

Mr Byrne raised the issue of European traceability. Of course, there is no issue with traceability and quality assurance for produce that originates in Northern Ireland. The traceability runs from the farm right through the processing system and onwards. However, there is no quality assurance for produce that is imported into Northern Ireland. That is a European issue, or perhaps even an outside-of-Europe issue. It is something that, hopefully, Europe will look at when it carries through the DNA tests.

Our track record in Northern Ireland in delivering quality meat has enabled companies to move ahead of the pack in events such as the UK Great Taste Awards. Hannan Meats was the supreme champion last year. The year before that, it was another butcher from Northern Ireland: McCartney's butchers in Moira. They are both great examples of how a Northern Ireland company can work with Invest Northern Ireland on new product development, employee training and export marketing, and then become a leader in its class. Hannan Meats and McCartney's are two examples that show why we should continue to promote our local red meat on the export market.

The motion states that we should encourage:

"retailers to source more food products from Northern Ireland; and ... work with retailers to ensure that processors and farmers get a better return for their products."

Obviously, I am in complete agreement with those points. The large retailers have an absolutely crucial role to play in restoring consumer confidence. The meat contamination scandal has very much demonstrated what consumers want. They need to have confidence in the food that they buy. We need to provide that confidence in future. There is a real opportunity for retailers to meet ever-more exacting consumer demands by sourcing more food locally. I accept what Mr Lunn said about retailers: when they come to Northern Ireland, they are very keen to tell us how much they are sourcing from local farms, but at what price? That is the key element. There has been a downward pressure on prices. Almost everybody in the House made the point that, although food bills are increasing, the spending ability of households in Northern Ireland is coming under increasing pressure. The retailers are saying that they must get it for less. That, of course, has an impact on not just our farmers but our food and meat processors.

There is clearly a need to engage. I intend to engage with the major retailers so that we can have a real conversation about the price of food. Mrs Overend spoke about the supermarket adjudicator. I intend to meet her. I will indicate that it is vital that the body have teeth. We need to ensure that we can achieve a fair return right along the supply chain, not just for the retailers. The major retailers recognise the need for constructive engagement. Some of you will have seen some of the ads that Tesco placed recently. Tesco's aim is to bring its meat production closer to home, and it plans to work closer with British farmers in sourcing its meat, which I welcome. However, there is a long way to travel. We need to ensure that the retailers recognise the damage that has been caused and that we can help them. I think that it is an opportunity for our meat processors and farmers in Northern Ireland.

5.30 pm

I am very proud of the red meat industry, as all of us in the House should be. I will work with DARD and support the producers and processors in any way that I can.

Mr Frew: I rise, of course, to commend the motion to the House, I am glad that the debate has gone the way it has. It has been a spirited debate, in which Members supported and defended our agrifood sector, particularly the local meat producers.

It is vital that we keep championing the local producers, farmers and processors who do this so well, and who produce quality produce that is second to none throughout the world. I will never grow tired of echoing that message, nor will I shy away from it. I will echo it every hour of every day if I have to. I will defend and, more importantly, promote our produce. It is fully traceable from the gate to the plate, and it is green, clean, grass-fed meat. I have been saying those slogans so often and for so long that I think I say them in my sleep.

We cannot afford to allow the scandals to hamper or reduce the capabilities of our agrifood sector to promote, sell and export our produce across the world. It is vital that we take advantage of the present scandals. We can prove how traceable and clean our food is, so we have to promote our produce in that way.

Only last week, we had a debate about the giants of the agrifood sector: poultry meat; beef and sheep meat; bakeries; and milk and milk products. It is vital that we promote this industry. It is so important to our economy and affects every corner of this Province. It is vital that we talk about this as often as we can, echo the messages that our farmers and local butchers tell us, get them on the airwaves and the TV and tell the people around the world and in Northern Ireland that the meat we produce is safe, clean and of top quality. It can be sold around the world, and it is second to none throughout the world.

I am the Chair of the Agriculture Committee, and my Deputy Chair, Joe Byrne, also spoke in the debate. The Committee has written to the supermarkets. When we were out and about talking to farmers, we saw that there was anger. There was anger, right in the throes of the scandal, about how this could have happened. We have a traceable system, and when we sell our meat, it is proven to be of high quality. We wrote to the supermarkets asking them to explain their food supply chains and how they think this could have happened. We also asked them, if fraud is happening, where they think it is happening; what they are doing to protect the food supply chain; why the supply chain is stacked so much against primary producers and farmers; and why they are not protecting farmers better. Given that farmers produce top quality meat, why do the supermarkets not use it more? Why do they shy away from it? Why do they not spend the extra money to get the bestquality meat they can to stack their shelves? Why do they not sell the best produce, rather than trying to make their large profit margins even larger?

I do not see much of that profit coming down to farmers and producers. In fact, it is stacked heavily against our primary producers — the very people who produce so much top-quality meat. They have been let down, and that is something that we cannot and should not stand for. In the throes of this debacle and in the heat of this scandal, we showed a united front throughout the House and throughout the Departments. However, it is fair to say that the Agriculture Minister went missing for the first weeks when she should have been out with me, promoting and protecting our industry. She did come back, she did recover, and we did show a united front, but it was slow, and I hope that she has learned a lesson from that. As Agriculture Minister, she is there to protect, to promote and to enhance the farmers of this country, and she needs to do that much more quickly than she has in this scandal. I hope that there will be lessons learnt, Mr Deputy Speaker.

I will wind up this very important debate. William Irwin, who moved the motion, talked about farmers not getting a fair share of the profit and that that trend is all too prevalent in our industry. They are being hammered at every end by the other people in the supply chain — something that I have talked about. He talked about the trend back to the local butcher's shop and to the meat counters of our supermarkets. He also mentioned the fall in farmers' incomes and, again, how farmers, despite being under pressure all the time, are still producing top-quality meat.

Phil Flanagan talked about the message that was going out to the public. He mentioned his meals out buying big juicy steaks. I was going to ask for an intervention to see whether he had had sirloin or fillet, but I thought better of it. However, it is good that we can show a united front to our industry.

Joe Byrne is the Deputy Chairperson of the Agriculture Committee. We work well together in that Committee, and I support his words in the debate, but we need better Europe-wide traceability systems. He talked about the various roles and responsibilities of Departments in Northern Ireland. Yes, lessons could be learned. He also talked about the disjoint, and that is something that we could do better. He also talked about farm incomes and how the farmer is getting hammered every year — year in, year out. He also mentioned applying pressure on the supermarkets, which is vital, because they are such an important part of the supply chain.

Sandra Overend said that the motion was timely and congratulated us on it. We commend the support that she has given us, and the industry, at this time. Her message has been on-message, too, and I congratulate her on that. We have shown a united front. It is important to keep reminding people how well we produce meat. It should be exported, and it is exported throughout the world. She also mentioned how deeply horse meat has penetrated our systems and our food chains. Of course, that was a worry, and we await eagerly the end of this investigation and the ongoing DNA testing.

Trevor Lunn talked about supermarkets saying that they were sourcing local produce. What are the percentages? That is a very good question that we should put to the supermarkets. What do you mean by local? That is a big issue for some trademarks and some named producers and processors. How local is local? Why are they not checking their supply chains? How did this happen? How did they allow it to happen? He talked about the price of food and about what supermarkets are prepared to pay for produce, and what the public is prepared to pay for produce. This is a very important debate. It is something that we grapple with — and governments grapple with all over the world. It is vital.

Gordon Dunne, my colleague, talked about the pressures on farmers and the differences in fresh meat produced here compared with imported processed meat. He talked about the great potential for our agrifood sector to take advantage of this scandal and to show the world the traceable and clean meat that we produce.

Maeve McLaughlin talked about how vital this was to our economy. We have a fully traceable system, which is proof. I had no doubt whatsoever, when I was promoting our industry, that we could stand by that traceable system.

Sam Gardiner talked about the confidence in food having been shaken, but our farmers have done nothing wrong, and we cannot allow a few bad apples to destroy our industry, which is so vital to our economy.

Again, the Minister talked about the excellent work she was doing for the agrifood sector and about the AgriFood Strategy Board, which is a joint initiative with the Agriculture and Rural Development Minister. She talked about the Europe-wide DNA testing —

Mr Deputy Speaker: Will the Member draw his remarks to a close, please?

Mr Frew: — that is in practice at the moment. She mentioned that work was ongoing with the FSA and other Departments. The Minister also mentioned the fact that the meat that we produce is so traceable that we should be standing over it and exporting it all round the world.

Question put and agreed to.

Resolved:

That this Assembly notes Northern Ireland's excellent reputation for producing high-quality food; expresses concern at the ongoing incidents surrounding meat products; encourages retailers to source more food products from Northern Ireland; and calls on the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to work with retailers to ensure that processors and farmers get a better return for their products.

Water and Sewerage Services (Amendment) Bill: Final Stage

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): I beg to move

That the Water and Sewerage Services (Amendment) Bill [NIA 16/11-15] do now pass.

I would like to record my sincere thanks to the Chair, Deputy Chair and members of the Committee for Regional Development for their timely and effective scrutiny of this important Bill. I am grateful for the wide support shown for the measure, which is required to make good my party's commitment and the Executive's commitment to hard-pressed families that no additional water charges will be introduced during this Assembly.

As Members are now well aware, the Bill will also make a further technical amendment to the Land Registration Act (Northern Ireland) 1970 to require certain notifications in respect of the laying of pipes and sewers to be registered as statutory charges. Without further ado, the important Bill before us is a necessary and sensible measure. It eases pressure on families. It strikes the right balance at a difficult time, and I am pleased to commend it to the Assembly.

Mr Lynch (The Deputy Chairperson of the Committee for Regional Development): Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Labhraím inniu mar LeasChathaoirleach an Choiste Forbartha Réigiúnaí le tacaíocht a thabhairt don Bhille Seirbhísí Uisce agus Séarachais. I speak today as the Deputy Chair of the Committee for Regional Development to voice the Committee's support for the Water and Sewerage Services (Amendment) Bill.

The Committee received the Bill into Committee Stage on completion of the Second Stage on 27 November 2012. The Committee invited written and oral evidence from stakeholders, all of which supported the delivery of the Programme for Government priority 2 commitment. There were, however, some concerns with regard to the current governance structure in NIW and in respect of the wider consultation on the options paper that the Minister had provided for his Executive colleagues and which is being considered by the Budget scrutiny committee. With your permission, a LeasCheann Comhairle, I will briefly address those concerns.

As Members are aware, NIW was established as a government-owned company in 2006. It is a statutory trading body owned by central government but operating under company legislation with substantial independence from government. However, following the Executive's decision to defer the introduction of direct domestic water charges, it was designated as a non-departmental public body (NDPB) for public expenditure purposes in March 2009. That designation requires NIW to manage its regulatory funding requirements within public expenditure funding constraints. It was accepted by all those who provided evidence to the Committee that that was not the best governance model. Indeed, the Utility Regulator described it as suboptimal in the price control 13 (PC13) draft determination. Others suggested that it was bureaucratic, did not encourage or allow long-term strategic planning and investment, and removed the incentive to deliver greater efficiencies, as were evident in similar utility providers in England, Scotland and Wales.

The Committee has previously expressed concerns about the governance structure in NI Water. As stated, we are aware that the Minister has submitted an options paper to the Executive for their consideration. The Committee has written to the Minister asking for sight of that, and we are encouraged that the Minister has indicated that it will be forthcoming at the earliest convenience. However, the Committee recommends that the Minister, in conjunction with his Executive colleagues, urgently enter into negotiations with the British Treasury to seek an appropriate designation for NI Water that will remove the negative aspects of the current structure, such as the absence of end-year flexibility, while retaining a high level of accountability to the Department and the Assembly.

I turn now to the issue of wider consultation on the future funding of NIW. While the Bill clearly honours the PFG commitment to no additional domestic charges in this parliamentary mandate, it extends that commitment into the next mandate. From a strategic, regulatory and operational perspective, that has raised concerns among organisations that provided evidence to the Committee. Among other responsibilities, the Utility Regulator sets the level of expenditure for NIW through the price control mechanism, the current determination having been published in December 2012. That determination — PC13 — will run for the period 2013-15 and is based very much on the PFG commitment that the Bill now puts in place.

The next determination will run from 2015 to 2021 and will include one year of direct subsidy, but the remaining period could be one where direct additional domestic charges are applied. Lowering the direct subsidy to NIW below 50% would allow for a reclassification away from that of an NDPB and allow it, for example, to access low-cost investment from banks. That will have a direct impact on the investment and incentivisation available to NIW.

The Committee received a presentation last week from the managing director of Welsh Water and was impressed by the ability of his organisation to raise funds to invest in the utility while keeping operational costs at a low level and reducing the amount charged to customers. The Committee intends taking up an invitation from Welsh Water to visit it, and, on behalf of the Committee, I extend the invitation to the Minister and his officials to accompany us.

NIW has also indicated that, if there were a change to the current Executive policy away from no additional domestic charges, it would require approximately 18 months' restructuring to get to a position where it could effectively and efficiently commence hard charging. The Committee, again mindful that the Executive are considering the options paper, recommends that the debate and consultation on the future structure of NIW is commenced as early in the process as possible to allow informed decisions to be made and to allow for the development and scrutiny of appropriate Executive and departmental policies. Obviously, the Committee will wish to have a central role in that consultation.

The Committee is supportive of the Bill. It delivers against the Programme for Government priority 2 commitment.

Mr Easton: I welcome and fully support the Final Stage of the Bill, and I congratulate the Minister on steering it through.

I intend to be very brief. I welcome the minor technicality that allows water and sewerage undertakers to record their intention to carry out certain works on private land on the statutory charge register, which is held by the Land Registry. That will allow potential buyers of land to be informed if the land is affected by certain statutory restrictions. That is worthwhile to help protect people when purchasing land.

I also welcome the fact that there will be no water charges over the next three-year period until 2016, when we will have another look at it. Although that move will cost the Assembly £282 million in subsidies, I feel that, when weighed against the potential suffering of those who can least afford it, the benefits outweigh the costs.

Mr Dallat: As a member of the Regional Development Committee, I, too, support the Final Stage of the Bill. I want to record my thanks to the Clerk and to the other members of the Committee for the teamwork that was demonstrated during the discussion.

I certainly, if you will pardon the pun, do not wish to pour cold water on the Bill in any way, but it is a temporary arrangement that does not face up to the fact that we have an industry that is badly in need of reform. Historically, the industry suffered from underinvestment, particularly during the dark days of the Troubles, when money was diverted to other needs. Of course, in more recent times, the industry has featured in the public eye for all the wrong reasons.

Returning to the Bill, in the longer term, there has to be greater accountability and continuous reinvestment so that we provide the highest quality of water and protect the environment with the best means of dealing with sewage disposal. Most importantly, we need to avoid infraction of European regulations that will increasingly come into being. We certainly do not wish to stack up difficulties for a future generation of the Assembly — speaking positively, of course, and assuming that there will be one.

Nailing our colours to the mast — if it is all right to use that term — the SDLP believes that a mutual society is the best option. The Deputy Chairperson referred to the Welsh model when we had someone addressing us last week, which came pretty close to that model. We particularly like that because it would give ordinary people a real say in the running of the water service. It would mean that it would be accountable, and, without wishing to stray too far away, let us say that the co-operative model is experiencing growth at the moment, creating jobs and giving real ownership back to ordinary people. It would be an awful pity to miss opportunities such as that, and I am sure that the Minister will give thought to that. Certainly, we do not want to move towards privatisation — I do not think that anybody in the Assembly particularly wants that — but the Bill cannot be seen simply as a "get me out of jail" ticket to avoid hard decisions in the future.

I finish by saying that supporting mutuality as a concept for the future does not necessarily mean direct water charges. It simply means that you have a mechanism that gives people a real say in the future of what I think is the most important industry, not only to private people but to commercial enterprises that pay for their water and are experiencing great difficulty in meeting those Bills. On that note, I welcome the Bill, I welcome the co-operation of the Minister in the discussions that we have had. I hope that we will continue to work hard to achieve a model that will be perfect for Northern Ireland and perfect for its people.

10.45 am

Mr Swann: On behalf of the Ulster Unionist Party, I support the Final Stage of the Bill. I am speaking in place of my colleague Ross Hussey, my party's representative on the Regional Development Committee. Regrettably, he is unable to attend today due to other important business.

It is an important debate because it honours a clear manifesto commitment that we in the Ulster Unionist Party gave at the last election. It is an important debate because it reassures hard-working families that they will not have to worry about separate or additional water charging during this Assembly term. People across Northern Ireland who are worried about their heating bills, fuel bills, the rising cost of food and essentials and even about making their rent or mortgage payments can be reassured that they will not have to worry again about separate or additional water charging bills during this Assembly term. In the current difficult economic climate, working families have enough to worry about with Minister McCausland's Welfare Reform Bill, if it is passed unamended, but they will not have to worry about water bills.

I pay tribute to the Minister, my party colleague Danny Kennedy, for securing full Executive support for this measure in the Programme for Government, which was, ultimately, voted for all parties and supported by all parties. Even the Alliance Party, which in its manifesto said that it intended to put more pressure on households and saddling working families with another bill, seemed to have little issue in the end supporting this Bill. That is a bit like their friends, the Lib Dems, who campaigned on tuition fees, only to do a U-turn when they got a whiff of government. Of course, there are those who currently pay water charges:

our families, our farmers and our businesses. They too feel the pressure of price rises in electricity and gas. They are enterprises that provide important sources of employment, and they need some good news too.

There are challenges about the future governance of water in Northern Ireland and the direction that things may take during the lifetime of the next Assembly. This significant Bill gives time and space for parties to work together to build some form of consensus on the much long-term way forward. Pause for thought on where Northern Ireland Water was just over two years ago. We had the big freeze and a genuine and serious water crisis. Who could forget the events that ruined Christmas and the new year period for so many? Only a few months later, the current Minister took over, and we have witnessed what a steadying influence he has been on the water service. We are all aware of the continually improving statistics and improving levels of service. The Bill is consistent in that drive for stability, certainty and the provision of foundations on which to explore long-term options and governance models.

It is sometimes said that good things come in small packages, and I do not disagree with that. This Bill demonstrates that, in legislation, a short Bill can go a long way in improving the lot for households right across Northern Ireland. For that reason, the Ulster Unionist Party fully supports the Bill.

Mr Dickson: I support the Bill in its Final Stage. Despite my reservations, I respect the fact that the Assembly and the Executive have agreed a Programme for Government that rules out the introduction of domestic water charges through to April 2015. I am sure that the Ulster Unionists will also respect that Programme for Government and this Assembly when it comes to the Welfare Reform Bill.

Throughout the legislative process, I have stressed the need to reconsider the post-2015 period and questioned the wisdom of extending the subsidy as far as 2016. However, as time dragged on, it became clear that, even if we were able to agree on alternative arrangements, Northern Ireland Water would not have enough time to implement them before the end of the mandate. This legislation, quite frankly, was introduced far too late for us to do anything about the governance and financial difficulties faced by Northern Ireland Water. It is regrettable and shameful that no consideration was given to those issues, even in parallel with the legislative process. It is disgraceful that the Regional Development Committee and the Assembly have been asked to consider and approve a Bill with absolutely no idea of what the Minister has planned for the future of Northern Ireland Water. We are signing off on hundreds of millions of pounds of expenditure without any meaningful debate or discussion about the future of our water system. We have to pass the Bill today because we have no alternative, as successive Ministers have failed to face up to the reality that the current arrangements are unsustainable. This legislation is another sticking plaster, put on with no idea how we are going to heal the wound.

The Committee has at least tried to get the discussion under way, as others have said. Indeed, last week, we heard from Welsh Water, which operates a model similar to that which the Alliance Party has been advocating for years. Most importantly, its chief executive, Nigel Annett, stressed the importance of a revenue stream independent of government that provides security and, crucially for our water system, allows for long-term planning. Importantly, charging at Welsh Water is linked to the social security system in order to identify households that require discounts. That contrasts sharply with the arrangements here in Northern Ireland, which subsidise the cost of water to the richest in our society while diverting hundreds of millions of pounds away from the public services on which the most vulnerable depend.

As I have said time and again, charging is necessary, but we need to make sure that any charging arrangements are not only fair but transparent and designed to protect the most vulnerable people. Those are issues which we need to consider urgently. We cannot afford any more sticking plasters. Minister, we need to start that discussion now; not in three months, six months or a year's time. We need it now. So I urge you and your Department to engage immediately with the Committee and the Assembly to find a fair and sustainable solution for the people of Northern Ireland.

Perhaps, when the Finance Minister, during the Budget debate, described my call for charging as brave, that signalled the entry of realism into the debate that needs to start now.

Mr Spratt: I apologise to the House and to the Minister for not being here at start of the debate. I had a medical appointment this morning.

I want to be brief in what I have to say as Chairperson of the Regional Development Committee. We have debated the Bill fully, as the Minister and the Department know, and I appreciate the co-operation of the members, the Committee Clerk and the officials of the Committee in relation to that

I thank the Deputy Chairperson for presenting the Committee's view, and I just want to reiterate couple of points made by him. There was consensus in the Committee on the presentation given by Welsh Water. I know that there has been further debate outside my Committee on the same presentation, which was given to another Assembly Committee on the same day. There is merit in looking at that model and examining it for the future. I reiterate the Deputy Chair's invitation to the Minister and some officials from the Department. We had a worthwhile trip in relation to rapid transit, and this is another area in which some good ideas could be created. It merits examination.

Let me also say briefly, with regard to Mr Swann's remarks on giving time and space to parties in relation to the Bill, that the vast majority of members of the Committee want time and space and believe that there should now be an examination of this whole area, not a rushed process but one that will take some time to see what is best for the Executive and, indeed, more importantly, the people of Northern Ireland. He mentioned where Northern Ireland Water had been a couple of years ago. In the week that the present chief executive has announced that he will retire from Northern Ireland Water in August, it is important to put on record his very valuable contribution over the past two or three years in bringing Northern Ireland Water back to being some sort of a well-respected organisation. He has done a lot to address the problems that existed with staffing and all of that in the organisation. So, we need to pay tribute to him and the work that he has done.

Finally, I thank the DRD officials for their help during the entire process. It was a short Bill. Short is good, some people say, but it was well worth it, and we had a good and worthwhile debate in Committee. I have no hesitation in supporting the views of my Committee on the Bill.

Mr Kennedy: I thank all Members who contributed to today's debate. I am pleased at the widespread support given by Members to the Bill.

The Bill makes good our commitment not to introduce additional household water charges during the current mandate. It does not and should not seek to address longer-term policy issues about how water and sewerage services should be governed in Northern Ireland. It is right that those questions are of interest to the Assembly and are the subject of much debate, but they are beyond the scope of the Bill. The current legislation that enables a subsidy to be paid to NI Water on behalf of customers will expire on 31 March this year. If the Executive's decision not to introduce additional water charges is to be implemented, it is essential that the legislation progresses.

Looking forward long term, the Executive have agreed with my recommendation that funding and governance arrangements for water and sewerage services should be remitted to the Budget review group. Many of the issues are cross-cutting, and this is a sensible approach designed to ensure mature debate.

I note the Committee's recommendation on discussions with Her Majesty's Treasury, which was outlined by the Deputy Chair. However, as an example of the cross-cutting nature of the area, it would be the Finance Minister who would engage Her Majesty's Treasury for discussion, not me as Minister for Regional Development. However, again, that would have to be done on the basis of consensus.

I want to encourage engagement, I want to help build consensus, and I want to work to address the acknowledged shortcomings of the current arrangements. NI Water's ongoing dual status as a non-departmental public body and a government-owned company is not a permanent solution, because it is not sustainable in the long term. I am conscious that we need to continue to take stock and to bear in mind the fact that we have provided stability to NI Water. I join the Committee Chairman in his comments in respect of the chief executive of NI Water, Trevor Haslett, who has provided considerable stability to NI Water. We can all remember where we were three winters ago with the freeze/thaw.

We now need to work together and take a measured look at the long-term issues and apply our minds collectively to developing a range of potential solutions. In the interim, I have urged stakeholders in the water sector to make the current arrangements work as well as they can. That has been a backdrop to NI Water delivering on efficiency targets, producing the highest levels of drinking water quality and waste water treatment and improving customer service. I commend the company for those achievements under arrangements that are short of ideal.

11.00 am

I will quickly address some points that were raised by Members. The Deputy Chair welcomed the Bill. Appropriate scrutiny was given to the Bill. Like him, I welcome the PC13 and the outcome that we have been able to achieve there. That gives further stability to the position of NI Water.

The Deputy Chair and, indeed, the Chairman of the Committee, in his later contribution, raised the issue of the invitation to me to accompany the Committee and officials with my departmental officials to Wales to see at first hand that operation. I can confirm that, approximately a year ago, I had discussions with the chief executive of Welsh Water. I am aware of that as an option. It is one option. I hesitate to accept the invite at this point because I would like to have at least preliminary discussions with the Budget review group in advance of sampling other models. There are other models out there, but I will carefully consider the invitation that has been provided.

Mr Easton supported the Bill, and I am grateful for that. I largely agree with Mr Dallat's comments: we have to maintain the quality of our water. He indicated his solution based on mutuality and not privatisation, but he indicated a desire that we work together. Again, I welcome that. Robin Swann made a significant contribution in which he was very generous to me, as I would expect. In trying to show an attractive modesty, I can honestly say that what he said was absolutely correct.

Mr Dickson supported the Bill despite his reservations. I take the point about a sticking plaster etc. It is not a sticking plaster. I remind the Member that this will be an Executive decision as we move forward. This will create the opportunity in the Budget review group to carry forward consideration of all the issues. The issues are not without their challenges, so I hope that, through the Budget review group initially and the Regional Development Committee and the Assembly, we can make progress on all these matters.

I welcome Mr Spratt to his position again. I thank him for the contribution that he made and for his broad support for the Bill. As Members are aware, the Budget review group's considerations are at a very early stage. I will be glad to report to the Assembly on any proposals that we agree, but, as I have said, that is for another debate.

Today, we have the opportunity to move forward on this Bill, which implements agreed Executive policy, and I commend it to the House.

Question put and agreed to.

Resolved:

That the Water and Sewerage Services (Amendment) Bill [NIA 16/11-15] do now pass.

Criminal Justice Bill: Further Consideration Stage

Mr Deputy Speaker: Members will be aware that the Minister of Justice has advised in correspondence to Members that he is not in a position to move the Further Consideration Stage of the Criminal Justice Bill today. However, as it stands on the Order Paper, the item of business must be formally disposed of.

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): I regret that Executive clearance has not been given to amendments that I intended to propose, and, therefore, the stage is not moved.

Not moved.

Mr Allister: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Deputy Speaker: The item has not been moved, and, that being the case, the next item of business is Question Time. I propose, therefore, by leave of the Assembly, to suspend the sitting until 2.00 pm.

The sitting was suspended at 11.05 am.

On resuming (Mr Speaker in the Chair) —

2.00 pm

Oral Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Mr Speaker: Questions 2, 5, 7 and 9 have been withdrawn, and questions 2, 5 and 9 require written answers.

Sexual Orientation Strategy

1. Mr Brady asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the sexual orientation strategy. (AQO 3545/11-15)

Mr P Robinson (The First Minister): Mr Speaker, with your permission, I will ask junior Minister Jonathan Bell to answer the question.

Mr Bell (Junior Minister, Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister): We remain committed to publishing a sexual orientation strategy. A consultation document that will inform public consultation on the strategy, is currently under consideration in the Department. A sexual orientation strategy will be published once the consultation process has been completed. Our officials continue to engage with the sector on a regular basis to update it on the development of the consultation document.

Mr Brady: I thank the junior Minister for his answer. Will he explain what is holding the strategy back, considering that the First Minister told the Chamber three times in the past year that the final strategy would be completed and published by the end of 2012? Will he comment on reports from the LGBT sector that his party — the DUP — has been dragging its feet —

Mr Speaker: Will the Member come to his question?

Mr Brady: — on the publication of a credible sexual orientation strategy for a number of years and is hostile to the sector receiving equality of treatment?

Mr Bell: I can address that in reverse order. The Member read his question very well, but I am not hostile to any human being. I believe that all human beings, regardless of the colour of their skin, their age, their sex, their sexual orientation or their political persuasion, should be treated with the innate dignity that comes with human rights and human worth.

The Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister (OFMDFM) remains committed to publishing a sexual orientation strategy. Junior Ministers and OFMDFM officials continue to engage with the sector and with members of the forum.

Mr Speaker: Before I call Mike Nesbitt, I remind Members that, as far as possible, they should not be seen reading out supplementary questions.

Mr Nesbitt: What was I going to say? [Laughter.] I thank the Minister for his answers to date. He said twice that officials were engaging with the sector. Does he agree with the Rainbow Project, which believes that setting up a consultative group to advise on drafting is the way forward?

Mr Bell: We engage with the strategy that we have. I have met members of the sector, including the group that has been represented, and we will continue to engage, take their views and seek agreement so that we could have a coherent strategy to go forward.

Mr Craig: Will the Minister confirm that any sexual orientation strategy will not create additional rights but merely be a reiteration of all existing rights?

Mr Bell: Yes, I think that I can. I have said constantly in the House that we believe in the innate dignity and human worth of every human being. I will restate what I have said to the Member previously: I do not think that we would be in a position to support any new or additional rights or responsibilities.

Mr Eastwood: We have been talking about a strategy that is long overdue. Another commitment is long overdue — 15 years overdue, I think — and that is the bill of rights for Northern Ireland. Can I ask —

Mr Speaker: Order. That was a good try, but the Member will know, as he is long enough in the Chamber, that the question must relate, as far as possible, to the original question.

Mr McCarthy: The junior Minister will have seen the frustration in the Chamber about the delay on this issue. Will he give the Assembly a firm commitment on a date on which the strategy will be published?

Mr Bell: We will continue to seek agreement on a coherent strategy to take forward. In the meantime, we have spoken out constantly against any form of abuse against anybody's values, orientation or skin colour. We will continue to reaffirm the innate dignity and worth of every human being.

Mr Speaker: Question 2 has been withdrawn.

Delivering Social Change Signature Programmes

- 3. Mr Weir asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the Delivering Social Change signature projects. (AQO 3547/11-15)
- 4. Mr McClarty asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the development of the six signature programmes under the Delivering Social Change framework announced in October 2012. (AQO 3548/11-15)
- 11. Mr McAleer asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the key signature projects announced in October 2012. (AQO 3555/11-15)

Mr P Robinson: Mr Speaker, with your permission, I would like to take questions 3, 4 and 11 together.

On 10 October 2012, the deputy First Minister and I announced six significant signature programmes to the value of £26 million under the Delivering Social Change framework. The programmes are designed to tackle multigenerational poverty and to improve children's health and well-being, and educational and life opportunities. Work on the implementation of the programmes is ongoing. In January 2013, our officials met each of the senior officials tasked by the relevant Minister to deliver progress and expedite delivery. Further discussions with key officials in the lead Departments also took place last month. Close discussions are continuing to ensure delivery at the earliest opportunity.

I am confident that, for the most part, work on all the signature programmes is progressing as quickly and efficiently as is possible to ensure effective delivery. The Delivering Social Change framework aims to change the way in which Departments have traditionally worked. We want to ensure that Departments work in an effective, joined-up way. The new approach is challenging to some Departments and officials. Criticism has been levelled at the Department of Education about the time taken to deliver the numeracy and literacy scheme. We have spoken to the Minister of Education and officials and have made it clear that we want the teachers recruited prior to the summer and ready well in advance of the new academic year.

Mr Weir: I thank the First Minister for his response. He referred to the signature project and the employment of 230 teachers. As there seems to be uncertainty from the Department of Education about when those teachers will be employed and it is unclear how they will be employed, will the First Minister bring clarity on those two subjects? How and when will the additional teachers be employed?

Mr P Robinson: I hope that the "when" will be as I have stated and the teachers will be employed well in advance of September. Needless to say, it would have been much better from our point of view had it been possible to do that earlier. We recognise that what we do with Delivering Social Change will add a feature to what the Department already does. Therefore, there is added value with the programme as we have set it out. The deputy First Minister and I made it fairly clear in our announcement that we would like to see the scheme going forward through oneto-one tutoring on the basis that presently unemployed teachers would take up those posts and, indeed, that they should be assigned to pupils, as opposed to schools. We fear that, if they were assigned to schools, they might be taken up with the work of the schools as opposed to concentrating specifically on the young people who are lagging behind.

That is the scheme as we outlined it. It was endorsed unanimously by the Executive. Of course, it will be taken forward by the Department of Education. Obviously, we have to fit in to whatever employment law requires us to do, so there are issues about that that we have to look at. The Department will raise issues, none of which, in my view, is so difficult to overcome that we should not be able to meet the kind of timetable that I have now set out.

Mr McClarty: I thank the First Minister for his responses so far. How do the First Minister and deputy First Minister plan to work with the Minister of Education to address the findings of the Northern Ireland Audit Office report that an unacceptable number of young people leave school having failed to attain minimal levels of literacy and numeracy?

Mr P Robinson: The very reason that we brought forward our Delivering Social Change programme is that we recognise that there has been multigenerational disadvantage in many fields, not just in education. Whether it is in health and well-being — in some cases, how long you will live is determined on the basis of your postal code — or in educational achievement, which is determined by the level of disadvantage in the area that you come from, we believe that there should be a policy in place that addresses those issues. Each Department has programmes going forward to address those issues. What we are saying is that we do not believe that what is presently happening is all the answer, and we are putting in place a programme that gives additional value and attempts to address the very issue that the Member has outlined.

Sending 230 teachers into schools to see pupils who have fallen behind and are lagging behind as they approach exams is an excellent way of trying to lift people up and give them a better opportunity to make sure that they meet the necessary standards. I have much confidence in the education system in Northern Ireland, but parts of it are failing. We should concentrate on the parts that are failing rather than trying to change the parts that have been successful.

Mr McAleer: Will the Minister tell us how many of the 10 additional family support hubs have been established with the £3 million that was allocated to signature projects last October?

Mr P Robinson: All the lead Departments have been asked to bring forward their schemes for each of the issues. Whether it is the 10 family support hubs, the parenting support groups, the incubation hubs or some of the other measures that were contained in that statement, each of the Ministers will bring forward their proposals for how we move forward.

The family hubs are intended to deal with probably about 3,000 children. It is important that that scheme is put in place and that we have the best possible mechanisms to ensure that we get real value. As well as the family hubs, we, of course, have the proposals to deal with assistance for parenting. All that shows the joined-up nature of Delivering Social Change, as it deals with families, parenting skills and primary and secondary education in fitting pupils for the future, on into improvement in skills and into the local areas, where we have incubation units to try to improve the opportunity for employment in those areas.

Mrs D Kelly: Will the First Minister provide an update on the social economy hubs? Will they be in situ before the end of the mandate, and are the local councils buying into them?

Mr P Robinson: There is a difficulty — I hope that it simply slows down progress rather than making it impossible — and it centres on the issue of attracting people to give us two-year leases for these kinds of proposals. I discussed this recently with the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment and suggested that it might be worth taking forward the proposition that, where there is not a lease, support should be given to landlords to improve their properties along the lines of an agreement to meet the criteria set out in our statement. If it is difficult for people to find a way forward on the basis of getting two-year leases for a significant number of properties, there are other mechanisms that we should try.

Mrs Cochrane: What consideration has been given to extending the remit of additional teachers for numeracy and literacy to include basic computing skills, as that could further build on the efforts to ensure that young people are equipped for emerging sectors?

Mr P Robinson: We can look at that, but the basic requirements are for numeracy and literacy. Do not forget that what we propose is additional to what is presently on offer, and there are considerable opportunities in IT skills with the present curriculum. So, there are opportunities at present that should be fully taken up. Indeed, outside the education system itself, there are further IT opportunities in many community organisations. So, I am happy to see how we succeed in improving the levels of numeracy and literacy under the pilot that we are operating and whether we can extend that further for young people. Do not forget that this is only one element of it. It is not just about young people who are disadvantaged. Therefore, the Delivering Social Change policy goes beyond that. Perhaps there are more relevant purposes for making IT skills available beyond the education age to those in later life. We can consider that when we look at the next tranche of Delivering Social Change.

2.15 pm

Mr Speaker: Question 4 has been answered, and question 5 has been withdrawn.

EU Competitive Funding

6. Mr G Robinson asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the Programme for Government commitment to a 20% increase in EU competitive funding drawdown in this comprehensive spending review period. (AQO 3550/11-15)

Mr P Robinson: We continue to make good progress towards meeting the 20% target over the four-year Budget period. In 2011-12, which was year 1, we drew down some £15.8 million. We hope to secure an additional £13.5 million of funding this year. On the basis of the baseline calculated over a year ago, we would have been ahead of our target at this time. However, following late notification of drawdown by the Department of Education, we have initiated a mid-term revalidation of the figures supplied by all Departments, taking the opportunity to ensure that they are robust and comprehensive. Although that exercise is ongoing and definitive figures are not yet available, we anticipate that the 2010-11 baseline and hence the amount of additional funding to be delivered under the target will increase. The 20% target will, however, stand, and progress against the more challenging commitment will continue to be monitored and validated by the Programme for Government central team and the delivery oversight group chaired by the head of the Civil Service.

Mr G Robinson: How will the additional drawdown notified late by the Department of Education impact on the 20% target under the Programme for Government?

Mr P Robinson: That might be a bit complex, to the extent that there are more issues than just the Department of Education's late notification. Clearly, if, over a year after we sought the figure, a Department has not provided us with the drawdown that it had on the baseline year, it means that not only does the figure that we have to accomplish increase by the amount that it has not provided us with but it has to increase by 20% above that. That is because of our intention to increase by 20%. I am not sure of the exact figures; we will leave that to time to determine. However, we believe that it requires us to be able to draw down a further £5 million or thereabouts.

There is another factor, in that the foreign exchange rates have changed for the euro and the pound. That might have a helpful impact. However, it still seems likely that we will need to find probably an extra £5 million above what we had determined the target would be. We still believe that we can reach that target. It was challenging in the first place, and it has got a bit more challenging as time has gone on. However, I think that there is greater understanding in the Departments of the importance for them not just of attempting to draw down funds but of encouraging others to do so, particularly in framework programme 7 or its new mode of Horizon 2020.

Mr Brady: Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. Will the Minister update us on progress in maximising the opportunities presented by the Irish presidency of the EU?

Mr P Robinson: Even without the Irish presidency of the EU, we had recognised that our change from being an objective 1 area to an area that had to fight competitively for funds left us in a position where we perhaps had not all the skills in government that the Government of the Irish Republic had. They have been very helpful in allowing us to second members of our staff to their European unit so that we can pick up some of the tricks of the trade. They have been very successful in drawdown.

In relation to the Irish presidency, we have an arrangement with the Irish Government that we will have people from our Civil Service involved as the presidency moves forward. That helps them to build up networks, make contacts and see how things are done. Hopefully, the end result of all those put together will be a higher drawdown for Northern Ireland.

Mr Byrne: I thank the First Minister for his answers. Will he give any indication of the future expected drawdown of R&D moneys, given that we have been very slow in the past to maximise that potential?

Mr P Robinson: It is for that reason that we have set challenging targets to each Department. I do not envisage us saying at the end of this Programme for Government period that we have done well to achieve the 20% increase. I suspect that we will say that we want an increase on that increased figure. We will continue to push and stretch Departments.

Northern Ireland has a fantastic reputation for research and development. There are massive opportunities out there. There has been a tendency in the past to look at Europe as a difficult place to put in applications. We have put in place staff in our Brussels office to help with that process. We have Departments that are now more acquainted with how to improve their applications and make them more worthy of support. The conversations that the deputy First Minister and I have had with the president of the Council, the president of the Parliament and the commissioners have resulted in full support from them for Northern Ireland being able to increase, as the Barroso task force encouraged us to, the amount of drawdown that we receive.

Mr Kinahan: Does the First Minister agree that the next round of Peace funds should be utilised to tackle the challenges that still exist in intergenerational educational underachievement?

Mr P Robinson: We are very fortunate that we have succeeded in having Peace IV provision included in the present European budget, which is at draft stage and still has to be approved by the Parliament. I remember that, when we completed Peace II, people doubted whether we could get a third intervention from Europe. It now looks as if we will succeed in getting a fourth. I welcome the combined approach that has been taken by the Northern Ireland MEPs in arguing the case for a fourth tranche of that fund. The deputy First Minister and I, along with the junior Ministers, the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment and others, have been out in Europe arguing that case. Although it is currently designated to be €150 million, which is slightly less than previously, it is a lot more than we had expected to get.

How will it be best used? We have some influence but no control over what Europe will eventually decide. Many of us consider reconciliation to be an area that is appropriate for the European Union to look at for peace funding for Northern Ireland. There are a number of good causes. The difficulty is that there are more good causes than there is money available to fund them properly. The more that are included in the European Union's assessment, the more divided the funds will be and the less they will have an impact in Northern Ireland.

Mr Speaker: Question 7 has been withdrawn.

Older People's Strategy

8. Mr Humphrey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the strategy for older people. (AQO 3552/11-15)

Mr P Robinson: With your permission, Mr Speaker, I will ask junior Minister Jonathan Bell to answer the question.

Mr Bell: The new draft active ageing strategy was extensively reworked during 2012 following the feedback from the ageing strategy advisory group, which was chaired by Claire Keatinge, the Commissioner for Older People. The advisory group provided very helpful feedback on the content of the current draft strategy and provided comments on the draft early actions plan that has been developed to implement the strategy. We are grateful to the group for its advice and expertise. Junior Minister McCann and I met Claire Keatinge and representatives from the age sector to discuss the development of the strategy. It highlights the key issues facing older people here. It will be implemented through the Delivering Social Change framework with a focus on what Departments can do to add to existing work to make a strategic change to services or programmes for older people.

The specific scope of the Delivering Social Change signature programmes, their associated targets and reporting mechanisms are currently the focus of discussion in all Departments. Once they are finalised, we will have a strategy and an early actions plan, the content of which, I am delighted to say, has been strongly influenced by older people and those who work closely with them. We hope to be in a position to launch the consultation for the strategy in late March or early April. It will take account of the views of older people, their representatives and, importantly, those who care for them.

Mr Humphrey: I thank the junior Minister for his answer. Will he assure the House that, in line with international practice, legislation on goods, facilities and services for over-18s will be implemented without delay?

Mr Bell: Yes. Anti-discrimination legalisation in relation to age is currently limited to the fields of employment, vocational training and further and higher education.

In answering the earlier question, I should have said that, following consultation and analysis, the final strategy will be published in the autumn of 2013.

The Programme for Government committed us to extending age discrimination legislation to the provision of goods, facilities and services. That will require new legislation to be taken through the Assembly. Prior to a new Bill being introduced in the Assembly, a considerable number of steps have to be taken to ensure that the legislation achieves the intended outcome. That will involve a period of detailed policy development, and we are at that stage now.

In Britain, the Equality Act 2010 provisions banning age discrimination against over-18-year-olds in the provision of goods, facilities and services and public functions came into operation on 1 October 2012. In July 2008, the European Commission issued a draft anti-discrimination directive that included protection in the provision of goods, facilities and services on the grounds of age. I understand that that is currently stalled in the Council.

Comparative analysis is also being undertaken to determine how other jurisdictions, such as Australia and Canada, which have age goods, facilities and services legislation in place, have made provision for all ages. That will inform our consideration of the scope of the legislation that we will introduce.

Ms S Ramsey: Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. It is useful that the junior Minister mentioned the position of children and young people. He has practically answered the question that I was going to ask.

Minister, you mentioned that the issue was stalled in the Council. Can you elaborate on that?

Mr Bell: I am not privy to the internal work of the Council. My understanding is that, in 2008, the European Commission issued the draft directive, which included a provision for protection in the provision of goods, facilities and service on the grounds of age. I am not sure what the current circumstances are, but we can certainly ask and seek to provide that information to you.

Mr Lyttle: I welcome the improved level of consultation that has been used in the strategy. Perhaps we could consider using that method for other strategies.

Does the junior Minister agree with the assessment that there is a benign prejudice against older people in our society? How does he hope that the strategy will tackle that prejudice?

Mr Bell: Many older people's groups have told us that they are delighted with the work that the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister did, not only in establishing a commissioner but in establishing a commissioner with considerable teeth in the work that she does and what she can call in to examine. I have also spoken to the Pensioners Parliament, and I want to pay a considerable tribute to older people. After all, they are the people who made this society. I have also talked to groups about childcare, and we see a continued reliance on grandparents, who do an excellent job in shaping the lives of children.

Issues such as travel insurance are of concern to me and, I think, to the Member. We are particularly concerned about what healthy older people are asked to pay for travel insurance simply on the grounds of their age. Northern Ireland overwhelmingly recognises the contribution that our older people make to our society, and the two words that I would say to that older generation would be, "Thank you".

2.30 pm

Agriculture and Rural Development

Mr Speaker: Questions 2 and 11 have been withdrawn.

Strangford Lough: Modiolus Mussels

1. Ms Lo asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on actions taken to address the problem of the depletion of modiolus in Strangford lough. (AQO 3560/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. Modiolus modiolus, or horse mussel, biogenic reefs are a designated feature of the Strangford lough special area of conservation and are in an unfavourable condition. We are therefore required to restore the feature.

My Department shares responsibility for the restoration of these reefs with the Department of the Environment (DOE). My officials met the European Commission in April 2012 and informally accepted a number of actions that the Commission felt necessary to address responsibilities under the habitats directive for the protection and restoration of modiolus in Strangford lough. Those included the strict protection of the larger area of the lough that contains the remaining intact modiolus biogenic reef.

The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) and the DOE responded to the Strangford modiolus infringement pilot case by way of a letter on 18 May 2012 to the Ulster Wildlife Trust, addressing the Commission's concerns and outlining proposals for modiolus restoration and the management of fishing activity on the lough. The proposed measures were described in more detail in a revised restoration plan that was sent to the Commission on 11 October 2012, and we await the Commission's formal response to those proposals.

In advance of receiving the Commission's decision, my Department has recently completed a habitats regulations assessment on pot fishing and aquaculture in Strangford lough, and on 8 January 2013, we introduced further restrictions on pot fishing by introducing two fishing exclusion zones in areas where restoration of modiolus beds is a priority. This legislation has been introduced as a result of discussions with Commission officials that indicated that this would be the minimum requirement acceptable to the Commission in respect of safeguarding and restoring the designated modiolus feature. In addition, the DOE has introduced by-laws regulating anchoring, mooring and diving.

Ms Lo: I thank the Minister for her comprehensive response. What sort of dialogue has the Department had in the last while with the fishing industry in the area?

Mrs O'Neill: I have met the fishermen on a number of occasions, particularly around the response that we were to submit to Europe, because their livelihoods are impacted by any decisions that we take. I listened carefully to the Assembly debate last year, when the consensus in the House was that the impact on the livelihoods of those fishermen meant that there needed to be a proportionate response to the environmental issue. So I met them a number of times in the run-up to our submitting information to the Commission.

There is also ongoing engagement at official level with the fishing community. However, it is important that we continue to engage with them, particularly after we receive the formal confirmation from the Commission that it accepts our proposals, because that is when we can decide on the way forward and see whether any other roles for those fishermen can be explored.

Mrs D Kelly: What form will further discussions with fishing industry stakeholders take, and are any contingencies or other plans or avenues being explored to improve the fishing industry's income?

Mrs O'Neill: I thank the Member for the question. As I said, it is important that we wait for the formal acceptance from Europe of our plans, which we believe to be at least the minimum that Europe will accept. The fact that we have had to expand the area that is closed to pot fishing means that fishermen will be displaced, and that must be seriously considered. I intend to meet the fishermen to discuss that, on the back of the plans. More science is needed, and among the suggestions brought forward is one that fishermen may have a role in providing it. There is some scope to explore the potential for people who will be displaced.

Mr Elliott: I thank the Minister for that. Will she inform us whether there has been any memorandum of understanding between her Department and the Department of the Environment in relation to the outworkings of any proposals that may come forward, and, if so, what are the details of such a memorandum of understanding?

Mrs O'Neill: I can confirm to the Member that, because both my Department and DOE are impacted upon, we are working very closely on the issue. Drawing up the management plans and the proposals to be put to Europe was a joint piece of work. Queen's University carried out a large and comprehensive piece of scientific research and reported it to me and the Environment Minister back in July 2011. That is what we drew the enhanced plan from. That is what we have used as evidence to back it up.

We will continue to work very closely with DOE on that issue. DOE has actually brought forward by-laws on anchoring and mooring, as I said in the original answer, because we need to look at all of the factors that impact on pot fishing and the area that I look after. DOE also needs to bring forward the legislation — which it has done — that looks at protecting the lough and the long-term future sustainability of the lough.

Mr Speaker: Question No 2 has been withdrawn.

Flooding: Greater Belfast

3. Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what additional resources her Department has made available to the Rivers Agency to address flooding in greater Belfast. (AQO 3562/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: During the flooding in June 2012, staff from across the agency were diverted to provide assistance to those affected across greater Belfast. Considerable resources, including contractors, were then provided to remove blockages to the drainage network and repair infrastructure. Following investigations into the causes of flooding, works have already been carried out and further works are planned for the coming financial year. Rivers Agency is also taking over the maintenance of and responsibility for a number of watercourses that contributed to the flooding. In co-operation with councils, additional sandbag storage facilities have also been provided.

I have already made additional funding available for flood alleviation works in the greater Belfast area this year, and I have allocated £2·5 million and £3·5 million respectively over the next 2 financial years for flood alleviation works in east Belfast. Improvements to the drainage network will continue to be a priority, and in order to deliver those, recruitment of additional staff for the greater Belfast area is also being undertaken.

I am very aware of the distress and hardship caused by flooding and the concerns that many homeowners have in regard to home insurance. As recently as 31 January this year, I, along with public representatives and Rivers Agency officials, visited an area in Finaghy to see at first hand what actions are being undertaken to reduce any further risk of flooding. As requested at that meeting, a commitment was given to residents that I would provide them with a letter of comfort, which they could use in discussions with their insurance companies in respect of the works that are planned for 2013-14. I can confirm that that was issued to those residents.

Mr Dunne: I thank the Minister for her answer. Does she agree that the Rivers Agency is under-resourced, especially for addressing risk areas that were highlighted last year during the floods?

Mrs O'Neill: No one could have predicted the heavy rainfall that occurred in June 2012, which, I assume, is the incident that you are referring to. I do not think that any plan in place would have been able to mitigate the results of that particularly heavy rain, although that is one of recommendations of the Performance and Efficiency Delivery Unit (PEDU) report, and the Executive are actively looking at that.

As I said, I have actually recruited extra staff for the work that will be done in the greater Belfast area. I think that we have four new members of staff, who will come on board to be involved in the regular inspection of drains and making sure that culverts are not blocked. That, in itself, is a help to Rivers Agency in that area. Funding for flood alleviation is always going to be prioritised based on level of risk to people and property and the associated costs and benefits of providing the flood alleviation measures. I hope that the Member is somewhat assured that we actually have employed extra staff for the Belfast area.

Mr McDevitt: I acknowledge the Minister's visit to Finaghy at the end of January. I am sure that, when she was there, she will have heard that the underlying issue in most of the city is the question of so-called undesignated waterways — culverts that were laid informally over the past 100 years and that belong to nobody. What steps does the Minister intend to take to progressively bring undesignated waterways under the control of the Rivers Agency so that we do not ever have to walk through the mud again?

Mrs O'Neill: The Member will be aware that there is a role for the Drainage Council in the designation of water courses. There are criteria in place. Anybody can apply to have a watercourse designated. I regularly receive correspondence from Members who feel that particular watercourses should be designated. It is something that we should explore further when we are looking at new legislation on flooding over the next number of years. We should return to the designation criteria that are currently being used. Suffice to say, the criteria are there for a reason. They are there to prioritise works that need to be done

As regards my visit to south Belfast, it is clear that a combination of issues need to be dealt with. A combination of agencies need to work together. I am confident that the Rivers Agency is playing its role in working with the other agencies.

Mr Copeland: I begin by thanking the Minister for her very prompt responses to one or two communications about flooding that I sent to her office. She may recall one in which I discussed the possibility of a grants scheme or advanced loan scheme for the residents of homes that are flooded most continually. That would be paid, by agreement, directly to companies that could install flood protection systems. Have you given any further thought to these matters? If so, where are we with them?

Mrs O'Neill: I assure the Member that I listened to the case that he put forward. I met a number of people who also believe that that is the way to go. In fact, the Rivers Agency is looking at that as an option. While I cannot be any more positive on that option at this stage, I am exploring it. It is a genuine avenue that could be explored. It would not be a simple process, as there would obviously be all sorts of procurement issues to deal with, but the Rivers Agency is actively looking at it.

Bovine Tuberculosis

4. Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what discussions she has had with her counterparts in Westminster in relation to the development of a vaccination for cattle to prevent the spread of bovine tuberculosis. (AQO 3563/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: While I have not had any meetings with UK Ministers specifically on the subject of cattle vaccination for bovine TB, I am kept fully informed of developments. My officials are in regular contact with their counterparts in England, Scotland and Wales via monthly TB liaison group teleconferences and their counterparts in the South of Ireland. EU Commission legislation prohibits the vaccination of cattle against bovine TB. The use of cattle TB vaccination would interfere with the tuberculin skin test. Any cattle so vaccinated would, therefore, react positively to that test.

Research continues in England into the feasibility of developing such a vaccine and to develop a DIVA test to differentiate between infected and vaccinated animals. Such a test has been developed, but it has not yet been trialled and validated in field conditions. Recent correspondence from Commissioner Borg sets out a time frame for the possible use of a vaccine against bovine TB in the EU. It sets out the series of steps that would need to be undertaken to secure the scientific validation and approvals before any change to the legislative position would be considered to allow cattle vaccination.

We will wish to be certain that any such vaccine that is developed has international acceptance before considering its use here, given the value of our export-dependent trade in livestock and livestock products. We must ensure that our export trade is not compromised as a consequence. Care will have to be taken to avoid trade embargoes on the export of livestock and livestock products. It is also desirable that we have an all-island approach to this issue.

Mr Lyttle: I thank the Minister for her answer. Will she expand on the work being done to examine a more efficient way of testing for TB given that many farmers believe that the current system is outdated, time-consuming and too costly?

Mrs O'Neill: I think that, when people initially started to talk about vaccination, they thought that it was a miracle cure. However, as you will be aware, TB is a very complicated, multifactorial disease with a number of things that contribute to it. Unfortunately, at this stage, vaccination is not the answer to everything. The Commission is exploring it. It has set out a 10-year plan to get the science right and make sure that it is tested in the field. Only then could we use it.

As I said, it is a very complicated disease. However, as regards what we are doing, I have announced the test and vaccinate or remove (TVR) wildlife intervention research piece. That is very positive and has been broadly welcomed across the board. There are obviously environmental concerns, but I want to assure farmers that we are trying to do everything that we can to make sure that we tackle the disease, look at the factors and take forward the TVR approach that I announced.

Mr Frew: The Minister will be aware of the deep concerns of Dairy UK in Northern Ireland about the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (EFRA) Committee's review on this very subject. The Minister alluded to the seriousness of this for our export market. Has she any plans to speak to the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) in light of the EFRA Committee's review to make sure that it is aware of the consequences for the export of milk and milk products if any part of our country cannot vaccinate cattle?

Mrs O'Neill: I assure the Member that I will continue to engage with DEFRA on all issues to reflect the needs of our local industry. As I said, there is monthly correspondence between officials, but I regularly engage with DEFRA officials — at least once a month — on general agricultural issues. I will be meeting them again on 18 March, which will be another opportunity for us to have some discussions on those very issues. It is vital that we make sure that we do not disadvantage our local industry from the potential, and, given how reliant we are on the trade, it is vital that we export. So, I will make sure that we are not disadvantaged in any shape or form.

2.45 pm

Mr Boylan: Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as ucht a freagra. Thank you, Mr Speaker, and I thank the Minister for her answer. Will she give us the latest position on the badger test, vaccinate or remove policy?

Mrs O'Neill: I thank the Member for his question. As I said, I have announced the first badger sett survey, which will take place in an area of 100 square kilometres between Banbridge and Rathfriland. That area has been chosen because it has high badger density, high herd density and high confirmed levels of bovine TB. The second badger sett survey location will be announced in the very near future, and the results of the Food and Environment Research Agency modelling and the badger sett surveys will be important to the design and costings of the TVR wildlife intervention research.

I am quite positive about the fact that we were able to get this announced and that we have it on the ground. There is lots more work to be done, but I know that it has been broadly welcomed across industry. As I said earlier in answer to Mr Frew's question, it is something that has been welcomed, and it is important that we get a balance between looking towards the needs of our farming industry and the fact that badgers are a protected species. So, I think that we have a good balance, and having broad consensus is a positive way to go. I am committed to making sure that we move forward in as effective a manner as possible.

Farm Maps

5. Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline how many preliminary farm maps issued in 2013 have been found to contain errors. (AQO 3564/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The farm maps are first and foremost a control tool that should enable more accurate payments to farmers in a timely way. The positive response of farmers and agricultural consultants across the North in correcting the maps that were issued in January and February has been extremely encouraging and is entirely in line with what the European Commission would expect. That response will be extremely valuable in ensuring more accurate and timely payments later in the year.

Just under 38,000 maps were issued in three batches. The first two batches went out in January without a hitch, but in the third batch, which issued on a minority of maps, there was a technical fault that resulted in 3,560 farm business maps having a significant number of fields missing when compared with the farmer's previous single application form. The underlying data held by the Department were not affected, and the technical problem has been resolved. Those farmers affected will have two additional weeks, until 6 March, to correct the maps.

I have issued a press release advising affected farmers that amended maps are available online and via DARD Direct offices. Additionally, their single application forms will be printed and sent out two weeks later than originally planned to provide additional time to advise of any necessary map adjustments, which can be preprinted along with the updated farmer's report. My Department has written to all affected farmers advising them of that.

Mrs Dobson: This sorry episode is only typical of what we have come to expect from a Department that blunders from one humiliation to another. In any other profession, the Minister and those responsible would have been sacked months ago. Does the Minister agree that those mistakes have had a knock-on impact on all farmers across the Province? Even those whose maps were OK have found it all but impossible to make appointments with their local DARD Direct offices.

Mrs O'Neill: No, I do not agree that it has had a knockon effect for all farmers. I think that you need to put it in context and not blow it out of proportion. Three sets of maps of over 38,000 maps in total were issued. There was a technical problem with a small number of the third batch, which equated to around 9% of all the maps that were issued. That was unfortunate, but it was identified very quickly. All farmers have been informed and given additional time to complete their paperwork. Also, in case the Member wants to scaremonger again, I assure farmers that no penalties will be applied as a result of mapping

So, it is an ongoing problem. It was fixed very quickly. I am confident that the action was taken very quickly to fix it. So, I do not agree that it has had a knock-on effect on farmers, because it affected only the farmers who received the incorrect maps.

The other point to make is that the underlying data held by the Department still exist: the maps were wrong, but the detail of individual fields is all correct in the system. It was just the maps that were wrong. That was unfortunate, but it has been corrected.

Mr Byrne: I thank the Minister for her answers so far. Does she accept that this has been another embarrassing fiasco by DARD, and will she agree that it would perhaps have been more advisable to use the good offices of the Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland, which has a lot of expertise in mapping?

Mrs O'Neill: The Member will agree that the major process of remapping 750,000 fields is a very big piece of work. We are doing that to make sure that we meet the Commission standards. We have been on a difficult journey, but I am confident that we are very close to being complete and having maps that are fit for purpose. Next year, when we are fully engaged with the land parcel identification system (LPIS) map and have only one mapping system in place, we will be in a far better position.

You have to put it in context. A small number of maps out of 38,000 maps were affected. Most were perfectly fine, and farmers found them very useful. It is a technical problem. It is unfortunate that it happened, but the problem was rectified within days. Farmers have all been advised of the problem and given extra time to get their maps completed and to get them back in again. I am content that the issues are being dealt with.

Mr Irwin: The Minister can try to dress up the large number of errors in the maps in whatever way she likes, but there were 3,560 in the last batch, and many other maps had errors and had to be rectified by the Department, because, for a number of weeks before that, farmers were visiting the Department to try to get errors fixed. Will the Minister give an assurance to the House today that enough time will be given to farmers to ensure that the errors are all rectified? The allotted time is not enough.

Mrs O'Neill: No farmer has approached me to say that the extra time is not sufficient. As I said, a large number of maps were perfectly fine. As the Member knows, there are a number of features to consider when you are mapping a field and trying to get maps correct. As I have consistently said, this is a two-way process between the Department and the farmer, and we should work together to get the maps right. We are trying to do that with the new LPIS mapping system next year.

I have allowed extra time for farmers, and, if any farmer approaches me needing extra time, we will work with the farmer to make sure that we get the mapping system right. That is the key. There is £300 million of European moneys available through single farm payments, and we want to make sure that it is drawn down appropriately and that our farmers get the maximum drawdown. Therefore, making sure that the maps are right is the responsibility of both the Department and the farmer.

Ms Boyle: Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. Shared grazing is causing remapping problems for farmers. What can the Minister and her Department do to help alleviate that problem?

Mrs O'Neill: I am aware of the issue of shared grazing and that the majority of farmers are able to make the transition to the new mapping arrangements by coming to an understanding with other claimants of their single feed by erecting a permanent barrier. However, I am also aware — it has been raised with me previously — of the concerns of a number of small farmers, because that is proving very difficult for them. I have given an undertaking to farmers that I have discussed the matter with, and I can give an undertaking to the Member that we will look at that, because I want to find a solution for those farmers. It is only a small number, but it is small farmers that are being impacted on, and I want to find a solution for them.

DARD: Headquarters

6. Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how she can guarantee that relocating her Department's headquarters to Ballykelly is the most desirable option if a business case is not developed for any other site. (AQO 3565/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As Members will be aware, the relocation of the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development headquarters to a rural area is a Programme for Government commitment. Work is well under way to develop a business case, and that will be informed by supporting work on staff surveys, identification of options to accommodate DARD requirements and an assessment of the equality impacts of the decision to move to a rural location. I expect a final decision on the business case by the summer

The process of deciding on the Ballykelly site involved the consideration of the various Civil Service strategies, including the regional development strategy, which we are mandated to do. A long list of potential locations was taken from the strategy, and each location was then scored against a defined set of objective criteria, which included nine socio-economic factors such as unemployment levels, deprivation and earnings levels, as well as practical considerations such as the number of public sector and Civil Service jobs already sited in the area.

The analysis indicated that the two top local government districts were both in the north-west; namely, Strabane and Limavady. I made my decision to locate to Ballykelly based on two further factors: the availability of the Executive-owned site at Shackleton Barracks and the potential availability of buildings on that site.

Mr Dickson: I thank the Minister for her answer. Keeping in mind that other locations achieved very similar scores — indeed, one location scored significantly higher — are you saying that the scores do not warrant further scrutiny and assessment?

Mrs O'Neill: I have said very clearly that we had a Programme for Government commitment to move to a rural area. I took the decision based on all of the factors that I have already mentioned and which I mention repeatedly in Question Time in the House and am happy to repeat. We looked at the regional development strategy, which identified that long list that we started off with.

This is all done by an established programme board, which applied the socio-economic criteria and scored accordingly. Two areas in the north-west came out on top, and the fact that Ballykelly is an Executive-owned site means that it is value for money and saves money to the public purse. That in itself was an advantage, as was the potential to use the existing buildings. So the decision was based on all of those criteria, which are transparent and open for everyone to see.

Mr G Robinson: Does the Minister agree that her Department relocating to Ballykelly is in line with the Bain report on placing public sector jobs throughout Northern Ireland?

Mrs O'Neill: I agree with the Member. It will be a significant advantage to the rural location of Ballykelly, given that it will stimulate the local economy. There will be construction, the ongoing servicing of the building and the spend impact on the local community, so it is all very positive for the Ballykelly area.

Ms McCorley: Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as a freagraí go dtí seo. Will an equality impact assessment (EQIA) of the relocation be carried out?

Mrs O'Neill: I assure the Member that a full EQIA is being carried out on the decision to relocate to Ballykelly. The work is at pre-consultation stage, and a wide range of groups has been invited to give views to shape the formal consultation document. The pre-consultation exercise involves face-to-face discussions and written requests for feedback. The formal public consultation period is due to begin in mid-March of this year, and, when it is completed, the Department will consider all of the views that are returned, agree appropriate actions, including any implications for the preferred location, produce an agreed action plan and complete the final EQIA report. That will all feed into the business case.

Mr Dallat: I am sure that the Minister will accept that I am in no way biased about jobs going to Ballykelly, given the history of the haemorrhaging of jobs in recent years. Will the Minister assure the House that, when she has done the paperwork, the jobs will come to Ballykelly and we can get on with planning, which is an important aspect of that?

Mrs O'Neill: There are a number of areas of work that we want to continue. For me, and as the Member will agree, this is an opportunity to address the existing disparity in the distribution of public sector jobs. Bringing jobs out of the greater Belfast area and into a rural location sends a strong message to the public that the Executive and the Assembly are committed to addressing that disparity. It will create an opportunity to share the wealth right across the North. It is a very positive move. I want to get the business case signed off, get the EQIA completed and ensure that we move forward as speedily as possible and deliver on the commitment in the Programme for Government.

Mr Speaker: Paul Givan is not in place to ask question 7.

Plant Security

8. Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the action her Department is taking to address plant security as a result of the experience from ash dieback disease. (AQO 3567/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The ongoing experience of ash dieback disease shows the importance of agreeing the approach on plant health measures, using a fortress Ireland approach with those most likely to be affected by disease, such as woodland owners, farmers and hurley manufacturers. As a result, I have been able to co-ordinate with the South the introduction of legislation on ash plants for planting, and ash wood and bark.

I am considering further legislation, also in conjunction with the South, to introduce a requirement for the pre-notification of imports of certain species of trees from other countries in the EU. Pre-notification could assist in preventing disease outbreaks and, importantly, provide intelligence about plant movements and assist in tracing problems. It is important that our biosecurity is strengthened to reduce the risk of pests and disease entering our island.

Mr A Maginness: I thank the Minister for her answer. Can she reassure me that the action that she has taken will be effective in protecting native trees and associated woodlands?

Mrs O'Neill: I assure the Member that we are working towards that. We are also working with the industry. It is very important that we engage with our stakeholders. We went through the winter when the symptoms are not as obvious, but, as we enter spring, we have a full plan in place to ensure that we are ready to go and that the surveillance is ongoing. We look to examples of other European countries that have had the disease and been able to look at it.

3.00 pm

We are working with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs and with the Department of Agriculture, Food and the Marine in the South, and we will continue to do so. The plan that we have in place is very proactive. At present, it appears that the disease is only in young plants. We want to make sure that that remains the case and that we can deal with it and not allow it to become established in our native trees.

Mr Speaker: That concludes Question Time.

Motion made:

That the Assembly do now adjourn. — [Mr Speaker.]

Adjournment

Roads: M1 Link to the Maze Site

Mr Speaker: The proposer of the topic will have 15 minutes, the Minister will have 10 minutes to respond, and all other Members who wish to speak will have 5 minutes.

Mr Craig: With regard to the Adjournment debate — [Interruption.]

Mr Speaker: Order. Members will please leave the Chamber in an orderly fashion.

Mr Craig: In the Maze site, potentially, we have one of the largest investments that can take place in Northern Ireland; it is a 375-acre site that was originally the site of an airport in World War II. Those who live in the area know the history of the site. Between 1941 and 1945, it was used as a stop-off between the United States and Great Britain, and it saw thousands of American bombers come over to Europe. The site was also used to provide the north Atlantic convoy routes with cover, which made it one of the busiest airports in the entire world during those years.

From the 1970s to the 1990s, the site was used as a prison. That is where recent history probably sees it. It became famous for its infamous H-blocks, hunger strikes and, for those of us who lived only up the road, the breakout as well. Those were all hugely negative, and residents, like myself, had to put up with an awful lot over those years.

In more recent times, the site was passed to the Northern Ireland Executive and then to the Maze regeneration team, which now has the site. It was proposed as the site for the Northern Ireland sports stadium, but, sadly for all of us in Lagan Valley, that project collapsed. The Maze development corporation was established and board members appointed. Discussions took place with the Royal Ulster Agricultural Society (RUAS), and the historic decision was taken by the society to relocate to the Maze. The famous Balmoral show will take place at the Maze this May, and arrangements are being made for the more local Saintfield show to take place at the site. The society has plans to develop the site over the next 10 to 15 years, and it will include not only exhibition and show space but an equestrian centre of excellence.

Last week, I had the privilege of visiting the site; I was given a tour of the RUAS site and saw how it is developing. I can report that it is developing very well. They have already planted the main showgrounds and the site of the equestrian centre. The basis for much of the road infrastructure is now in situ, and I look forward to seeing it finished in the very near future.

That leads us to other issues. There are no major links from the site to the M1, the main motorway infrastructure, at present. Traffic is expected to use the Moira Road, which is an A-class road, and the Halftown and Harrys roads, which are both C-class roads. No doubt, in the short term — for the first year or two of the show's life — that will cause traffic issues in the area. I know that the corporation, local residents, the PSNI and others are working very hard to minimise the impact, but, no doubt, that will restrict the potential for RUAS at this site for the first couple of years. In the medium to long term, such measures are not sustainable. Traffic congestion and the inevitable delays will strangle the site's potential. If the site is to develop and achieve its full potential, it is clear that more road links that directly link to the MI are required. Not only would that help to drive improvements to the Balmoral show but it would unlock the rest of the site for future development.

I am glad to say that I have learned that the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister (OFMDFM) has set aside around £30 million for road infrastructure on the Maze site, which will include a bridge over the M1 to support traffic coming from the west of the Province and a new dual carriageway out to Sprucefield linking to the M1 at the existing park-and-ride site. The reasons why both had to be developed were purely down to engineering issues with an existing bridge across the motorway and site restrictions in getting a direct link to the motorway. However, those are all positive issues that need to be moved forward urgently if the site is to have its full potential unlocked.

Those new roads will provide an opportunity for the development of the whole south Lisburn area around Sprucefield. Opening up the Maze site will unlock the potential for 1,000 acres of industrial and housing development in the south Lisburn area. Sprucefield, and the link that will go into the Sprucefield site, has huge potential. In the past, there was what was infamously known as the Knockmore link to Sprucefield. Unfortunately, that was never truly developed. The new road will be the first quarter of the Knockmore link. I appeal to my colleagues in the Executive, and in Roads Service in particular, to finish the Knockmore link if they can find the funds because that will be the economic driver that not only will unlock the potential for the Maze but will unlock the potential that is hidden in the industrial heartland at the south of Lisburn. As a government, we all need to see that. I believe that that is estimated to be a £10 million investment, if the Executive can find it, and it would open up not only the development of the Maze but the Knockmore industrial estate, which has waited patiently for 20 years and has been one of the most successful industrial sites for the expansion of jobs in Northern Ireland. The potential for increased investment from private developers is absolutely huge.

The Maze site must develop and attract world-renowned, high-technology industries and bring the prosperity to Northern Ireland that we are all crying out for and all our future children are looking for. In the 1980s, I had the bitter experience of coming out of university as an engineering graduate, and three quarters of my class are now spread not only to mainland UK but throughout the world. I do not want a repeat of that for my children. I want us to make the investments that will unlock the huge potential at the Maze site. Let us see world-class industry coming to that site and giving our children and our children's children the future that they deserve. I commend this to you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: I call Mr Givan, and the Member has roughly five minutes.

Mr Givan: Thank you, Mr Speaker. Can I take this first opportunity in the House to apologise for not being in my place to ask my question to the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development during Question Time? I was unduly delayed in a meeting. Therefore, I submit my apologies, Mr Speaker.

I support my colleague Mr Craig in the Adjournment debate that he has brought forward. It is important that the site gets proper road infrastructure improvements. Therefore, the £30 million that is being allocated to it is welcome indeed. If the site is to achieve its full potential and be an economic driver for our Northern Ireland economy, the infrastructure needs to be improved. It is ideally located along the Belfast-Dublin corridor to attract people from the west of the Province and to bring people up from the Southern market. Therefore, the site needs to be readily accessible. There is no point in people being able to get to Sprucefield very quickly and then facing delays because they are unable to get access to the Maze site. So, getting the road infrastructure in place is critical to the site developing properly.

In developing the roads infrastructure, it is also important that the Department takes on board any concerns that may come forward from the local residents, particularly the Halftown Road residents association, which, for decades, endured the security paraphernalia that went along with the Maze prison. Now that the site is being developed, it is critical that any views that they have on how the infrastructure is to be developed are taken on board and reflected on.

Improvements have been carried out on some roads. Indeed, the Blaris Road was recently resurfaced. Getting that road improvement in place will benefit the Maze site and the local community group in addressing all its concerns around this issue. I support the development, and I support the allocation of £30 million, trusting that it can be developed in conjunction with local people's views being taken on board.

Mr Speaker: I thank the Member for coming to the House and apologising for not being in his place for Question Time. I hope that that will set an example for other Members to come to the House and explain why they were not in their place.

Mrs Hale: I thank my colleague Jonathan Craig for keeping this issue very much on the agenda in the House. I welcome the opportunity to speak today. Many Members will know that I am passionate about the development at Maze and the regeneration that it will bring. I am also very concerned about the road network and infrastructure surrounding the site, especially in relation to the Culcavy Road, Halftown Road and Harry's Road. Many of those roads were never designed to accommodate high volumes of traffic in the long term.

A number of weeks ago, I met the Maze development team and its chair, Mr Brannigan. They are considering two new entrances to the site, the most significant of which is reliant on the M1 link road. Indeed, they have stated that the M1 link road access issue is always raised in preliminary discussions with potential investors in the site and employers. Its importance cannot be underplayed.

Having asked questions and quizzed the Minister for Regional Development on the issue for many, many months, I have concerns that there seems to be little urgency to ensure that developments are brought about sooner rather than later. Indeed, it has been put on record that any plans to address the link road will not happen until after 2015, as it does not fall within the strategic road improvement programme. Therefore, progression of the M1 bypass proposal will only be subject to funding after 2015. Only at the beginning of February this year, I asked the Minister in a priority question for written answer to detail his plans for the provision of the access roads to the Maze/Long Kesh site during and after the Balmoral show in May 2013. The Minister's answer detailed only how traffic will be managed during the show, but he gave no details of the future road infrastructure, and, consequently, he did not answer my question.

Residents in the area have concerns that additional traffic in the vicinity will lead to long tailbacks and congestion, especially at times of peak traffic flow, and we need to bear it in mind that no solution has yet been found to prevent large volumes of traffic and heavy goods vehicles using those small rural roads as a bypass. It seems difficult to understand how the present infrastructure will cope with the additional traffic planned for the Maze regeneration site.

If I were being totally solution-focused, I would believe that the time is right to push on the M1 link road. It has been stated that there is no budget for the project, but I hear today that OFDMFM has agreed money. It is vital that all the relevant Departments sit down and see whether plans can be found to get the projects started sooner rather than later. Not only will it support the development of the Maze regeneration site, it will help to solve a number of the traffic problems that our constituents who live in this rural area face every day.

3.15 pm

Mr Poots: I appreciate the opportunity to say a few words on the issue.

Maze/Long Kesh gives Northern Ireland an opportunity to develop something of huge significance that can lead to real and serious inward investment and provide quality facilities that tens of thousands of people can enjoy. The scale and location of the site lend themselves to being one of the most strategically placed quality facilities in Northern Ireland for inward investment. To achieve that, though, it is incumbent on us to ensure that the opportunity can be delivered as quickly as possible, and for that we need the infrastructure to be in place. There is also an excellent opportunity for telecommunications, with Project Kelvin running just past the site.

Given the site's accessibility to the M1 and A1, we also have the opportunity to ensure that it can be hugely attractive to people not just from Northern Ireland and can attract inward investment from the Republic of Ireland. Therefore, it is of absolute importance that we recognise at an early point that the infrastructure issue needs to be addressed in a positive and progressive way.

The RUAS is moving to the site this year. We will see how things pan out. The Down Royal races take place close to the site, with up to 10,000 people attending each day, and we do not have many problems. However, the RUAS is a further step up from that, with 80,000 people attending an event over three days. That is a considerable increase in numbers. To be perfectly honest — I should declare an interest because I am a member of the RUAS — we do not want those figures to stay at 80,000; we want them to go upwards significantly. To achieve that, we need those couple of miles of access from the main roads — the M1 and A1 — to be developed quickly and strategically and have quality infrastructure put in place. The Knockmore/ Sprucefield link is a must to be delivered. That will open up an entire area for industrial and leisure development and employment opportunities. I trust that OFMDFM, in conjunction with DRD in particular, will be a driving force to ensure that all that happens.

Mr McAleer: Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. I thank and congratulate the Member for bringing the debate to the House. The site, as we know from the Members who spoke previously, is of huge regional significance to this part of the island. It has major economic, social, regeneration and reconciliation potential.

There are two strands to the site. One is the EU-funded peace-building and conflict resolution facility. That has the potential to be a world-class facility to strengthen our peace-building expertise and, indeed, share our experience with the rest of the world. It is positive that that has the potential to transform a site that has been associated with the conflict and bring it into something more positive and futuristic. It is a physical expression of how our society has transformed from conflict to peace and has major potential to attract people from all around the world to come here, hear our story and learn about our conflict and how we have moved away from it.

The second strand, which was referred to, is the decision to relocate the RUAS onto 65 acres of the site, which will house the Balmoral show. That will provide an international standard facility with a main arena, equine and livestock show rings and associated landscaping and infrastructure. As a member of the Committee for Agriculture and Rural Development and a rural MLA, I heartily welcome the development. It has huge economic potential in itself and can act as a catalyst for further development on that strategically important site.

Getting on to the topic of the link to the M1, I think that it is hugely important. It is important to get people onto the site, especially those from the rural areas, from areas outside Belfast and from places in the west, such as down in Tyrone, where I am from. It is vital. I support the view that direct access from the M1 is vital. It is hugely important to realise the potential of this strategic site.

Of course, the pledge in the Programme for Government commitment 15 was to:

"develop Maze/Long Kesh as a regeneration site of regional significance".

I also note that, when Minister Attwood announced in January his decision to grant planning permission, he made reference to the necessity of effective planning as a key component. The fact that the proposed site will have parking facilities for 10,000 cars gives us an indication of its potential through the sheer number of people who could be visiting it at various times over the year.

The development of the Maze/Long Kesh project is of huge regional importance, and it is obvious that it has to be matched with proper infrastructure so that the site's potential can be realised. I thank Mr Craig for bringing this debate to the House today, and I can certainly pledge my support and, indeed, that of my party for this infrastructure development.

Mrs D Kelly: I too thank Mr Craig for tabling this afternoon's Adjournment debate. Some Members may wonder why I am speaking on it, but I live in the area of Aghalee, which is not too far away from the area in question. Many Members have focused on the Sprucefield and Harry's Road end of the site, but there is also the question of Maghaberry and Moira to consider. Those of us who have to travel up the M1 and leave it at the Moira junction roundabout will know about the tailbacks that can be there already at that time and about the amount of traffic that goes through the village of Moira. So, there needs to be a much broader analysis of the area's infrastructural needs.

I want to put on record my thanks to the two junior Ministers for their presence here to hear the debate this afternoon. I would also welcome their views on the concept that the developer pays. We all know that, when a new site is opened, part of the cost of the infrastructure is actually placed on the developer. So, I want to know whether that will be part of the business case in the overall development of the Maze site.

Members will also be aware of the railway station at Moira. The Regional Development Committee is looking at integrated transport systems and at community transport in particular. So, in looking at the needs for traffic arrangements, it is also important that we look at the infrastructure in totality in relation to public use and at the opportunities that exist with having a railway halt in such close proximity.

I join others in wishing the RUAS well in its plans to avail itself of the site. I would also be interested to hear from the junior Ministers about the business case and, indeed, the initial development proposals, which included, as far as I can recall, opportunities for retail, office and housing. I would also be interested to hear how the needs of anyone who is going to live on that broader site will be addressed in relation to the totality of the infrastructure.

Mrs Overend: The Ulster Unionist Party recognises the potentially substantial social and economic benefits that the utilisation of former security sites such as the Maze site can bring. In general, we want the sites to be used, where possible, to the benefit of local communities. Alternatively, if that is not possible, they could be sold to create much-needed revenue that can be ploughed back into front line services.

Under the original proposals in the Maze/Long Kesh master plan and implementation strategy of May 2006, the scenarios that were identified included a multiparty sports stadium; a rural excellence and equestrian zone, including an international exhibition centre and showgrounds; offices, hotels and a leisure village; the creation of up to 4,000 jobs; a community zone; high-quality new housing; parkland and landscaping; and a new highway and public transport.

None of those proposals has been taken forward. It is disappointing that, after so long, the Maze site is still not being utilised to its full potential.

There have been some positive developments. For example, the Ulster Unionist Party fully supports the decision of the Royal Ulster Agricultural Society, as was mentioned, to move the Balmoral show from the King's Hall to the Maze site. That is, of course, a prestigious annual three-day event. It is Northern Ireland's largest agriculture and food show, and it attracts in the region of 70,000-plus visitors. There was also the possibility of the Ulster Aviation Society running more events on the site, given its impressive aircraft collection. Indeed, I have seen that for myself, Mr Speaker, and it is something that we really could build on. Hopefully, the junior Minister will be able to update us on the current status of that.

However, aspects of what is being done could be described as being insensitive to victims. The Ulster Unionist Party does not agree with the peace-building and conflict resolution centre being located at the Maze. An example of a location that would be more suitable is the Crumlin Road jail. There is also an issue over the running costs of the centre, as it is projected to run at a significant annual loss of £650,000. That is difficult to justify to the taxpayer. However, that is a debate that has been had before, and there is no need to rehearse it today.

The Adjournment debate specifically mentions the road infrastructure of the M1 to the Maze site. Of course, it is important that we have an infrastructure that is sufficient to meet the demands of its users. That is especially the case, given that, as outlined previously, the Balmoral show attracts over 70,000 visitors, with around 100,000 visitors a year expected for the peace centre. If the Maze site is finally developed to the scale originally envisaged, it is up to the Finance Minister to provide the necessary funds to upgrade any aspect of the M1 link that may be considered not to be up to standard. Clarification from the junior Minister on how OFMDFM took the surrounding infrastructure into account as it planned for the future of the Maze site would be welcomed.

The Maze site is a project that has been taken forward by the First Minister and the deputy First Minister, and they must prove that they are capable of seeing through the regeneration of that former security site in its entirety. That includes having the necessary infrastructure. The Maze corporation board also has a major role to play, and, hopefully, the Minister will be able to update us on that.

Ms J McCann (Junior Minister, Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister): I start by thanking the Member who put down the topic for debate. Is he still here? He is. I thank him for the interest he has expressed to date in the regeneration of this important strategic site.

The regeneration of the Maze/Long Kesh is a high priority cited in the Programme for Government objectives for 2011-15. Commitment number 15 states our priority to:

A key milestone under that commitment is to commence the site infrastructure development work in 2014-15.

The Maze/Long Kesh Development Corporation was established in September 2012 to regenerate the site, and it is now responsible for its regeneration, including the provision of road infrastructure. Although the regeneration plans are at a very early stage, linking the site to the M1 is identified as a high priority for the corporation, as it has the potential to attract further private sector investment to the site. However, as Members will be aware, road infrastructure is a complex process involving extensive stakeholder engagement, business case approval, design, planning permission, procurement and construction, among many other things.

Initial survey work and a feasibility study are under way by the development corporation, with a view to producing detailed proposals in due course. The proposals will consider all road infrastructure options for improving access to the site. Until that work is completed, a preferred option cannot be identified.

I encourage the Member and other interested individuals to contribute to the stakeholder engagement to help ensure the success of the project. I am pleased to report that, even at this early stage, local residents have received an initial briefing from the Maze/Long Kesh Development Corporation outlining the process.

The provision of road infrastructure has already been identified to improve access to the site, and that is the responsibility of the Maze/Long Kesh Development Corporation. Funding has now been identified and allocated by OFMDFM in the current CSR period for that purpose.

3.30 pm

The provision of road infrastructure development outside that objective is the responsibility of the Department for Regional Development. Public sector funding for essential infrastructure at Maze/Long Kesh is vital and will help to attract further private sector funding to the site.

I want to touch on some issues that Members raised. The RUAS is working closely with the PSNI on traffic management for the show, including monitoring cameras. All visitor parking for the show will be on site. OFMDFM allocated £21 million in the current CSR period for a feasibility study, which is being undertaken to consider the road infrastructure options. The Maze/Long Kesh Development Corporation is developing a transport plan, which will include the use of rail and other transport options, such as a cycle network.

In closing, I want to make a number of quick points. The development corporation has made considerable progress on the provision of some internal roads at Maze/Long Kesh to improve traffic management and help to ensure the success of the agricultural show, which will be held on the site in May 2013. Some issues have already been dealt with, as I outlined. There is also improved access to the site. In particular, the development of a link to the M1 is key to the site's development.

The regeneration of the former military site represents a major opportunity to impact on many aspects and sectors of society here and further afield. There is no doubt that challenges lie ahead, particularly in the current economic climate. I appreciate the interest expressed in the debate as we move forward work on the Maze/Long Kesh site to maximise the economic, historical and reconciliatory potential of this regionally significant site.

I hope that that satisfies the Member who secured the debate. If Members have any other concerns, they can ask me about them outside of the Chamber.

Adjourned at 3.32 pm.

Public Right of Pedestrian Access to DARD Forestry Land and New Forestry Land By-laws

Published at 12.00 noon on Tuesday 12 February 2013

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): Fáilte romhaimh.

I wish to advise Assembly members that from St Patrick's Day, 17 March, the public will be granted a public right of pedestrian access to DARD forestry land.

Section 31 of the Forestry Act (NI) 2010 provides, subject to byelaws, for public right of pedestrian access. The Forestry (2010 Act) (Commencement No.2) Order (NI) 2013 will bring this section into force, along with The Forestry Land Byelaws (NI) 2013.

There is much to enjoy. There are over 100 Forest Service properties that provide way-marked woodland walks. Pedestrians will have access to most of the 76,000ha of forestry land managed by the Forest Service. This land contains conifer and broadleaved plantations and natural woodlands and open space. Some of the lands are specially protected as nature reserves and historic landscapes, and the public right extends to most of these areas.

This is undoubtedly an important step under the Forestry Act (NI) 2010. The public right of pedestrian access encapsulates in law our Assembly's endorsement of our vision to promote the wider recreational and social use of the Department's forest lands. Public access to open space is a valuable resource, it gives us opportunities for tourism, for sport, it helps us to take exercise and look after our health, and reminds us of our rural environment and heritage. The public right of pedestrian access will complement local government policies on recreation and access to the countryside.

The public right of pedestrian access applies only to DARD forestry land. This land is managed by the Forest Service. I wish to make it clear that privately owned woodlands are not affected by the Order and the Byelaws. Similarly, where the Forest Service occupies land under conditions which restrict public access agreed with the original landowner then the new legislation has no effect.

Understandably, the public right of pedestrian access will not extend to any building or structure on forestry land, or to any facility for which a charge is payable. It will also be subject to certain restrictions as set out in The Forestry Land Byelaws (NI) 2013.

When we consulted on the Byelaws in 2011 there was very significant public and cross-departmental interest, reflecting the wide use of forests for passive and active recreation, and the legal rights by third parties to use forestry land. The clear wish of many was that the form of the legislation should be simple, that the byelaws should not be drafted to cover every eventuality; and that DARD should recognise that visitors to forests are prepared to act responsibly, and to take responsibility for their own safety.

Of course, some limitations are needed, to allow the Department to intervene when people behave irresponsibly, to protect the forests from damage and disease, and to provide for public safety when forestry operations create a hazard for the public. However, I am now confident that these Byelaws strike an excellent balance between personal freedom and legal restrictions. I am grateful to the wide range of stakeholders who responded to our consultation and who helped me achieve this balanced outcome.

The public will now be able to exercise their public right of pedestrian access day or night unless the forest is closed for one of the reasons allowed in the byelaws. Dogs must be kept under control, and in core recreational areas this will mean that they need to be kept on a lead. The Byelaws recognise that some behaviour is likely to create annoyance to other forest visitors, they provide examples of unacceptable behaviour, and they allow forestry officials to remove people whose behaviour is unacceptable.

We value our public forests and the opportunity they give for informal access to open countryside. This legislation is an important step in moving the permissive access to Forest Service lands and the first Forest Parks that we have enjoyed since the 1950's, to a legal right to be enjoyed responsibly by everybody. My Statement will be available on the DARD website in due course.

Go raibh mile maith agaibh.

Proposals to Suspend Commercial Eel Fishing in Europe

Published at 4.00 pm on Monday 18 February 2013

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): I am writing to update Members on proposals to amend the EC Eel Regulations that could potentially result in the suspension of commercial eel fishing across Europe, including the eel fishery on Lough Neagh. This is to be discussed at a meeting of the European Parliament Fisheries Committee today.

The European eel stock has been in rapid decline since around 1980 and the European Commission introduced the Eel Conservation Regulation in 2007 requiring the establishment of National Eel Management Plans (EMP). The Plans must demonstrate, among other issues that at least 40% of adult eels from each river basin are escaping to spawn. The Lough Neagh Bann catchment area is the only area in the North where eel fishing is permitted.

As you will be aware, Lough Neagh is the largest commercial wild eel fishery in Europe and is unique in that there is no other eel fishery in Europe similarly structured and managed. The fishery is run by the Lough Neagh Fishermen's Co-operative Society which has the rights to the eel fishing in the Lough and administers its own regulations, in addition to National and European imposed regulations, to ensure standards and sustainable fishing practices.

The Society has successfully balanced commercial activity with the effective conservation and management of the fishery over the past 40 years aimed at ensuring the sustainability of eel stocks. Scientific advice from the Agri Food and Biosciences Institute (AFBI) confirms that Eel stock in the Lough Neagh/Bann basin are currently meeting its conservation targets. The vast majority of the eel catch is exported and it is estimated that the livelihoods of some 300 families in the area are dependent on the fishery with a value to the local economy in excess of £3m per annum. The EU has also recognised the regional importance of the eel and it enjoys protected geographical indication status.

I know that Members will share my concerns about the Commission's current eel measures regarding the proposal to automatically suspend fishing for eels across the EU. This would have a significant impact on the sustainability of the Lough Neagh eel fishery and the wider local economy within the catchment. While recognising the importance of conserving eel stocks, I am not prepared to consider any future proposals for the recovery of EU eels stocks without independent scientific evidence, an appropriate equality impact assessment in accordance with Section 75 of the NI Act 1998, consultation with all stakeholder interests and appropriate compensation for fishermen affected during any proposed suspension.

I am also firmly of the view that these proposals should be rejected and I have written to the Minister responsible for Fisheries in the Department of Environment Fisheries and Rural Affairs to express my concerns and to ensure that these views are conveyed to the European Parliament Fisheries Committee. I am meeting with a delegation from the Lough Neagh Eel Fisheries Co-operative and other stakeholders this week and will also be meeting Michelle O'Neill, Minister for Agriculture and Rural Development in view of her interest in the matter.

I will keep Members updated on developments.

Settlement in the case of Declan Gormley v the Department for Regional Development and Others

Published at 1.30 pm on Thursday 21 February 2013

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development):

I wish to make a Statement to the Assembly in respect of my decision to reach a settlement with Mr Declan Gormley who had taken action against the Department for Regional Development and 4 individuals, including my predecessor Conor Murphy, MP.

Mr Gormley had taken his case as a result of the decision to dismiss him from the position of non-executive director with NI Water in March 2010 following the publication of a report by an Independent Review Team. At that time Conor Murphy, MP was Minister for Regional Development.

Following the recent High Court Case in which Mr Gormley was awarded damages against Sinn Fein, he had indicated that all that he wanted from the litigation against the Department and the other defendants was an apology and the legal costs incurred in the case. In light of this statement I felt duty bound to ensure that this was explored with Mr Gormley's legal advisers.

Following tough negotiations by both parties it was eventually possible to reach a settlement on the basis of an apology on behalf of the Department and the payment of Mr Gormley's reasonable legal costs but without payment of damages.

The terms of the settlement are as follows:

The Plaintiff will stay the proceedings on terms that he will obtain no relief from any of the defendants apart from the Department, but the Department will give an apology in the following terms:

"APOLOGY: MR.DECLAN GORMLEY

In March 2010 some of the non-executive directors of Northern Ireland Water Limited, including Mr. Declan Gormley were dismissed from the board of that company by the then Minister for Regional Development, Mr Conor Murphy. The Department was the sole shareholder in the company.

Whilst this is regretted, it would now be impracticable for the situation to be reversed.

Notwithstanding this the Department categorically acknowledges that Mr Gormley was not guilty of any personal wrongdoing or misconduct in his role as non-executive director of Northern Ireland Water. The Department further acknowledges that his removal from office did not reflect adversely in any respect on his character or integrity.

The Department has now apologised to Mr Gormley and has agreed to pay his costs. Mr Gormley has accepted the apology, which is all that he wished to secure from this litigation. Accordingly the matter is now closed."

The plaintiff will not receive any damages but the Department will pay the plaintiff's reasonable costs to date

As always I had to weigh a number of factors in coming to my decision. I believe that I have acted entirely in the public interest in deciding that this case should be settled.

De-agentisation of Land and Property Services

Published at 12:00 noon on Friday 22 February 2013

Mr Wilson (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): In recent months my department has considered the future delivery of the functions provided by Land & Property Services (LPS). As a result, I have agreed that LPS will cease to be an Executive Agency within the Department from 1 April 2013.

LPS will retain its branding and continue to deliver the same services as before, but as a business area within the Department rather than as an Agency. This is largely an administrative change and will have no impact on the daily work of the majority of staff.

Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Community Resuscitation Strategy

Published at 10.30 am on Tuesday 26 February 2013

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): I wish to make a statement to the Assembly advising Members of my intention to develop a Community Resuscitation Strategy for Northern Ireland.

In February 2012 the Assembly debated a motion on the provision of Emergency Life Support (ELS) skills training to every school, community and workplace in Northern Ireland.

ELS skills are the key set of actions needed to keep someone alive until professional help arrives. It includes performing cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR); dealing with choking and serious bleeding; how to put someone in the recovery position, and helping someone who may be having a heart attack.

The evidence indicates that in places where there is a high proportion of the population trained in ELS skills the survival rate for those who suffer an out-of-hospital cardiac arrest is higher than in areas where the proportion of the population trained in ELS skills is low.

While I welcomed the Assembly motion last February, I also acknowledged the valuable work that is already taking place across Northern Ireland, by the Health and Social Care service and a number of voluntary organisations such as the British Heart Foundation, ABC for Life, the Red Cross and St John Ambulance. As Minister, however, I am conscious that resources both within the health service and in the voluntary and community sector are finite. We need to make the best possible use of the resources that are available to ensure that we maximise the number of people trained in ELS skills.

I have asked the Chief Medical Officer to establish a working group to develop a community resuscitation strategy for Northern Ireland, aimed at coordinating available resources to maximise the number of individuals trained in ELS skills. The working group will be chaired by the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service and will include representatives from my Department, Health and Social Care bodies, community and voluntary bodies involved in resuscitation training as well as representation from other Northern Ireland Departments such as the Department of Education, the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure and the Department of Social Development.

Each year in Northern Ireland approximately 1,300 cardiac arrests occur outside a hospital environment. Tragically, fewer than 10% of people who suffer an out-of-hospital cardiac arrest will survive to be discharged from hospital. In the Programme for Government 2011-2015 my Department has made a commitment to improve access to thrombolysis and to expand cardiac catheterisation capacity to improve access to diagnostic intervention and treatment and the development of a new primary percutaneous coronary intervention (primary PCI) service model for NI by 2014/15. Key to maximising the benefit to the population of this PfG commitment and investment is survival to thrombolysis or in due course primary PCI service. The earlier patients are treated with thromolysis or coronary interventions the better their chances are of recovery. By extending ELS training and keeping people alive to allow them to avail of thrombolysis or primary PCI we can maximise the chances of survival or improved recovery from heart attack. With 1,300 cardiac arrests occurring outside a hospital environment each year in NI and less than 130 of these surviving to discharge I recognise we have some considerable way to go, however I believe ELS training can help us ensure more timely responses and better outcomes for patients. I have therefore no doubt about the need to extend ELS training in order to save more lives.

We need to, and we can, achieve greater coverage in communities, schools and workplaces throughout Northern Ireland. We can achieve this if Ministers, their Departments, District Councils, other public bodies and voluntary and community sector organisations continue to work in partnership and develop new approaches to ELS training.

I believe a Northern Ireland community resuscitation strategy will help to focus a drive to increase the number of people, of all ages, trained in ELS skills and to coordinate the use of available resources to achieve this. The working group will be asked to have the ready strategy for consultation by October 2013.

Regional Development

Transport Northern Ireland

Published at 12:00 Noon on Monday 4 March 2013

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development):

In recent years my Department has been considering the best model for the future delivery of both roads and public transport authority functions. As a result I have agreed that in line with a number of other jurisdictions, there should be a single organisation within my Department responsible for the delivery of roads functions and securing public transport services. This new organisation will be called Transport NI and it will come into effect from 1st April 2013.

Transport NI will be a combination of two existing business units within my Department: Roads Service and Public Transport Finance and Governance; and as a result there will be no impact on staff numbers or other resources within my Department.

Transport NI will be responsible for the following functions:

- All functions currently delivered by Roads Service including:
- The design of major and minor road improvement schemes including schemes to improve road safety;
- The maintenance of the road network including roads, footways, bridges, street lights, etc;
- The management of the road network including the provision of a winter service, as well as managing motorway communications and signalised junctions;
- Securing the delivery of public transport services; and in the future
- The development of local public transport plans.

The new arrangements will better coordinate the management of the road network and the delivery of public transport services in the future.

Mr David McClarty

Witnesses:

Ms Martina Campbell Ms Jane Corderoy Mr Michael Pollock Department for Social Development

The Chairperson: Members are aware that today we enter into the formal clause-by-clause scrutiny of the Welfare Reform Bill. The Committee Stage of the Bill started on 11 October 2012. The Committee received some 50 written responses and considered oral evidence from 18 key stakeholder organisations and, of course, the Department for Social Development. Given the Committee's extensive consideration of evidence and responses from the Department, we agreed that the formal clause-by-clause scrutiny can commence today.

Members have previously set out their interim positions on the Bill's clauses, which we went through last week. During the clause-by-clause scrutiny, members will be asked to set out their final positions, subject to the report of the Examiner of Statutory Rules and any consequential amendments. If members do not feel that they can agree a clause, that must be clearly stated during this session. If that happens, the member will be asked to set out his or her proposed recommendation, opposition or amendment.

This is the countdown to our final consideration of the Bill, and the formal clause-by-clause scrutiny is important. The departmental officials — Jane, Martina and Michael — are here this morning to assist the Committee on any issues that we are not sure about or that we did not conclude on. Last week, we had quite a discussion on, first, trying to get a consensus report, and, secondly, agreeing the number of clauses that members determined that they did not wish to support at this time. There will be a caveat in so far as the report's preface will state that there are a number of outstanding issues — for example, universal credit, which is out to consultation — and members felt that they could not support the relevant clauses as they are currently drafted because a consultation is under way. In addition, the Minister is deliberating with Westminster on flexibilities or variances on, for example, sanctions and other issues. The Executive may also wish to take some mitigating measures, over which the Committee has no control.

Last week, members agreed the clauses that they would not currently support. That does not prevent members either changing their mind this morning and voting for or against an amendment or a proposed clause, or tabling amendments now or at Consideration Stage. In other words, we understand, and it is written into our report, that members will be voting at Committee Stage on the clauses, bearing in mind how deliberations may continue when the Bill leaves the Committee, with the Minister seeking either other flexibilities or Executive support. That is the basis on which members adopt their position at Committee Stage, which is not in any way prejudicial to how members may or may not vote, or table relevant amendments that they think are appropriate or necessary, in the Assembly at Consideration Stage.

If members are satisfied with that approach, the Committee Clerk and his staff have gone through the Committee's discussions and identified a number of clauses, based on last week's positions, that the Committee may or may not support as they are currently drafted. That does not mean that members will not be able to table amendments or vote in a different way at Consideration Stage. Members will be guided by the outworkings of consultations, Executive deliberations and any mitigating measures that may be taken to alleviate our concerns. At any time, members are free to table amendments or be guided by parity issues or costs in the way in which they finally vote on the Bill.

Members have the Bill, the explanatory and financial memorandum, the clause-by-clause summary table and advice from the Examiner of Statutory Rules.

Before we commence the formal clause-by-clause scrutiny, I welcome Sydney Anderson.

Mr Anderson: Thank you, Chair.

The Chairperson: He replaces Sammy Douglas. We have written to Sammy expressing our gratitude for his work on the Committee. We wish him well.

Are members content that that is the position that we have adopted before we start our formal clause-by-clause scrutiny?

Members indicated assent.

The Chairperson: Some clauses are grouped because of their relevance to one another. I will go through the clauses one by one or in their little groups. We will note whether or not members support clauses. I remind members to refer to their recommendations paper, which contains the clauses on which the Committee has retained its position; they are the clauses that members will not support. For the most part, the recommendations are well qualified and prefaced. We intend to go through the clause-by-clause scrutiny today and then have our next Committee meeting on Thursday morning, at which we will finalise our report on the Committee Stage of the Welfare Reform Bill. It will, obviously, include the results of our clause-by-clause scrutiny and other elements on which we agreed, and it will also refer to the Ad Hoc Committee's recommendations. Members are still free to raise individual matters today or on Thursday.

If members are content, we will now go through the clauses. It is entirely up to members to raise any issue that they wish to during today's discussions. The purpose of doing business in the way in which we did, which is the normal procedure for Committee Stage, is that we have more or less had all our discussions and probably do not need much more, if any, discussion. I intend to go through the clauses, but members are free to raise any issues.

Clauses 1 to 3 agreed to.

Clause 4 (Basic conditions)

The Chairperson: Clause 4 is included in the recommendations paper. Based on our discussions, it was decided that the Committee was not agreed to clause 4 as drafted.

Mr G Campbell: Can we take your opening caveat as read, rather than repeating it ad nauseam?

The Chairperson: That is even better. Thank you.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, put and negatived.

Clause 4 disagreed to.

Clauses 5 to 9 agreed to.

Clause 10 disagreed to.

Clause 11 agreed to.

Clause 12 disagreed to.

Clauses 13 to 25 agreed to.

Clause 26 disagreed to.

Clauses 27 to 32 agreed to.

Ms P Bradley: Chair, may I interrupt? I am looking back at clause 26, "Higher level sanctions". The recommendations paper states:

"In this context the Committee was content to agree the clause as drafted."

Am I reading this correctly? We have disagreed clause 26.

The Committee Clerk: The Committee was interested in exploring with the Minister the possibility of varying the sanction regime. If that is the case, you cannot support the sanction regime if you want to ask the Minister to review it.

Ms P Bradley: OK.

The Chairperson: Remember that, because the Minister is in discussions about trying to vary the sanctions.

Mr G Campbell: With the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP).

The Chairperson: With DWP.

The Committee Clerk: If the Committee is then of a mind of not being content to agree it rather than asking the Minister to go and review it, that is the approach.

The Chairperson: Are members content?

Members indicated assent.

Clauses 33 to 51 agreed to.

Clause 52 disagreed to.

Clause 53 agreed to.

Clause 54 disagreed to.

Clauses 55 to 68 agreed to.

Clause 69 disagreed to

Clauses 70 to 98 agreed to.

Clause 99 disagreed to.

Clauses 100 to 102 agreed to.

Clause 103 (Recovery of benefit payments)

The Chairperson: I want to draw members' attention to this clause because the recommendations paper states that the Committee was not content to agree it. There was a bit of discussion on this, and members talked about the de minimis level of £65. The Department gave us rising figures for the cost of increasing the de minimis figures. When we reflected on this, I am not entirely sure what the Committee was minded to do. I think that we were asking the Minister to consider it; I do not know that we were actually opposing the clause per se. So, I am not sure whether members want to agree the clause and ask the Minister to review it.

Ms P Bradley: I think that that was the general feeling.

The Chairperson: Are members content to agree the clause and to ask the Minister to look at the de minimis levels?

Mr Durkan: Is it similar to the other clause? If we agree it, can the Minister still look into it?

The Chairperson: This is not one of the clauses concerning the cautions; those are a little complex and interrelated. This clause is saying that a figure of £65 at the moment would be non-recoverable and that anything above that would be recoverable. We were given a list of statistics that showed what the difference might be in the cost for non-recovery to the Department if the rates were raised to £70, £75 or £80. I think that the bulk of the money that would not be captured would be in the £70 or £75 range. Is that not right, Martina?

Ms Martina Campbell (Department for Social Development): I think that that is right. I do not have the figures at the moment.

Mr Michael Pollock (Department for Social Development): Something like 22,000 incidences of overpayments were affected. I think that the figures in the table represented 22,000 multiplied by the difference between £65 and £75.

Ms M Campbell: We have agreed to look at the guidance again to give decision-makers a better flavour of when they would apply the de minimis level.

The Chairperson: So, are we content to agree the clause as drafted?

Mr Brady: Can I just check something, Martina? I suppose a lot of the smaller ones would maybe apply when somebody died or there was a delay in the reporting and that kind of thing.

Ms M Campbell: Yes, or if people did not get notification of their change in on time or something like that.

The Chairperson: Are members happy enough?

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, put and agreed to.

Clause 103 agreed to.

Clauses 104 to 108 agreed to.

Clauses 109 and 110 disagreed to.

Clauses 111 to 114 agreed to.

Clause 115 disagreed to.

Clauses 116 to 132 agreed to.

Clause 133 (Commencement)

The Chairperson: Are members content with clause 133?

Ms Jane Corderoy (Department for Social

Development): I just want to make the Committee aware that the Government amendment that we will table at Consideration Stage for the new discretionary social scheme will become clause 133. I think that the officials who are leading on that hope to have that amendment with you at some point this week so that you can look at the enabling clause before Consideration Stage.

The Chairperson: Are you saying that clause 132 will become clause 133?

Ms Corderoy: No. Clause 133 will become clause 134, and clause 134 will become clause 135. There will be a new clause 133, which will be the enabling clause for bringing forward the new discretionary social scheme.

The Clerk of Bills: That is fine. That is a new clause, so at the end of the clause-by-clause scrutiny, you may want to put the Question on that to the Committee.

The Chairperson: I just want to make sure that we get this right. So, clause 133 will become clause 134. Are members content with that? Are there are no objections to the numerical change?

Members indicated assent.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, put and agreed to.

Clause 133 agreed to.

Clause 134 (Short title)

The Chairperson: Clause 134, which is the short title, will now become clause 135. Are members content with that clause and with its numbering?

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, put and agreed to.

Clause 134 agreed to.

New Clause

The Chairperson: We will now discuss new clause 133. Do we have the wording for that?

Ms Corderoy: We do, but I do not know whether it has been cleared with the Minister yet. I think that is what we are waiting for.

The Chairperson: Can we take guidance on it?

Ms Corderoy: I know that the Committee may have heard from the departmental officials who are leading on the policy, and Leo McLaughlin and Brian Doherty from the agency may have been up to talk about the details. I think that it is out to public consultation at the moment. I can give you a general overview of it, if you are happy with that.

The Chairperson: You gave us an explanation, so it might just be that the best that we can do is acknowledge that the Department has indicated that it will bring forward a new clause 133, the purpose of which is as you articulated it a minute ago. Is that fair enough? I think that we are probably generally content with the explanation that we were given, so, subject to that, members are content.

Question, That the Committee is content with the new clause, put and agreed to.

New clause agreed to.

Schedules 1 to 12 agreed to.

The Committee Clerk: I just want to clarify two issues about some of the clauses. In his report, the Examiner of Statutory Rules recommended that the regulation-making powers under clause 33 and clause 91 should be subject to the confirmatory procedure. I know that, at the previous meeting, there was some discussion about how far those recommendations went along with the Department and the Office of the Legislative Counsel (OLC). So, I want to be sure that the Committee has made the right decision on recommending that, following the guidance of the Examiner of Statutory Rules, that would be the case.

The Clerk of Bills: Making clause 33 subject to the confirmatory procedure would require an amendment to clause 44, which was grouped with another two clauses. Making clause 91 subject to the confirmatory procedure would require an amendment to clause 93. If the Committee is of the view that it will be moving in that direction, you may want to revisit those two clauses to say that, "The Committee is content, subject to regulations — [Inaudible.] — amendment to come forward."

The Chairperson: Do you want to read that into the record? I think that that is what members agreed.

The Clerk of Bills: I think that you agreed clause 44 and clause 93.

The Chairperson: The Committee Clerk has reminded me that the Department has been in discussions with OLC, so you may have something further to add.

Ms M Campbell: Sorry; I have nothing more to report.

The Committee Clerk: It would be unusual for a Committee not to follow the guidance of the Examiner of Statutory Rules on recommendations on regulation-making powers. If we are thinking about amendments, it was my error; I should have pointed that out earlier. The issue is really whether the Committee is content for an amendment to clause 44 to be tabled.

The Chairperson: We have an amendment for regulation-making powers in clause 33, subject to the confirmatory procedure. If you remember, we had a discussion about recommendations from the Examiner of Statutory Rules about getting a higher level of accountability by the Assembly. This is really just to give effect to that and to accept the recommendations of the Examiner of Statutory Rules.

The Committee Clerk: The Examiner of Statutory Rules was — [Inaudible.] — and really the only points that he made were about how clause 33 and clause 44 should be subject to the confirmatory procedure. The Department indicated that it was in discussions with the OLC about that. If the Committee were to agree those clauses as drafted, it would not be following the advice of the Examiner of Statutory Rules. So, it is a case of proposing amendments to ensure that the advice of the Examiner of Statutory Rules is followed in respect of the confirmatory procedure.

The Chairperson: Can we just read that into the record?

The issue is how we procedurally formalise that.

The Clerk of Bills: Members may want to look at the report, which is in the papers.

The Chairperson: It involves only two clauses: clause 33 and clause 34.

The Clerk of Bills: Not 33 and 34.

The Committee Clerk: It relates to clause 33 and clause 91. It is a case of revisiting clause 44 and clause 92 and amending them in accordance with the recommendations of the Examiner of Statutory Rules. So, the amendment reads:

"Clause 44, page 21, line 25 At end insert c) regulations under clause 33"

Question put and agreed to.

The Committee Clerk: Similarly, the amendment to clause 93 reads:

"Clause 93, page 65, line 26 At end insert -(c) regulations under clause 91"

Those amendments are then following the Examiner's recommendations.

Question put and agreed to.

Mr Brady: Can I ask about the talk about the confirmatory and the affirmative procedures? Which will apply?

The Chairperson: It will make the provision subject to the confirmatory procedure?

On that basis, are members agreed?

Members indicated assent.

Long title agreed to.

The Chairperson: That concludes the formal clause-by-clause scrutiny. Michael, did you want to say something?

Mr Pollock: Just for our purposes, when we were going through the clause-by-clause scrutiny, I thought that clause 33 and clause 44 were agreed as drafted. Are we now saying that they are in the recommendations paper?

The Chairperson: We will revisit them because we had neglected to remind ourselves about the recommendations of the Examiner of Statutory Rules. If you remember, the Department is in discussions with OLC about that to resolve the issue. So, it is just about raising the level of accountability through the confirmatory procedure.

Mr Pollock: Is it the same for clause 93?

The Clerk of Bills: Can I just clarify that, to change the regulation-making power in clause 33, clause 44 has to be amended. So, clause 44 was revisited. To make the regulation-making power in clause 91 subject to the confirmatory procedure, clause 93 needs to be amended, so it was also revisited. So, this applies to clauses 44 and 93

The Chairperson: Are members happy with that? Thank you, Michael.

On that basis, we have concluded the formal clause-byclause scrutiny. The Committee will return on Thursday morning for our normal Committee business, after which we will recommence the final deliberations on the Welfare Reform Bill, when we will agree the full report.

Mr G Campbell: Just on a general point and going back to our discussion on the previous meeting, the recommendations paper had a series of issues arising from a number of clauses about which either the Minister was in discussions about variations or he was going to discuss them with Executive colleagues with a view to trying to get resources. I take it that the Committee is clear that, at some point in the Bill's progress, those questions will receive answers. We will then get the very clear picture both about what we would like and the response to that.

The Chairperson: As you know, we have made it very clear that this is the view that members here, who have had long deliberations on the Bill, have adopted and that it will not prejudice how members may have to vote, either because of parity or cost reasons or because they may have got an answer that satisfied them. Parties and their members and those from non-parties will consider all this in the round when the Bill reaches Consideration Stage.

I thank the departmental officials for being very helpful and patient with the Committee.

Ms M Campbell: You are very welcome.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Childcare Fund

Mr Weir asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) which organisations can bid for childcare funding from their Department; and (ii) to detail the process by which this funding is distributed.

(AQW 18680/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): The Executive allocated an additional £12 million across the current Comprehensive Spending Review period to support the development of the Childcare Strategy. Departments currently bid annually to the Childcare Fund, putting forward projects that will support the development of the Strategy. The bids are submitted to OFMDFM and we take the final decisions on which projects to support. It is the responsibility of individual departments to secure the relevant expenditure approvals, including business cases and evaluations

Review of Public Administration

Mr Weir asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister which departmental functions will be transferred to local government under the Review of Public Administration. (AQW 18866/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Executive is expected soon to confirm the functions which will transfer to Local Government under Local Government Reform

Child Poverty

Mr Copeland asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when a child poverty delivery plan will be published. (AQO 3236/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Child Poverty Act 2010 requires the Executive to publish a Child Poverty Strategy and to measure how actions it takes impact on the numbers of children living in poverty. The Act details four statutory measures against which progress has to be measured and reported on annually. The overall target is the eradication of child poverty in the UK by 2020.

To support the delivery of these targets, OFMDFM commissioned work by the National Children's Bureau to develop a Child Poverty Outcomes Model to help better understand the role of each department in addressing the issue of child poverty. We have also developed a number of signature projects as part of our Delivering Social Change programme that we announced in October 2012 which will contribute to the delivery of the Child Poverty Strategy.

We are pleased with the progress that has been made and look forward to further progress in line with our commitments in the Programme for Government. However, there are no plans to publish a stand-alone action plan. The next annual report on child poverty is scheduled to be laid before the Assembly in March 2013.

Shackleton Barracks

Mr Ó hOisín asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether there has been any investigation into the potential for sporting provision within the curtilage of the former Shackleton base, Ballykelly. (AQW 19049/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: OFMDFM has held discussions with local community organisations in Ballykelly who have an interest in using a vacant building on the former Shackleton Barracks site and also the possibility of using parts of the site for sports. Options are being considered on the future uses for the site including the location of the DARD Headquarters and how the site can deliver social and economic benefits for the local community.

In the meantime, the Shackleton Barracks site has been used for motor sports events in 2012 with further events planned and approved for 2013, which will bring visitors and competitors into the area.

Educational Underachievement

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the three year Queen's University Belfast research programme which examines the causes and differences in educational underachievement. (AQW 19054/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: This project entitled 'Understanding differential educational achievement within and between areas of multiple deprivation in NI – a case study approach' is being carried out by Professor Ruth Leitch, Professor Joanne Hughes, supported by Dr Ian Shuttleworth and Dr Michael Levers.

The project commenced in March 2012 and is currently on schedule and within budget.

The project has, to date, submitted one progress report and the second progress report is due in March 2013. To date (as per the first interim report) the research has conducted the following:

- Literature review to set the context for the research
- Quantitative analysis (secondary) to establish historical trends
- Development and design of baseline information in the target electoral wards.
- Establishment of key contacts and relationship building in each of the target wards
- Developed a data collection strategy and action plan for the next phase of research (Nov/Dec 2012 September 2013).

The findings are not scheduled to be published until the final project report which is due to be received in March 2015.

Childcare Fund

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) how much of the £12 million ring-fenced for the Childcare Fund has been spent by (a) each Department; and (ii) projects within each Department; (ii) to outline the rationale for funding each project and how it fits with the vision for a childcare strategy.

(AQW 19221/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: All departmental bids to the Executive Childcare Fund are assessed to ensure alignment with proposals for the development of the Childcare Strategy.

The overall aim of the Strategy will be to promote the availability of good quality, accessible, integrated and affordable childcare provision that is sustainable in the long-term. Working with key partners, we aim to:

- support the development of children and young people and enable children and young people from the most deprived backgrounds to avail of life opportunities;
- support increased parental participation in the workforce, thereby making a significant impact on the economy, families and communities; and
- support learning and development activity which will improve opportunities for employment.

In 2011/12, we allocated departments £322,000 from the Fund for spending in that year. These allocations are detailed below by department and project.

DHSSPS was allocated £250,000 to:

- (a) (i) expedite reducing the backlog in the registration and inspection of childminding and day care settings; and (ii) to implement revised procedures to mitigate future delays. Registration and inspection of facilities are essential to ensure the safety of children in childcare settings.
- (b) OFMDFM spent £20,000 to enable PlayBoard to provide additional grant funding to the South Armagh Childcare Consortium (SACC). This funding was necessary to enable SACC to continue its progress towards financial sustainability.
- (c) DCAL spent £52,000 enabling Northern Ireland Screen to increase from 68 to 338 the number of extended service schools benefiting from After School Film Clubs. After School Film Clubs target schools in areas of high social deprivation and provide support for parental participation in the workforce. They offer child-centred activity in a safe place, and promote positive social interaction and cultural awareness.

In 2012/13, we took decisions that would allow Childcare Fund expenditure of up to £4.5 million over the remaining years of the current Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR). Of this, £860,000 will be spent before the end of 2012/13. The £860,000 is detailed below by department and project.

- (a) DHSSPS will spend £220,000 to scope the childcare needs of vulnerable families. This information will enable childcare services to be tailored to respond to particular family needs.
- (b) DHSSPS will spend £150,000 to enhance provision for children with a disability, directly addressing the quality of childcare available for children with a disability.

(c) DE will spend £370,000 to provide additional support programmes for children aged 2-3 and their parents, particularly those who have expressed an interest in the Sure Start developmental programme for 2-3 year olds but have not received a place. Sure Start projects are based in the most disadvantaged areas; families in these areas will be able to benefit from any extension of the work of Sure Start.

(d) DCAL will spend £120,000 enabling Northern Ireland Screen to continue provision of After School Film Clubs to extended schools.

Children and Young People's Strategy

Mr McCallister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) whether the Children and Young People's Early Action paper replaces the Children and Young People's Strategy 'Our Children and Young People, 2006-16 Action Plans'; (ii) who has responsibility for delivering on the Children and Young People's Early Actions paper; (iii) how success will be measured; and (iv) given that the action plans detailed in the Ten Year Strategy for Children and Young People ended in 2011, whether further action plans will be developed to ensure the delivery of this ten year strategy. (AQW 19222/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Children and Young People's Strategy is being taken forward under the Delivering Social Change Framework.

The Delivering Social Change Framework allows us to move away from previous lengthy and disjointed action plans and enables us to identify the most pressing issues and co-ordinate and focus action to maximise impact.

The Children and Young Persons Early Action Paper identifies the key priorities for children and families and focuses efforts and resources on a joined up approach to tackling poverty and improving the lives and experiences of our children and young people.

Actions arising from the Early Actions Paper will be assigned to a lead department which will be responsible for overseeing delivery as well as evaluating effectiveness.

The delivery of the six Signature Programmes, which we announced on 10 October 2012 and which included proposed work around Family Support Hubs, Children's Nurture Units and Parenting Support Programmes, is the first tangible outworking of this approach.

Further actions will be identified taking account of the Early Actions Paper and the detail of the Children and Young People's Ten Year Strategy. The format in which these will be presented is under consideration.

Childcare Strategy

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when the Childcare Strategy will be published for public consultation. (AQW 19273/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Public consultation on the Childcare Strategy opened on 5 December 2012. The closing date for consultation responses is 5 March 2013.

Childcare Strategy

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when the Childcare Strategy will be completed and implemented. (AQW 19274/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Public consultation on the Childcare Strategy is currently underway and will conclude on 5 March 2013. The final Strategy will be published as soon as possible after that date. All comments and views received during consultation, and the findings of research being carried out in parallel, will be considered to inform the detail of the Strategy, including the timescale for its implementation.

Childcare Strategy

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what weight will be given to the public consultation events due to take place on the Childcare Strategy, given that the business case for the final strategy is already being undertaken by consultants.

(AQW 19275/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Childcare Strategy is still in development and public consultation is an integral part of that development process. The comments and submissions received during the current consultation will inform and shape the final Strategy.

In parallel to the consultation exercise, research is currently underway to examine factors relevant to childcare such as need, cost and capacity. The research will identify potential options for intervention and, ultimately, produce a business case for the preferred option. The researchers are engaging directly with childcare stakeholders and will take full account of the comments and submissions received during consultation.

Children and Young People's Strategy

Mrs Overend asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) how Social Investment Fund groups will work with the Children and Young People's Strategic Partnership (CYPSP) to ensure that the evidenced based need, which was established by the CYPSP, is not duplicated; (ii) how these groups will be monitored; and (iii) how these groups will deliver for children and young people.

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness:

- (i) Initial steering groups, some of which include representatives from the children and young people's sector, have been actively engaging the wider community in the identification of evidenced based, objective needs over the past four months. This has included active engagement with organisations which are represented on the Children and Young People's Strategic Partnership (CYPSP) to scope existing priorities and interventions to inform final proposed projects and identify how the Social Investment Fund (SIF) can add value, enhance provision and maximise the impact for local communities in relation to priority issues.
- (ii) An OFMDFM development officer has been allocated to each zone to support steering groups in the development of the area plans and to monitor delivery of approved projects on the ground. Steering groups will be expected to report progress on a regular basis via monitoring reports.
- (iii) Where issues affecting children and young people are identified as a priority for the zone, in consultation with the wider community, relevant interventions should be included in the final plan for delivery in targeted communities across the zones. Indeed, we would expect to see projects targeted at children and young people given the strategic objectives and their focus on tackling educational underachievement, addressing poor mental and physical health and supporting young parents and children and young people at risk.

Social Protection Fund

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the Social Protection Fund. (AQW 19590/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Social Protection Fund was designed to help individuals and families facing hardship due to the ongoing economic downturn.

Last year, some £22 million was distributed by the Department for Social Development and the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety as Winter Fuel Payments for benefit recipients and cancer patients.

However, no funding was explicitly allocated to the Social Protection Fund over the remaining three years of the budget period, rather a commitment to make money available if or when required.

Following further policy development, we now have one consolidated and integrated 'Delivering Social Change Fund' which will afford us the opportunity to respond quickly, and in a flexible manner, to urgent social needs as they arise and address the specific needs of some of our most vulnerable individuals and families. The initial consolidated fund has £92 million over this spending review period.

Economy

Mr McQuillan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on how they are progressing towards rebalancing the Economy.

(AQO 3355/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The devolution of Corporation Tax is one of the key measures that will help towards rebalancing the economy.

The final report of the findings of the Joint Ministerial Working Group was sent to the Prime Minister for his consideration in November.

The Prime Minister wrote to us on 9 January to confirm he will meet us in London to hear our views on Corporation Tax devolution in detail and his office would work with ours to identify a suitable date. We continue to press for this meeting to take place as soon as possible.

In March 2012, the Executive launched their Economic Strategy which set out a long-term vision to rebalance the Economy to 2030

Less than one year on, Departments across the Executive are making significant progress in implementing their Economic Strategy commitments, activity which will, in the longer term, improve the competitiveness of the local economy and deliver higher levels of sustainable growth and employment.

The Executive Sub-Committee on the Economy is monitoring progress and will produce an annual report in June which will detail the extent to which these commitments are being delivered and an assessment of the wider health of the Economy.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Rural Watercourses

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what steps her Department has taken to improve the drainage of agricultural land over the past year.

(AQW 19007/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): The Drainage (NI) order 1973 grants permissive power to Rivers Agency to conduct maintenance on rural watercourses that have been designated for upkeep at public expense. The Rivers Agency operates an ongoing inspection and maintenance regime for rural watercourses based on a 6 year cycle and during the financial year 2011/2012 the Rivers Agency inspected and maintained some 1,200 kilometres of rural watercourses throughout the province.

Food Production

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what impact waterlogging and high rainfall levels have had on food production in the past year, and which crops have been affected.

(AQW 19008/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The high rainfalls throughout 2012 have had a significant effect on all crops. My technical teams at CAFRE have indicated the reduction in production compared to average is:

Стор	Estimated Reduction in yield
Potatoes	19%
Barley	13%
Wheat	23%
Oats	21%
Grass	10%
Forage Maize	35%
Bramley apples	35 -40%
Carrots	20%
Parsnips	10%
Turnips	25%
Leeks	10%
Scallions	No change
Cabbages	20%
Cauliflowers	50%
Broccoli	40%
Brussels Sprouts	30%

Both grass and forage maize are converted into food through animals producing milk and red meat. Farmers have compensated for reduced quantity and quality of forage by feeding more concentrates and, as a result production of milk and meat has not fallen commensurately.

Soil Improvement

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what provisions and systems exist within her Department to encourage land and soil quality improvement.

(AQW 19009/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department published advice on managing farmland soils in the Code of Good Agricultural Practice for the Prevention of Pollution of Soil. This Code sets out practical advice for farmers to maintain and improve soil quality and fertility and avoid pollution of soil.

All farmers in receipt of direct agricultural support payments must meet the cross-compliance requirements. One element of these requirements is the need to keep land in Good Agricultural and Environment Condition (GAEC). GAEC 1, Soil Management, and GAEC 2, Supplementary Feeding, are specifically designed to protect soil. Failure to adhere to these requirements could lead to penalties being applied.

 DARD further encourages farmers to manage their land for environmental enhancement through their participation in agri-environment schemes. These voluntary schemes provide funding in return for undertaking sustainable farming practices which include measures aimed at improving soil quality.

- Development Advisers and Technologists at my Department's College, CAFRE, provide advice for farmers on land and soil quality improvements through press articles, awareness events and training courses. Training covers the topics of soil structure, nutrition, compaction and drainage. In the last 4 years CAFRE has delivered 161 courses on Nutrient Management to which 878 farmers have attended.
- Development Advisers also assist farmers with the interpretation of soil analysis and facilitate the processing of samples through laboratories. CAFRE has also developed and a suite of online calculators to help farmers work the amount of fertiliser they can apply to comply with legislative requirements.
- Financial support is available to farmers through the Farm Modernisation Programme. The list of items eligible for grant aid include equipment used for improving land and soil quality, for example: sub-soiler, soil aerator, rush control mulcher, soil pH meter, soil nitrogen meter and soil sampling kit.
- In addition financial support is also available through DARD's Manure Efficiency Technology Scheme (METS). This provides capital grant support to help farmers to invest in advanced slurry spreading systems. This specialised equipment enables farmers to maximise efficient use of the nutrients contained in slurry/manures to improve soil fertility and reduce chemical fertiliser costs. The equipment also delivers a range of other productive and environmental benefits, including increased flexibility in timing of slurry spreading and reduced odour.

Rural Development Programme: Solar Energy

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the requirements solar energy applications are required to meet in order to receive funding under the Rural Development Programme, in each Local Action Group area. (AQW 19011/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Axis 3 of the Rural Development Programme grant assistance may be provided for standalone renewable initiatives including the installation of Photovoltaic panels, hydro and wind or for projects where renewable energy technology is planned as part of the larger project. None of the energy produced may be used to reduce farm business or farm home domestic running costs ie 100% must be exported to the grid. This is a European Commission requirement.

Private promoters which include farmers and farm family members and rural micro businesses (less than10 employees) may be offered financial assistance at a rate of up to 50% of eligible costs up a maximum grant amount of £50,000. Social Economy Enterprises and Community Groups seeking to introduce renewable technologies can be funded at a rate of 75% of eligible costs up to a maximum grant amount of £170,000 depending on the measure applied to. A feasibility study is a Programme requirement and as an eligible cost may be supported through technical assistance at similar grant rates up to a maximum grant amount of £5,000.

Detailed guidance for renewable energy projects can be found at Appendix 25 of the Axis 3 Operating Rules on the DARD website at http://www.dardni.gov.uk/index/publications/pubs-dard-grants-and-funding/publications-grants-and-funding-axis-3-operating-rules.htm

Waterways: Jurisdiction

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, which Department's regulations, legislation or guidance takes precedence when waters that are within the remit of the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure lie within the Loughs Agency's jurisdiction.

(AQW 19016/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Where DCAL waters lie within the Loughs Agency areas DCAL shall determine fishery specific regulations. These are given legal effect in the Loughs Agency jurisdictions by legislation made by Loughs Agency in consultation with and on behalf of DCAL. Guidance is provided by both bodies. The principle applying is that a fishery owner may wish to see more specific or more stringent regulations than apply in general legislation or byelaws. Those fishery specific regulations cannot be less stringent than the general legislation.

DARD: Headquarters

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether discussions have commenced with trade union representatives regarding the departmental headquarters moving to Ballykelly or to detail when they are likely to begin. (AQW 19067/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: A departmental level committee was established in October 2011 to facilitate consultation with trade union representatives specifically regarding the departmental headquarters relocation programme. This is a formal committee established within the departmental Whitley arrangements which is the recognised consultation mechanism within the NI Civil Service.

There have been 5 meetings of this committee since I announced that Ballykelly was the preferred site. As the work on the business case is well under way the committee now meets on a monthly basis.

Other formal and informal discussions are held outside of these meetings to keep staff representatives apprised of developments and where practical issues require it. NIPSA have been invited to participate in the pre-consultation exercise being undertaken as part of the EQIA work and have contributed to the design of the staff survey on relocation.

The issues around the relocation of the DARD Headquarters to Ballykelly have also been subject to consultation at Central Whitley level.

Woodland

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many hectares of land are covered by woodland in (i) North Down; and (ii) Northern Ireland.

(AQW 19174/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i) There are approximately 950 hectares of woodland within the North Down Borough Council area.
- (ii) Woodland cover in the north of Ireland is estimated to be 105,771 hectares.

Ash Dieback Disease

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 18218/11-15, how many hectares of trees will need to be replanted as a result of Ash Dieback disease.

(AQW 19175/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Approximately 11 hectares of ash within Woodland Grant Scheme will require to be replanted to remain eligible for future Woodland Grant Scheme payments.

Animal Cruelty

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what sanctions can be imposed on people who are prosecuted for animal cruelty.

Mrs O'Neill: The welfare of animals here is protected by the Welfare of Animals Act 2011. The 2011 Act recognises that causing unnecessary suffering to any animal is a very serious offence and the new stiffer penalties contained within the Act reflect this. The powers in the 2011 Act cover not just offences of unnecessary suffering, but also a wide range of other offences such as failing to provide for the welfare needs of the animal. The maximum penalties for animal welfare offences are 6 months imprisonment and/or a fine of £5,000 on summary conviction (Magistrate's Court); and 2 years imprisonment and/or an unlimited fine on conviction by indictment (High Court with jury).

In addition, the Court can deprive a person convicted of a serious animal welfare offence of ownership of the animal to which the offence related, should they be the owner. The Court can also disqualify a person, convicted of a serious animal welfare offence, for such a period as it sees fit, from owning, keeping, participating in the keeping, control or influencing the way an animal is kept. Such disqualification also stops a person from dealing in animals and from transporting, or arranging the transport, of animals. This disqualification could be for life, even for a first offence, and can be imposed in relation to animals generally, or to one or more species of animal. If the Court decides not to make an order to disqualify the person for cases brought forward under the 2011 Act, the Court must state its reason.

As the powers of disqualification in the 2011 Act are very extensive and cover not just ownership, but also the keeping or influencing the keeping of animals, the 2011 Act provisions prevent a person banned from keeping animals from simply transferring them to another family member. Where any person subsequently breaches a Court disqualification order, an offence will have been committed and that person would become liable to the penalties outlined above.

DARD: Special Adviser

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development (i) whether her Special Adviser has made any declarations of interest, pursuant to the obligation on civil servants; (ii) how such declarations are recorded; and (iii) whether they are open to public inspection.

(AQW 19248/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i) The Special Adviser has not made a declaration of interest.
- (ii) The NICS HR Handbook sets out at section 6.01 the Standards of Conduct to which all Civil Servants must adhere. In respect of conflict of interest it states "where a conflict of interest arises, you must declare the interest to your Establishment/Personnel Division so that a decision can be made on the best way to proceed".
- (iii) Not applicable (see response to (i) above).

Drainage Council

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how much the Drainage Council has awarded in grants in each of the last five years.

(AQW 19260/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Drainage Council is constituted in line with the requirements of the Drainage (NI) Order 1973, and its status is that of an advisory non departmental public body which has no staff, budget or responsibility for the awarding of any grants. The primary function of the Drainage Council is in producing determinations on what watercourses are to be designated for maintenance and upkeep at public expense.

Meat Labelling and Traceability

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development (i) who is responsible for investigating issues related to meat packaging and queries regarding labelling and traceability; (ii) when are her Department, the Food Standards Agency and Environmental Health informed of such investigations; (iii) what is a reasonable time scale for investigating such issues; and (iv) in addition to the recent case in at Freeza Meats, Newry, how many other investigations are taking place regarding labelling and traceability.

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i). The Food Standards Agency NI (FSA) is responsible for investigating issues related to meat packaging, and queries regarding labelling and traceability. The investigations are carried out by enforcement officers appointed by District Councils who carry out food safety and standards inspections in accordance with a Framework Agreement between the Councils and the FSA. Officers inspect food businesses in accordance with the Food Safety Code of Practice and Practice Guidance. Premises are inspected on a risk assessed basis.
  - DARD is responsible for enforcing the Beef Labelling legislation in abattoirs and approved cutting plants, which provides customers with assurance about the origin of beef at meat processors. District Councils enforce Beef Labelling legislation at retail level and cold stores on behalf of DARD, along with general food labelling regulations on processed meat products.
  - DARD is also responsible for meat hygiene official controls in approved slaughterhouses, cutting plants and game handling establishments on behalf of the FSA.
- (ii). If as a result of routine investigations the enforcement officers of the District Council identify a potential food safety incident, they are obliged to inform the Food Standards Agency in accordance with the FSA Incidents Response Protocol as soon as possible. An incident is defined as any event, where based on the information available, there are concerns about actual or suspected threats to the safety or quality of food and/or feed that could require intervention to protect consumer interests.
  - In regard to 'Beef Labelling' legislation, the principal responsibility for compliance rests with Food Business Operators. DARD undertakes a programme of risk based inspections in abattoirs and approved cutting plants and any non-compliances observed during these inspections are followed-up, and appropriate action taken as soon as possible.
- (iii). Incidents are classified as either high, medium or low based on a classification matrix set out in the protocol. All incidents are immediately acted upon by FSA and details cascaded to those required to investigate further. Timescale in relation to investigation of an incident is dependent on complexity and scale of the issue. An incident investigation will not be closed until the FSA is satisfied that all necessary action has been taken to protect consumer interests.
- (iv). There are currently no other investigations taking place regarding labelling and traceability.

Horse Passport System

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in light of reports that 70,000 horses are unaccounted for, what confidence can the public have in her Department's horse passport system.

(AQW 19732/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) has no knowledge of the quoted figure of 70,000 unaccounted for horses but understands that the USPCA has now clarified that the 70,000 animals referred to in its statement covered a 5 year period on the island of Ireland. There are 35,615 horses registered to owners in the north of Ireland and at least 183,000 in the south. Assuming the USPCA figures can be extrapolated on the basis of the relative horse populations north & south, the number of horses alleged to be unaccounted for in the north of Ireland in any one year is therefore around 2,000.

The Horse Passport Regulations (NI) 2010, which are primarily to protect the human food chain, state that owners must obtain a passport for all horses. These regulations, on the identification of equidae, implement Commission Regulation (EC) No. 504/2008 in the north of Ireland. DARD enforces these Regulations at point of slaughter and at import / export at ports in the north of Ireland and will continue to keep these safeguards under review and make improvements as they present themselves.

Farm Safety

Mr McDevitt asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in light of the recent inquest into the deaths of the Spence family members, what action her Department is taking, in conjunction with the Health and Safety Executive, to raise awareness of farm safety issues in regard to slurry and slurry pits.

(AQO 3391/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department has joined with the Health & Safety Executive NI, the Ulster Farmers' Union, NI Agricultural Producers Association, National Farmers Union Mutual, and the Young Farmers Clubs for Ulster to form the Farm Safety Partnership, the aim of which is to reduce and, ultimately, eradicate all work related fatalities on farms.

The Partnership has recently launched a comprehensive Action Plan which will deliver on 4 Key areas:-

- Provision of Information and Promotion of Safe Working;
- Health and Safety Training;
- Motivating Good Practice and Discouraging Poor Practice; and
- Collection and Analysis of Information.

For its part the Health & Safety Executive NI has produced a new guidance leaflet for farmers on safe slurry handling. Over 10,000 leaflets have already been distributed to the farming community either directly by HSENI staff or partner organisations such as the UFU, NIAPA, and Young Famer's Clubs.

HSENI also has an ongoing programme of inspections across the north, which is designed to offer farmers advice and guidance on safe work practices including the safe handling of slurry. Over 1,000 farms having been visited since November last year. In addition to this HSENI staff has delivered numerous farm safety talks to farmers groups over recent months.

My Department plays its part in delivering the farm safe message in a number of ways.

Through locally based CAFRE Development Advisers information is distributed to farmers attending training events and workshops across the north. Currently the information being distributed is focussed on slurry mixing, including the dangers from gases, and safe use of machinery when mixing and spreading.

Also my Department is currently rolling out the FarmSafe Awareness course to 3,000 farmers across the north. The FarmSafe course covers the four key risk areas on the farms:-

- Tractors and Machinery;
- Livestock;
- Falls from Height; and
- Slurry.

The section of the course, dedicated to the management of slurry, covers its safe management in detail. This message is reinforced during the farm walk which includes examples of good, safe working practice in relation to the management of slurry.

Mountain Biking

Mr G Kelly asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the assistance she has given to mountain biking in the Forest Service estate.

(AQO 3392/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: This spring will see the opening of a further 66 kilometres of mountain biking trails on forestry land, developed and delivered in partnership with Newry and Mourne, Down, and Cookstown District Councils, and Outdoor Recreation NI, and paid for in large part by EU funding from the Tourist Board, the Sports Council and my own Department's Rural Development Division. This is in addition to the 34 kilometres already open and developed in partnership with the National Trust at Castleward.

This is a major achievement by the partners. The designs were complex, and took full account of the need to work and maintain the forests and protect them from erosion by excessive and inappropriate use; they were difficult to construct as, by definition, the trails are narrow and inaccessible, and I pay tribute to the contractors who are carrying out the work so that they are built to specification and will be delivered in time to support the World Police and Fire Games. And I especially want to recognise the commitment by local government to support their recreation and tourism objectives, as they will become the operating partner looking after the trails for many years to come.

I hope the Member will try the trails for himself!

Rose Energy

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the impact on the poultry industry following the rejection of the planning application for the Rose Energy project.

(AQO 3393/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The broiler poultry sector is a key part of our agri-food industry and an important contributor to the local economy. A by product of the sector is poultry litter and around 260,000 tonnes of it are produced each year. The management and utilisation of poultry litter is an issue which cuts across the responsibilities of a number of government departments.

Traditionally, the local poultry industry has relied on spreading poultry litter on agricultural land as an organic fertiliser as its primary method for management. However, such practices are no longer sustainable at current levels. In short, there is not sufficient land available to use the nutrients in all the poultry litter that is produced here. In addition, there are regulatory obligations on the industry arising from the EU Nitrates, Water Framework and IPPC Directives to prevent pollution which must be met. Therefore, alternatives to land spreading are needed.

If long term sustainable solutions are not found, it has the potential to constrain the industry, both in terms of production and in supply of raw material to the processing sector.

I have been concerned about the lack of progress with alternative solutions for surplus poultry litter. Even if the Rose Energy planning application had been approved a legal challenge from objectors was highly likely. There would have been a further delay and no certainty that the project would ever proceed.

Therefore, over a year before the decision on the Rose Energy Planning application, I commissioned a review of poultry litter management options by my Department and the Agri-food & Biosciences Institute (AFBI). The review was published in April 2012

The review highlighted that emerging technologies have developed in recent years and have potential. This is why, in December 2012, I together with the Minister of Enterprise Trade and Investment, launched the Small Business Research Initiative (SBRI) competition to explore the potential for these emerging technologies.

Phase 1 is the technical and commercial feasibility stage of the SBRI competition and contracts will be awarded, to those selected, in May 2013 for completion within 6 months. If Phase 1 identifies viable proposals for a Phase 2 to develop and evaluate prototypes, Phase 2 will commence in autumn 2013. There has been significant interest in the SBRI so far. By 4 February, 77 organisations had registered for the competition and applications close on 20 February.

Given the importance of finding a sustainable solution for poultry litter, I strongly believe that our poultry industry needs a sound evidence base to inform its future decisions. The outcomes from the SBRI competition will provide this.

Although the Rose Energy planning application has been refused, we already have a structured and managed process underway to progress alternatives through the SBRI.

Childcare Provision: Rural Areas

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she has any plans to address the lack of childcare provision in rural areas.

(AQO 3394/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As you know DARD does not hold primary responsibility for Childcare service provision. However between 2009 and 2011, as part of our wider poverty and social inclusion work, the Department developed and implemented the Rural Childcare Programme. This was an innovative pilot programme which aimed to enhance the rural evidence base for the development of future policy and priorities in the area of rural childcare provision.

A composite evaluation of the programme was subsequently provided to OFMDFM to help influence the development of the new Childcare Strategy for the north. OFMDFM is taking the lead role in developing and co-ordinating the Strategy, working in partnership with other Government Departments which have lead responsibility for key policies relevant to childcare.

OFMDFM launched their 'Towards a Childcare Strategy' for consultation in December 2012. The consultation period closes on 5 March and I will continue to press for the need for the Strategy to take account of the very specific circumstances of rural areas.

I also want to look again at the achievements from our pilot programme and to give further consideration as to what more needs to be done in rural areas.

Badger Setts

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the timescale for the preliminary badger sett survey in the Banbridge/Rathfriland area.

(AQO 3396/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As I announced at the Assembly Agriculture and Rural Development Committee on Tuesday 29 January 2013, the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute (AFBI) have been commissioned to commence a badger sett survey in a 100km2 area between Banbridge and Rathfriland in County Down as soon as permissions from local farmers are obtained.

This badger sett survey is the next important step to help inform the design of the proposed "test and vaccinate or remove (TVR)" wildlife intervention research. The TVR approach would involve testing live badgers; vaccinating and releasing the test negative badgers; and removing the test positive ones. This wildlife intervention research would focus on removing diseased badgers and protecting uninfected ones. This balanced approach, which enjoys broad spectrum support from stakeholders, would avoid removal of uninfected badgers and it is hoped will lead to a reduction of TB levels in the badger population in the study area with a reduced capacity to transmit TB to other badgers and to cattle.

Badger sett surveying must be taken forward before foliage cover makes identifying the location of badger setts difficult. That is why it is being taken forward as a priority at this time. On 31 January 2013, my Department's Chief Veterinary Officer wrote to some 600 farmers in the 100km2 area between Banbridge and Rathfriland to ask them to give permission for AFBI staff to conduct a badger sett survey on their farm.

I am pleased that permission slips are already being returned. As a high level of farmer participation is absolutely vital to the badger sett survey, I would therefore encourage everyone who has received a letter from the Chief Veterinary Officer to return their permission slip in the pre-paid envelope provided as soon as possible.

Rural Watercourses

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what action her Department is taking to address the problem of waterlogged agricultural land.

(AQO 3397/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Drainage (NI) order 1973 grants permissive power to Rivers Agency to conduct maintenance on rural watercourses that have been designated for upkeep at public expense. The Rivers Agency operates an ongoing inspection and maintenance regime for rural watercourses based on a 6 year cycle and during the financial year 2011/2012 the Rivers Agency inspected and maintained some 1,200 kilometres of rural watercourses throughout the province.

DARD: Headquarters

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the scores achieved against the defined set of criteria by the 23 local government districts for the relocation of her Department's headquarters. (AQO 3398/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The process for identifying appropriate locations for my new headquarters was done in two stages – the first stage identified the 23 local government districts highlighted in the Spatial Framework of the Regional Development Strategy. These 23 areas were then scored against a set of 9 bespoke criteria. The scores for each of the 23 locations are as follows:-

Department of Education

Education and Skills Authority

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education how the interests of the voluntary grammar sector will be represented on the Education and Skills Authority.

(AQW 18939/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): The provisions in the Education Bill that provide for the membership of the Board of ESA reflect the Heads of Agreement published by the First Minister and deputy First Minister, and were also agreed by the Executive. Those provisions preserve the established role of the Transferors and Trustees in membership of the administrations arrangement for education. No other sector has such rights at present and none are proposed for the Bill. There will also be four members appointed from the community

Education Support Services

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education what form of mapping exercise will be put in place to ensure that all children in urban areas receive equal opportunities to support services.

(AQW 19037/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Support services in the form of Sure Start are not restricted to urban areas. Mapping exercises are not required as Sure Start is a targeted service which has a specific geographical remit. The current coverage is at least the top 20% most disadvantaged wards and Super Output Areas in the north of Ireland, currently as defined by the Noble indicators MDM 2010. All children aged 0-4 and their families within the catchment area of each Sure Start can access services, as provision is universal within the targeted areas.

Services for children in need of support are not restricted to urban areas. The Department enables a range of programmes and services to be delivered to ensure that all disadvantaged children receive appropriate support, such as Free School Meals, Uniform Grants, and the Targeting Social Need element of the Schools' Budget, Full Service and Extended Schools. The focus of these interventions is on improving lives and longer term opportunities for children who may experience barriers to learning because of disadvantage.

Education and Skills Authority

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Education what representation the Integrated sector will have on the board of the Education and Skills Authority.

(AQW 19128/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The provisions in the Education Bill that provide for the membership of the Board of ESA reflect the Heads of Agreement published by the First Minister and deputy First Minister, and were also agreed by the Executive. Those provisions preserve the established role of the Transferors and Trustees in membership of the administrations arrangement for education. No other sector has such rights at present and none are proposed for the Bill. There will also be four members appointed from the community.

Education: Professional Qualification for Headship Programme

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how many Principals hold a Professional Qualification for Headship, broken down by (i) type; and (ii) sector.

Mr O'Dowd:

1 Professional Qualification for Headship, Northern Ireland, PQH (NI) is a programme intended to provide training prior to appointment to a post as a school principal and has been in operation since 2000. However it is not a mandatory qualification. The first PQH(NI) graduates were in 2001. The tables below set out the information requested.

Special Educational Needs

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education, in relation to the Pre-School Pilot project A in 2011, to detail (i) the criteria used to decide which children took part in the pilot; and (ii) whether any children suggested for the pilot were later denied participation.

(AQW 19196/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Special Educational Needs (SEN) pilot in early years' settings provides additional supports to some Department of Education-funded statutory and non-statutory providers for children in their immediate pre-school year. As a pilot not all settings or children will have access to the pilot supports. Where a setting is not part of the pilot any SEN child who requires access to Education and Library Board (ELB) services will be managed through the normal arrangements. An independent evaluation of the pilot will inform the development of an appropriate model of future supports from both early years' settings and ELBs.

(i) Within the parameters of the pilot, each ELB implemented a model, based on their professional judgement of greatest need in their area. Settings, rather than children, were identified by ELBs to participate in the pilot. The models developed differ across the ELBs with some focusing on particular types of SEN such as: Autism Spectrum Disorders (ASD); Speech, Language and Communication Needs (SLCN); or Social, Emotional and Behavioural Difficulties (SEBD).

Once within a pilot, it will be the setting that identifies children requiring pilot supports, with parental consent as appropriate. The criteria used by each ELB to identify settings were as follows:

ELB	Criteria used by ELB to identify pilot settings
NEELB	All pre-school settings were ranked in order of social deprivation using the NI Multiple Deprivation Measure 2010
	60 settings with the highest ranks were offered the opportunity to participate in the pilot
	32 settings chose to participate in the pilot

ELB	Criteria used by ELB to identify pilot settings
BELB	Pre-school settings:
	Expression of interest
	Number of referrals for ASD, SLCN and SEBD over the previous 3 years
	Setting not involved in many other initiatives
	All education sectors to be represented
	All parts of the city to be represented
	Playgroups:
	Numbers of children attending
	Social deprivation
	Geographical spread
SELB/WELB	Offered to 20 SLCN and 20 SEBD settings in each ELB; 80 pre-schools classes in total.
	Statistical analysis of data on SEN and social need was accessed from the Department of Education.
	Consultation with Southern and Western Health and Social Care Trusts to identify areas of need.
	Consultation with the Early Years Organisation to identify specific areas that would benefit from participation.
	The SELB/WELB Early Years Steering Group, on the basis of the information gathered, made the decision to target specific areas for the pilot, including geographical clustering.
SEELB	The SEELB pilots relate to ASD and SEBD.
	In school year 2011/12 the pilots supported all nurseries and funded playgroups.
	This model was re-aligned in school year 2012/13 to provide focused support to 44 pre-school settings.
	All those settings which had received individual support for pupils during 2011/12 year were offered a place in 2012/13. (2 settings declined.)
	Social Deprivation index was obtained for all SEELB Nursery Schools, Nursery Units and PEAG Playgroups.
	SEELB Pre-school settings were categorised according to their geographical area and whether they were urban or rural.
	All SEELB Nursery Schools, Nursery Units and Playgroups were categorised as Controlled, Maintained, Integrated, Reception Class or Irish Medium.
	Considered which categories the Pre-school Settings that received support for individual pupils in 2011/12 fell into (i.e. Social Deprivation, geographical area, urban/rural, Controlled, Maintained, Integrated, Irish Medium.) Gaps in each of these categories were identified.
	Nursery Schools, Nursery Units and PEAG playgroups, which had only attended training provided by the Project during 2011/12 and also fell within the "gap" categories were identified and offered a place in 2012/13. Most accepted.
	A very small number of settings, which had not engaged in the Project during 2011/12 were offered a place for 2012/13 in order to fill all categories and ensure that the SEELB target settings were representative of the range of pre-school settings within the Board.

(ii) In response to the second part of the question, the ELBs have advised as follows:

ELB	Whether any children were denied participation
NEELB	All pupils with SEN enrolled in the pilot settings may benefit from participation. There are no exclusions
BELB	No children appropriately referred within the scope of pilot have been denied participation.
SELB/WELB	The SELB and WELB are not aware of any pupil who has been excluded from participation where settings are still part of the pilot.

ELB	Whether any children were denied participation
SEELB	Under the pilot in 2011/12 only those children whose difficulties related to areas of need covered by the pilots (ASD or SEBD) were supported through the pilots.
	Under the school year 2012/13 procedures, the SEELB is not aware of any children suggested for focused support who have been denied participation.

Education Support Services

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail the findings of the Performance and Efficiency Delivery Unit review into the regionalisation of support services.

(AQW 19207/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Performance and Efficiency Delivery Unit carried out an initial report examining the scope for operational efficiencies in a range of education services and two more detailed reports examining the scope for cost reduction in home to school transport and school catering services.

A key finding of all three reports was that there was often variation in practice and in costs across the Education & Library Boards. A central theme of the reports was the scope to improve value for money by operating services on a more consistent basis, learning from and applying good practice that already exists within some ELBs and best practice from elsewhere.

The establishment of ESA will require the design and delivery of support services that operate consistently across all parts of the north. This provides an early opportunity to address unnecessary variations in practice and to apply learning and best practice in line with the recommendations of PEDU. That work is now being taken forward.

Education and Skills Authority

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the projected job losses following the establishment of the Education and Skills Authority; and (ii) the projected final staffing levels of the Authority. (AQW 19208/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Implementation of the new ESA structure will be carried out in a managed way and is likely to take several years to complete. When implementation is complete it is expected that ESA will have fewer staff than are currently employed in the organisations it will subsume, particularly at senior and middle management levels. This work is being developed by the Full Business Case for ESA which shall be completed shortly.

Donacloney Primary School

Mr Moutray asked the Minister of Education when he will make a decision in relation to the proposed expansion of Donacloney Primary School from eight classes to nine.

(AQW 19289/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Development Proposal (DP) No'279, which proposes an increase in the size of Donacloney Primary Schools from eight class bases to nine class bases, was published by the Southern Education and Library Board (SELB) on 15 October 2012. Once a DP is published, a statutory 2-month consultation period then ensues, during which anyone who wishes to express an opinion may do so directly to DE. At the end of the 2-month period I make a decision on the proposal taking account of all the pertinent issues and the comments received.

I note that the consultation period for DP No'279 ended on 15 December 2012. DE officials have, however, been working with the SELB to clarify a number of issues but unfortunately, some of these remain unresolved.

The Board has therefore been asked for further comment as a matter of urgency and a response is expected shortly. Subject to the outstanding issues being resolved satisfactorily, officials will then finalise the recommendation and submit to me for my consideration. I expect therefore to be in a position to take a decision in respect of DP No'279 in the very near future.

Schools: Shared Principal

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail which schools have a shared Principal. (AQW 19315/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: St Therese Nursery School, Belfast has a shared Principal.

Schools: Admission Criteria

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Education to outline the power, statutory or otherwise, under which his Department, or any Education and Library Board, can remove a school's right to set its own entrance criteria, including the right to select on the basis of academic merit if it so chooses.

(AQW 19316/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The admissions criteria used by any school are a matter for the Board of Governors. The Board of Governors of every school has a statutory duty to set admissions criteria capable of distinguishing between applicants down to the last available place.

If a school attempts to publish criteria that are not capable of distinguishing between applicants down to the last available place, and it has not been possible to resolve the matter through any other means, the Department has the power to direct the school to change its criteria in a manner that will enable the school to meet this statutory duty.

Killowen and Millburn Primary Schools

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education when Killowen Primary and Millburn Primary Schools in Coleraine will be included on any future Capital Build Programme.

(AQW 19345/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am aware that Killowen and Milburn Primary Schools will be disappointed not to be included in my recent capital investment announcement.

The projects I announced on 22 January were determined as priorities by the relevant Managing Authority and as certain to perform part of area solutions for the future schools estate.

While the recent announcement I have made in no way implies that other schools, including Killowen and Millburn Primary Schools, will not be considered at a later stage, I will only announce capital projects which I believe can be delivered within a reasonable timeframe.

Moving forward I will work with the Managing Authorities to identify priority projects emerging from area plans.

Reading Recovery Programme

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Education how Reading Recovery Tutors, who were trained by the Reading Recovery National Network, are utilised to disseminate good practice in primary schools.

(AQW 19354/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department (DE) provided substantial financial support for the Reading Recovery programme from 1998/99 to 2007/08. During this period over 600 teachers were trained in Reading Recovery strategies by Reading Recovery tutors in the Education and Library Boards (the Boards). When funding ended in 2008 a number of schools continued to provide Reading Recovery from within their delegated budget, utilising teachers previously trained in Reading Recovery techniques.

When funding ended the Reading Recovery tutors in the Boards no longer had access to the Reading Recovery National Network and were therefore no longer licensed to provide Reading Recovery training. Some Boards still have trained tutors within their staff and these officers are now engaged in providing support and training in the areas of literacy and school improvement.

Schools: Reception and Nursery Classes

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail his Department's definition of a (i) reception class; and (ii) nursery class. (AQW 19361/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Definitions are provided within Article 18, Paragraph 4, of the Education (NI) Order 1997.

"Reception class" means a class in which education is provided which is suitable to the requirements of children aged four and any pupils over that age whom it is expedient to educate together with pupils of that age.

"Nursery class" means a class in which education is provided which is suitable to the requirements of children who have attained the age of two but have not attained the lower limit of compulsory school age.

Schools: Reception and Nursery Classes

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail the (i) maximum; and (ii) actual enrolment figures for each (a) nursery; and (b) reception class in 2012/13, broken down by Education and Library Board area. (AQW 19363/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have arranged to have the information requested placed in the Assembly Library.

Education: PIRLS and TIMMS

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the accuracy of the (i) Progress in International Reading Literacy Study; and (ii) Trends in International Mathematics and Science Study. (AQW 19364/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Progress in International Reading Literacy Study (PIRLS) and Trends in International Mathematics and Science Study (TIMSS) are major international surveys conducted by the International Association for the Evaluation of Educational Achievement and I have been assured that both surveys are subject to rigorous technical standards.

I understand that numerous quality assurance steps and procedures are implemented by all those involved in the PIRLS and TIMSS assessment, including the TIMSS & PIRLS International Study Center, the IEA Secretariat, the IEA Data Processing and Research Center, Statistics Canada, Educational Testing Service, and the National Research Coordinators and their teams in the participating countries.

I am therefore confident that the results of PIRLS and TIMSS are reliable and valid and that we should celebrate and strive to build on the success of our primary schools.

Teachers

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many teachers are currently employed in schools across Northern Ireland. (AQW 19420/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The latest available information indicates that schools across the north of Ireland employed 3,616 teachers in a temporary capacity and 15,979 teachers in a permanent capacity. These figures do not include teachers in Voluntary Grammar Schools for whom the Department does not hold information.

C2K Broadband

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Education (i) how much the installation of the C2K Fibre programme has cost to date; (ii) what is the completion date of the programme; and (iii) how much of the budget remains. (AQW 19422/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

- The cost of C2k Broadband installation for the 67% of schools deployed to date remains consistent with the corresponding percentage of budget allocated for this purpose.
- ii) The completion date of the programme is currently projected to be 31st May 2013. This date is subject to satisfactory agreement to additional digging and construction work by schools and Education and Library Boards where necessary.
- iii) The cost of installing C2k Broadband in the remaining 33% of schools remains consistent with the corresponding percentage of budget allocated for this purpose.

It is not possible to identify the specific contract cost of delivery of enhanced broadband to our schools, as this is part of the wider contract, which includes many elements. The type of contract in place for delivery of improved ICT services to schools is called a 'packaged managed service' and the level of cost relates directly to the services that are needed and are to be provided. Examples of services include the delivery of much enhanced broadband to all of our schools, as well as WiFi in schools, new software, including a portal called 'My School', a helpdesk service that operates from 7am to 7pm each week day etc. To provide this specific breakdown of parts of the service would be considered to be a breach of 'commercial in confidence' agreements between the contractor and their partners.

C2K Broadband

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Education how much of the C2K Fibre programme has been implemented to date; and whether any schools or Boards of Governors have declined installation.

(AQW 19424/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: To date, 746 schools out of an overall total of 1,116 schools (67% of all schools) have received their C2k Broadband enhancement. No schools or Boards of Governors have declined installation up to this point.

Bangor Central Integrated Primary School

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Education for an update on the proposed new school building for Bangor Central Integrated Primary School.

(AQW 19426/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am aware that Bangor Central Integrated Primary School will be disappointed not to be included in my recent capital investment announcement, and the process in no way implies that other school projects will not be considered at a later stage.

The reality is that the budget settlement for this Spending Review period means that the need for investment far exceeds the funds available

I will continue to petition to secure the additional funds to address the difficulties faced in many schools.

Special Educational Needs

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education whether the Special Educational Needs review, and any resulting changes to regulations, will retain the provision detailed within part 3 sub section 2 that a statement of Special Educational Needs should be specific, detailed and quantified.

(AQW 19429/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs (SEN) includes guidance for Education and Library Boards (ELBs) on the completion of statements. Paragraph 4.21 of the Code provides guidance on how the special educational provision should be set out by the Education and Library Board in part 3, sub section 2 of a statement. The guidance states that this sub-section should "normally be specific, detailed and quantified".

The form, which a statement should take, is currently set out in Part B of the Schedule of the Education (Special Educational Needs) Regulations (NI) 2005. These Regulations refer to what the ELBs should specify in the statement, but do not use the terms "specific, detailed and quantified".

Revised Regulations are yet to be drafted and all amendments to existing Regulations or new provisions will be consulted upon. The overall intention will be to ensure that the arrangements set out are in the child's interests, that provision is made as soon after assessment as necessary, and that a less bureaucratic framework can allow for the changing needs of children.

Special Educational Needs

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education, given that the Special Educational Needs (SEN) code of practice states that provision detailed within part 3 sub section 2 of a statement of SEN should normally be specific, detailed and quantified, whether each Education and Library Board ensures such quantification and specification in a statement. (AQW 19430/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Part IV paragraph 4.21 of the Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs (COP) states that Part 3 subsection 2 of a statement of special educational needs (SEN) should normally be specific, detailed and quantified although there will be cases where flexibility should be retained in order to meet the changing special educational needs of the child concerned.

The Chief Executives of the Education and Library Boards (ELBs) have advised that, where appropriate, ELBs ensure that the provision detailed in part 3 subsection 2 of statements of special educational needs (SEN) is specific, detailed and quantified by:-

- 1 Adhering to the guidelines outlined in the COP, including specification pertaining to;
  - the appropriate educational setting which has been recommended;
  - any additional support required to meet the pupils' individual needs;
  - access to a range of ELB services e.g. the Sensory Support Service, the Autism Advisory and Intervention Service or the Specific Learning Difficulties and Behaviour Support team etc.
- 2 Employing skilled and experienced officers to write statements;
- 3 Providing on-going training, support and supervision for these officers;
- 4 Seeking updated advice from parents/stakeholders when writing or amending statements;
- 5 Seeking clarification from advice givers should there be any ambiguities in their reports;
- 6 Carefully considering of all information gathered and the needs of children on an individual basis.

Specific details relating to teaching programmes and approaches, experiences, opportunities or modifications required, special examination provision and appropriate facilities and equipment are also detailed within the appendices to the statement when appropriate.

ELBs have also advised that in a small number of cases flexibility in relation to quantification and specification is required in order to meet the changing SEN of the child concerned.

Schools: Reception Classes

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education which schools in North Down have reception classes; and how many pupils attend each class.

(AQW 19448/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Two schools in the North Down constituency have reception pupils in 2012/13. In both these cases, the reception pupils are integrated into a Year 1 class. Information relating to the number of reception pupils in the schools concerned and the total number of children in the class of which they are a part, is detailed in the table below.

Primary schools located in the North Down constituency that have reception pupils, 2012/13

School name	Number of reception pupils	Total pupils in class of which reception pupils are a part
St Anne's Primary School, Donaghadee	5	18
St Patrick's Primary School, Holywood	4	23

Source: School census

Note:

1 Figures included are provisional and may be subject to minor revision once the Education and Library Boards' auditing process is complete. Finalised figures will be available at the end of February.

Business Education Partnerships

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Education whether any Business Education Partnerships (BEP) exist in South Down; and to outline the benefits of BEPs to pupils and young people.

(AQW 19455/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education currently funds 13 Business Education Partnerships (BEPs) across the north to run a variety of employability, enterprise and career events. Currently the Down and Banbridge BEPs cover the South Down Area within their delivery programmes.

BEPs are voluntary organisations made up of staff from local schools from a particular geographic area, together with staff from local employers and members of the business and wider community. Individuals working in BEPs do so on a voluntary basis.

BEPs enable local teachers to develop and deliver employability and enterprise projects to meet the specific needs of their pupils and programmes are delivered in partnership with local employers which enable schools and local businesses to develop mutually beneficial relationships.

BEPs run a variety of employability, enterprise and careers type events e.g. careers conventions, work experience activities, interview skills and workplace visits, and have as their aim the development and facilitation of business education activities, aligned to the revised curriculum. The benefits for pupils include enhanced insight and information into the world of work in order to make informed career choices, better understanding of employability skills, entrepreneurship skills, interview skills and personal development skills such as confidence, self-esteem and motivation.

Schools: New Schools

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 14378/11-15, when each of the new schools will open. (AQW 19468/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The design and planning work, which is still ongoing and required for all these projects to enable them to reach tender approval /construction stage is a complex process which also involves a number of statutory approvals. As such, at this stage in the overall design process it is still not possible to give definitive opening dates for any of these projects.

DE: Hospitality Spend

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education what was the total spend on hospitality by his Department in 2011/12. (AQW 19484/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education spent £19k on hospitality in 2011/12.

Roddensvale School

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Education why the earmarked allocation for Roddensvale School in Larne has reduced from £20,878 in 2006/07 to £7,000 in 2012/13; and whether a reduction replicated across all special schools. (AQW 19557/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The earmarked allocation to Roddensvale School was made up of the following initiatives:

- Extended Schools;
- SEN COP( Special Educational Needs Code of Practice); and
- Direct Addition to Special Schools.

The reduction from £20,878 in 2006-07 to £7,000 in 2012-13 occurred due to the following:

- The cessation of extended schools earmarked funding, as the school no longer met the criteria to receive this funding from 2008-09. The allocation for this in 2006-07 and 2007-08 was £12,420;
- The cessation of SEN Code of Practice Funding by my Department from 2010-11. The allocation for this in 2006-07 was
- The Direct Addition to Special Schools budget increased from £3,150 in 2006-7 to £7,000 in 2012-13;

Any reductions mentioned above will be either due to the school no longer meeting the necessary criteria (Extended Schools), or the funding ceasing across all schools (SEN COP).

Schools: Energy Costs

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Education to outline measures that his Department has taken to assist schools in lowering their energy costs.

(AQW 19558/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The purchase of Energy for schools is managed by a joint grouping of Procurement Professionals and Energy Officers on behalf of all Education & Library Board estates. Energy commodities are purchased at a market price, with suppliers being paid a margin for profit and delivery only.

The ELB Energy Officers are responsible for purchasing oil, natural gas, liquid petroleum gas, electricity and water utilities on behalf of the estate at the most beneficial cost for schools. This collective purchasing power ensures that the cost of the energy supply for schools is kept to a minimum, releasing funding for other priorities.

Since 2000/01, significant ELB investment in plant conversions has increased the area of the estate heated by natural gas from virtually zero to around one third, resulting in an estimated saving of £8m and a reduction in CO2 emissions of some 65,000 tonnes.

Following the emergence of the single electricity market across the island of Ireland in 2007, ELB Energy Officers recently implemented a contract for the supply of electricity for the schools estate and it is anticipated that this will deliver savings of approximately 10% or £1.6m against baseline figures.

The ELB Energy Officers have also taken steps to monitor and reduce water usage and waste in schools, to install a range of renewable energy systems and to upgrade the estate through energy saving schemes, all of which contribute to reducing the usage and thus the cost of energy for schools.

Schools: Reception Classes

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education which reception classes in North Down are currently awaiting a decision on an application to become a nursery unit.

(AQW 19564/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There are currently no proposals with my Department for any reception class in North Down to become a nursery unit.

DE: Public Appointments

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW14678/11-15, for an update on the current situation. (AQW 19581/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: As a result of the breaches identified by the Commissioner for Public Appointments, I tasked my Permanent Secretary with carrying out a review to establish how these breaches occurred and to ensure that lessons were learned and systems improved so that there can be no risk of recurrence.

The review has been completed and the Department has agreed an Action Plan which addresses the shortcomings in the process which were identified. Advice has also been promulgated to all Directorates within my Department.

In addition, my Department is represented on an Inter-Departmental Working Group on Public Appointments. Its role is to identify risks and challenges for Departments in making public appointments, to disseminate good practice and to ensure greater compliance with the Commissioner's Code of Practice.

Education: Computer-based Assessments

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW15217/11-15, for an update on the current situation. (AQW 19583/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I wrote to schools on 12 November to advise them that I was satisfied that the main technical difficulties associated with the computer based assessments (CBA) had been addressed. I also stated that I expected them to continue with the assessments before the end of term.

In agreement with the suppliers of NINA and NILA, CCEA wrote to schools on 20 December advising that the assessment period had been extended until 11 January, allowing schools additional time to complete the assessments.

CCEA has confirmed that 96% of the NINA (Numeracy) assessments and 95% of the NILA (Literacy) assessments in student terms have been completed.

Standardised outcomes will be released to schools shortly.

Going forward, I have agreed to a 4-part review of computer based assessment being undertaken by my Department. The review will encompass:

- A review by CCEA of the particular problems reported and how they will be addressed;
- A review by ETI to establish the value and use to which schools put the assessments;

An independent review of the technical problems encountered this year, to establish why they occurred and how they can be avoided in future; and

A review by DE of the CBA policy.

Educational Psychologists: Waiting Times

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education (i) what is the longest waiting time from the point of initial referral to an appointment with an education psychologist in the South Eastern Education and Library Board during the last 12 months; and (ii) what steps he has taken to clear the backlog of children waiting to see an educational psychologist since this issue was identified during Question Time in September 2012.

(AQW 19594/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Chief Executive of the South Eastern Education and Library Board (SEELB) has advised that the longest waiting time from initial referral to an appointment with an educational psychologist for children who had an appointment in the period 1 February 2012 to 31 January 2013, in the South Eastern Education and Library Board, is 23 months.

The child in question was referred for an appointment with an educational psychologist before starting school but subsequent consultation with the school indicated that the child was showing progress since starting school. The case was therefore managed to establish if the child continued to make progress while retaining the option of an individual appointment with an educational psychologist which was necessary at a later date.

Since the issue of the backlog of children waiting to see an educational psychologist in the SEELB was highlighted during Question Time in September 2012, I understand that the SEELB has taken the following steps to address this:-

a) Pre-school Referrals

On 10th September 2012, SEELB Educational Psychology and Special Education departments met with colleagues from the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust to review practices and protocols to address the needs of pre-school children with developmental or potential educational difficulties. As a result, revised protocols are currently being piloted for the joint working of Education and Health professionals, in Child Development Clinics and Autism Assessment Clinics, regarding the needs of pre-school children with developmental or potential educational difficulties. One of the main aims of this pilot initiative is to reduce waiting times for those pre-school children in the Board's area who require an appointment with an Educational Psychologist.

b) School-age Referrals

The SEELB identified the referrals backlog as a priority for the 2012/13 school year and devised a strategy to address this issue, with the target that by 30th June 2013, no child will have been waiting more than six school months for an appointment with an Educational Psychologist. The Chief Executive has written to all school principals setting out the Board's strategy and promoting a partnership approach with schools to achieve a significant reduction in waiting times for Educational Psychology Services. As the majority of new referrals of school-age children originate from primary schools, the senior managers of the Educational Psychology Service have also met with local primary principals' groups to clarify the strategy for addressing the referrals backlog and to promote the partnership approach towards the achievement of the set target by the end of the present school year.

c) Recruitment of Educational Psychologists

The number of educational psychologists available for assessments was considerably affected by recruitment difficulties during the 2011/12 school year. Although six Educational Psychologists took up employment on temporary contracts with SEELB in September 2012, two subsequently left at the end of December 2012 to take up employment elsewhere. SEELB is currently seeking to recruit educational psychologists to fill these vacancies as a matter of urgency.

The Board has also recruited one Psychology Assistant, and is seeking to recruit a second, to assist with assessments under the supervision of an educational psychologist.

School Closures

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education to list the schools that have been approved for closure in each of the last ten years, broken down by (i) sector; and (ii) type.

(AQW 19599/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: A chronological list of the schools that have closed in the last ten school years is provided in the table below. The table records the school sector and type as requested.

Educational Needs

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education for which minority groups, excluding Travellers, his Department has undertaken significant work to determine and address educational needs.

(AQW 19619/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department undertakes significant work to support the additional educational needs of pupils such as Newcomers, School Aged Mothers (SAMs), Looked After Children (LAC) and Services children. A range of policy initiatives and funding seek to build the capacity of schools to ensure these pupils can access the curriculum and get involved in every aspect of school life.

Education: Common Funding Scheme

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of each of the recommendations contained in the report of the Independent Panel which reviewed the Common Funding Scheme.

(AQW 19621/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I intend to take time to consider carefully each one of the recommendations and, informed by these, I will bring forward my response to the report and my own proposals for reform of the Common Funding Scheme in due course.

Education: Review of GCSEs and GCE A Levels

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how he intends to proceed with his review of GCSE and A Levels in light of the decision by the Education Secretary to abandon his plans for an English Baccalaureate.

Mr O'Dowd: The fundamental review of GCSEs and GCE A levels here will proceed in line with the Terms of Reference I announced to the Assembly in October 2012. This will not change following the latest announcement by Michael Gove on decisions taken in England.

A final report is due in June 2013, following two interim reports in January and March. I will consider the evidence based on the final report, and I will make decisions on the way forward here in the best interests of all learners.

Department for Employment and Learning

Unemployment: North Down

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how he plans to address unemployment in North Down, particularly in the Conlig, Clandeboye and Harbour wards.

(AQW 19173/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): My Department is committed to reducing unemployment for all individuals across Northern Ireland, irrespective of where they live. Bangor JobCentre, which covers the Conlig, Clandeboye and Harbour wards, offers a range of services, initiatives and programmes to help jobseekers find employment, particularly people who are unemployed, individuals with disabilities and those with other barriers to work. Services include job search, help with writing a CV or job application form, preparing for interviews, careers guidance, or help with travel costs for job interviews.

Steps to Work (StW) programme

All unemployed clients in the North Down area can participate in the StW programme, which is the Department's main adult return to work programme. The aim of StW is to assist people who are unemployed or economically inactive to find and sustain employment.

Between 1 April 2011 and 31 March 2012, Bangor JobCentre placed 389 StW clients into employment. From 1 April 2012 to date, 282 StW clients have been placed into employment in North Down. There are currently 606 clients from North Down on the StW programme and of these 155 are from the 3 aforementioned wards (approximately 25.6%).

First Start

A new initiative has recently been implemented within the StW programme known as 'First Start'. Between now and 2014, First Start will support 1,700 waged employment opportunities across Northern Ireland, each lasting a minimum of six months, for young people aged 18 to 24 who have been in receipt of Jobseeker's Allowance for at least six months.

Youth Employment Scheme (YES)

In March last year the Executive agreed a package of new measures, incorporating the Youth Employment Scheme, to help young people gain experience, acquire new skills and find employment.

In the past few months my Department has been actively working with employers to secure opportunities across Northern Ireland. I have been delighted by the response of employers in the North Down area so far and I expect many more to come forward to offer opportunities for young people in the coming months. We are now focusing our efforts on the young unemployed and are encouraging them to participate in the Scheme.

Pathways to Work

The Department's Pathways to Work programme assists people with health conditions and disabilities move into employment.

YMCA Craft Programme

Last September, a programme entitled C.R.A.F.T. (Careers Related Advice and Further Training), which is a joint initiative between my Department, North Down YMCA and the South Eastern Regional College (SERC), was piloted in the Bangor area. 11 young people in the 18-24 year old cohort participated in this programme and the outcomes were very positive. The C.R.A.F.T. programme comprises an 8 week structured programme of Careers Guidance Clinics, Employment Adviser liaison and a series of personal development and training opportunities provided by SERC and the North Down YMCA. Following the success of the pilot programme another CRAFT programme commenced on 4th February 2013.

Other Departmental training programmes, such as Apprenticeships NI and Training for Success, are also available across Northern Ireland. These opportunities are open to eligible people from all areas and staff at the Bangor Jobcentre can provide advice on all of the programmes and initiatives available.

DEL: Special Adviser

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning (i) whether his Special Adviser has made any declarations of interest, pursuant to the obligation on civil servants; (ii) how such declarations are recorded; and (iii) whether they are open to public inspection.

(AQW 19300/11-15)

Dr Farry: Special Advisers are contractually required to abide by the conduct provisions in the NICS HR Handbook with the exception of the rules on political activities, as per Standards of Conduct Section 6.01: "Where a conflict of interest arises, you must declare the interest to your Establishment/Personnel Division so that a decision can be made on the best way to proceed." Special Advisers are treated the same as civil servants in this regard.

All staff in my Department are required to notify the Establishment Officer/Senior Business Partner if they wish to undertake any secondary paid or unpaid employment to ensure compliance with the requirements in the HR Handbook. Human Resources holds a database of this information. The Department does not open this information to public inspection. The database contains personal data as defined in the Data Protection Act 1998 (DPA). Disclosure of such information is likely to breach the first and sixth principles of the DPA.

Prior to appointment, my current temporary Special Adviser notified the Department of his secondary occupation as a Councillor. His duties as a Councillor do not preclude him from undertaking his role as my Special Adviser. The details on the secondary occupation are recorded on the database held by Human Resources.

DEL Budget: Adults with Learning Disabilities

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what percentage of his Departmental budget is spent on young adults with (i) learning difficulties; and (ii) severe learning difficulties, in the South Eastern Education and Library Board area. (AQW 19312/11-15)

Dr Farry: Each of my Department's operational divisions provides significant levels of support to those people with disabilities that require assistance in overcoming barriers to employment or to learning. Unfortunately, information on all relevant departmental spend, broken down to the degree set out in this question, is not readily available. To extract this information would require individual business areas to review their records in exceptional detail, which would result in disproportionate costs. I have, however, set out below the range of provision that is in place for disabled adults which has been disaggregated as far as reasonably possible.

My Department funds further education colleges to deliver courses and provide support and assistance to students with learning difficulties and/or disabilities (SLDD). Funding is provided to colleges through the recurrent block grant and the Additional Support Fund. The South Eastern Regional College (SERC) does not have a tightly defined geographical area but, broadly, it corresponds with that of the South Eastern Education and Library Board.

In the 2011/12 academic year, SERC delivered provision worth £1,130,500 for students aged between 16 and 25 with learning difficulties and disabilities. This represents 4.6% of the college's total recurrent grant; 0.8% of the FE sector's overall recurrent grant; and 0.7% of the overall FE budget, which funds a number of programmes and initiatives outside of the recurrent grant.

In addition, my Department provides ring-fenced financial support for SLDD, of £3.5m per annum, through its Additional Support Fund (ASF). For SERC, in the 2011/12 academic year, a total of £480, 918 was provided through this fund, being 13.74% of the total ASF budget. As ASF funding is for students of all ages, this figure cannot be disaggregated into age groups; similarly, further education colleges do not differentiate between levels of disability. Therefore, my Department is unable to disaggregate spend into the categories outlined in the question.

My Department's regional strategy for widening participation in higher education, "Access to Success", has identified that students with disabilities and learning difficulties face significant additional difficulties in accessing higher education. The strategy aims to better identify individuals from a disadvantaged background, including students with learning disabilities, and to improve the targeting of available resources to support those with greatest need.

My Department already pays a widening access premium to the universities and university colleges for students with learning difficulties and disabilities. In the 2011/12 academic year, this amounted to £249, 462. The premium is intended to provide specialist equipment and/or specific support for these students and it is allocated based on the number of full-time undergraduate students in each institution in receipt of Disabled Students Allowance. The allowance itself attracted £3.013m during 2011/12, which was paid to students of all ages.

My Department guarantees a training place on its "Training for Success" programme for all unemployed young people in the 16 to 17 age groups, with extended eligibility for those with a disability up to age 22. Specialist providers have been engaged to work in conjunction with training suppliers to ensure that specialist support is provided, where needed, to participants in this and the "ApprenticeshipsNI" programme. For the financial year 2011/12, the Department provided £490,809 for this specialist support.

An additional premium of £30 is paid to the training supplier on top of the weekly training fee under the "Training for Success" programme for the duration of training. Similarly, a disability supplement, of up to £1,560, is payable under "ApprenticeshipsNI" to allow training suppliers to provide additional support, such as specialist equipment. These payments are contained within the overall funding offer and it is not possible to isolate the expenditure.

"Access to Work (NI)" is a flexible programme designed to overcome employment related obstacles faced by people with disabilities. In 2011/12, £117k was spent on people with a learning disability through that programme. Similarly, £1,166k was spent through "Workable (NI)", which is a programme that gives people with disabilities the opportunity of working alongside non-disabled employees in a wide variety of jobs.

Finally, in 2011/12, my Department provided 25% contribution funding of up to £2.4m towards 20 European Social Fund projects that specifically target participants with disabilities.

DEL: Funded Learning Unit

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the formula by which Funded Learning Units are calculated. (AQW 19337/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Funded Learning Unit (FLU) is the method by which my Department allocates recurrent grant to further education colleges and is calculated on the basis of each eligible student enrolment within an academic year. A full-time student enrolment generates one FLU, which has a basic value of £3,400, and a part-time student enrolment will receive a proportion of that amount dependent on the number of hours attended. The value of this basic FLU can, however, vary significantly as a result of the application of several weightings.

The first weighting applied is for qualification level. For those student enrolments undertaking a qualification at Level 2, or above, the basic FLU is multiplied by a qualification-level weighting of 1.1. Provision below Level 2 does not attract any weighting, except in the case of Essential Skills and of English for Speakers of Other Languages, which receive a 1.8 weighting.

Next, an economic-priority weighting is applied which ranges from a multiplier of 1.2 to 1.8 depending on the area of study. This weighting is applied to those courses which are considered to be more expensive to deliver.

Thirdly, a weighting relating to disadvantage is calculated with colleges being ranked based on the Noble indicators of deprivation, which were recently reviewed. All eligible enrolments generate an additional disadvantage FLU with students at Northern Regional and South East Regional colleges receiving an additional 1% of their weighted FLU, students at South West and Southern Regional colleges receiving an additional 1.1% and students at North West Regional and Belfast Metropolitan colleges receiving an additional 1.2%.

Finally, the total FLU generated for each eligible student enrolment is the sum of the weighted and disadvantage FLU. The college will receive that amount of funding if the student completes his or her course of study. If, however, the student withdraws before January, only one third of the FLU will be payable and if attendance ends before May, only two thirds of the FLU value will be paid.

The total recurrent grant allocations made to each college in the last three years, using the FLU methodology, are as follows:

	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13
Belfast Metropolitan College	£34,424,765	£33,230,416	£34,442,000
North West Regional College	£23,297,739	£22,757,139	£23,453,200
Northern Regional College	£22,026,775	£21,240,121	£21,824,600
South Eastern Regional College	£25,323,564	£24,396,470	£23,919,000
South West College	£16,105,037	£16,028,501	£16,231,600
Southern Regional College	£27,022,120	£26,252,441	£26,129,000
Total	£148,200,000	£143,905,088	£145,999,400

DEL: Funded Learning Unit

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the funds allocated to each of the Further Education Colleges for each Funded Learning Unit.

(AQW 19338/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Funded Learning Unit (FLU) is the method by which my Department allocates recurrent grant to further education colleges and is calculated on the basis of each eligible student enrolment within an academic year. A full-time student enrolment generates one FLU, which has a basic value of £3,400, and a part-time student enrolment will receive a proportion of that amount dependent on the number of hours attended. ## Further Education Colleges

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the success rate statistics of Further Education Colleges and how these compare with similar institutions in the rest of the UK.

(AQW 19339/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department publishes data in relation to achievement rates in the Northern Ireland Further Education Sector. Achievement rates are calculated as the proportion of final year enrolments who have completed their courses and gained full or partial achievement. Success rates however are calculated as the proportion of final year enrolments who started their courses and gained full or partial achievement.

Success Rates by college for the 2011/12 academic year, the latest year for which data are available, are set out in the Table below.

College	Success Rate
Belfast Metropolitan	71%
Northern Regional	71%
South Eastern Regional	75%
Southern Regional	81%
South West	76%
North West Regional	72%
Sector	74%

Source: Further Education Leavers Survey

While other parts of the UK also publish Further Education success rates, due to variances in methodology employed these are not directly comparable with Northern Ireland figures. However, my Department is currently initiating a benchmarking exercise to determine the feasibility of adjusting for these differences, and the results of this exercise will be available by the end of 2013.

Further Education Colleges

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what plans he has to amend the Further Education (Northern Ireland) Order 1997, to place Further Education Colleges in Northern Ireland on a level playing field with their counterparts in England. (AQW 19340/11-15)

Dr Farry: On the assumption that you are referring to the decision made by the Office of National Statistics (ONS) to reclassify further education colleges as Non Departmental Public Bodies (NDPBs), I can inform you that I intend to launch a public consultation, in the near future, on the future status of further education colleges in Northern Ireland. The consultation will inform a final decision on colleges' future status, which will, in turn, determine the extent to which, if at all, the Further Education (Northern Ireland) Order 1997 needs to be amended.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Hospitality, Tourism and Retail Sectors

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what measures will be introduced to support the hospitality, tourism and retail sectors with the difficulties they have faced as a result of the recent civil unrest. (AQW 18670/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): My Department, through the Northern Ireland Tourist Board, will provide financial support to help with the promotion of Belfast City Centre through the 'Backin Belfast' marketing campaign.

The aim of this campaign, which is being co-ordinated by Belfast Visitor and Convention Bureau, in consultation with Belfast City Council, is to encourage people to come into the city, to increase footfall and restore confidence amongst visitors through the use promotional offers from local businesses.

The ni2012 campaign was hugely successful in enhancing the image of Northern Ireland and I want to ensure that a positive message continues to be delivered.

Invest NI: Jobs Promotion

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many jobs have been (i) created; and (ii) promoted by Invest NI activities between the financial years 2007/08 and 2011/12.

(AQW 18969/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI reports on the number of jobs promoted (expected to be created) since this is the basis upon which the Programme for Government and Invest NI's Corporate Plan targets are set. Table 1 below presents this information for the five years 2007/08 to 2011/12.

Table 1: Invest NI Jobs Promoted (2007-08 to 2011-12)

Year	New Jobs Promoted
2007-08	4,202
2008-09	5,252
2009-10	4,058
2010-11	4,940
2011-12	5,233
Total	23,684

Notes:

- 1 New Jobs represent the number of jobs expected to be created by the project.
- Invest NI revises performance data on a regular basis to ensure that it reflects implemented projects; therefore, the data above may differ to previously published information.

In addition, Invest NI supported over 8,000 jobs through the Enterprise Development Programme (EDP), delivered in partnership with Enterprise NI. These jobs are detailed in Table 2 below.

Table 2: Invest NI Jobs Supported through Enterprise Development Programme (2007-08 to 2011-12)

Year	New Jobs Promoted
2007-08	2,058
2008-09	1,431
2009-10	1,321
2010-11	1,888
2011-12	1,323
Total	8,021

Note: These figures are based on an estimate of jobs created by an individual EDP offer. This estimation process is derived from an independent evaluation of the programme.

Invest NI works with businesses to promote new jobs but it is ultimately the responsibility of the company to ensure that those jobs are delivered on the ground. It should be recognised that employment grants will only be paid to a business based on the jobs actually created.

Invest NI is currently reviewing options to enable it report actual job creation in the future. However, it will take some time before this information becomes meaningful for reporting purposes, since assisted projects can take up to five years to realise their maximum level of job creation.

Businesses: North Down

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what potential exists through her Department to assist in attracting new businesses to North Down.

(AQW 19017/11-15)

Mrs Foster: In terms of inward investment, Invest NI is responsible for selling Northern Ireland at a regional level. Foreign Direct Investment (FDI) plays a large part in the economic growth of Northern Ireland and Invest NI has a very successful track record of attracting high quality investment which will benefit the whole of the region.

Invest NI is very aware of the challenges facing local areas in Northern Ireland and acknowledges the importance of working closely with councils and other stakeholders to develop the features and benefits of each local area in order to maximise opportunities for economic growth.

Invest NI has also developed & launched a smartphone application ('FDI app') to help raise Northern Ireland's profile within international markets which can be used as a tool to help promote the benefits of setting up in the region to potential investors. The app will present the regions' key selling messages and relevant data in a format that is current, easily accessible, easy to read and easily updated. Presenting key selling messages in this innovative manner will help Northern Ireland differentiate itself from other competing regions. The app will focus on Northern Ireland as a region, and local councils, including North Down District Council Area have been invited to participate in using this tool to input with a local proposition for their area.

Electricity: Grid

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the existing capacity of the electricity grid, in the context of possible electricity-generating tidal developments off the North Antrim coast; and what long-term planning is in place in this regard.

(AQW 19059/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Grid capacity and development are matters for the independent Utility Regulator for Northern Ireland in conjunction with NIE, the grid owner and SONI, the system operator, not my Department. Provision is made under the Price Control process between the Utility Regulator and NIE to agree long term planning and funding requirements to upgrade the network to support the integration of renewable electricity projects. The Utility Regulator for Northern Ireland is due to consult on the connection policy for offshore renewables shortly.

Electricity: Grid

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what grid upgrade would be required to facilitate electricity-generating tidal developments off the North Antrim coast.

(AQW 19060/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I refer to my response to AQW 19059/ 11-15.

City of Culture and One Plan

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the bespoke marketing campaign for the City of Culture and the One Plan for Derry. (AQW 19087/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) is liaising closely with Derry City Council and the Culture Company to develop aligned marketing and communications plans going forward.

Derry City Council is developing a One Marketing Plan for the City of which The UK City of Culture is an important focus and opportunity for 2013.

NITB's Spring marketing campaign promoting short breaks in the Northern Ireland and Republic of Ireland markets launched on Monday 28 January 2013 and the 30 second TV advert had a strong focus on Londonderry as UK City of Culture 2013. A bespoke Londonderry 10 second edit has aired from Monday 4 February 2013.

Tourism: Mournes

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail how her Department is marketing the Mournes as a tourist destination.

(AQW 19111/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I would refer the member to the reply I gave to AQW 15729/11-15.

The Northern Ireland Tourist Board's (NITB) remit is to promote Northern Ireland as a short break destination to both the Northern Ireland and Republic of Ireland markets and they will continue to promote and market The Mournes.

In November 2012, NITB facilitated two marketing workshops in the Mournes area (Newcastle and Newry) for local tourism providers.

Tourism Ireland is responsible for marketing both Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland in Great Britain and overseas markets and regularly features the Mourne Mountains as part of its extensive global destination marketing programme. Tourism Ireland also works with tourism industry partners from the region to promote the Mournes overseas and this year tourism industry partners from County Down will join Tourism Ireland at major consumer events such as the Philadelphia Flower Show, Canada Blooms and PGA Orlando, Florida.

Venture Capital Funds

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of American-based Venture Capital Funds having a clause in their contracts that bars them from doing business with any start-up company which has operations in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 19143/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I am not aware of any specific barriers to American based Venture Capital Funds investing in Northern Ireland. It would be for each individual fund to decide on the basis of its legal operation and investment policy. In order to address the specific question, I would have to seek legal advice. However, American based VCs tend not to invest in start-ups in Northern Ireland (or Europe) and that is why Invest NI promotes seed and other development funds, such as the NISPO Funds and Co-Fund NI to deal with the market failure.

There have been a limited number of investments by American based Venture Capital Funds in Northern Ireland companies. These have tended to be larger deals beyond the start-up stage. There are commercial barriers to Northern Ireland companies attracting venture funding below the £2 million deal size from outside the region. The Northern Ireland market is not particularly attractive to external Venture Capital Funds because of the higher risk/reward profile, and the higher transaction and investment management costs associated with managing a small portfolio, perhaps only one investment, remotely.

DETI: G8 Summit, DETI Additional Resources

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what additional resources her Department will receive to cover any additional costs as a result of hosting the G8 Summit and from where these resources will be allocated. (AQW 19160/11-15)

Mrs Foster: No additional resources have been allocated to the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for the G8 Summit.

Economy

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 18379/11-15 whether the Coagent appraisal based its findings on the allocation of £40,000 to the Foyle Cup Tournament; and whether the 9,801 bed nights generated was considered as part of this year's Tourist Board allocation. (AQW 19204/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I would refer the member to the reply I gave to AQW 18379/11-15.

Air Transport: Route Development

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the prospects for further route development in 2013 at (i) Belfast International Airport; (ii) Belfast City Airport; and (iii) Londonderry airport. (AQW 19238/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department, through Tourism Ireland, is in dialogue with Northern Ireland's airports on an ongoing basis to help bring new air services to Northern Ireland and to explore opportunities to promote, and drive demand for, existing services. However, while under development, these discussions are of a commercially sensitive and confidential nature.

In terms of future prospects, I am keen to see improved access to all markets which offer the business and inbound tourism links which are important to the Northern Ireland economy. In particular, I believe there is real potential to reinstate direct air services from Northern Ireland to Germany and Canada.

UK City of Culture 2013

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether she plans to attend any events connected to the UK City of Culture 2013 in Londonderry.

(AQW 19242/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I attended the Sons & Daughters Concert. I would hope to be invited to as many events as possible associated with the Londonderry UK City of Culture 2013, diary permitting.

Mutual Energy

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQO 3298/11-15, for an update on her discussion with Mutual Energy.

(AQW 19386/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I had a useful meeting with Mutual Energy and discussed a range of issues. In relation to the current fault on the Moyle Interconnector, the company continues to work to pinpoint the fault and consider the range of options, associated costs and timescales for bringing it back to full capacity. These options will, in due course, be submitted to the Utility Regulator for consideration and a decision on the way forward. With regard to the cost of repairing the faults which occurred in 2012, Mutual Energy continues to engage with their insurance company on this matter.

Shale Gas Forum

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to list the dates when the Shale Gas Forum met; and the dates it is due to meet over the next two years.

(AQW 19435/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The inaugural meeting of the Shale Gas Regulators Forum took place on 18 October 2012. Future meetings will take place on a quarterly to six monthly basis but exact dates remain to be determined. The frequency of future meetings may change in response to any major developments which the Forum may need to consider.

Department of the Environment

Groundwater Level

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of the Environment what is the current depth of the water table in each (i) constituency; and (ii) council area and how much has this varied over the past ten years.

(AQW 19006/11-15)

Mr Attwood (The Minister of the Environment): Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) does not currently hold representative data of the current depth of the water table (groundwater level) for each constituency and council area in Northern Ireland. The location and most recently held data on depth to water table for each NIEA groundwater monitoring site and the corresponding constituency and council areas for each monitoring location is shown in Table 1.

It should be noted that the depth to water table will vary throughout the year with generally higher water table levels being observed throughout the winter months. The depths to water table observed at the NIEA monitoring sites are indicative of the relative water level within the groundwater body (aquifer) in which they are located. Depth to water table in the surrounding area may vary greatly with depths generally increasing with altitude. Therefore the depth to water table is specific for the point of monitoring only.

At the majority of the NIEA monitoring sites, records are intermittent and an annual average depth cannot be calculated. The most representative long term continuous records of water table depth are for the monitoring sites Killyglen (1) and Dunmurry (5).

Records for the last 10 years indicate that the annual average groundwater levels for each year do not vary by more than 2.7% for Killyglen and 7.1% for Dunmurry from the long term annual average levels. There is also no evidence of a rising or falling trend in depth to water table at either site.

More detailed information including the underlying data records for groundwater level monitoring is available on request from waterinfo@doeni.gov.uk

Noise Pollution

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment what plans has his Department has to deal with noise pollution. (AQW 19091/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department of the Environment has responsibility for legislation and policy on noise control; however, noise complaints and the enforcement of noise control legislation is a matter for the environmental health department within each district council

Noise is an issue which I take very seriously as there is no doubt that nuisance noise can badly affect people's health and well being. The recently published 'Noise Complaint Statistics for Northern Ireland 2011/2012' shows that there were over 12,000 complaints made to district councils across Northern Ireland. As with previous years, domestic noise is the major culprit and this is something that can, in the main, be avoided, especially those complaints relating to loud music/televisions and parties. One of the reasons that I was keen to have the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act (Northern Ireland) 2011 enacted was to give district councils greater powers to deal with noise from domestic premises at night. I have been strongly urging all district councils to make full use of all the powers available to them to deal with persistent offenders and I will be monitoring the noise complaints statistics to assess the impact of the new legislation.

In addition my Department is also progressing work to tackle noise through the requirements of the EU Environmental Noise Directive. The aim of the Directive is to avoid, prevent or reduce on a prioritised basis the harmful effects, including annoyance, due to exposure to environmental noise. It focuses on the impact of such noise on individuals, complementing existing EU legislation, which sets standards for noise emissions from specific transport and industrial sources.

During 2012, and in line with the requirements of the Directive, my Department completed work on determining the noise exposure of the population through the second round noise mapping exercise. The next stage of this work, to be undertaken during 2013, is to establish Action Plans based on the mapping results. Once I have approved or adopted these Action Plans they will be submitted to the EU Commission. The noise maps are currently available for the public to view on the Department's noise web site at: www.noiseni.co.uk, while the noise Action Plans will be added once adopted.

Further support and guidance on noise policy and legislation is available online through a range of information and advice at: www.doeni.gov.uk and www.noiseni.co.uk. The Department also publishes the annual noise complaints statistics report on both websites. In addition to providing statistics the report also provides details of councils' new and innovative ways of tackling noise nuisance.

DOE: Special Adviser

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment (i) whether his Special Adviser has made any declarations of interest, pursuant to the obligation on civil servants; (ii) how such declarations are recorded; and (iii) whether they are open to public inspection.

(AQW 19250/11-15)

Mr Attwood: My Special Adviser has made no declarations of interest since his appointment. In line with NICS arrangements declarations of interests in this Department are centrally recorded on HRConnect. Such declarations by staff are personal data as defined under the Data Protection Act 1998. Any requests to view this central record would be considered on a case by case basis under the provisions of that Act, including seeking the consent to disclosure of the data subject concerned.

Northern Ireland Civil Service: Alleged Disciplinary Offences

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the number of Civil Service personnel currently suspended from work for alleged disciplinary offences; (ii) the length of time they have been suspended; and (iii) the cost to date in salaries, National Insurance and pension contributions.

(AQW 18736/11-15)

Mr Wilson (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): The information requested is provided in the table below. In order to protect the identity of individuals, the information is presented on a NICS-wide basis.

Number of personnel	Length of time suspended	Total salary	Total National Insurance Contributions	Total Pension contributions
19	10 years, 2 weeks	£140,463.16	£12,459.36	£26,705.84

North/South Pension Scheme

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail how the core North/South Pension Scheme differs from the Northern Ireland Civil Service pension scheme; and who is eligible to join the scheme.

(AQW 19001/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The core provisions for northern members of the North/South Pension Scheme were originally modelled on the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme in Northern Ireland. The Civil Service Pension Scheme introduced Nuvos – a career average pension scheme for all new entrants from July 2007. The North/South Scheme has continued to offer a final pension scheme to all eligible members.

In addition, the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme in Northern Ireland introduced increased contributions for employees from April 2012 and these will be increasing again in April 2013. It is intended that they will increase further in April 2014. Details of this are available on website www.dfpni.gov.uk/civilservicepensions-ni.

The Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme in Northern Ireland also changed from April 2011 to increase pensions in payment annually in line with the Consumer Prices Index instead of the Retail Prices Index. It is intended that the North/South Pension Scheme will be aligned with this change from April 2013 and work is underway to align the other provisions of the North/South Scheme with the Civil Service Pension Scheme.

In terms of eligibility, the Bodies currently participating in the North/South scheme are as follows:

- Waterways Ireland;
- The Food Safety Promotion Board;
- The Trade and Business Development Body;
- The Special EU Programmes Body;
- The North/South Language Body; and
- Tourism Ireland Limited.

Professional Legal Studies Course

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many people, who passed the examination for the Professional Legal Studies course, have been unable to take up their places as a result of being unable to find a solicitor master, for each of the last three years.

(AQW 19057/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The Department of Finance and Personnel understands that there is not a "pass mark" for the examination for Admission to the Professional Legal Studies course, and that there is, alternatively, a list of merit. The Department does not hold statistics on how many people on the list of merit have been unable to take up their places as a result of being unable to find a solicitor master.

This information may be obtained from the Law Society for Northern Ireland.

Net Fiscal Balance Report

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what plans he has to improve the methodology employed within the Net Fiscal Balance report.

(AQW 19075/11-15)

Mr Wilson: My Department does not have any specific plans at this time to revise the methodology used to produce the Net Fiscal Balance Report. This report and the estimates contained therein have been produced by applying the methodology originally designed to produce the "Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland" (GERS) publication.

It must be recognised that the purpose of the Net Fiscal Balance Report is to provide an overview of Northern Ireland's public sector finances and in particular to produce an estimate of our overall net fiscal balance position or fiscal deficit. It is not intended to provide an accurate estimate of individual revenue items - many of these have been estimated, in the absence of actual regional data, on the basis of high level assumptions and apportionment factors.

That said, where beneficial, practical and appropriate to do so, DFP will consider how the methodology might be developed in the future. For example, where new or improved data becomes available or in light of any methodological updates to the GERS report with which we attempt to maintain consistency.

Net Fiscal Balance Report

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to explain the use of estimates within the Net Fiscal Balance report published in November 2012.

(AQW 19076/11-15)

Northern Ireland Departmental Expenditure Limit

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to identify the funding gap between the Departmental Expenditure Limit allocated and the estimated revenue generated in each financial year from 20060-7 through to 2010-11. (AQW 19079/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The NI DEL allocated in each financial year from 2006-07 to 2010-11 is as follows:

The estimated revenue from NI in each financial year from 2006-07 to 2010-11 is as follows:

	2006-07	2007-08	2008-09	2009-10	2010-11
Estimated Revenue	12,356	13,191	12,679	11,887	12,703

Source: NI Net Fiscal Balance Report 2009-10 and 2010-11.

There is no direct relationship between the Northern Ireland (NI) Departmental Expenditure Limits (DEL) and tax revenue generated locally. Furthermore, the NI DEL does not represent the totality of public expenditure in the region and therefore it is not appropriate to consider a 'funding gap' in this regard.

Non-tax Revenue

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the non-tax revenue which is generated by each Department.

(AQW 19085/11-15)

Mr Wilson: I assume that the question refers to receipts scoring within the Northern Ireland departmental DEL budgets since these translate into additional spending power for the Executive. I also assume that the Member is interested in the latest available full year Final Outturn figures. In the 2011-12 financial year, these receipts amounted to £1,010 million of resource income and £165 million of capital income.

The resource income is generated from a wide variety of revenue streams arising from the services provided by departments, whilst the capital income stems mainly from the sale of surplus assets and repayment of loans to public corporations. Income from the EU is also included in both the resource and capital income numbers.

Excluded from these figures are the income from Regional Rates (which scores as a tax receipt) and the RRI £200 million loan facility.

Rates: Non-payment

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel (i) how many court cases were initiated against people for the non-payment of rates during each of the last three financial years; (ii) how many of these cases reached court; (iii) how many people were found guilty of non-payment; and (iv) of the people found guilty, how many were declared bankrupt as a result. (AQW 19114/11-15)

Mr Wilson: There are a number of steps involved in the process of recovering debt from ratepayers. When a ratepayer fails to pay their bill LPS issues a 'final notice' asking for the outstanding rates to be paid or contact to be made immediately in an attempt to enter into a mutually agreeable payment arrangement. In 2011/12 a total of 136,937 'final notices' were issued.

If payment is not received and the ratepayer fails to contact LPS, then the case will be listed for Court action and a Court process issued. There were 45,902 Court processes issued in 2011/12. In many cases (around half) the receipt of a Court process is sufficient to prompt the ratepayer to contact LPS and pay in full or enter into a payment arrangement.

If the case goes to court and is found in favour of LPS, a decree is awarded. This enables LPS to pursue payment through the Enforcement of Judgements Office (EJO) or, to a lesser extent, through the bankruptcy route. 19,634 decrees were awarded in 2011/12.

Of the 1,569 bankruptcy orders made in 2011-12, LPS was the petitioner in 189 cases and individual debtors were the petitioners in 847 cases. In the same period there were 219 company compulsory liquidations, with LPS being the petitioner in 17 cases and HMRC was the petitioner in 104 cases.

Pursuing debt through the EJO requires the issuing of a Notice of Intention (NOI) to enforce the judgement. LPS will issue a letter to the ratepayer advising them that enforcement will proceed unless payment is received or an acceptable payment arrangement is made. If no payment or arrangement is made within seven days, then the NOI is forwarded to EJO who will issue it to the ratepayer on behalf of LPS. In 2011-12 15,370 NOIs were issued. During this process LPS has to confirm that the ratepayer still lives at the address given. When confirmed, the debt is passed to EJO to recover.

The table attached provides the relevant figures for the last three years. It should be noted that the recovery process can span more than one financial year so the numbers quoted within any given year are not directly related. For example, the 19,634 decrees awarded in 2011/12 are not all as a direct consequence of the 45,902 Court processes issued in that year.

Debt Recovery Stage	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12
'Final Notice' issued	123,853	122,251	136,937
Court processes issued	49,422	42,912	45,902
Decrees awarded	16,454	18,155	19,634
Notices of Intention issued	14,871	14,788	15,370
All bankruptcies	1,250	1,456	1,569
Bankruptcies where LPS is the petitioner	46	78	189
All company compulsory liquidations	179	262	219
Company compulsory liquidations where LPS is the petitioner	6	17	17

G8 Summit: Costs

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what assurances he has received from the British Treasury on covering the costs of the G8 summit which will take place in Fermanagh in June. (AQW 19144/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The costs of hosting the G8 event have not yet been fully quantified. An Executive Steering Group has been established to coordinate all activities involved in hosting this event, including the identification of all associated costs involved.

My officials are also liaising with the NI Office and HM Treasury on the funding arrangements and it is clear that there is likely to be substantial contributions made by the UK Government to the hosting of this event.

Peace III

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to publish the (i) names of each group benefiting from Peace III funding under Theme1:2; and (ii) allocation of funding to each group.

(AQW 19200/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The table overleaf details funding awarded under PEACE III Theme 1.2, Acknowledging and Dealing with the Past, as of 31 January 2013. An exchange rate of £1=€1.25 has been used where required.

Note to table:

Letter of Offer

Peace III

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the current estimate of expenditure on administration in respect of Peace III.

(AQW 19201/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The PEACE III Programme has a Technical Assistance budget of £15,978,805.60. Expenditure was £9,542,036 as of 31 December 2012, and the current forecast is for expenditure of £13,452,957.60 by the end of the programme.

Ulster Savings Certificates

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how much of the £6m held in the form of Ulster Savings Certificates, issued between 1922 and 1991, has been reclaimed following his public announcement three years ago. (AQW 19269/11-15)

Mr Wilson: As at 4 February 2013, the amount reclaimed by holders of Ulster Savings Certificates since 1 January 2010 is £568k.

Ulster Savings Certificates

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the information held on file of the original purchasers of Ulster Savings Certificates including (i) name and address; (ii) birth details and (iii) date of purchase. (AQW 19270/11-15)

Mr Wilson: My department holds an electronic and paper register of around 28,000 original purchasers of Ulster Savings Certificates which remained unclaimed as at 31 March 2005.

The register includes information such as holder names and address details; certificate numbers and purchase dates; the number of certificates purchased and the original value; and the amount of principal and interest due on unclaimed certificates. In some instances, birth dates are also held.

The register is used to ensure all claims made to redeem certificates are valid.

Land and Property Services: Mapping System

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel (i) what changes or alterations have been made to the mapping system used by Land and Property Service in the last five years; (ii) how many mapping errors and inaccuracies have been found in maps issued in each of the last five years; (iii) what investigations are taking place into other errors found in the mapping system; and (iv) with whom responsibility lies, including financial responsibility, for the correction of errors in individual folios which result from errors in the mapping system.

Mr Wilson: The Land & Property Services (LPS) Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland (OSNI) mapping database is continually revised to take account of new information relating to roads, housing, and commercial property developments etc. Over the past twelve months a programme of positional improvement (PI) of the OSNI mapping database has been implemented, whereby the database is being updated to accuracy levels made possible by ever more sophisticated methodologies, and global positioning satellite technologies. The PI programme is due to complete in mid-summer 2013. This means that the representation on a map of real world features will be more accurately positioned. LPS Land Registry Mapping is required by Section 62 of the Land Registration Act (NI) 1970 (the Act) to be based upon the OSNI map. Land Registry mapping, however tends only to be updated when an application for registration is received, on the sale or mortgage of a property. A consequence of this is that registration boundaries previously coincident with OSNI mapping will on occasions appear as offset from the positionally improved OSNI mapping. In these instances where the inconsistencies are brought to the attention of the Land Registry, the Registry map will be updated in accordance with the provisions of Rule 149 (1A) of the Land Registration (Amendment) Rules (Northern Ireland) 2011 (the Rules).

It is not possible to say how many errors or perceived inaccuracies there have been in the last five years. Mapping queries are dealt with as line of business as they arise – both by staff in LPS Mapping and Valuation and in the Registration Directorates.

Legislation governing the operation of the Land Registry is specific in terms of the accuracy limitations of the information recorded on the Registry Map. It is for location purposes only (Rule 141), and therefore folio boundaries are not guaranteed. (Section 64 of the Act).

The coincidence of Land Registry boundaries and OSNI features may have been affected by revisions of the OSNI map subsequent to registration. Warning texts appear on all copy map products to make customers aware of this possibility. They are also displayed at the commencement of an electronic map searching session.

Perceived mapping errors and anomalies are fully investigated as they are identified on a case-by-case basis. Where errors in the Land Registry Map are identified, they are rectified in accordance with the provisions of Section 69 of the Act which provides for errors to be rectified by consent of all of the interested parties. In the absence of such consent, a Court Order is required.

When mapping errors are identified and fully investigated by Land Registry staff, they will be rectified within the legislative constraints outlined in (iii) above. If an error results in a loss, a claim for compensation can be submitted to LPS in accordance with the provisions of Section 71, and Schedule 9 of the Act. Compensation payments are made by DFP from the consolidated fund

DFP: Special Adviser

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel (i) whether his Special Adviser has made any declarations of interest, pursuant to the obligation on civil servants; (ii) how such declarations are recorded; and (iii) whether they are open to public inspection.

(AQW 19291/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The Minister's Special Adviser has completed a 'Declaration of Interests' form and has advised of any declarations of interest.

Completed 'Declaration of Interests' forms are held by the Departmental Establishment Officer.

The DFP Website currently advises that a Register of Interests is maintained by DFP.

Rates: Relief for Sporting Clubs

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he will consider enabling local sports clubs to avail of a discretionary 100 percent rates relief to help communities in these difficult economic times. (AQW 19325/11-15)

Mr Wilson: You may recall that the issue of a review of rates relief for Community Amateur Sports Clubs was the subject of a No Named Day motion in November 2011. During this debate I indicated that I would be happy to re examine the level of relief afforded to amateur sports clubs but that this should follow a more extensive review of the needs of that sector, including the full range of options for providing support. My position on this matter has not changed.

There must be a full and proper assessment of need-does every local sports club need help and if so how best can that support be offered? This is assessment should include the issue of exclusive clubs verses more open clubs, treatment of clubs with bar and restaurant facilities and last but not least consideration of alternative ways of providing support outside the rating system.

You will appreciate that my Department is not in the best position to consider these matters, as they fall within the policy competence of the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure (DCAL).

DCAL have advised recently that they are currently engaging with the sports and recreation sector (via the NI Sports Forum) to seek views on the matter. Clearly the sector will be arguing to pay no rates but I expect DCAL to present their own evidence around the adequacy of support and what the priorities are; whether that be addressing poverty and social exclusion through sport or something broader. Whatever that is, DCAL will be looking also at alternative ways of providing support.

Should it emerge that rate relief is DCAL's preferred option, that will need to be looked and I am sure some form of discretionary relief could be considered as part of that process. Quite how this would operate and who should exercise that discretion are important considerations. Local Authorities can exercise discretion in the rest of the UK but the context is different there. They do not have two rates as we do (regional and district), nor do they have sports that are associated with one section of the community; which could easily lead to inconsistency of decision making in a NI context if these matters are decided at Council level. Furthermore, many private members' clubs in the rest of the UK pay full rates for their sporting facilities which are not the case here.

Officials within my Department have already written to their counterparts in DCAL and are prepared to offer advice before any case is put forward for consideration, bearing in mind that every pound in rate relief is a pound less to pay for hospitals, schools, roads, houses and council services. So, value for money has to be assured.

Rates: Exemption for Charities

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what percentage of total retail outlets in (i) 2007; and (ii) 2012 were functioning charitable or other similar status which precluded the payment of rates. (AQW 19346/11-15)

Mr Wilson: As at the end of March 2010 (the earliest year for which comparable information is available) the percentage of occupied retail outlets that were occupied and were getting a rating exemption as a result of being a charity was 4.1%. As at the end of March 2012 the equivalent figure was 4.6%.

Fraud Awareness

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel who is the appointed training provider for fraud awareness workshops through the Centre for Applied Learning.

(AQW 19403/11-15)

Mr Wilson: Fraud Awareness Training is delivered by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy (CIPFA), through the "Governance and Risk Management Category" of the CAL External Framework Contract.

Special Advisers: Freedom of Information Request to DFP

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how long it took his Department to respond to a Freedom of Information request from the Sunday Life in August 2011 on the uplift of the Special Adviser upper salary band to £90,000 pa; and why it took this length of time.

(AQW 19412/11-15)

Mr Wilson: It took the Department six months to respond to a Freedom of Information request relating to Special Adviser pay received in August 2011. The delay in issuing the final response was due to revised handling procedures adopted by the Department of Finance and Personnel.

Special Advisers: Freedom of Information Request to DFP

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, in light of the Information Commissioner's ruling, whether he will now release the information sought, since August 2011 by Sunday Life under the Freedom of Information Act, on the uplift of the Special Adviser upper salary band to £90,000 pa.

(AQW 19413/11-15)

Mr Wilson: I am currently considering the options available to the Department in light of the Information Commissioner's decision

Senior Civil Servants: Private Healthcare

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether private healthcare is considered an option for senior staff and directors as part of their Civil Service contracts.

(AQW 19421/11-15)

Mr Wilson: Senior civil servants no longer have specific contracts of employment. Their terms and conditions are set out in the Northern Ireland Civil Service HR Handbook. The HR Handbook does not include a provision for private healthcare for any civil servant, including members of the senior civil service nor or are there any current plans for such a provision.

Barristers

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of practising barristers in Northern Ireland, in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 19490/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The Department of Finance and Personnel does not hold statistics on the numbers of practising barristers in Northern Ireland in any given year.

The Bar Council, as the regulatory body for barristers, may hold such information.

Solicitors

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of practising solicitors in Northern Ireland, in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 19491/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The Department of Finance and Personnel does not hold statistics on the numbers of practising solicitors in Northern Ireland in any given year.

The Law Society for Northern Ireland, as the regulatory body for solicitors, may hold such information.

Ulster Bond

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether the information relating to original Ulster Bond owners is held in year order or in spans of years according to purchase date.

(AQW 19586/11-15)

Mr Wilson: My Department holds a list of Matured Ulster Development Bonds outstanding for repayment as at 31 March 2003.

The information is held in order of redemption date.

Dormant Bank Accounts Scheme

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the operation of the Dormant Bank Accounts Scheme. (AQW 19614/11-15)

Mr Wilson: On 12 September 2012, my officials provided evidence to the DFP Committee detailing my proposals for the NI Dormant Accounts Scheme and outlining the spending priorities that I have identified. These being:

- Children and young people groups This would target those under the age of 18.
- Faith-based groups This would target faith based groups whose religious denominations have recognised moral or ethical objections to applying for funding derived from gambling and as a result of that the applicant group has not previously accepted or applied for lottery funding. A further restriction is placed on any loan that it should be applied solely for charitable purposes according to the law of Northern Ireland.

Following this discussion my Department has undertaken further consultation regarding the proposed appointment of an Investment Trust who will use the Dormant Accounts funds to create a self sustaining loans fund. This consultation has now closed and I will be shortly writing to the DFP Committee detailing the outcomes of this consultation.

Further to this, in November I wrote to the First and deputy First Minister detailing my proposals for the NI Dormant Accounts Scheme, and provided them with a draft Executive paper. Following their endorsement I intend to bring this paper to the Executive seeking agreement.

Education and Skills Authority

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether the Department of Education has submitted the full Business Case for the Education and Skills Authority.

(AQW 19616/11-15)

Mr Wilson: To date, the Department of Education has not submitted the Full Business Case to my Department.

DFP: Hospitality Spend

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what was the total spend on hospitality by his Department in 2011/12.

(AQW 19628/11-15)

Mr Wilson: Hospitality expenditure by the Department of Finance and Personnel (including its executive agencies) for 2011/12 was £64k.

Peace III

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel (i) whether there is an underspend in the current Peace III funding; (ii) how much is the underspend; and (iii) to where the money has been reallocated. (AQW 19772/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The PEACE III Programme will be fully committed when final decisions are taken on the applications currently being processed. It is not anticipated that there will be an underspend.

In order to ensure that the programme remains fully committed until the end of the programming period, taking into account factors such as slippage and exchange rate variations, it may be necessary to reallocate funding between the programme's themes. To date no such reallocations have taken place.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Marie Stopes Clinic

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what progress has been made in establishing the number of abortions that have been facilitated or carried out at the Marie Stopes Clinic in Belfast; and how his Department will bring such regulation to the clinic.

(AQW 18937/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): It is not possible to collect information on terminations carried out at Marie Stopes within the current legislative and regulatory framework. However officials are exploring options to ensure that statistics on all terminations in Northern Ireland are collected. One possibility is requiring independent organisations to provide the required information through the successful development, consultation and publication of a standard on terminations which could then be enforced by RQIA. Legislative options are also being considered.

Marie Stopes has stated their intention to comply with the law on termination of pregnancy in Northern Ireland.

Maghaberry Prison: Nursing Staff

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the total number of nursing staff attached to the healthcare facility at HMP Maghaberry broken down by those in (a) full time Northern Ireland Prison Service employment; and (b) bank or agency staff; and (ii) the total cost to employ each group per year since 2007. (AQW 18974/11-15)

Mr Poots: Responsibility for the provision of prison healthcare services transferred to the HSC on 1st April 2008. Since then, services have been commissioned by the HSC Board and delivered by the South Eastern HSC Trust. However healthcare staff remained employees of the NI Prison Service until 1 April 2012 when they transferred to the South Eastern HSC Trust. The information to answer this question is set out in the tables below. The Department of Justice has indicated that information in relation to 2007-08 is not readily available in the form requested and could only be compiled at disproportionate cost.

NI Prison Service	Expenditure £k	1,770	2,001	2,191	2,157
	Nursing Staff Numbers	45	51	48	48
SE Trust	Expenditure £k	0	11	26	53
	Nursing Staff Numbers	0	3	2	1
Bank & Agency	Expenditure £k	101	159	287	557
Total	Expenditure £k	1,871	2,171	2,504	2,767
	Nursing Staff Numbers¹	45	54	50	49

<sup>1</sup> The use of bank/agency varies considerably from day to day. New primary care and mental health structures have been established and the recruitment drive is underway. However, security requirements can lead to delays in newly recruited staff taking up post. Bank/agency will therefore continue to be used in order to deliver services until such times as the whole structure is in place.

DHSSPS: Multi-agency Support Teams

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for a breakdown of the money allocated from each Health and Social Care Trust to each of the five Multi Agency support teams in each year since 2007. (AQW 18986/11-15)

Mr Poots: A breakdown of the money allocated from each Health and Social Care Trust to each of the five Multi Agency support teams in each year since 2007 to 31 March 2013 is set out in the table below:

	2012/13	2011/12	2010/11	2009/10	2008/09	2007/08
Belfast Health & Social Care Trust (Children's Inter Disciplinary Schools Team- CIST)	£880,000	£879,000	£853,000	£847,000	£804,000	£798,000
Northern Health & Social Care Trust ( Multi-Agency Support Team for Schools -MASTS)	£994,938	£994,938	£985,364	£985,364	£1,002,944	£943,848

Southern Health & Social Care Trust (Action for Children in Education - ACE)	£944,915	£762,563	£565,525	£807,652	£801,588	£746,000
Western Health & Social Care Trust (Western Education Support Team - WEST)	£664,452	£661,554	£685,566	£682,998	£688,125	£687,000
Total	£4,287,334	£4,069,758	£3,730,786	£3,960,398	£4,164,034	£3,946,536

Human Trafficking

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many places of refuge are available for victims of human trafficking.

(AQW 19151/11-15)

Mr Poots: In my view, the designation of places of refuge for victims of human trafficking could be highly risky for the victims and refuge providers given the insidious nature of the crime. As a result, there are no designated places of refuge for victims of human trafficking within the health and social care stock. However, where a place of refuge is required this will be provided. Provision differs depending on the age of the victim.

Child victims of human trafficking, who become looked after by a Health and Social Care Trust, will be accommodated in a place deemed to serve the child's best interests. This includes accommodation in children's residential care, foster care or supported accommodation/lodgings.

Adult victims of human trafficking will also be provided with a package of care which meets their assessed needs. Where they require to be accommodated, accommodation will be sought from a range of provision, including residential care, supported accommodation/lodgings or private accommodation. This is in addition to the accommodation provided to victims of trafficking during the 45-day period of recovery and reflection, which is the responsibility of the Minister of Justice.

Human Trafficking

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what help or support is provided for victims of human trafficking to help them to rebuild their lives.

(AQW 19153/11-15)

Mr Poots: All children and young people who are suspected of having been trafficked should be considered to be children in need of care and protection under the Children (Northern Ireland) Order 1995. As a result, the Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust in whose area a trafficked child is recovered, will be responsible for the provision of accommodation, protection, care and support to the child to best meet his/her assessed needs.

In the case of adults who are suspected of having been trafficked, the Department of Justice currently has a contract with Migrant Help, together with their delivery partner Women's Aid Federation (NI), to provide accommodation and a range of support services for potential victims during the initial 45 day period of recovery and reflection.

Where adult victims are able to exercise Treaty rights or have been given discretionary leave to remain or other immigration status, they will normally be able to apply for relevant social security benefits and housing assistance and will be entitled to access health and social care. However, assessment under the care management process, which is needs-driven, will determine what, if any, health and social care services will be provided. This could include mental health or sexual health services as well as rehabilitative services to help victims integrate within the community in the longer term.

Human Trafficking

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what training is provided by his Department to enable social workers to deal effectively with victims of human trafficking.

(AQW 19154/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department funds undergraduate training for those who wish to become social workers. The curriculum covers generic training on safeguarding children and vulnerable adults from all forms of abuse, including sexual exploitation, as well as methods of intervention with individuals at risk, in crisis or who have experienced trauma. In addition, the undergraduate curriculum addresses specific issues such as refugee and asylum-seeking children and adults, commercial sexual exploitation, domestic and sexual violence and human rights.

My Department also funds a range of awareness and specialist training at post-qualifying level for social workers employed by the HSC dependent on job roles. Those undertaking specific roles in respect of Human Trafficking, such as joint investigations with the police into allegations of abuse, receive specialist training.

Given the respective roles of the PSNI and Social Services for the welfare and protection of child and adult victims of Human Trafficking, there is ongoing collaboration and co-operation between the PSNI, the HSC Board and Trusts in planning and delivering joint training initiatives which are supported by my Department and the Department of Justice.

Meningitis B Vaccine

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he plans to introduce the new meningitis b vaccine into the Childhood Immunisation Schedule.

(AQW 19220/11-15)

Mr Poots: Vaccination policy in Northern Ireland and the rest of the UK is guided by the recommendations of the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI), an independent expert advisory committee that advises the four UK Health Ministers on matters relating to the provision of vaccination and immunisation services. JCVI consider all the available medical and scientific evidence before recommending which vaccines should be offered.

The JCVI has begun an evaluation of the impact and cost-effectiveness of possible meningitis B vaccination strategies. This evaluation requires a complex analysis and final JCVI advice is not expected until later in the year. I will consider the JCVI recommendation when I have received it.

Allotments

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the Public Health Agency would fund allotment schemes in North Down to encourage healthy living.

(AQW 19262/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Public Health Agency continues to develop its work with local groups and communities across the North Down area to encourage, support and fund the development of community allotment projects such as the Kilcooley Allotments project.

In the last year the Agency's South Eastern Health and Social Wellbeing Improvement team have also provided smaller amounts of resource through its community grant scheme to help local groups develop allotments and gardens within disadvantaged areas.

Recently "Conservation Volunteers Northern Ireland" have been commissioned by the team to work with them in designing a community allotments support programme that will be rolled out in 2013/14 and 2014/15.

The project will be formally launched in the near future across the South Eastern area including North Down, and will involve working with a minimum of five local groups per year.

Health: Waiting Times

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail, for each Health and Social Care Trust, the (i) target waiting time; and (ii) actual waiting time for all procedures with a current waiting list of greater than eight weeks (AQW 19307/11-15)

Mr Poots:

- (i) I have set a challenging waiting time target for elective care inpatient/daycase treatment that covers all clinical specialties. This is:
  - From April 2012, at least 50% of inpatients and daycases are treated within 13 weeks with no one waiting longer than 36 weeks; increasing to 60% by March 2013, and no patient waits longer than 30 weeks for treatment.
- (ii) My Department publishes inpatient waiting time figures on a quarterly basis in the Northern Ireland Waiting Time publication, on the basis of clinical specialty, and not procedure type. The latest data published relate to the position at 30th September 2012 and can be found at the following link:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/ni_inpatient_waiting_list_bulletin_september_12.pdf

I refer you to Table 2a, which details the number of people waiting for admission by weeks waiting, broken down by specialty.

Information on the waiting times for specific procedures are available on request, but are not routinely published given the volume of procedure types that may be carried out, which at 30th September 2012 totalled nearly 2,000.

All Party Group on Muscular Dystrophy: Collum Report

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when he will respond to the recommendations made in the Collum report which was compiled by the All Party Group on Muscular Dystrophy. (AQW 19341/11-15)

Mr Poots: I am currently considering my response and will respond to the All Party Group on Muscular Dystrophy very shortly.

Halal Meat Products

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps the Food Standards Agency is taking following traces of pork DNA found in halal meat products supplied by a local distributor. (AQW 19353/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Food Standards Agency (FSA) was made aware of the discovery of traces of pork DNA in a selection of meat pies labelled as Halal by the Prison Service of England and Wales on the evening of Thursday 31 January. This is not a food safety issue, however it is totally unacceptable, particularly to those faith communities who abstain from eating pork.

In accordance with established protocols, the FSA is working closely with the relevant authorities to investigate this incident to ascertain details around the supply chain and any necessary action to be taken.

As part of the investigation, the FSA has instigated a program of enhanced food standards inspections of approved meat products and preparations establishments across the UK. In Northern Ireland, this work is being conducted by District Councils, with the program of work commencing on 6 February 2013. The FSA has also instigated a UK wide study to investigate the presence of undeclared equine and porcine DNA in product containing beef from a range of food businesses. In Northern Ireland this work is being carried out by District Councils. This program of work is being conducted with the purpose of ensuring that consumers' interests are being protected in relation to the declaration of species in meat products.

Shale Gas

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) whether his Department will review the report on the Chief Medical Officer's Recommendations Concerning Shale Gas Development in New Brunswick by Dr Eilish McCleary; (ii) whether the Department plans to give any consideration to the public health implications of the proposals to extract shale gas; and (iii) why no one from his Department, who works in the field of public health, is represented on the cross-departmental Shale Gas Forum.

(AQW 19437/11-15)

Mr Poots:

- (i) My Department has considered the report by the Office of the Chief Medical Officer of Health concerning shale gas development in New Brunswick, Canada.
- (ii) The Health Protection Agency (HPA) provides support and specialist advice to my Department on a wide range of health protection matters. HPA has undertaken to review the potential health impacts of shale gas extraction. It is anticipated that this scoping report will be available in the near future.
- (iii) My Department is represented on the Shale Gas Regulators' Forum by an official from the Public Health Advice Directorate.

Organ Donation

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in light of the recent announcement on organ donation, to explain why this issue was not included in the Programme for Government. (AQW 19449/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Programme for Government, as a strategic document, includes a number of commitments and associated milestones for each Department. It is not intended to be an exhaustive list of everything that any given Department will deliver upon.

During the life cycle of a Programme for Government, Departments will continue to develop new policy and update existing policy as part of their normal remit, as is the case with my recent announcement on organ donation.

Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children: Paediatric Cardiac Surgery

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when he will announce his decision on the future of paediatric cardiac surgery provision at the Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children.[R] (AQW 19461/11-15)

Mr Poots: I refer the member to the answer that I gave to AQO'S 3137/11-15 and 3146/11-15.

Horses: Slaughtering

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to the Urgent Oral Question on 5 February 2013, where horses have been slaughtered in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 19464/11-15)

Mr Poots: Oakdale Meats (NI) Ltd in Lurgan is currently the only establishment in Northern Ireland approved for the slaughter of horses (in addition to being approved for cattle and sheep slaughter). I understand however, that the food business operator has recently taken a commercial decision to discontinue the slaughter of horses. There was historically a small number of horses slaughtered for human consumption from this plant.

Wind Farms

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department has ever been asked by any other Department to consult on the health implications for residents and unborn children living in close proximity to wind farms.

(AQW 19473/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department has not been asked by any other Department to consult on the health implications of living in close proximity to wind farms.

My Department has not commissioned any research on the health implications of wind turbines. My Department is not aware of any research carried out by any other Department on this issue.

Wind Turbines

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what research has been carried out by his Department or any other Department on the health implications of wind turbines.

(AQW 19475/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department has not been asked by any other Department to consult on the health implications of living in close proximity to wind farms.

My Department has not commissioned any research on the health implications of wind turbines. My Department is not aware of any research carried out by any other Department on this issue.

Wind Turbines

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the outcome of any research that his Department has carried out in relation to the health implications of wind turbines. (AQW 19476/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department has not been asked by any other Department to consult on the health implications of living in close proximity to wind farms.

My Department has not commissioned any research on the health implications of wind turbines. My Department is not aware of any research carried out by any other Department on this issue.

Electricity: Pylons

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department has ever been asked by any other Department to consult on the health implications for residents and unborn children living in close proximity to electricity pylons.

(AQW 19477/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department has not been asked by any other Department to consult on the health implications of living in close proximity to electricity pylons or electricity substations.

My Department has not commissioned any research on the health implications of electricity pylons or electricity substations. My Department is not aware of any research carried out by any other Department on this issue.

Electric and magnetic fields (EMFs) are both produced wherever electricity is used. Common sources are electrical wiring and appliances in the home, electricity substations and electricity power lines.

The Health Protection Agency (HPA) provides support and specialist advice to DHSSPS on a wide range of health protection matters including radiation protection. The role of HPA in this regard includes maintaining an oversight of relevant national and international research, reviews and guidance produced by authoritative and competent scientific bodies such as the International Commission on Non-Ionizing Radiation Protection (ICNIRP), the European Commission Scientific Committee on Emerging and Newly Identified Health Risks (SCENIHR), the World Health Organisation (WHO) and the HPA's own independent Advisory Group on Non-Ionising Radiation (AGNIR).

In 2004 the Health Protection Agency (HPA) Radiation Protection Division (formerly the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB)) published advice on limiting public exposure to electromagnetic fields following an extensive review of the science and a public consultation. This advice recommended the adoption in the UK of guidelines from ICNIRP for limiting exposures to EMFs. This advice remains extant. The European Council Recommendation EC/519/1999 adopts the same levels.

HPA advise that the evidence to date suggests that in general there are no adverse effects on the health of the population of the UK caused by exposure to EMFs below the guideline levels.

HPA has also developed advice in response to the SAGE (Stakeholder Advisory Group on extremely low frequency electromagnetic fields) recommendation for more information to be provided to people about exposures and the actions they could take to reduce exposures. This information is available on the HPA web site.

Electricity: Pylons

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what research has been carried out by his Department or any other Department on the health implications of electricity pylons. (AQW 19478/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department has not been asked by any other Department to consult on the health implications of living in close proximity to electricity pylons or electricity substations.

My Department has not commissioned any research on the health implications of electricity pylons or electricity substations. My Department is not aware of any research carried out by any other Department on this issue.

Cancer

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what preventative measures are being taken to reduce the high level of new cancer incidence being diagnosed in North Down. (AQW 19480/11-15)

Mr Poots: Information in the Health Committee's recent report on Health Inequalities indicated that North Down had the highest cancer prevalence rate (18 per 1,000). However, following standardisation for the age of the population, rates of all cancers combined were 7.1% lower for males and 6.4% lower for females in North Down than the Northern Ireland average.

The Department has brought forward measures for the prevention and early detection of cancer including:

- the Cancer Prevention, Treatment and Care Service Framework;
- Bowel cancer and breast cancer screening programmes and, for Cervical cancer, screening and the HPV (Human Papilloma Virus) immunisation programme;
- Development of the new public health strategic framework and a number of underpinning health improvement strategies. In particular: –
  - Lung cancer and other smoking related cancers a new ten-year tobacco control strategy in 2012;

 Melanoma and other Skin cancers - a new strategy for prevention of skin cancer in July 2011 as well as the commencement of the sunbed legislation;

- The New Strategic Direction for Drugs and Alcohol; and
- The Obesity Prevention Strategic Framework.

Preventative services for residents of North Down are commissioned and/or provided by the Public Health Agency and the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust, as well as by primary care, community health development workers, and the Community and Voluntary sector:

- Regional cancer awareness programmes in the last year these have focused on Breast, Bowel, Skin, Lung, Cervical and Oral Cancer; and
- A range of locally provided health improvement programmes including:
  - Smoking cessation services targeting young people, manual workers, individuals residing in areas of deprivation, and pregnant women and their partners;
  - Skin cancer prevention programmes (such as Living Willows);
  - Physical activity and weight programmes (such as Bike-it and the Healthwise Physical Activity Referral Programme);
  - Healthy eating programmes (such as Cook it! and Community allotments/gardens); and
  - A new alcohol project delivering brief intervention services to hazardous drinkers across the South Eastern area in GP practices.

Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children: Clark Clinic

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the future of Clark Clinic at the Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children.

(AQW 19482/11-15)

Mr Poots: I refer the member to the answer that I gave to AQO'S 3137/11-15 and 3146/11-15.

Card Before You Leave Scheme

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assurances he can give that the Card Before You Leave Scheme will be maintained for the foreseeable future.

(AQW 19506/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) has confirmed that the Card Before You Leave (CBYL) Scheme will be maintained for the foreseeable future. It is fully operational and well embedded in all Trusts.

The HSCB's evaluation of the scheme is expected to be completed shortly. Any work emerging from this review will be progressed through the joint PHA and HSCB Self Harm Working Group.

Paediatric Cardiac Care

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is being done to ensure that the standards of paediatric cardiac care are maintained during the current review of the service.

(AQW 19513/11-15)

Mr Poots: I am advised that the Health and Social Care Board continues to ensure that robust arrangements are in place for all children who require cardiac care. All centres undertaking surgery on children from Northern Ireland submit outcome data to the centrally held register, the Congenital Cardiac Audit Database (CCAD), which publishes information on mortality rates for surgical and cardiological interventional procedures.

DHSSPS: Capital Spend

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail his Department's capital spend since May 2011, broken down by constituency area.

(AQW 19518/11-15)

Mr Poots: Expenditure is not currently collated or monitored at constituency level.

My Department's capital spend for 2011/12 was £204.5m. The approved capital budget for 2012/13 is £325m. The following table provides a breakdown of the spend by Trusts and other Bodies:

Total	£204.5M	£325M

Electricity: Pylons

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the outcome of any research that his Department has carried out in relation to the health implications of electricity pylons.

(AQW 19539/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department has not been asked by any other Department to consult on the health implications of living in close proximity to electricity pylons or electricity substations.

The Health Protection Agency (HPA) provides support and specialist advice to DHSSPS on a wide range of health protection matters including radiation protection. The role of HPA in this regard includes maintaining an oversight of relevant national and international research, reviews and guidance produced by authoritative and competent scientific bodies such as the International Commission on Non-Ionizing Radiation Protection (ICNIRP), the European Commission Scientific Committee on Emerging and Newly Identified Health Risks (SCENIHR), the World Health Organisation (WHO) and the HPA's own independent Advisory Group on Non-Ionising Radiation (AGNIR).

In 2004 the Health Protection Agency (HPA) Radiation Protection Division (formerly the National Radiological Protection Board (NRPB)) published advice on limiting public exposure to electromagnetic fields following an extensive review of the science and a public consultation. This advice recommended the adoption in the UK of guidelines from ICNIRP for limiting exposures to EMFs. This advice remains extant. The European Council Recommendation EC/519/1999 adopts the same levels.

HPA advise that the evidence to date suggests that in general there are no adverse effects on the health of the population of the UK caused by exposure to EMFs below the guideline levels.

HPA has also developed advice in response to the SAGE (Stakeholder Advisory Group on extremely low frequency electromagnetic fields) recommendation for more information to be provided to people about exposures and the actions they could take to reduce exposures. This information is available on the HPA web site.

Prisoners: Cost

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice to detail the daily cost per prisoner to the Northern Ireland Prison Service. (AQW 18959/11-15)

In 2011-12 the cost per prisoner place was £71,398. This is equivalent to a daily cost per prisoner place of £195.61

Justice and Security (Northern Ireland) Act 2007

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many cases per court division are currently in the court system in relation to charges brought under the Justice and Security (Northern Ireland) Act 2007. (AQW 18973/11-15)

Mr Ford: As of 27 January 2013, there were a total of 29 active cases against which a Certificate under Section 1 of the Justice and Security (Northern Ireland) Act 2007 (the Act) has been issued by the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Court Division	Belfast	Londonderry	Total
Cases	28	1	29

Section 4 of the Act provides for these cases to be held in Belfast unless the Lord Chief Justice otherwise directs.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Staff

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice what is the estimated total cost of compensation payments made to date to Northern Ireland Prison Service staff who were wrongly suspended or dismissed, for any reason, on the recommendation of the Prisoner Ombudsman.

(AQW 18975/11-15)

Mr Ford: I would refer the Member to the reply I provided to AQW/18562/11-15 on 1 February 2013.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Consultants

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 17940/11-15, whether the Northern Ireland Prison Service intends to engage more consultants.

(AQW 18976/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) has engaged its Integrated Design Team Framework to progress the delivery of several business cases during the next twelve months as well as the Business Consultancy Service (BCS) to profile the potential benefits of its Reform Programme.

The full scope of the requirements to resource the NIPS Reform Programme is currently under development, including staffing requirements.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Staff

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many Northern Ireland Prison Service staff since 2004 have been dismissed but subsequently have had the decision overturned by the Northern Ireland Civil Service Appeal Board; and how many were reinstated in their posts or awarded compensation.

(AQW 18977/11-15)

Mr Ford: Since 2004 seven individuals dismissed from the Northern Ireland Prison Service have had this decision overturned by the Northern Ireland Civil Service Appeal Board and were awarded compensation.

Convictions: Disclosure

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the circumstances in case 13/008028 which enabled the offender to register with a recruitment agency to which he failed to disclose his convictions, and obtained work abroad whilst subject to a notification order; (ii) the agencies that were tasked with monitoring the offender; and (iii) any other actions taken to monitor the behaviour of the offender.

(AQW 18990/11-15)

Mr Ford: As this case is before the court, it would not be appropriate for me to provide any detail.

Prisoners: Supporting Prisoner-at-risk Procedures

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18303/11-15 and following the inspection at Maghaberry Prison between 19-23 March 2012, which identified a number of deficiencies in the Supporting Prisoner at Risk procedures and in the December 2012 report, recommended that arrangements for safeguarding vulnerable prisoners should be strengthened and reflect regional guidance and that Supporting Prisoner at Risk procedures should be improved with a particular focus on case management and reviews, whether the alteration of current Supporting Prisoner at Risk procedures could be of assistance in addressing problems, or whether the issues in relation to Supporting Prisoner at Risk procedures have been rejected.

Mr Ford: Maghaberry Prison has accepted the recommendation that Supporting Prisoner at Risk (SPAR) procedures should be improved with a particular focus on case management and reviews. Representatives from the Prisoner Safety and Support Team participate in SPAR case conferences, ensuring good multi-disciplinary representation and case management. Regular audits of SPAR documentation are also completed.

Prisons: Night Custody Staff

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to concerns raised in the report into the investigation of the closure of the Prisoner Assessment Unit, whether night custody staff were trained in control and restraint techniques. (AQW 19014/11-15)

Mr Ford: Night Custody Officers were trained in Control and Restraints as part of their induction into the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

Prison Officers' Association

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the number of law firms which are retained by the Prison Officers' Association and their locations and; (ii) whether prison officers who are members of the Prison Officers' Association and would prefer to instruct a solicitor of their choice in duty related matters, will receive Prison Officers' Association funding or whether the Prison Officers' Association only provides funding to officers who use a firm that has been retained by the Association.

(AQW 19015/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Prisoner Officers' Association is an independent body and the Member may wish to write to it directly about this matter.

Criminal Justice Inspection: Review of DARD Central Investigation Service

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18193/11-15 and AQW 18189/11-15, and given that the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development requested that the Criminal Justice Inspectorate conduct an independent inspection of the Central Investigation Service, why he did not facilitate this with a change in legislation.

(AQW 19021/11-15)

Mr Ford: No approach was made to me or to my officials to add the DARD's Central Investigation Service to the list of organisations that can be inspected by the Criminal Justice Inspection Northern Ireland. I am advised that in May 2010 the DARD Permanent Secretary spoke with the Deputy Chief Inspector of Criminal Justice Inspection Northern Ireland (CJINI) with a view to CJI conducting an independent review of the DARD Central Investigation Service and was advised CJI did not have the statutory remit to conduct an investigation into an organisation that is not specified in section 46 of the of the Justice (Northern Ireland) Act 2002.

I have previously advised that I will consult the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development and the Chief Inspector on this issue.

Prison Service Trust: Contributions

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) how much his Department has contributed to the Prison Service Trust in each of last three years; (ii) what is the projected funding to the Trust for each of the next two years; (iii) what services are offered by or through the Trust; and (iv) whether the services provided by the Trust are available to all Prison Service staff. (AQW 19050/11-15)

Mr Ford: Table A below shows the contribution provided by the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) to the Prison Service Trust (PST) in each of the last three financial years:

Table A

	£000	£000	£000
Grant funding by NIPS to the Prison Service Trust	298	298	302

The projected funding to the PST in each of the next two financial years is shown in table B below:

Table B

	£000	£000	£000

The PST provides healthcare, life planning and support services. These services are offered to its client base which includes serving members who donate to the Trust, family members of murdered officers and officers who died in service or retired on ill-health grounds.

This does not preclude the Trust from the provision of other services, or to persons other than those within the client group from monies other than those received by government grant, i.e. member subscriptions.

Maghaberry Prison: Acting Governor

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether the Acting Governor of HMP Maghaberry (i) was assaulted whilst in the course of his work; (ii) whether this was by a prisoner; and (iii) whether the person was charged. (AQW 19071/11-15)

Mr Ford: There is no "Acting Governor" of Maghaberry Prison. The Governor has confirmed that there have been no assaults or injuries at work involving those in the Governor grades.

Human Trafficking: National Crime Agency

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to outline the benefits that the National Crime Agency could provide in tackling human trafficking.

(AQW 19072/11-15)

Mr Ford: The plan was that the National Crime Agency (NCA) would build on the functions and expertise of the Serious Organised Crime Agency and the UK Human Trafficking Centre to provide an enhanced approach to tackling human trafficking. The Executive, however, has not supported the extension of the NCA to Northern Ireland.

The Department of Justice is now working with the Home Office and other relevant partners to establish what the impact will be. The aim is to continue to tap into the NCA's expertise in tackling all crime types, including human trafficking. I still hope to see, for instance, the sharing of information and provision of advice; but the NCA will not have an operational role here. As a result it will not be able to undertake civil recovery against human traffickers or directly assist in human trafficking operations in Northern Ireland.

Prison Officers' Association

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail the legal costs incurred by the Northern Ireland Prison Officers' Association, related to members in the Northern Ireland Prison Service, for each of the last seven years. (AQW 19073/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Prisoner Officers' Association is an independent body and the Member may wish to write to it directly about this matter

Legal Aid

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18357/11-15, to detail (i) the dates that the figures supplied relate to; (ii) when this case first went to court; (iii) on what date Legal Aid was granted; and (iv) the total counsel fees submitted to date, or the estimated total based on the level and number of counsel involved and the duration of the case. (AQW 19074/11-15)

Mr Ford: The figures provided in AQW/18357/11-15, relate to magistrates court proceedings which ran from 21 January 2009 to 25 February 2009. The first court attendance was 21 January 2009 and legal aid was granted on that date. No counsel fees have been submitted to date. The defendants were committed for trial to the Crown Court and VHCC certificates have been granted in respect of these proceedings. These fees will be determined by the Taxing Master on the basis of a time-based claim. It is not possible to estimate the total fees at this time.

Review of Public Administration

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice which departmental functions will be transferred to local government under the Review of Public Administration.

(AQW 19095/11-15)

Mr Ford: No departmental functions will be transferred from the Department of Justice to local government under the Review of Public Administration.

Court Apparel

Mr Rogers asked Minister of Justice whether he plans to review the practice of wigs and gowns being worn by personnel, other than judges, in courts.

(AQW 19108/11-15)

Mr Ford: The practice of wigs and gowns being worn in court by the legal profession is a matter for their relevant professional bodies. I have no plans to review the court dress worn by the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals staff who support the judiciary in the role of tipstaff or court crier.

G8 Summit: Policing Costs

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Justice what assurances he has received from the British Government with regard to covering the additional policing costs which may arise from the G8 summit taking place in Fermanagh in June 2013. (AQW 19147/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Office committed to ensuring PSNI have the resources required to deliver a safe and secure summit. The PSNI are developing cost estimates to be reviewed by my officials, which will form the basis of discussions with HM Treasury, led by DFP on behalf of the Executive.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Financial Assistance

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18104/11-15, whether all financial assistance available will be paid by the Northern Ireland Prison Service to staff forced from their homes; and for how long temporary accommodation costs will be paid to allow purchase of a new home.

(AQW 19152/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service will reimburse in full those costs necessarily incurred as a result of removal. Assistance with temporary accommodation is normally limited to six months.

Gerry McGeough

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) what measures are in place to ensure Gerry McGeough complies with the terms and conditions of his release; (ii) the course of action that will be taken if the terms and conditions are breached; and (iii) whether the implications for the victim in this case were considered.

(AQW 19155/11-15)

Mr Ford: The operation of the legislation under which Mr Gerry McGeough was released (the Northern Ireland (Sentences) Act 1998) remains the responsibility of the Secretary of State. That legislation requires fixed term prisoners released under its terms to comply with two conditions, namely, that the individual does not support a specified organisation (within the meaning of Section 3 of the aforementioned Sentences Act) and that they do not become concerned in the commission, preparation or instigation of acts of terrorism connected with the affairs of Northern Ireland.

An individual believed to be in breach of these conditions may be liable to have his licence suspended by the Secretary of State and be returned to prison and to have his case considered thereafter by the independent Sentence Review Commissioners. The Sentences Act provides for the Secretary of State to give victims information about releases where she has received a written request to do so.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Staff

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18253/11-15, (i) how many of the 26 staff dismissed for gross misconduct from the Northern Ireland Prison Service, exercised their right of appeal to the Northern Ireland Civil Service Appeal Board; (ii) how many of those who lodged a Notice of Appeal against dismissal subsequently withdrew the appeal prior to the hearing taking place; (iii) of those former staff who withdrew appeals, how many received a payment from the Northern Ireland Prison Service; and (iv) of those former staff who received such payment, how many were reinstated to the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

(AQW 19156/11-15)

Mr Ford: I would refer the Member to the response provided to AQW 18253/11-15.

15 staff exercised their right to appeal to NICSAB.

Prisoners: Supporting Prisoner-at-risk Procedures

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how Supporting Prisoner at Risk procedures will be improved with a particular focus on case management and reviews, as recommended in the inspection report on Maghaberry Prison on 19-23 March 2012. (AQW 19158/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Prisoner Safety and Support Team within Maghaberry now attend and quality assure Supporting Prisoner at Risk (SPAR) case conferences ensuring good multi-disciplinary representation and case management. In addition, a new auditing system for SPAR booklets has been developed and implemented.

Prisoners: Monitoring and Supervision on Release

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to Prisoner A, who was responsible for the monitoring and supervision of this person after release from prison.

(AQW 19159/11-15)

Mr Ford: Where licence conditions are imposed on persons released from prison they are monitored by the Probation Board with support, where appropriate, from the PSNI, Prison Service and DOJ.

Woburn House

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice for an update on plans for the Northern Ireland Prison Service site at Woburn House/Lisnevin, Millilse.

(AQW 19178/11-15)

Mr Ford: The site will continue in its present role as the Prison Service College until the Northern Ireland Community Safety College at Desertcreat is completed. Thereafter, the Millisle site will be advertised for sale on the open market.

Professional Standards Unit

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 17980/11-15, whether the Professional Standards Unit will have a remit to investigate (i) the conduct of senior staff and governors; and (ii) retrospective issues against staff employed in the Prison Service.

(AQW 19228/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Professional Standards Unit will have responsibility for all staff but will not deal with retrospective cases.

Magilligan and Hydebank Wood: New Technology

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the evaluation of the pilot schemes to test new technology at Magilligan and Hydebank Wood which were announced by the Director General in August 2012. (AQW 19229/11-15)

Mr Ford: The three month pilots of millimetre wave technology at Magilligan and Hydebank Wood Young Offender Centre have now concluded and the results of the pilots are currently being evaluated.

Prisoners: Death in Custody

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to the official Terms of Reference for Investigation of Deaths in Prison Custody by the Prisoner Ombudsman, (i) what is meant by the "discretion of the Ombudsman to investigate to the extent appropriate in cases, that raise issues about the care provided by the prison service"; (ii) whether the Ombudsman has the legislative power to pursue or investigate matters of residual discipline concerning staff who have not directly contributed to the circumstances surrounding a death in custody, or when not on duty at the time in question; (iii) under which legislation the Ombudsman has this power; (iii) in how many cases the Ombudsman has pursued prison staff by way of investigation in terms of evidence gathering supplied to the Prison Service; (iv) to provide the number of cases of death in custody since the Ombudsman took office, in which the issue of the suspension of staff was discussed between the Ombudsman, the Director General or the Deputy and where undertakings were given by the Prison Service that prison staff would be suspended. (AQW 19230/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- (i) Within the Prisoner Ombudsman's Terms of Reference, the Ombudsman has discretion to investigate, to the extent appropriate, cases that raise issues about the care provided by the prison, and the Ombudsman will consider the circumstances of a death where the individual is on temporary release or has been recently released from custody. In exercising discretion, the Ombudsman will consider concerns of the family, medical treatment while in custody, and post release, discharge arrangements and issues of individual vulnerability.
- (ii) The Ombudsman does not have legislative power to pursue investigations.
- (iii) As per (ii).
- (iv) The Ombudsman does not pursue prison staff during investigations; rather investigations are intended to identify the facts surrounding the circumstances of a death in custody.
- (v) I refer to AQW 18562/11-15, and confirm that the Ombudsman has not been involved in discussions with the Director General or Deputy on suspension of prison staff, although the Ombudsman was informed of the intention to suspend staff members pending a full internal disciplinary investigation.

Maghaberry Prison: Prisoner Reception

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in light of the findings by Criminal Justice Inspection Northern Ireland following inspection at Maghaberry between 19 and 23 March 2002 and the subsequent recommendation in the December 2012 Report that the length of time prisoners spend in reception should be significantly reduced and initial health interviews shortened, whether health screening and access to appropriate healthcare is a Prison Service core business aim; and whether health screening will be included within its performance monitoring system as purposeful activity. (AQW 19231/11-15)

Mr Ford: A continuous change programme is currently ongoing to reduce the time prisoners need to spend in reception.

However, the individual needs of each prisoner need to be assessed prior to their first night in Custody.

Delivery of Healthcare services within the Northern Ireland Prison Service is the responsibility of the South Eastern Trust.

The Trust is committed to providing services which are equivalent to those provided to the wider community. While the Trust has put procedures in place to improve and streamline healthcare screening during the committal process, it remains an important opportunity for newly committed prisoners to discuss medical conditions, chronic disorders and any outstanding hospital or GP appointments. Healthcare screenings also provide the opportunity to ensure that prisoners receive timely and appropriate healthcare to meet their clinical needs when committed to prison.

PSNI: Additional Personnel

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice what recent discussions he has held with the Chief Constable regarding levels of additional personnel required and the range of their deployment.

(AQW 19240/11-15)

Mr Ford: PSNI personnel matters, including recruitment and deployment, are an operational matter for the Chief Constable. However, the Chief Constable has advised me that the PSNI is currently conducting a review of their resilience and capability against demands going forward. This review will form the basis of any future business case in relation to the recruitment of additional officers, will be evidence based and conducted in an ethos of scrutiny and challenge, to ensure that there is a well articulated and understood assessment of future need.

Bangor Courthouse

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18452/11-15, what is the closing date for the public sector trawl; and when an announcement on future usage will be made.

(AQW 19256/11-15)

Mr Ford: The closing date for expressions of interest in Bangor Courthouse was 7 February 2013. Land & Property Services has advised that some flexibility in time limits is allowed and that they would not refuse a serious expression of interest within any reasonable timescale, provided that no open market sale was imminent.

There is no procedure for the announcement of the expression of interest exercise or for open market sales of property.

Royal Ulster Constabulary Part-time Reserve Gratuity Scheme

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18141/11-15, whether the decision on how the residue is spent will be a matter for the Executive as a whole or for his Department.

(AQW 19258/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Part Time Reserve Gratuity terms and conditions were set by the Northern Ireland Office, in agreement with HM Treasury. My Department administered the Scheme on their behalf.

It is a matter for the Department of Justice to determine how the residue will be spent, in consultation with NIO and HM Treasury and not a matter for the Executive as a whole.

Fuel Laundering

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Justice how many people have been (i) prosecuted; and (ii) convicted in connection with illegal fuel laundering in each of the last five years.

(AQW 19267/11-15)

Mr Ford: Fuel laundering offences may be prosecuted under the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979.

HMRC have advised that 27 people have been prosecuted in respect of HMRC reported fuels related frauds in the last five financial years, including 2012-13 to date, all of whom have been convicted.

Sexual Abuse: Roman Catholic Priests

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to detail the sentences imposed on Roman Catholic priests in respect of convictions since 2000, for offences of sexual abuse.

(AQW 19321/11-15)

Mr Ford: I refer the Member to my response to AQW/8729/11-15.

Restorative Justice Schemes

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice how much funding is provided by his Department to Restorative Justice Schemes, in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 19352/11-15)

Mr Ford: The funding provided to Community Restorative Justice Ireland and Northern Ireland Alternatives through the Department of Justice is set out in the table below.

Financial Year	Community Restorative Justice Ireland	Northern Ireland Alternatives
2010-11	£95,000	£90,000
2011-12	£101,000	£95,000
2012-13	£100,000	£100,000

Attacks on Elderly People

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice what plans his Department has to increase sentences for those who attack elderly people.

(AQW 19416/11-15)

Mr Ford: Sentencing in the individual case is a matter for the judiciary, taking into account all the circumstances of the offence and any relevant mitigating or aggravating factors in a case. In making these decisions, judges are guided by sentencing guidelines, which indicate that the age and vulnerability of the victim should be treated as an aggravating factor in determining the appropriate sentence.

In the Programme for Government, I have made a commitment to consult with the Lord Chief Justice on sentencing guidelines.

Union Flag: Ballymena Courthouse

Mr Allister asked Minister of Justice (i) why the Union flag was not flown from Ballymena Courthouse on the designated day 6 February 2012; (ii) whether disciplinary or other action has been taken in consequence; (iii) what action has been taken; and (iv) what steps have been taken to prevent this happening again.

(AQW 19565/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Union flag was not flown at Ballymena Courthouse on 6 February 2013 due to an oversight by G4S Secure Solutions (UK) Limited (G4S), the security and ancilliary services provider to the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service (NICTS).

Under the terms of the contract with G4S, they are required to fly the Union flag at all court premises on designated flag flying days. G4S were asked for an immediate report on why this failure occurred and have advised that it was due to human error. The NICTS Chief Executive is meeting the Northern Ireland Managing Director of G4S urgently to discuss this matter. Any disciplinary action will be a matter for G4S.

Arlene Arkinson

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Justice, in light of the announcement made by Senior Coroner Mr John Leckey on Wednesday 6 February, whether he plans to provide an explanation to the family of the late Arlene Arkinson for the failure to hold an inquest into her death and to ensure that the necessary resources are made available to the Coroners Office to hold a full inquest.

(AQW 19606/11-15)

Mr Ford: The scheduling and holding of an inquest is a matter for the Coroner and I understand that there are a number of outstanding issues which need to be dealt with before the Coroner can convene an inquest. It is not clear what additional resources the Senior Coroner considers are required. Officials will meet with him at the earliest opportunity to discuss his concerns

Cattle Theft

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Justice in relation to the Clogher Valley area, Co.Tyrone: 'F' District, to detail (i) the number of cattle reported as stolen; (ii) the number of people that have been arrested for cattle theft; and (iii) whether there been any convictions relating to cattle theft, in the last two years.

(AQW 19747/11-15)

Mr Ford: There is no specific offence of 'cattle theft' and convictions datasets do not record any information on the nature of items stolen that would allow us to identify convictions for theft of cattle.

While they may not be able to supply data specifically relating to cattle, further information in relation to recorded offences of theft in 'F' District may be obtained by contacting PSNI directly.

Fuel Laundering

Mr Irwin asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 19326/11-15, to detail (i) the law that defines the offence of selling laundered fuel; (ii) the procedures used by the agencies involved in inspecting filling station forecourts to detect laundered fuel; (iii) the penalties for selling laundered fuel; and (iv) the number of successful prosecutions for the sale of laundered fuel, over the last ten years.

(AQW 19748/11-15)

Mr Ford: These are of course reserved matters for which Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs (HMRC) is responsible/accountable to Westminster however they advise that:

(i) The offence of selling laundered fuel is covered by Section 170 of the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979 and Section 13 of the Hydrocarbon Oil Duties Act 1979. In addition, any fuel, storage tanks, dispensing pumps, associated equipment and any vehicles fuelled with or containing laundered fuel are liable to seizure and forfeiture under the provisions of section 139 and 141 of the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979.

(ii) HMRC Officers use a range of statutory powers to enter premises to test fuel and inspect records including, regulatory powers under Regulations 47 and 48 of the Hydrocarbon Oils Regulations 1973; Search warrants issued under Section 161 of the Customs & Excise Management Act 1979, Search warrants issued under Article 10 of the Police & Criminal Evidence (NI) Order 1989 and Entry and search of premises after arrest under Article 20 of Police & Criminal Evidence (NI) Order 1989.

- (iii) Upon conviction on indictment the penalty for being knowingly concerned in the fraudulent evasion of duty are, a fine of any amount and/or to a term of imprisonment not exceeding 7 years. Conviction in summary proceedings has a maximum penalty of 3 times the value of the goods and/or a term of 6 months imprisonment. Following conviction, the Crown may also seek Confiscation Orders in respect of criminal assets.
- (iv) It is not possible to identify the number of prosecutions relating specifically to the sale of laundered fuel however, details of the number of successful prosecutions for all types of fuel offences have been provided as answer to AQW 19267/11-15

Department for Regional Development

Parking Meters

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail how his Department sets the Euro currency rate for onstreet parking meters.

(AQW 18994/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): The Euro currency rate for on-street parking meters was based on the market Euro exchange rate and the direct costs of conversion incurred by the service provider. The Euro currency rate is incorporated into the service provider's contract. This rate is fixed, therefore, Roads Service neither benefits from or is disadvantaged by any currency fluctuations.

Following the commencement of the new Parking Enforcement contract on 30 October 2012, the Euro currency rate is currently being reviewed. I would point out that the provision of the additional facility to accept euro coins incurs additional operational costs in relation to programming, cash handling and banking. Therefore, the exchange rate which is offered for euro coins at the machines needs to take account of the additional costs involved.

Parking Meters

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister for Regional Development how much revenue his Department has generated as a result of increased Euro exchange rates charged by street parking meters, in each year since 2010. (AQW 18995/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has not generated any revenue from parking, as a result of increased euro exchange rates.

For those Pay and Display machines that accept euro coins, a fixed exchange rate has applied for some considerable time. The rate is programmed into the machines and does not take account of exchange rate fluctuations.

Following the commencement of the new parking enforcement contract with NSL, the euro exchange rate for Pay and Display machines is currently under review. I would point out that the provision of the additional facility to accept euro coins incurs additional operational costs in relation to programming, cash handling and banking. Therefore, the exchange rate which is offered for euro coins at the machines needs to take account of the additional costs involved.

Traffic: Greater Belfast

Mr McDevitt asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the average speeds of traffic at peak times on arterial routes in the Greater Belfast area.

(AQW 19051/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service carries out a Journey Time Survey for the Belfast Metropolitan Area on a biennial basis, to measure the journey times on 11 predetermined routes in the Belfast Metropolitan Area during the morning peak traffic period.

The most recent data is contained in the 2011 report and details of average speeds during the morning peak period (07.30 – 09.15) are shown in the table below:

Traffic: Attendants

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development how many traffic attendants have been assaulted or injured in the course of their duties, in the last twelve months.

(AQW 19063/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Traffic Attendants are employed by a private company, NSL Services Group (NSL).

NSL has advised that, in 2012, there were 29 cases of physical abuse of Traffic Attendants, with 12 of these cases resulting in injury.

Fixed Penalty Notices

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development how many motorists (i) appealed fixed penalty notices issued in 2012; and (ii) had their appeals upheld.

(AQW 19065/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In 2012, some 16,900 challenges to Penalty Charge Notices (PCNs) were received. This figure equates to some 15% of all PCNs issued. In the same period, some 9,100 PCN challenges were successful which is approximately 54% of the number of challenges received.

Grit Boxes

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he plans to reduce the criteria for grit boxes to be placed on individual streets.

(AQW 19086/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Firstly, I should explain that the policy of my Department's Roads Service in respect of all aspects of winter maintenance is to target the limited resources available for this service on the busier main through routes.

The Member is aware that on roads adopted or maintained by Roads Service, which do not qualify for inclusion onto the treated road network, salt bins or grit piles may be provided for use by the public, on a self-help basis. Providing the necessary criteria are met, there are no limits placed on the number of salt bins which may be provided, although they will not normally be provided within 100m of another bin.

When considering requests for the provision of a salt bins, Roads Service carries out an evaluation using a criteria-based system which takes into account various factors, together with residential usage and community facilities including schools, hospitals and care homes for the elderly. To this end, Roads Service already commits significant resources to maintain approximately 4,800 salt bins and over 50,000 grit piles provided on public roads, which it endeavours to constantly replenish throughout the winter period.

As I am sure you will appreciate, Roads Service is required to work within its policy guidelines, which are established to be fair and equitable whilst taking account of the finite levels of resource and expenditure available. Given current financial pressures, I would not be in a position to vary the criteria for the provision of grit boxes on individual streets.

Railways: Ballymena Railway Station

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the future plans for the provision of a ticket office at Ballymena Railway Station.

(AQW 19094/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink advise that they have no immediate plans to permanently reopen the ticket office at Ballymena Railway Station. Staff at Ballymena Station are now required to inspect / sell tickets at the platform areas which provides a much improved visible and mobile staff presence in the station. However they may continue to operate from a ticket office at certain times of the day. Passenger information on where to purchase a ticket is available at the existing office location.

Review of Public Administration

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development which departmental functions will be transferred to local government under the Review of Public Administration.

(AQW 19096/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Minister for the Environment is currently consulting with Executive Colleagues on the list of functions to transfer under the current programme of Local Government Reform.

Water: Leakages and Defective Pipes

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) what percentage of water is currently lost to leakages and defective pipes in the system before point of delivery; and (ii) what effect such defects have on the purity of water. (AQW 19099/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that (i) the total amount of water entering the water distribution network (referred to as distribution input) in 2011/12 was 584 MI/d. The level of leakage in 2011/12 was 168 MI/d of which 122 MI/d occurs before the point of delivery. It should be noted that both Ofwat and NIAUR do not record the level of leakage as a percentage of distribution input. The reason being that water demand will vary dependent on customer usage and the pertaining weather conditions in any year. (ii) Water mains operate under positive pressure and as such there are no water quality risks associated with leaking defects. NIW has in place a comprehensive sampling and testing programme, overseen by the Drinking Water Inspectorate, to ensure that quality of water delivered to the public meets Regulatory Standards.

Water: Chemicals

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) all chemicals that are added to water and the rationale for doing so; and (ii) the cost of adding such chemicals to the water supply. (AQW 19100/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that (i) in order to meet the requirements of current Drinking Water Regulations and to provide wholesome drinking water to customers, a number of chemicals are used in the water treatment process to remove impurities present in raw water. The table below details the chemicals which have been approved by the Drinking Water Inspector for use in the water treatment process.

Chemical Type	Purpose
Aluminium and Iron products	Coagulation and removal of organics from raw water; Thickening of the sludge by-product before disposal.
Polyelectrolyte	Used as a coagulant aid in the clarification process.
Lime / Sodium Carbonate / Sulphuric Acid	Adjusts the pH of the water to optimise treatment processes.
Carbon	Enhances removal of organics and pesticides.
Orthophosphoric Acid	Used to reduce plumbosolvency from existing lead pipes.
Chlorine	Disinfection of the final water.

(ii) The cost of chemicals used in the drinking water treatment process is approximately £6.65 million per annum.

Residents Parking Scheme: Bogside Area

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the residents parking scheme for the Bogside area

(AQW 19101/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Residents Parking Scheme for the Bogside area is progressing through the legislative process and it is anticipated the scheme will be implemented late in 2013.

Roads: Oil Spillages

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development what legislation he intends to bring forward to address the problem of oil spillages on roads.

(AQW 19105/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has no plans to bring forward specific legislation. Roads Service already has plans in place to deal with roads related incidents, including oil spillages, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week and responds immediately to any calls regarding such issues.

The policy and procedures that direct Roads Service in its response to oil spillages are aimed at ensuring the safety of road users and preventing oil from entering watercourses or causing other environmental damage.

Treatment of oil spillages is undertaken by trained personnel in accordance with advice from manufacturers and other statutory organisations, such as the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA), as required.

All Roads Service policies and procedures are reviewed on a continuous basis to ensure that all operations are carried out in line with current health and safety procedures.

However, it should be noted that primary responsibility for dealing with oil spillages lies with those who caused the spillage to occur in the first place, although it has to be accepted that it can often be difficult to trace those responsible.

DRD: G8 Summit

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development what additional resources his Department will receive to cover any additional costs as a result of hosting the G8 Summit and from where these resources will be allocated. (AQW 19161/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service has made a preliminary assessment of essential works in relation to the G8 Summit and has obtained DFP approval to commence priority works with a view to confirming a full bid in the 2013/14 financial year. This will be funded by displacing some work planned for this year into the 2013/14 financial year. No bids have been made by the Department for additional resources in support of the Summit in the 2012/13 financial year.

Car Parking: Clarawood Estate

Mr Newton asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the car parking problems in the Clarawood Estate and whether he has any plans to address these matters. (AQW 19164/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As with many other social housing estates, Clarawood was designed and built at a time when the level of private car ownership was much lower than it is currently. Roads were primarily intended to provide access, rather than parking. As a result, the level of parking provision is these areas can lead to difficulties for residents seeking to park immediately outside their property. I understand the difficulties this can cause for some residents.

Unfortunately, my Department's Roads Service does not have sufficient resources to simply provide parking at private residences. However, current policy also recognises that the level of car parking may, in certain circumstances, significantly affect road safety or traffic progression on through routes. In such instances, Roads Service may take appropriate action.

In keeping with this aim, Roads Service has already introduced parking and waiting restrictions to ensure the safe movement of vehicles along main routes within the estate. If you wish to highlight other areas of specific concern, I will arrange to have these assessed by Roads Service officials.

Traffic: Management

Mr Moutray asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans he has for traffic attendants to assist with traffic management at funerals in town centres.

(AQW 19167/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: With the introduction of Decriminalised Parking Enforcement (DPE) in 2006, the role of Traffic Attendants, as set out in The Traffic Management (NI) Order 2005, is to provide enforcement of decriminalised parking contraventions, onstreet, and in Roads Service car parks.

There are no powers to permit Traffic Attendants to provide any other traffic management functions, and this position was supported by the police when DPE was being developed and introduced.

Buses: Banbridge Bus Station

Mr Moutray asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the plans for the upgrade of Banbridge bus station and the progress to date.

(AQW 19168/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department issued a letter of offer in November 2012 giving approval for Translink to proceed with a project to construct an off street Bus Facility in Banbridge. The estimated costs of the project are £746,000.

Translink has developed a scheme to construct the facility at Kenlis Street in Banbridge and it is in the process of finalising Planning Permission. Translink is also currently engaged in purchasing the land required for the facility. Assuming that Planning Permission is approved and land purchase proceeds without any hold-up, the project is expected to be completed around the end of 2013.

Railways: Portadown Station Staff Car Parking

Mr Moutray asked the Minister for Regional Development what additional provision for staff car parking is available at Portadown Railway Station given the removal of a number spaces to facilitate the new building works. (AQW 19170/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised that there will be 11 spaces provided in the revised car park layout for Translink staff. Prior to the new building works there were 12 spaces for Translink staff.

Roads: Northland Road/Springtown Junction

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the Northland Road/Springtown Junction signalisation in Derry, including whether these schemes will be included in the programme for 2013/14. (AQW 19216/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Northland Road/Springtown Junction signalisation scheme in Londonderry is included in my Department's Roads Service 2013/14 works programme for Minor Improvement schemes.

Resident Parking Schemes

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the resident parking schemes currently in operation; (ii) resident parking schemes under consideration or in development; and (iii) the process for proposing resident parking schemes including any criteria by which proposals are assessed. (AQW 19219/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: At present there are no Residents' Parking Schemes operating in Northern Ireland, however, a number of schemes are at various stages of development. These are:

- Lower Malone, Stranmillis Road, Sandy Row, Donegall Pass and College Park Avenue/Rugby Road area in Belfast;
- the Bogside area, Londonderry; and
- the Bridge Street/Massereene Street area, in Antrim.

Roads Service considers a number of factors when considering a request for a Residents' Parking Scheme in an area. However, the main task is to identify whether residents in the area are experiencing significant parking difficulties due to non-resident parking. Parking surveys are undertaken to identify the extent of non-resident parking and assess the extent of available off-street parking provision. Schemes will not be introduced, where residential parking is primarily off-street.

A Residents' Parking Scheme will be justified where, during the working day (normally Monday to Friday 8:00am to 6:00pm):

- it is estimated more than 60% of the available kerbside space is occupied by non-residents' vehicles for more than 5 hours; and,
- more than 80% is occupied in total for the same 5 hours.

Outside of these hours, a scheme may be justified where:

- it is estimated more than 40% of the available kerbside space is occupied by non-residents' vehicles for more than any consecutive 4-hour period outside of the working day; and
- more than 80% is occupied in total for the same 4-hour period.

When there appears to be sufficient justification for a scheme, Roads Service officials will draw up draft scheme designs and meet with local residents to discuss the finer details. Upon completion of this local consultation, Roads Service will issue a questionnaire to all households to gauge the level of support for the scheme. To proceed with a scheme, two thirds of responding households must be in favour of the proposed scheme, subject to a minimum response rate of one third of all households. If the response is positive, proposed layouts are then finalised and the necessary legislative arrangements made.

Ports

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development what are the possibilities for further growth at each of Northern Ireland's ports in 2013.

(AQW 19239/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have regular meetings with the main public trust ports and officials also meet regularly with the Port of Larne. The main possibilities for further growth in 2013 at the four main commercial ports in Northern Ireland are set out as follows:

The overall cargo tonnage through Belfast Harbour is expected to increase in 2013. Key sectors for growth will be windfarm components, bulk coal, aggregates and freight vehicles. Cruise call bookings currently stand at 58, an increase of 29% on last year.

The current works to improve the A8 road to dualling standard throughout its length are hugely significant for the Port of Larne. They will improve the attractiveness of Larne as a port to haulage/logistics business. While traffic is reduced from its 2007 peak, the upgraded road will place Larne in a good position to grow again as the NI economy recovers.

At Londonderry Port there are significant renewable energy development prospects in Biomass and Anaerobic Digestion and the Port hopes to conclude deals this year which will have long term sustainable growth. The conclusion of a land purchase deal in 2013 to extend the Port's land holding would provide a platform for short and medium term development.

Warrenpoint's potential for growth in the short and long term has been improved by the acquisition of an additional 8 acres of land and over 40,000 Square feet of covered storage. It is hoped that a project to increase covered storage adjacent to the quayside will be complete before the end of 2013 so that the storage can be used to increase volumes in 2013. The additional land will allow the port to free up vital quay space to attract new business. In January 2013 Warrenpoint Port discharged its first coal boat in over 10 years.

Car Parking: Pay and Display Machines

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development whether any assessment has been made in the last twelve months of the reliability of Pay and Display machines that are located in departmental controlled car parks. (AQW 19241/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department monitors all parking equipment on a monthly basis to ensure it is being maintained in a working condition. This measurement is incorporated into its parking enforcement and car park management contract with NSL Services

This check measures NSL's performance in seeking to respond to machine faults within 24 hours of reporting, whether the report is automated by the machine or manually. To achieve this Key Performance Indicator (KPI), NSL has to respond within these timescales on at least 98% of occasions in a calendar month. NSL has achieved this KPI during the period January 2012 to December 2012.

Roads: Roundabouts

Mr Moutray asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he plans to change regulations to allow private companies to sponsor landscaping on roundabouts which are located off the M1 slip ways. (AQW 19243/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: While the Department permits private sponsors to fund the planting and maintenance of roundabouts, verges and available areas within car parks, on the majority of the road network, this facility does not extend to areas adjacent to the motorway network which are classed as "Special Roads". As this roundabout is clearly sited on a Special road no such sponsorship would be permitted in this case.

You will appreciate the motorway network presents its own set of issues, with larger volumes of traffic generally travelling at higher speeds than on the rest of the network. There would be concerns over traffic disruption and safety in terms of safe access, both to those people working on landscaped areas adjacent to motorways and other road users.

Given these circumstances, I would have no plans to allow private companies to sponsor landscaping on roundabouts which are located adjacent to the motorway network and categorised as Special Roads, for example the M12 roundabout near the M1 at junction 11.

Finally, sponsorship on roundabouts off the M1 slip ways which are not Special Roads has been permitted, for example the Saintfield Road Roundabout which is managed by the Lisburn City Council.

Roads: Bloomfield Road, Bangor

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans his Department has to resolve the flooding on the Bloomfield Road at the Skipperstone Glen area of Bangor. (AQW 19254/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Roads Service's investigations into the flooding at this location on the Bloomfield Road have highlighted that debris and other foreign matter is being washed into the mouth of a culvert that facilitates the passage of water from Skipperstone Glen to Bloomfield Road playing fields.

Roads Service has carried out temporary measures to prevent debris and other foreign matter entering the road culvert, however, a more permanent measure, in the form of installation of a "grill", will be implemented within the next few weeks.

Buses: Depots

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the location of the bus depots his Department plans to (i) create; and (ii) remove over the next twelve months.

(AQW 19259/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: This is an operational matter for Translink, however it has advised me that it continually reviews the performance of its services, including support structures and facilities, to ensure effectiveness and to improve service quality/efficiency.

Grit Boxes: Holywood

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many grit boxes there are in Holywood. (AQW 19263/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service currently provides 52 salt bins and 5 grit piles within the Holywood area.

Water: Metered Property

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the criteria by which a metered property is determined to be either a domestic property or a farm.

(AQW 19290/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that the property designation applied by Land and Property Services (LPS) for rating purposes is the basis upon which NIW determines whether a property is domestic or non-domestic and therefore liable for water charges. The term "House (Agricultural)" is used by LPS to describe a farm dwelling. If the water supply to the dwelling is also used for non-domestic purposes, such as farming, then the property is liable for water charges and may be eligible for a domestic allowance in respect of the dwelling.

Water: Leakage Charge

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the policy that allows Northern Ireland Water to charge when leakage has occurred between (i) the meter and a domestic property; (ii) the meter and a farm building or water trough; and (iii) the meter and a commercial building.

(AQW 19294/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that the current policy on leakage which affects metered bills seeks to ensure that domestic customers are treated equitably and that non domestic customers are only charged for the services used. In the situations you have described, the policy would be applied as follows:-

- (i) If a leak has occurred between the meter and a domestic property, customers can apply to have both the water and (for properties connected to a public sewer) sewerage elements of the bill adjusted provided certain conditions have been met. These conditions relate to the location of the leak, the repair of the leak and whether or not the leak occurred through negligence. A site inspection may be carried out to verify the location and repair of the leak. This policy ensures equality of treatment across all domestic customers.
- (ii) In cases where the leak has occurred between the meter and a farm building or water trough, the customer will be billed and will be liable for the cost of all water supplied, whether this has been used or lost through leakage or wastage. This reflects the principle that customers are charged for the services used. Commonly properties of this type are not connected to a public sewer and therefore not liable for sewerage charges (which are linked to the volume of water supplied).
- (iii) If a leak has occurred between the meter and a commercial building the customer will be billed and will be liable for the cost of all water supplied (in the same way as agricultural customers), whether this has been used or lost through leakage or wastage. If the commercial property is connected to a public sewer, the customer will also be liable for sewerage charges linked to the volume of water supplied. If the leak has occurred in a location which means that the leaked water does not reach the sewer, then the customer can apply to have the sewerage charges adjusted provided certain conditions have been met. These conditions are the same as those described at (i) above. In this way customers are only charged for the services used.

The detail of this policy is explained in Section 9 of NIW's Code of Practice on Billing and Metering for Non Domestic Customers and in Section 5 of NIW's Scheme of Charges (both can be viewed on NIW's website www.niwater.com).

Northern Ireland Water

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the Northern Ireland Water policy in a case where a water leak is undetected by the property owner due to Northern Ireland Water sending bills to the wrong address. (AQW 19295/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that customers have a responsibility to prevent waste and misuse of water supplies. For this reason, NIW encourages metered customers to check their consumption regularly by reading the meter so that any water leak that may occur is detected and repaired as soon as possible. The receipt of a bill should not be relied upon as a leakage alert because some bills may be based on a system estimate.

Without details of a specific case, NIW is unable to comment on whether or not any address errors were its responsibility.

DRD: Special Adviser

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) whether his Special Adviser has made any declarations of interest, pursuant to the obligation on civil servants; (ii) how such declarations are recorded; and (iii) whether they are open to public inspection.

(AQW 19299/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can confirm that no declarations of interest have been made by my Special Adviser.

Roads: Beechfield and Ashfield Estates, Donaghadee

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how he plans to address the crumbling road infrastructure in Beechfield and Ashfield estates, Donaghadee.

(AQW 19305/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service operates a cyclic inspection and repair system whereby any defects in roads and footways requiring remedial action, are noted for repair in line with established maintenance standards. This system is designed to allow Roads Service to react to defects, such as potholes, and carry out repairs to make the area safe for road users and pedestrians.

I am sure the Member will appreciate that Roads Service must prioritise its works programme to optimise use of its finite resources. Whilst I understand the aesthetic appearance of roads in both the Beechfield and Ashfield estates may show signs of wear and tear, along with the presence of patches from previous repairs, there are many other roads within the Ards Borough Council Area, which carry greater traffic volumes, that are considered to be in greater need of resurfacing.

The Member will be aware the footways in the Beechfield estate were replaced some years ago and are in a satisfactory condition, while the entire footway network in the Ashfield estate was replaced last year at a cost of £120k.

Roads Service will, however, continue to keep the Beechfield and Ashfield estates, Donaghadee under consideration for potential inclusion in a future resurfacing programme.

Penalty Charge Notices

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development how many penalty charge notices have been issued in (i) Bangor; (ii) Holywood; and (iii) Donaghadee in 2012, and how does this compare with 2011. (AQW 19311/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the number of Penalty Charge Notices (PCNs) issued in Bangor, Holywood and Donaghadee, in each of the last two years, are provided in the table below:

	2011		2012
Town	% of Total PCNs Issued in PCNs Issued Northern Ireland		PCNs Issued	% of Total PCNs Issued in Northern Ireland
Bangor	3,291	2.6%	3,706	3.3%
Holywood	1,691	1.3%	1,191	1.1%
Donaghadee	226	0.2%	159	0.1%

Penalty Charge Notices

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Regional Development how many Penalty Charge Notices were issued in Ballymena in 2012 and how this compares with 2011.

(AQW 19327/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the number of Penalty Charge Notices (PCNs) issued in Ballymena, in each of the last two years, are provided in the table below:

Year	PCNs Issued In Ballymena	% of Total PCNs Issued in Northern Ireland
2011	6,855	5.4%
2012	4,693	4.2%

Traffic Calming Measures: North Down

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what traffic calming measures are planned for the North Down area over the next year.

(AQW 19350/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would remind the Member that information on completed and proposed roads schemes for the current financial year can be found in Roads Service's Spring and Autumn Reports to Councils. These reports can be accessed from my Department's internet site at the following web address:

http://www.drdni.gov.uk/index/freedom_of_information/customer_information/cinformationtype-results.htm?signpost=Customer+information&informationType=Roads+Service+reports+to+councils

I can advise that the detailed budget for subsequent years has not yet been finalised and it is therefore not possible to provide details of future works programmes at this time.

Railways: Investment

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development, in light of the consultation document on the Future of Railway Investment, to outline the reasons for not utilising the Antrim to Lisburn rail line for passenger services, considering that Northern Ireland Railways pays for the maintenance of the line for emergency diversion and driver training purposes. (AQW 19394/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The decision to close the Antrim to Lisburn rail line for passenger services in 2003 was made against a background of other competing transportation priorities, taking into account financial feasibility, value for money and wider social and economic considerations. At the time of closure, Translink took the view that the costs of maintaining and modernising the line to retain regular services could not be justified.

The same reasons prevail today and Translink has advised that it has no plans at this time to re-introduce regular services on the line. Any improvement work to bring back passenger services to the Antrim to Lisburn line would require the support of a positive economic appraisal before a bid for funding could be considered.

Looking to the longer term, my Department is carrying out a public consultation to seek views on the priorities for future investment in our railways network beyond the current budget period. Re-opening the Antrim to Lisburn line and establishing a rail link to Belfast International Airport is one of a range of options identified in the consultation, should passenger demand increase in the future to support the necessary capital investment.

Road Safety: Gransha Road, Bangor

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development what steps his Department is planning to take to improve road safety on the Gransha Road, adjacent to Bangor Grammar School.

(AQW 19428/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As part of the planning approval for the new Bangor Grammar School, to which my Department's Roads Service provided input as a consultee, the education authority carried out a number of improvement works including:

- widening the footways at the site frontage along Gransha Road;
- installing a new Puffin enhanced road crossing;
- the relocation of two pedestrian islands on Gransha Road;
- creating a right turn pocket and new road markings on Gransha Road;
- installing 'Safe Routes to School' solar signs;
- the provision of a pedestrian guard rail at entrance of the school;
- providing school bus boarding and drop off points within the school premises;
- creating a dedicated bus lay-by, with lowered kerbs for easier access;
- providing drop-off lay-bys for parents to use on Gransha Road; and
- installing a new bus shelter on Gransha Road.

Roads Service also reviewed the road junctions serving residential areas close to the school entrance, which officials considered had adequate sight splays and footway provision to provide safe access.

The Gransha Road in the vicinity of the school has also previously been provided with central hatching, right turn pockets and central pedestrian refuge islands, which channel the traffic and make it safer for pedestrians to cross the road. In addition, Roads Service has also recently widened the junction of Cranley Road to allow a left turning vehicle to safely pass a right turning vehicle.

Roads Service is aware of public concern relating to road safety on the Gransha Road and in particular, the Gransha Road Roundabout. Officials have started a series of surveys of pedestrian demand and vehicle flow at the roundabout, which will continue during February 2013. This will identify the level of pedestrian demand, now that the school is fully operational, and determine if any further measures are deemed necessary.

Roads: Glenavy to Moira Road

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the work on the Glenavy to Moira road. (AQW 19434/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Roads Service officials recently completed a route improvement study for the A26 strategic route. This study has identified a number of potential improvement schemes and in order to make the best use of resources and ensure best value, Roads Service has prioritised these schemes for implementation.

Work on a scheme to provide a right turning pocket for vehicles leaving the A26 Moira Road at Main Street, Glenavy started on 4 February 2013. It is anticipated this work will be completed in May 2013 and greatly improve safety and assist with traffic progression at this busy junction.

Ferries: Greencastle - Magilligan

Ms Ruane asked the Minister for Regional Development, given the recent speculation around the establishment of a Greencastle - Greenore Ferry, what progress has been made on the preservation and subvention for the Greencastle - Magilligan Ferry in order to maintain it for the North West region.

(AQO 3380/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The member will know that my Department has no statutory powers in relation to ferry services that go outside Northern Ireland (shipping is a reserved matter), it was not involved in setting up this service and it has no responsibility for its operation. The provision of a ferry service between Magilligan and Greencastle was undertaken by Limavady and Donegal Councils and is operated by a private company. This would also apply to any proposed service between Greencastle in County Down and Greenore.

The Member may be aware that the two Councils recently invited applications from those interested in operating a ferry service between Magilligan and Greencastle for a three year period from 1st April 2013. I understand one application was received to operate the service on the basis of no financial subvention from either Council.

Roads: Unadopted Roads

Ms Fearon asked the Minister for Regional Development, following the Inquiry into Unadopted Roads by the Committee for Regional Development, for an update on the work he has done in relation to the recommendations. (AQO 3381/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Committee for Regional Development published the Report on its Inquiry into Unadopted Roads on 4 December 2012.

The report contained 10 recommendations covering a wide range of legal, financial, prioritisation and procedural issues relating to unadopted roads in housing developments. I subsequently tasked Departmental officials to consider and provide detailed opinion, comments and proposals on five of the recommendations that relate to the Department's areas of direct responsibility. When this assessment has been completed, I will be in a position to formally respond to the Report.

In addition, I have written to other stakeholders who are responsible for, or have direct interests in the other five recommendations. These include the Northern Ireland Local Government Association (NILGA), The Law Society of Northern Ireland, The Construction Employers Federation (CEF), The National House Building Council (NHBC), and the Department of the Environment (DOE). I have also met with representatives from a number of these organisations to discuss a range of issues, where they have specific interests.

Over the forthcoming weeks, I will be carefully considering the feedback from all contributors, and making my formal response to the Committee for Regional Development.

Railways: A2 Road Project

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Regional Development what increase is anticipated in rail passenger numbers on the Larne line during the A2 upgrade work.

(AQO 3382/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I announced the award of the A2 upgrade contract on 31 January 2013. Scheme construction should commence early in 2013 and is expected to take two years to complete.

In relation to anticipated increases in rail passengers during the upgrade work, Translink advise that following the introduction of the new timetable, latest figures for passenger growth on Larne rail line already show a tenth increase on last year since the introduction of new trains. While it is difficult to forecast increased passenger numbers as a direct result of the upgrade work, the increased frequency and availability of new trains will help accommodate any further increase in passenger numbers. On the basis of previous experience, for example, Westlink works and the impact on the Portadown rail line approximately a one fifth growth was experienced over a period of 2 years during the works and most of this was subsequently retained as passengers opted to continue to use the train following their experience of enhanced rail services.

Finally, on 7 January 2013, parking charges were suspended at St Brides Car Park, Carrickfergus, near the railway station, in order to provide additional Park & Ride/ Park & Share opportunities during the construction period of the scheme.

Traffic: Gransha Road, Bangor

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what more his Department can do to improve the flow of traffic and safety of pedestrians using the Gransha Road, Bangor. (AQO 3383/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Member will recall my recent response to his similar question regarding the Gransha Road in Bangor.

As part of the planning approval for the new Bangor Grammar School, to which Roads Service provided input as a consultee, the education authority carried out a number of improvement works including:

- widening the footways at the site frontage along Gransha Road;
- installing a new Puffin enhanced road crossing;
- the relocation of two pedestrian islands on Gransha Road;
- creating a right turn pocket and new road markings on Gransha Road;
- installing 'Safe Routes to School' solar signs;
- the provision of a pedestrian guard rail at entrance of the school;
- providing school bus boarding and drop off points within the school premises;
- creating a dedicated bus lay-by, with lowered kerbs for easier access;
- providing drop-off lay-bys for parents to use on Gransha Road; and
- installing a new bus shelter on Gransha Road.

Roads Service also reviewed the road junctions serving residential areas close to the school entrance, which officials considered had adequate sight splays and footway provision to provide safe access.

The Gransha Road in the vicinity of the school has also previously been provided with central hatching, right turn pockets and central pedestrian refuge islands, which channel the traffic and make it safer for pedestrians to cross the road. In addition, Roads Service has also recently widened the junction of Cranley Road to allow a left turning vehicle to safely pass a right turning vehicle.

I can assure the Member that Roads Service is aware of public concern relating to road safety on the Gransha Road and in particular, the Gransha Road Roundabout. Officials have started a series of surveys of pedestrian demand and vehicle flow at the roundabout, which will continue during February 2013. This will identify the level of pedestrian demand, now that the school is fully operational, and determine if any further measures are deemed necessary.

Public Transport: Fares

Mr Cree asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he will ensure that any train or bus fare increases this year will be linked to inflation.

(AQO 3384/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Each year Translink produce a 3 year Corporate Plan which is discussed with my Department. The focus is on the year ahead. Plans are drawn up which take account of Translink's statutory obligations, funding, costs, fares, fare income and levels of service.

My role, and that of my officials, is to consider the Translink Corporate Plan for each of Metro, Ulsterbus and Northern Ireland Railways. I am of the opinion that any proposed fare increases have to balance social considerations against the commercial obligations placed on Translink. We have managed to ensure only limited fare increases in the last few years. Indeed fares have fallen in 'real' terms.

Discussions begin at official level a number of months before the start of the financial year, mainly about funding scenarios. While this process has commenced and I am aware of the issues, discussions are still at an early stage. It is also important to take into account the views of key stakeholders.

Department for Social Development

Housing Associations

Mr Elliott asked the Minister for Social Development to detail his Department's policy on Housing Associations releasing retention monies to main contractors; and what checks are made to ensure that main contractors pay sub-contractors retention monies on time.

(AQW 18948/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): Housing associations release retentions to main contractors in accordance with the relevant conditions of their construction contracts. Generally one half of the retention monies will be released at completion and the remainder at the end of the maintenance period which normally has a twelve month duration.

The Department's Housing Association Guide requires associations to operate a prompt payment policy whereby, unless different terms are agreed in the contract, associations should pay properly claimed amounts to main contractors within 30 days. The Guide also requires associations to include a 'prompt payment' clause in its conditions of contract with the main contractor requiring prompt payment by main contractors to their subcontractors. These prompt payment provisions are applicable to all payments including the release of retentions.

Recent guidance regarding the monitoring of payments to subcontractors has been published by Central Procurement Directorate. This requires the monitoring of payments to subcontractors to be a standing item on the agenda at project meetings with the main contractor providing a report on payments made to subcontractors at each meeting. In addition, the guidance includes a provision that the association's project manager makes periodic checks with subcontractors on the payment performance of the main contractor. Such checks can, if appropriate, be extended to any payments made during or after the maintenance period.

If there are any issues concerning delays in payments these would be investigated by the Departmental inspection team during its rolling programme of Inspections.

It should be noted that it is not intended that there should be any legal liability on associations to enforce the prompt payment provisions in any subcontract. Any remedy under the sub-contract lies with the subcontractor and the legislation on payment of debt available.

Review of Public Administration

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development which departmental functions will be transferred to local government under the Review of Public Administration.

(AQW 18950/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Under the Reform of Local Government my Department will be transferring Housing Functions in relation to Houses in Multiple Occupation and Housing Unfitness. In addition legislation will be brought forward that will enable the new Councils to address issues related to social need and to take forward regeneration within their areas.

Child Maintenance and Enforcement Division

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Social Development how much maintenance arrears must be accrued before the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Division commences enforcement proceedings. (AQW 18957/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Child Maintenance and Enforcement Division can seek to refer any case to the Enforcement of Judgments Office where there is a debt to be paid.

Each case is considered on its own merits and there is no prescribed amount that must be first outstanding before this can be considered.

Child Maintenance and Enforcement Division

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Social Development what measures are in place for Child Maintenance Enforcement Division to take enforcement measures against non-resident parents who are not in work and not on benefits and cannot be contacted.

(AQW 18958/11-15)

Mr McCausland: When a non-resident parent is not in employment or on benefits, alternative means of collecting any outstanding child maintenance are always considered if the non-resident parent is not prepared to make their own arrangements to pay their child maintenance. These measures can include applying to the courts for a liability order to recognise the debt outstanding or the making of an application for a deduction order to recover any money owed directly from a non-resident parent's bank account.

The Child Maintenance and Enforcement Division also has access to information about non-resident parents through Service Level Agreements with the credit reference agency Experian as well as Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs. The Department can also access information through the Customer Information Service which provides a central store of client data for all government departments.

Personal Independence Payment

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 18433/11-15, to detail the number of people (i) who qualify for the higher rate mobility component of disability living allowance; and (ii) who are expected to qualify for the enhanced rate of the mobility component of Personal Independence Payment.

(AQW 18984/11-15)

Mr McCausland:

- (i) As at August 2012, 97,110 Disability Living Allowance claimants qualified for higher rate mobility. Of these, 2,500 were aged under 16 and 43,210 were aged 65 and above.*
- (ii) Personal Independence Payment will replace Disability Living Allowance for people aged 16 -64 only. Children will continue to receive Disability Living Allowance provided they satisfy the conditions of that benefit until they turn 16. People over the age of 65 who are already receiving Disability Living Allowance will continue to receive that benefit and are unaffected by the introduction of Personal Independence Payment

The new assessment criteria for Personal Independence Payment have been designed to ensure that individuals whose ability to get around is severely impacted by impairments affecting either physical or non-physical abilities may receive the mobility component at the enhanced rate. While it is not possible to pre-empt the outcome of individual assessments under Personal Independence Payment, work is ongoing to provide meaningful and statistically valid estimates on the impact of the introduction of Personal Independence Payment.

Site Development: Queens Parade Project in Bangor

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the Queens Parade project in Bangor. (AQW 19022/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department is in the process of purchasing the landholding assembled by the developer, Karl Greenfarm Properties (KGP) Limited. This transaction is due to be completed by the end of February 2013. Having reviewed the scale of the proposed development on the site, the Department then expects to commence work on assembling the remaining land needed for the development scheme and seeking planning approval for same. This is likely to take up to two years to complete.

Fuel Poverty

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development what impact a (i) 5 percent; (ii) 10 percent; and (iii) 15 percent rise in the cost of domestic heating oil would have on fuel poverty statistics. (AQW 19033/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Fuel poverty is influenced by three factors, household income, energy inefficiency and fuel price. While improvements to the energy efficiency of homes can reduce the risk of fuel poverty, it is important to recognise that low income and high fuel prices are the main contributors to fuel poverty. Any increase in the cost of domestic home heating oil will lead to an increase in the level of fuel poverty. However, my Department continues to tackle the causes of fuel poverty which we can have an impact on through our energy efficiency improvement schemes and benefit uptake campaigns.

Fuel Poverty

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development what impact the expansion of the gas network would have on fuel poverty statistics.

(AQW 19034/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The latest Northern Ireland House Condition Survey reports that almost 70% of households in Northern Ireland use oil to heat their homes. Oil is currently 30 to 35% more expensive than natural gas so switching to gas would lower energy costs and help tackle fuel poverty. On 10 January the Executive approved financial support of up to £32.5 million for the extension of the natural gas network to the main towns in the West and North-West of Northern Ireland, which would potentially serve some 34,000 new gas consumers.

Social Security Appeal Tribunals

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister for Social Development to list the premises used for social security benefit appeal tribunals, broken down by constituency.

Empty Homes Strategy

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of vacant houses in each constituency that have been brought back into use through the empty homes strategy. (AQW 19062/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive is responsible for the implementation of its 2007 Empty Homes Strategy. It has informed me that it does not hold information on the number of private properties brought back into use as a result of its strategy. I find this disappointing and unacceptable. However, it does hold information on its own stock and the table below shows that the number of void properties (by district office) has been reduced from 3634 to 2152 during the period March 2007 to March 2011.

I am committed to bringing empty homes back into use and I have tasked the Housing Executive and my officials with developing an appropriately resourced Northern Ireland-wide empty homes strategy and action plan which I expect to see finalised by 31 March 2013.

One of the aims of the Empty Homes Strategy and action plan will be the identification and location of empty homes. To this end my officials are working with colleagues in the Department of Finance & Personnel to ascertain the number of vacant residential properties in each Council area.

Disabled Facilities Grants

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of (i) applications for disabled facilities grants in the Newry and Mourne area since 2010; and (ii) applications that were successful.

(AQW 19064/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The table below details the number of applications for Disabled Facilities Grants for the Newry and Mourne Council area since 2010. Preliminary enquiries are deemed to be the number of applications made and approvals are the number of successful applications.

	2010/11	2011/12	Apr – Dec12
Preliminary Enquiries	146	130	82
Approvals	105	79	71

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Business Improvement Districts

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development when businesses can apply to become part of the Business Improvement Districts.

(AQW 19089/11-15)

Mr McCausland: It is not necessary for businesses and local councils to wait for the legislation before starting to develop ideas for a Business Improvement District. Nor do businesses need to apply to become part of a Business Improvement District (BID). Instead, interested groups of businesses can get together with their local council to develop a BID proposal for their area at any time. The proposals are then put to a ballot and voted on by all businesses within the potential BID area to decide on whether or not to go ahead with the proposals and establish the BID.

Volunteering

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Social Development when he will be in a position to award contracts for providers of volunteer services

(AQW 19107/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I am committed to ensuring effective infrastructure support for volunteering in order to successfully deliver on Northern Ireland's first ever Volunteering Strategy. My Department is presently considering delivery options for such support and I expect new arrangements to be put in place later this year. In the interim period arrangements are being developed by my officials to ensure the continued support for volunteering.

Tenants: Private Properties

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development what legislation is in place to protect tenants in private properties when the property is in need of repairs and maintenance. (AQW 19110/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Private Tenancies (Northern Ireland) Order 2006 sets out, among other things, the law pertaining to disrepair and unfitness of properties in the private rented sector in Northern Ireland. This legislation is enforceable by local council Environmental Health Officers.

Since 1 April 2007 this legislation has also required the landlord to provide his tenant with a written statement of tenancy terms which must include the repair obligations of both the tenant and the landlord.

Supporting People Funding

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 18470/11-15 and given that 90 percent of the work done by The Northlands Addiction Treatment Centre is on a non-residential basis, whether supporting people funding could be allocated.

(AQW 19115/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Support Services Regulations (NI) 2003 article 3, clearly states that Registered Care Homes are excluded from Supporting People funding. If the organisation can demonstrate to the regulation Quality Improvement Agency (RQIA) that any part of this scheme could be de-registered then an application to NIHE for Supporting People funding may be appropriate.

Housing Associations

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) the number of Housing Associations; (ii) the number of employees in each Association; and (iii) the number of properties owned by each Housing Association. (AQW 19119/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The details requested are as follows -

- (i) There are 30 Registered Housing Associations at present.
- (ii) The Department does not hold information on the number of employees in each association.
- (iii) The number of properties owned by each of the associations at 31 March 2012 is set out in the table below:-

Housing Associations

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) the total number of properties built and acquired by each Housing Association in each of the last ten years; and (ii) the amount of public money spent on Housing Associations in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 19120/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In relation to (i), the number of starts by each Housing Association in each of the last ten years is detailed in Table 1 below.

In relation to (ii), the amount of public money (Housing Association Grant and Disabled Adaptation Grant) spent on Housing Associations in each of the last ten years is detailed in Table 2 below. It should be noted that the amount spent in 2002/03 is not available.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Social Housing

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development how many Housing Executive properties have been transferred to the ownership of Housing Associations.

(AQW 19121/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive's current stock transfer proposals were approved by the Board of the Housing Executive in September 2010. To date 232 properties have been transferred to Housing Associations to allow the necessary improvement works to be carried out, or to allow the relevant area regeneration strategy to be implemented and completed as planned.

Shantallow Community Benefits Office, Derry

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has any plans to close the Shantallow Community Benefits Office, Derry; and what criteria were used to make any decision. (AQW 19122/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In addition to its regional network of 35 Jobs and Benefit Offices/Social Security Offices, the Social Security Agency also has three Community Benefit Offices located in Ballyclare, Crossmaglen and Londonderry. The Community Benefit Offices currently provide only a limited range of services which often require the claimant to subsequently attend a local Jobs and Benefits Office. In line with the Agency's commitment to deliver a modernised Welfare System to all customers, a review of these offices is currently underway. The outcome of the review is expected to be known shortly which will then be communicated to relevant stakeholders and staff.

The review has taken into consideration:

- The Agency's strategic direction in delivering a Reformed and Modernised Welfare System;
- The introduction of enhanced services through Customer First
- The Departments Accommodation Strategy;
- Health and Safety requirements for staff and claimants;
- Compliance with Disability Discrimination Act (DDA) and
- Known constraints within the current service provided in the Community Benefit Offices

The outcome of the review will be known shortly

Social Housing: Break-ins

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Social Development whether Housing Executive District Officers have met with local PSNI Community Officers to ascertain the number of break-ins and burglaries in housing stock where the point of entry has been through panelled external doors.

(AQW 19124/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has not met with local PSNI Community Officers specifically to ascertain the number of break-ins and burglaries in its housing stock where the point of entry has been through paneled external doors. However, the Housing Executive has advised that it works in partnership with the PSNI and various agencies from both the voluntary and public sector across their network of District offices to deal with community safety issues and concerns about anti social behaviour. These partnerships include the implementation of initiatives to prevent and tackle community safety problems.

Social Housing: Break-ins

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Social Development whether the Housing Executive would consider surveying the external doors of tenants' properties to ensure that they meet a rigorous standard, in an effort to reduce burglaries and break-ins. (AQW 19126/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that they have no plans to survey external doors. All new door sets that the Housing Executive has installed in their properties, through their planned and response maintenance programmes are to a standard which includes a Police "Secured by Design" licence. These doors are replaced on a condition basis or as part of the Housing Executive's fire door replacement programme which is mainly associated with their flats and maisonette stock.

DSD: G8 Summit

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development what additional resources his Department will receive to cover any additional costs from the G8 summit taking place in Fermanagh in June 2013 and from where the resources will be allocated. (AQW 19149/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The G8 Summit in Fermanagh presents a unique opportunity to show-case the local area, region and Northern Ireland as a whole to the world and to world leaders. It is therefore very important that the area is presented in the best possible light. Indeed a "Town Centre Revitalisation scheme" amounting to £250,000 was approved for Enniskillen last December

Indications are that Fermanagh District Council will be making further applications to my Department in relation to town centre improvements/regeneration ahead of the G8 Summit. These will be assessed against DSD's Regeneration objectives.

Public Procurement: Payment

Mr Elliott asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) the advice his Department provides to sub-contractors who have not received retention monies from their main contractor twelve months after practical completion; and (ii) the procedures currently in place to make sure this does not happen.

(AQW 19176/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Within my department public procurement is principally undertaken and managed via a Centre of Procurement Expertise namely Central Procurement Directorate within the Department of Finance and Personnel. Consequently we do not generally provide direct procurement advice to sub-contractors.

Social Housing

Mr Elliott asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) all new build social housing developments completed in the past 24 months; (ii) the name of each development; (iii) the name of main contractor; (iv) the date of practical completion; (v) the due date for release of full retention monies to each main contractor; (vi) the date of retention monies paid to each main contractor; and (vii) the reasons for withholding monies in cases where retention monies have not been paid. (AQW 19181/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In relation to (i), (ii), (iii) and (iv) the details requested are recorded in Tables 1 and 2 below. In relation to points (v), (vi) and (vii) the information is not available as Housing Associations release retentions to main contractors in accordance with the relevant conditions of construction contracts. Generally one half of the retention monies will be released in the payment made following Practical Completion. The remainder of the retention monies is released in the payment made following completion of the Maintenance Period, which normally has a twelve month duration from Practical Completion and is subject to the issue of the Making Good Defects Certificate. Therefore full retention release will not be paid until the contract administrator is satisfied that all defects have been satisfactorily remedied.

Warm Homes Scheme

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Social Development what consideration his Department has given to expanding the Warm Homes Scheme to include seals, insulation or draught exclusion measures for doors and windows as a means of improving heating efficiency in homes and reducing fuel poverty.

(AQW 19189/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The current Warm Homes Scheme was tendered in 2009 with specific work content which did not include draft proofing measures. The Housing Executive, who manage the Warm Homes Scheme on behalf of the Department, cannot add additional works to the contract that were not included in the original tender documents. The Department will consider whether draught proofing measures should be a part of any future energy efficiency schemes.

Social Housing: Travellers Issues

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development, in light of the proposed changes to the Housing Executive, where responsibility will lie for Travellers' issues within the new housing arrangements. (AQW 19215/11-15)

Mr McCausland: It is envisaged that responsibility for Travellers issues will lie with the Regional Housing Body under the proposed new structures for Social Housing Reform.

Universal Credit

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has had any conversations with Lord Freud about flexibility regarding the recipient of Universal Credit, in particular in relation to recommendation 5 of the Report on Welfare Reform by the Ad Hoc Committee on Conformity with Equality Requirements.

(AQW 19217/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I announced on 22 October 2012 that I had secured payment flexibilities for Northern Ireland following detailed negotiations with Lord Freud. Subsequently I tasked officials to develop and consult public representatives and voluntary sector representatives on a set of guidelines for determining the circumstances when the universal credit payment should be made on a twice-monthly basis or split between household partners. Officials are also considering the operational details of how direct payments to landlords will be organised.

This work is currently underway and an Oversight Board has been established, chaired by the Department's Permanent Secretary with input from a cross section of representatives from the community sector and academia. Two open forum events have taken place with members of the public and voluntary and community sector organisations to explore their views.

The Oversight Board is considering feedback from the discussion events alongside other research which will provide input to the Permanent Secretary's report. I expect to receive this report in April 2013.

Housing Associations

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has considered a comprehensive review of housing associations, to include accountability, financial governance, rent levels and engagement with tenants. (AQW 19218/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The main tool by which the Department holds Registered Housing Associations to account is the Housing Association Guide. The Guide covers aspects around development, finance, procurement, governance and housing management including engagement with tenants. The Departmental Inspection Team carries out a rolling programme of inspections to determine each Housing Association's compliance with all aspects of the Housing Association Guide therefore all associations are regularly reviewed through the inspection process. The Inspection team was strengthened in 2011 by the appointment of additional Inspectors. The Monitoring team also collects and reviews the board minutes, relevant financial information on a quarterly basis and information concerning each Registered Housing Association's stock on a yearly basis via the Annual Regulatory Return.

There are no plans for a comprehensive review at present.

Atos Healthcare

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Social Development whether Atos abides by, or follows guidelines, in relation to Employment and Support Allowance, Disability Living Allowance and approved by his Department, as well as the Disability Discrimination Act and Section 75 criteria, when dealing with persons being examined for work capability assessments or benefits adjustments and appeals.

(AQW 19232/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Atos Healthcare provides medical support services under contract on behalf of the Department for Social Development. Atos Healthcare is required to deliver the Medical Support Services in accordance with the terms of the contract which also details applicable Social Security benefit regulations and all applicable case law, and current and future legislation. Atos Healthcare is required under the contract to comply with all applicable fair employment, equality of treatment and anti-discrimination legislation.

Negative Equity

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has reassessed the policy for vesting homes in negative equity, following the suggestion put forward by Lord Justice Sir Patrick Coghlin in the Lands Tribunal case that dealt with an owner-occupier who was left in such a predicament.

(AQW 19264/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In its judgement the Lands Tribunal acknowledged that government has recognised the need to support owner-occupiers in redevelopment areas as evidenced by my Department's policy on the matter.

The Tribunal has also suggested that because of the personal hardship revealed in the course of litigation, it might now be considered an appropriate time to review that aspect of the policy.

Prior to the judgement the Department had already been examining ways to assist owner-occupiers in redevelopment areas who find themselves in negative equity; possibly amending policy that would assist them to purchase an alternative home. However, any proposal to introduce such a policy requires detailed legal analysis and consultation with Ministers in the NI Executive; a task officials are currently undertaking.

Welfare Reform: Underoccupancy

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development whether his officials have had any discussions with their counterparts in the UK to discuss the possibility of exemptions for people living with a disability from the under occupancy penalty expected with the implementation of welfare reform.

(AQW 19271/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I recognise that the under occupancy restriction is a serious issue for Northern Ireland and I recently had a very productive meeting with Lord Freud, the Northern Ireland Federation of Housing Associations and the Northern Ireland Housing Executive.

My officials are working with the Housing Executive to develop a range of support measures to complement those outlined in my housing strategy, which aim to mitigate under occupancy for those affected, support households through the transition and ensure that everyone has access to affordable housing.

Generally there will be no exceptions to the application of the size limit rules for tenants with a disability, although there will be certain cases such as those in supported housing where the restriction will not apply. The size criteria will allow a disabled claimant or partner who needs a non-resident overnight carer an extra room. If there is another reason that an extra room is necessary, help may be available through the Discretionary Housing Payments Scheme.

Some claimants affected by this measure may live in significantly adapted accommodation due to someone in the household having a disability. It will not always be practical or cost effective for these people to move to different accommodation or they may have no other option for making up a shortfall in rent. In such cases it may be appropriate to use Discretionary Housing Payments to make up the shortfall in their rent.

Universal Credit

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 11838/11-15, whether he will reconsider his answer given the evidence available from (i) the Women's Budget Group; (ii) academics Ruth Lister and Fran Bennett; (iii) the publication 'Northern Ireland Economy: Women on the Edge'; and (iii) the research conducted on behalf of Refuge on this issue. (AQW 19280/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I am working towards achieving a welfare system for Northern Ireland based on the principles of protecting the vulnerable, helping people into employment, developing a system that is fair, and encouraging personal and social responsibility.

In this context, and as indicated in my earlier response, I support the principle that, where possible, Universal Credit payments should mirror salary payments. Many of the claimants for Universal Credit will be in work and will be well used to managing their money on a monthly basis and/or the wages being paid to the main earner. Most claimants and their partners will be able to work with this proposed arrangement because they either have joint bank accounts or are financially capable of managing their household budget. However for those that may have difficulties, there will be the flexibility to opt for either a split payment or a twice-monthly payment.

I have tasked officials to develop and consult public representatives and voluntary sector representatives on a set of guidelines for determining the circumstances when the universal credit payment should be made on a twice-monthly basis or split between household partners. Officials are also considering the operational details of how direct payments to landlords will be organised.

This work is currently underway and an Oversight Board has been established, chaired by the Department's Permanent Secretary, with input from a cross section of representatives from the community sector and academia. Two open forum events have already taken place with members of the public and voluntary and community sector organisations to explore their views. The Social Development Committee is also being consulted and I have been keeping my colleagues on the Executive Sub Committee informed on developments.

The Oversight Board is considering feedback from the discussion events alongside other research including that which the member has referenced in his question and this will provide input to the Permanent Secretary's report. I expect to receive this report in April 2013.

Universal Credit

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of recommendation 5 in the Report by the Ad Hoc Committee on Conformity with Equality Requirements, Welfare Reform Bill, in light of the evidence which shows that payments of universal credit to the female head of the household can have a positive impact on child's wellbeing. (AQW 19281/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Ad-Hoc Committee's recommendation was that the Department for Social Development should make payment of benefits to the parent with care of dependent children its default position in identifying a nominated claimant, in order to minimise any potential adverse impacts on women and children.

I accept that for some households, a split payment may better serve their needs and this was one of the key reasons why I negotiated flexibilities on the frequency of Universal Credit payments, split payments within households and direct payment of housing allowance to landlords. I have tasked officials to develop and consult public representatives and voluntary sector representatives on the criteria for determining the circumstances when these types of universal credit payments should be made on a twice-monthly basis or split between household partners. Officials are also considering the operational details of how direct payments to landlords will be organised.

This work is currently underway and an Oversight Board has been established, chaired by the Department's Permanent Secretary with input from a cross section of representatives from the community sector and academia. Two open forum events have already taken place with members of the public and voluntary and community sector organisations to explore their views

The Oversight Board is considering feedback from these events alongside other research and this will provide input to the Permanent Secretary's report. I expect to receive this report in April 2013.

Special Advisers: DSD

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development (i) whether his Special Adviser has made any declarations of interest, pursuant to the obligation on civil servants; (ii) how such declarations are recorded; and (iii) whether they are open to public inspection.

(AQW 19293/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Special Adviser has not made any declarations of interest. Records of any declarations of interest are placed on an individual's personal file by the Department's HR Division, to whom such declarations must be made in accordance with the conduct provisions in the NICS HR Handbook. Declarations of interest are not open to public inspection, with the exception of those made by members of DSD's Departmental Management Board which are published in the Department's Annual Resource Accounts.

Social Housing: Armagh City

Mr Irwin asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the availability of social housing in the east of Armagh City.

(AQW 19297/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Armagh City comprises the local housing areas of Armagh 1 and Armagh 2.

Armagh 2 covers the east of the city and includes the common landlord areas Alexander, Ardmore Drive, Ballinahone, Barrack Street, Barrack Hill, Gough Avenue, Beresford Court, Bridge Street, Folly, Lisanally Gardens, Lisanally Villas, Lonsdale Gardens, Orangefield and Victoria Park.

At September 2012, in Armagh 2, there were 48 applicants in housing stress. With an average of 32 allocations per annum from existing stock, there is therefore only a marginal residual need for new accommodation. This is being met through a new build scheme for 26 homes at Ardmore Road, which is currently on site.

Benefits Payments

Mr McMullan asked the Minister for Social Development how much his Department has saved in benefits payments due to emigration from North and East Antrim, in each of the last four years.

(AQW 19343/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information requested is not available as the Department does not hold information on benefit claimants who have emigrated.

Benefits Payments

Mr McMullan asked the Minister for Social Development how much his Department has saved in benefits payments in each of the last four years due to emigration, broken down by council area. (AQW 19344/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information requested is not available as the Department does not hold information on benefit claimants who have emigrated.

Fuel Poverty

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development whether his Department has any plans to seek finance from the UK Green Investment Bank to tackle fuel poverty.

(AQW 19371/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department does not have any current plans to seek finance from the UK Green Investment Bank to tackle fuel poverty. Officials from my Department have been working with colleagues from the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, to secure additional European funding for the Boiler Replacement Scheme.

Social Housing

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development what impact the Housing Executive's £27 million underspend will have on housing provision in the incoming year; and to explain the reasons for the underspend. (AQW 19387/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I do not know how the member has arrived at a figure of £27 million underspend within the Housing Executive's budget.

At the October 2012 Monitoring Round an easement of £8 million was declared against the Social Housing Development Programme resulting from efficiency savings and changes to the delivery model for the Bamford programme. This funding was reallocated to the Co-Ownership Housing Association budget and will fund approximately an additional 180 properties. This will help bolster effective demand by assisting deposit-constrained first time buyers and those returning to the market who are struggling to purchase a home and also help the wider economy.

As the Housing Executive is expecting to deliver the agreed new build starts target within the revised budget available, this will result in an overall gain across the social and affordable housing programme for 2012/13.

At the January Monitoring Round the Housing Executive declared an easement of £7 million revenue funding which was due largely to procurement efficiencies and has therefore not impacted on their programmes.

I have asked NIHE to ensure that it maximises its budget spend to support services to tenants and ensure any under spends are kept to a minimum.

With regard to "housing provision for the incoming year" the Housing Executive is finalising it proposals for its 2013/14 budget which will be carefully considered by its Board before submission to my Department. As the budget has not yet been finalised, it is not possible to comment further.

Social Housing

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development how many houses were bought for use as social housing in each of the last three financial years, and in the current year to date.

(AQW 19390/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The table below details the number of properties that were bought for social housing in each of the last three years and in the current year to date.

Off the Shelf purchases are newly constructed properties bought from the open market. Existing Satisfactory Purchases are pre-owned dwellings purchased from the open market.

	Off the Shelf Purchases	Existing Satisfactory Purchases	Total
2009/10	467	76	543
2010/11	400	93	493
2011/12	275	109	384
2012/13	4	58	62

Housing: New Builds

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of new builds that have been classed as starts in each of the last three financial years; and how many of these are (i) paper starts; (ii) peg in the ground starts; and (iii) near completion.

(AQW 19393/11-15)

Mr McCausland: New build starts make up the majority of starts in the social housing programme. Other categories which make up annual starts totals include purchases of both new and pre-owned properties from the open market.

As requested, the table below details only the new build starts element for each of the last three financial years. The table also shows how many of those starts have already completed and the year in which the remainder are due to complete.

Year	New Build Units	Already Complete	Due to complete 2012/13	Due to complete 2013/14	Due to complete 2014/15
2009/10	1,243	948	214	47	34
2010/11	1,752	812	480	460	0
2011/12	984	41	195	723	25

All new build starts are counted as starts when a contractor has entered into a contract, has taken formal possession of the site and the contract period has commenced. At that point, all houses within the contract are deemed to have started.

Housing

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development for a breakdown of the proposed 8000 houses to be completed as part of the Programme for Government proposals, including social new build or those being built or bought by co-ownership. (AQW 19395/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The breakdown of the 8,000 new homes to be delivered over the four year Programme for Government period 2011/12 to 2014/15 equates to approximately 6,000 social and 2,000 affordable homes. However, given the affordable side of the equation is demand led there is a need to be flexible around the eventual make up of the final 8,000 outturn figure.

Housing Benefit

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of people in the North Belfast constituency in receipt of Housing Benefit, broken down by (i) community background; and (ii) housing sector. (AQW 19410/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information is not available in the format requested as the Housing Executive does not routinely collate information by Parliamentary constituency and do not hold data on the community background of Housing Benefit claimants.

With regard to housing tenure, the Housing Executive has advised that, for their North Belfast, Newtownabbey 1 and Newtownabbey 2 District Office areas, there are a total of 18,078 Housing Benefit recipients, broken down as follows:-

- 8,013 Housing Executive tenants
- 3,562 Housing Association tenants
- 6,503 Private Sector tenants

Cold Weather Payments

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has instigated the mechanism for cold weather payments due to the recent cold snap.

(AQW 19414/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The cold weather payments are automatically triggered in Northern Ireland when the average temperature is, or forecast to be, zero degrees centigrade or below for 7 consecutive days from 1 November to 31 March. This information is supplied to the Social Security Agency by the Met Office based on recordings and forecasts at 7 separate weather stations located at Aldergrove, Castlederg, Glenanne, Katesbridge, Magilligan, Stormont and Thomastown, each of which cover a range of designated post code areas.

Gambling: Online Gaming Operators

Mr McClarty asked the Minister for Social Development what provisions will be made for online gaming operators in his Department's review of gambling.

(AQW 19415/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department is currently discussing the issue of online (remote) gambling with the Department of Culture, Media and Sport. The European Commission is also carrying out work, aimed at ensuring compliance of national regulatory frameworks with EU law and enhancing administrative cooperation between Member States. The outcome of my discussions with the relevant Minister in GB and the outcome of the work by the European Commission will inform how online gambling, including its operators, will be regulated within Northern Ireland.

Community Asset Transfer

Mr McClarty asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the recent Joseph Rowntree Foundation Report by Queen's University Belfast on Community Asset Transfer.

(AQW 19450/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My officials attended the launch of the Joseph Rowntree Foundation-funded report "Community Asset Transfer in Northern Ireland" and have on previous occasions met with the authors of this report.

The findings and conclusions from this research form an important part of the evidence base for a Northern Ireland policy framework for Community Asset Transfer and I would expect the report to inform the work of the cross-departmental steering group which I have established to develop policy proposals.

Social Housing

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development for a breakdown of the locations of social housing purchased under co-ownership as a result of a Government grant, in each of the last three financial years and in this year to date. (AQW 19465/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Co-Ownership Scheme is currently the Department's main mechanism for delivering affordable homes to first-time buyers who cannot do so without assistance; the homes supported through the Scheme are not social homes.

The number of homes purchased through the Scheme with the assistance of Housing Association Grant is outlined in the table below.

COUNCIL AREA	Properties purchased using Housing Association Grant 2012/13	Properties purchased using Housing Association Grant 2011/12	Properties purchased using Housing Association Grant 2010/11	Properties purchased using Housing Association Grant 2009/10

Universal Credit

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Social Development who will administer the Universal Credit; and how the harmonisation of different functions, carried out by different agencies, involved in its implementation will be achieved.

(AQW 19485/11-15)

Mr McCausland: While the Department for Social Development is the lead department for the introduction of Universal Credit in Northern Ireland, a multi faceted Universal Credit Programme Team has been established to implement the new credit.

The Programme Team have been tasked to design new processes which incorporate all key aspects of Universal Credit. All relevant impacted organisations including the Department for Employment and Learning, Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs and the Northern Ireland Housing Executive are involved in the Programme Team.

The Department is also working in partnership with key strategic partners in the voluntary and community sector and private sectors to deliver a service that meets the broad range of needs of Universal Credit claimants.

The Department for Social Development will be accountable for the Universal Credit service and the Department for Employment and Learning will be accountable for the employment aspects of the Universal Credit service.

DSD: Capital Spend

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail his Department's capital spend since May 2011, broken down by constituency area.

(AQW 19519/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information is not available by constituency area. The Department's capital spend between May 2011 and December 2012, broken down by the Business Areas where capital spend was incurred is shown in the table below.

Business area	Capital Spend May 2011 – December 2012
Core Department	£30,259
Child Maintenance & Enforcement	£44,720
Social Security Agency	£1,726,012
Urban Group	£3,576,281
Total	£5,377,272

Independent Living Fund

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Social Development how he will maintain the Independent Living Fund after its closure in Great Britain by 2015.

(AQW 19553/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Department for Work & Pensions announced the result of a UK-wide consultation on the future of the Independent Living Fund (ILF) before Christmas, confirming that the ILF will close in 2015 with funding being devolved to Local Authorities in England and to the Devolved Administrations. The announcement also made clear that it would be for the Assembly in Northern Ireland to decide how current ILF users would be supported from April 2015.

The Department of Health, Social Services & Public Safety will be responsible for the support of current ILF users from April 2015

Disability Living Allowance

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development how many people in East Belfast are in receipt of Disability Living Allowance; and for his assessment of this figure.

(AQW 19589/11-15)

Mr McCausland: As at August 2012, the number of people in receipt of Disability Living Allowance in East Belfast was 9,080.

Entitlement to Disability Living Allowance is based on an assessment of how much help someone needs with personal care and/or mobility needs because of their disability. Their place of residence in Northern Ireland does not therefore confer entitlement to Disability Living Allowance.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Negative Equity

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on his Department's policy review of support for owner-occupiers in redevelopment areas in relation to the issue of negative equity.

(AQW 19682/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In a recent judgement on this issue by the Lands Tribunal, it acknowledged that government has recognised the need to support owner-occupiers in redevelopment areas as evidenced by my Department's policy on the matter.

The Tribunal has also suggested that because of the personal hardship revealed in the course of litigation, it might now be considered an appropriate time to review that aspect of the policy.

Prior to the judgement the Department had already been examining ways to assist owner-occupiers in redevelopment areas who find themselves in negative equity; possibly amending policy that would assist them to purchase an alternative home. However, any proposal to introduce such a policy requires detailed legal analysis and consultation with Ministers in the NI Executive; a task officials are currently undertaking.

Social Housing: Double Glazing

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the savings that are projected by the use of casement windows instead of reversible windows in double glazing replacement work by the Housing Executive. (AQO 3363/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I asked the Housing Executive to research the specifications used in double glazing as I was concerned that the Housing Executive's specification for the supply and fitting of double glazing did not offer best value for money and also that the specification for hinges and handles was much higher than the industry standards for domestic properties.

In relation to savings, the use of casement hinges as opposed to fully reversible hinges has resulted in an estimated savings of £15.1m and is made up of:

- savings of approximately £9.6m since there is less need for redecoration grants and a further,
- £5.5m savings as a result of the procurement process. This figure includes approximately £0.5m savings realised by using the casement type hinge which cost £13 to £15 per pair as opposed to the fully reversible hinge costing £20.

Small Charitable Donations Act 2012

Mr Wells asked the Minister for Social Development when local charities will benefit from the Small Charities Donations Bill. (AQO 3364/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Small Charitable Donations Act 2012 received Royal Assent at Westminster on 19 December 2012. As the NI Assembly approved the extension of its provisions to Northern Ireland through a Legislative Consent Motion, local charities such as sporting and faith based organisations will be able to benefit from the new Gift Aid Small Donation Scheme and submit claims from 6 April 2013.

Starting this week, HMRC will be writing to all charities on their records to ensure they are aware of the new scheme and know where to find advice and guidance on how to avail of it.

Social Housing: Double Glazing

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the double glazing schemes that will be funded by his Department in Housing Executive properties in Limavady during 2013. (AQO 3365/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has two double glazing schemes for 266 properties programmed for the Limavady area in the 2013/14 financial year. These schemes are as follows:

- 154 properties at Kennaught/Roe Mill at an estimated cost of £346,000 and
- 112 properties at Greysteel at an estimated cost of £252,000

This means that all Housing Executive properties in the Limavady area will, on completion of these two schemes, be fully double glazed.

Welfare Reform

Ms Fearon asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the zero earnings proposal contained in the Welfare Reform Bill as an incentive for people to work. (AQO 3366/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I share the concerns about the Coalition Government's Welfare Reform proposals. I shall deal with the facts relating to the issue of zero earnings. The facts are that the Welfare Reform Bill does not contain any proposal for zero earnings. However, clause 11 enables Regulations to be made setting out the circumstances in which housing costs, including support for mortgage interest, may be paid.

The Coalition Government announced in the Autumn Statement on 5 December 2012 that under Universal Credit, an owner occupier who has any earned income during the assessment period will not be eligible for support with mortgage interest. We have not yet conducted any assessment of the impact of this decision.

The zero earnings rule should not be looked at in isolation. It needs to be considered in the round, taking account of the more generous disregards that will apply in Universal Credit.

Unless they are doing an extremely small number of hours at a low rate of pay, part-time workers will usually be better off in work than under the current system.

Welfare Reform

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has received any indication from the Department of Work and Pensions of the financial penalty caused by the delay in the passage of the Welfare Reform Bill. (AQO 3367/11-15)

Mr McCausland: This year just over £5 billion of social security benefits will be met directly from HM Treasury outside of the NI Block DEL. HM Treasury will bear the direct risk of any increase which can be significant for example a one percent increase in social security spending is £50million.

This important funding arrangement is predicated on Northern Ireland maintaining the same social security policy as the rest of the United Kingdom.

I have not received any indication from the Department for Work and Pensions of any financial penalty caused by the delay in the passage of the Welfare Reform Bill. The Rt Hon Iain Duncan Smith has written to me on the financial implications under the Statement of Funding policy highlighting that the UK government reserves its position with regard to any increased costs to the Exchequer caused by the delay in the progression of the Bill and will review this when the Welfare Reform Bill has completed its passage through the Assembly.

Housing Association Purchase Scheme

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Social Development whether the new Housing Association purchase scheme aimed at restoring vacant or repossessed homes will be used to provide new social housing or solely for homes to be sold on the private market.

(AQO 3368/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The homes that will be made available, this first year, through the £11.8 million additional funding to Housing Associations, followed by £7.2 million next year, secured as a result of the Get Britain Building funding from HM Treasury will be affordable homes for sale targeted at first-time buyers and those returning to the market, giving them an all important step onto the housing ladder and helping to promote economic growth, assisting the construction industry to create and maintain jobs during a period when the construction of private sector housing is in decline.

Queen's Parade Project, Bangor

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the Queens Parade project, Bangor. (AQO 3369/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I refer the Member to my response to Assembly Written Question AQW 19022/11-15.

Housing: Shared Neighbourhoods

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Social Development what action his Department is taking to promote mixed housing and shared neighbourhoods.

(AQO 3370/11-15)

Mr McCausland: As outlined in my draft Housing Strategy "Facing the Future", my Department will:

- build on the success of the pilot Shared Neighbourhood Programme by developing a Shared Community Programme;
- work with the Housing Executive to pilot a Belfast City Centre social housing waiting list to support and protect the city centre as a shared space;
- work with the Housing Executive to amend social housing application forms to ask applicants if they are prepared to live in a shared housing area; and
- work with the Department of Justice, the Housing Executive and Housing Associations to support local communities who wish to remodel or remove peace walls and other interface structures.

Housing: Neighbourhood Regeneration

Mr Newton asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the housing led regeneration pilots. (AQO 3371/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Housing led regeneration is one of the key themes in my new Housing Strategy. Proposals are to initially test this approach in four pilot areas. Officials are currently working up a formula for selection of the areas and I expect to be in a position to make an announcement before the end of the financial year.

Boiler Replacement Scheme

Ms Brown asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the uptake of the boiler replacement scheme in South Antrim

(AQO 3372/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information is not available in the format requested as the Housing Executive does not collate information by Parliamentary constituency. The South Antrim constituency is largely compromised of Antrim and Newtownabbey District Council areas. The current update on the Boiler Replacement Scheme in the South Antrim area is as follows:

- 1,100 application forms have been issued;
- 566 of these applications have been returned to the Housing Executive's North East Area Grants Office;
- 509 boiler installation forms have been issued to these applicants;
- 264 boiler installation forms have been completed and returned;
- 247 approvals to commence with Boiler Replacement have been issued to applicants;
- 88 replacement boilers have been installed; and
- 56 payments have been made.

Housing Executive: Waterloo Place, Derry

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development how the renovation work in and around the Housing Executive's office at Waterloo Place, Derry has impacted on staff, service delivery and customers. (AQW 19775/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that major refurbishment work is currently being undertaken in the building where their Waterloo Place District Office is located. Unfortunately the disruption has been more severe than originally anticipated. Therefore, it was decided to move the office on a temporary basis to another Housing Executive building at Richmond Chambers. This building is accessible to the public and is located within a short distance from Waterloo Place. Customers may either call at that office or contact staff through the normal telephone number.

The Housing Executive has apologised to their customers for any inconvenience caused and they will keep the public advised of any future changes to the office opening arrangements.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Northern Ireland Assembly: Stamped Envelopes

Mr Flanagan asked the Assembly Commission whether changes will be made to the stamped envelopes available to Members to enable them to be used for cross border post.

(AQW 19245/11-15)

Mr P Ramsey (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The Northern Ireland Assembly currently provides Members with 1st & 2nd class pre-paid envelopes (Guidance on the use of the pre-paids is available page 49 of the Member's handbook).

The contract to supply the Assembly with pre-paid envelopes was recently retendered and subsequently awarded (02/11/2012) to Royal Mail. This is a single tender contract as Royal Mail is the sole provider available and unfortunately it is unable to provide EU/overseas post-paid franking service.

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

llex

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 13877/11-15, to detail the criteria used to determine eligibility for the position of Chairman of Ilex URC; and who decided that the two candidates, who were initially deemed appointable, were unsuitable for the role.

(AQW 16306/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): In the competition to appoint a Chair for the Board of the Ilex Urban Regeneration Company, all candidates had to demonstrate the following eligibility criteria:

- (i) Experience at Board level demonstrating strategic leadership and effectiveness over a significant period.
- (ii) Experience of effective dynamic leadership, including developing, implementing and monitoring corporate business strategies.
- (iii) Experience at a senior level of effective corporate governance.
- (iv) Experience in applying interpersonal, influencing and networking skills to build commitment and consensus within a wide constituency of business community and political stakeholders and to deliver agreed outcomes.
- (v) Experience relevant to the discharge of the functions of a company including evidence of public sector investment leverage
- (vi) Understanding of the potential contribution of llex in implementing the vision set out for the integrated regeneration of the Derry City Council area, including the effective development of the Ebrington and Fort George sites.

Following the interview process, two candidates were deemed by the interview panel to have met the criteria listed above and were put forward for consideration by us for appointment. We decided that this competition failed to provide a sufficiently wide range of candidates for us to select from and it was agreed to run a further competition for the position of Chair. The two candidates from the earlier competition are still eligible for consideration and their names will be included with any additional names from the competition which will be run before the end of the financial year.

Creative Digital Industries Hub

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether the Creative Industries Hub will be in place at Ebrington by March 2013.

(AQW 17802/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Work is underway to convert former military accommodation, buildings 80/81, to house the Creative Digital Industries Hub on the Ebrington site. In advance of housing the Creative Digital Industries Hub, these buildings will be used to host the internationally renowned Turner Prize as part of the 2013 UK City of Culture programme. The 2013 Turner Prize will be in place from October 2013 until January 2014.

Questions for Written Answer: AQW 16306/11-15

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister why AQW 16306/11-15 remains unanswered. (AQW 18046/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: A response to AQW 16306/11-15 was issued on 20 February 2013.

Sexual Orientation Strategy

Ms McGahan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the Sexual Orientation strategy. (AQO 3114/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We remain committed to publishing a Sexual Orientation Strategy. A draft consultation document to inform public consultation on the Strategy is currently under consideration within the Department.

Questions for Written Answer: AQW 16779/11-15

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Officials have recently reviewed current practices for tracking and monitoring the processing of FOI requests, and new guidance has been issued to staff that will assist them in improving effectiveness.

Peace Building and Conflict Resolution Centre

Mr Nesbitt asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to publish the business plan for the Peace Building and Conflict Resolution Centre at the Maze prison site.

(AQW 19040/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Business cases are internal process documents which are neither intended for nor designed for public or external release or publications.

Business cases are not routinely published and we are of the opinion that there is no rationale for releasing this document.

Community Relations

Mr McMullan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the community relations projects that they have funded over the past year, including the total amount paid to each project. (AQO 3229/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: OFMDFM funding for community relations work has increased by 18% over the last four years to just over £10m per year. This level of funding reflects our commitment to work towards our vision of a shared and united community.

OFMDFM currently supports community relations activity through a number of programmes. In this financial year to date, over £10m has been allocated to community relations projects as follows:

- £594k to the Contested Spaces Programme which focuses on early years and parenting, shared education, youth engagement and shared neighbourhood activities;
- £536k to the Summer Interventions Fund which supports diversionary activities for young people within communities during periods of heightened tension;
- £3.3m to the District Council Good Relations Programme to cover a broad range of good relations activity;
- £472K to Central Good Relations to support projects such as Youth Leadership and Programmes for disengaged young people;
- £770k to the North Belfast Strategic Good Relations Programme which focuses on citizenship, leadership and good relations.
- £4.36m to the Community Relations Council to administer a range of funding programmes on behalf of the department.

Executive

Mr Dunne asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what action is being taken to improve communications and increase public ownership of the workings of the Executive.

(AQO 3232/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We are continually looking at ways to improve public awareness and understanding of the Executive's achievements through the use of a range of media channels.

As well as the use of traditional media, such as media releases, advertising and the branding of major capital projects, it is encouraging to note that the number of visits to the NIDirect website – which explains the range of Government services to the citizen – continues to grow.

Since April of last year, there have been in excess of six million visits to this website and the content is regularly updated.

The number of followers on the Executive's Twitter account continues to grow and many Departmental announcements are also published through our social media channels.

Ebrington Square, Londonderry

Mr Campbell asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what is the status of Ebrington Square, Londonderry in terms of flags being displayed at events; and whether they will seek discussions with the City Council and the Department for Regional Development to ensure that whatever status applies to Ebrington also applies to Guildhall Square. (AQW 19053/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: OFMDFM is working closely with Ilex on the development of Ebrington. Events at Ebrington Square are currently governed by the Ilex Policy for Third Party Events at Ebrington (incorporating the Peace Bridge). This is an Ilex policy and not an OFMDFM one.

Events at Guildhall Square are governed through a permit system operated by Derry City Council and are outside the remit of our Department.

Welfare Reform Bill

Mr Copeland asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what impact the Welfare Reform Bill will have on their Department's (i) Child poverty; and (ii) fuel poverty policies.

(AQW 19118/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Coalition Government's Welfare Reform Act became law on 8 March 2012. The Minister for Social Development brought forward proposals for a Welfare Reform Bill to give effect locally to the proposed changes.

Given that the proposed legislation is still under consideration by the Assembly, it is too early to assess the potential impact on families and children here. We are aware that some have concerns. We will, of course, continue to monitor all the data in respect of poverty and its related issues.

OFMDFM: Special Advisers

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) whether any of the Special Advisers within their Department have made declarations of interest, pursuant to the obligation on civil servants; (ii) how such declarations are recorded; and (iii) whether they are open to public inspection.

(AQW 19249/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: No Special Advisers within OFMDFM have made declarations of interest.

Single Identity Groups

Mr I McCrea asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what funding opportunities are available from their Department for single identity groups.

(AQW 19283/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: In relation to Community Relations funding, a project/activity will not be funded if the aims of the project or activity are to promote any one religious or political viewpoint solely to one community or constituency.

With regard to all other forms of funding, single identity groups can apply but the religious identity of the group is not a determining factor in the funding allocation decision.

North-west: Investment

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how much their Department has invested in the North West since May 2011.

(AQW 19360/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Since May 2011 we have committed £13.84m capital and £3.8m resource to llex for the regeneration of the site and buildings at Ebrington Square.

We have spent £886,000 on maintenance and for some development work at the Shackleton site in Ballykelly which will enable it to be used for a number of community and commercial events.

We also provided funding of £4.27m towards equality, good relations and ethnic minority programmes in the North West.

North Belfast: Victims and Survivors

Mr Humphrey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the grant aid awarded by their Department to groups working with victims and survivors in North Belfast, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 19365/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: It is not possible to identify funding which has been allocated to groups which provide services solely to victims and survivors resident in North Belfast.

Children and Young People's Strategy

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, given that the delivering Social Change Framework is focusing on signature projects and additional actions, whether Junior Ministers are responsible for delivering on the key priorities within the Ten Year Strategy for Children and Young People.

(AQW 19433/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Children and Young People's Strategy is being taken forward under the Delivering Social Change Framework.

To this end, the Children and Young Persons Early Action Paper, published in December 2012, takes full account of the principles of the Ten Year Strategy and the six high level outcomes. It identifies the key priorities for children and families to focus efforts and resources on a joined up approach to tackling poverty and improving the lives and experiences of our children and young people.

Actions arising from the Early Actions Paper are assigned to a lead department which is responsible for overseeing delivery as well as evaluating effectiveness. The delivery of the six Signature Programmes, which we announced on 10 October 2012 and which included proposed work around Family Support Hubs, Children's Nurture Units and Parenting Support Programmes, is the first tangible outworking of this approach.

Further actions will be identified taking account of the Early Actions Paper and the detail of the Children and Young People's Ten Year Strategy. The format in which these will be presented is under consideration.

Therefore, while the Junior Ministers have oversight of the Delivering Social Change Framework, much of the delivery on the key priorities of the Ten Year Strategy under the framework is the responsibility of a number of other departments and their respective Ministers.

Peace Building and Conflict Resolution Centre

Mr Swann asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for their assessment of the impact that the Peace and Reconciliation centre at the Maze may have on long established centres like Corrymeela. (AQW 19463/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Peace Building and Conflict Resolution Centre will make facilities and central resources available to help develop the knowledge, learning and practice of local and international organisations working in this important sector.

The Peace Building and Conflict Resolution Centre will create synergies and co-ordinate, complement and add value to the objectives of many local peace building organisations.

Ongoing stakeholder engagement with local groups will help develop the work of the Peace Building and Conflict Resolution Centre when it becomes operational in 2015.

Delivering Social Change Programme: Ministerial Sub-Committees

Ms Fearon asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) how many times the Ministerial Sub-Committee on Children and Young People has met in the last 12 months; (ii) how many times the Ministerial Sub-Committee on Poverty and Social Inclusion has met in the last 12 months; (iii) who sits on both committees; and (iv) how many times the two committees have met on a joint basis within the last 12 months.

(AQW 19497/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Ministerial Sub-Committee on Poverty and Social Inclusion and Ministerial Sub-Committee on Children and Young People are leading the Executive's Delivering Social Change programme.

Under the Delivering Social Change structure, both Ministerial Sub-Committees meet quarterly on alternate rotation, cochaired by OFMDFM Junior Ministers. Once a year we co-chair a joint meeting of the two Sub-Committees. Membership of the two Sub-Committees comprises all Executive Ministers.

To date, two meetings of the Delivering Social Change Sub-Committee on Children and Young People have taken place within the last twelve months and one Delivering Social Change Ministerial Sub-Committee on Poverty and Social Inclusion has taken place.

The first joint meeting of the two Delivering Social Change Sub-Committees is scheduled to take place in April this year.

Racial Equality Strategy

Mrs Dobson asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when the Racial Equality Strategy will be finalised, published for consultation and launched.

(AQW 19498/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We are fully committed to tackling racial inequalities and promoting good race relations.

The Racial Equality Strategy is key to achieving these twin aims and officials have been working with minority ethnic representatives through the Racial Equality Panel to draft a new strategy that will meet the needs and aspirations of minority ethnic people and wider society.

We want to make sure that the document is fit for purpose and partnership working with representatives of minority ethnic people on the drafting of the Strategy will continue to ensure we achieve this aim.

We envisage that a 12-week public consultation will begin in spring this year.

The Strategy will be launched after this process has been completed and the consultation responses have been considered.

Joseph Rowntree Foundation: Poverty and Ethnicity Review

Mrs Dobson asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when they last met the Joseph Rowntree Foundation; and to outline what they expect to learn from its recent report on poverty and ethnicity. (AQW 19499/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We sponsored the launch of "Poverty and Ethnicity in Northern Ireland: an evidence review" in Parliament Buildings on 4 February 2013.

The Poverty and Ethnicity review, together with other research, will form the evidence base for the forthcoming Racial Equality Strategy and ensuing actions.

The Department has contacts with the Joseph Rowntree Foundation on various issues of mutual interest including racial equality, poverty and Delivering Social Change. A departmental official sat on the Advisory Group for the Poverty and Ethnicity review. We hope to continue this collaboration with the Foundation.

Racial Equality Strategy

Ms Lo asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether the Race Strategy will be integrated with the Executive's strategies on the economy, investment, poverty, disability, children's, women's and rural development issues; and whether they have had any recent discussions with the respective Ministers.

(AQW 19522/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The new Racial Equality Strategy will address the complexity of identities, given that an individual's identity may be made up of several factors.

There will be clear linkages between implementation of the new Racial Equality Strategy and other anti-discrimination policies and strategies.

The Strategy will provide a framework for the mainstreaming of racial equality and good race relations in the implementation of all other relevant strategies.

The Racial Equality Strategy will be an Executive strategy and will therefore be discussed by the Executive in due course.

Northern Ireland Memorial Fund

Mr Hussey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the current status of the Northern Ireland Memorial Fund; and how funding is allocated.

(AQW 19576/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Northern Ireland Memorial Fund (NIMF) will remain in operation until the end of March 2013 at which stage the staff and funding responsibility will transfer to the Victims and Survivors Service (VSS).

Although the Fund closed for applications on 7 January 2013, recipients can continue to claim from their Letter of Offer up to 31 March 2013.

From April 2013 the VSS will take on the role of providing practical help and support to individual victims and survivors. To ensure continuity of service the VSS will contact all past recipients of the NIMF directly before 31 March 2013.

The NIMF is responsible for the assessment of applications and the decision to award funding to individuals through its grant schemes. We have no role in these operational decisions.

Economy and Jobs Initiative: Energy Efficiency Measures

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what progress has been made on the introduction of energy efficiency measures, as set out in the Economy and Jobs Initiative, including the mechanisms for delivery. (AQW 19593/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Officials from our Department are currently working with colleagues from the Department for Social Development and the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to refine delivery and operational proposals, with a view to moving to early implementation of additional activity to supplement the Executive's existing retrofitting of energy efficiency measures in homes.

Minority Ethnic Development Fund

Ms Lo asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the next round of the Ethnic Minority Development Fund; and whether they can give an assurance that successful applicants will be notified before 31 March 2013. (AQW 19595/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Minority Ethnic Development Fund remains a key element of our work to promote racial equality and good race relations.

Our officials have consulted representatives of the minority ethnic sector in order to produce a revised funding scheme that takes full account of a recent evaluation of the Fund and that reflects our objectives for the Fund, the needs within the sector and the need for good governance.

The Fund will run from the beginning of the new financial year for two years.

Adverts inviting applications are scheduled to appear in the press on 20 February 2013 and it is our intention that successful applicants will be notified before 31 March 2013.

Delivering Social Change Fund

Miss M McIlveen asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the Delivering Social Change Fund. (AQW 19679/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: A consolidated and integrated Delivering Social Change Fund has been established which subsumes the Social Protection Fund and takes forward Childcare, the Social Investment Fund and both current and future Signature Programmes under the Delivering Social Change delivery framework.

This Fund affords us the opportunity to respond quickly, and in a flexible manner, to urgent social needs as they arise and address the specific needs of some of our most in need individuals and families.

The initial allocation of £26 million made in October 2012 to the six Delivering Social Change Signature Programmes demonstrated the benefit of deploying Executive resources flexibly across departments.

Children and Young People's Strategy

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) whether the Early Actions Paper supersedes the Ten Year Strategy for Children and Young People Action Plans; (ii) when a further action plan for the Ten Year Strategy for Children and Young People will be developed, given that the last action plan ended in 2011; and (iii) how does the Ten Year Strategy for Children and Young People relate to the Delivering Social Change agenda.

(AQW 19685/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Children and Young People's Strategy is being taken forward under the Delivering Social Change Framework.

The Delivering Social Change Framework allows us to move away from previous lengthy and disjointed action plans and enables us to identify the most pressing issues and co-ordinate and focus action to maximise impact.

The Children and Young Persons Early Action Paper identifies the key priorities for children and families and focuses efforts and resources on a joined up approach to tackling poverty and improving the lives and experiences of our children and young people.

Actions arising from the Early Actions Paper will be assigned to a lead department which will be responsible for overseeing delivery as well as evaluating effectiveness.

The delivery of the six Signature Programmes, which we announced on 10 October 2012 and which included proposed work around Family Support Hubs, Children's Nurture Units and Parenting Support Programmes, is the first tangible outworking of this approach.

Further actions will be identified taking account of the Early Actions Paper and the detail of the Children and Young People's Ten Year Strategy. The format in which these will be presented is under consideration.

OFMDFM: Policy Area Updates

Mr McDevitt asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the progress made in each policy area since their joint announcement on 18 July 2012.

(AQO 3351/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: In agreeing the policy decisions contained in the 18 July announcement, we gave a strong mandate for action across a range of significant strategic issues.

We are pleased to be able to inform you that this mandate has been built upon with continuing strong progress on these important issues.

The Maze Long Kesh Development Corporation Board was established on 10 September 2012 and will take forward the regeneration of the Maze/Long Kesh site.

Kathryn Stone OBE was appointed to the post of Victim's Commissioner on 24 September 2012.

A competition to appoint a new Chair of ILEX was recently advertised, and applications closed on Friday, 8 February.

The Investment Strategy 2011-2021 was agreed at the Executive meeting held on 3 September 2012 and was published on 8 October 2012.

Work is ongoing on Cohesion, Sharing and Integration and a Strategy will be published on completion of discussions between parties.

The Education Bill was introduced on 2 October and completed Second Stage on 15 October. The Bill is currently in Committee Stage, which is scheduled for completion on 8 April.

Legislation on welfare reform, incorporating important protections secured for vulnerable people here, is being progressed in the Assembly.

Social Investment Fund steering groups comprising voluntary/community and political representatives were established in October 2012 in each social investment zone. We have received draft strategic area plans for all areas. Finalised strategic area plans should be ready by 28 February 2013.

Work on changes to post-2015 structures of Government is being taken forward by the Executive Party Leaders Group. The Reports of the Assembly and Executive Review Committee will contribute to this work.

Maze/Long Kesh Site: Road Infrastructure

Mr Craig asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the plans in place to develop the road infrastructure at the Maze site now that the Royal Ulster Agricultural Society is moving to the development. (AQO 3354/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Road infrastructure plans both on and around the site are currently being developed by the Maze/Long Kesh Development Corporation (MLK DC) as one part of an integrated transportation strategy for the site. The Corporation has as a high priority the development of improved linkages with the M1 to ensure that investment in essential road infrastructure facilitates the development of the overall Maze/Long Kesh site.

The MLK DC is working closely with the Royal Ulster Agricultural Society (RUAS) to help ensure the Agricultural Show in May is a success. The Corporation is providing a new site entrance and extensive on-site parking in advance of this year's Show, and will have utilities available on site for the RUAS. The RUAS are working closely with government agencies to ensure effective traffic management of the event which includes plans for the provision of traffic flow monitoring cameras.

First Minister and Deputy First Minister: Visit to Brussels

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on their recent visit to Brussels in relation to Peace projects.

(AQO 3356/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We travelled to Brussels as negotiations to conclude an agreement on the EU budget for 2014-2020 entered a critical stage.

We used the opportunity to raise issues important to us at the highest levels within the European Union.

In Brussels, we met with the President of the European Council, Herman Van Rompuy, the President of the European Parliament, Martin Schulz; the Commissioner for Research and Innovation, Maire Geoghegan-Quinn; and the Commissioner for Regional Policy, Johannes Hahn. We also met with Professor Danuta Hübner MEP, chair of the European Parliament Committee on Regional Development, MEPs Martina Anderson, Diane Dodds and Jim Nicholson, as well as the respective Ambassadors of the UK and Irish Permanent Representations to the European Union.

While in Brussels we also took the opportunity to attend the launch of an exhibition as part of the Connected Health and Prosperity Event held in the European Parliament under the aegis of Diane Dodds MEP and was supported by the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, and the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment.

We were also keynote speakers, along with the Irish Minister for Public Expenditure and Reform, Brendan Howlin, TD at a conference hosted by Commissioner Hahn entitled "Bringing Divided Communities Together - Sharing the Experience of the EU PEACE programme". The centrepiece of the conference was a number of innovative project testimonies from the PEACE Programme giving a detailed insight into the work accomplished and the impact that this work continues to have on people's lives. The Conference also explored whether the PEACE approach is a model that could be used for other regions that are emerging from conflict.

Our visit was timely as the final preparations were being made for the European Council on the 7-8 February where subsequently agreement was reached on the Multi-Annual Financial Framework.

While it is too early to provide a comprehensive analysis of the total budget, we can confirm that a provision of €150m has been included for a further PEACE Programme.

This is not the end of the negotiations as the European Parliament must give its approval. However, it is a significant step towards a further PEACE programme and we will continue to work with our allies in the European Parliament to secure its final agreement.

This is a considerable achievement for our Executive, a clear confirmation of the importance of increased European Engagement by our Executive.

The Executive is committed to continuing this engagement over the coming months as the crucial pieces of sector-specific proposals that decide the detail of future European Funding are finalised.

Delivering Social Change Framework: Children and Young People

Mr Beggs asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how they are facilitating an early intervention approach on children and young people's issues across Executive Departments.

(AQO 3404/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: One of the key priorities of the Executive is to improve the life chances of our children and young people. We are committed to achieving this through the Delivering Social Change framework, which has placed an initial focus on the needs of children and their families to ensure the most urgent and significant problems in our society are addressed, and at the earliest opportunity.

The Delivering Social Change Framework is about creating a new culture and focus on cross-cutting work to achieve social benefits. In practical terms, this means focusing at a strategic level on early intervention both to tackle issues before they develop into problems and to give children a good start in life.

In support of this, on 10 October last year, we announced the allocation of £26 million of central funds for the delivery of six new signature programmes under the Delivering Social Change framework.

Significantly, these will improve numeracy and literacy levels, offer increased family support by way of additional family support hubs, nurture units and positive parenting programmes and assist those young people who are not currently in education, employed, or undertaking training.

These Signature Programmes complement the larger social and economic policies and programmes being carried out across departments to tackle poverty impacting on the lives of children and young people. They also deliver on the priorities identified in the Children and Young Persons Early Action Document and take full account of the principles of the ten year Children and Young People's Strategy, including its six high level outcomes identified for children and their families.

The Children and Young People's Strategy specially commits the Executive to 'promote a move to preventative and early intervention practice without taking attention away from our children and young people currently most in need of more targeted services'.

The Executive is determined to see delivery and is confident that the Delivering Social Change framework provides the streamlined governance and accountability necessary to see real change that we all want for our children and young people, and society as a whole.

Delivering Social Change Framework: Literacy and Numeracy Signature Programme

Mr Storey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the signature projects intended to improve numeracy and literacy.

(AQO 3412/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Department of Education is presently taking forward the Literacy and Numeracy Signature Programme under the Delivering Social Change framework. The programme seeks to support improvements in the literacy and numeracy levels within our schools.

Eighty recently graduated teachers will be appointed to ensure extra support for children in primary schools to achieve the expected levels in Reading and Maths, and 150 recently graduated teachers will be appointed to provide additional support to pupils in post-primary schools who are not predicted to get at least a 'C' grade in GCSE English and/or Maths.

The Western Education and Library Board, which has been appointed as the lead board to help deliver the project, has set up a Strategic Oversight Group with responsibility for developing regional criteria for the recruitment of teachers and the identification of eligible schools. This work is currently underway.

It is intended that the additional teachers will be appointed prior to the beginning of the 2013/14 academic year.

Northern Ireland Executive Office in Brussels

Mr Humphrey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the progress and role of the Northern Ireland Executive Office in Brussels.

(AQO 3413/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The role of our Brussels office remains the same as when it was established in 2001 which is to serve as the focal point for liaison with the Institutions of the European Union in promoting the Executive's interests in areas of policy, legislation and funding.

The office aims

- To assist the Executive further the aims of its Programme for Government through engagement with the European Institutions in Brussels
- To assist departments contribute to EU policy development and implementation in relation to their core business and increase departmental engagement with elective European funding programmes.
- To maintain and increase contacts with the EU institutions and EU regional representations in Brussels, particularly using the leverage of the Barroso Taskforce.
- To facilitate contact with the EU institutions, Regional Offices and other relevant Brussels based organisations by our non-governmental and local government sectors.
- To raise the positive profile of the region in Brussels.

These were reaffirmed by the Executive when it approved the review of the European Division.

We officially opened new premises for our offices in December 2010 in the presence of European Commission President, José Manuel Barroso, as part of our commitment to improve the Executive's European engagement. These new premises have enabled our office to considerably increase the services it provides.

Since moving to new premises, up to the end of January 2013, 5,500 visitors have passed through our offices in Brussels, attending hundreds of policy seminars, meetings, cultural events and receptions. During this time, the office has facilitated 30 Ministerial programmes with Ministers increasingly attending the Council of the European Union. The office has also facilitated 8 visits by Assembly Committees and 4 by the Northern Ireland Assembly and Business Trust.

In September 2011, our Brussels office, in co-operation with the NI Arts Council, launched "The Brussels Platform". This cultural programme provides an opportunity to promote the diversity of cultural talent that we have to offer.

Other significant events held in our offices during this time include hosting seminars for Open Days, the European week of Regions organised by DG Regional Policy and the Committee of the Regions. In 2011, and again in 2012, the office hosted official Open Days seminars with over 120 attendees.

In February 2012, the office hosted an event to celebrate the awarding of the first Protected Geographical Indicator (PGI) to Lough Neagh Eels. The reception which featured some of our best local food products served to showcase the highest quality of our agri-food industry.

More recently, the office facilitated a Gala Dinner for over 60 people, hosted by Minister Poots, as part of a Connected Health and Prosperity Event held in the European Parliament.

The number of people based in our Brussels office has increased to 13. There are currently 3 OFMDFM staff working in Brussels, and they, along with 3 locally recruited support staff, comprise the Brussels element of OFMDFM's European Division. One Department of Agriculture and Rural Development officer and 2 Invest NI staff are co-located with the OFMDFM team. The 4 Barroso Task Force Desk Officers are also based in the office.

The running costs of the office are borne by OFMDFM. DARD and Invest NI contribute towards the costs of the office space and support services from OFMDFM.

During our most recent visit to Brussels on 29-31 January, our offices hosted, in co-operation with the SEUPB, an exhibition of PEACE III projects and a reception to coincide with the PEACE conference organised by the Commissioner for Regional Policy, Johannes Hahn. The timing of these events was significant as negotiations to conclude an agreement on the EU budget for 2014-2020 entered a critical stage.

The Multi-Annual Financial Framework recently agreed by European Heads of State included a provision for 150 million euros for a PEACE IV Programme. While this is not the end of the process as the European Parliament must give its approval, it is a significant step forward and a clear confirmation of the importance of increased European Engagement by our Executive.

We are committed to continuing this engagement over the coming months and beyond as the crucial pieces of sector-specific proposals that decide the detail of future European Funding are finalised, such as the Common Agriculture Policy, Research and Development funding and Structural Funds, including the PEACE Programme. Our Brussels office will continue to be at the forefront of this work.

Questions for Written Answer: AQW 17802/11-15, AQW 16306/11-15, AQW 18046/11-15

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister why AQWs 17802/11-15, 16306/11-15 and 18046/11-15 remain unanswered.

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: A response to AQWs 17802/11-15, 16306/11-15 and 18046/11-15 was issued on 20 February 2013.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Meat and Meat Products: Import Checks

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what action her Department is taking to ensure that Northern Ireland is not used as a transit point for contaminated meat. (AQW 18577/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): Meat or meat products entering the EU through the Border Inspection Post in the north of Ireland from Third Countries are subjected to full import checks as required by EU Directive 97/78.

Checks will also be carried out by my officials at the ports of entry to the north of Ireland on meat or meat products originating from within the EU, if a consignment is the subject of a notification though the Rapid Alert System for Feed and Food of the Commission (RASSF) or an EU safeguard Decision imposed by an EU country.

I have asked the FSA to urgently begin an enhanced programme of inspections across the north of Ireland. This enhanced regime commenced on 5th February and will sit alongside a Britain and the north of Ireland-wide sampling survey in which the two selected local district councils are already participating.

The purpose of this enhanced programme is to establish the sources of incoming meat ingredients to each establishment and assure that consumers' interests are being protected in relation to the declaration of the meat species in the establishments' products, and the precautions adopted by manufacturers to reduce or eliminate unintended inclusion of low levels of species that are not declared.

Railways: Rail Halt at Ballykelly

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she has had, or plans to have, any meetings with the Minister for Regional Development regarding the provision of a Northern Ireland Railways halt at Ballykelly and the funding issues surrounding such a provision.

(AQW 18704/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Any decision on where railway halts should be sited, their funding and approvals, falls within the remit of the Department for Regional Development. I wrote to the DRD Minister on 16th October 2012 inviting him to give serious consideration to establishing a rail halt at Ballykelly. At present there is no financial provision for such a halt.

My officials are currently liaising with colleagues in DRD to consider the transport implications for relocating my Department to Ballykelly including the potential for a railway halt. When I receive the initial options from officials I intend to seek a meeting with Minister Kennedy to discuss the way forward including funding implications.

Rural Development Programme: Sports Clubs

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the total amount of Rural Development Programme funding allocated to sports clubs, other than football or GAA clubs, broken down by sport. (AQW 18864/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Rural Development Programme does not provide funding to sports clubs for direct sporting activities. However, where such an organisation wishes to promote a project that benefits the wider rural community and which is separate from their primary activity, this may be considered for funding.

Following open competition and robust assessment, funding has been awarded to clubs not associated with Soccer or GAA as follows:

Sailing - £75k to provide a stop off point on the North Coast canoeing trail.

Golf - £169k to provide better access to tourists visiting the area and provide additional community facilities.

In both cases these clubs were funded under measure 3.3 in support of actions to increase tourism in their respective local areas.

Farmers: Profit Margins

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what action she can take to increase profit margins for farmers.

(AQW 19308/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: It is important to start by recognising that there are a range of factors which farmers and governments simply cannot control, such as international commodity markets, exchange rates and the weather. These can have a major impact on profitability, as the 2012 farm incomes estimates have illustrated. Therefore, when it comes to increasing profit margins, the focus must be on those issues that fall within the control of individual farmers, such as technical efficiency, management skills or the adoption of new technologies. These considerations will influence, for example, the development of the next Rural Development Programme and the type of research commissioned by DARD under the Evidence and Innovation Strategy. They also influence current Departmental efforts.

My Department has a number of ongoing initiatives aimed at helping farmers improve their competitiveness and profitability. Under the competitiveness strand of the current Rural Development Programme, my Department has provided £45 million funding for a number of schemes, including:-

- Farm Family Options, which includes both skills training and business mentoring;
- the Focus Farm Programme, which looks at promoting best practice, modern technology and innovative farm methods;
- Benchmarking, which is an important tool in monitoring and improving input costs and livestock production efficiency as well as assessing overall performance;
- The Supply Chain Development Programme, which supports farmers working together and with others to improve the rewards from their supply chain; and,
- The Farm Modernisation Programme, which provides support for farmers to modernise their holdings and improve production techniques.

Going forward, we need to build an industry that is not only competitive, but also resilient in the face of market volatility and other income shocks. I am hoping that the work of the industry-led Agri-Food Strategy Board will help set a growth agenda and contribute to the building of an industry that is robust, outward looking, self-reliant and profitable.

In the meantime, I am very aware of the current cash-flow difficulties many farmers are facing and I have taken a number of steps to help alleviate these problems. Recently, I announced my intention to bring forward the payment of the 2013 LFACA Scheme some three weeks earlier than planned. I have also asked for payments under the Countryside Management Scheme to begin in May 2013, some four months earlier than they began last year. My decision not to apply a further year's voluntary modulation will also help alleviate some of the financial pressure on farmers. In addition, my officials are providing practical information and advice to farmers through a series of on-going workshops to help mitigate the on-going impact of last year's poor weather conditions during the growing season.

Aerial Systems

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 18113/11-15, whether the unmanned aerial system will be utilised for additional purposes in 2013. (AQW 19329/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department has no current plans to deploy unmanned aerial systems in new areas of work in 2013.

Commons

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 18113/11-15, to detail her Department's definition of Commons; and what areas of Northern Ireland are classified as Commons.

(AQW 19332/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The term "Commons" is generic and is used to refer to areas of mountain or uplands that are used (shared) by several farmers. There is no single definition of a "Common". My Department records over 300 areas covering in excess of 36,000 hectares as "Commons".

In some cases these "Commons" are managed by Trustees and were established under the 1903 Irish Land Act, others are managed by Trustees and were set up under various pieces of legislation. Some areas are owned by individuals where several famers have a right to graze the area and others are areas where there is no discernable ownership of the area and a number of farmers share the area by agreement.

Under the CAP Regulations my Department is required to notionally allocate an area used in common between individual farmers in proportion to their use or right of use of the area.

My Department provides notional areas to farmers who have shown they have a right to use or are using a "Common". The farmers use the allocated areas to support claims for subsidy.

In compliance with its obligations under EU law my Department must map such areas which are often large inaccessible areas that are difficult to map because of their remoteness and terrain.

The areas treated as "common land" by my Department are spread throughout the north and are mainly confined to mountains or upland areas. The majority of these areas can be found in Counties Antrim, Derry and Tyrone.

Rural Development Programme

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she has any plans to include measures exclusively aimed at women in the next Rural Development Programme.

(AQW 19376/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: DARD's initial proposals for the next Rural Development Programme are currently being considered by a Stakeholder Consultation Group, which includes the NI Rural Women's Network. These initial proposals contain a range of measures which are open to women, either as farm business owners, landowners, rural entrepreneurs or members of a farm family.

I want to see a good uptake of these measures by rural women. The proposals for the next Rural Development Programme will go out for a full public consultation later in 2013 and I want to hear from rural women and our other stakeholders how we can better design our measures to encourage more applications from women, and increase their representation across the Programme generally.

In addition, an Equality Impact Assessment of the next Rural Development Programme will be carried out. This will look at the potential impact of the Programme on gender, as well as the other Section 75 groups. This consultation will take place at the same time as the consultation on the draft Programme, and will provide another opportunity for the public to have their say on the role of women within the next Rural Development Programme.

Women in Rural Areas: Job Opportunities

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what measures she has taken to increase job opportunities for women living in rural areas.

(AQW 19377/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The NI Rural Development Programme (NIRDP) 2007–2013 is not primarily a job creation programme however it has strong economic focus and provides funding for business creation and farm diversification amongst other things. It is open to anyone living or working in a rural area irrespective of gender. Within the NIRDP women are a key target group both as direct and indirect beneficiaries of programme funding. Therefore while support for female entrepreneurs and job creation in general is crucial for a thriving and sustainable rural community, so also is the creation of the conditions that enable rural women to engage in and return to the world of work.

To date the Rural Development Programme has, despite the economic turn down, created 283 full time equivalent jobs available for both men and women. In addition 233 projects, undertaken by women applicants have been awarded £4.5m in grant aid. In recognition of the barrier that a lack of accessible childcare presents to woman in rural areas who wish to enter employment, the programme has supported 36 projects to aimed at developing both businesses and infrastructure for rural childcare provision.

Women have an important role to play in the delivery of Axis 3 of the NIRDP both as entrepreneurs and as members of Local Action Groups (LAGs). Therefore NIRDP's Network has facilitated a Thematic Working on Women in Rural Development. The group with representation from LAGs, YFCU, NIRWN and CSL has been identifying and sharing good practice and has held encouragement conferences and show cased inspirational role models. It has also worked closely with QUB with their gender mainstreaming work.

Finally, I am delighted to say that within LAGs there are 65 female LAG members who will ensure that the views of women are represented in the funding assessment and decision making processes.

DARD: Central Investigation Service

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 18188/11-15, when she requested Criminal Justice Inspection Northern Ireland to conduct an independent inspection of the Central Investigation Service. (AQW 19380/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In May 2010 my Department's Permanent Secretary requested that the Criminal Justice Inspectorate (CJI) conduct an independent inspection of the Central Investigation Service. However, CJI were unable to do so and confirmed that DARD is not listed as one of the organisations that come under the CJI's statutory remit to inspect.

I intend to meet with the Minister of Justice and the Chief Inspector of Criminal Justice in the near future to discuss whether CIS can be added to the list of organisations that the Chief Inspector of Criminal Justice must inspect.

DARD: Central Investigation Service

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what qualifications are deemed essential to the post of Investigator in the Central Investigation Service.

(AQW 19381/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Investigators must have a BTEC Certificate in Advanced Professional Investigative Practice. This qualification is accredited by a recognised body.

DARD: Fraud Hotline

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the number of calls received by the Fraud Hotline in each of the last three years, broken down by month.

(AQW 19384/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In response to your question, I have provided, at Annex A, the detail of the number of calls received by the Fraud Hotline in each of the last three years plus the current year to date, broken down by month.

Annex A

Year	Apr	May	Jun	Jul	Aug	Sept	Oct	Nov	Dec	Jan	Feb	Mar	Total

DARD: Fraud Hotline

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the costs incurred by the Fraud Hotline in each of the last three years.

(AQW 19385/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Fraud Hotline cost the Department £227 per annum. This equates to £681 over the last three years.

Farm Accident Statistics

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether her Department records farm accident statistics. (AQW 19418/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department does not routinely collect farm accident statistics. However, a one-off Social Survey of Farmers and Farm Families published by DARD in 2002 found that non-fatal accidents requiring medical treatment had occurred on 3 per cent of the surveyed farms in the previous 12 months.

Rural Development Programme: North-east Region

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the projects that have been allocated funding in the North East Region Rural Development Programme cluster to date and the amount allocated to each. (AQW 19425/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Axis 3 funding is delivered under a LEADER methodology through seven local council clusters. The methodology empowers local people to make local funding decisions to address local issues in line with an approved Local Development strategy.

The North East Region (NER) is one such cluster and below is a list of all projects in the North East Region that have been allocated funding. You will note that I have redacted the names of applications made by private individuals in line with their expectations of confidentiality and that all processing will take place in accord with the Data Protection Principles

Agri-environment

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, given that the EU Agriculture Committee has signalled a ring fencing of 25 percent for agri-environment spend, what plans her Department has to match or increase funding for agri-environment?

(AQW 19446/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Agri-environment in the current NI Rural Development Programme accounts for 36% of the overall programme budget. I have no plans at present to increase this percentage for the remainder of the current programming period.

My Department in conjunction with our stakeholders is currently considering the overall needs of agriculture, the environment and rural areas for the future rural development programme. However the shape and size of the 2014-2020 programme and the balance of funding across priorities will be very dependent on the rural development budget available.

The EU Commission rural development proposals require climate change and the environment to be cross cutting objectives for the 2014-2020 programme. The MEP agriculture committee amendment proposes a ring fencing of 25% funding for the agri-environment and organic farming measures. There are however other measures within the proposed regulation which will also contribute to achieving our environmental objectives. The final rural development regulation has not yet been agreed and the list of measures which may contribute to this objective is still subject to change.

DARD: Hospitality Spend

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what was the total spend on hospitality by her Department in 2011/12.

(AQW 19493/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Hospitality costs for the Department and its Agencies for 2011-12 were:

2011/12 £53,259

Horse Meat in Food Products: Freeza Meats

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, further to her press statement and pursuant to AQW 18544/11-15, when she became aware that meat from Poland that was being stored at Freeza Meats, Newry and contained 80 percent horse DNA, was being detained due to the packaging and queries regarding labelling and traceability. (AQW 19503/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: DARD Officials have been aware since the autumn of 2012 that two pallets of meat had been detained at Freeza Meats as part of an ongoing investigation being taken forward by Newry and Mourne District Council.

As a result of sampling carried out behalf of the FSA on the 25th January 2013, it was confirmed to DARD Officials by the FSA at a meeting of Food and Feed Incident Management Group on the afternoon of Friday 1 February 2013 that this material was 80% horse meat.

This information was confirmed in a submission, copied to me at 17.33 on the same day.

Rural Development Programme: Solar Energy

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 19010/11-15, to detail the number of successful applications for solar energy in each Local Action Group area in the Rural Development Programme. (AQW 19543/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The number of successful applications to Axis 3 of the Rural Development Programme for solar energy projects are as follows:

Cluster	Number of Successful Solar Applications
ARC	0
LRP	2
NER	1
SOAR	1
SWARD	5

Rural Development Programme: Solar Energy

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 19010/11-15, to detail the monetary value of each application in each Local Action Group area.

(AQW 19544/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The table below breaks down the monetary value of applications for solar energy projects supplied in AQW 19010/11-15 into individual project amounts.

Cattle: Live Export to Libya

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether her Department is aware of any live cattle export business opportunities to Libya.

(AQW 19554/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There is presently no health certification in place to facilitate the export of live cattle to Libya.

Cockle Fishing in Belfast Lough

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many cockles were in Belfast Lough in 2009 prior to the experiment of cockle fishing when 13 vessels were allowed to enter Belfast Lough; and how many cockles were in the ground when this experiment was over.

(AQW 19571/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In February 2009, prior to the start of the 2009 experimental fishery, the Belfast Lough Cockle sites were estimated to hold 850 tonnes. In March and June 2010, surveys of the sites indicated a cockle resource of 150 tonnes.

Horses: Illegal Movement

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether her Department was aware of illegal horse movements prior to 25 January 2013.

(AQW 19667/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department has been aware of allegations relating to movement of horses which have not been in full compliance with the Horse Passport Regulations (NI) 2010. Compliance checks have been conducted, and where irregularities have been detected, direct action such as the prevention of movement of relevant consignments [to Britain] has been taken.

North Antrim: Social and Economic Infrastructure

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what action her Department is taking to strengthen the social and economic infrastructure of rural areas in North Antrim in line with the Children and Young People's Action Plan 2011-2013.

(AQW 19712/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: DARD takes its Section 75 responsibilities seriously and we are working hard to ensure that children and young people in rural communities throughout NI have a voice in shaping those public policies that impact on their lives.

Most of the Actions in our Children & Young People's Action Plan are not specifically targeted at any particular area of NI although hopefully the actions in the Plan will appeal to young people right across NI, including those living in the North Antrim area and other rural communities too. Our work has delivered on outcomes for children and young people right across rural NI, for instance:

A minimum of 5% of the budget for Axis 3 of the NI Rural Development Programme 2007-13 is directed towards benefiting young people and children. In the North East Region (NER) Joint Council Committee area, which includes the North Antrim area, grant assistance of just over £2 million has been awarded towards projects which are recorded as benefiting children and young people. This represents over 22% of the total allocation currently committed by NER.

Development of the next Rural Development Programme, covering the period 2014 to 2020, is currently underway. The Programme is being developed in line with Europe's priorities for Rural Development, which include social inclusion, poverty reduction and economic development in rural areas.

The Young Farmers' Clubs of Ulster (YFCU) is a leading representative group for young people in agriculture and rural communities in NI. DARD currently provides a 3 year grant of £75k per year to the YFCU (2011-14) subject to YFCU fulfilling five specific work areas, as agreed. These include;

- Joint campaigns and activities in conjunction with the GAA.
   This initiative is bringing young people from different community backgrounds together to work on common issues.
- A schools outreach programme of a cross-community nature. Young people in Key Stage 3 and 4 from different community backgrounds are involved in sporting and life based activities together. The aim is to break down barriers and widen experiences in a programme which fits in with the school curriculum.

As stated in our Plan we have, and will continue to meet with children & young people and their representative organisations throughout NI to identify further useful actions that our business areas can take forward to better promote participation and involvement of children and young people in all areas of NI.

Wind Turbines

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many farmers have constructed single wind turbines on their land, in the last three years.

(AQW 19738/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department has no statutory responsibility in the construction of wind turbines on farms or the auditing of them, therefore I cannot answer your question.

Horse Meat in Food Products: DARD Meetings with Supermarkets

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many meetings she has held with major supermarket chains in connection with the recent issue of horse meat contamination. (AQW 19787/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In order to support the Agri-food industry in my role as DARD Minister, I met with the NI Independent Retail Trade Association (NIIRTA) whose members include for example Spar, Costcutter, Vivo, NISA and many local traders, and the NI Retail Consortium (NIRC) whose members include Tesco, Sainsburys, Marks & Spencer and Asda, on 13 February 2013 to discuss the on-going horse meat problem and promote the reputation of safe local produce. A representative from LIDL was also present at the meeting.

North Down: Caravan Parks

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what proportion of the £4 million investment by Forest Service for upgrading caravan parks will be allocated to North Down.

(AQW 19916/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: A business case is being developed which will consider how best Forest Service can invest the £4 million allocated as part of the Jobs and Economy Initiative.

At this stage no decisions have been taken about how or where the money should be spent.

Horse Meat in Food Products: DARD Meetings with the FSA and DHSSPS

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many meetings she has had with (i) the Food Standards Agency; and (ii) the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety since the news broke of horse meat being found in food products.

(AQW 19939/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I have met with the Food Standards Agency on 5 occasions and the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety once since the news broke of horse meat being found in food products.

Horse Meat in Food Products: DARD Public Buildings and CAFRE

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether burgers or meat products containing horse meat have been supplied to her Department's public buildings or the College for Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise. (AQW 19947/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I can confirm that burgers containing horse meat have been supplied to the Eurest outlets at Greenmount and Loughry campuses of CAFRE. CAFRE has a service contract with Eurest (a subsidiary of Compass) which commenced in August 2011, to provide catering across the three CAFRE campuses.

Compass took the precautionary measure of withdrawing from the menu all burgers supplied by a manufacturer within its supply chain, whose products were referred to in the media and sent samples for testing. Subsequently, on Thursday 14 February, the test results revealed traces of equine DNA which Compass notified immediately to CAFRE Management. On Friday 15 February, as soon as CAFRE received written confirmation from Compass, all staff and students were notified of the situation.

I can also confirm Serco provides the catering services in Dundonald House. They are not aware of any instance where horse meat has been confirmed in any of the products sold by them.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what information she has provided to the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs Committee for their inquiry into the vaccination of badgers and cattle in England and Wales in relation to Bovine TB.

(AQW 20137/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I am aware of the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (EFRA) Committee's inquiry into the vaccination of badgers and cattle in relation to Bovine TB.

While the role of the EFRA Committee is to examine the policy of Defra, we shall respond to any requests the Committee may make to DARD and shall be interested to see the outcome of its inquiry.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

DCAL: Nominations for Queen's New Year Honours

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to list every person, including Olympians and Paralympians, whom she nominated for an Honour within the Queen's New Year Honours. (AQW 18202/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): None.

Department of Education

Education and Skills Authority

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education how the establishment of the Education and Skills Authority will achieve savings of £40million by the end of the budgetary period.

(AQW 19206/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): The creation of ESA will assist in the delivery of two areas of savings within the Department's Savings Delivery Plan. Firstly, the establishment, under ESA of a regionalised schools development service importantly secures future professional development in schools whilst savings of the £25million per year are being delivered from the budget for professional support for schools. Secondly, the regionalisation of education administration, under ESA, shall make that administration sustainable amidst the £15 million savings being made per year from the administration and management costs of DE's arms-length bodies.

Finally, and more longer term, the Performance and Efficiency Delivery Unit's three reports into the scope for cost reduction in educational services outline further the potential for ESA to realise savings. A key finding of these reports was that there was often unexplained variation in practice and in costs across the Education & Library Boards. A central theme of the reports was the scope to improve value for money by operating services on a more consistent basis, learning from and applying good practice that already exists within some ELBs and best practice from elsewhere.

The establishment of ESA will require the design and delivery of support services that operate consistently across all parts of the north. This provides an early opportunity to address unnecessary variations in practice and to apply learning and best practice in line with the recommendations of PEDU. That work is now being taken forward.

Teachers

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many teachers, who have qualified in the last two years, have failed to obtain employment as a teacher.

(AQW 19419/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Not all graduates will have registered with the General Teaching Council (GTCNI) as they may wish to teach elsewhere or to pursue a different career path. The table below details the number of teachers who have qualified in the last two years; the number who registered and of those registered the number who failed to obtain any employment as a teacher in schools in either a permanent or temporary capacity. Figures do not include teachers employed in Voluntary Grammar Schools.

Graduate Year	Graduate numbers	GTCNI Registered Graduate numbers	Number of registered graduates failing to find employment as a teacher
11/12	662	538	70
12/13 (to date)	639	484	101

DE: Salary Payment Unit Costs

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education what is the unit cost of producing a salary payment by (i) his Department's Teachers Branch; (ii) an Education and Library Board; and (iii) a voluntary grammar school.

(AQW 19469/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The unit cost of producing a salary payment by (i) DE Teachers' Pay Team and (ii) each Education and Library Board are detailed in table below: -

	Unit cost Financial Year 2011/2012
DE Teachers' Pay Team	£3.96
BELB	£5.45
WELB	£6.15
NEELB	£7.95
SEELB	£8.25
SELB	£7.93

The Department does not hold this information in respect of Voluntary Grammar Schools and to obtain it would be disproportionate in terms of cost.

Voluntary Grammar Sector: Procurement of Goods and Services

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education what is the annual value of goods and services procured by the Voluntary Grammar sector.

(AQW 19470/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: It is not possible to accurately identify from voluntary grammar school accounts the annual value of goods and services procured by sector, as certain categories of expenditure may contain costs not solely associated with the procurement of goods and services. This includes expenditure on sports and games, or health and safety. It is also not possible to separate the total value of those goods and services procured using public funding and those procured using other funding sources.

The total expenditure classified by voluntary grammar schools as other operating costs and expenditure on school meals and canteen provision (i.e. excluding all staff salaries) was £38 million in 2011-12. It is reasonable to assume that the majority of this expenditure will be on the procurement of goods and services.

It should be noted this figure does not generally include expenditure associated with preparatory departments or boarding departments. However, some schools do not separate school meal and canteen expenditure for preparatory departments and in such cases the total expenditure for the school has been included.

The Education and Library Boards have advised that they do not hold details of which contracts are utilised by particular schools, however, all schools can access Board contracts and are issued with usernames and passwords for ELBCAT.

Preschool Admissions Criteria

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the impact of the change in legislation on children with July and August birthdays on applications within each school sector.

(AQW 19471/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The July/August priority pre-school admissions criterion was introduced to address concerns that children with a July/August birthday, if they failed to secure a pre-school education place, would not benefit from an educational experience until after their fifth birthday when they commenced primary education.

There is no educational reason why older children should have priority access to pre-school education. The legislative amendment was made to remove a provision which evidence indicated may have a detrimental effect on younger children's educational outcomes

When this requirement was introduced the level of pre-school provision stood at around 45%. Provision has increased significantly since then, reflected in the current Programme for Government commitment to ensure that at least one year of pre-school education is available to every family that wants it.

Removal of this priority admissions criterion will therefore promote equality of access to pre-school education at all types of pre-school setting.

Northern Ireland Curriculum

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the current nursery curriculum as a basis for developing a revised foundation stage of the Northern Ireland curriculum.

(AQW 19472/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Learning to Learn Framework proposed ensuring that experiences in primary school build more effectively on the child's previous education and learning experiences, and included the proposal to extend the Foundation Stage to include a non compulsory year (pre-school) and two compulsory years (primary), with one foundation curriculum to incorporate pre-school.

The curricular guidance for pre-school education is designed to support and promote good quality pre-school educational provision and outlines the range of learning opportunities which children of this age should have through play and other relevant experiences. The Foundation Stage aims to build on pre-school learning experiences by providing children with an appropriate learning programme to develop their dispositions to learn and to provide them with the skills and competencies they will need to succeed in school and future life.

The Chief Inspector's Report 2010-12 states that "A greater number of primary schools need to develop links at key transition stages, from pre-school to Foundation Stage."

The proposal to extend the Foundation Stage to include the non compulsory pre-school year is aimed at enabling primary schools to develop better links between the existing statutory primary and non statutory pre-school curricula and building more effectively on the previous learning experiences of children ensuring a continuum of provision.

The focused consultation concluded on the 31 January 2013 and I will consider the comments received during consultation and their impact on the current proposals before finalising the way forward.

Ministerial Advisory Group on the Advancement of Shared Education

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Education for an update on the work of the Shared Education Working Group. (AQW 19500/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Ministerial Advisory Group on advancing shared education has engaged with a wide range of key stakeholders, individuals and interested parties with a call for written submissions in October/November 2012. They also visited a number of projects and examples of good practice throughout the North of Ireland. Further information can be obtained from the Queens University Belfast website: http://www.qub.ac.uk/schools/SchoolofEducation/MinisterialAdvisoryGroup/ProgrammeofWork/

I anticipate receiving their report by the end of this month.

Home-to-School Transport Scheme

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Education to detail, for each of the last three years, (i) the number of (a) primary school pupils; and (b) post-primary school pupils enrolled at schools within Translink Metro zones; and (ii) as a proportion of each total, how many pupils were eligible for free travel on existing Metro services through the Home to School Transport scheme. (AQW 19527/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Belfast Education and Library Board has supplied the following information:

	Number of pupils enrolled in BELB schools within Metro Zones	Number of pupils eligible for Metro passes	Proportion of total enrolment with passes
2011/1 Primary	21,835	119	0.54%
Post Primary	29,584	1256	4.25%
2010/11 Primary	21,611	133	0.62%
Post Primary	29,818	1260	4.23%
2009/10 Primary	21,648	152	0.70%
Post Primary	29,922	1173	3.92%

GCSE Examinations

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education to list the meetings he has had with his counterparts in other regions of the United Kingdom to discuss proposed revisions to GCSE examinations.

(AQW 19538/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I met with my Ministerial counterparts in Wales and Scotland to discuss proposed revisions to GCE / GCSE examinations as detailed below:

- Leighton Andrews AC / AM on 4 July 2012
- Michael Russell MSP Cabinet Secretary for Education and Lifelong learning on 24 August 2012

I sought a meeting with Michael Gove to discuss changes to GCSE and A level qualifications, in September 2012. He declined to meet with me. I will however be discussing qualifications reform with Elizabeth Truss MP, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State at the Department for Education (in England) on 28 February 2013.

Education and Skills Authority

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education, pursuant of AQW 19038/11-15, to detail the findings of the (i) Deloitte assignment on the Education and Skills Authority (ESA) delivery models and location options; and (ii) Price Waterhouse Coopers assignment into the provision of an assessment centre for ESA. (AQW 19579/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Deloitte assignment produced recommendations for an organisation structure for the Education and Skills Authority (ESA) to Head of Service level. Their recommendations were designed also to help inform the development of locations options for ESA, including ESA headquarters (HQ), sub-regional offices and other related accommodation. The document is detailed and so I have arranged for a copy of it to be placed in the Assembly Library.

Under the same assignment Deloitte also produced a paper on ESA location strategy. This was completed in April 2010 and suggested a decentralised model with the clustering of relevant services for purposes of efficiency.

The Price Waterhouse Coopers assignment in question was to design and manage a recruitment process for the appointment of seven Directors to ESA. The process was consistent with the four principles set out in the NICS Commissioner's Code, including the design and implementation of an assessment centre. The recruitment process commenced on 15 June 2009 with the advertisement of seven Director posts for ESA. The initial recruitment process saw the appointment of six of the seven Directors. In October 2009 a second competition was run to appoint the seventh Director which concluded at the end of December 2009 resulting in no successful appointments being made.

Non-recognition of A-levels in the Republic of Ireland

Mr Storey asked Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW16096/11-15, for an update on the current situation. (AQW 19582/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: CCEA continue to work with their counterparts in the Irish Universities Association (IUA) and Central Applications Office (CAO), to address issues relating to Applied A Levels, BTECs and the A* grade. I have decided that these issues should be included within the scope the fundamental review of GCSEs and GCE A Levels here.

Following a meeting between the IUA and CCEA in November 2012, they are now analysing statistical information with a view to producing a joint paper highlighting a number of fundamental issues about the current system which need to be addressed. It is not possible to give an exact timescale for production of this report. However, CCEA has advised that details of the work to be undertaken will be finalised and timelines agreed with the IUA in the near future.

Review of Teacher Education

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 16370/11-15, for an update on the current situation. (AQW 19598/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The proposed strategy document will represent the culmination of the most detailed review of teacher education undertaken in the last thirty years. Work to update and refine the contents of the strategy has been ongoing and I have asked officials to brief me further on the broad proposals contained in it.

The final strategy document will be published with the agreement of the Minister for Employment and Learning and following further engagement with key stakeholders.

School Closures

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how many pupils have been affected by school closures in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 19600/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The total number of pupils affected by school closures in each of the last ten years will include those who were attending the schools at the time of their closure, as well as those attending schools to which pupils transferred and, potentially, those children who would otherwise have attended the school, had it not been closed.

Of these three groups, the Department is only able to provide information on the number of pupils attending the school at the time of the school census previous to the school closure. This information has been provided, for each of the last ten years, in the table below.

Pupils attending schools which were closed in 2002/03 - 2011/12

Year of closure	Pupils attending schools closed during that year
2002/03	339
2003/04	65
2004/05	111
2005/06	457
2006/07	373
2007/08	712
2008/09	623
2009/10	123
2010/11	323
2011/12	352

Note: Figures relate to children attending nursery, primary, post-primary and special schools in the years specified.

Voluntary Grammar Sector: Procurement of Goods and Services

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education what services are procured by voluntary grammar and grant maintained integrated schools from Education and Library Boards.

(AQW 19602/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: It is not possible to accurately identify from voluntary grammar school accounts the annual value of goods and services procured by sector, as certain categories of expenditure may contain costs not solely associated with the procurement of goods and services. This includes expenditure on sports and games, or health and safety. It is also not possible to separate the total value of those goods and services procured using public funding and those procured using other funding sources.

The total expenditure classified by voluntary grammar schools as other operating costs and expenditure on school meals and canteen provision (i.e. excluding all staff salaries) was £38 million in 2011-12. It is reasonable to assume that the majority of this expenditure will be on the procurement of goods and services.

It should be noted this figure does not generally include expenditure associated with preparatory departments or boarding departments. However, some schools do not separate school meal and canteen expenditure for preparatory departments and in such cases the total expenditure for the school has been included.

The Education and Library Boards have advised that they do not hold details of which contracts are utilised by particular schools, however, all schools can access Board contracts and are issued with usernames and passwords for ELBCAT.

Children from Ethnic Minorities: Educational Attainment

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education how the attainment of children from ethnic minorities is monitored; and for his assessment of their current level of attainment.

(AQW 19617/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The attainment of all children including those from ethnic minorities is monitored on an ongoing basis by their teachers in their schools. Teachers assess pupils work as part of their day to day teaching. They observe how pupils carry out classroom activities and will assess how pupils are progressing.

Additionally, the annual school leavers' survey which collects the qualifications and destinations of all pupils leaving grant aided post primary schools provides information on the attainment of pupils at the point at which they leave school and includes information on the attainment of pupils from ethnic minority backgrounds. Data from it show that pupils from ethnic backgrounds who stay on to take level 3 qualifications perform above the average for all pupils against the key indicators of 2 + A Levels (or equivalent) and 3+ A Levels (or equivalent) at grades A*-E. Performance at 5 + GCSEs A*-C is similar to average but falls below the average when the indicator includes GCSE English and maths. The performance of Traveller pupils however is significantly below that of other minority ethnic pupils across all three indicators.

This information is used to inform policy and practical interventions to support pupils, particularly those whose first language is not English, to reach their full potential. For example, my Department supports the Education and Library Boards and schools through the work of the Inclusion and Diversity Service and the Traveller Education Support Service to take positive action to address the additional educational needs of Traveller and Newcomer children to help close the performance gap and ensure these pupils can access the curriculum and get involved in every aspect of school life.

Education: Funding for Deprived Areas

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education, given the link between educational underachievement and deprivation, why funding from his Department which is aimed at deprived areas is not greater.

(AQW 19624/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: It is a key aim of the Executive to address the challenges of disadvantage and inequality that afflict society, including through closing the gap in educational underachievement between those who are least and those who are most disadvantaged. Consequently, the work of number of Departments is critical to creating the conditions to make better outcomes possible, particularly through integrating different services, aligning them with the work of schools, and helping schools reach into their communities.

My focus is to provide coherent, sustained and effective evidence based interventions that break the cycle of deprivation and educational underachievement.

High quality teaching and learning are at the heart of tackling educational underachievement. I have a coherent suite of policies in place to raise standards and tackle educational underachievement in schools. These policies include the school improvement policy, the literacy and numeracy strategy, the revised curriculum, entitlement framework, the framework for early years education and learning and the SEN and inclusion review.

The Common Funding Formula provides all schools with additional core funding to help meet the educational needs of children from socially deprived backgrounds and those underperforming for their age. In the current 2012/13 financial year, the Department distributed £56.9 million through the Common Funding Formula, under the Targeting Social Need factor.

I am not satisfied, however, that the current Scheme sufficiently targets social deprivation. I, therefore, commissioned Sir Robert Salisbury's recently published review of the Common Funding Scheme, which has recommended increased levels of formula funding for pupils from deprived backgrounds through the introduction of a pupil premium. I will assess the impact of this recommendation, along with the others in the report, very carefully to inform my own proposals for change, which I intend to bring forward later in the year.

In addition, my Department dedicates substantial resources to provide a range of assistance, programmes and services to ensure that disadvantaged children have access to and can fully participate in school life, obtain formal qualifications, enhance their employment opportunities and ultimately provide a route out of poverty. These include the provision of Free School Meals and clothing allowances and a range of programmes targeted at socially deprived areas, including Sure Start, extended schools, full service provision, Achieving Belfast and Achieving Derry Bright Futures and nurture units.

My Department also has a key role in working with a number of Departments to ensure a coherent approach to proactively tackling disadvantage and improving educational outcomes. This includes the Department for Employment and Learning, in relation to the Education Maintenance Allowance Scheme and the Office of the First and Deputy First Minister on a literacy and numeracy project, which will recruit 230 additional teachers.

East Belfast: School Leavers

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Education to outline the reasons for only 68.3 percent of school leavers in the East Belfast constituency attaining five GCSEs Grade A*-C.

(AQW 19703/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have in place a coherent set of policies designed to improve educational outcomes for all our young people and to address the root causes when pupils are not achieving to their full potential. These policies include the school improvement policy, "Every School a Good School" and the strategy for improving literacy and numeracy, "Count, read: succeed". I remain committed to tackling educational underachievement wherever it exists.

The most recent statistics available show that these policies are working, with continued improvements in pupil attainment at GCSE level for all school leavers in the north of Ireland as well as for pupils resident in the East Belfast constituency.

	School leavers resident in the East Belfast Constituency*1		School leavers in the north of Ireland
	2006/07	2010/11	2006/07	2010/11
Percentage of school leavers achieving at least 5 GCSEs A*-C (inc. equivalents)	59.8	68.3	64.7	73.2
Percentage of school leavers achieving at least 5 GCSEs A*-C (inc. equivalents) inc. GCSE English and maths.	52.1	58.2	54.2	59.5

The challenge now is to ensure the effective implementation of these policies by all schools so that the improvement in educational outcomes continues, with particular emphasis on how they contribute to raising standards for those pupils entitled to free school meals.

Indeed, the Programme for Government 2011-2015 has a stretching target to raise the percentage of school leavers, entitled to free school meals, achieving five or more GCSEs (or equivalent) including GCSE English and maths by 2015.

In addition to these policies I launched an advertising campaign in September last year which aims to inform and engage all parents, but in particular those from the most disadvantaged backgrounds, to become more engaged in their child's education. The campaign provides parents with consistent, authoritative information on schooling and the steps they can take to support their child in achieving good educational outcomes.

£12million will also be invested to improve literacy and numeracy levels in schools over the next two years. The will result in 230 unemployed teachers being appointed as part of a programme to ensure extra support for children in primary schools who are struggling with reading and maths. It will also direct support to pupils in post-primary schools who are not predicted to get at least a 'C' grade in English and/or maths

Both the advertising campaign and intervention to support the teaching and learning of literacy and numeracy in schools complement the policies I have in place to support raising standards and to achieve improved outcomes for all our young people.

Education Works Campaign: Posters

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 18910/11-15, to detail (i) the number of posters produced in (a) English; and (b) Irish; and (ii) the cost of the poster element of the campaign to date. (AQW 19716/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

(i) The number of posters produced for the Education Works campaign is as follows:

	No of posters produced	No of posters posted on sites
(a) English	5	588
(b) Irish	3	28

(ii) The total cost of the poster element of the campaign to date is £52,304.

Education Maintenance Allowance Scheme

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Education how much funding his Department will contribute to the new Education Maintenance Allowance scheme.

(AQW 19736/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education will contribute £1.85 million in 2013/14 and £3.6 million each year from 2014/15 to the new Education Maintenance Allowance (EMA) Scheme.

In addition, the Department will continue to provide additional resources of approximately £345,000 each year to help schools fund the costs associated with the administration of the scheme.

The Department's total funding for the EMA scheme, therefore, amounts to almost £2.2 million in 2013/14 and £3.95 million from 2014/15

Through this funding the Department will ensure that the EMA Scheme continues to support young people in greatest need to remain in education, to achieve formal qualifications, break the cycle of poverty and low educational attainment and, in turn, enhance their lifetime opportunities.

South Belfast: Post-primary Schools

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Education to detail the (i) most recent enrolment; and (ii) capacity figures for each of the South Belfast post-primary schools, broken down by sector.

(AQW 19758/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information requested is detailed in the table below:

Note: Pupils admitted to year 8 on appeal or by direction of the Exceptional Circumstances Body, and pupils with a statement of special educational needs are included in the actual enrolment figure but do not count towards the approved enrolment figure. Further, the approved enrolment figures do not take account of any temporary increases to that number granted to the school by the Department under the temporary variation policy.

DE: Regional Training Unit

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how much has been spent by the Regional Training unit in each of the last five years.

(AQW 19777/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

(i) The Regional Training Unit spend in the last five years is as follows:

•	2007/08	£3,047k
•	2008/09	£3,107k
•	2009/10	£2,992
•	2010/11	£3,346k
	2011/12	£2.407k

(ii) The Regional Training Unit spend in the last five years in respect of the Professional Qualification for Headship is as follows:

	2007/08	£625k
•	2008/09	£876k
•	2009/10	£714k
•	2010/11	£858k
•	2011/12	£790k

Schools: Compliance with Building Bulletin 93

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education whether all schools built since 2007 are fully compliant with Building Bulletin 93. (AQW 19778/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: All schools built since 2007 are required to be compliant with BB93 through the use of appropriate design, materials and construction techniques.

If a school identifies issues with sound transmission post-construction, these are fully investigated by a suitably qualified acoustician and where necessary, appropriate remedial works are carried out.

Education and Library Boards: Maintenance Expenditure

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 18560/11-15, for his assessment of the impact of this expenditure on the maintenance backlog in each Education and Library Board area. (AQW 19779/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The education estate is large, encompassing some 1200 schools, and has a significant number of old buildings that have an increased maintenance burden associated with ageing.

The level of maintenance backlog fluctuates continuously due to changes in the assets in the schools' estate. Increases occur due to asset deterioration, identified from a rolling programme of asset surveys. Reductions result from maintenance being carried out, from assets being replaced (through investment in major and minor works) or from assets being disposed of. The level of Category 1 (very poor asset condition) and Category 2 (poor condition) maintenance backlog has remained reasonably consistent in the last three years rising from just under £300m in 2010 to its current figure of just over £300m.

It should be noted that not all maintenance (and minor works) expenditure will directly impact on the level of maintenance backlog. Whilst the Education and Library Boards undertake a programme of planned maintenance across the schools' estate that influences the level of maintenance backlog (typically targeted at Category 1 maintenance issues), they are also required to undertake reactive maintenance to address unexpected emergency issues such as a heating system failure and repairs due to flood damage or vandalism. The cost associated with such inescapable works is not reflected in the maintenance backlog.

It is also important to note that while the system records the maintenance backlog for all schools in the estate, the Education and Library Boards are only responsible for carrying out maintenance in the controlled, maintained and Irish Medium sectors. Almost one fifth of the total backlog relates to assets in other sectors that are responsible for their own maintenance (grant maintained integrated, voluntary and other). Funding for these schools includes an allocation for maintenance

As Minister I have recognised the need to try and stem the inexorable rise in maintenance across the estate and tackle the historic underinvestment in schools. My ability to do so is obviously limited by the resources to do the work. I have increased significantly the level of funding ring-fenced for maintenance this year and next. This level of investment will help address the maintenance backlog and I would anticipate a reduction in the overall figure in the coming years as the rolling programme of asset surveys is updated.

Computer-based Assessments

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how many primary schools had completed their computer based assessments by the end of December 2012.

(AQW 19780/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: CCEA wrote to all schools on 20 December advising that the assessment period had been extended until 11 January 2013, allowing schools additional time to complete the assessments.

CCEA has confirmed that 96% of the NINA (Numeracy) assessment and 95% of the NILA (Literacy) assessments in student terms had been completed by 11 January 2013.

In terms of the number of assessments completed by schools by the end of December 2012, the following statistics were correct as of 20 December 2012.

A summary of the assessment status from the 856 schools which uploaded pupil data (approximately 88,000 pupils) is provided in the tables below. Just over 780 schools (see Table 2) completed 90% or more of NILA and NINA.

Table 1: Summary of assessment status

Description	NINA	NILA
No. of schools started assessments	843	844
No. of schools completed assessments	389	394
No. of pupils completed assessments	84,072*	84,013*

Table 2: Summary of assessments completed

	Number of schools (and percentage of total primary schools)
School assessments completed	NINA	NILA
90% +	787(92%)	781(91%)
75% +	811(95%)	808(94%)
50% +	826(96%)	821(96%)

All of the above statistics were provided by CCEA.

School Transport

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Education what negotiations he has had with Translink on cost reductions for the provision of school transport; and to outline the timescale for the completion of these discussions.

(AQW 19781/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Southern Education and Library Board (SELB) is responsible for negotiating the Translink contract on behalf of all Boards. I have been informed by the SELB that, as part of the normal contracting process with Translink, costs for school transport have not increased since 2010. Additionally rebates to the value of £500,000 in the financial year 2011/2012 and £300,000 in the current financial year have been achieved in negotiations with Translink by the SELB on behalf of the Department of Education.

Further contractual discussion on future cost reductions will be scheduled to take place with the onset of the forthcoming financial year.

Gender Specific Teaching

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Education for an update on plans to conduct further research into gender specific teaching methods.

(AQW 19783/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: At this stage I have no plans to commission such research. We already have a significant body of research and inspection evidence that identifies the effective characteristics of high quality teaching. That evidence does not support the thesis that there is a single, preferred teaching method for boys - or indeed for girls

Rather it is important that pupils, whatever their gender, can see the relevance of what they are taught and make connections across different areas of learning. The revised curriculum offers teachers the flexibility they need to do this and to encourage pupils to explore and identify their individual preferred learning styles. Additionally, high quality teaching will include appropriate differentiation to meet the needs and learning styles of individual pupils, again with the focus on the pupil not on his or her gender.

Our evidence shows that good teachers in effectively led schools already deliver high quality teaching and learning to meet the needs of their pupils regardless of gender. Our challenge is to ensure that good practice is embedded effectively in all our schools for the benefit of all our pupils.

Education: Support for Male Pupils

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Education whether each school will be required to offer male pupils support during their key transitional stages.

(AQW 19784/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Teachers use their professional judgment to assess whether a pupil requires support at all stages of their education. This assessment may include classroom observation, analysis of formative assessment or use of other data such as results from public examinations and the findings of school inspection reports. It is teachers, with their knowledge of a child and supported by parents and school leaders, who are best placed to identify the need for and most effective means of support and intervention for each pupil regardless of gender.

My Department and its delivery partners also assess potential areas of underachievement and where the need for additional action has been identified steps are being taken to address it such as the introduction of Extended and Full Service schools and SureStart programmes.

My Department is currently studying the recommendations contained in the recently published report "Taking Boys Seriously – A Longitudinal Study of Adolescent Male School-Life Experience in Northern Ireland" by the University of Ulster and will consider whether any additional action may be required.

Holy Family Primary School, Magherafelt

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Education, given that Holy Family Primary School, Magherafelt is a Core School and meets the Sustainable Schools Criteria, why it is not a priority for new build.

(AQW 19792/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am aware of the desire for a new build for Holy Family Primary School, Magherafelt, and I met with the school Principal, the Chair of the Board of Governors, and local representatives on 12 February to discuss firsthand.

You will appreciate that I have difficult choices to make with many schools desperately in need of new builds competing for limited capital funding.

I will continue to examine the case for capital investment across the estate and the proposals for Holy Family PS will be considered alongside other priorities as part of any future capital announcement.

Education Bill

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education how many schools, Boards of Governors and parents have written to his Department expressing concern about the Education Bill.

(AQW 19795/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have received 44 letters expressing concern about the Education Bill.

The details are outlined below

- 1 letter received on behalf of the Association of Principals Teaching in Integrated Schools.
- 39 letters received on behalf of the Board of Governors of Integrated Schools.
- 4 letters from MLA's on behalf of constituents.

I have not received any letters from parents.

Causeway School Museum

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of Education whether there are any plans to withdraw funding from the Causeway School Museum in the North Eastern Education and Library Board; and to explain the reason for any such plan. (AQW 19797/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The North Eastern Education and Library Board have taken the decision to close the non-statutory services it currently provides at the Causeway School Museum due to financial constraints.

Chinese Language

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education what action his Department is taking to promote the study of Chinese in schools. (AQW 19801/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Modern languages are a statutory requirement at KS3 and a qualification choice at KS4 and Sixth form. Schools are encouraged to offer a wider range of modern languages, and the revised curriculum offers schools more flexibility in the choices of subjects they can offer to meet the needs of their pupils. The revised curriculum has broadened the range of modern languages that schools can now offer so that, instead of being limited to choosing from 5 languages as previously, schools are now able to choose any of the languages of the 27 EU member states to meet the minimum requirement, as well as any other additional languages they wish, including Chinese/Mandarin. The revised curriculum also includes scope for schools wishing to offer language learning at primary level before it becomes a statutory requirement at Key Stage 3.

I recognise the importance of language learning both socially and economically. To compete as a global economy we need a workforce that can communicate effectively with people from all backgrounds, including those from the international business community. With this in mind, I have recently met with Mr Shen Yang, Minister Counselor (Educational), Chinese Embassy and with representatives from the Confucius Institute at the University of Ulster to discuss its proposed Confucius Classroom scheme and I have asked for further information to enable me to consider if my department can assist with this.

The Member may also wish to note that the British Council, which is part funded by my Department, administers a number of initiatives aimed at increasing awareness of Chinese language and culture as well as increasing internationalism and links between schools here and in China e.g. study visits, summer immersion courses, student placements etc., all of which are open to schools in the north. It has also recently produced an education pack - Snakes and Dragons - for primary schools to explore Chinese culture and language with pupils in the run up to the Chinese New Year and beyond. The pack was sent to all primary schools in the north in January 2013.

Education: Procurement of Goods and Services

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 18557/11-15, when he will publish the report on the work of the project team.

(AQW 19802/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have written to advise all key stakeholders of the outcome of the project to determine the future delivery of procurement services in the education sector.

The project included significant engagement with other government departments and agencies. The project team met a number of procurement staff from the Education and Library Boards both formally and informally during the lifespan of the project.

Procurement staff within ESA will continue to be responsible for a range of functions. It is not envisaged that there will be a reduction in professional procurement staff within the education sector. However, there may be the opportunity for a small number of procurement staff to apply for secondment to CPD, as education specialists. The numbers required will become clearer as the project to implement the transfer of education procurement services to CPD goes forward.

Education: Professional Qualification for Headship Programme

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how much the Regional Training Unit has spent on the Professional Qualification for Headship in each of the last five years.

(AQW 19803/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

(i) The Regional Training Unit spend in the last five years is as follows:

•	2007/08	£3,047k
•	2008/09	£3,107k
•	2009/10	£2,992
•	2010/11	£3,346k
•	2011/12	£2,407k

(ii) The Regional Training Unit spend in the last five years in respect of the Professional Qualification for Headship is as follows:

•	2007/08	£625k
•	2008/09	£876k
•	2009/10	£714k
•	2010/11	£858k
•	2011/12	£790k

Education: Procurement of Goods and Services

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 19134/11-15, how many staff from his Department will transfer to Central Procurement Directorate.

(AQW 19804/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have written to advise all key stakeholders of the outcome of the project to determine the future delivery of procurement services in the education sector.

The project included significant engagement with other government departments and agencies. The project team met a number of procurement staff from the Education and Library Boards both formally and informally during the lifespan of the project.

Procurement staff within ESA will continue to be responsible for a range of functions. It is not envisaged that there will be a reduction in professional procurement staff within the education sector. However, there may be the opportunity for a small number of procurement staff to apply for secondment to CPD, as education specialists. The numbers required will become clearer as the project to implement the transfer of education procurement services to CPD goes forward.

Education: Procurement of Goods and Services

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how many meetings took place with staff in the procurement sections of the Education and Library Boards to discuss possible options for the future procurement of goods and services within the education sector.

(AQW 19805/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have written to advise all key stakeholders of the outcome of the project to determine the future delivery of procurement services in the education sector.

The project included significant engagement with other government departments and agencies. The project team met a number of procurement staff from the Education and Library Boards both formally and informally during the lifespan of the project

Procurement staff within ESA will continue to be responsible for a range of functions. It is not envisaged that there will be a reduction in professional procurement staff within the education sector. However, there may be the opportunity for a small number of procurement staff to apply for secondment to CPD, as education specialists. The numbers required will become clearer as the project to implement the transfer of education procurement services to CPD goes forward.

School Transport

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Education what discussions he has had with other Ministers on the regulation of school transport provided by private operators.

(AQW 19806/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have had no direct contact with other Ministers in relation to the regulation of school transport provided by private operators. However, officials from the Department of Education have been working recently with their counterparts in the Department of the Environment in relation to the cabotage issue which affected private transport operators contracted to provide school services in the Western Education and Library Board area.

Sure Start

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Education whether the Glenariffe, Cushendall and Cushendun wards in Antrim, and the Coast Road ward, Carnlough will be included in the expansion of Sure Start provision to an additional 21 wards. (AQW 19808/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I plan to extend Sure Start services to encompass the top 25% areas of disadvantage at ward level subject to the availability of resources. Cushendall and Cushendun are not wards; they are within the wards of Glenaan and Glendun. The wards of Glenariff, Glendun, Glenaan and Carnlough do not fall within the top 25% most disadvantaged wards as measured by the Multiple Deprivation Measure (MDM) and are not therefore included in the expansion of the Sure Start programme.

Primary Schools: Capital Investment in Newbuilds

Teachers: Principals and Vice-principals Redundancy Scheme

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Education whether he or his officials have had discussions with Trade Unions and teachers representatives regarding redundancy or enhancement packages for vice-principals and principals. (AQW 19842/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The nature of a principal post is such that it is possible to make a principal redundant only in cases of school closure or amalgamation. Vice-principals can be made redundant if the particular post is being suppressed or through a transferred redundancy if the employing authority does not require the vice-principal post to be publicly advertised.

Officials have been engaged in discussions with teacher unions and employers about the reintroduction of a scheme which would allow the early release of a limited number of teachers in the interests of the efficient discharge of the employer's function. Such a scheme would be intended to improve the quality of educational provision in schools and would be subject to approval of a business case and the availability of resources. As with redundancy, it would not be an option to be offered simply to accommodate a teacher who wishes to retire prematurely.

Schools: Community Use of School Premises

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education what guidance has been issued by his Department or Education and Library Boards to schools on community use of school facilities.

(AQW 19845/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department's Guide for School Governors "Every School a Good School -The Governors' Role" provides guidance to schools with regard to making their premises available for wider community use. A Working Group report, 'How Best to Increase the Community Use of the School Site', published in 2011, also provides practical guidelines for schools to help them enhance the community use of school premises.

As part on ongoing efforts to promote greater community access to school facilities, a further Working Group led by the Education and Library Boards and the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools was established to develop detailed operational guidance to assist school leaders in dealing with the many practical issues which must be considered when making school premises available for wider community use.

The draft guidance which the Working Group produced is currently being considered by my Department. Once finalised, the guidance will be made available to all schools.

Whilst there are no financial incentives available, the guidance will outline the potential benefits to schools of greater community involvement and highlight how more effective partnering of schools with the communities they serve can lead to better access to essential services, improved local availability of sports, arts and other facilities and improved outcomes for families and children.

The guidance will also include a range of case studies which will demonstrate existing good practice and the benefits which have been achieved and will hopefully inspire those schools not already opening their doors for wider public use to consider doing so.

Careers Education

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of a full-time postgraduate course being the only professional qualification for teachers in Careers Education Information Advice and Guidance; and what consideration he is giving to funding suitable part-time courses in this competency.

(AQW 19860/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The joint DE DEL "Preparing for Success" careers strategy endorses the partnership model of careers guidance as the preferred model of provision for young people. The strategy makes clear that careers teachers and careers service advisors have distinct but complementary roles. Schools are responsible for providing effective careers education for which a specific careers guidance qualification is not required but should provide access to the qualified professional expertise and impartial advice and guidance available through the careers service.

My officials are continuing to explore methods to help build the capacity of careers teachers to lead, manage and deliver an effective careers programme is for pupils through training modules.

Careers Education

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education how his Department ensures that Careers Education Information Advice and Guidance (i) complements the curriculum and is consistent within, and between, schools; (ii) informs young people of the jobs available in a modern economy; and (iii) equips young people to access and analyse Labour Market Information. (AQW 19861/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am fully committed to the continuous improvement of the quality of careers education across all schools and my Department is taking this forward through the full and continuing implementation of the joint DE DEL careers strategy.

Schools have a number of tools at their disposal to support them in the development of careers education and implementation of the careers strategy. The Education and Training Inspectorate has developed tailored, quality standards indicators for self-evaluation, and my Department has published a Careers, Education, Information, Advice and Guidance (CEIAG) map and guide. The CEIAG map and guide aims to improve the quality of career learning opportunities, define the key features of a CEIAG programme, and encourage greater consistency across schools. The CEIAG map recognises that within every single area of learning of the curriculum there are opportunities to raise pupil's aspirations and help them make connections between learning, work, and career choices.

In addition, all schools are members of Area Learning Communities (ALCs). ALCs are required to report to the department annually by way of an implementation plan on 4 key strategic entitlement framework priorities, one of which is to develop and deliver a careers programme which assists young people in making informed choices around courses and pathways open to them. The core principle of the entitlement framework is to guarantee equality of access for all young people to a broad, balanced and more economically relevant curriculum with clear progression pathways. The flexibility offered by the entitlement framework means that schools are able to take account of labour market information and priority growth areas in developing their curricular offer.

Schools have partnership agreements with the Department for Employment and Learning's Careers Service which provides pupils with impartial advice and guidance and access to a wide range of up-to-date careers information such as labour market information factsheets and case studies. Employers also play an important role in providing careers information and advice and my officials have been engaging with business representative bodies to explore how the business community can play a greater role in careers education.

Careers Education

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education whether schools have adequate resources to provide high quality Careers Education Information Advice and Guidance.

(AQW 19862/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Under the Local Management of Schools (LMS) scheme, the Board of Governors of every grant maintained school receives a delegated budget to meet the costs of providing access to the curriculum within that school. How the school delivers the curriculum to meet the statutory requirements is a matter for the Board of Governors and senior management team of that school. Impartial advice and guidance is provided free to schools in partnership with Careers Service through the full and continuing implementation of the joint careers strategy and action plan.

East Londonderry: Schools Capital Build Programmes

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education which schools in the East Londonderry constituency have received approval for major capital build programmes since 2007.

(AQW 19875/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My statement to the assembly on 25 June 2012 announced that the process for building three special schools would be advanced; one of these schools was Rossmar Special School which is in the East Derry constituency.

My capital announcement of 22 January 2013 included a new build solution to service the needs of 3 primary schools (Craigback, Mullabuoy and Listress) on the outskirts of Derry. While it is accepted that Craigback and Mullabuoy are in the Foyle constituency, Listress Primary School is in East Derry constituency.

School Meals

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education what his Department is doing to provide healthier and better choices of school meals. (AQW 19888/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education (DE) recognises that a healthy, balanced diet is vital for children's growth and development, and for their long term health and well being and has proactively worked to improve the quality of food in schools here

Compulsory nutritional standards for school lunches have been in place in all of our schools since September 2007. Standards for other food and drinks provided in schools (breakfast clubs, tuck shops, vending machines) have also been drawn up to which schools are expected to adhere. I have allocated funding of over £3 million in 2012/13 to support the implementation of the standards to ensure that pupils are presented with healthy options and encouraged to eat healthily. DE also provides joint funding for a regional Food in Schools Coordinator to provide specialist support in all aspects of healthy eating.

DE is currently working with the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to finalise a joint Food in Schools policy which advocates a whole school approach to all food and drinks provided in schools to ensure that all children should develop the knowledge and skills necessary to make healthy food choices now and in later life. I intend, along with the Minister for Health, Social Services and Public Safety, to seek Executive agreement on the policy as soon as possible. Subject to that agreement, it is intended to publish the policy later in this school year.

Donaghadee Primary School

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many children currently attend Donaghadee Primary School. (AQW 19889/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Figures provided by the school for the 2012/13 census exercise indicate a total enrolment of 431 pupils, including 52 pupils in a nursery unit attached to the school.

Donaghadee Primary School

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education whether there are any plans to expand Donaghadee Primary School. (AQW 19890/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Any significant change to a school, such as an increase in enrolment, requires an approved statutory Development Proposal.

To date, the South Eastern Education and Library Board has not brought forward such a proposal for Donaghadee Primary School.

Integrated Education

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 19042/11-15, how projected need within the integrated sector will be assessed through the area planning process in areas that currently do not have a local option for integrated primary or post-primary education.

(AQW 19891/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards, which are the statutory planning authorities within their areas, have adopted a Needs Model as the means of assessing the need for places in each of their District Council areas. The model uses the most up to date, complete and reliable data available at any point in time. It reflects the current pattern of enrolments between, broadly, the controlled, maintained and integrated sectors, and as such is the starting point for planning.

The process of engagement with the various sectors will provide the opportunity for them to make a case for the expansion or contraction of their particular sector. Such cases should be based on objective evidence. This will enable the Boards (working with the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools), to take account of all relevant circumstances, including demand for and supply of places in all sectors. The bodies involved in integrated education, including NICIE and the schools themselves, should engage with the Boards to make a case for increased provision where they think the data warrant it. No sector is limited to the growth shown in the model. It is vital, however, that robust data are presented to support a case for opening a new school or expanding an existing one, as, if the integrated sector is to grow beyond the projected figures in the model, there must be a consequent reduction in numbers elsewhere to live within the total planning figure.

I should add that, because the Needs Model provides data at District Council level only, it is not a basis for making decisions about the siting, opening or closing of individual schools. Such decisions must be made taking account of local circumstances in the context of the overall numbers in the model.

I must stress that the area planning process is iterative and plans will be kept under review and will change over time to reflect changing circumstances and developing needs.

Schools: Community Use of School Premises

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education what measures his Department is taking to incentivise the opening of schools for community use.

(AQW 19902/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department's Guide for School Governors "Every School a Good School -The Governors' Role" provides guidance to schools with regard to making their premises available for wider community use. A Working Group report, 'How Best to Increase the Community Use of the School Site', published in 2011, also provides practical guidelines for schools to help them enhance the community use of school premises.

As part on ongoing efforts to promote greater community access to school facilities, a further Working Group led by the Education and Library Boards and the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools was established to develop detailed operational guidance to assist school leaders in dealing with the many practical issues which must be considered when making school premises available for wider community use.

The draft guidance which the Working Group produced is currently being considered by my Department. Once finalised, the guidance will be made available to all schools.

Whilst there are no financial incentives available, the guidance will outline the potential benefits to schools of greater community involvement and highlight how more effective partnering of schools with the communities they serve can lead to better access to essential services, improved local availability of sports, arts and other facilities and improved outcomes for families and children

The guidance will also include a range of case studies which will demonstrate existing good practice and the benefits which have been achieved and will hopefully inspire those schools not already opening their doors for wider public use to consider doing so.

School Canteens

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of (i) primary; and (ii) post-primary schools which have a (a) school canteen operated by a private firm; and (b) a canteen operated by the school or the Education and Library Board. (AQW 19909/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The details requested are as follows:-

	Private Firm	School/ELB
Primary	6	872
Post-Primary	10	215

Teachers

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education how many currently employed teachers have served a prison sentence. (AQW 19926/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Neither the Department of Education nor the Employing Authorities hold this information.

The AccessNI Code of Practice and Explanatory Guide stipulates that, once a recruitment decision has been made, an employer must not retain Disclosure Information or any associated correspondence for longer than is necessary. In general this should be for a maximum of six months.

Teachers

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education what vetting arrangements are in place across the various sectors in relation to the appointment of teachers.

(AQW 19928/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education requires all Employing Authorities and schools to obtain an Enhanced Disclosure Certificate (criminal records check) from AccessNI before appointing a teacher. Details of convictions and other information disclosed in a Certificate must be considered by the employer before a teaching appointment is confirmed.

Schools: Class Sizes

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Education whether he plans to bring forward legislation to cap class sizes for primary 5 to primary 7 classes.

(AQW 19948/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There has been considerable research carried out on the effect of class sizes on the teaching and learning of pupils. While evidence suggests that smaller class sizes in early years can have a positive impact on outcomes, it has also consistently highlighted that the quality of teaching and allowing teachers the flexibility to adapt their teaching in different situations, are the most important factors in determining educational outcomes. These key factors are reflected in core Departmental policies, namely DE's literacy and numeracy strategy and the revised curriculum. In view of the evidence surrounding the early years, it is DE's policy to keep classes for our youngest pupils, (Years 1-4), to a maximum of 30 pupils.

There is no evidence to demonstrate that smaller class sizes positively affect outcomes for pupils in Years 5-7 and in line with DE's policy to give schools as much autonomy as possible, it is a school's Board of Governors that has responsibility for determining their school's staffing complement and for managing the school's education budget which would include class sizes, taking account of parameters set for Years 1-4.

Ultimately, what is essential for good quality provision is high quality teaching, a curriculum that is matched to the needs, interests and abilities of the pupils and a focus on improvement and raising standards.

The Revised Curriculum which has been in place since 2009/10 allows our teachers to tailor the curriculum to suit the needs of their pupils and to adapt their teaching. In addition, the effective use of data to track pupil progress allows teachers to identify those pupils at risk of not achieving their full potential and enabling them to adapt the strategies they use in their delivery of the curriculum, customising it to best effect.

Furthermore, the recent findings of the Progress in International Reading Literacy (PIRLS) and Trends in Mathematics and Science (TIMMS) studies of Year 6 pupils shows that our Key Stage 2 outcomes show high attainment at primary level education.

Based on the above I have no plans to review or consider a cap on class sizes for pupils in Years 5-7.

Homework Clubs in South Belfast

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Education, given the levels of educational underachievement in working class areas, to detail the financial support allocated by his Department to homework clubs in South Belfast, over the last three years. (AQW 19950/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education does not make specific provision for homework clubs or routinely collect information on such clubs.

However, the Extended Schools programme provides additional funding to schools serving the most deprived areas, and which meet set criteria, to provide for a wide range of services and activities outside of the traditional school day which aim to remove barriers to learning and improve levels of educational achievement for disadvantaged children and young people. Where assessed as needed by school principals, this provision may include after school learning support activities such as homework clubs.

The Belfast and South Eastern Education and Library Boards have confirmed that a total of 22 schools have qualified for Extended Schools funding in the South Belfast constituency in 1 or more of the last 3 financial years. Of those, 15 schools currently provide after school learning support activities/homework clubs with the aid of Extended Schools resources. Details are provided in the tables below.

Learning Support Units: South-Eastern Education and Library Board Area

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education at which locations learning support units are operating in controlled post-primary schools in the South Eastern Education & Library Board area. (AQW 19964/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Figures provided by schools for the 2012/13 census exercise indicate that Dundonald High School was the only controlled post-primary school in the South Eastern Education and Library Board area in which learning support centres were operating. Three learning support centres were recorded as being in operation at the school.

Horse Meat in Food Products: DE Advice to Schools

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education what advice his Department has given to schools on the ongoing horse meat issue.

(AQW 19993/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: It is important to note that the Food Standards Agency (FSA) has advised that there is no reason or evidence to suspect that there is a food safety risk from products which contain horse meat or horse meat DNA. However, it is not acceptable that mislabelled frozen meat products have been found in the food supply chain.

In line with advice provided by the FSA, I have written to the Chief Executives of the ELBs to emphasise that, whilst there is no evidence that products which contain horse meat or horse DNA pose a food safety risk, in circumstances where a Board is made aware that mislabelled frozen meat products are being supplied to schools it is imperative that immediate action is taken by the ELB to ensure these products are withdrawn and removed from school menus.

The ELBs remain in close contact with their suppliers to ensure that they are updated as soon as a supplier is made aware that a product may be mislabelled and that the necessary action is taken. I am aware that the ELBs wrote to schools and school meals kitchens last week, following the decision by a supplier to withdraw certain burger items pending receipt of test results, to advise that these products must not be used and will be removed by the supplier.

The Department has also written to schools in the voluntary grammar and grant maintained integrated sectors to advise that where a school is made aware that mislabelled frozen meat products are being supplied to schools immediate action should be taken by the school to ensure these products are withdrawn and removed from school menus.

I have agreed that the Food Standards Agency will circulate to the Department and the Boards any communications in relation to the horse meat incident/investigation.

I consider that through this approach we can ensure collectively that early action is taken to seek to ensure that mislabelled products are not supplied to schools.

Schools: Reception Classes

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 19185/11-15, to list the schools that have reception classes, broken down by (i) Education and Library Board area; and (ii) management type. (AQW 19995/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The table below details reception classes solely made up of reception pupils. It should be noted that reception age pupils may also be enrolled, not in distinct reception classes, but in groups alongside pupils of compulsory school age.

In addition to the reception classes listed there are 84 primary schools with 299 reception pupils who are integrated with Year 1-7 pupils.

Conductive Education

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 18515/11-15, what research his Department has carried out into Conductive Education as a method of teaching.

(AQW 20011/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education has not, to date, carried out any research into Conductive Education as a method of teaching.

Schools: Capital Builds in East Londonderry

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education which (i) primary; and (ii) post-primary schools in the East Londonderry constituency have been (a) assessed as requiring Capital Build replacement; and (b) are not currently listed in the Capital Investment announcement.

(AQW 20018/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Over the years the department has received many proposals for new school builds which have not progressed. I have made clear that these historic applications have no standing. However they can come forward again for consideration, if identified as a priority, when capital investment decisions are being made.

The key criteria in determining eligibility for capital investment in my recent announcement has been alignment with emerging area plans and confirmation from Managing Authorities of their priorities for new builds within their areas.

The selection of new major works has been on the basis of effecting rationalisation; supporting unmet need; addressing serious accommodation inadequacies and schools operating on split sites, substandard conditions or overcrowding; or addressing undue reliance on temporary accommodation.

In discussions with the WELB in advance of my January 2013 capital investment statement Ballykelly Primary School within the East Derry constituency was identified as a priority for a new build, however due to budget constraints could not be included in my announcement.

The reality is that the budget settlement for this Spending Review period means that the need for investment far exceeds the funds available.

DE: Underspend

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail his Department's projected underspend for this financial year. (AQW 20024/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In line with its performance in previous years the Department is planning to minimise the level of underspend against both the resource and capital budgets.

Teachers: Pensions

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Education, given that three out of four teaching unions that responded to the consultation on the Northern Ireland Teachers' Pension Scheme are unhappy with the scheme proposals, what further consultations will now take place.

(AQO 3430/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: None of the unions which responded to the consultation are in favour of the principle of increased pension contributions.

I do not agree with the British Government's approach to pension policy.

However, my Department's consultation was not about the principle of delivering the targeted level of savings to the cost of the public sector pension schemes in the north of Ireland, to which the Executive is already committed.

Rather, it was about how the required increases should be structured to provide protection for lower paid teachers and limit the risk of increases in the rate of opt-outs from the Teachers' Pension Scheme.

Teachers, like other public servants, are being asked to pay more for their pensions and, regrettably, this will mean a reduction in their take-home pay. There is also a risk that there may be an increase in the number of teachers choosing to opt out of the Scheme.

However, I believe that the contribution increase proposals represent a reasonable and proportionate means of achieving the Executive's objectives of delivering the savings in a way which protects lower paid teachers and limits the risk of increases in the rate of opt-outs from the Scheme.

Extensive consultation has taken place with the teacher unions through the Teachers' Superannuation Consultative Committee, which is the established forum for consultation on matters relating to the Scheme, both prior to and during the formal consultation period which is now closed.

My Department will continue to consult with the teacher unions on pensions matters, including future contributions increases and the wider pension reform agenda.

Education Bill: Teacher and Staff Employment

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Education whether there is a contradiction between Clause 10(c) of the Heads of Agreement and Clause 3(1) of the Education Bill, in relation to the employment of teachers and staff. (AQO 3434/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There is no contradiction. The Education Bill gives effect to both of the key requirements on employment matters within the Heads of Agreement. Firstly, it will establish the Education and Skills Authority (ESA) as the employer of all staff in all grant-aided schools. Secondly, it provides for the delegation of employment functions to schools. This will ensure that boards of governors can take all of the employment decisions within their schools if they wish.

Education Bill: Integrated Education Development

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education how the Education Bill will help deliver his Department's statutory duty to encourage and facilitate the development of integrated education.[R] (AQO 3435/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education Bill will establish the Education and Skills Authority (ESA). ESA will be the operational delivery organisation for all my Department's policies, including the encouragement and facilitation of integrated education.

I will require ESA to ensure that it has sufficient knowledge and expertise on matters affecting integrated education, and to work closely with the Council for Integrated Education - NICIE - in this regard.

Educational Underachievement

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Education to outline the main factors used when assessing underachievement in working class communities.

(AQO 3436/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My literacy and numeracy strategy, Count, read: succeed, describes underachievement as a situation where performance is below what is expected. The strategy outlines that underachievement can apply at different levels, from the performance of an individual pupil through to performance at a system level.

At individual pupil level, teachers use their professional judgment to assess whether a pupil is underachieving. This assessment may include classroom observation, analysis of formative assessment or use of other data as appropriate. Teachers, with their knowledge of a child and supported by parents and school leaders, are best placed to identify the need for and most effective means of intervention.

At school and system level, and using a number of evidence sources, my Department and its delivery partners assess potential areas of underachievement. These sources include Key Stage assessments and GCSE data, the findings of school inspection reports and international surveys.

Research evidence tells us that social disadvantage has an impact on achievement and our own data shows major inequalities within our education system.

We still have too many young people who are underachieving, particularly amongst those entitled to free school meals.

Where the need for additional action has been identified steps are being taken to address it: examples include, Achieving Belfast and Bright Futures Derry, Extended and Full Service schools, SureStart and my Education Works campaign.

However, more needs to be done, especially in areas of social deprivation. For example, Delivering Social Change projects will target additional resources towards those at greatest risk of underachievement.

School Transport: Irish-medium Sector

Mr Molloy asked the Minister of Education what progress his Department has made in addressing Lord Justice Treacy's verdict in relation to school transport for the Irish Medium sector. (AQO 3437/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education has been giving careful and detailed consideration to a complex judgment. Following this consideration, a number of options have been developed and then assessed in line with departmental policies and legal advice. I am currently considering the options.

The judgment is only in respect of Coláiste Feirste and not the Irish medium sector.

Education and Skills Authority

Mr Maskey asked the Minister of Education how he will ensure that the views and opinions of young people will be represented on the board of the Education and Skills Authority. (AQO 3438/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The views of young people should be heard in relation to all public services, including education.

In relation to the membership of the Education and Skills Authority (ESA), the provisions reflect the Heads of Agreement published by the First Minister and deputy First Minister, and were agreed by the Executive.

There is no age qualification for membership of ESA. I would encourage young people to consider applying for appointment to ESA as community members. I would also encourage those bodies that will be given nomination rights to consider how they will use those rights to ensure that the views of young people will be represented.

Schools: New School at Springhill, Belfast

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Education when he plans to announce the funding for a new school at Springhill, Belfast. (AQO 3439/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Belfast Education and Library Board, in common with other Education and Library Boards, has been developing area plans for schools in their area. I expect these plans to include options for primary schools in the Greater Shankhill area. Once these plans have been published and consulted upon, I will take investment decisions subject to the availability of capital.

Education: OECD Visit

Mr McCartney asked the Minister of Education for an update on the recent visit by the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development.

(AQO 3440/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: We are participating for the first time in a major international review by the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development.

The review will examine how Evaluation and Assessment Frameworks can deliver improvements for pupils and will involve an in-depth analysis of our education system by independent experts from other OECD countries.

The OECD Directorate of Education is the eminent worldwide source of research and information on effectiveness in education.

We need to learn from other countries. We already benchmark our pupils, we must also benchmark our systems. Our involvement will both help others learn from our experience and critically help us to learn from others.

Following a very successful preliminary visit to meet with key stakeholders, my Department will - later this month - host the main eight day visit by the OECD review team.

I look forward to welcoming the review team and I am delighted that they will have an opportunity to meet with a wide range of stakeholders, including teachers, pupils, principals and governors and the wider education research community.

Teachers: Pensions

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Education to outline the potential impact that the proposed increases to employee pension contribution rates will have for local teachers.

(AQO 3441/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: None of the unions which responded to the consultation are in favour of the principle of increased pension contributions

I do not agree with the British Government's approach to pension policy.

However, my Department's consultation was not about the principle of delivering the targeted level of savings to the cost of the public sector pension schemes in the north of Ireland, to which the Executive is already committed.

Rather, it was about how the required increases should be structured to provide protection for lower paid teachers and limit the risk of increases in the rate of opt-outs from the Teachers' Pension Scheme.

Teachers, like other public servants, are being asked to pay more for their pensions and, regrettably, this will mean a reduction in their take-home pay. There is also a risk that there may be an increase in the number of teachers choosing to opt out of the Scheme.

However, I believe that the contribution increase proposals represent a reasonable and proportionate means of achieving the Executive's objectives of delivering the savings in a way which protects lower paid teachers and limits the risk of increases in the rate of opt-outs from the Scheme.

Extensive consultation has taken place with the teacher unions through the Teachers' Superannuation Consultative Committee, which is the established forum for consultation on matters relating to the Scheme, both prior to and during the formal consultation period which is now closed.

My Department will continue to consult with the teacher unions on pensions matters, including future contributions increases and the wider pension reform agenda.

Department for Employment and Learning

Sex Offenders

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 18879/11-15, to clarify the position in relation to sex offenders who either fail to disclose their convictions or are subject to a Notification Order banning them from leaving the jurisdiction without police or court consent, specifically where employment agencies are recruiting staff to work abroad.

(AQW 19333/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): Further to my answer to AQW 18879/11-15, I would reiterate that there is no specific requirement in the Conduct Regulations, which govern the recruitment sector, to compel a workseeker to disclose a criminal conviction. This applies regardless of the nature of any conviction.

However, a requirement for an employment agency to carry out a criminal record check or Enhanced Access NI check may arise, if the hirer makes it a specification of the post they are seeking to fill, or if such a disclosure is required by law in connection with a particular post.

There are some circumstances in which criminal records checks or Enhanced Access NI checks must be carried out prior to placing workers. Article 13 of the Safeguarding Vulnerable Groups Order (NI) 2007, for which the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety is responsible, requires employment businesses and agencies to ensure that workers who are to engage in "regulated activity" (i.e. with vulnerable adults and children) are not on a barred list. This is done by obtaining an Enhanced Access NI Disclosure certificate. These are required in the case of workers who take up positions in which they will be in contact with vulnerable adults or children. However, any criminal disclosure is required by the nature of the post, and not by the nature of any previous conviction of a workseeker. This legislation only applies to Northern Ireland and to other disclosure schemes operating in the UK.

If a role to be filled does not involve working with vulnerable adults or children, and if the hirer does not make it a stipulation that a clear criminal record is a condition for the role, then the recruitment agency/business has neither a reason nor a legal obligation to seek to obtain a criminal record history for the worker. This remains the case, regardless of the nature of any conviction

The Department is carrying out a review of the Conduct Regulations as part of its review of employment law. We will consider amending any accompanying guidance to advise employment agencies of best practice when carrying out criminal records checks.

Adults with no Educational Achievements

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what strategies he will be pursuing to achieve departmental targets of reducing the number of adults with no educational achievements. (AQW 19398/11-15)

Dr Farry: Most of the programmes and services that are funded or delivered by my Department are designed to equip individuals with skills and qualifications that will enable them to find work or to progress within employment and, by so doing, to reduce the number of adults with no educational achievements.

The Skills Strategy for Northern Ireland "Success Through Skills – Transforming Futures", which was published in May 2011, is my Department's overarching strategy to provide people with economically relevant skills and qualifications. This strategy has identified three main groups of people, namely those entering the labour market, those currently in work, and those who are excluded from the labour market.

Under the strategic direction provided by Success Through Skills, the Department's main programmes include education provided through our universities and further education colleges, Apprenticeship and training programmes, employment programmes such as Steps to Work and the Local Employment Intermediary Service (LEMIS), the Assured Skills programme helping employers to upskill their workforce, the Essential Skills strategy, and recently introduced programmes to deal specifically with youth unemployment such as the Youth Employment Scheme and the NEETs strategy.

My Department has a Programme for Government commitment to deliver 210,000 qualifications at Level 2 and above between 2011/12 and 2015, and we are on schedule to meet this target.

Teacher Education

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, given his commitment to integrated education, whether he will consolidate teacher training in an enhanced and expanded Stranmillis Teacher Training College.

(AQW 19575/11-15)

Dr Farry: I am fully committed to the availability of high quality Initial Teacher Education that meets the needs of Northern Ireland and which represents good use of public money. To this end, I have commissioned a study of the teacher education infrastructure and the first stage of this work is now almost complete. The first stage examined the financial stability and sustainability of the two university colleges. Stage two of the study will set out options for a more shared and integrated system for the delivery and funding of teacher education.

Stranmillis University College

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning who has been appointed to the interview panel for the appointment of the Chair of the Board of Governors of Stranmillis University College.

(AQW 19655/11-15)

Dr Farry: The following people have been appointed to the interview panel for the appointment of the Chair of the Governing Body of Stranmillis University College: Two senior officials from my Department, Mr Andrew Hamilton, Deputy Secretary and Mrs Nuala Kerr, Director of Higher Education. They will be accompanied by Mrs Stephanie Lowry, an independent panel member appointed by the Commissioner for Public Appointments for Northern Ireland.

This information is included in the Candidate Information Pack available to all interested applicants.

Southern Regional College

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether he is in communication with the management at the Southern Regional College regarding their proposed plans to change how teachers are monitored in the classroom for his assessment of the potential damage to the educational experience of students enrolled at the College campuses as a result of any industrial action.

(AQW 19838/11-15)

Dr Farry: All issues relating to the employment of staff in further education colleges are a matter for the colleges' governing bodies, in their capacity as the employing authorities.

Whilst my Department has no role to intervene in these matters, I would urge staff and management sides to work together to reach agreement on this issue. I am hopeful that, through the use of established consultation mechanisms, the need for unnecessary industrial action will be mitigated.

Further and Higher Education: Cross-border Mobility

Ms Ruane asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on his work with the Minister of Education and Skills, Ruairí Quinn, to address the barriers to cross-border mobility at undergraduate level. (AQO 3416/11-15)

Dr Farry: Cross-border and indeed international mobility in higher education bring significant employability benefits for individual students, contribute to a vibrant economy and enrich the experience within individual institutions. Ultimately however, the decision to take up such opportunity rests with the individual student.

I have previously acknowledged, during the debate on this issue in October 2012, that there is scope for increased cooperation, particularly in the border areas and I am fully committed to ensuring that barriers to collaboration and mobility are addressed.

My Department is actively progressing recommendations of the Irish Business and Employers Confederation and the Confederation of British Industry Joint Business Council report.

In relation to the quality and flow of information, this is being progressed under the Graduating to Success and Preparing for Success implementation plans. Examples of progress include: implementation of the Key Information Sets; representation by universities from the Republic of Ireland at the UCAS Higher Education Fair and attendance by our universities at promotional events in the Republic of Ireland; and provision of impartial advice and guidance by my Department's Careers Service on higher education opportunities, including the Republic of Ireland.

As recommended by that report and the independent student finance review chaired by Joanne Stuart, my Department has enacted key changes; from academic year 2013/14, student- support arrangements for students studying in the Republic of Ireland will align with those studying in Northern Ireland and Great Britain.

Regarding qualifications, I am advised that the Irish Universities Association and the Council for Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment met in November 2012 and are planning to produce a joint paper highlighting fundamental issues which need to be addressed in the current system.

I met with Minister Quinn twice during the past year and engagement between my officials and officials in the Department of Education and Skills continues in this important area.

ICT Working Group

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the work of the ICT Working Group. (AQO 3417/11-15)

Dr Farry: I established the ICT Working Group in January 2012, involving employers, colleges, universities and other Departments.

The Action Plan produced by the group sets out the actions required to address the current and future skill needs of the sector. These are grouped under key themes of skills provision, sector attractiveness, and co-ordination and communication.

I recently reconvened the working group to review progress against the actions. Progress has been significant and a wide range of actions are being taken forward.

The Public/Private ICT apprenticeship pilot has seen the public sector, together with private sector employers, develop a recruitment and training model to employ apprentices in the ICT sector and develop their skills through on and off the job training. Thirty two apprentices have been employed in the local ICT sector through this scheme.

A Higher Level ICT Apprenticeship pilot commenced in October 2012 with six apprentices undertaking training through South West College. The aim of this pilot is to help raise the skill levels of apprentices in the workplace and facilitate progression directly to higher education.

Furthermore, a second cohort of the Software Testers' Academy was launched. Nineteen participants from the first cohort have gained employment in the ICT sector. The second cohort has places for 24 participants.

Progress has been made in the university sector. Both Queen's University and the University of Ulster now offer postgraduate MSc courses for non-IT graduates, with over 100 students enrolled.

Progress has also been made in the development of the A level curriculum. CCEA has developed a new 'Software and Systems Development' A level, in conjunction with employers. It is envisaged that the course will be available from September 2013.

Another progress review meeting of the ICT Working Group will be in June 2013.

Youth Employment Scheme: Mid-Ulster

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many young people are engaged in Youth Employment Scheme projects in Mid-Ulster.

(AQO 3418/11-15)

Dr Farry: As at 7th February, my Department has secured 50 opportunities for young people under the Youth Employment Scheme in the Mid-Ulster area. Fifteen young people have availed of these opportunities, of which nine have entered full-time employment. 18 young unemployed people have found 6 months paid employment under the First Start initiative.

A very successful Jobs Fair and Advice Forum was held in Dungannon on Friday 7 December 2012, organised by DEL staff and supported by the local Council. Over 200 jobs were on offer in the retail, manufacturing and agri-foods sectors.

Feedback from all employers has been very positive and the engineering sector has already expressed interest in a further event

A Community Family Support Programme pilot in Cookstown commenced in January 2013 and 17 families have joined the programme.

Under the new Collaboration and Innovation Fund, £0.5 million has been allocated to the South West College, to provide support to 300 unemployed young people in its area, which includes Mid Ulster.

During the last 15 months, 41 unemployed young people from Mid Ulster have received personalised support from the Local Employment Intermediary Service.

These programmes are in addition to the Department's full range of support. From April to December 2012, the Employment Service helped 832 young unemployed people find employment in the Mid-Ulster area: this is 8.5% above target for the period.

On the Youth Employment Scheme generally, at 7th February, 822 employer agreements have been signed and 957 placements secured. 217 young people have been placed, of which 94 have secured full-time employment.

I would again urge all members to encourage businesses in their respective areas to support the Youth Employment Scheme and the various initiatives we are putting in place for unemployed young people. It is also important to encourage young constituents to avail of the opportunities.

Steps to Work Programme

Ms Brown asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many people have gained employment as a direct result of the Steps to Work programme in South Antrim.

(AQO 3422/11-15)

Dr Farry: The aim of the Steps to Work programme is to assist people who are unemployed or economically inactive to find and sustain employment.

Between September 2008 and June 2012, the latest date for which data is available, 2,850 participants left the Steps to Work programme in the South Antrim Parliamentary Constituency. Of these 2,850 leavers, a total of 1,125 moved into employment. This figure includes those moving into either unsubsidised or subsidised employment. Of the 1,125 who moved to employment, 1,085 moved into unsubsidised employment. This equates to 38% of the total leavers in the South Antrim constituency.

This is 3% above the Northern Ireland average. The percentage of participants who have been successful in obtaining unsubsidised employment, following participation on the Steps to Work programme, ranges from 28% to 43% by Parliamentary Constituency.

From September 2008 to September 2012, 99,720 participants started the Steps to Work programme. Reflecting the increase in unemployment since the recession began in 2008, the number of starts on the programme has increased year on year from 18,020 in 2009/10 to 29,885 in 2011/12.

The current target for Steps to Work participants moving into sustained employment for 13 weeks or more is 25%. The latest statistical data from September 2008 to March 2012 shows that an overall total of 29% was achieved.

Redundancy Advice Service

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what efforts have been made to put in place a permanent response unit to deal with redundancies such as those at FG Wilson. (AQO 3423/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Employment Service has in place effective mechanisms for delivering a full redundancy advice service at very short notice.

In offering redundancy advice services, the Employment Service works with the Social Security Agency, further education colleges, HMRC and other agencies. Should any company choose to avail of the service, their employees will receive information and professional advice about the options and support available. These include employment, training and education opportunities, as well as careers, benefits and taxation advice.

It is my assessment that a permanent response unit would simply duplicate the role of the Employment Service redundancy advice service and would therefore not be justified. The service currently provided is already highly effective, in that it has proven itself to be both flexible and highly responsive to local redundancy situations.

For example, in the case of FG Wilson the redundancy service was offered to the company immediately on receipt of the official notice.

A package of tailored support was put together in consultation with the company's HR management and out-placement provider, Lee Hecht Harrison, which included redundancy clinics for three weeks as well as job and training fairs which were free of charge.

It should be noted that the company confirmed that there were no compulsory redundancies.

In total the company announced 750 redundancies in September 2012. The broad skill sets of the redundant staff, based on the information held by the employer was engineers for research and development; engineers; managers, supervisors, administrators; and, manufacturing operators.

In additional to redundancy advice services offered by the Department, Northern Regional College made course places available to a number of those who were being made redundant.

The college is currently finalising a proposal under the Jobs and Economy Initiative to provide more intensive support to individuals.

Further Education: Irish Language Medium

Ms McCorley asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the work his Department has undertaken to facilitate Further Education being delivered through the medium of the Irish language. (AQO 3424/11-15)

Dr Farry: All issues relating to curriculum delivery and course provision are a matter for individual further education colleges. Colleges remain prepared to deliver further education courses through the medium of Irish where sufficient demand exists.

In October 2011, following discussions with the Minister for Culture, Arts and Leisure, I wrote to the six Further Education colleges, and asked them to consider contributing to the Líofa initiative.

Four colleges – Belfast Metropolitan College, South West College, South Eastern Regional College, and Southern Regional College have listed their mainstream Irish language provision on the Líofa website.

Outside the statutory further education sector, a pilot has been proposed through my Department's Training for Success programme, in order to accommodate a number of learners who have expressed a preference to undertake their vocational training through the medium of Irish. This will be provided through a sub-contracting arrangement between one of my Department's contracted training suppliers and GaelChursaí, which was formed in February 2011 to provide training and, develop employment opportunities within the Irish medium sector.

Such a pilot will allow my Department to test the delivery model. If it proves successful, then consideration will be given to how best to mainstream such a provision within the Training for Success programme delivery.

Unemployment: East Antrim

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what measures he has introduced to address unemployment in East Antrim following the significant local job losses.

(AQO 3425/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department is committed to reducing unemployment across Northern Ireland. Carrickfergus and Larne Jobs & Benefits Offices, which serve East Antrim, offer a range of services and programmes to help jobseekers find employment. Services include job search, help with writing a CV or job application form, help to prepare for interviews, careers guidance, or help with travel costs for job interviews.

In addition a range of contracted schemes such as the Steps to Work and Pathways to Work programmes are offered.

My Department has recently introduced new initiatives to help address youth unemployment, which includes provision in East Antrim

The Youth Employment Scheme is available to help young people gain experience, acquire new skills and find employment. Also 'First Start', a new strand of the Steps to Work programme, offers waged employment opportunities for unemployed young people, each lasting a minimum of six months.

Under the Collaboration and Innovation Fund, just under £4 million has been allocated to eight organisations, to help 1,500 unemployed young people from greater Belfast and East Antrim to get into further education, employment or training.

Newtownabbey is also one of the new Community Family Support Programme pilot areas. The programme will help prevent intergenerational unemployment and poverty, in ten of the most disadvantaged local families.

Tomorrow, 19th February, my Department will co-host with Ledcom and Larne Borough Council a Jobs and Opportunities Fair in Larne Town Hall. Over 30 organisations will be present to offer jobs and training opportunities to people in Larne. Employers include P&O, Danske Bank, Price Waterhouse Coopers, ASDA and TESCO offering a diverse range of opportunities in a wide range of sectors.

It is worth noting that in the period April to December 2012 the Employment Service helped 1,250 people find employment in East Antrim; 22% above target for the period.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Invest NI

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what was the cost to Invest NI of each job promoted from California during the period 2009-2012.

(AQW 19251/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): Invest NI reports on the basis of the amount of assistance offered to promote jobs. The cost to Invest NI to promote these jobs from Californian based companies during the period 2009-2012 was £14,679 each.

The current method of calculating cost per job has been agreed by the Treasury and is used for delegation and control purposes by the Department of Trade and Industry and all the Development Agencies within the United Kingdom to enable like for like comparisons to be made about the level of assistance being offered to companies.

Crescent Capital Funds

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to list the investors from outside Northern Ireland in Crescent Capital Funds.

(AQW 19252/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Crescent Capital has managed two venture capital funds.

Crescent Capital I was a £14 million fund which was launched in October 1995 as Hambro Northern Ireland Ventures LP. It was a 10 year limited partnership with a 2 year extension period. The Fund had a broad range of investors from outside Northern Ireland as listed below.

Investors in Crescent Capital I

Invest NI

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what support has been given to the digital and software industries by Invest NI in each of the last five years.

(AQW 19276/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The table below shows the amount of assistance offered by Invest NI in each of the last 5 financial years to businesses within the digital and software industries.

Invest NI Assistance Offered to Businesses in the Digital & Software Industries (2007-08 to 2011-12)

Year	Assistance Offered £m
2007-08	16.4
2008-09	17.5
2009-10	29.7
2010-11	19.0
2011-12	15.4
Total	98.0

Invest NI

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how additionality and deadweight are taken into account when considering the value for money offered by Invest NI.

(AQW 19367/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI, when assessing the value for money (VfM) of any assisted programme or project, will examine additionality and deadweight. This is a standard feature of the appraisal process and it is a requirement of DFP guidance, which is publicly available on http://www.dfpni.gov.uk/eag.

Invest NI will use a variety of means to probe the information provided by the applicant in respect of additionality and deadweight. This could be through, for example;

- the examination, monitoring and benchmarking of information, including financial and business plan information, supplied by the applicant,
- direct questioning of the applicant on their business plan and the financing of their plans,
- drawing on the knowledge of Invest NI, where it has experience of dealing with similar applications or has had previous dealings with the applicant,
- consulting other organisations who are experienced in the relevant field of activity, or who have previous experience of the applicant - for example, partner organisations, other funding bodies, banks, and so on.

Furthermore Invest NI and/or DETI economists, as appropriate, examine the information and evidence on additionality/ deadweight when an assessment is made of the VfM of Invest NI cases. This should help ensure that Invest NI assisted projects receive the minimum government assistance required to bring them, and their benefits, about.

Invest NI

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the extent to which new jobs created by companies which are supported by Invest NI are counterbalanced by jobs lost since 2008. (AQW 19372/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Recent research and analysis on job creation carried out by Aston Business School demonstrates the strong performance of Invest NI assisted businesses relative to the rest of the private sector. During the period 2005-2011 Invest NI assisted businesses increase their employment by 17.6% compared to a 7.8% decline in employment by private sector non-assisted businesses.

Whilst this analysis does not specifically relate to the period since 2008, it shows that businesses assisted by Invest NI between 2005 and 2011 created 34,389 jobs. This was offset by some clients reducing their employment by 20,282, resulting in an overall net increase of 14,107 (+17.6%).

Productivity Gap

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of (i) the current productivity gap between Northern Ireland and the rest of the United Kingdom; (ii) any trend which is evident as regards the productivity gap; and (iii) her targets for reducing the productivity gap.

(AQW 19373/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) Productivity data for UK regions is produced by the Office for National Statistics and this information is publically available, with the latest release published on 3 January 2013 http://www.ons.gov.uk/ons/rel/productivity/labour-productivity/q3-2012/stb-lprod-q312.html#tab-Regional-labour-productivity. As highlighted in both the Independent Review of Economic Policy (IREP), and more recently the Evidence Base supporting the Northern Ireland Economic Strategy, the lower labour productivity in Northern Ireland is typically a function of relatively low productivity in key sectors and a sectoral mix in the economy with an over-representation of lower value added activities.
- (ii) The productivity gap between Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom is longstanding, and economic forecasts published within the Northern Ireland Economic Strategy illustrate the scale of the challenge ahead. IREP recognised that, in the context of regional economic growth, it is important the Executive sufficiently prioritises exports and inward investment and that innovation and R&D are recognised as vital long term drivers of productivity. Committed action over a significant period of time will be required to make significant inroads into the productivity gap.
  - Although the latest available data suggests that the productivity gap widened during the downturn, 2011 did see some improvement in terms of GVA per filled job which currently stands at 86.8% of the UK average. The Northern Ireland data is also part of a wider "productivity puzzle" in respect of the productivity data for the UK as a whole, in terms of trends in output, employment and productivity during the downturn. This has recently been analysed in detail by the Office for National Statistics, available to download from http://www.ons.gov.uk/ons/rel/elmr/the-productivity-conundrum/explanations-and-preliminary-analysis/art-explanations-and-preliminary-analysis.html.
- (iii) My Department does not have a target relating to reducing the productivity gap with the rest of the United Kingdom.

Exports

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how export sales are measured. (AQW 19374/11-15)

Mrs Foster: There are two main sources of official statistics on exports for Northern Ireland.

Regional Trade Statistics for all UK regions are published by HMRC on a quarterly basis, and these are publically available from https://www.uktradeinfo.com/statistics/rts/pages/default.aspx.

NISRA publishes a Manufacturing Sales and Exports Survey each year which provides estimates of sales within Northern Ireland, external sales to Great Britain and exports generated by all businesses within the manufacturing industry in Northern Ireland. The latest figures available are for 2011/12 and can be accessed through the DETI website at http://www.detini.gov.uk/deti-stats-index/stats-surveys/stats-manufacturing-sales-exports.htm

The Programme for Government contains commitments on exports, and progress is assessed using the Regional Trade Statistics due to their timeliness and frequency of publication, the enhanced information available on destination countries (which is crucial for the emerging economies target) and also the ability to compare across all UK regions.

Invest NI: Performance Data

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how her Department assesses the quality of Invest NI's performance data.

(AQW 19375/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department's Analytical Services Unit works closely with Invest NI to source and validate its performance data and, only recently, the Unit completed a data linkage project which linked Invest NI data with Business Survey data in an attempt to better understand the performance of Invest NI supported companies. In turn this work, and the outputs from it, was independently validated by Professor Mark Hart of Aston Business School. All this material has been published and is available on the DETI website at http://www.detini.gov.uk/deti-stats-index/deti-stats-index-3/sfa-analysis.htm.

This work is currently being built upon through an externally commissioned evaluation of Invest NI's programme of Selective Financial Assistance. This too will be published in due course once it is completed around springtime.

Finally it is also worth noting that the Northern Ireland Audit Office, in its report of March 2012, completed an exercise which assessed the robustness of Invest NI data on the number of FDI jobs promoted during 2010, concluding that they found sufficient evidence to substantiate the jobs figures.

Economic Strategy

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the development of a local economic strategy based on devolution of greater and wider controls over fiscal mechanisms in the way the Scottish Government sought to do through the Calman Commission.

(AQW 19379/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Executive's Economic Strategy is based on an extensive review of global best practice in economic development and on a wide ranging and independent review of economic policy in Northern Ireland.

The Economic Strategy recognises that securing the ability to vary, and significantly lower, the rate of corporation tax would be a major enabler to successfully rebalance the Northern Ireland economy toward greater private sector and value added growth.

Tourism: Promotion

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail (i) the tourist amenities that are being promoted by the Tourist Board; (ii) the marketing budget allocated to promotion; and (iii) the tourism bodies carrying out this work. (AQW 19402/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- (i) 4,192 tourist amenities are promoted by the Northern Ireland Tourist Board on its consumer website discovernorthernireland.com. In 2012 the website received 3.2 million visitors. This data is also further provided as part of a public data feed to Tourism Ireland and is replicated on their new consumer website www.ireland.com. In 2012 Tourism Ireland's consumer website (www.discoverireland.com) received in the region of 12.7 million visitors
- (ii) The Northern Ireland Tourist Board's promotion & marketing budget for the next 2 years is as follows:

	2013/14: (£)	2014/15: (£)	Total: (£)
Promotion & Marketing:	7,668,000	7,590,000	15,258,000
European Regional Development Fund:	2,300,000	2,300,000	4,600,000
Total:	9,968,000	9,890,000	19,858,000

[Please note this budget includes all NITB's programme activity including development of the visitor experience, the website and database, quality programmes, visitor servicing and marketing. Tourism Ireland will also have a marketing budget allocated to promotion of the island of Ireland in Great Britain & Overseas.]

(iii) The Northern Ireland Tourist Board is responsible for the promotion of Northern Ireland as a tourist destination in Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland. Tourism Ireland is responsible for the marketing of the Island of Ireland in Great Britain & Overseas.

The following regional tourism partnerships and organisations support their members in providing assistance with tourism product development and in marketing local tourism providers at a regional and international level:

- Belfast Visitor & Convention Bureau www.belfastconventionbureau.com;
- Causeway Coast & Glens Tourism Partnership www.causewaycoastandglens.com;
- Derry Visitor & Convention Bureau www.derryvisitor.com;
- Fermanagh Lakelands Tourism www.fermanaghlakelands.com; and
- Flavour of Tyrone www.flavouroftyrone.com

Further support is provided by local council authorities and industry associations.

Jobs Target

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the impact on the job targets contained in the Programme for Government in light of the latest figures showing that only 75 percent of jobs promoted are actually created. (AQW 19427/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The job target in the Programme for Government is based on the number of jobs promoted in businesses assisted by Invest NI. Therefore, the conversion ratio between jobs promoted and jobs created will have no impact on this target.

Business Start-ups

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline how her Department measures the success of new business start-ups.

(AQW 19431/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The success of local business starts through Invest NI's volume business start programmes are measured through independent Post Programme Evaluations. These Evaluations measure survival rates and employment.

The success of Export Start and Global Start businesses are measured through individual Post Project Evaluations that measure wealth creation (salaries and wages, investment).

Selective Financial Assistance

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how Invest NI will utilise the funds currently spent on Selective Financial Assistance should that method no longer be available as a result of regional aid issues. (AQW 19432/11-15)

Mrs Foster: While the draft Regional Aid Guidelines for the period 2014-20 indicate that the rates of support to business across much of Europe are likely to be reduced by 5% and that support to large companies may be further restricted, it is important to note that Regional Aid will continue across the EU post 2013 and will therefore be available to businesses in Northern Ireland. Given ongoing consultations between EU member states, it is not yet possible to conclude what the direct impact on Northern Ireland will be.

The Executive acknowledges the importance of Regional Aid and SFA to businesses in Northern Ireland. We have made various representations in Whitehall and in Europe and we are in ongoing, active discussions with the Department of Business Innovation and Skills (BIS) in London and with representatives of the European Commission with a view to securing the best possible outcome for Northern Ireland post 2013. Therefore Invest NI will continue to make optimum use of SFA throughout the Regional Aid period 2014-20.

During the last five years the amount of SFA offered to businesses has declined from £54 million to £27 million. In 2011-12 SFA accounted for 30% of the total value of assistance offered, compared with 50% in 2007-08. In line with this decrease in SFA spending there has been a large increase in the amount of other forms of assistance offered by Invest NI. This includes a wide range of assistance in support of innovation, trade, skills and other capability development activities which are vital to driving business competitiveness and economic growth in Northern Ireland.

Shale Gas Forum

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the planned work programme for the shale gas forum and the work that has been carried out to date.

(AQW 19436/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Shale Gas Regulators Forum held its inaugural meeting on 18 October 2012. This meeting centred on agreeing the purpose, objectives, Terms of Reference and roles of Forum members and on sharing of knowledge and information to date.

Going forward, the Forum's work programme will be informed by the activities required to give effect to a robust and efficient shale gas regulatory framework.

Shale Gas

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether (i) the Health and Safety Executive will review the report entitled Chief Medical Officer's Recommendations Concerning Shale Gas Development in New Brunswick by Dr. E Cleary; and (ii) she plans to give any consideration to the public health implications of the proposals to extract shale gas. (AQW 19438/11-15)

Mrs Foster: HSENI will review the Report in relation to issues within its remit, but I should explain that HSENI has no powers with respect to the wider public health matters.

Farm Accidents

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what action is being taken to address farming accidents by the Farm Safety Partnership; and how can Health and Safety Training be accessed by farmers.

(AQW 19495/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Farm Safety Partnership has produced a comprehensive action plan listing the actions the members of the partnership will take to address the situation regarding farming accidents. The action plan can be accessed on the HSENI website - www.hseni.gov.uk/farm_safety_partnership_for_northern_ireland_november_2012-14.pdf

FarmSafe Awareness training can be accessed by contacting either the Northern Ireland Rural Development Council (Cookstown) or Ai Services (Newtownabbey) on the following telephone numbers: 0845 026 7536 or 0845 026 7534 or by emailing options@countrysiderural.co.uk Training will initially be delivered on 32 Focus Farms throughout Northern Ireland.

Cattle: Live Export to Libya

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether her Department is aware of any live cattle export business opportunities to Libya.

(AQW 19556/11-15)

Mrs Foster: There is no certificate in place to allow for the export of live cattle from the UK to Libya. Negotiation of export certificates (EHCS) is undertaken by DEFRA and Industry Partners which include Northern Ireland Representatives.

EU Sustainable Competitiveness Programme for Northern Ireland

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how much funding from the EU Sustainable Competitiveness Programme for Northern Ireland (2007-2013) has been (i) allocated; and (ii) spent; and to list the recipients. (AQW 19566/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Of the €306 million (£266 million at euro fx-rate of 1.15) available to Northern Ireland under the EU Sustainable Competitiveness Programme, £210 million has been allocated to the Programme Implementing Bodies which are Invest NI, NITB, DETI, DARD and DRD.

To date, £106.8 million has been spent and registered on the EU database.

Further information on the projects and activities funded can be obtained from the Programme website (www.eucompni.gov.uk ). A full list of the Programme beneficiaries is also available at http://www.eugrants-successes.org

Electricity

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what action she will take to ensure that there is adequate additional generating capacity for electricity so that there is security of supply for homes and businesses in all weather conditions.

(AQW 19572/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has had a number of meetings with the Regulator and System Operator for Northern Ireland (SONI) within the context of the SONI All-Island Generation Capacity Statement. These discussions are at an early stage to inform understanding of our respective roles and responsibilities. They will be developed at the appropriate point to examine options that might be required to ensure future adequacy of supply.

My Department is also monitoring developments in relation to options to restore full capacity to the Moyle Interconnector and actions to bring proposals for development of the North/South Interconnector back before the Planning Appeals Committee. Improved interconnection has a vital role to play in relation to long-term security of supply for Northern Ireland.

Electricity: Generators

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the (i) generating capacity of each of the electricity generators; and (ii) capacity limits of each of the interconnectors; and (iii) impact that the proposed closure of older generating capacity under European regulations may have on local supply.

(AQW 19573/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I refer the Member to the All-Island Generation Capacity Statement 2013-2022 jointly published by the System Operator for Northern Ireland (SONI) and EirGrid for the Republic of Ireland, on their websites in January 2013. As electricity system operators in their respective jurisdictions, they are responsible for compiling the data you require.

The document can be obtained through the following link: http://www.soni.ltd.uk/newsstory.asp?news_id=222

My Department has had a number of meetings with the Utility Regulator and SONI within the context of the All-Island Generation Capacity Statement. These discussions included the examination of options that might be required to ensure future adequacy of generation capacity.

Gas Extraction

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment why the gas extension project is being taken forward independently from any consideration of the potential usage of new pipelines by a company engaged in gas extraction; and why she is not giving consideration to recouping any public expenditure by charging a levy on gas extraction companies making use of the proposed gas transmission.

(AQW 19635/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department's analysis in relation to extending the gas network to towns in the West and North-West has not included potential usage of the new pipelines for the conveyance of locally extracted gas, nor any commercial issues which might arise, as work in relation to gas extraction is still at an exploratory stage.

Gas Distribution Network

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the percentage of (i) the greater Belfast area that is connected to the gas distribution network; and (ii) those people with access to the distribution network who are supplied with gas.

(AQW 19636/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Phoenix Natural Gas advises that there are some 330,000 properties within its licensed area and, by the end of 2012, gas had been made available to approximately 296,000 or some 90% of premises.

Phoenix also advise that by the end of 2012, for those with access to the gas network, approximately 159,000 or around 53% of properties had been connected to natural gas.

Petroleum Licences

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 19123/11-15, whether the work programme of the four onshore petroleum licences issued by her Department are part of the terms and conditions of the licences. (AQW 19638/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I would refer the member to the answer I gave to AQW15606/11-15.

Credit Unions

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail (i) the policies that the Financial Services Authority requires credit unions to have in place before the 30 September 2013; (ii) the assistance her Department has made available to credit unions to ensure such policies are in place; (iii) how this assistance is provided; and (iv) when the required policies are expected to be in place.

(AQW 19822/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Financial Services Authority as UK regulator is best placed to detail the policies that credit unions are required to have in place at any point in time. My Department has made an offer of financial assistance to the Irish League of Credit Unions and the Ulster Federation of Credit Unions to help meet the costs of providing a service to all credit unions that require guidance and assistance on the transitional arrangements.

Economic Strategy

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline how the Treasury Total Expenditure on Services Framework is considered in the development of economic strategies. (AQO 3450/11-15)

Mrs Foster: In developing the NI Economic Strategy, the Executive Sub-Committee on the Economy considered a wide range of information. This included analysis of the extent to which the Executive had allocated funding to support the rebalancing themes identified within the Economic Strategy and comparisons of the level of economic orientated expenditure with other parts of the UK.

A summary of this analysis was contained within the initial consultation on the Executive's Framework for Economic Growth, "Prioirties for Sustainable Growth & Prosperity" which was published in January 2011.

Economic Strategy

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the impact for the economy of the Environment Minister's intention to change retail policy in the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan. (AQO 3451/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department does not carry out assessments of the economic impact of planning decisions taken by the Environment Minister.

In line with the Economic Strategy, I would encourage all Executive Ministers to take decisions which promote investment in the local economy and which support sustainable job creation and economic growth.

Foreign Direct Investment: West Belfast

Mr Sheehan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what action her Department has taken to increase foreign direct investment in West Belfast.

(AQO 3452/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Over the last two financial years Invest NI has facilitated 14 visits by prospective inward investors, in relation to investing in West Belfast.

Last year, Invest NI's CEO Alastair Hamilton and I travelled to the US and met with Caterpillar senior management to specifically discuss the company's future plans in Northern Ireland, securing the 200 new high quality shared services jobs in West Belfast that Minister Farry and I announced last week.

Invest NI holds 190 acres of land in West Belfast and 31 acres are available for further economic development.

Invest NI continues to works closely with stakeholders and both the West Belfast Partnership and Greater Shankill Partnership Boards to review the features and benefits of West Belfast in order to maximise opportunities for future economic growth. In May 2012, Invest NI hosted a stakeholder reception at Belfast Metropolitan College's new e3 facility, as part of its International Overseas Sales Conference which helped Invest NI's overseas representatives to enhance their knowledge and ability to promote the area.

Investment Banquet in the Guildhall, London

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what economic benefits the recent event in the Guildhall, London, hosted by the Honourable Irish Society, may have for the whole of the North West. (AQO 3453/11-15)

Mrs Foster: During a very well-attended investment banquet, prospective investors to Northern Ireland were presented with highly positive and compelling messages about investing in the region and in particular in the North West. Additionally, a predinner seminar delivered by representatives from the North West was targeted directly at investors interested specifically in the North West.

Potential investment opportunities are multi-sectoral and include technology, engineering, financial services and business services. In particular, I welcome the intention of a private sector company to develop a data centre in the North West.

Teams from Invest NI are actively following up to develop and manage opportunities.

Economic Advisory Group

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the work of the Economic Advisory Group.

(AQO 3454/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Economic Advisory Group has been particularly busy over the previous year. The Group intends to publish its annual report in the coming weeks and this will provide a comprehensive breakdown of the Group's work over the year in addition to its forward work programme.

Of particular interest will be the Group's in-depth analysis of business access to finance within Northern Ireland. A report is currently being finalised on this important matter and I expect to receive the Group's recommendations when we next meet on 5th March 2013.

Invest NI: Jobs Promotion

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the actions she has taken to rectify any regional disparity in the areas in which jobs are promoted and created by Invest NI. (AQO 3455/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Assistance patterns are demand-led by businesses wishing to improve their competitiveness and gain a larger share of international markets. While potential investors are specifically offered a range of options for location, including areas of economic and social disadvantage, the ultimate decision regarding location is one for the company. In the case of established businesses, reinvestment patterns will usually be determined by the existing location of the businesse.

The 2009 Independent Review of Economic Policy noted the importance of allowing companies the scope to locate where they feel they can operate most profitably and as such, it would be inappropriate for Invest NI to seek to force companies to choose one location over another.

Department of the Environment

MOT: Diesel Emissions Test

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether the Driver and Vehicle Agency has an obligation to carry out a diesel emissions compliance test as part of the MOT; and whether this is being carried out. (AQW 17811/11-15)

Mr Attwood (The Minister of the Environment): European roadworthiness directive 2009/40 EC requires metered smoke tests to be conducted on heavy goods vehicles, buses and light goods vehicles, and on cars fitted with diesel engines registered on or after 1 January 1980.

From 1 March 2006, the Driver & Vehicle Agency introduced metered smoke testing into the annual tests for all of the required vehicles. However, for health and safety reasons related to the build-up of fumes in test halls, and on the advice of the Health and Safety Executive for Northern Ireland, metered smoke testing for light goods vehicles and cars was subsequently suspended, and they are now subject to visual inspection for smoke emissions.

Buses and heavy goods vehicles fitted with diesel engines continue to be tested fully in compliance with the relevant European directive.

The re-introduction of fully compliant emissions testing for cars and light goods vehicles is being considered in the context of an ongoing strategic review of vehicle testing arrangements in Northern Ireland.

DOE: Private Office Running Costs

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the cost of running his Ministerial Private Office in the last financial year.

(AQW 17864/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The total cost of running the Ministerial Private Office for 2011-12 was £269,832. This cost includes salary costs of £263,311 as well as general administration costs of £6,521, which covers items such as computer consumables, stationary and telephony costs.

Allotments

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment how many allotment plots there are in each council area. (AQW 17890/11-15)

Mr Attwood: 11 councils have indicated that they provide allotments and a table of the numbers provided by each council in 2012 is given below. In addition, Antrim Council, Down District Council and Newry & Mourne Council are actively supporting community groups and others to make some provision.

District Council	No. of Allotments 2012	District Council	No. of Allotments 2012
Belfast	178	Newtownabbey	26
Carrickfergus	189	North down	18
Castlereagh	6	Strabane	52
Derry	31	Dungannon and Tyrone	14
Larne	8	Magherafelt	27
Lisburn	53	Total	602

Lead Mines at Conlig

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment whether he will consider providing protection to the lead mines at Conlig area because of their natural beauty and historical significance.

(AQW 17958/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The former lead workings at Whitespots, which is relatively close to Conlig, have been designated as an Area of Special Scientific Interest (ASSI) because of its geological importance. Past workings have produced a series of spoil heaps that provide access to mineral rich material which has been brought to the surface as part of the mining process which would otherwise be inaccessible. The spoil heaps contain mineralised rocks with a range of minerals present including some representing the formerly commercially worked metallic ores. This site has the only occurrence in Northern Ireland of the unusual barium zeolite, harmotone.

Built Heritage has long recognised the considerable historic importance of the industrial heritage complex in the townlands of Conlig and Whitespots. Indeed, they were among the first industrial archaeological sites to be given protection through scheduling in Northern Ireland. Today, five key surviving components of the complex are given protection under Article 3 of the Historic Monuments and Archaeological Objects (NI) Order 1995.

Councils: Payment of Invoices

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of the Environment to detail, for the period 1 April 2012 to 31 December 2012, (i) the total number of invoices paid; and (ii) the number of invoices paid within ten working days of receipt, by each council. (AQW 18186/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The total number of invoices paid and the total paid within 10 working days of receipt of the supplier's invoice, by each council, for the period 1 April to 31 December 2012, is detailed in the table below.

Council	Total Invoices Paid (1 Apr to 31 Dec 2012)	Total invoices paid within 10 working days (1 Apr - 31 Dec 2012)
Antrim	7,380	1,196

I also attach a table showing the percentage breakdown of 10 day prompt payments for the periods 2009/10, 2010/11, 2011/12 and April – December 2012. Whilst this shows an overall increase, there is still significant room for improvement. I am currently liaising with Councils to ascertain the reasons why the 10 day target is not being achieved, given my view that more can and needs to be done. I will be looking to overcome any specific system limitations, potentially taking these issues forward as an early reform convergence workstream. I will be writing to Council Chief Executives enclosing both tables and encouraging councils that can achieve the 10 day prompt payment target to do so.

Wind Turbines

Mr Frew asked the Minister of the Environment (i) for his assessment of Spatial Planning Advice Note: SP12/09 Planning Applications for Wind Turbines Sited Near to Trunk Roads, which is used by the Planning Service and Highways Agency in England; (ii) how this advice could be used by the Planning Service and Roads Service when assessing wind turbine applications considering that with PPS18 and best practice guidance as the only substantive requirement for safe location of turbines and roads is for a turbine setback distance of fall over height plus 10 percent from a road.

(AQW 18279/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Spatial Planning Advice Note: SP12/09 has been prepared by the Highways Agency (an Agency of the Department of Transport) and applies only to trunk roads in England.

For micro and small turbines, the advice note recommends a set-back from the nearest highway boundary equal in distance to their height + 10%. For larger commercial turbines it recommends a set-back distance equal to their height + 50 metres. The advice note also states that this set-back distance may be relaxed subject to the findings of a site specific assessment.

The Best Practice Guidance (BPG) that accompanies Planning Policy Statement (PPS) 18 'Renewable Energy' states that wind turbines should be set back at least fall over distance plus 10% from the edge of any public road. By way of information, the equivalent planning guidance in England is contained in the companion guide to PPS22 'Renewable Energy' which states that it 'may be advisable to achieve a set-back from roads and railways of at least fall over distance in order to achieve maximum safety'.

My colleague, Danny Kennedy MLA, Minister for Regional Development, has confirmed that his Department currently uses the guidance available in PPS18 and the accompanying Best Practice Guidance, which it considers to be adequate. He advised me that details of haulage routes, access, etc as part of the Environment Impact Assessment, along with confirmation about de-icing and shadow flicker, if considered necessary, are requested. He also advised that the set-back of fall over distance plus 10% is also applied and that, although this is seldom an issue, it has been used on a few occasions.

I am, therefore, satisfied that the approach in Northern Ireland and the provisions of PPS 18 adequately address road safety issues

Review of Public Administration: Shadow Councils

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment whether elections to shadow councils will happen by June 2014; and to outline any discussions he has had with the Northern Ireland Office on the timing of these elections. (AQW 18481/11-15)

Mr Attwood: In July 2012, I wrote to the then Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, the Rt. Hon. Owen Paterson MP, requesting that the next set of local government elections be brought forward to 2014. He responded agreeing in principle to this approach.

My Department has been in regular contact with the Northern Ireland Office to ensure that the necessary legislation is in place to allow the next set of local government elections to be held in 2014, providing for a shadow period between polling day and the day on which the new council comes fully into operation.

Motorway Service Stations

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of the Environment whether the proposed motorway service stations on the M1 and M2 will be permitted to open 24 hours a day; and whether other retail outlets from which motorists could benefit will also be considered along the motorways.

(AQW 18514/11-15)

Mr Attwood: There are no planning restrictions or conditions attached to the current planning permissions for motorway service stations on the M2 that would preclude their use on a 24 hour basis. The M1 MSAs are covered by an agreement under Article 40 of the Planning Order 1991. One of the obligations requires the provision of services 24 hours per day, 365 days per year.

As regards retail outlets along motorways, a key planning consideration would be the Department's policy as set out in Planning Policy Statement 3 which precludes direct access for any development proposal onto any motorway or high standard dual carriageway with the possible exception of motorway service areas. This policy is intended to protect the integrity and design standards of the motorway system and help ensure that road safety is maintained.

In the case of retail developments proposed near to the motorway system, but not relying on direct access to it, these are determined on their individual merits taking account of retail planning policy, the provisions of the local development plan and other relevant policy and material considerations, including any representations received.

Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the Planning Appeals Commission Appeal Decision 2011/A0251 paragraph 6; and whether the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan has been, or will be amended to identify and prepare local policies for those stretches of a Protected Route to be subjected to further access restrictions beyond those set out in Policy AMP3, in respect of the A2 Bangor Road.

(AQW 18646/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Planning Appeals Commission in its appeal decision 2011/A0251 accurately stated that while PPS3 makes provisions for development plans, where appropriate, to identify and prepare local policies for those stretches of a Protected Route to be subject to further access restrictions beyond those set out in Policy AMP 3, draft BMAP does not contain any such local policy. The Commission also noted that there was no objection to the draft plan on that basis.

Given that this issue was not raised as an objection to draft BMAP, the Plan will not be amended to include any such policy.

Planning Applications: Environmental Impact Assessments

Mr Frew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 18153/11-15, what is the average time taken to determine the need for an environmental impact assessment on a planning application; and how does this compare to the average in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 18656/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Regulations 7 and 10 of the Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012, (the EIA regulations), state that the Department shall make a determination of whether a particular development is EIA development within 4 weeks from the date of receipt of the application or such longer period as may be agreed in writing with the applicant.

Records of the date of when a determination is made as to whether a proposal is EIA development are not recorded on the Department's IT system in such a way as to enable the average time taken to be easily identified. However, the EIA Regulations provide the procedures and timescales to be applied for EIA development.

Pubs: Taxi Service

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment what barriers exist to publicans who wish to offer a service that will bring customers home from their licensed premises; and what steps a license holder must take to offer such a service. (AQW 18900/11-15)

Mr Attwood: If passengers are carried for "hire or reward", the service would be construed as a taxi service. "Hire or reward" means any payment in cash or kind to enable the passenger to use the service. Payments may be direct or indirect, such as part of an entrance charge to an event. Hire or reward still applies regardless of whether any profits are made from payments received. Since the provision of the service would be closely linked to the use of the public house, it is probable that this service would be construed as a hire or reward service.

In order to provide a taxi service, the vehicle would have to be insured, tested and licensed as a taxi. The driver would also require a taxi driver's licence and the operator of the service would require a taxi operator's licence.

Taxi Operator Licensing

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on taxi operator licensing. (AQW 18980/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Taxi operator licensing was introduced on 1 September 2012 and up to 24 January 2013, 1,908 applications have been received.

A total of 1,712 temporary licences have been issued and, from these, 818 full licences have subsequently been issued. The remainder are being processed as the necessary information is provided by applicants and verified.

Planning Applications: Upper Bann

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the meetings that he has attended since May 2011 regarding planning applications in the Upper Bann constituency that have been submitted to the Planning Service, including (i) the dates of the meetings; and (ii) the appropriate planning references. (AQW 18988/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Since May 2011 I have attended the following meetings for planning applications in the Upper Bann constituency.

Two separate meetings were held on 2 February 2012 and 31 July 2012 to discuss a planning application at Moyallan Road, Portadown, reference Q/2011/0220/O. The processing of this application is ongoing.

A meeting was held on 15 March 2012 to discuss an application for a housing development at Solitude, Lurgan, reference N/2008/0022/F. This application was approved on 30 October 2012.

Advertisement Banner in Hill Street, Newry

Mr Irwin asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the reasons for the decision to (i) instigate court proceedings against the four Hill Street Traders in Newry for an alleged breach of planning policy; (ii) withdraw the court proceedings; and to outline the planning policy governing the placement of advertising signage in towns, cities and main arterial routes.

(AQW 18989/11-15)

Mr Attwood:

(i) Craigavon Planning Office received a complaint from a member of the public on the 7 September 2012 in relation to an advertisement banner being displayed over Hill Street Newry. Hill Street is in a Conservation Area where stricter controls apply over the type of advertisement which may be displayed. No application had been received for consent to display the advertisement and officials in Craigavon office decided that it should be removed because they considered that it detracted from the appearance of the Conservation Area.

The Department wrote to the four traders on 11 October 2012 advising them of the breach of planning control and seeking removal of the advertisement within 10 days of the letter as it is an offence under Article 84(2) of the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991. The letters also highlighted the prospect of court action should the sign remain and set out the possible penalties for such a prosecution. One trader replied but gave no indication when the banner would be removed.

A further site inspection was carried out on 25 October 2012 and the advertisement banner remained in place. The Department then proceeded to issue instructions to its solicitors on 19 November 2012 asking them to initiate summons action against the four traders who were advertising on the banner. The summonses were served at the end of January.

- (ii) I was alerted to issue by a media query and following discussions with the senior planners officials I have took the decision, with their agreement not to pursue this case and the summonses against the four traders will be withdrawn at the Court hearing on 19 March 2013. The temporary campaign banner was a response by local traders who have a long history of working hard to stimulate economic activity and investment in the historic town centre. Greater weight should therefore be given to the difficult economic conditions experienced by traders, the disruptions in the area while environmental improvements were carried out and the opportunity presented by the completion of the public realm works. I understand that the offending banner has been removed.
  - My view is that I and my officials should be spending our time going after the worst offenders, be it environmental crime or planning law breaches. I have told senior planners to tell local planners to use common sense and consider these matters in the round before taking formal enforcement action.
- (iii) In determining an application for consent to display an advertisement in towns, cities and main arterial routes the Department assesses proposals against Policy AD1 of Planning Policy Statement 17 (PPS17) Control of Outdoor Advertisements and any other relevant planning policies and other material considerations relevant to it depending on the specifics of the site. This includes the relevant Area Plan and in this case guidance for Newry Conservation Area.

Bus Operator Licences: EU Member States

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on international passenger transport following the issuing of guidance in June 2012.

(AQW 19026/11-15)

Mr Attwood: In June 2012 the Department, having obtained extensive legal advice, issued guidance on the licensing requirements to be met by bus operators licensed in another Member State. In providing this guidance I committed that my Department would engage with the European Commission to bring the fullest clarity to this complex area of European law.

The June advice informed operators that a contract for a permanent or frequent or regular service could only be delivered by holders of a Northern Irish operator licence.

The Commission has now provided further advice which has, in turn, been validated by the Department for Transport. The Commission concluded that, depending on the nature of the service, services of up to three year duration could be delivered by an operator licensed in another Member State.

My Department has now issued revised advice and is in the process of informing the industry and all Northern Ireland Departments of the change in position regarding contracting for bus passenger transport.

DVLA Coleraine

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the current position in relation to jobs at the Motor Vehicle Licensing Centre in Coleraine.

(AQW 19109/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I am meeting Stephen Hammond, Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Transport, on 5 March 2013 to discuss DVLA's proposals for the centralisation of vehicle licensing services in Swansea. At that meeting I intend to continue to make a robust case for the retention of vehicles licensing services, and the associated jobs, in Northern Ireland

Dog Fouling

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment what fines have been imposed for dog fouling, by each Council, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 19192/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department requests information on fixed penalty notices issued by district councils after the end of each financial year. Information on the number of fixed penalty notices issued in the district of each district council in each of the last three financial years in respect of the offence of permitting dogs to foul is set out in the following table.

Power Lines

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the planning guidelines for underground power lines and when he expects them to be next reviewed.

(AQW 19474/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Under the provisions of the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991, the carrying out by statutory operators of any works for the purpose of inspecting, repairing or renewing any pipes, cables or other apparatus does not constitute development and hence does not require planning permission.

In addition, Part 13, Class C (Electricity Undertakings) of Schedule 1 to the Planning (General Development) Order (Northern Ireland) 1993 provides that, except within a site of special archaeological interest, the laying of underground pipes, cables or any other apparatus by electricity undertakers (and the construction of shafts and tunnels reasonably necessary in connection with such pipes, cables or apparatus) is permitted development and does not require the submission of a planning application.

The Department has no immediate plans to review the current planning legislation for underground cables.

Planning Policy: Access Roads for New Houses

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of the Environment what is the legal position for a person who wishes to use building rubble in the formation of lanes around newly built houses.

(AQW 19479/11-15)

Mr Attwood: 'Development' as defined by Article 11 of the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991 means the carrying out of building, engineering, mining or other operations in, on, over or under land, or the making of any material change in the use of any buildings or other land.

The formation and laying out of accesses to serve new houses is operational development and requires planning permission.

Driving Theory Test

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of the Environment, in relation to the hazard response driving test, to detail (i) the pass rate; and (ii) the revenue which has been raised, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 19508/11-15)

Mr Attwood:

(i) Pass rates

The Official Statistics on theory test pass rates, from the "Compendium of Key Statistics for the Driver and Vehicle Agency 2011/12", which was published on 21 June 2012, are shown in Table 1 below. The 2012/13 statistics are not yet available and have therefore been excluded. The Compendium for 2012/13 is due for publication in June 2013.

(ii) Revenue raised

The theory test revenue figures for the last five years, sourced from the published Driver & Vehicle Agency annual accounts, are shown in Table 2 below. The figures are for all categories of theory test. From 2007 to 2009, the theory test categories were car, motorcycle, large goods vehicle and passenger carrying vehicle. For 2009 to 2012, the theory test categories are as previously stated, plus driver certificate of professional competence tests. The 2012/13 revenue figures are not yet available and have therefore been excluded.

0300 Numbers

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department has examined the possibility of changing the 0845 numbers to the new 0300 numbers, as used by the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development. (AQW 19526/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Planning have provided a 0300 number for the public to contact them through NI Direct since January 2012.

The Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) uses 0845 numbers for both its telephone booking facility and customer services enquiry line. The Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) provides an 0845 number for use by the public as a general contact point.

The DVA telephone booking facility is a contracted out service, with the current contract due for renewal in March 2014, and the Agency intends to consider the option of moving to a 0300 number when the contract is retendered.

Consideration has previously been given to the use of 0300 numbers for the customer services enquiry line. Owing to uncertainty around the future of vehicle licensing services in Northern Ireland, however, a decision has been made to remain with the 0845 number in the meantime.

NIEA has undertaken to consider the comparative costs and benefits of the use of 0845 and 0300 numbers.

Wind Turbines

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment what is the average time taken in the Eastern Divison to complete the planning process for micro wind turbine applications of 5kw or less. (AQW 19591/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The information provided in planning applications for wind turbines does not always include the output level of the proposed turbine. It is therefore not possible from the information held on the database to provide validated statistical information in relation to this request.

However, if clarification could be provided on the specific District Council Areas the question is referring to and the timeframe the request covers, e.g. 1 year, 5 years etc. information could be provided on the average time taken to complete the planning process for single wind turbines.

Planning Applications: West Tyrone

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of the Environment why Planning applications for rural dwellings near wind farms in West Tyrone, which far exceed the 500 metre distance stated in the supplementary guidance, are being refused. (AQW 19607/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I can confirm that planning applications for new rural dwellings near wind farms in west Tyrone, which are outside the 500metre distance stated in the supplementary guidance of Planning Policy Statement 18, are not being refused permission because of the impact of the turbines upon the new dwellings. New dwellings in the countryside are however required to comply with the requirements of policy PPS 21, Sustainable development in the Countryside. In some cases permission is refused as proposals do not meet these requirements.

Waste Management Groups

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the current position of the Waste Management Groups. (AQW 19631/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Much of the detailed information pertaining to the waste infrastructure procurements is subject to restrictions imposed by public procurement law and commercial confidentiality requirements. However, I can provide the following summary of the current position of each project.

The North West Region Waste Management Group (NWRWMG) procurement is to provide Mechanical Biological Treatment (MBT) (140,000 tonnes capacity) and a Gasification plant (80,000 tonnes capacity).

At its meeting on 13 December 2012 the Executive agreed the provision of financial support to the NWRWMG to a maximum of £35 million over fourteen years. This commitment would materialise once the proposed waste infrastructure has been constructed and is operational, which NWRWMG has forecast will happen during 2015/16, subject to council ratification.

Following approval of the NWRWMG Appointment Business Case for its project by DOE and DFP, the members of its Joint Committee decided at their meeting on 19 December to recommend the appointment of a Preferred Bidder to deliver new waste infrastructure for the north-west region to their constituent councils for their consideration. That recommendation is currently progressing through the democratic cycle of council meetings.

On 15 October 2012, SWaMP2008 announced the termination of its long-term waste infrastructure procurement following its decision on the basis of legal advice not to contest a challenge to the legality of its bidder consortium. The Department has requested a Post Project Evaluation from SWaMP2008.

The arc21 procurement involves a two stage process with up front Mechanical Biological Treatment (240,000 tonnes capacity) of Municipal Solid Waste to gain additional recyclate and biologically treat the remaining material to produce a fuel for combustion in a second stage conventional Energy from Waste facility (210,000 tonnes capacity).

arc21 advises that it is in the latter stages of dialogue with its remaining bidder and is working through a range of procurement issues, including affordability, land assembly and planning and permitting. It had previously forecast appointment of a Preferred Bidder in February 2013 but does not now expect that to happen until September 2013.

Waste Management Groups

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of the Environment when funding for the Waste Management Groups will expire. (AQW 19632/11-15)

Mr Attwood: All three Waste Management Groups (WMGs) were formally notified in due time that pre-contract financial support under the Strategic Waste Infrastructure Programme would cease on 31 March 2013, by which time the three WMGs had previously forecast that they would reach financial close. The WMGs were advised at the same time that they should revert to their constituent councils should they require any additional funding to reach financial close in the event of their incurring further slippage beyond 31 March 2013.

ARC21

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the procurement process for ARC21. (AQW 19633/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Much of the detailed information pertaining to the waste infrastructure procurements is subject to restrictions imposed by public procurement law and commercial confidentiality requirements.

The procurement process for the Waste Infrastructure Programme has not changed since the introduction of the Strategic Waste Infrastructure Programme in 2008. The procurement process is a competitive dialogue.

arc21 has advised that the procurement involves a two stage process with up front Mechanical Biological Treatment (240,000 tonnes capacity) of Municipal Solid Waste to gain additional recyclate and biologically treat the remaining material to produce a fuel for combustion in a second stage conventional Energy from Waste facility (210,000 tonnes capacity).

arc21 advises that it is in the latter stages of dialogue with its remaining bidder and is working through a range of procurement issues, including affordability, land assembly and planning and permitting. It had previously forecast appointment of a Preferred Bidder in February 2013 but does not now expect that to happen until September 2013.

Taxi Operator Licensing

Mr Storey asked the Minister of the Environment what steps his Department takes against taxi operators who are found not to have a taxi operator licence.

(AQW 19644/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Since the introduction of taxi operator licensing on 1 September 2012, my Department's approach has been aimed primarily at raising awareness of the relevant legal requirements and at assisting operators to become compliant. This has been done mainly by the Driver & Vehicle Agency's enforcement staff, who have been undertaking a series of educational visits to taxi depots and carrying out spot checks on vehicles and drivers at the roadside. During premises visits, operators have received information leaflets and copies of the new taxi operator handbook, which details the requirements and the standards the Department expects of licence holders.

These efforts to promote understanding and awareness will continue. However, where there is evidence that an operator is failing to take the necessary steps to meet legal requirements, appropriate enforcement action is being taken, and to date a number of unlicensed operators have been reported with a view to prosecution.

Enforcement officers have now started a further programme of more rigorous compliance audits at taxi operators' premises, and in these cases enforcement notices will be issued, where required, specifying any remedial action to be taken to ensure compliance, and these will be followed up as necessary with appropriate enforcement action. Of course, I have instructed enforcement to be proportionate and to recognise the difficult trading/economic circumstances that prevail.

Taxi Operator Licensing

Mr Storey asked the Minister of the Environment how many people have been prosecuted for operating a taxi without a valid licence, since the introduction of the taxi operator licence.

(AQW 19645/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Since the introduction of taxi operator licensing on 1 September 2012, a number of taxi operators have been detected operating without operators' licence. These cases are still to progress through the court system.

Taxi Operator Licensing

Mr Storey asked the Minister of the Environment what financial impact the introduction of the taxi operator licence has had on the taxi industry.

(AQW 19646/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Taxi operator licensing was introduced in September 2012. To help taxi operators with the cost of obtaining an operator licence, the initial application fee was discounted from £140 to £40 for all applications received within the first two months of the regulations being introduced.

While licensing costs depend on the number of vehicles affiliated to an operator, the cost to an operator with a single taxi, for example, with a five-year licence, is £63 per year.

Taxi operator licensing is one of a number of measures that I will be introducing to improve safety and accessibility, to raise service standards, to clamp down on illegal taxiing and to enable legitimate taxi operators and drivers to make a living from a re-invigorated taxi industry. This is the approach agreed and adopted by the Assembly in passing Taxi legislation. The legislation – if implemented in a proper and proportionate way – will see better customer service, better trading opportunities and better prospects for growth and jobs, particularly with tourism potential. That is why the implementation of the legislation is being managed in a phased way, listening to the traders and reducing upfront costs.

Community Transport: Driving Licence Arrangements

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of the Environment what changes he is proposing on driving licence arrangements; and what impact these changes will have on drivers who volunteer on community transport programmes. (AQW 19649/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Motor Vehicles (Driving Licences) Regulations (NI) 1996 set out the requirements to be met by volunteer drivers when driving minibuses. My Department is not proposing to make any changes to these Regulations.

My Department is in the process of reviewing the way in which bus operators in Northern Ireland are licensed with a view to creating a modern, fair and safe regime in which bus services are delivered. This will not change the driving licence requirements for volunteer drivers who will be able to continue to volunteer on community transport programmes.

DVLA Coleraine

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of the Environment what action his Department is taking to protect Driver and Vehicle Licensing Authority jobs in Coleraine.

(AQW 19678/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Since June 2011, I have been lobbying Ministers at Westminster about the current threat to jobs in Coleraine arising from the proposals by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency for the centralisation of vehicle licensing services in Swansea, and encouraging public representatives from right across the political spectrum to do likewise. I have made the argument for the retention of jobs on an consistent basis, preparing and presenting a dossier to London on the reasons why jobs should be retained (etc.).

I shall also be meeting with Stephen Hammond, Parliamentary Under Secretary of State at the Department for Transport, in London on 5 March 2013 to discuss the matter further, and at that meeting I intend to again make the case for the retention of vehicle licensing services, and the associated jobs, in Northern Ireland.

Historic Monuments in County Tyrone

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of the Environment (i) to list the buildings, monuments or structures in County Tyrone which are under public care; (ii) to detail the annual budget allocated to maintaining these structures; and (iii) to outline the criteria for inclusion on this list.

(AQW 19692/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Details of each element of your question are laid out in the attached Annexes, and provide the current overview of information held by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA), within this Department, in respect buildings, monuments or structures that are described and managed as historic monuments in County Tyrone.

The NIEA holds primary records for those historic monuments that it owns or manages in the County. These are often described as 'State Care Monuments'. NIEA also has details about ownership of sites, not in its ownership or management, but which have been protected as Scheduled Monuments. Some of these are in the ownership of local councils, and in that context they could be described as being in public care. A list of all State Care Monuments managed by the Department of the Environment, and an indicative list of Scheduled Monuments in the ownership of local councils in Tyrone, is attached at Annex 1. There are likely to be many more historic monuments in the county that are owned or managed by other government departments, agencies or the local authorities. However, unless these sites have special statutory protections, we cannot say how many, overall, are in public care. Further, as we do not have the full extent of other departments' or agencies' landholdings, we cannot give a definitive list of, for example, those historic monuments that are on land presently used by Forrest Service or local schools.

Costs associated with the maintenance of these sites are usually allocated according to conservation and maintenance need; there is no fixed budget for sites in County Tyrone, and the conservation and maintenance need is considered against the other sites across the North. Routine costs associated with the management of State Care Monuments are usually split between two functional units in the NIEA. Over the past three years, an average of approximately £13k has been spent on the routine management (litter collection, maintenance of boundaries), spread across the 44 State Care Monuments in Tyrone. Not every site has required expenditure, and the condition of the sites is monitored by staff through routine site inspection. During the current financial year we have undertaken conservation work, through our craft workforce, at Benburb Castle, Castle Caulfield, Newtownstewart Castle and Mountjoy Castle. The works at these sites variously related to increasing public access, addressing health and safety concerns, and establishing future conservation needs.

At present there is no active programme of selection of sites to be brought into public ownership and presentation. Non-statutory criteria for the identification of sites for special statutory protection as Scheduled Monuments have been published as Annex B of Planning Policy Statement 6: Planning, Archaeology and the Built Heritage. Attached to Annex 2 of this letter is an overview of the process by which some of our most important monuments have come into State care. As you will see, over the past 140 years or so, this department has accumulated a significant number of historic monuments for a wide variety of reasons.

Looking forward, I have asked officials to progress the development of proposals for the future presentation of one of the most important historic monuments in the North of Ireland: Tullaghoge Fort. Work is currently under way to complete a significant transfer of land at Tullaghoge from the Department for Agriculture and Rural Development to the Department of the Environment. In partnership with the local council, we are looking forward to presenting this hidden jewel to the wider public. This site has the potential to be a key 'heritage hub' in Mid-Ulster, and is of great significant in the history of these islands. The lands involved comprise a mix of open pasture and historic woodland, as well as the Fort itself. Planning is at an early stage, but there is an obvious need at this site for improved visitor infrastructure. I have been advised by officials that emerging findings from a new feasibility assessment of the site should become available in April 2013.

Annex 2

Overview of how buildings, monuments or structures are brought into public care as State Care Monuments

A State Care Monument is a site of archaeological interest under the management of the Department of the Environment (Northern Ireland), as per Articles 13 to 18 of the Historic Monuments and Archaeological Objects (Northern Ireland) Order 1995. This management can be by virtue of direct ownership or lease of a site or through guardianship, whereby the owner retains tenure but site management is under the control of the Department for public benefit.

There are 189 individual and groups of State Care Monuments in Northern Ireland, of which 40 are located in County Tyrone.

The first monuments were acquired by the State after the disestablishment of the Church of Ireland in 1869 when a number of ecclesiastical structures in a ruinous state but worthy of preservation were place under Government protection in 1880. Subsequently, the majority of State Care Monuments in Northern Ireland have been placed under State management or ownership by virtue of a succession of historic monuments legislation, from Ancient Monuments Protection Act, 1882 through to the current Historic Monuments and Archaeological Objects (Northern Ireland) Order 1995. These acquisitions have been through purchase, gift, lease or quardianship agreements.

A significant number of monuments were acquired as a result of major administrative change in the early 1970's. As the county councils were abolished, 44 monuments were statutorily transferred from the county councils to State ownership by the Historic Monument (Transfer) Order (Northern Ireland) 1973. Most of these sites lacked a defined boundary and had no public access arrangements at the time of the transfer and have posed considerable issues to the Department of the Environment and its predecessors since their acquisition. County Tyrone contained a disproportionately high number of such monuments with 20 of the 44 transferred monuments located within the county.

The criteria for future acquisition have not been revisited for some time. Earlier criteria for acquisition of additional State Care Monuments has been discussed, and agreed, in several policy papers presented to the Historic Monuments Council the most recent of which was presented to the Environment and Heritage Service Board in 1998 and were identified as:

- Quality the significance, interest and complexity of the site.
- Period all of the major archaeological and historical epochs require representation. Some periods have fewer monuments, so rarity becomes a factor.
- Type clearly the collection of sites in State Care should contain representatives of most known types of historic monuments. Again, rarity can be a factor.
- Geographical spread we endeavour to maintain a roughly even geographical spread of state Care Monuments throughout Northern Ireland. This is not easy to achieve because some areas have few monuments while others have a wealth of known remains. There are distinct concentrations of some types of monuments in Northern Ireland, with distributions determined by historic, environmental and other reasons.

The Protocol for the Care of the Government Historic Estate, published in 2012 by the Department of the Environment, is currently being rolled out and Departments are required to provide a list of all their heritage assets by June 2013.

Non-farming Rural Dwellers

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of the Environment how his Department is making it easier for non-farming rural dwellers to build a home and live in the countryside.

(AQW 19700/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The policies that accommodate non-farming rural dwellers who wish to build a home and live in the countryside are contained in Planning Policy Statement 21 which deals with sustainable development in the countryside. It contains considerable development opportunities for non-farmers by providing opportunities for:

- replacement dwellings;
- the conversion and reuse of non-residential buildings as dwellings;
- new dwellings within an existing cluster or ribbon of buildings;

- social and affordable housing schemes;
- development within designated Dispersed Rural Communities; and
- a dwelling to meet compelling personal and domestic circumstances

You will also be aware of my on-going review into the operation of PPS21. Whilst not a fundamental review of its policies, I have been considering the impact of the policy on all those seeking to build a home and live in the countryside, including non-farming families.

In recognition of the continued interest in this issue I met with former members of the Independent Working Group established by the previous Executive to examine the issue of non-farming rural dwellers. I have also met with MLAs, the Ulster Farmers Union, the DARD Minister, rural interest groups and others. The range of views expressed to me to date has been taken into account in considering how PPS 21 is working in practice.

The review into the operation of PPS21 has been lengthy. This has been by design. The reason for this is to 'in real time' and 'in the real world' identify where there were inconsistencies of interpretation or a proper need for flexibility of interpretation. This means that the review has been a working rolling review to aid better practice.

I remain committed to making a statement to the Assembly with the conclusions of the operational review to date. However, I also intend to continue to keep the operation of PPS21 under review going forward. This approach – ongoing review, preassessment of applications, training to ensure consistency, proper interpretation to enable proper development – all contribute to the widely agreed view that PPS21 is working better today than 18 months ago.

Recycling: Unusable Material

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment whether any study comparable to the Quality Action Plan which was conducted by the Department of the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, in respect of the amount of collected recycling material which is unusable, has been conducted in Northern Ireland; and with what result. (AQW 19725/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Defra Quality Action Plan sets out measures aimed to support a market environment which is capable of promoting high quality recycling and delivering recyclates of sufficient quality to meet the standards of the relevant recycling sectors.

In Northern Ireland we intend to consult on a range of actions to improve and maintain the quality of recyclable materials collected, sorted and presented to the market through a Materials Recycling Facilities (MRF) Code of Practice. There will be proposals to address contamination at the point of collection, introduce mandatory and transparent material quality sampling, carry out a benchmarking exercise on the quality of source segregated materials and introduce a recyclate quality grading system.

The Department acknowledges that the introduction of these new measures would, in particular, have implications for the operators of MRFs, and accordingly a partial Business and Regulatory Impact Assessment will be completed. Stakeholder comments will also be invited.

Even though this is a plan for Northern Ireland we will be working within the same EU legislative framework as England, Wales and Scotland who are responsible for their own waste policies and delivery. However, all four administrations work closely together on the issue of quality and we will take forward this policy in partnership with them.

Driving Test

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of the Environment to outline (i) the planned changes to the driving test in 2013; and (ii) the rationale for these changes.

(AQW 19734/11-15)

Mr Attwood: My Department has already made changes to the driving test this year through the transposition of the 3rd EU Directive on driving licences (Directive 2006/126/EC) into Northern Ireland law on 19 January 2013. The Directive, which is intended to harmonise common standards for driver training, testing and licensing regimes across the EU, introduced changes to training and testing and the various licence categories for motorcycles and mopeds. In addition to changes affecting motorcycles and mopeds the minimum age for non-professional bus drivers was increased from 21 to 24 and changes were made to the rules around the maximum weights of trailers allowed to be towed by cars and small vans.

Further changes are planned, arising from Directive 2012/36/EU (the Amending Directive), which must be implemented by 31 December 2013. Currently, all vehicles used for driving tests must meet minimum standards, commonly known as "minimum test vehicle standards" which are set out in European and UK legislation. The Directive makes changes to those standards for motorcycles, lorries and buses.

While I have no further plans to make changes to the driving test in 2013, I do intend to introduce a Road Traffic (Amendment) Bill to the Assembly, subject to Executive agreement, by April this year which will have implications for training and testing next year.

The Bill will include the planned introduction of a system of Graduated Driver Licensing (GDL), affecting new drivers, which will include changes to driver training and testing and the way drivers gain experience once they pass their practical test. The rationale for these changes is to reduce the rate at which new drivers, particularly young new drivers, are killed and seriously injured, and at which they kill and seriously injure other road users. Depending on legislative progress, operational changes will begin to be seen around April 2014.

The GDL measures include:

- Reducing the age at which young people can start to learn to drive or ride (i.e. obtain a provisional licence) from 17 years of age to 16½.
- Introducing a mandatory 12 month minimum learning period.
- Requiring completion of a 'Learning to Drive' syllabus evidenced by a compulsory student logbook.
- Removing the 45mph speed restriction on learner and restricted drivers and riders, allowing changes to be made to the driving test to include driving on a wider range of roads at up to the posted limits.
- Allowing learner drivers to take lessons on motorways.
- Introducing restrictions on carrying passengers in the six months after a young new driver has passed the test and received a full licence.
- Replacing the current 12 month restricted period by a two year 'new driver' period, during which the new young driver will be subject to a lower drink drive limit and, under the New Drivers Order, will continue to risk revocation of their licence if they accumulate six or more penalty points.
- Replacing R plates by N (for 'New' driver/rider) plates which will have to be carried for two years.
- Introducing remedial courses for new drivers at risk of having their licence revoked because they have accumulated six or more penalty points.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Carlingford Lough Bridge

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, in regard to the proposed expenditure of Interreg funds for a bridge over Carlingford Lough, whether (i) the lough is a navigable tidal waterway; (ii) it is used by fishermen to access the mussel beds that lie on the Northern Ireland side; (iii) the proposed bridge will obstruct existing access for fishermen, by virtue of the design of the bridge and it only being capable of opening on 48 hours notice; (iv) the Lough's ancient navigable status will be diminished; (v) any such interference with ancient navigable status requires extinguishment or alteration by statute; and (vi) the necessary legislative steps have been taken, to make lawful the development of a bridge which obstructs a navigable tidal waterway.

(AQW 17378/11-15)

Mr Wilson (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): (i) the Newry River, in the vicinity of the proposed bridge, is understood to be a navigable tidal waterway.

- (ii) Mussel beds have been accessed by fishermen on a very ad hoc basis when a worthwhile yield could be obtained. This depends on natural spat fall and environmental conditions. The Mussels (Prohibition of Fishing) Regulations (NI) 2013 came into operation on 8th February 2013. The Regulations revoke and re-enact with amendments, the Mussels (Prohibition of Fishing) Regulations (NI) 1999 and provide DARD with a mechanism to manage and regulate the exploitation of the local mussel seed resource. It shall be an offence to fish for or have on board mussels, otherwise than for direct human consumption, except under the authority of a fish culture licence or a permit granted under sections 11and 14 respectively of the Fisheries Act (NI) 1966 or a seed mussel licence granted under section 4 of the Sea Fish (Conservation) Act 1967.
- (iii) Fishing vessels known as 'half-deckers' have fished for mussels in Carlingford Lough. Access to fisheries should be a consideration in design and operation of a proposed bridge.
- (iv) & (v) An opening section in the proposed bridge would provide a 20 metre wide channel through which vessels may pass without an overhead obstruction when the bridge is closed to road traffic and open for navigation, otherwise the bridge will introduce an overhead obstruction to navigation. Appropriate arrangements, for example a notice period would be required in relation to opening the bridge for navigation.

As a general principle, obstruction or extinguishment of public rights of navigation requires legislation. The extent, to which any public rights of navigation in Northern Ireland may be obstructed, by the proposed bridge, is being taken account of as part of a detailed consideration of the proposed design.

(vi)Where a person other than DRD proposes to construct a bridge over navigable waters in circumstances to which Article 4 of the Roads (NI) Order 1993 applies, DRD must seek to make an Order under that Order and in accordance with Schedule 8 to the Roads (NI) Order 1993.

Civil Law Reform

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what new legislation is planned under civil law reform. (AQW 19407/11-15)

Mr Wilson: I am assuming that the reference is to primary legislation which my Department will be bringing forward, rather than to general civil law initiatives.

At present work is ongoing on two Bills. One which will deal with legal complaints and regulation and the other which will give effect to the Northern Ireland Law Commission's recommendations with regard to the reform of land law.

Cancer Deaths

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many deaths in 2011 had a primary cause of (i) breast cancer; and (ii) prostate cancer.

(AQW 19648/11-15)

Mr Wilson: In Northern Ireland in 2011, there were 342 deaths registered where the primary cause of death was malignant neoplasm of the breast.1

In Northern Ireland in 2011, there were 233 deaths registered where the primary cause of death was malignant neoplasm of the prostate.2

Peace III Programme Monitoring Committee

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline the rationale for the establishment of the Peace III Programme Monitoring Committee, particularly in relation to monitoring the effectiveness and quality of the implementation of the programme.

(AQW 19651/11-15)

Mr Wilson: EU Regulations require the establishment of Monitoring Committees to oversee the implementation of Structural Fund Programmes.

The role of the Monitoring Committee in relation to monitoring the effectiveness and quality of programme implementation derives from Articles 65 and 66 of Regulation EC (No) 1083/2006.

Peace III Programme Monitoring Committee

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel who is the Chairperson of the Peace III Programme Monitoring Committee; and whether there was a conflict of interest identified in relation to monitoring the effectiveness and quality of the implementation of the programme.

(AQW 19652/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The PEACE III Programme Monitoring Committee is chaired by the Chief Executive of the Special EU Programmes Body (SEUPB), the programme's Managing Authority.

This arrangement is in line with Article 64 of European Council Regulation EC (No) 1083/2006, which states that the Monitoring Committee shall be chaired by a representative of the Member State or the Managing Authority, and does not constitute a conflict of interest. The role of the Chair is primarily to act as a facilitator for committee business.

It is the role of the Monitoring Committee to satisfy itself as to the effectiveness and quality of programme implementation. The Committee operates on a principle of partnership with members drawn from a wide range of sectoral interests. Membership includes representatives from the two Member States, local government, business, trade unions, and the voluntary and community, agri-rural, environment and equality sectors.

Peace III Programme Monitoring Committee

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to identify the members of the Peace III Programme Monitoring Committee.

(AQW 19653/11-15)

Net Fiscal Balance Report: Inheritance Tax

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether there are any distinctions between the methodology employed by his officials to identify the out-turn of the proportion of inheritance tax within the Net Fiscal Balance Report published in November 2012 and the new Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland methodology used within the Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland report published in 2012. (AQW 19665/11-15)

Mr Wilson: No. As stated in Annex B of the Net Fiscal Balance Report 2009-10 and 2010-11, actual outturns for inheritance tax raised in Northern Ireland are produced by HMRC and therefore no estimation is required. Likewise, HMRC also publish this figure for Scotland.

Net Fiscal Balance Report: Stamp Duty

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether there are any distinctions between the methodology employed by his officials to identify the out-turn of the proportion of stamp duty within the Net Fiscal Balance Report published in November 2012 and the new Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland methodology used within the Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland report published in 2012.

(AQW 19666/11-15)

Mr Wilson: No

Net Fiscal Balance Report: National Insurance Contributions

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether there are any distinctions between the methodology employed by his officials to identify the out-turn of the proportion of National Insurance contributions within the Net Fiscal Balance Report published in November 2012 and the new Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland methodology used within the Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland report published in 2012.

(AQW 19668/11-15)

Mr Wilson: As stated in the Net Fiscal Balance report, the methodology applied is generally consistent with that designed to produce the Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland (GERS) report, however, there are some instances where there are minor technical variations in how certain specific elements of the individual estimates are derived.

My previous response to AQW 18239/11-15 outlined the methodology used to estimate NI's share of UK national insurance contributions revenue - which is estimated in line with the approach adopted in the GERS report.

There is a very minor technical difference with respect to the national insurance contributions (NICs) revenue estimate. Both NI's and Scotland's share is obtained from a sample of HMRC national insurance data. However, HMRC provides an overall estimate of NI's share, whereas the Scottish estimate is disaggregated by NICs employee and employer class.

I would re-iterate that the purpose of the Net Fiscal Balance Report is to provide an overview of public sector finances in Northern Ireland. It is not intended to provide an accurate estimate of individual expenditure or revenue items – many of these have been estimated, in the absence of actual regional data, on the basis of high level assumptions and apportionment factors. Rather the report provides an overall assessment of Northern Ireland's aggregate fiscal position, and as such, the report indicates that individual estimates should be interpreted with caution. At an aggregate level the minor technical variations referred to above are not considered to have any material bearing on the Northern Ireland's net fiscal balance position.

NICS: Business Travel

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail in relation to a part-funded government post, which includes extensive travel in which mileage has been paid at 40p per mile, (i) why there is a threshold of 10000 miles at 40p after which all mileage is taxed; (ii) whether this constitutes discrimination, either directly or indirectly, of PAYE employees due to the nature of their job entailing extensive mileage to complete their job; and (iii) whether such employees are expected to cover the additional cost at their own expense.

(AQW 19669/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The NICS policy relating to expenses is applicable to NICS staff only and all reimbursement of business mileage is in accordance with HMRC rules. Reimbursement to non NICS staff of business mileage is a matter for the respective employing organisation(s).

- (i) The NICS policy to reimburse business travel at 45p per mile up to the 10,000 mile threshold in any financial year is in line with HMRC guidance. Reimbursement of all business mileage above the 10,000 mile threshold is payable at 25p per mile. All payments are non taxable.
- (ii) I am unable to comment on this as the NICS follows HMRC guidance.
- (iii) If due to the application of the rules, officers can demonstrate that they are seriously out of pocket, consideration will be given to payment of actual vouched expenditure.

Net Fiscal Balance Report: VAT

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether there are any distinctions between the methodology employed by his officials to identify the out-turn of the proportion of VAT within the Net Fiscal Balance Report published in November 2012 and the new Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland methodology used within the Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland report published in 2012.

(AQW 19696/11-15)

Mr Wilson: As stated in the Net Fiscal Balance report, the methodology applied is generally consistent with that designed to produce the Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland (GERS) report, however, there are some instances where there are minor technical variations in how certain specific elements of the individual estimates are derived.

My previous response to AQW 18240/11-15 outlined the methodology used to estimate NI's share of UK VAT revenue - which is estimated in line with the approach adopted in the GERS report.

There is a minor technical difference with respect to the VAT refunds element of the overall VAT revenue estimate, where my department's report apportions this on the basis of NI's share of UK household VAT expenditure. GERS apportions VAT refunds mainly on the basis of Scotland's share of UK government expenditure on certain VAT-refundable elements of expenditure.

I would re-iterate that the purpose of the Net Fiscal Balance Report is to provide an overview of public sector finances in Northern Ireland. It is not intended to provide an accurate estimate of individual expenditure or revenue items – many of these have been estimated, in the absence of actual regional data, on the basis of high level assumptions and apportionment factors. Rather the report provides an overall assessment of Northern Ireland's aggregate fiscal position, and as such, the report indicates that individual estimates should be interpreted with caution. At an aggregate level the minor technical variations referred to above are not considered to have any material bearing on the Northern Ireland's net fiscal balance position.

Net Fiscal Balance Report: Tobacco Duty

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether there are any distinctions between the methodology employed by his officials to identify the out-turn of the proportion of tobacco duty within the Net Fiscal Balance Report published in November 2012 and the new Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland methodology used within the Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland report published in 2012.

Mr Wilson: No.

(AQW 19697/11-15)

Net Fiscal Balance Report: Alcohol Duty

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether there are any distinctions between the methodology employed by his officials to identify the out-turn of the proportion of alcohol duty within the Net Fiscal Balance Report published in November 2012 and the new Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland methodology used within the Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland report published in 2012. (AQW 19698/11-15)

Mr Wilson: No.

Narrow Water Bridge

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for her assessment of the impact of the construction of the Narrow Water bridge for the economy and tourism sector in South Down. (AQO 3446/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The Narrow Water Bridge project is primarily an infrastructure project with the aims of enhancing connectivity and a reduction in travel times. Tourism benefits associated with the project are deemed secondary.

The project is currently being critically reviewed by DFP and all benefits associated with the project will be considered in this process.

NICS: Redundancies

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of civil servants who have (i) been made redundant; and (ii) involuntarily lost their jobs in each year since the implementation of the 2011-15 budget. (AQW 19713/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The number of civil servants who have (i) been made redundant; and (ii) involuntarily lost their jobs in each year since the implementation of the 2011- 15 budget is provided in the table below:

	2011/12	2012 – to date
(i) number made redundant (voluntary)	151	137
(ii) number involuntarily lost their jobs (compulsory)	Nil	Nil

Net Fiscal Balance Report: Betting and Gambling Duty

Mr Mitchel McLaughlin asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether there are any distinctions between the methodology employed by his officials to identify the out-turn of the proportion of betting and gambling duty in the Net Fiscal Balance Report published in November 2012 and the new Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland methodology used in the Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland report published in 2012.

(AQW 19717/11-15)

Mr Wilson: No.

Net Fiscal Balance Report: Air Passenger Duty

Mr Mitchel McLaughlin asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether there are any distinctions between the methodology employed by his officials to identify the out-turn of the proportion of Air Passenger Duty in the Net Fiscal Balance Report published in November 2012 and the new Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland methodology used in the Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland report published in 2012. (AQW 19718/11-15)

Mr Wilson: No.

Net Fiscal Balance Report: Insurance Premium Tax

Mr Mitchel McLaughlin asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether there are any distinctions between the methodology employed by his officials to identify the out-turn of the proportion of Insurance Premium Tax in the Net Fiscal Balance Report published in November 2012 and the new Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland methodology used in the Government Expenditure and Revenue Scotland report published in 2012. (AQW 19719/11-15)

Mr Wilson: No.

Cross-border Co-operation

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to publish the paper he referred to in the Estimates debate on 11 February 2012 which shows that cross-border co-operation is costing Northern Ireland £11.2m per annum. (AQW 19724/11-15)

Mr Wilson: I commissioned, as part of ongoing Budget Review Group work, an assessment of the costs and benefits accruing from cross-border co-operation. The summary of this work which concluded in July 2012 has been placed in the Assembly Library.

Redundancies: East Belfast

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many confirmed redundancies there were in East Belfast in 2012

(AQW 19766/11-15)

Mr Wilson: Table 1 below details the number of confirmed redundancies in the Belfast East Parliamentary Constituency Area (PCA) and Northern Ireland as a whole in 2012.

Please note that under the Employment Rights (Northern Ireland) Order 1996 (amended 8 October 2006) companies are only legally required to provide notification of impending redundancies of 20 or more employees. Also, redundancies do not necessarily equate to job losses, for example, employees who do not qualify for a redundancy package, those on temporary contracts, will not be incorporated into the redundancy figures.

Table 1: Confirmed Redundancies for Belfast East PCA and N. Ireland in 2012

	2012*
Belfast East PCA	110
NI Total	3,349

DFP: Whistleblowing Arrangements

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel (i) what policies are in place to deal with allegations of impropriety made by whistle blowers; and (ii) what forensic audit techniques are in place to ensure investigations are thorough and conclusive.

(AQW 19771/11-15)

Mr Wilson: In line with good practice, my Department has whistleblowing arrangements in place which can be used to raise concerns about alleged wrongdoing or malpractice of any kind in a safe and acceptable way.

The arrangements together with the DFP Whistleblowing Policy are available on the departmental website setting out the principles of safety, confidentiality and anonymity together with the procedures and key contacts for reporting matters of concern and how the Department will deal with whistleblowing allegations.

Depending on the nature of any concerns raised, the DFP Anti-Fraud Policy and Fraud Response Plan may be invoked. This includes the scope for formal investigation and the use of Forensic Accountants/Engineers. In the event of forensic audit techniques being required, DFP will assess the nature of the incident, consider the internal capabilities available and supplement with external expertise as necessary.

Small Business Rate Relief

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many companies have (i) applied for; and (ii) been granted small businesses rate relief in North Down since the scheme began.

(AQW 19800/11-15)

Mr Wilson: There is no application procedure for Small Business Rate Relief. Relief is applied automatically by Land & Property Services to all businesses that qualify.

Information on the number of companies that have been granted Small Business Rate Relief since the scheme began is not available at constituency level as data is collated at district council and ward level only. As at 31st January 2013, 1,168 non-domestic properties within the Ards Council area and 941 non-domestic properties within the North Down Council area have benefited from Small Business Rate Relief since the scheme commenced in April 2010.

Teachers: Principles and Vice-principals Redundancy Scheme

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he has received an outline case from the Department of Education regarding a proposed redundancy or enhancement package for Vice-Principals and Principals. (AQW 19843/11-15)

Mr Wilson: To date, my department has not received an outline case from the Department of Education regarding a proposed redundancy or enhancement package for Vice-Principals and Principals.

Departmental Limit on Expenditure

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what is the current limit in expenditure by a Department on (i) capital; and (ii) revenue expenditure before monies have to be surrendered to a Monitoring Round for re-allocation. (AQW 19868/11-15)

Mr Wilson: Departments are required to surrender reduced requirements for reallocation through the Executive's monitoring rounds. Reduced requirements are amounts arising from issues such as increased receipts (including unplanned asset sales); services that require less funding than the existing budget provision; and savings from pay or price assumptions.

To provide Ministers with some flexibility in terms of managing their own budgets and incentivise additional asset sales, departments are allowed to retain reduced requirements up to a limit of £1 million. This limit applies equally to capital and resource expenditure. Departments can therefore reallocate internally easements below £1 million in value as long as they are reallocated within the same category of expenditure (i.e. a capital reduced requirement must be reallocated to a capital project).

Chancellor's Autumn Statement: Barnett Consequentials

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what are the Barnett Consequentials, or other budgetary implications for Northern Ireland, arising from the Chancellor's Autumn Statement. (AQW 19915/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The table below shows the total RDEL and CDEL Barnett consequentials resulting from the Chancellor's Autumn Statement. The consequentials are unhypothecated with the exception of £3.1m capital in 2013-14 and £8.2m capital in 2014-15 which must be used on loan and equity financial transactions.

Table: 2012 Autumn Statement Barnett Allocations for Northern Ireland

£ millions	2013-14	2014-15
RDEL	2.4	-34.3
CDEL	53.7	76.9

The additional resources should be welcomed, in particular the CDEL additions over the next two years.

In addition to the Barnett consequentials outlined above, I have negotiated a deferment of some £50 million RRI borrowing from 2012-13 to 2014-15 in relation to the funding for the A5 road scheme. As you will be aware the A5 project is currently subject to legal challenge and decisions on profiling of spend cannot be taken by the DRD Minister until the outcome of that legal challenge is known.

This deferment of RRI borrowing allows the Executive to now accommodate the changing profile of A5 spend.

Rates: Exemption for Charities

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 19346/11-15, what number of retail outlets the (i) 4.1 percent in 2010; and (ii) 4.6 percent in 2012 represents.

(AQW 20016/11-15)

Mr Wilson: As at the end of March 2010 (the earliest year for which comparable information is available) the number of retail outlets that were occupied and were getting a rating exemption as a result of being a charity was 646. As at the end of March 2012 the equivalent figure was 718.

Departments: Underspend

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he is aware of any projected underspend by Departments for this financial year; and what actions he has taken to address this issue. (AQW 20026/11-15)

Mr Wilson: Each month my department commissions a Forecast Outturn return from all NI departments requesting the expenditure incurred to date and a forecast of spend for the remainder of the year.

The most recent return was received on 8 February 2013 and showed departments forecasting near to full spend for this financial year in non ring-fenced resource DEL. Within capital DEL all departments forecast near to full spend with the exception of DRD on the A5 project and DOJ on the Integrated Training College. The underspends reported on these 2 projects are subject to separate arrangements with HM Treasury and this funding is not available for general reallocation nor will it be lost to NI.

The reported forecast information to date therefore does not require any intervention at this stage however I will continue to monitor this situation and will take action, if required, to ensure that no resources are lost to NI. You will be aware that the Spring Supplementary Estimates included some headroom to allow for such circumstances.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Health and Social Care Trusts: Locum Consultants

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much each Health and Social Care Trust spent on locum consultants, in each of the last three years. (AQW 19331/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): The spend on locum consultants in Health and Social Care Trusts in each of the last three years is set out below:

Year	Belfast HSC Trust <sup>1</sup>	Northern HSC Trust <sup>2</sup>	Southern HSC Trust	South-Eastern HSC Trust	Western HSC Trust
2009/2010	£7,500,000	£2,800,000	£3,424,244	£1,121,000	£2,975,000
2010/2011	£7,100,000	£1,100,000	£1,993,277	£571,000	£4,571,000
2011/2012	£10,300,000	£982,000	£1,337,702	£709,000	£2,989,000

- Belfast HSC Trusts systems cannot isolate expenditure on Agency employed locum consultants from expenditure on other Agency employed medical locums. Thus, the figures for Belfast HSC Trust include expenditure in respect of Agency locum junior and middle-ranking doctors.
- 2 Northern HSC Trusts systems isolate expenditure on Agency employed consultants, but do not isolate expenditure on internal locums from normal consultant payroll. Where possible, the Trust will recruit staff directly under Trust terms and conditions as temporary employees to fill the vacancies

Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children: Consultation Period

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what impact the consultation period on paediatric services at the Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children will have on the pressures facing parents of children supported by the service during this time.[R]

(AQW 19462/11-15)

Mr Poots: I assume that Mr Swann is asking about the Health and Social Care Board's consultation on the future commissioning of Paediatric Cardiac Surgery (PCCS) and Interventional Cardiology for the population of Northern Ireland. I have repeatedly stated that my ultimate aim is to ensure a safe and sustainable service for children from Northern Ireland and I reiterate my assurance to parents that the future service model for Paediatric Cardiac Surgery will prioritise the needs of their children. I fully appreciate that parents and children living with congenital cardiac problems may be anxious about any changes in the service and how these might impact on the care provided to them. However, I trust that they will understand why the consultation on the future of this service was needed, the importance which I attach to the input from parents and their representatives to the consultation and my commitment to reach a decision as soon as possible on the future commissioning of this service.

Telemonitoring

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans are in place to introduce Telemonitoring on a wider basis, allowing more patients to benefit from the scheme. (AQW 19481/11-15)

Mr Poots: Remote monitoring is presently available to patients with respiratory, heart and diabetes long term chronic conditions and for those who have suffered a stroke. The Regional Telemonitoring NI service is delivered by TF3, a consortium of Tunstall Healthcare, Fold Telecare and S3 Group, through a contract with the five Health and Social Care Trusts. Through the contract it is planned to extend the telemonitoring service to approximately 20,000 patients by 2017. During 2012/13 it is estimated that outturn for remotely monitored telehealth services will be in the region of 300,000 monitored patient days (MPD).

During 2013/14, the delivery of telemonitoring services through the contract will widen to include both telehealth and telecare services, each with a separate delivery target set out in the Commissioning Plan Direction. The target for telehealth is 500k MPD and for telecare services is 720k MPD. This represents a significant increase on the current year.

Meat Labelling and Traceability

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) who is responsible for investigating issues related to meat packaging and queries regarding labelling and traceability; (ii) when his Department and the Food Standards Agency are informed of such investigations; (iii) what is a reasonable time scale when investigating such issues; and (iv) in addition to the recent case at Freeza Meats in Newry, how many other investigations are taking place regarding labelling and traceability. (AQW 19510/11-15)

Mr Poots:

- (i) Food Standards Agency is the central competent authority for food safety in Northern Ireland and is also responsible for policy relating to general food labelling and food standards. Day to day enforcement of food standards and food labelling are carried out by District Council Environmental Health Officers (EHOs). District Council EHOs carry out routine food standards inspections and interventions on a risk based frequency in accordance with a Framework Agreement between the District Councils and FSA in NI.
  - DARD is responsible for enforcing the Beef Labelling legislation in abattoirs and approved cutting premises, with District Councils enforcing Beef Labelling legislation at retail level and cold stores on behalf of DARD, along with general food labelling regulations on processed meat products
  - DARD is also responsible for meat hygiene official controls in approved slaughterhouses, cutting plants and game handling establishments on behalf of the FSA.
- (ii) If as a result of routine investigations the enforcement officers of the District Council identify a potential food safety incident, they are obliged to inform the Food Standards Agency in accordance with the FSA Incidents Response Protocol as soon as possible. An incident is defined as any event, where based on the information available, there are concerns about actual or suspected threats to the safety or quality of food and/or feed that could require intervention to protect consumer interests.
  - In regard to Beef Labelling legislation, the principal responsibility for compliance rests with Food Business Operators. DARD undertakes a programme of risk based inspections in abattoirs and approved cutting plants and any non-compliances observed during these inspections are followed up, and appropriate action taken as soon as possible.
- (iii) Incidents are classified as either high, medium or low based on a classification matrix set out in the protocol. All incidents are immediately acted upon by FSA and details cascaded to those required to investigate further. Timescale in relation to investigation of an incident is dependent on complexity and scale of the issue. An incident investigation will not be closed until the FSA is satisfied that all necessary action has been taken to protect consumer interests.
- (iv) The investigation concerning products held in the cold store at Freeza Meats is one strand of a wider investigation concerning labelling and traceability. The other strand of the investigation concerns the discovery of traces of pork DNA in a selection of meat pies labelled as Halal, where the affected product was manufactured by McColgan's Quality Foods in Strabane. Aside from this, there are currently no other specific investigations taking place regarding labelling and traceability in Northern Ireland.

Paediatric Cardiac Surgery

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the review of paediatric cardiac surgery provision, including the options currently under consideration for providing paediatric cardiac surgery. (AQW 19512/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) on 14 February 2013 approved a framework, or post-consultation document, for the commissioning of paediatric cardiac surgery and interventional cardiology for children in Northern Ireland.

The framework has been submitted to my Department for my consideration. It is my intention to make a decision on the framework shortly. Subject to my approval the framework will then be applied by the HSCB to each of the options outlined in the document, with the aim of identifying a preferred way forward for the provision of services for children with heart disease in Northern Ireland. The preferred way forward will then be submitted to me for consideration and I am aiming to make my final decision on the future arrangements for this service within the coming months.

The post consultation document is available on the HSC Board website:

Paediatric Cardiac Care

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the (i) staffing; and (ii) financial resources which were made available for paediatric cardiac care in each of the last five years.

Activity carried out in Northern Ireland

Funding for paediatric cardiac care includes funding for paediatric surgery and paediatric cardiology.

The Health and Social Care (HSC) Board has advised that the amount of money allocated by the HSC for paediatric cardiac surgery over the last five years in the Belfast Trust is as follows:

Paediatric Cardiac Surgery

	Total Cost
2007/08	£1,712,608
2008/09	£1,726,555
2009/10	£2,077,196
2010/11	£1,528,297
2011/12	£1,664,244

Specialty cost information is not yet available for the 2012/13 year.

The amount of money allocated by the HSC for paediatric cardiology over the last five years in the Belfast Trust is as follows:

Paediatric Cardiology (includes inpatient, outpatient and daycase)

	Total Cost
2007/08	£2,472,882
2008/09	£2,391,065
2009/10	£2,744,808
2010/11	£2,237,597
2011/12	£2,553,966

Specialty cost information is not yet available for the 2012/13 year.

Other Activity

Information on the costs for paediatric cardiac transfers; paediatric cardiac surgery; and cardiology transfers outside Northern Ireland could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

East Belfast: Cancer Rates

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the figures for new incidents of cancer in East Belfast for 2012.

(AQW 19588/11-15)

Mr Poots: I am advised by the Northern Ireland Cancer Registry that an analysis of cancer rates in Northern Ireland indicates that the overall rates of cancer in the East Belfast Assembly constituency area were found to be similar to the Northern Ireland average. That analysis also reveals that when broken down by cancer site, lung cancer rates in the East Belfast constituency were 13.8% higher than the Northern Ireland average for both sexes combined. The majority of lung cancers are attributable to cigarette smoking.

East Belfast: Health Outcomes

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why the risks to East Belfast residents of stroke, hypertension, diabetes, and kidney disease are higher than the Northern Ireland average. (AQW 19596/11-15)

Mr Poots: Health outcomes are generally worse in the most deprived areas in Northern Ireland when compared with those witnessed in the region generally. Belfast has the highest level of deprivation in Northern Ireland, with some 40% of the most deprived areas being within the Belfast Local Government District. Deprivation translates not only into lower life expectancy, but a greater burden of disease and consequently a greater dependence on health and social care services.

Belfast East Assembly Area does have the highest prevalence in Northern Ireland of certain conditions including Stroke, and has relatively high prevalence of diabetes, hypertension and kidney disease. The prevalence of these conditions is known to increase with age, however, and it should be noted that, from the census figures, Belfast East Assembly Area has the second highest mean age of residents in Northern Ireland and the second highest percentage of population aged 65 years and over.

Reducing inequalities in health is a particular challenge requiring long term co-ordinated effort across government and all sectors, including statutory and the voluntary and community sectors. There are many factors within and beyond individual control which interact to influence our health and wellbeing. Work is being taken forward to develop a new cross-cutting public health strategic framework. 'Fit and Well – Changing Lives' has been published for consultation and is timetabled to be completed in Spring 2013.

Human Trafficking

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans he has to increase the number of refuge places available for the victims of human trafficking.

(AQW 19611/11-15)

Mr Poots: I refer the member to my previous answer to AQW 19151/11-15.

There are no designated places of refuge for victims of human trafficking within the health and social care services. However, if it has been assessed that a place of refuge is required, this will be provided in conjunction with other relevant agencies. Provision will differ depending on the age of the victim and his/her assessed needs.

The Health and Social Care Board and Local Commissioning Groups are responsible for commissioning health and social care services across the region. Annual commissioning plans are based on assessed service requirements, including arrangements to provide appropriate safeguards for vulnerable children and adults, which will include victims of human trafficking.

DHSSPS: Hospitality Spend

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what was the total spend on hospitality by his Department in 2011/12.

(AQW 19627/11-15)

Mr Poots: Hospitality spend for the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety and each of the Department's Arms Length Bodies, in 2011/12, is set out in the table below.

	£'000
DHSSPS	49.1
Belfast HSC Trust	10.0
Northern HSC Trust	12.5
Southern HSC Trust	44.0
South Eastern HSC Trust	17.4
Western HSC Trust	9.0
NI Ambulance Service	2.7
Business Services Organisation	39.4
Health and Social Care Board	51.9
Public Health Agency	44.4
Patient Client Council	15.9
NI Fire & Rescue Service	6.3
NI Practice & Education Council	-
NI Social Care Council	18.6
NI Guardian Ad Litem Agency	0.5
NI Blood Transfusion Service	-
Regulation & Quality Improvement Authority	8.6
NI Medical & Dental Training Agency	4.4
Total	334.7

All organisations across the HSC have comprehensive policies and procedures in respect of hospitality which outline the eligibility and entitlement to hospitality.

Due to the wide ranging operational nature of the Department's ALB's, hospitality may also include expenditure other than that associated with the provision of refreshments, for example room and/or equipment hire.

Drink or Drug Addiction Services

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what services are available in Belfast for people with drink or drug addictions.

(AQW 19634/11-15)

Mr Poots: Under my Department's New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs Phase Two, the Health & Social Care Board and the Public Health Agency commission alcohol and drug services that are provided across a range of settings in the Belfast area, both by Statutory and Voluntary/Community sectors.

The services available in the Belfast Health & Social Care Trust area typically consist of counselling and support, rehabilitation, advice, liaison, detoxification, relapse therapy, outreach services and a range of individual and group-based psychological treatments, as well as a range of prevention and early intervention programmes.

Details of these services can be found by accessing the following link:

http://www.publichealth.hscni.net/sites/default/files/DrugsAlcohol_Directory_BelfastTrust_12_12_1.pdf

Neurology

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 19133/11-15, why it costs less to refer a patient to a neurologist in the independent sector than the Health Service; and (ii) what action he is taking to ensure that the Health Service will be more competitive on this issue than the independent sector.

(AQW 19637/11-15)

Mr Poots: The average cost of referring a patient to a neurologist in the independent sector is lower as the independent sector is generally used only to assess and treat patients categorised as mainstream. Patients who fall outside this category, i.e. patients with complex co-morbidities or with conditions requiring complex care and treatment are not referred to the independent sector or, if referred, are returned to Health and Social Care (HSC). As HSC Trusts are required to address all the needs of all patients referred to them, Trust capacity must therefore be capable of addressing both simple and complex cases and this is reflected in the different funding requirements and average costs.

Hospitals: Vending Machines

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he has any plans to restrict the availability of high content sugar available drinks in vending machines in waiting areas of hospitals. (AQW 19640/11-15)

Mr Poots: Vending machines on HSC Trust premises offer a variety of choices for visitors and staff as well as patients. The options include low-calorie and sugar-free drinks and bottled water as well as high sugar content drinks. There are currently no plans to restrict these choices.

Measles

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the current incidence of measles, particularly among children; and how this compares with other parts of the UK. (AQW 19654/11-15)

Mr Poots: Figures for 2012 for confirmed cases of measles were:

England:	1900
Wales:	116
Scotland:	28	(up to beginning of December)
NI:	9

In the first six weeks of 2013 there were six cases of measles reported in Northern Ireland. Five of these were children. This figure is provisional and requires validation. Other parts of the UK have not published any figures yet for 2013.

MMR (Measles, Mumps and Rubella) immunisation is the safest and most effective way to prevent measles infection. It is never too late to vaccinate and children and young people of all ages should have two doses of the MMR vaccine to ensure they are protected. It is vitally important to ensure children and young people's vaccinations are up to date, particularly if they are in groups or settings where they may be at risk of getting an infection or, if they are infected, of passing on infection to other vulnerable individuals.

The uptake of MMR vaccine in Northern Ireland is at a sufficiently high level to prevent the measles virus from circulating in the general population. The recent cases of measles have occurred in unvaccinated people. The Public Health Agency has been working to ensure that these unvaccinated children are offered the MMR vaccine. PHA has also been working with local schools in the area to offer vaccination clinics, so that any other child who is unvaccinated or incompletely vaccinated receives MMR as required.

Adult Social Care

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what discussions his officials have had, or intend to have, with their counterparts in Westminster on changes to the funding of care for the elderly. (AQW 19656/11-15)

Mr Poots: As social care is a devolved matter, the recent announcement by the Secretary of State for Health, Jeremy Hunt MP, of plans to reform funding arrangements for adult social care in England does not apply to Northern Ireland.

However, recognising the importance of this issue, my Department is currently engaged in an extensive public consultation until 15 March on the discussion document, "Who Cares? The Future of Adult Care and Support in NI". The purpose of the consultation is to hear people's views on key issues including the type of services we want to see in the future, who should provide them, and, crucially, how we should pay for them. Following the consultation my Department will develop proposals for reform, which will include changes to how care and support is funded.

In this context my officials have been in regular contact with their counterparts in England, and the rest of the UK, in relation to reforms in each of those jurisdictions and will continue to liaise closely with them throughout the reform process in Northern Ireland

Health and Social Care Regional Procurement Board

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 16519/11-15, whether the Health and Social Care Regional Procurement Board intends to move to standard 30 day payment terms from September 2013. (AQW 19675/11-15)

Mr Poots: The HSC Regional Procurement Board has been advised that it is necessary to change the terms and conditions of contract in respect of payment earlier than the planned September 2013 date. It has also been advised that this change should take place commensurate with the introduction of the new payment legislation (expected March 2013). However, the UK Government has not yet published its response to the consultation or the draft regulations pertaining to this legislation and therefore, precise terms cannot yet be advised upon.

Health and Social Care Regional Procurement Board

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 16519/11-15, whether the Health and Social Care Regional Procurement Board sought legal advice prior to its decision in June 2012 to move to standard 30 day payment terms; and the dates on which this advice was sought and received. (AQW 19676/11-15)

Mr Poots: The HSC Regional Procurement Board did not seek legal advice in June 2012 prior to taking its decision to change to 30 day payment terms.

Antrim Area Hospital

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when the work to upgrade the Antrim Area Hospital will be completed and open to patients.

(AQW 19726/11-15)

Mr Poots: The current phase of works at Antrim Area Hospital will provide a new Emergency Department and 24 Bed Ward.

The new 24 bed ward was completed on 4 February 2013 and the planned operational date is 26 March 2013.

The new Emergency Department is due to be completed on 28 April 2013 and the planned operational date is 26 June 2013

Smoking

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans he has to further reduce the number of people who smoke.

(AQW 19829/11-15)

Mr Poots: Reducing smoking prevalence in Northern Ireland is a key priority for my Department and this is reflected in the ten-year tobacco control strategy which I launched last year. The strategy contains the following three main objectives: preventing people from starting to smoke; supporting smokers to quit; and protecting the population from tobacco-related harm. A comprehensive action plan for the strategy is currently being developed by a multi-sectoral implementation group. This work is being co-ordinated by the Public Health Agency.

My Department is engaged in an ongoing programme of legislative change with regards to tobacco control, the main aim of which is to prevent the uptake of smoking by young people. Sales of tobacco from vending machines were banned from 1 March 2012, and a ban on the display of tobacco products in large shops, introduced from 30 October 2012, will be rolled out to small shops from 1 April 2015.

In the forthcoming months, I also intend to introduce a Bill to the Assembly which will impose tougher sanctions on retailers who persistently sell tobacco products to those under the legal age of sale.

Other legislative options under consideration are the introduction of plain packaging for tobacco products and a ban on smoking in private vehicles. Decisions on these issues will only be made following comprehensive consultation exercises and considered analysis of the responses.

I will also continue to invest in public information campaigns to inform people about the dangers of smoking, and in the further development of smoking cessation services provided in a range of accessible settings.

Adult Social Care

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department has made any assessment of the costs of non-medical and medical care of older people in a residential care home which the Department considers reasonable; and to outline these costs.

(AQW 19835/11-15)

Mr Poots: It is the duty of the Department to provide or secure the provision of an integrated health and social care system for the people of Northern Ireland. Healthcare, including medical support for clients in residential care or nursing homes is provided free of charge. Healthcare is primarily provided via a client's GP and Health and Social Care Trusts, and is not part of the cost of the care home placement. The cost of such medical support is not currently cost effective to quantify because of the mixture of private and public systems involved. The cost of a residential care home placement includes a combination of personal care, board and accommodation costs.

My Department does not operate a regular or current information collection system concerning the cost breakdown of a package of care delivered in a residential care home i.e. the balance between personal care and accommodation costs. Similarly, it does not operate a regular data collection system which seeks to identify the cost of nursing care in nursing homes.

My Department is currently engaged in an extensive public consultation until 15 March on the discussion document, "Who Cares? The Future of Adult Care and Support in NI". The purpose of the consultation is to hear people's views on key issues including the type of services we want to see in the future, who should provide them, and, crucially, how we should pay for them. Following the consultation my Department will develop proposals for reform, which will include changes to how care and support is funded. This will include up to date analysis of the relevant costs and benefits as required.

Residential Care Homes

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether an assessment has been made of the comparative cost of the care per resident in state-run and privately-run elderly care homes; and to detail the assessment undertaken and its findings.

(AQW 19837/11-15)

Mr Poots: No recent assessment has been commissioned by the Regional Health and Social Care Board ("HSCB") or my Department on the comparative costs of care per resident in state run and privately run nursing and residential care homes. However, in 2007 my Department sponsored a Value For Money study of statutory residential care homes. This study concluded, using costs from 2005, that there were lower costs in the private sector and that the differential arose in part from higher sick absence in the statutory sector, higher overheads in the statutory sector including refurbishment costs due to the condition of buildings, from lower pension contributions in the private sector and from the then higher financing costs of the buildings in the statutory sector. Note that some of these factors may have changed since that time.

This said, true Value for Money is about more than cost considerations, it also must take into account quality, client complexity and whether care needs are being met.

Following the Review of Public Administration, the HSCB is now responsible for operational matters. This includes the commissioning of future studies, as required.

My Department is currently consulting on Who Cares? The Future of Adult Care and Support in Northern Ireland. This document reiterates government policy - to support people to live at home for as long as it is safe and appropriate to do so.

Adult Social Care

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given that house prices in Northern Ireland are lower than in South East England and that the main component in personal wealth is house value, for his assessment of the cap that should be placed on personal savings as a contribution towards elderly care.

(AQW 19839/11-15)

Mr Poots: Social care is a devolved matter and, consequently, the recent announcement by the Secretary of State for Health, Jeremy Hunt MP, of plans to introduce a cap on individual contributions to social care in 2017, does not apply to Northern Ireland

I recognise, however, that this is an issue about which people feel strongly and that is why I have committed to a three stage process of reform in Northern Ireland. As a first step, my Department is currently engaged in an extensive public consultation until 15 March on the discussion document, "Who Cares? The Future of Adult Care and Support in NI". The purpose of the consultation is to hear people's views on key issues including the type of services we want to see in the future, who should provide them, and, crucially, how we should pay for them.

Once I have had the opportunity to consider the views and opinions of the people of Northern Ireland my Department will develop proposals for reform, which will include changes to how care and support is funded. In so doing, I will be considering in detail how local socio-economic circumstances, demographics, and other local characteristics might influence any proposed changes.

ENT Consultants

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of ENT consultants employed by each Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last four years; and (ii) whether, following the introduction of the care in the community pilot scheme at Holywood Arches Health Centre, the number of doctors providing ENT outpatient appointments and/or treatment in the rest of the Health Trusts was reduced, and to provide further details. (AQW 19848/11-15)

Mr Poots:

HSC Trust	2009	2010	2011	2012
Belfast HSC Trust	8	9	8	8
Northern HSC Trust	6	5	5	5
South Eastern HSC Trust	4	4	3	4
Southern HSC Trust	5	6	8	7
Western HSC Trust	6	6	6	6
Total	29	30	30	30

There has been no reduction in the number of doctors providing ENT services in any HSC Trust as a result of the pilot exercise at Holywood Arches Health Centre.

Meningitis B Vaccine, Bexsero

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans he has to introduce the Meningitis B vaccine, Bexsero, into the routine immunisation system.

(AQW 19858/11-15)

Mr Poots: Vaccination policy in Northern Ireland and the rest of the UK is guided by the recommendations of the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI), an independent expert advisory committee that advises the four UK Health Ministers on matters relating to the provision of vaccination and immunisation services. JCVI consider all the available medical and scientific evidence before recommending which vaccines should be offered.

The JCVI has begun an evaluation of the impact and cost-effectiveness of possible meningitis B vaccination strategies. This evaluation requires a complex analysis and final JCVI advice is not expected until later in the year. I will consider the JCVI recommendation when I have received it.

Fire Stations: Newtownstewart and Fintona

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) to outline his capital spending priorities for the 2013/14 financial year; (ii) for an update on the business cases for Newtonstewart and Fintona fire stations; and (iii) whether he has plans to upgrade these stations from the current Portacabin facilities.

(AQW 19874/11-15)

Mr Poots: In light of the emerging needs of Transforming Your Care, my current capital priorities are kept under constant review. My current capital profile for the remaining 2 years of the current budget period includes:

Project/Programme	2013/14 £m	2014/15 £m
Capital Budget	224.80	200.50
Major Ongoing Projects	66.96	163.5
Annual Fixed Costs (excl IT)	95.5	29.0
NIFRS	6.0	6.0
ICT	28.20	20.0
Other Approved Schemes	49.04	12.9
Total Allocations in current approved Capital Scenario	245.70	231.4
Surplus/(Over Commitment)	(20.90)	(30.9)

The progression of business cases is set to ensure that approvals are in place in line with proposed expenditure as set out in the capital programme for DHSSPS and its arms length bodies. Given the constraints on my capital budget, the business cases for both Newtownstewart and Fintona Fire Stations have not progressed to approval as they are not sufficiently high up the list of NIFRS priorities to be profiled for expenditure in the current budget period.

Colostomy Bags

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether there are plans to make patients pay for colostomy bags.

(AQW 19882/11-15)

Mr Poots: I have been considering a number of different options aimed at ensuring the efficient use of resources and looking at areas where money can be saved and used to protect front line services and improve access to certain specialised drugs. The possible introduction of prescription charges or some form of administrative or other fee relating to the receipt of prescriptions is one of the options I have been considering.

Any such proposals, including proposals to introduce exemption categories such as those previously applied to colostomy bags, would be subject to full public consultation.

Southern Health and Social Care Trust: Intensive Home Support Unit

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 16870/11-15, for an update on the changes that have been made to the Intensive Home Support Unit in the Southern Health and Social Care Trust; and what consultation with staff and patients was undertaken prior to any changes.

(AQW 19895/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Southern Health and Social Trust advise that they are currently reviewing some aspects of Adult Learning Disability Provision in order to enhance service provision across the Trust area. This is part of the ongoing work to develop new initiatives and to make existing services more effective and person centred.

To that end the Intensive Support Team, which only operates in the Armagh /Dungannon area has been reviewed and the decision has been reached to disband this Team and utilise their expertise across the service. Such changes are in keeping with the reform and modernisation of service provision to bring services closer to home, as proposed within Transforming Your Care.

The needs of service users currently receiving input from this Team are presently being reviewed. Their assessed needs will be met through alternative provision.

I am advised that changes have been subject to local consultation.

Crèche and Day Care Facilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of crèche and day care facilities in the (i) Foyle; (ii) East Londonderry; and (iii) East Antrim constituencies; and how many children are on the waiting lists for each establishment.

(AQW 19944/11-15)

Mr Poots: The table below details the number of crèche and day care facilities in the Foyle, East Londonderry and East Antrim constituencies

It is not possible to detail waiting lists for each establishment as this information is not held by HSC Trusts.

Parliamentary Constituency	Day Nurseries	Out of Schools	Crèches	Playgroups	Total
Foyle	13	17	19	20	69
East Londonderry	12	12	8	28	60
East Antrim	12	10	3	20	45

Mental Health: Transition Between Child to Adult Services

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what transition process exists for patients with mental health illnesses who are moving from child to adult services.

(AQW 20007/11-15)

Mr Poots: All Trusts have transitional protocols in place, agreed between Child and Adolescent Mental Health Serivces(CAMHS) and Adult Mental Health Serivces(AMHS).

The protocols require forward planning and the development of an agreed transitional plan, in advance of any patient moving between these services. Arrangements are specific to the young person and will vary depending on complexity of need. The young person and their family/carers, will be fully involved in decision – making.

Transitional plans identify the worker from AMHS, the process for transfer and any joint working required between CAMHS and AMHS. They are implemented flexibly to ensure a managed process, with continuity of care and appropriate follow up for those patients who need it.

Department of Justice

Prisoner Release

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to Prisoner A, whether the relevant person or agency monitoring this individual following their release received any communication concerning regarding breaches of terms, and whether action was taken.

(AQW 18256/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): The Data Protection Act 1998 gives individuals certain rights in relation to personal information held on them by public authorities. The information requested cannot be provided as disclosure would be contrary to the Data Protection Act.

Northern Ireland Prison Service

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18386/11-15, (i) when and by whom the Northern Ireland Prison Service was made aware by the Prisoner Ombudsman that she was of the opinion that there was evidence against the officer concerned based on the balance of probabilities; (ii) whether the Northern Ireland Prison Service was aware of the date and content of a press statement from by the Prisoner Ombudsman and whether it had been approved prior to release; and (iii) when the Prisoner Ombudsman briefed the complainant of her findings and whether she informed him that she was intending to release a press statement.

(AQW 19286/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- (i) In March 2011 the Prisoner Ombudsman notified the Northern Ireland Prison Service that there was evidence against the officer concerned based on the balance of probabilities.
- (ii) & (iii) I understand that the Prisoner Ombudsman's Office wrote directly to the Member on 4 February 2013 confirming that her Office made no public announcements in relation to this investigation.

G4S

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to outline the roles and responsibilities of G4S staff during court sittings, and to clarify whether they are permitted to remove persons from the public gallery if they cause a disturbance. (AQW 19301/11-15)

Mr Ford: The general roles and responsibilities of G4S staff performing Court Orderly duties during court sittings include:

- maintaining security of courtrooms;
- ensuring that items prohibited under the Criminal Justice Act (NI) 1945 that could be used to record court proceedings or take photographs are not introduced or employed in Court;
- ensuring that they comply with instructions issued by the Judiciary including cataloguing items left overnight in the Courtroom;
- calling for all case parties; and
- assisting to clear premises in the event of an emergency and/or an evacuation.

Under the Justice (NI) Act 2004 a court security officer acting in the execution of his duty may use reasonable force to restrain, remove or exclude any person if it is reasonably necessary to do so to enable the business of the court to be carried on without interference or delay, or to maintain order or secure the safety of any person in the building. This should, wherever possible, be done with diplomacy and by applying only the minimum of force.

Prison Officers: Dismissal due to Disability

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18443/11-15, how many prison officers have been dismissed due to a disability following long-term sickness caused by prisoner assault, from 12 April 2010 to 31 December 2012. (AQW 19302/11-15)

Mr Ford: Between 12 April 2010 and 31 December 2012 there have been no prison officers dismissed due to a disability following long-term sickness caused by prisoner assault.

Prison Officers: Recruitment

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many prison officers have been employed since the recent round of recruitment and of these how many are (i) on sick-leave of six weeks or more; and (ii) have since resigned, broken down by prison facility.

(AQW 19303/11-15)

Mr Ford: To date the Northern Ireland Prison Service has recruited 199 Custody Prison Officers (CPOs), five of whom have subsequently resigned. However, as less than five CPOs have had a period of sickness absence for the duration stipulated the actual number has been withheld. This is to protect the identity of those concerned as disclosure would be contrary to the Data Protection Act 1998.

Prisoners: Education

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many prisoners (i) gained accreditations in essential skills; and (ii) completed offending behaviour programmes, during 2011 and 2012.

(AQW 19304/11-15)

Mr Ford: During 2011 and 2012 the numbers of prisoners completing offending behaviour programmes are as follows:-

1 January – 31 December 2011	1 January - 31 December 2012
153	171

Essential skills within the Prison Service are Literacy, Numeracy, Information & Communication Technology (ICT) and English for Speakers of Other Languages (ESOL).

The numbers of accreditations gained by prisoners in essential skills during 2011 and 2012 are as set out below:-

Location	Subject	1 April 2011 - 31 March 2012	1 April 2012 to date
Maghaberry	Literacy	139	80
	Numeracy	83	78
	ICT	91	122
	ESOL	17	29
		330	309
Magilligan	Literacy	293	270
	Numeracy	280	282
	ICT	128	15
	ESOL	35	50
		736	617
Hydebank Wood	Literacy	24	22
	Numeracy	38	14
	ICT	0	35
	ESOL	4	4
		66	75
Overall Total		1132	1001

Note: The 2012 year figures will not be completed until 31 March 2013 in line with the financial year.

Fuel Laundering

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to detail the sentences imposed in respect of each conviction for fuel laundering related offences, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 19320/11-15)

Mr Ford: Court sentencing datasets do not distinguish fuel laundering from other oils related crime offences which would be prosecuted under the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979.

HM Revenue & Customs have confirmed that in the last four financial years, including 2012-13 to date, there have been fines of £9,916, costs of £180, Confiscation Orders of £1,211,211 and a Compensation Order of £500 imposed. In addition, suspended prison sentences totalling 157 months have been given. A total of 200 hours community service was imposed on one defendant and three people also received a Serious Crime Prevention Order in addition to their Confiscation Orders.

Prison Officers: Dismissal

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18305/11-15 and AQW 17469/11-15, whether he plans to review his answer in light of the Ministry of Justice, National Offender Management Service and Her Majesty's Prison Service Archiving, Retention and Disposal Policy; and (ii) whether he will provide a copy of the Northern Ireland Prison Service Policy on the subject.

(AQW 19324/11-15)

Mr Ford: I have no plans to review the answers to AQW 18305/11-15 and AQW 17469/11-15. The Northern Ireland Prison Service, as an Agency of the Department of Justice, is only required to comply with the Departmental Retention and Disposal Schedule. A copy of this document has been placed in the Assembly library.

Death in Custody: Colin Bell

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18562/11-15, whether he intends to revise his answer in light of Recommendation 44 of the Northern Ireland Prisoner Ombudsman Report into the Death in Custody of Colin Bell. (AQW 19334/11-15)

Mr Ford: My answer to AQW/18562/11-15 will remain unchanged given that Recommendation 44 of the Northern Ireland Prisoner Ombudsman's Report into the Death in Custody of Colin Bell pre dated April 2010.

Prisoner Riots

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18499/11-15, how many televisions have been destroyed as a result of prisoner riots, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 19335/11-15)

Mr Ford: Information in the form requested is not readily available and could only be obtained at a disproportionate cost.

Prison Staff: Ear Protection

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether the Northern Ireland Prison Service provides mandatory ear protection for prison staff and the date this was introduced.

(AQW 19336/11-15)

Mr Ford: Hearing protection is provided in areas that have been assessed and considered necessary under the Control of Noise at Work (NI) Regulations 2006. This includes some workshops, dog kennels and the firing range.

With regards to the firing range, it is understood that ear protection has been provided from at least 1987 when Prison Service staff became responsible for firearms training.

Criminal Justice Race Unit

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Justice whether he will consider establishing a criminal justice race unit as recommended in the Northern Ireland Council for Ethnic Minorities Report on Race and the Criminal Justice System. (AQW 19378/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Department is currently considering the findings and recommendations arising from the Northern Ireland Council for Ethnic Minorities (NICEM) report, 'Race and Criminal Justice in Northern Ireland'. My officials will meet with NICEM in the coming weeks to consider the report in more detail.

My initial view is that the recommendation for a race unit does not fully take account of the existing systems, framework and structures within the Department of Justice, including the Departmental Equality Officer post, the Equality and Good Relations Forum, the Diversity Strategy, Equality Scheme and Equality Action Plan.

The Department of Justice Equality Scheme 2011-15 sets out the Department's arrangements for fulfilling its Section 75 statutory duties to promote equality of opportunity between the nine categories of people, which includes persons of a different racial group, and to promote good relations between persons of different religious belief, political opinion or racial group.

In addition to using ECNI's recommended tools for screening and Equality Impact Assessments, the Department undertakes Shared Future Policy Proofing when developing and reviewing its policies. Shared Future Policy Proofing includes all Section 75 groups, on a non-statutory basis.

The Department's Equality Action Plan sets out the key initiatives planned to tackle the inequalities highlighted by an audit of inequalities undertaken by the Department as a result of ECNI's recommendation that all designated public authorities should carry out such an audit.

In terms of structures, two champions at senior civil service level, the Equality Champion and the Diversity Champion, ensure that equality and diversity are central considerations in all aspects of policy and practice within the Department and they report directly to the Departmental Board.

The Diversity Steering Group introduced four staff networks including the Black Ethnic Minority network, 'BEMLINK', which provides a safe environment for members to discuss sensitive workplace issues and raise awareness on black and ethnic minority affairs.

All of these existing systems, frameworks and structures will be taken unto consideration in any decision on the NICEM report's recommendation in relation to a dedicated criminal justice race unit.

Death in Custody: Colin Bell and John Deery

Lord Morrow asked Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18149/11-15 and in terms of the Colin Bell disciplinary investigation, to detail (i) the number of night custody officers who were suspended from duty and the start and end dates of suspension; (ii) the cost to the Northern Ireland Prison Service per suspended officer; (iii) the cost to the Northern Ireland Prison Service for all suspended officers; (iv) the cost in the John Deery case and; (v) whether any senior officers were disciplined resulting from the Bell case with offences of gross misconduct but not suspended from duty.

Mr Ford: Following the disciplinary investigation, 16 Night Custody Officers were suspended from duty with suspension dates ranging from 1 September 2008 to 26 October 2010.

Information regarding the cost to the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) per suspended officer cannot be provided as this would be contrary to the Data Protection Act 1998.

The cost to NIPS in relation to all suspended officers was £532,038.47 and in the case of John Deery the cost was £339,167.74.

As less than five Senior Officers were disciplined following the death in custody of Colin Bell, the information cannot be disclosed as to do so would breach the Data Protection Act 1998.

Prison Staff: Suspensions

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the number of prison staff suspended by the Northern Ireland Prison Service in each of the last 5 years; (ii) how many times each suspension was reviewed, by what grade and on what time basis; (iii) the number of suspensions that were reported to him and the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland during this period as required by Rule 118 (2) of the Prison and Young Offenders Centre Rules (NI) 1995, as amended; and (iv) in how many suspension cases he and the Secretary of State issued directions to the Northern Ireland Prison Service. (AQW 19388/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service has suspended a total of 54 members of staff in the five year period 1 January 2008 to 31 December 2012. The actual number of suspensions in each year has been withheld. This is to protect the identity of the individuals concerned as disclosure would be contrary to the Data Protection Act 1998. The information requested at parts (ii) and (iii) could only be provided with the incurrence of disproportionate costs. In relation to part (iv) I refer the Member to my response to AQW 17089/11-15.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Procurement of Televisions

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18499/11-15, to detail (i) whether the supplier is based in Northern Ireland; (ii) how often the contract has been put to tender in the last five years; and (iii) when it will be tendered in the future.

(AQW 19389/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service can confirm the contracted supplier is based in Northern Ireland.

The contract has been put out to tender once in the last five years; is due to be re-tendered in 2014; and is expected to be in place by September 2014. The tender process will commence approximately nine months beforehand.

Prisoner Assessment Unit

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in light of concerns raised in the report into the investigation of the closure of the Prisoner Assessment Unit, why senior prison staff/governors permitted night custody officers/staff to carry out duties outside their remit to the point where this became common practice, and whether he will give an assurance that this will not recur when the Prisoner Assessment Unit is reopened.

(AQW 19391/11-15)

Mr Ford: A corporate decision was taken to close the Prisoner Assessment Unit and this decision included ensuring that any improper customs and practices would be addressed. When the Prisoner Assessment Unit reopens newly approved Standard Operating procedures will be put in place.

Prisoners: Illegal or Non-prescribed Drugs

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice what percentage of remand prisoners tested positive for illegal or non-prescribed drugs per prison facility, including Hydebank Wood, in 2012.

(AQW 19392/11-15)

Mr Ford: I refer the Member to my answer to AQW 18761/11-15.

Prison Facilities

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice what is the total capacity of our prison facilities. (AQW 19417/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are a total of 2391 bed spaces currently available, but this level of occupancy is constrained by the need to keep various categories of prisoners in separate accommodation, and the desirability of avoiding cell sharing where possible.

Fuel Laundering

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Justice when she last contacted Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs in order to quantify the monetary impact of fuel laundering on the Northern Ireland economy. (AQW 19440/11-15)

Mr Ford: The figures on revenue lost to the UK economy through the use of non United Kingdom duty paid diesel in Northern Ireland are requested from HM Revenue and Customs periodically by my Department. This includes for the Organised Crime Task Force's reports. The Department of Justice also monitors the loss of revenue identified on individual operations.

The most recent figures are available in the HM Revenue and Customs publication "Measuring tax gaps 2012 Tax gap estimates for 2010- 11" which can be viewed at http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/statistics/tax-gaps/mtg-2012.pdf

There are, of course, other costs to the Northern Ireland economy associated with fuel laundering, namely the clean up cost in respect of the waste product from laundering plants and the cost to legitimate businesses.

Prisoner-at-risk Training

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 17869/11-15, to detail (i) why the Northern Ireland Prison Service did not keep records on its training database as to the number of staff who participated in Prisoner at Risk briefing/ awareness sessions; (ii) whether Prisoner at Risk Training was compulsory and whether senior management instructed staff to attend such sessions; and (iii) how staff were informed by management that awareness sessions were available throughout the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

(AQW 19441/11-15)

Mr Ford: At the time of the Prisoner at Risk training, the computer based training management system in place did not offer the facility to record short briefing/awareness sessions.

Awareness sessions were scheduled for all staff but were not mandatory.

Line managers are required to detail staff for training as and when it is scheduled, however, records are not available.

Prisons: Observation Cells

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice what is the current status in relation to ligature points in observation/safer custody cells

(AQW 19442/11-15)

Mr Ford: Observation cells in prison establishments have been designed to minimise the opportunity for self-harm, including anti-ligature furniture and fittings.

Sex Offenders

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18387/11-15, whether he intends to make representations to the UK Border Agency on matters such as this and/or introduce legislation which could prevent such entries to Northern Ireland and reduce the risk to the public.

(AQW 19443/11-15)

Mr Ford: Matters relating to policy and legislation on the control of entry across UK national borders is a matter for the UK Government.

When an individual offender with convictions for sex offences comes to Northern Ireland, the PSNI can apply to the courts for a notification order which requires the person to notify their details to the police. Legislation currently before the Assembly will make this process more effective by removing the need for a court order and making notification a statutory requirement.

Prisoner-at-risk Training

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18364/11-15, to detail (i) how many of the 39 volunteer mentors accepted the offer of training; (ii) how many mentors have completed their training to date; and (iii) what the training will entail and its duration.

(AQW 19444/11-15)

Mr Ford: Of the 39 mentors who volunteered to take part in the Northern Ireland Prison Service Mentoring Scheme, a total of 21 staff accepted the offer of training and they have all completed their training.

The training entailed preparatory reading in advance of participating in a half day workshop. The attendees received information, advice and practical guidance on how to be an effective mentor. However, all mentors were provided with written guidance.

Prisons: Wireless Telegraphy

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice whether his Department plans to introduce legislation making provision for interference with wireless telegraphy in prisons.

(AQW 19487/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Department has no plans to introduce legislation to make any further provision for interference with wireless telegraphy in prisons.

DOJ: Hospitality Spend

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice what was the total spend on hospitality by his Department in 2011/12. (AQW 19494/11-15)

Mr Ford: Hospitality expenditure by the Department of Justice, including its Agencies but not its arm's length bodies, for the financial year 2011/12 was £55,418.97.

PSNI: Internal Disciplinary and Grievance Procedures

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 17980/11-15, whether the PSNI will provide training to adjudicators and to Prison Officers' Association members who are acting as friends, as recommended in the Ackah and Deane Report of December 2009.

(AQW 19546/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Ackah and Deane Report recommended training of staff in the operation of internal disciplinary and grievance procedures. The Police Service of Northern Ireland will train staff working in the Professional Standards Unit in relation to investigative techniques.

Maghaberry Prison: Visits by UK Border Agency Staff

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) to detail the number of times that UK Border Agency staff attended Maghaberry Prison to engage with foreign nationals, in each of the last three years; (ii) what was the core purpose of the visits; and (iii) whether such meetings are normally also attended by prison staff.

(AQW 19549/11-15)

Mr Ford: Records have not been kept which detail the number of times UK Border Agency staff attended Maghaberry Prison although they visit Maghaberry annually to hold information sessions with foreign national prisoners.

UK Border Agency also attend the prison to conduct one to one interviews with foreign national prisoners who are being considered for deportation.

Prison staff are present at all meetings.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Staff Discipline

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18562/11-15 and AQW 18760/11-15, to clarify the position given that these answers appear to be at variance over the role of the Prisoner Ombudsman in relation to recommending disciplinary action.

(AQW 19550/11-15)

Mr Ford: There is no variance in my replies to questions AQW 18562/11-15 and AQW 18760/11-15.

I have been very clear as to the role of the Prisoner Ombudsman in relation to disciplinary actions. The Prisoner Ombudsman does not make recommendations to the Northern Ireland Prison Service regarding the suspension and/or dismissal of staff. The Prisoner Ombudsman may recommend that the Northern Ireland Prison Service considers conducting an internal disciplinary investigation into a staff member's actions where the outcome of an investigation would warrant it.

Legal Aid

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW15156/11-15, to provide an updated answer in respect of Legal Aid costs in each of the cases against (i) Bernadette McGeary; (ii) Stephen McGeary and (iii) Catherine Mooney. (AQW 19551/11-15)

Mr Ford: Further to the response to AQW/15156/11-15, committal proceedings for all defendants have now been heard in the magistrates' court and the defendants have been returned for trial to the Crown Court. Each defendant was represented by a solicitor only at the committal hearing. The following fees have been paid to each solicitor in respect of the proceedings at the magistrates' court.

Bernadette McGeary, a total of £1,413.78 (including VAT of £235.63)

Stephen McGeary, a total of £1,142.88 (including VAT of £190.48)

Catherine Mooney, a total of £1,254.10 (including VAT of £209.02)

The Crown Court cases are ongoing and at present there is insufficient information available to establish how each case will proceed. It is not possible to provide an accurate estimate of the total legal aid bill at this stage.

Human Trafficking

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice whether there are plans to increase the number of places of refuge available for victims of trafficking.

(AQW 19625/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Department funds a support service for potential adult victims of human trafficking. The support service is demand-led and includes the provision of accommodation for potential adult victims in a safe and secure environment. During the term of the contract no difficulty has been experienced in meeting the demand for accommodation for potential adult victims of human trafficking.

I have no plans therefore to increase the number of places of refuge available for those victims.

Courthouses

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice how many courthouses are currently in operation. (AQW 19693/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are currently 21 courthouses in operation in Northern Ireland.

PSNI: Resource Group

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Justice whether he has had any discussions with the Chief Constable, or any of his staff, regarding the grievance arrangements for civilian staff employed by the Resource Group and working in PSNI stations. (AQW 19729/11-15)

Mr Ford: As Minister of Justice I have frequent discussions with the Chief Constable across a range of issues.

However, the terms and conditions of civilian staff employed by the Resource Group, including the administrative arrangements in place in respect of conduct and accountability for such staff, are operational matters for the Chief Constable, who is accountable to the Northern Ireland Policing Board.

I am committed to respecting the operational independence of the Chief Constable and the role of the Policing Board and, as such, it would be inappropriate for me to comment upon employment matters for civilian staff employed by the PSNI.

PSNI: Starting Salaries

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the proposals to reduce police starting salaries to £19,000 in England and Wales and whether he envisages this being implemented in Northern Ireland. (AQW 19850/11-15)

Mr Ford: The announcement by the Home Secretary regarding pay scales relates to new recruits in England and Wales. I routinely consider developments in policing elsewhere in the UK and their potential implications in the context of Northern Ireland. Any proposals relating to pay scales for the PSNI will be negotiated at Police Negotiating Board in the usual way.

Prisons: Body Scanners

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Justice, following the results of the trial of the millimetre wave scanner, what alternative trialing will the Prison Service commence to comply with Recommendation 8 of the Ann Owers Report. (AQW 19942/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service remains committed to seeking a viable, less intrusive alternative to our existing practice of full searching.

Although the recently completed pilot and evaluation of Millimetre Wave technology showed that there were limitations to it as an alternative to full body searching, the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) will, if possible, continue to work with suppliers to see if such technology can be improved for application in the prison environment.

NIPS also intends to take forward its Justification Application under the Justification of Practices Involving Ionising Radiation Regulations 2004 in relation to the initial piloting and possible use of Transmission X-ray scanners in Northern Ireland's prisons.

This application is well advanced and it is expected that it will be ready for submission to the Department of Energy & Climate Change (DECC) within the next few weeks. This is a complex and lengthy process that has never been undertaken by a UK prison before so it is not possible, at this stage, to provide a timescale as to when a possible pilot of Transmission X-ray technology can commence.

Department for Regional Development

Water Bills

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the number; and (ii) the value of water bills that have been revised following complaints from consumers, in the last two years.

(AQW 19106/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that in the two year period covering 2011 and 2012 (i) 5,765 customers' bills (representing 1.7% of the total bills issued) were revised following complaints from the customer and (ii) the net value of the bill adjustments was £2.80 million (representing 2.1% of total billed income).

Profile of bill adjustments, i.e. increase / decrease, as detailed below:

Adjustment Type	Number of Bills	Number of Bills as % of Total Bills Issued	Adjustment Value £' Million	Adjustment Value as % of Total Billed Income
Bill Increased	931	0.3%	£0.42	0.3%
Bill Decreased	4,834	1.5%	(£3.18)	(2.4%)
Total	5,765	1.7%	(£2.76)	(2.1%)

Public Transport: Bus Shelters in Bangor

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what new bus shelters are planned for the Bangor area over the next year.

(AQW 19351/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The current contract for the provision and maintenance of bus shelters in Northern Ireland, between my Department and Adshel, which was approved whilst Peter Robinson was Minister for Regional Development, has delivered over 1350 new bus shelters since 2001, at no cost to my Department. The current contract does not expire until the end of 2015, however, it does not make provision for any new shelters.

In order to ensure the future provision of bus shelters, my Department is currently working towards the establishment of new contractual arrangements, which are to be in place for 2015.

The current contract has provided 58 shelters in the North Down area and in the interim, requests for shelters will be recorded and when the new contract is in place they will be given priority.

It should be noted that Local Councils can also provide bus shelters, should they wish to do so.

Public Transport: Metro Passenger Journeys in Belfast

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the total number of passenger journeys for each Metro route in Belfast for the July-September period, for each of the last five years. (AQW 19356/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The table below sets out the figures as provided by Translink. It should be noted that some ticket classes are excluded for example School pupil journeys.

Public Transport: Ulsterbus Passenger Journeys into Belfast

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the total number of passenger journeys for each Ulsterbus route into Belfast for the July-September period, for each of the last five years. (AQW 19357/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The table below sets out the information provided by Translink. However, Translink has advised that the statistics provided below are for Ulsterbus services where passengers alighted within Central Belfast mainly Europa Buscentre or Belfast City centre.

To collate any additional information would involve considerable time and effort at disproportionate cost.

Please note some ticket classes are excluded notably Pupil passes but given the period covered school holiday period numbers for this group would be negligible.

Ulsterbus passenger journeys into Belfast 1 July - 31 August

Year	Journeys
2012	601,578
2011	580,157

Public Transport: Larne Line Service

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the number of train cancellations or changes to express services on weekday mornings since the new timetable was introduced on the Larne line; and (ii) if Translink have plans to add six car train sets to increase capacity at peak times.

(AQW 19439/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised that the new timetable was introduced from Sunday 6 January 2013 following extensive consultation with existing users and key stakeholders. It incorporates two express services each weekday morning on the Larne line.

In the period to Friday 8 February the service had been operating for 5 weeks with a total of 50 express services scheduled. During this time one service regrettably had to be cancelled (31 January) due to mechanical problems with the train at Whitehead and one service was terminated (short of Great Victoria Street) at Central Station, due to signalling difficulties.

Translink continue to experience increasing passenger numbers on most morning services between Carrickfergus and Belfast. Translink will continue to monitor passenger loadings on all morning services in line with the commitment set out in the Passenger's Charter. This commitment is that under normal circumstances passengers should not have to stand during off-peak services and during peak operating periods NI Railways will use all available trains so that no passenger should have to stand for more than 20 minutes. Translink continue to monitor passenger loadings to ensure future capacity is deployed where it is most needed. In their view, it is premature for the introduction of six car sets on the Larne line at this time, however, they have indicated that once demand patterns have stabilised and the need for such a provision can more accurately be gauged, this proposal may be given further consideration.

A4 Dual Carriageway

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development what the acceptable noise level is on the A4 Dual Carriageway which transverses 15 miles of rural countryside from Moygashel to Ballygawley Roundabout. (AQW 19445/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Increases in noise levels, arising from the construction of a new road, are considered in respect of both the interior and exterior of residential buildings.

The Noise Insulation Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1995 (NIR) applies to all new, or altered, roads (effective December 1995) and is the legislation intended to ensure that increases in noise levels within the interior of residential buildings, arising from the newly constructed road, should not constitute a nuisance. This legislation also sets an exterior noise level of 68 decibels (dB), as the threshold for determining whether interior noise levels constitute a nuisance. The legislation requires that greater than 1dB of noise must be attributable to the new road.

There are no statutory limits on acceptable exterior noise levels. The Design Manual for Roads and Bridges (DMRB), adopted by the four UK Highway Authorities, recommends that when road traffic noise, as a result of a new road, causes an increase in exterior noise level of 3dB in the long term, a detailed noise assessment should be undertaken to establish if mitigation measures should be considered. It should be noted that whilst 3dB is the limit to establish if a detailed assessment is required, a 3db increase in noise level cannot automatically be held as constituting a nuisance. The 3dB increase is not seen as a trigger whereby mitigation measures must be implemented, but is instead a threshold of potential significance from which other factors should also be considered, to determine if the impact would be considered significant. If the impact is deemed to be significant, the practicality of mitigation can be reviewed, to establish if the effect can be ameliorated.

The DMRB sets out, that in the long term, a noise increase of 5-10 dB increase in noise level is considered "moderate", whilst noise increases greater than 10dB are considered to be "major". The Environmental Statement prepared for the A4 dual carriageway, identified 28 properties that, subject to detailed design (possible low noise surfacing etc), could be subjected to greater than 68dB of noise, 11 of which would experience noise increases of greater than 10dB. The DBFO Company responsible for the detailed design and delivery of the new road has confirmed that mitigation measures have been implemented, to ensure that predicted noise levels at all residential buildings are less than 68dB (even at 15 years after opening of the road to account for traffic growth).

Public Transport: Bus Services in Bangor

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of passengers who have used bus services in Bangor, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 19488/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The table below sets out the figures as provided by Translink and is based on information pertaining to Bangor Town Services. Journeys originating in Bangor with a destination outside Bangor (and vice-versa) have been excluded. In addition some ticket classes are excluded, e.g. Pupil Passes.

Public Transport: Bangor to Belfast Train and Bus Services

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of passengers using the Bangor to Belfast (i) train service; and (ii) bus service, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 19489/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The table below sets out the figures as provided by Translink and is based on passengers using Bangor as the boarding stage and Belfast as the alighting stage, and vice-versa. The statistics do not include passengers boarding/alighting at intermediate stops. In addition some ticket classes are excluded, e.g. Pupil Passes.

Public Transport: Enterprise Rail Service

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department plans to address the falling passenger numbers using the Enterprise Rail Service.

(AQW 19501/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised that passenger numbers on the Enterprise service are increasing. In the year to date (April 2012 to January 2013 inclusive) passenger numbers are over 700,000, 14.2% higher than the same period in the previous year.

As regards longer term investment, in January, I launched a public consultation on what should be the priorities for future capital expenditure in our railways network. This included an option for enhancement of the cross-border line and the Enterprise service. I look forward to receiving views.

DSD: Capital Spend

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail his Department's capital spend since May 2011, broken down by constituency area.

(AQW 19516/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Neither my Department nor its arm's-length bodies, Northern Ireland Water (NIW) and Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company (NITHC), maintain detailed analysis of spend on a parliamentary constituency basis. However, where reasonable and without disproportionate cost, business areas have reviewed expenditure records to identify any key areas of spend in each constituency. This information is set out below.

Roads Service

Roads Service has invested around £260 million on major capital schemes in the period from May 2011 to December 2012.

Roads Service does maintain an analysis of its expenditure on a full financial year basis by council area. This analysis is only produced after the end of each financial year. The table below details the capital expenditure in the period 2011-12.

District Council	Capital Year 11/12

Overall Total	157,660

Roads Service does not simply split its total budget for capital expenditure on roads across all the district council areas. Major road improvements are prioritised on a countrywide basis taking account of a broad range of criteria such as strategic planning policy, traffic flow, number of accidents, potential travel save times, environmental impact, accessibility and value for money. While the actual spend on a major works scheme may be within one district council area, the benefits of such schemes are not confined to the district council, constituency or county in which they are located.

Roads Service is currently engaged in numerous individual schemes, and while it is not possible to specify these individually Roads Service does provide progress reports to District Councils bi-annually. A link to the council reports can be found at:

 $\label{lem:http://www.drdni.gov.uk/index/freedom_of_information/customer_information/cinformationtype-results.htm? signpost=Customer+information&informationType=Roads+Service+reports+to+councils$

The 2012-2013 Spring Reports to council detail the outcomes achieved in the 2011-2012 financial year, and scheduled future activities. Autumn reports to council outline progress to date, and projected activities in future years.

Roads Service is currently engaged in taking forward major strategic investment in the roads network by providing dual carriageways on sections of the A5 between Londonderry and Strabane and Omagh and Ballygawley, on the A8 between Belfast and Larne and at Shore Road, Greenisland.

Transport

The Department has invested around £138 million on public transport schemes in the period from May 2011 to December 2012.

My Department has provided and will continue to provide capital funding for public transport services and initiatives, including the new buses and trains. The entire Translink network benefits from the impact of the New Trains project and the new Goldline vehicles and provision of Wi-Fi on both Goldline vehicles and trains.

The following table lists those projects that have a projected cost greater than £5m and provides details of expenditure for those projects during 2011-12 and up to December 2012.

Northern Ireland Water (NIW)

My Department provides funding for NIW's capital works programme. NIW has invested around £240 million on major capital schemes in the period from May 2011 to December 2012. Details of investment in individual projects, where total project costs are greater than £5 million, are set out in the table below. Expenditure on minor capital projects is not included as it could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

A4 Dual Carriageway

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development to what extent noise levels have increased since the A4 was upgraded to a dual carriageway.

(AQW 19552/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer the Member to my answer to his related Assembly Written Question (AQW 19445/11-15 refers) on this issue.

Street Lighting

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the rationale behind Roads Service's removal of street lighting in the Galliagh area of Derry.

(AQW 19898/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service is currently in the process of carrying out street lighting improvements in the Galliagh area of Londonderry, specifically at Ederowen Park, Brookdale Park and Gallaigh Park.

All existing lighting is currently being replaced, with the exception of the lighting on rear pathways, which is being removed in accordance with current Roads Service policy in relation to street lighting provision.

Employment and Support Allowance

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of (i) Employment Support Allowances appeals since the introduction of the new benefit; and (ii) successful appeals, broken down by constituency. (AQW 19061/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): The information cannot be provided in the format sought. The Appeals Service (TAS) arranges for Employment Support Allowance (ESA) appeals to be heard at venues throughout Northern Ireland. The selection of venues for appeal hearings is determined by the postal district within which the appellant resides. The data is only available by appeal hearing venue. Furthermore, any appeal lodged with the Social Security Agency is subject to reconsideration and may therefore not progress to TAS. Appeals may not be dealt with in the same year that they are received.

The Chairman of the Tribunal records whether the decision made on appeal was either more or less advantageous than a previous decision. A more advantageous decision may increase the allowance or direct that a new award be made. A less advantageous decision may reduce the allowance or make no change to the original determination.

The following tables detail the number of ESA appeals received by TAS since the introduction of the benefit on 27 October 2008 up to 31 December 2012 (Table 1); while the number of ESA appeals that have received a final determination/outcome and how many were successful is set out in Table 2. Although a small number of ESA appeals were received in the 2008/09 financial year, none were determined until the 2009/10 year.

Employment and Support Allowance

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Social Development what is the (i) target; and (ii) average actual time for appeals of Employment Support Allowance cases from the date of submission to a tribunal decision being made. (AQW 19279/11-15)

Mr McCausland: There are a number of distinct processes involved in the handling of any appeal, including Employment and Support Allowance appeals. The first stage is that handled by the Social Security Agency and extends from receipt of an appeal until a submission is made to The Appeals Service. The Social Security Agency's 2012/13 actual average clearance time target for Employment and Support Allowance appeals is 45 days.

The second stage is that handled by The Appeals Service and starts from its receipt of an appeal submission from the Agency. The Appeals Service has an administrative target relating to the listing of an appeal, which is that the first hearing will be within eight weeks of its receipt of an appeal submission. This target does not include the period from hearing to decision being made, which is the responsibility of independent judicial office holders. The average performance by The Appeals Service against its 8 week target for the period April to December 2012 was 9 weeks.

There is no composite target covering all stages, however The Appeals Service also measures the average time from its receipt of an appeal submission to the date a Notice of Decision is produced for issue to the appellant. The average performance in relation to Employment and Support Allowance appeals for the period April to December 2012 was 13 weeks. It is also worth noting that Employment and Support Allowance payments continue to be paid at the assessment rate pending the outcome of the appeal.

Full-time or Part-time Education: Benefit Recipients

Mrs Hale asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the opportunities or schemes available for people who are living on benefits to enter either full-time or part-time education without losing their full benefit entitlement. (AQW 19330/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The means-tested Education Maintenance Allowance scheme is targeted at students, aged 16 years to 19 years, from lower income families, who wish to continue their studies, post-compulsory school age. Students who are deemed "independent", for the purposes of assessing household income, including students in care, and living in their own/rented accommodation and receiving income support, can avail of the Education Maintenance Allowance scheme in Northern Ireland

Further Education colleges offer a range of part-time further education courses, suitable to develop the job prospects and life chances of those in receipt of benefits. Concessionary fees are available for these courses, on a means-tested basis, which reflects learners' ability to pay.

Whether or not a claimant can retain their entitlement to benefit while undertaking a course of study is determined by the type of benefit they are receiving and whether the course of study is classed as full or part-time by the relevant educational establishment. The course of study being undertaken must be at a recognised educational establishment and it is the classification of the course by that establishment, rather than the number of hours that the person actually attends it, which will determine the effect on their benefit.

Rent Arrears

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development what was the (i) highest; (ii) lowest; and (iii) average level of rent arrears in 2012.

(AQW 19347/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The position at 30 December 2012 is as follows: In relation to (i) the highest individual level of rent arrears was £20,800; (ii) the lowest level of individual rent arrears was 1p; and (iii) the average level of Housing Executive rent arrears was £467.78.

Note: The majority of large rent arrears were not caused by the non payment of rent but historically were due to tenants receiving Housing Benefit that they were not entitled to, which created a Housing Benefit overpayment.

Social Housing

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Social Development how many of the social houses built during the last five years were allocated to members of the (i) Protestant; and (ii) Roman Catholic community.

(AQW 19411/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The table below, provided by the Northern Ireland Federation of Housing Associations, details the allocation of 'self contained' social houses built in the last five years to members of the (i) Protestant; and (ii) Roman Catholic community: -

	2007/08	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	Total
Protestant	276	289	319	493	267	1644
Roman Catholic	577	651	753	657	723	3361

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Asset Transfer

Mr McClarty asked the Minister for Social Development whether he plans to seek Executive approval for Northern Ireland specific legislation on Asset Transfer to ensure parity with the rest of the UK.

(AQW 19451/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The need for new legislation to support Community Asset Transfer in Northern Ireland is being considered by a cross-Departmental Steering Group, supported by research and analysis and early consultation with key stakeholders.

There are important lessons to be learned from policy and practice elsewhere and my officials will ensure that the policy development process in Northern Ireland is informed by that experience.

The Steering Group will make recommendations for policy options in Northern Ireland which may have implications for legislation. The ultimate decision on whether or not legislation is necessary will rest with the Executive.

Asset Transfer

Mr McClarty asked the Minister for Social Development when he will complete his Programme for Government commitment on Asset Transfer and consult publicly on a new policy.

(AQW 19452/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The development of a policy framework to support Community Asset Transfer will contribute to the overall Programme for Government commitment to "invest in social enterprise growth to increase sustainability in the broad community sector".

A cross-departmental steering group, led by DSD, is currently considering options and developing policy proposals. I expect this steering group to bring forward proposals in April which I will share with my Executive colleagues before seeking wider views through a process of public consultation.

Asset Transfer

Mr McClarty asked the Minister for Social Development how many times the cross-departmental committee on Asset Transfer has met; and when it will report.

(AQW 19453/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The community asset transfer policy framework steering group has met twice with further meetings planned in March and April. I expect the steering group to bring forward proposals in April.

Asset Transfer

Mr McClarty asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the Carnegie UK Trust research on The Enabling State; and whether he plans to follow its advice on Asset Transfer.

(AQW 19454/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Community Asset Transfer was identified in the Concordat between the Voluntary and Community Sector and the Northern Ireland Government as a means of achieving a range of community development outcomes.

The Carnegie UK Trust discussion paper identifies that the community management of assets can be a means of growing capacity and harnessing local ambition and potential. I consider that this supports the rationale for identifying Community Asset Transfer in the Programme for Government as a means of investing in social enterprise to increase sustainability in the broad community sector.

The Joseph Rowntree Foundation-funded report "Community Asset Transfer in Northern Ireland has formed an important part of the evidence base for a Northern Ireland policy framework for Community Asset Transfer and I would expect the report to inform the work of the cross-departmental steering group which I have established to develop policy proposals.

Asset Transfer

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Social Development when he will publish a strategy on Community Asset Transfer to comply with his Programme for Government commitment.

(AQW 19456/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The development of a policy framework to support Community Asset Transfer has been identified by my Department as a means of achieving the Programme for Government commitment to "invest in social enterprise growth to increase sustainability in the broad community sector".

A cross-departmental steering group, led by DSD, is currently considering options and developing policy proposals. I expect this steering group to bring forward proposals in April which I will share with my Executive colleagues prior to seeking wider views through a process of public consultation.

Asset Transfer

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has met the Joseph Rowntree Trust to discuss its research on Asset Transfer in the UK.

(AQW 19457/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I have not met with the Joseph Rowntree Foundation (JRF) although my officials attended the launch of the JRF-funded report "Community Asset Transfer in Northern Ireland" and have on previous occasions met with the authors of this report.

The findings and conclusions from this research form an important part of the evidence base for a Northern Ireland policy framework for Community Asset Transfer and I would expect the report to inform the work of the cross-departmental steering group which I have established to develop policy proposals.

Asset Transfer

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the use of Asset Transfer in regeneration; and how he will guard against liability transfer.

(AQW 19458/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Community Asset Transfer has been identified in the Programme for Government as a means of investing in social enterprise to increase sustainability in the broad community sector.

Risk management is an important part of Community Asset Transfer and extensive guidance has been developed elsewhere in the UK which will be useful to inform policy and practice in Northern Ireland.

The transfer of individual assets will in all cases need to be supported by an appropriate business case which would demonstrate sustainability. Community Asset Transfer can take different forms and will vary from case to case. The nature of the asset, the proposed plans for the asset and the capacity of the receiving organisation would all be important factors in ensuring the viability of the plan and transfer.

Asset Transfer

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the responses on Asset Transfer that he has received from each Executive Department; and to publish the asset map arising.

(AQW 19459/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I invited all my Executive Colleagues to nominate officials to join a steering group to oversee the process of developing a policy framework for Community Asset Transfer. A steering group has been established with broad representation and is currently considering options and developing proposals. The steering group includes a representative from the Strategic Investment Board's Asset Management Unit which was established by the Executive with a remit to develop and deliver:

- a region-wide Asset Management Strategy
- departmental Asset Management Plans
- mandating ePIMS (electronic Property Information Mapping System) as a central asset database

However, the remit of the steering group itself is not to consider individual assets. The work of the steering group will result in policy proposals and will not generate an 'asset map'.

Asset Transfer

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Social Development what representations he has received on Community Asset Transfer

(AQW 19460/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department has been aware for some time of the support from the voluntary and community sector for the development of Community Asset Transfer.

My officials have already engaged with a range of stakeholders from central and local government and the third sector and conducted a number of policy development workshops in November 2012 to explore specific issues and support the work of the Steering Group.

My department is also working with the Development Trusts Northern Ireland (DTNI) as a key delivery partner to support the implementation of Community Asset Transfer policy. DTNI will engage separately with stakeholders to inform recommendations to the steering group on aspects of implementation and will also deliver a programme of awareness raising and training on Community Asset Transfer beginning next year.

I intend to commence consultation publicly on policy proposals before the summer recess.

Window Replacement Schemes: Hinges

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development what action he is taking to address concerns on the provision of hinges for window replacement schemes.

(AQW 19467/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I assume the Member is referring to the specification of hinges currently used by the Housing Executive and their plans to change the specification. I have met with industry representatives and my officials attended a meeting held between the manufacturers of the reversible hinged window and the Chief Executive and Chairman of the Housing Executive on the 5 February. I understand that the meeting was constructive and both parties explained their position. The Housing Executive explained the rationale behind its revised specification and the procurement strategy in respect of window replacement.

This is entirely an operational matter for the Housing Executive and neither I nor Departmental officials have any approval role if the Housing Executive decide to change a specification. In relation to the procurement for the window replacement requirements, the Housing Executive hope to commence this with an Official Journal of the European Union (OJEU) notice later this month.

Housing Associations

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of staff employed by (i) Apex Housing Association; (ii) Trinity Housing; (iii) Fold Housing; (iv) Clanmill Housing; (v) Ulidia Housing; (vi) Helm Housing; and (vii) Oaklee Housing, broken down by (a) grade; and (b) salary.

(AQW 19502/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Department does not hold any information about the number of employees in any Housing Associations or their grade or salary.

Social Housing

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development how many departmental staff will be employed to oversee the new social housing proposals, broken down by grade; and what is the projected annual cost of staffing.

(AQW 19504/11-15)

Mr McCausland: It is too early to say at this stage of the programme how many of my departmental staff will be utilised for the Social Housing Reform, my departmental officials are in the process of scoping the resources necessary to deliver the programme.

Currently there are 7 of my departmental staff employed on the delivery of the Social Housing Reform Programme in both a full-time and part-time basis. I have included a chart below detailing the breakdown of staffing by grade and the total annual cost for all staff involved in the programme.

Social Housing: Rent Increases in Rinmore Drive, Creggan

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the rent increases for each of the 55 houses in the Rinmore and Creggan areas which transferred from the Housing Executive in the last 18 months. (AQW 19505/11-15)

Mr McCausland: There was a total of 55 houses in Rinmore Drive, Creggan that transferred from the NIHE to Apex Housing Association. Of the 55 properties, 14 have had improvements completed with the rent charge increasing accordingly, 4 are currently undergoing improvements and the rent charge has not changed at this stage. Improvements to the remaining 37 properties have not yet commenced and the rent charge has also not changed.

The table below details the properties that have had improvements carried out with the amount charged in rent shown before and after improvements

Note: the rent charge on the unimproved units was set by the Housing Executive in 2011/12 and will not be increased until the reimprovement works are completed.

Housing Benefit

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development whether the award of housing benefit will increase to match the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's rent increase in April 2013.

(AQW 19520/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that as the legislation on under-occupation in the social rented sector is unlikely to be in place from April 2013, any increase in Housing Executive rents in April will be matched by a corresponding increase in Housing Benefit.

Joseph Rowntree Foundation

Ms Lo asked the Minister for Social Development when he last met the Joseph Rowntree Foundation to discuss measuring poverty, future labour markets, the impact of welfare reform; and what was the outcome of the meeting. (AQW 19525/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I have not met with the Joseph Rowntree Foundation (JRF) to discuss measuring poverty, future labour markets or the impact of welfare reform.

However, my officials, along with colleagues from other Departments, have met with JRF in relation to the development of the longer term approach to the Delivering Social Change (DSC) Framework. This Framework, as you are no doubt aware, has been established by the Executive to achieve a sustained reduction in poverty and disadvantage, and, as such, encompasses the issues you have raised in your question.

Officials will continue to keep in contact with JRF to exchange ideas and information as the work on DSC progresses.

Asset Transfer

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Social Development when he will respond to the Joseph Rowntree Foundation publication by Queen's University Belfast on Asset Transfer. (AQW 19528/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Joseph Rowntree Foundation is not seeking formal responses to the report. However officials of my Department attended the launch of the Joseph Rowntree Foundation-funded report "Community Asset Transfer in Northern Ireland" and have on previous occasions met with the authors of this report.

The findings and conclusions from this research will be part of the evidence base for a Northern Ireland policy framework for Community Asset Transfer and I would expect the report to inform the work of the cross-departmental steering group which I have established to develop policy proposals.

Asset Transfer

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Social Development when he will finalise his consultative paper on Asset Transfer for consultation

(AQW 19529/11-15)

Mr McCausland: A cross-departmental steering group, led by DSD, is currently considering options and developing policy proposals to support Community Asset Transfer in Northern Ireland. I expect this steering group to bring forward proposals in April which I will share with my Executive colleagues prior to seeking wider views through a process of public consultation.

Asset Transfer

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has made a decision on whether a stronger legislative framework is required to underpin his forthcoming community Asset Transfer strategy.

(AQW 19530/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The need for new legislation to support Community Asset Transfer in Northern Ireland is being considered by a cross-Departmental Steering Group, supported by research and analysis and early consultation with key stakeholders.

I am aware that legislation forms part of the enabling framework for Community Asset Transfer in the rest of the UK and there are important lessons to be learned from policy and practice elsewhere. My officials will ensure that the policy development process in Northern Ireland is informed by that experience.

The Steering Group will make recommendations for policy options in Northern Ireland which may have implications for legislation.

Asset Transfer

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Social Development when he will seek Executive approval for a policy on Community Asset Transfer.

(AQW 19531/11-15)

Mr McCausland: A cross-departmental steering group, led by DSD, is currently considering options and developing policy proposals to support Community Asset Transfer in Northern Ireland. I expect this steering group to bring forward proposals in April which I will share with my Executive colleagues before seeking wider views through a process of public consultation.

Formal Executive approval of proposals will be sought following public consultation, when I have had the opportunity to consider the views and comments of stakeholders.

Asset Transfer

Mr McClarty asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the potential for guidelines and policies alone to change the culture of the public sector on Asset Transfer.

(AQW 19532/11-15)

Mr McCausland: A cross-departmental steering group, led by DSD, is currently considering options and developing policy proposals. The need for new legislation to support Community Asset Transfer in Northern Ireland is being considered by a cross-Departmental Steering Group, supported by research and analysis and early consultation with key stakeholders.

In seeking to create a more enabling environment for Community Asset Transfer in Northern Ireland the steering group will be aiming to address current barriers to implementation, to raise the profile of Asset Transfer as an option and to increase capacity and skills within the public sector. The need for legislation will form part of this work.

In keeping with the general advice from the Office of the Legislative Counsel, legislation will be considered only where is it necessary in order to achieve outcomes which cannot be achieved by other means.

Gambling: Operator Licence

Mr McClarty asked the Minister for Social Development what are the potential consequences of Northern Ireland not requiring remote gambling operators to obtain a licence, given the requirements in the rest of the UK and the Republic of Ireland.

(AQW 19533/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In the rest of the United Kingdom, remote gambling operators are only required to obtain a licence from the Gambling Commission if they are based in Great Britain. The Department of Culture, Media and Sport is currently consulting on an amendment to the law so that all remote gambling operators supplying consumers in Great Britain - regardless of where they are based - will be required to have a license.

In the Republic of Ireland, there is currently no requirement for remote gambling operators, whether based in the jurisdiction or targeting its consumers, to obtain a licence. Work on legislation, which will introduce a new regulatory and licensing regime, is currently underway and my Department is monitoring the progress of this.

In Northern Ireland, it is currently the case that remote gambling operators, based in the jurisdiction or targeting its consumers, are not required to obtain a licence. I am currently discussing this issue with the relevant DCMS Minister and the outcome of these discussions, along with the outcome of work currently being carried out by the European Commission will inform how online gambling, including its operators, will be regulated within Northern Ireland. If appropriate, provisions in respect of this will be included within the proposed Betting, Gaming Lotteries and Amusements Bill.

Gambling: Operator Licence

Mr McClarty asked the Minister for Social Development, in light of his Department's Review of Gambling, what concerns he has about Northern Ireland being the only part of the UK that will not require remote gambling operators to obtain a licence. (AQW 19534/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I would refer the member to the answer previously supplied to AQW 19533/11-15.

Gambling: Online Betting

Mr McClarty asked the Minister for Social Development what provision his Department is considering for the protection of consumers who bet online.

(AQW 19535/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I would refer the member to the answer previously supplied to AQW 19415/11-15.

Asset Transfer

Mr McClarty asked the Minister for Social Development what training and capability-building his Department will provide to voluntary and community organisations on Asset Transfer and building better capacity.

(AQW 19536/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My department is funding the Development Trusts Northern Ireland as a key delivery partner to support the implementation of Community Asset Transfer policy. They will advise on the level of both monetary and non-monetary support required to facilitate successful Community Asset Transfer and will develop and deliver resources tailored to Northern Ireland circumstances. This will include awareness raising, practical advice, training and active support for a number of demonstration projects.

Housing Executive: Value of Housing Stock

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development what is the total value of the Housing Executive's housing stock. (AQW 19537/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that at 31 March 2012 the total value of their housing stock was £3,335,134,000. However, it should be noted this is not the value that could be realised from transferring the stock as social housing.

Warm Homes Scheme

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Social Development what length of warranty is given on boilers fitted to homes under departmental warm home projects, such as those fitted by Eaga.

(AQW 19585/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Warm Homes Scheme is delivered on behalf of the Department for Social Development by Bryson Charitable Group and H&A Mechanical Services. Both Scheme Managers offer a 2 year warranty on their boilers, as required by the Technical Specification section of the contract documents. They also offer a 1 year warranty on the heating installations.

EAGA offered a 2 year warranty on the workmanship on their heating installations during The Warm Homes Scheme between 1st June 2001 and 30th June 2009.

Social Housing: Building Standards

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the rationale for removing the requirement that all new social housing is built to a minimum of Code for Sustainable Homes Level 3; and what impact this will have on fuel poverty. (AQW 19592/11-15)

Mr McCausland: From this financial year, my Department has removed the mandatory requirement that all new social housing should be built to at least Level 3 of the Code for Sustainable Homes, in favour of improved building regulations which came into operation in October 2012.

Some aspects of the Code placed unnecessary prescriptive specifications on housing associations that in some cases added considerably to construction costs and stifled innovation. The new building regulations now cover those elements of the Code that the Department considers essential, in particular those relating to thermal efficiencies and carbon reductions. Both are required to bear down on fuel poverty which is a key issue for my Department.

Part F - 'conservation of fuel and power' - of the new building regulations represent thermal efficiencies and carbon reductions of 25% over and above the previous 2006 levels. Critically, these new levels are broadly comparable to those in Level 3 of the Code, so that the impact on fuel poverty is maintained.

The position now is that standards for social housing have been harmonised with those for private housing development.

Whilst building to Level 3 is no longer mandatory, I have retained the option to build to this specification and additional grant is available for those housing associations who wish to do so.

North Down: Disabled Facilities Grants

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) the number of applications for Disabled Facilities Grant in the North Down area since 2010; (ii) the number that were rejected; (iii) the number accepted; and (iv) the number awaiting a decision

(AQW 19610/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In relation to Disabled Facilities Grant (DFG) applications in the North Down Council area for the period 1 April 2010 to 31 January 2013, 188 were received. Of these; 63 were cancelled,42 were approved and 83 are pending.

*The Housing Executive has advised that a DFG is a mandatory grant which is means tested and is available for works recommended by an Occupational Therapist. If it has been cancelled, it is at the applicant's request only. They also advise they do not reject DFG applications; however applicants must go through a Test of Resources before proceeding.

North Down: Economic Regeneration

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the economic regeneration projects funded in each Neighbourhood Renewal Area of North Down, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 19615/11-15)

Mr McCausland: There is one Neighbourhood Renewal Area in North Down - the Kilcooley Neighbourhood in Bangor. Details of the economic regeneration projects, that have been funded over the last three years are as follows:

Project name	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13
Kilcooley Healthy Living Centre Social Economy Project	£0.00	£0.00	£95,159.12
Kilcooley Women's Centre Step - Training and job preparation Project	£45,369.00	£44,289.32	£45,100.32

DSD: Hospitality Spend

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development what was the total spend on hospitality by his Department in 2011/12. (AQW 19630/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The total spend on hospitality in my Department in the 2011-12 financial year was £23,374.97

Welfare Reform: Work Capability Assessment

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Social Development whether he will consider any changes to the medical assessment process for benefits in light of the comments made by the Chair of the Westminster Public Accounts Committee, that the view of the Department of Works and Pensions that appeals against decisions of medical assessments for benefit entitlement are an inherent part of the process was an unduly complacent view.

(AQW 19650/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Work Capability Assessment process has been developed with the support of healthcare professionals and the involvement of a number of different charities. In accordance with the legislative requirement set out in Section 10 of the Welfare Reform Act (Northern Ireland) 2007, has to date conducted three reviews of the Work Capability Assessment process, the latest of which was laid before the Assembly in November 2012. A further independent review is planned for 2013.

Improvements made to date include the recent changes to the cancer descriptors, changes to forms, changes to training for Health Care Professionals, introduction of increased customer contact through pre-disallowance calls and the introduction of Mental Health Function Champions.

The right to appeal is a legislative requirement for the majority of social security benefits, including Employment and Support Allowance, and therefore an inherent part of resolving any dispute between an individual and my Department about their entitlement to a social security benefit.

Volunteering Strategy

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has any plans to engage formally with the volunteering sector as part of his review of delivery support arrangements. (AQW 19680/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In order to successfully implement Northern Ireland's first ever Volunteering Strategy I am committed to ensuring that there is effective infrastructure support for volunteering. My officials are presently developing options for this infrastructure support for my consideration. Officials will be meeting with existing providers during February to discuss any proposed new arrangements which I expect to be put in place later this year. Until then existing funding arrangements will be rolled forward to ensure the continued support for volunteering.

Volunteering Strategy

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the timeframe to which his Department is working to in the review of delivery support arrangements for the voluntary sector.

(AQW 19681/11-15)

Mr McCausland: New Regional Infrastructure Support arrangements came into effect from October 2012. Under the new arrangements generic infrastructure support will be provided to the Voluntary and Community Sector by a consortium comprising NICVA, Community Evaluation Northern Ireland, Rural Community Network and CO3. Support will also be provided for the faith sector through Churches Community Work Alliance and for the voluntary advice sector through a consortium comprising of the Citizens Advice Bureau, Advice NI and the Law Centre.

Interim support is being provided for volunteering and for women in disadvantaged and rural areas until new arrangements are developed. I expect the new arrangements in these areas to be put in place later this year.

Housing Executive

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development how many agency staff were employed in the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in each month of the last two years.

(AQW 19704/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that the number of agency staff employed by them, by month, in the last two years is shown in the table below:

Month	2011/12	2012/13
April	49	123
May	59	151
June	69	143
July	64	138
August	66	143
September	78	147
October	77	184
November	79	233
December	88	249
January	96	296
February	112	-
March	116	-

The Housing Executive employ Agency staff due to significant urgent resourcing needs which arose for issues such as;

- the need for Technical staff to meet the demands of an increase in their Planned Maintenance programme;
- the need for Housing Maintenance Officers and administrative staff to meet an increase in work arising from the introduction of new Response Maintenance Contracts; and
- the ongoing need to resource the administration of Housing Benefit.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Housing Executive

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the Northern Ireland Housing Executive policy regarding the use of agency staff.

(AQW 19705/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that where a resourcing need arises of an urgent, short term, temporary or unknown duration, at entry level grade or for specific specialist posts, they will seek to meet that need either through a temporary employment contract or through engaging the services of an agency worker. Where these circumstances arise, agency workers are managed within the provisions of the agency workers regulations.

Social Housing

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development what is the estimated cost of (i) transferring the Housing Executive's housing stock to the Housing Associations; and (ii) the establishment of a new Regional Housing Body, including any redundancies which may arise.

(AQW 19708/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My proposals are a high level vision and provide a strategic direction of travel which the Executive has agreed to explore. Going forward, as part of the detailed design phase, the cost of the proposed new structures will be explored. This will involve further analysis including financial consideration, economic appraisals and engagement with key stakeholders.

Therefore, at this early stage, I am unable to provide an estimated cost for transferring the Housing Executive stock and the establishment of a new Regional Housing Body.

Social Housing: Empty Dwellings

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has carried out an assessment of empty dwellings, including the number, quality and value of the stock.

(AQW 19709/11-15)

Mr McCausland: A pilot exercise to test the effectiveness and cost of various interventions was carried out in the Fortwilliam and Upper Newtownards Road areas of Belfast. This pilot showed that there is a lack of accurate information about the number of empty homes. My officials are currently preparing a new Empty Homes Strategy and are working with colleagues in the Department of Finance and Personnel to address this shortfall.

Social Housing: Empty Dwellings

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development whether he has considered introducing a compulsory purchase scheme or compulsory possession scheme to bring empty dwellings back into use.

(AQW 19710/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has a variety of powers that it can use in relation to empty homes. These range from the issue of a repair notice (Article 41 of the 1981 Housing order) to having the power to take possession of unoccupied houses (Article 60 of the 1981 Housing Order).

One of the aims of the Empty Homes Strategy and action plan which is currently being developed will be to look at the effectiveness of the current legislation and if required bring forward proposals for legislative change.

DSD: Civil Servants

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of civil servants in his Department, and the public sector organisations funded by his Department, who have (i) been made redundant; and (ii) involuntarily lost their jobs in each of the last two years.

(AQW 19711/11-15)

Mr McCausland: No civil servants have been made redundant in my Department during the 2010/11 or 2011/12 financial years. Although no staff were made compulsorily redundant in the public sector organisations funded by my Department, in 2010/11 two staff in the Housing Executive volunteered for redundancy and were released.

During the 2010/11 financial year a total of 40 civil servants in my Department were dismissed. In addition, a total of 32 staff were dismissed from the Housing Executive.

During the 2011/12 financial year a total of 25 civil servants in my Department were dismissed. In addition, a total of 27 staff were dismissed from the Housing Executive and Ilex.

Alcohol Licensing

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development how many responses to the consultation on alcohol licensing are advocating closing times for pubs and clubs beyond 2.00am.

(AQW 19715/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The public consultation on "Proposed changes to the law regulating the sale and supply of alcohol in Northern Ireland" attracted wide interest within the community with over 2500 responses received. The vast majority of responses were from members of the public, with 140 responses received from organisations, including drinks industry groups, retailers, health bodies, local alcohol advice services, councils, political parties, charities and faith groups.

It is important that officials carefully consider the various views on the wide range of proposals in the consultation, including the proposal to introduce occasional late opening which will extend late opening hours to 2.00am.

Due to the high response to the consultation it is taking longer than normal for officials to finalise a draft report on the outcome of the consultation. I have asked for a draft report to be with me by the end of February and it will be discussed with the Social Development Committee before I decide the way forward.

When the report is finalised I will arrange for a copy to be placed in the Assembly Library.

Homelessness: People in Temporary Accommodation

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development how many people in North Down are registered as living in temporary accomodation.

(AQW 19722/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information is not available in the format requested as the Housing Executive does not routinely collate information by Parliamentary constituency. However, the table below details the number of households placed in temporary accommodation by the Housing Executive in response to their homelessness duties in their Bangor District Office area at 12 February 2013.

Household type	NIHE Hostel	Voluntary Sector Hostel	Private Sector	Total
Singles	2	8	10	20
Families	4	2	13	19
Total	6	10	23	39

It is important to note that there are other self referral hostels in Bangor which the Housing Executive would not be aware of.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development how many people in North Down have been in receipt of Disability Living Allowance in each of the last ten years.

(AQW 19723/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The table below shows the number of Disability Living Allowance recipients in North Down in each year from August 2003 to August 2012.

Year	*DLA Recipients
Aug-03	4,110
Aug-04	4,360
Aug-05	4,540
Aug-06	4,710
Aug-07	4,860
Aug-08	4,930
Aug-09	5,030
Aug-10	5,220
Aug-11	5,340
Aug-12	5,540

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority

Social Housing: Heating Upgrade Schemes

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the heating upgrade schemes that the Housing Executive has planned for the Derry City Council area in 2013/14; and whether funding has been secured for all the planned schemes. (AQW 19752/11-15)

Mr McCausland:

Benevenagh, Blighs Gardens/Lane
 Ederowen/Elaghmore
 Waterside Heating (addresses to be confirmed)
 86 dwellings
 75 dwellings

Funding is in place for these schemes, however the Waterside heating scheme has a current Date of Possession (DOP) of March 2014 and is unlikely to account for significant expenditure in 2013/14, unless it can be advanced within the programme.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Housing Benefit

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development to account for the difference in the number of housing benefit claimants between The Mount area of East Belfast, which had 1380 claimants in June 2012, and the Gilnahirk area of East Belfast, which had 40 claimants in June 2012.

(AQW 19769/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive does not hold information on the number of Housing Benefit claimants on the geographic basis set out in the question. They advise that The Mount is part of their East Belfast District which has a total of 7,627 Housing Benefit claimants; and Gilnahirk is part of their Castlereagh District which has a total of 4,109 Housing Benefit claimants

The Housing Executive further advises that, in general terms, differences between the levels of Housing Benefit uptake in different areas depends on a number of factors including population levels, housing density, housing tenure types and income levels

Welfare Reform

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the impact of Welfare Reform on the level of benefit claimants, given that in April 2012 40.3 percent of all constituents, aged 16 years and over, in East Belfast were claiming at least one social security benefit.

(AQW 19770/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Welfare reform will simplify and streamline the current benefits' system introducing 'Universal Credit' as a single working age benefit to replace Working Tax Credit, Child Tax Credit, Housing Benefit, Income Support, income-based Jobseeker's Allowance and income-related Employment and Support Allowance. Personal Independence Payment will replace Disability Living Allowance for working age people.

The impact on the level of benefit claimants will not be fully known until Universal Credit is implemented, however it is expected that due to the claim process being simplified with a single claim being made to one organisation, Universal Credit may improve benefit take-up compared to the current levels and taking account of the existing range of benefits. Each person will be assessed, taking account of individual circumstances and as now, awards will be made on the basis of entitlement.

Entitlement e.g. to Personal Independence Payment (PIP), will be based on how a person's condition affects their daily life, not the underlying condition itself as this may impact differently from person to person. This new benefit will have a better balance to take into account the needs of those with mental health, intellectual, cognitive and developmental impairments. Through greater use of evidence, periodic review and reassessment the intention is that the new benefit will enable a more accurate assessment of an individual's ongoing entitlement to make sure support is reaching those who need it most.

The impact on the level of benefit claimants for those currently in receipt of DLA and who might in the future have entitlement to PIP is not yet fully known however it is intended that the first of two planned independent reviews of the PIP assessment will be completed by the end of 2014. This will allow for any findings to be considered, and any necessary changes made before the majority of Disability Living Allowance recipients begin to be reassessed from October 2015.

Social Housing: Maintenance Schemes

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the (i) kitchen; (ii) window; and (iii) external cyclical maintenance schemes that have been carried out in (a) the Shankill ward; (ii) the Glencairn ward; (iii) the Highfield ward; and (iv) North Belfast, in each of the last three years and this year to date; and the cost of each scheme. (AQW 19773/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information is not available in the format requested as the Housing Executive does not routinely collate information by Parliamentary constituency or by Council Ward. However, the table below details all planned maintenance schemes for the Housing Executive's Shankill and North Belfast District Office areas in each of the last three years and the current financial year, including the estimated cost of each scheme.

Social Housing: Cavity Walls

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development how many Northern Ireland Housing Executive homes in Harpurs Hill and the Heights areas of Coleraine do not have cavity walls and are therefore prevented from getting cavity wall insulation

(AQW 19785/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that their records indicate that they have 126 properties in Harpurs Hill and 62 properties in The Heights which do not have cavity walls.

Social Housing: Allocation

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development, if the proposed break up of the Housing Executive proceeds, who would have responsibility for allocating housing.

(AQW 19832/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Under the proposed new structures for social housing, the Regional Housing Body would be responsible for the administration of the social allocations policy and the independent assessment of need.

Housing Executive: Effect of Break-up on Staff

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the impact of the proposed break up of the Housing Executive on its staff.

(AQW 19833/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My proposals for new housing structures are about providing a better service for tenants, better quality housing and also a structure and a sustainable system that ensures good value for money for the taxpayer. This is not about cutting back or saving money and is not about cutting jobs.

We are at the early stage of a major project and there is still much work to be done with the design of the new Social Housing structures. It is not possible to be precise about the impacts on staff at this early stage, but there can be no doubt, that the reform of Social Housing structures will have implications for existing staff within the Northern Ireland Housing Executive.

However, it is important to stress that the functions that are currently carried out by the Housing Executive are functions which will still have to be carried out, grants will still have to be awarded, properties will still have to be managed; all of those different functions will still take place under the new structures and it will require staff to do so. I want to stress that this is a restructuring process: the vast majority of staff in the Housing Executive will continue to deliver the services they currently deliver, albeit within a different organisation.

My Department and I remain committed to working closely with the NIHE Board, Housing Executive Staff and NIPSA throughout this process. Indeed, shortly after the issue of my written statement, departmental officials held an initial meeting with the Northern Ireland Housing Executive Director of Personnel & Management Services to address primary staff concerns and to agree to work jointly to allay staff anxieties. Both the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and DSD officials will continue to engage with NIPSA as the representative of the vast majority of staff in the Housing Executive on the new structures.

Social Housing: Cavity Walls

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the (i) number; and (ii) location of housing executive properties in the Lagan Valley constituency that do not have cavity walls.

(AQW 19840/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information is not available in the format requested as the Housing Executive does not routinely collate information by Parliamentary constituency. However, the Housing Executive's records indicate the following numbers and locations within its Lisburn and Banbridge District office areas that do not have cavity walls:

- 17 Aluminium Bungalows at Barley Hill, Lisburn
- 406 No Fines dwellings in Old Warren estate, Lisburn
- 141 Orlit dwellings in Knockmore estate, Lisburn
- 19 Aluminium Bungalows at Huntly, Banbridge
- 3 Aluminium Bungalows at Kiltarriff, Rathfriland
- 10 Aluminium Bungalows at Dunbarton, Woodlands
- 3 No Fines dwellings at Bodell Place, Seapatrick, Banbridge
- 3 Orlit dwellings at Dromara Road, Drone Hill Road and Killysorrell Road
- 14 Cross wall dwellings at Parkhill, Dromore *
- 8 Cross wall dwellings at Highfield gardens, Banbridge *
- 3 Cross wall dwellings at Maryville Park/Crescent, Banbridge *
- * Cross wall dwellings can be cavity or non-cavity but the Housing Executive's records does not hold this information

Child Maintenance and Enforcement Division

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the options available to constituents to make payments to the Child Maintenance Enforcement Division (CMED); and whether CMED can compel people, who have a good payment history, to pay using a specific method.

(AQW 19844/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The most effective method of paying child maintenance is through a family based arrangement and the Child Maintenance Service promotes and supports parents to do this through the Child maintenance Choices Service.

When a family based arrangement is not possible an application is made to the statutory scheme. The preferred method of collection is then 'Maintenance Direct', whereby the child maintenance payments once assessed, are made directly to the parent with care by the non-resident parent.

Where this method of payment is not possible, the Child Maintenance Service has the legislative authority to select the most appropriate method of collection in any given circumstances. The use of direct debit or deductions from earnings orders provide the greatest level of assurance for the parent with care as these methods of collection are more automated and usually more compliant than other arrangements.

Jobs and Benefits Office Catchment Areas

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of people living in the (i) Andersonstown Jobs & Benefits Office; (ii) North Belfast Jobs & Benefits Office; (iii) Falls Road Jobs & Benefits Office; (iv) Shaftesbury Square Jobs & Benefits Office; (v) Holywood Road Jobs & Benefits Office; (vi) Shankill Jobs & Benefits Office; (vii) Knockbreda Jobs & Benefits Office; (viii) Foyle Jobs & Benefits Office; and (ix) Lisnagelvin Jobs & Benefits Office catchment areas.

(AQW 19954/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information requested is not available. The reason for this is that the boundaries of the Jobs & Benefits Offices do not overlap with any administrative geographies for which population figures are available.

Pay-as-you-go Oil Scheme

Mr Girvan asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the pilot Pay-As-You-Go oil scheme; and whether this scheme is to be extended throughout Northern Ireland. (AQW 19958/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department has been working with Kingspan Renewables and Carillion Energy Services on a pilot Pay as You Go for Oil system. The pilot commenced in February 2012 and the participants included Housing Executive tenants, householders who had been assisted through the Warm Homes Scheme and private referrals. The homes were in Dungannon, Coalisland, Newcastle and Camlough. The technology was installed in 17 low income households with the aim of testing the technology and the process. Carillion completed an evaluation of the pilot and the Housing Executive also completed an evaluation. The convenience of using the Pay as You Go for Oil system was highlighted as a major benefit. However, the results of the pilot survey were disappointing regarding the proportion of participants benefiting from lower oil

There are two crucial issues around the cost and delivery of introducing a Pay as You Go Oil system into the Department's mainstream energy efficiency improvement schemes:

- costs associated with production and administration of the Pay as You Go Oil scheme; and
- who will supply the oil to the customer.

Departmental economists have serious concerns about the feasibility of the Pay as You Go Oil scheme from a cost/benefit perspective. I have considered all of the information available from the pilot and the opinion of the Departmental economists I have concluded that it is not feasible to introduce the Pay as You Go Oil scheme into my Department's energy efficiency improvements schemes.

Welfare Reform Legislation: Victims of the Troubles

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Social Development whether special provision will be made for victims of the Troubles in the Welfare Reform legislation; and whether consideration is being given to having a disregard and compensation payment similar to that for the victims of the 2005 London bombings.

costs.

Mr McCausland: The compensation payments made to the victims of the 2005 London bombings are disregarded for the purposes of income-related benefits and this will continue under Universal Credit which will replace the income-related benefits for working age people. These payments are disregarded for income-related benefit purposes as they are from a charitable source.

Payments to victims of the Troubles are made by the Victims and Survivors Service, based on individual assessed needs and the provision of high-quality services to meet those needs. The Victims and Survivors Service is currently set up as a company limited by guarantee and payments made from it cannot be disregarded for income-related benefit purposes as they are not from a charitable source.

Welfare Reform Bill

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development whether there are exemptions in the Welfare Reform Bill for members of (i) the armed forces; and (ii) the PSNI; and to detail any such exemptions. (AQW 20085/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Welfare Reform Bill is an enabling Bill and the detail, including exemptions, will be in the Regulations. Regulations will be brought to the Social Development Committee for scrutiny in due course.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Community Relations Council

Mr Byrne asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the filling of vacant positions on the board of the Community Relations Council, following a request made in May 2012. (AQO 3231/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): The Memorandum of Association of the Community Relations Council provides that we have the option of appointing up to one-third of the CRC Board Members.

We have not taken up this option, as the model for strategic direction for the delivery mechanisms for good relations is still under discussion. Options for delivery mechanisms were part of the CSI consultation and part of the ongoing discussions among parties on the best way forward for good relations delivery.

The Council has been advised that they can proceed with a recruitment competition for Board Members to fill available positions.

Racial Equality Strategy

Ms Lo asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when they will publish the Race Equality Strategy. (AQW 19521/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We are fully committed to tackling racial inequalities and promoting good race relations.

The Racial Equality Strategy is key to achieving these twin aims and officials have been working with minority ethnic representatives through the Racial Equality Panel to draft a new strategy that will meet the needs and aspirations of minority ethnic people and wider society.

We want to make sure that the document is fit for purpose and partnership working with representatives of minority ethnic people on the drafting of the Strategy will continue to ensure we achieve this aim.

We envisage that a 12-week public consultation will begin in spring this year.

The Strategy will be launched after this process has been completed and the consultation responses have been considered.

Children's Consultative Group

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) to list the membership of the Children's Consultative Group; (ii) how often the group meets; (iii) how often it met in the last twelve months; and (iv) what is the remit of the group. (AQW 19684/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The need for a means to engage with stakeholders from the children and young people's sector has been identified within the programme structure for Delivering Social Change. In developing the Children and Young Person's Early Actions Paper two consultative events with key stakeholders were held. A Communication Plan for the Delivering Social Change Framework is in preparation. This will include proposals for engaging with stakeholders.

Civil Contingencies Legislation

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 19131/11-15, why there are no plans to introduce civil contingencies legislation. (AQW 19714/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: It is not appropriate to have the UK civil contingencies legislation introduced because the wider legislative environment, structures, roles and responsibilities that apply within the public sector here are very different to those which apply in GB. To ensure that relevant needs are addressed here, our Department has set out a statement of core civil contingencies principles in the 'Northern Ireland Civil Contingencies Framework 2011' which apply to all public service organisations.

Planning: Appeals

Mr Easton asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how many planning appeals there have been over the last three years.

(AQW 20077/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Planning Appeals Commission is an independent tribunal Non-Departmental Public Body. Given its status, we have asked its Chief Commissioner to provide a response directly to you.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Rural Development Fund

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development if she is aware of the concern within rural development groups in relation to the potential negative impact on programmes following her Department's decision to claw back the underspend from axis 3 of the Rural Development Fund.

(AQW 18632/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): I have been aware of the concern within Clusters and my Officials have worked closely with the Cluster Networking Group to agree the finer detail of the mechanism to remove unspent axis 3 funds. The detail has now been agreed with the Cluster Networking Group and I'm sure that everyone will strive to ensure that their quarterly targets are met. Clusters have been aware of my concern at the level of spend within axis 3 and since the proposed introduction of this mechanism spend targets have started to be met on a much more consistent basis. I have always made it clear that I would take whatever actions had to be taken to ensure that all these funds were invested in rural areas.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how the statement from the European Health Commissioner, that a TB cattle vaccine will not be available prior to 2023, will affect her departmental plans to tackle TB in the next 5 years.

(AQW 19328/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Currently the EU Commission legislation prohibits the vaccination of cattle against bovine TB, principally because vaccination of cattle can interfere with the single comparative intradermal tuberculin test (SCITT) which is the recognised primary diagnostic test for TB in cattle.

The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) is working with the EU to seek to change the existing legislation which may allow TB vaccination of cattle alongside the use of a test to differentiate infected from vaccinated animals ("DIVA" test) to be used as an additional tool for TB control and may ultimately allow vaccinated cattle to enter trade. My officials will continue to liaise with DEFRA to remain updated on progress on this issue.

Before any change to the legislative position in relation to cattle vaccination would be considered, field trials would have to be approved by the EU Commission prior to being conducted and validated.

In addition, we should wish to be certain that any such vaccine developed would have international acceptance before considering its use here, given the value of our export dependent trade in livestock and livestock products which is worth over £1,000 million per year. We must ensure that our export trade is not compromised as a consequence and care will have to be taken to avoid trade embargoes on the export of livestock and livestock products. It is also desirable that we have an all-island approach on this.

The tentative timeline from the European Health Commissioner indicates the interim steps and milestones that will be needed to achieve the possible use of vaccine in cattle in the EU by 2023. However, this does not mean that we will be inactive in our efforts to tackle bovine TB here as is demonstrated in my Department's formal response to the Agriculture and Rural Development Committee's Report into Bovine Tuberculosis.

Cattle: Crime Reference Number

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development why the Newry Divisional Veterinary Office requests a crime reference number for cattle lost or stolen when other Divisional Veterinary Offices do not request this information. (AQW 19515/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Under The Cattle Identification (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations (NI) 2012 which came into force on 1 January 2013, keepers must now report cattle which are lost or stolen, in writing to DARD, within 7 days of the event being noticed.

It is not a legal requirement that keepers report suspected stolen cattle to the PSNI and even when they do it is not a legal requirement that they tell the Department the crime reference number. Although provision of the information is not compulsory it is not unreasonable for a DARD official to request the additional information where the keeper has indicated they have reported the suspected theft to the PSNI.

Cattle: Live Export to Libya

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she has discussed with the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and the Marine the Republic of Ireland pursuing live cattle export business opportunities to Libya. (AQW 19555/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I have not discussed this matter with Minister Coveney.

Urban Foxes

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the threat of urban foxes. (AQW 19663/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department carries out surveillance on the fox population for the purpose of meeting the EU requirements for demonstrating the north's freedom from certain animal diseases, namely trichinella and echinococcus multilocularis (tapeworm). This surveillance has shown that neither of these infections is present in the fox population here.

The Department also implements border controls and quarantine measures to prevent the entry of rabies, which is not present in the north

Fishing Vessels: Health and Safety

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she will initiate (i) a co-ordinated approach with the Coastguard and Maritime Agency, the UK Border Agency and the Health and Safety Executive to enforce the health and safety regulations on fishing vessels, in particular the EU Working Time Seafarers Directive 1999 to prevent further losses at sea; and (ii) a registration system to ensure that all seafarers working locally can provide documents to prove they hold (a) the relevant immigration status; (b) the International Seaman Handbook; and (c) proof of the necessary skills to work at sea

(AQW 19699/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I am aware of the dangers faced by seafarers in their working environment locally, and the contribution of immigrants to the fishing industry in particular.

DARD and Maritime and Coastguard Agency have a coordinated approach in place and my Department has the ability to suspend a vessel's fishing licence where the Agency has detected serious health and safety concerns.

Maritime and Coastguard Agency take the lead in marine safety issues, and I am advised that Merchant Shipping Legislation is overarching, ensuring the application of appropriate Health and Safety regulations including the application of the Working Time Directive and the certification of immigrant workers.

Rural Communities: Emigration

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the extent and scale of emigration from rural communities, and to outline her Department's strategy for stemming the flow of people, including young people, away from rural areas.

(AQW 19701/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: During the last 10 years, the population of most towns and villages has been growing at a healthy rate due to a number of factors including natural population growth, migration from Greater Belfast to rural areas and a net inflow of people to the region. However, the most recent statistics available from NISRA on migration show that during 2010-11 there was a net outflow from the north of over 900 people aged between 20 and 29, with the greatest net outflow being from Belfast City Council area.

I am acutely aware of the difficulties facing people, including young people, looking for work in rural areas. My Department continues to provide support and assistance to the agri-food sector which provides much needed jobs in rural areas. The DARD Colleges (CAFRE) play a vital role in helping this sector remain competitive in a global market by delivering higher and further education programmes to those entering the industry and providing services and training for those already working in it.

I can assure you that my Department is working hard to promote other employment opportunities in rural areas by delivering a range of funding opportunities under the Rural Development Programme, as well as initiatives under the Tackling Rural Poverty and Social Isolation Framework. This includes support for two rural youth initiatives, the Youth Employability scheme and the Youth Entrepreneurship programme which are aimed at increasing employability and promoting entrepreneurship among the young and unemployed in rural areas.

Rural Communities: Emigration

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what action she is taking to ensure the forced youth emigration from rural communities is addressed by the Executive.

(AQW 19702/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The most recent statistics available from NISRA on migration show that during 2010-11 there was a net outflow from the North of over 900 young people aged between 20 and 29, with the greatest outflow being experienced by Belfast City Council area. This issue is therefore not confined to rural areas but faces communities right across the North. I can advise that through the Tackling Rural Poverty and Social Isolation framework, my department is supporting two rural youth initiatives aimed at increasing employability and promoting entrepreneurship among the young unemployed in rural areas.

Firstly the Youth Employability scheme (BOOST) which is co-funded by the Department for Employment and Learning (DEL) provides almost 1500 unemployed young people with an opportunity to develop skills to increase their employability and improve their chances of securing a job.

Secondly The Rural Youth Entrepreneurship (RYE) programme aims to develop business potential among vulnerable young people in rural areas. The Rural Development Council (RDC) is the lead delivery partner for RYE in the North and are engaging with 600 vulnerable rural young people to stimulate business creation.

The Department's College, CAFRE, also plays a vital role delivering higher and further education programmes to those entering the agri-food industry with almost 1700 students currently enrolled on further or higher education courses, many of those from rural areas. A high proportion of CAFRE students secure employment once they graduate with statistics showing that over 90% are either in employment or continuing in education six months after graduating.

I am confident that these innovative initiatives and the ongoing work of my Department will continue to help address the problem of youth unemployment in rural areas and in doing so will help reduce migration and increase the sustainability of rural communities.

Horse Meat in Food Products: Role of DARD Central Investigation Service

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what role the Central Investigation Service has had, or will have, in relation to the issue of horse meat entering the food chain.

(AQW 19744/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Central Investigation Service does not have a role in relation to the issue of horse meat entering the food chain. The Unit is responsible for investigating any cases of suggested fraud identified by business areas across DARD. As I have consistently stated, the Food Standards Agency (FSA) is the central competent authority in matters of food safety and authenticity in NI, Scotland and Wales.

Horses: Illegal Movement

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether the Central Investigation Service was alerted to any illegal horse movements from outside Northern Ireland in relation to the Lammas Fair, Ballycastle. (AQW 19745/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Central Investigation Service has not been alerted to any illegal horse movements from outside the north of Ireland in relation to the Lammas Fair, Ballycastle.

Farm-reared Salmon

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether the Escape Monitoring Programme at the River Bush Salmon Station has detected any escaped farm-reared salmon in the last ten years. (AQW 19821/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I attach a table setting out the number of escaped farm salmon recorded at the River Bush Salmon Station in the last 10 years. You will note that numbers are very low.

The River Bush trap detects those escaped salmon that migrate into the River Bush. This monitoring provides for a relative measure of escapes and would quickly indicate if a significant escape event had occurred since numbers would increase significantly for a time. The origin of the fish could then be investigated.

Year	No. escapees	% escapees
2003	2	0.28
2004	3	0.34
2006	1	0.09
2007	0	0

2009	0	0
2011	1	0.18

Farmland Degradation

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the (i) degradation of the productive capacity of farmland that has resulted from the adverse climatic conditions over the past 18 months; (ii) loss of soil nutrients; (iii) loss of biomass and vegetative cover; and (iv) loss of productivity.

(AQW 19834/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i) degradation of the productive capacity of farmland
  - My technical teams at CAFRE have advised me that no irreparable damage has been done to the land. As soon as weather conditions allow, significant land improvement/rejuvenation work can be undertaken.
- (ii) loss of soil nutrients
  - My technical teams also advise me that intense rainfall can cause significant losses of nutrients from soil.
    Research by AFBI has shown that, environmentally and agronomically, the most serious nutrient losses as a result of intense rainfall are those associated with the mobilisation of fertiliser and slurry nutrients.
  - Furthermore wet conditions heighten gaseous denitrification losses of nitrate-N from applied fertiliser and manure. Agronomically, losses of nitrogen and potassium from applied fertiliser and manure are of economic importance, because they can significantly curtail grass and crop production via nitrogen and potassium deficiencies
  - Recent research, undertaken by AFBI in 2009 and 2011, two of the wettest years in recent times, has shown that sulphur deficiency curtailed grass production on more than 25% of silage and grazed swards at first cut or first grazing. From an arable crop perspective, wet conditions result in the leaching of, potassium (K), magnesium (Mg), boron (B) and sulphur (S) out of the crop rooting zone causing significant K and Mg deficiency problems in potatoes and other root crops, and B and S deficiency problems in cereal and vegetable crops.
  - However, the problem of soil nutrient loss is largely self-correcting once drier conditions return, since soils in NI can generally restore or replenish plant available K, Mg, B and S supplies via the breakdown or mineralization of clay minerals and organic matter.
- (iii) loss of biomass and vegetative cover
  - Since 95% of the land area in the north of Ireland is grassland there is no concern regarding vegetative cover, as crops are still in place. Bearing this in mind crop cover will ensure the retention of biomass within the soil structure
- (iv) loss of productivity.
  - There will be a reduction in livestock performance due to increased incidence of disease e.g. liver fluke and reduced grass intake because of low dry matter, spoilage and poor grazing conditions. To improve land or maintain animal performance will result in increased costs to the farmer and will impact on cash flow.
  - From an arable cropping perspective some autumn sown crops will have lower yields this year. However the high cost of seed and cultivations and the lower yields of spring cereals may mean that the best economic option will be to allow winter sown crops to remain in the rotation through to harvest. On some land where potatoes or other root crops have been harvested in very wet conditions, land drainage may have to be carried out to restore productive capability.
  - While the productivity of land will be affected in the short term, there are opportunities for farmers to take remedial action regarding soil damage.
  - CAFRE are planning to publish a series of press articles on assessing potential soil damage including possible remedial actions.
  - These press articles will be followed up by on-farm events to which farmers will be invited.

Agricultural Land: Waterlogging

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the temporary and permanent damage caused to agricultural land by waterlogging, in the last 18 months. (AQW 19836/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My technical teams at CAFRE have indicated that no permanent or irreversible damage to agricultural land has been caused by the waterlogging and heavy rainfall over the last 18 months.

- Any damage caused to soils through poaching with animals or use of heavy machinery can be repaired once weather and land conditions improve.
- Damage will vary greatly from farm to farm depending on soil type, local rainfall levels and stocking rates.
- CAFRE are planning to publish a series of press articles on assessing potential soil damage including possible remedial actions.
- These press articles will be followed up by on-farm events to which farmers will be invited.
- The temporary affect of waterlogging is evident through reduced land and animal productivity and nutrient losses, this has been addressed within AQW 19834/11-15

Memoranda of Dissent

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many memoranda of dissent have been recorded within her Department since May 2011.

(AQW 19865/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I can confirm that no memoranda of dissent have been recorded within my Department since May 2011.

Ash Dieback Disease

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in order to help identify and control future Ash Dieback disease, what consideration she has given to adopting a pre-arrival notification approach at ports and airports as has been enforced in the rest of the UK.

(AQW 19872/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I am currently considering further legislation, in conjunction with the South, to introduce a requirement for pre-notification of certain species of trees from within the EU. Pre-notification could assist in preventing disease outbreaks and importantly, provide intelligence about plant movements and assist in tracing problems. It is important our bio-security is strengthened to reduce the risk of entry of pests and disease to our island.

Land Parcel Identification System: Software Error

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in relation to a recent software error in the Land Parcel Identification System mapping system, to detail (i) the estimated cost of repairing the error in terms of (a) resources; and (b) staff time; and (ii) an indicative timescale for the repairs.

(AQW 19970/11-15)

 $\textbf{Mrs O'Neill:} \ \textbf{I} \ \textbf{can confirm that the estimated cost of repairing the error in terms of resource is £2,250 and staff time is £3,951.$

The software error was resolved by 22nd February 2013.

Slaughterhouses

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the action her Department is taking to ensure that no illegal slaughterhouses and/or rendering plants are currently operating.

(AQW 19977/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Veterinary Service's Central Enforcement Team assists local District Councils and FSA in their investigations of any reports of illegal slaughter they receive.

Reports of illegal disposal of Animal By-Products (ABP) are also followed up and investigated by DARD inspectors. None of these investigations have suggested the presence of an illegal rendering plant.

Land Parcel Identification System: Software Error

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in relation to a recent software error in the Land Parcel Identification System, (i) how many maps have been affected; (ii) when affected farmers were contacted by her Department to make them aware of the errors; and (iii) when revised maps will be issued to all affected claimants. (AQW 20032/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i) There were 3,560 farm business affected by the software error which occurred with the last set of maps to issue on 6th February 2013.
- (ii) The Department met with officials from the Ulster Farmers Union, the Northern Ireland Agricultural Producers
  Association and the Northern Ireland Agricultural Consultants Association to explain the situation and issued a Press Release on 21 February. A letter issued to farmers on 25 February explaining how the Department has dealt with the problem.

(iii) The affected farm businesses have access to revised maps on line since 22 February and will receive revised maps around the time they receive their 2013 Single Application Forms.

Land Mapping

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the additional costs, in terms of factors such as overtime, for dealing with problems identified in the field mapping exercise.

(AQW 20043/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I can confirm that the estimated cost of repairing the recent problem with farm business maps in terms of resource is £2,250 and staff time is £3,951, making a total of £6,201.

Overtime has been in operation in DARD Direct offices to facilitate demand from farmers wishing to ensure their maps are as accurate as possible, but this is not specific to the recent problem identified with a minority of maps.

Slaughterhouses

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) how many slaughterhouses and/or rendering plants are licensed to slaughter and/or process equestrian animals; and (ii) whether they are compliant with animal welfare regulations and supervised by departmental staff including vets.

(AQW 20059/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There are no slaughter plants here currently approved to slaughter horses.

There was 1 slaughter plant in Co Armagh approved for equine slaughter and slaughter of other species but it ceased slaughtering horses completely on 25th January 2013.

All slaughter premises here (including the former equine slaughter facility) are staffed by DARD veterinarians who are present at all times when slaughter is occurring, to ensure the Food Business Operators' compliance with public health, animal health and animal welfare legislation.

Each animal (including equines, when their slaughter was taking place) is individually examined in the lairage for fitness for the food chain before being allowed to be slaughtered. This inspection also verifies their identity, and ensures that their welfare is protected throughout the process.

There are 2 rendering plants approved here to process fallen animals, which may include fallen horse carcasses and parts of Both rendering plants are inspected on a monthly basis by Department staff to ensure that they are complying with the regulations.

Any non-conformances detected have been of a minor nature and have been satisfactorily dealt with during the inspection process.

DARD: Legal Claims

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many legal claims have been taken against her Department in the last three years.

(AQW 20080/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The table below details the number of legal claims taken against my Department and its Agencies since 2009/10.

Year	2009-10	2010-11	2011-12	2012-13 to date
Claims	22	22	26	21

A legal claim is considered to have been made where my Department has had to involve the Departmental Solicitors Office to provide it with either advice or counsel.

Horse Meat in Food Products: Liaison Between Departments and External Agencies

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what steps are being taken to improve governance between Departments and external agencies in the wake of the horse meat scandal. (AQW 20088/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Food Standards Agency (FSA) is the competent authority in matters of food safety and authenticity here.

DARD Veterinary Service delivers meat hygiene official controls on behalf of the FSA in approved slaughterhouses, cutting plants and game handling establishments, and its Agri-food Inspection Branch carries out primary production hygiene inspections on dairy and egg-laying premises. These activities are governed by Service Level Agreements with the FSA in the north of Ireland (FSA in NI). Senior officials from DARD and FSA in the north of Ireland maintain regular formal and informal contact to ensure consistent and effective delivery to the agreed standard, and the FSA performs regular checks and independent audits in to ensure the quality of work delivered on its behalf.

There is regular liaison between FSA in the north of Ireland, DARD and District Councils relating to dual enforcement issues in meat establishments. This includes the sharing of audit findings, joint approval visits and regular meetings of an approval forum

The FSA performs regular checks and independent audits here, to ensure the quality of the work delivered on its behalf.

In response to the recent findings, and current concerns, the FSA has developed a 4 point action plan which is being implemented in conjunction with the food industry and other government departments (including DARD).

The response between NICS Departments has been co-ordinated through the Food and Feed Incident Management Group, chaired by the Chief Veterinary Officer. This group has, to date, met four times on 17 January and 1, 8 and 21 February.

Measure 3.1 Farm Diversification

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the reasons for the transfer of funding from Measure 3.1 Farm Diversification funds to other measures as detailed in a letter to the Chairs of Joint Council Committees on 31 January 2013.

(AQW 20097/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The letter to Chairs of Joint Council Committees (JCC's) was to facilitate a number of requests received from JCC's to transfer funds from Measure 3.1 Farm Diversification to other Measures in Axis 3.

Measure 3.1 Farm Diversification

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the reasons given by groups for why funds in Measure 3.1 Farm Diversification not being been committed.

(AQW 20100/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The window for requests has not closed but to date Clusters have cited several reasons for wanting to move measure 3.1 funds as follows:-

- Inability to get enough applications to fully commit 3.1
- Wanting to ensure all funds were used in the Cluster area
- To guarantee spend

Farm Diversification Funds

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the number of requests received by her Department asking it to consider the reallocation of uncommitted Farm Diversification funds to other measures; and who made the requests.

(AQW 20101/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The window for requests has not closed but to date my Department has received 3 requests from Lagan Rural Partnership (LRP), Generating Rural Opportunities Within South Antrim (GROW) and Southern Organisation for Action in Rural areas (SOAR).

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

World Police and Fire Games: Opening Ceremony

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure where the opening ceremony of the World Police and Fire Games 2013 will take place.

(AQW 19447/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): The Opening Ceremony of the World Police and Fire Games will take place at the Kings Hall, Belfast.

World Police and Fire Games: Opening Ceremony

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what urgent action her Department is taking to secure a venue for the World Police and Fire Games 2013 Opening Ceremony.

(AQW 19486/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: 15 venues were scored against a comprehensive set of criteria to identify the most suitable venue to host the Opening Ceremony.

This process identified a preferred option and contingency options for consideration by the World Police and Fire Games Board.

The Board considered these options at its meeting on 20 February 2013 and the venue selected for the Opening Ceremony is the Kings Hall, Belfast.

World Police and Fire Games

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for which locations contracts have been signed for the World Police and Fire Games.

(AQW 19560/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: To date, one sporting venue contract has been signed (Hydebank) and negotiations on the finalisation of contacts for all sporting venues are at an advanced stage.

All of the sporting venues for the Games have been confirmed with venue organisers and were announced on 31 May 2012.

World Police and Fire Games

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for which sporting events in the World Police and Fire Games venues have not yet been finalised.

(AQW 19561/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: All venues for the delivery of sporting events in the 2013 World Police and Fire Games have been confirmed.

To date, one sporting venue contract has been signed (Hydebank) and negotiations on the finalisation of contacts for all venues are at an advanced stage.

Full details of venue locations are provided on the 2013 World Police and Fire Games website (www.2013wpfg.com).

World Police and Fire Games: Opening Ceremony

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what locations are being considered for the World Police and Fire Games opening ceremony.

(AQW 19562/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The venue for the Opening Ceremony of the World Police and Fire Games will be held at the Kings Hall, Belfast.

World Police and Fire Games: Opening Ceremony

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure when an announcement will be made on the location of the World Police and Fire Games opening ceremony.

(AQW 19563/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The announcement that the venue selected for the Opening Ceremony is the Kings Hall, Belfast, was made on 20 February 2013.

World Police and Fire Games: Opening Ceremony

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure why it has been left so late to find a venue for the opening of the World Police and Fire Games; and where responsibility lies for the delay.

(AQW 19567/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: 2013 World Police and Fire Games Limited and Belfast City Council considered sites across the city and undertook a costs analysis in seeking a suitable venue for the Opening Ceremony of the 2013 World Police and Fire Games.

The announcement that the venue selected for the Opening Ceremony is the Kings Hall, Belfast, was made on 20 February 2013. This provides sufficient time to plan and deliver the Ceremony.

Sport: Cross-community Engagement

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what grants are available to encourage cross-community engagement in sport.

(AQW 19741/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport NI, which is an arms length body of DCAL, has primary responsibility for the distribution of grants to sport. As part of its grant aiding conditions, Sport NI operates an equality scheme which requires and encourages all recipients of funding to run facilities and services in an inclusive manner and to promote equality and cross community engagement.

In addition, I am aware of a number of other organisations which may provide grant support for cross community engagement in sport. These include:

- Big Lottery Fund Awards for All, Culture for All;
- Community Relations Council Engage in community relations work and to enhance the community relations potential of projects; and
- Belfast City Council Summer Intervention Fund, Summer Playscheme Grant, Community Project Grant.

Boxing Clubs: East Londonderry

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to AQW 18728/11-15, whether she will supply the information for the entire constituency as outlined in the original question. (AQW 19788/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The answer provided to question AQW 19728/11-15 contains the information requested for the entire constituency.

Boxing

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she plans to support the establishment of a Northern Ireland amateur boxing association, given that the Assembly members supported this on 12 November 2012. (AQW 19789/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The establishment of an amateur boxing association restricted to the north of Ireland is entirely a matter for the sport to consider.

I have, however, already made clear my view that I see no rationale for any proposal to divide boxing given its strong track record of inclusiveness. The current structures governing boxing across Ireland have delivered consistently good social and sporting outcomes at local, national and international level.

Sport: Racism

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the initiatives that are being used to combat racism in sport. (AQW 19819/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have already stated publicly my own commitment to the promotion of equality and anti-discrimination generally as well as to the implementation within sport of the requirements of Section 75 of the NI Act 1998 which specifically places an obligation on public authorities to have due regard to the need to promote equality of opportunity across a range of groups including people from different racial backgrounds. My Department's strategy for sport, Sport Matters, also commits Government to promote community cohesion, including combating racism, through sport in the context of 'A Shared Future'.

In line with these commitments, Sport NI, an arms length body of DCAL, recently produced 'Promoting Fair Play in Sport'- a guide to sport and the equality legislation in the north of Ireland and has a dedicated equality section on its website which provides up-to-date equality information for all sports organisations. Sport NI is also working with all funded governing bodies to support them in achieving the foundation level of the Equality Standard: A Framework for Sport.

Furthermore, as part of its wider safe sports grounds initiative, DCAL supported the Department of Justice in introducing the Justice Act (NI) 2011 which makes it a criminal offence for spectators at regulated matches to engage in racist chanting or to stir up hatred against groups of persons on the basis of race.

Windsor Park

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what plans her Department has to promote the revamped Windsor Park as a potential venue for the UEFA Super Cup Final.

(AQW 19867/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Responsibility for promoting Windsor Park as a potential venue for the UEFA Super Cup Final rests, in the first instance, with the governing body of football in the north of Ireland, the Irish Football Association.

Sport: Junior Sports Teams

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what grants are available for setting up junior sports teams. (AQW 19886/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport NI, which is an arm's length body of DCAL, has primary responsibility for the distribution of grants to sport. However, Sport NI does not currently have any funding programmes open which are specifically aimed at setting up junior sports teams.

Grants for this purpose would have been available in the past under the Sport NI 'Awards for Sport' Programme and 'Sport Matters-Capital and Equipment' Programme. Consideration may be given to re-open the 'Awards for Sport' Programme in future financial years. In the meantime, I understand that there are other funders who may consider grant support for setting up junior sports teams and a list can be obtained from Sport NI's website www.sportni.net/funding.

Inshore Sea Angling

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether her Department will assume responsibility for the regulation and development of inshore sea angling.

(AQW 19930/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: DCAL's remit under the Fisheries Act (NI) 1966 is the conservation, protection and development of salmon and inland fisheries. The mouths of rivers are defined in the Act, which establishes the boundary between the sea and inland fisheries.

DCAL's responsibility does not extend to inshore sea angling.

DCAL: Economic, Social and Equality Returns

Mr Molloy asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline her Department's approach to the development of a model for sustainable economic, social, and equality returns across all departmental work streams. (AQO 3458/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Programme for Government clearly states the Executive's primary focus and collective responsibility to grow the economy and tackle disadvantage.

I have therefore set tackling poverty and social exclusion as the key priority for my Department. This fully supports DCAL's mission to deliver economic growth and to enhance the quality of life here by unlocking the full potential of the culture, arts and leisure sectors.

This priority is guiding all departmental work streams and will bring concerted effort in proactively tackling patterns of social disadvantage that have existed historically and remain today.

For example, my Department is currently compiling its strategy to ensure delivery against the PfG target to "include Social Clauses in all public procurement contracts for suppliers, services and construction" and to maximise the socio-economic impacts achievable.

Many in our community face profound and persistent barriers to equality of opportunity. These are exacerbated by poverty and socio-economic disadvantage. Therefore it is imperative that everything we do across Government helps to deliver sustainable economic, social, and equality returns.

Question for Written Answer: AQW 18202/11-15

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure when she intends to answer AQW 18202/11-15. (AQO 3462/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The answer to AQW 18202/11-15 issued on the 22nd of February 2013.

First World War: Centenary

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what action her Department is taking to acknowledge and commemorate, during the centenary of the First World War in 2014, the service of men and women from Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

(AQO 3466/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The First World War is one of several major events and significant anniversaries from the 1912 - 1922 period. The creative and cultural infrastructure and programmes already funded and supported by my Department will play a key role in telling the stories and different interpretations of the First World War and other important events from this Decade of Centenaries

For example, Libraries NI is developing a programme of exhibitions, talks and book launches to commemorate the start of the First World War.

National Museums NI is planning online access to collections and an exhibition and programming at the Ulster Museum and Ulster Folk & Transport Museum. This will also involve co-operation with the National Museum of Ireland, and the Imperial War Museum and National Portrait Gallery in London.

PRONI is also planning an exhibition and a lecture series as well as collaboration with other archives and museums in Ireland and Britain.

The Somme Heritage Centre is developing a programme of work exploring significant anniversaries during the Decade of Centenaries and this will include a focus on the First World War.

Ulster Folk and Transport Museum

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she has any plans to provide additional funding for the upgrade of exhibits at the Ulster Folk and Transport Museum at Cultra.

(AQO 3470/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: It is a matter for the Board of Trustees to prioritise their budgets, including allocations to renew or upgrade exhibits and exhibitions.

I have no plans to allocate additional funds at present as my Department has provided a £2.2m capital budget to National Museums this year.

The Trustees are spending £450,000 of this budget, plus a further £257k of NITB match funding, at the Folk and Transport Museum site.

This will develop the Folk Museum as a leader in fostering rural crafts, skills and traditions and as a "must-see" cultural and heritage destination.

Department of Education

DE: Special Adviser

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education (i) whether his Special Adviser has made any declarations on interest, pursuant to the obligation of civil servants; (ii) how such declarations are recorded; and (iii) whether they are open to public inspection. (AQW 19246/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): Like all civil servants Special Advisers are contractually required under the Standards of Conduct Section 6.01 of the NICS HR Handbook to declare any conflicts of interest so that decisions can be made on the best way to proceed. There is no published register of such declarations.

Education: Regional Training Unit

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Education to outline the reasons for the removal of funding from the Regional Training Unit, in relation to the Professional Qualification for Headship (NI) award.

(AQW 19559/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Budget 2011-15 outcome for education produced major challenges and a Savings Delivery Plan was developed to ensure that my Department remained within budget.

The saving target for Professional Support Services includes a number of funding areas including the Regional Training Unit (RTU). The budget in respect of the RTU for 2011/12 was £2,363k, and was reduced to £1,032k in 2012/13. There has been a considerable degree of transparency and notice over the savings required for this financial year.

The RTU is not, however, specifically funded for the operation of the Professional Qualification for Headship (PQH). It is a matter for the RTU Management Board to determine which programmes to run, in line with my priorities.

Education: Nurture Group Provision

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 16033/11-15, for an update on the current situation. (AQW 19597/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Proposals to identify potential locations for new nurture group provision based on objective criteria are under active consideration within DE and DSD.

Education: Continuing Professional Development

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 19225/11-15, how the £11.5 million has been allocated in this financial year.

(AQW 19841/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The budget in respect of Continuing Professional Development across the school sectors in this financial year is as follows:

	£000
Teacher Education (Irish Medium Review)	82
Early Professional Development	234
STEM (Science Technology Engineering Maths)	300

	£000
RTU (Regional Training Unit)	1,032

Autism

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education how many (i) pre-school; (ii) primary school; and (iii) post-primary school children living in the North Down Borough Council area have a statement of special educational needs for autism. (AQW 20117/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information requested is contained in the table below.

Pupils with a statement of Special Educational Needs who have been recorded as having Autism and who are resident in the North Down Borough Council area – 2012/13

School type	Total pupils
Funded pre-school education	6
Primary school age	44
Post-primary school age	47
Total	97

Source: School census

Note:

- 1 Figures include children in voluntary and private pre-school centres, nursery, primary, post-primary and special schools.
- 2 Figures for pre-school children are based on school location, as only aggregate data is held by the Department for children attending voluntary and private pre-school centres.

Autism

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education how many (i) pre-school; (ii) primary school; and (iii) post-primary school children in North Down, who have been diagnosed with autism, are awaiting a statement of special educational needs; and how many children with autism have been refused a statement in the last twelve months.

(AQW 20118/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The South Eastern Education and Library Board has advised that there are currently 40 children, living within the North Down Constituency, who have been diagnosed with autism as their primary special educational need (SEN) as follows:-

Pre-school	0
Primary	25
Post-primary	15

There are 3 children with autism, who are currently having their statutory assessment undertaken, but who have not yet received a final statement of SEN.

No children with autism have been refused a statement of SEN in the period February 2012 – January 2013.

Community Relations, Equality and Diversity Policy

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Education to outline his Department's expenditure on Community Relations Equality and Diversity for (i) 2011/12; and (ii) 2012/13; and how these funds are allocated. (AQW 20119/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I can confirm that my Department allocated £1,139k in 2011/12 and £1,163k in 2012/13 to fund implementation of the Community Relations, Equality and Diversity policy. The funds are allocated by applying the Assessment of Relative Needs Exercise (ARNE) formula, which takes into account a number of factors including population statistics for age 14-25, youth TSN data, level of rurality, etc. Funding has been allocated as follows:

	2011/12	2012/13
Belfast Education & Library Board	£221k	£222k

	2011/12	2012/13
North-Eastern Education & Library Board	£206k	£210k
South-Eastern Education & Library Board	£190k	£195k
Southern Education & Library Board	£223k	£218k
Western Education & Library Board	£161k	£175k
Youth Council NI	£138k	£143k

Community Relations, Equality and Diversity Policy

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Education what external evaluation has been, or will be, carried out to monitor the effectiveness of the Community Relations Equality and Diversity policy. (AQW 20120/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: As you will be aware, the Community Relations, Equality and Diversity (CRED) policy was launched in March 2011.

A formal evaluation will be commissioned from the Education and Training Inspectorate once the policy has had sufficient time to embed, likely to be 3-5 years, and any formal review is unlikely to take place before the 2014-15 academic year.

Officials are currently undertaking a series of informal CRED Focus Groups across the north of Ireland involving school principals, teachers, youth workers and young people to inform effective implementation of the policy.

Post-primary Education

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Education when he will progress his Department's plans for post-primary education. (AQW 20121/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Following my statement to the Assembly on 26 February 2013, the revised area plans for post-primary provision, together with reports on the consultation responses, were released by the Education and Library Boards and made available on each Board's website. I have written to each Board and the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS) outlining my Department's views on their plans and setting out how I plan to move forward. In the coming weeks my officials will meet with the Boards and CCMS to discuss in detail the Department's assessment of the plans and to identify areas where further work is needed.

A Steering Group will be established to assist the Department to co-ordinate and oversee the continuing development of the area plans. My Department will chair this group and it will include representatives from the Controlled, Maintained, Integrated and Irish-medium sectors. The group's work programme will aim to fill the gaps in the current area plans, to embed a single approach to area planning and to identify priority areas for action in the short to medium term.

Ministerial Advisory Group on the Advancement of Shared Education

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Education to outline the process that will follow the submission of the Ministerial Advisory Group on Shared Education's report.

(AQW 20122/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Ministerial Advisory Group report will inform policy to determine the most effective way to advance the Programme for Government commitments on Shared Education.

Planning the next stage in the process will be largely dependent on the specific findings of the independent report, but at this stage it would be my intention to embark on a civic debate to further inform the policy direction.

Teachers: Principles and Vice-principals Redundancy Scheme

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education for an update on the establishment of an Efficient Discharge Scheme. (AQW 20157/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I would refer the member to my answer to AQW 19842/11-15 tabled by Alastair Ross and published in the official report on 22 February 2013.

School Meals

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Education to detail the total number and average cost of school dinners served in (i) nursery; (ii.) primary; (iii) special; and (iv) post-primary schools, broken down by Education and Library Board, over the last 12 months

(AQW 20169/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Details of the total number and average cost of school dinners in schools have been provided by the Education and Library Boards and are outlined in Table 1.

Table 1: Total Number and Average Cost of School Dinners Broken Down by Education and Library Board from 1 April 2011- 31 March 2012

				Post-
	Nursery	Primary	Special	Primary	Total
BELB
Pupil Meals	394,795	2,011,002	181,855	773,494	3,361,146

Pupil Meals	133,038	2,190,436	125,315	1,160,390	3,609,179

SELB				•
Pupil Meals	291,019	3,430,021	58,938	2,143,683	5,923,661
Average Cost per Meal	£2.28	£2.38	£2.38 (primary) £2.58 (postprimary)	£2.58
WELB
Pupil Meals	63,805	3,111,908	98,057	1,796,152	5,069,922
Average Cost per Meal	£2.29	£2.39	£2.39 (primary) £2.59 (postprimary)	£2.59

The data reflects the position over the period 1 April 2011- 31 March 2012 as this is the last year for which audited and verified expenditure is available. As the price of a meal has changed during this period a weighted average price has been used. Pupil meals include both free and paying pupils.

It should be noted that:

- Some supply kitchens supply meals to a mix of nursery, primary, post-primary and special schools from one site.
- Nursery meal numbers include nursery schools and nursery units in primary schools. The costs in primary schools do not always provide a breakdown of the element associated with nursery units in this regard.
- Special schools comprise a range of age groups which include nursery, primary and post-primary age pupils who will receive different portion sizes. Consequently, different prices are charged to reflect the different age groups and portion size. The SEELB, however, charges one price for a meal provided in a special school.

Due to these variations in the arrangements for the provision of school meals and in how information is subsequently collected and presented it has been necessary to use the pupil meal price and the full cost recovery calculation for a meal as a proxy for the cost of the meal in each sector.

School Closures: Lisnaskea High School

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the impact on the rural community of south Fermanagh arising from the closure of Lisnaskea High School.

Mr O'Dowd: I am aware that the Western Education and Library Board is currently processing a statutory Development Proposal to support the merger of Lisnaskea High School with Devenish College. However, until a Proposal is published, the issues involved are a matter for the Western Board to consider.

DE: Staff Travel Claims

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education to detail the cost to his Department of staff travel claims in each of the last three years.

(AQW 20192/11-15)

(AQW 20171/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The cost to my Department of staff travel claims in each of the last three years was as follows:

Financial Year	£,000
2009-10	496
2010-11	451
2011-12	408

DE: Information Service

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education how many staff are employed in his Department's Information Service; and what is the annual cost of this service.

(AQW 20217/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education's Information Service comprises a total of 13 staff. Five information officers are responsible for the Departmental website and social media output, media relations, management of webmail queries, update of the NI Direct website, preparation of ministerial briefings relating to school visits and have oversight of internal communications. A Desktop Publishing Unit, comprising 4 staff, provide a design and print service to the Department and 4 administrative staff provide a support service. Five of the staff work reduced hours, therefore the full-time equivalent figure is 11.65.

The cost of salaries for the most recent financial year available (2011-12) was £406,207.

Integrated Services for Children and Young People Project

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how his Department is supporting the continuing development of Integrated Services.

(AQW 20319/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: From 1st October 2012, operational responsibility for the Integrated Services for Children and Young People (ISCYP) project transferred to the Department for Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS). I am continuing to support the project through the transfer of £200k from the education budget to DHSSPS to help fund the project from October 2012 until March 2013.

One meeting was held between senior Officials in DE and PHA. A number of telephone discussions also took place with Officials in DHSSPS.

As the Belfast Education and Library Board had operational responsibility for the delivery of the project, any additional meetings to progress the new delivery arrangements would have taken place between BELB and PHA.

Given responsibility has transferred details of schools that are currently receiving support from the project would have to be sought directly from DHSSPS.

Local Employment Intermediary Service: Moyle Area

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for a breakdown by district electoral area of the home address location of the present clientele of the Local Employment Intermediary Service within the Moyle District Council. (AQW 19568/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): Network Personnel deliver the Local Employment Intermediary Service (LEMIS) in the Moyle District Council area and the wider outreach NI Area 2 for clients with a common employability barrier. The table, which has been placed in the Assembly Library and on my Department's website at http://www.delni.gov. uk/, provides a breakdown of the number of caseloads and the number of clients who entered employment by electoral areas, since the service began in September 2011.

There are currently 50 active clients; however, the flexible nature of LEMIS allows clients to disengage and re-engage whenever they wish to receive help and support. LEMIS clients can use the service on a voluntary basis at any time that suits them and this will not affect any benefits they may receive.

Local Employment Intermediary Service: Moyle Area

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for a breakdown by district electoral area of the home address location of the present clientele of the Local Employment Intermediary Service within the Moyle District Council who have been found full-time employment.

(AQW 19569/11-15)

Dr Farry: Network Personnel deliver the Local Employment Intermediary Service (LEMIS) in the Moyle District Council area and the wider outreach NI Area 2 for clients with a common employability barrier. The table, which has been placed in the Assembly Library and on my Department's website at http://www.delni.gov.uk/, provides a breakdown of the number of caseloads and the number of clients who entered employment by electoral areas, since the service began in September 2011.

There are currently 50 active clients; however, the flexible nature of LEMIS allows clients to disengage and re-engage whenever they wish to receive help and support. LEMIS clients can use the service on a voluntary basis at any time that suits them and this will not affect any benefits they may receive.

South West College

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether the 2011/12 Annual Report and Financial Statements of the South West College have been received and approved by the Department and to outline the reasons for any delay. (AQW 19659/11-15)

Dr Farry: The South West College accounts were signed by the Comptroller and Auditor General on 7 February 2013, received by the Department on 13 February 2013 and laid at the Northern Ireland Assembly on 15 February 2013. There was a delay in finalising the accounts due to a public interest disclosure in respect of the administration of funded projects by the college. An independent review was commissioned to examine the claims and the Northern Ireland Audit Office delayed completion of the external audit until the findings of the review were reported. No adjustments to the accounts were required as a result of the findings.

Youth Employment Scheme

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many (i) businesses; and (ii) young people have signed on to the Youth Employment Scheme; and whether these numbers meet the targets for the scheme (AQW 19683/11-15)

Dr Farry: At 15th February 525 businesses had entered into at least one agreement to offer young people opportunities under the Youth Employment Scheme. In total 1,076 opportunities have been offered: 721 short, two - eight week work experience placements, 175 six - nine month skills development opportunities and 180 jobs attracting the enhanced employer subsidy. In total 247 young people have availed of these opportunities: 115 have completed or were engaged in work experience, 26 on skills development and 106 into subsidised employment. In total, 125 young people have entered employment: 19 directly from work experience and 106 via the enhanced employer subsidy.

In addition 250 of the 500 temporary employment opportunities available under the "First Start" strand of the Steps to Work programme had been filled.

Performance against targets for 2012/13 will be assessed at the end of March.

Higher Education: Enrolment Numbers in Cregagh and Stormont Wards

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Employment and Learning why there is a notable difference between Cregagh ward and Stormont ward with regard to enrolment numbers in higher education.

(AQW 19707/11-15)

Dr Farry: The broad correlation between areas of high deprivation and low participation rates in higher education is well established and the Northern Ireland Multiple Deprivation Measure indicates that, out of the 582 wards in Northern Ireland, Stormont is ranked 576 and Cregagh ranked 116 (where 1 is the most deprived and 582 the least deprived).

My Department's Higher Education Strategy, Graduating to Success, has a strong focus on the creation of a more accessible higher education sector and this will be integral to the implementation of "Access to Success" the separate integrated Regional Strategy for Widening Participation in Higher Education. The Department has been supported in the development of "Access to Success" by the Higher Education Institutions, the Further Education Colleges and relevant experts from the public and private sectors, and other government departments. The strategy, therefore, represents the first inter-institutional and Governmental attempt to address this issue.

"Access to Success" targets those students from groups who are under-represented in higher education and one of the key objectives is to raise aspiration and attainment amongst these groups. My Department, in conjunction with the Higher Education institutions, will develop and implement a single integrated regional awareness raising programme to increase the profile and relevance of higher education and skills in under-represented communities. In addition, my Department will make additional funding available to support the expansion of the range of aspiration and attainment raising programmes in schools, colleges the community and the workplace. Overall, the strategy aims to more closely target resources in areas of most need by identifying individual students who are at risk of multiple disadvantage in order to develop appropriate support solutions tailored to individual needs.

Employer Support Programme

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the operation and oversight of the Employer Support Programme in terms of preventing duplicate funding on project claims and whether any incidents of abuse been identified.

(AQW 19735/11-15)

Dr Farry: Each Further Education college involved in the delivery of the Employer Support Programme, must adhere to the relevant Departmental policy circular, as well as a Letter of Offer, which is signed by the college Director, in his capacity as Accounting Officer. The Letter of Offer sets out strict parameters for the programme, and precludes any economic engagement or business support activities funded by other Government sources.

To help provide assurance, my Department commissions an annual audit of college claims by its internal Financial Audit and Support Team.

Additionally, my Department previously commissioned FGS McClure Watters to evaluate the former pilot Employer Support Programme, which included an examination of how activities throughout the programme fitted with other similar programmes, operated by other Government agencies. This report stated that, while there were low risks of potential duplication, there were controls in place to eradicate this.

I am, however, aware of the potential for duplication of funding within the programme and an assurance exercise is to be carried out across the Further Education sector.

Apprenticeship and Training Schemes

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline all current apprenticeship and training schemes that provide employers with a taxation or monetary benefit. (AQW 19740/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department's ApprenticeshipsNI programme and the Youth Employment Scheme provide employers with the financial support outlined below.

ApprenticeshipsNI

ApprenticeshipsNI offers training across a wide range of occupational areas to employees who earn a wage while working with experienced staff to learn and develop their skills. An apprentice also receives 'off-the-job' training to work towards achieving a competence based qualification, a knowledge based qualification, and Essential Skills.

For apprentices aged between 16 and 24 years old direct training costs are met in full by my Department. Funding, determined by the level and occupational area, ranges from £2,600 to £10,800. On achievement of a full apprenticeship framework an employer incentive payment ranging from £500 to £1,500 (determined by the funding band) is paid to the apprentice's current employer.

For apprentices aged 25 years old and older, a reduced level of funding is available for apprenticeship training in economically important sectors. On achievement of a full apprenticeship framework the associated employer incentive payment ranges from £250 to £750.

The Youth Employment Scheme

Two strands of the Youth Employment Scheme offer financial support to help employers meet the cost of training. Both the skills development programme and subsidised employment strands offer up to £750 per trainee or employee to help meet the cost of training in sector-specific skills. In these strands the Youth Employment Scheme targets support at sectors that have the potential to help rebuild and rebalance the Northern Ireland economy.

The provision outlined above does not provide employers with taxation benefit. As you will be aware, taxation matters are not devolved to the Northern Ireland Assembly. Should such tax incentives be made available on a UK-wide basis then I would ensure that relevant Northern Ireland policy is enabled to ensure that employers benefit from such measures.

Redundancies: East Belfast

Mr Copeland asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the reasons for the 260 confirmed redundancies in East Belfast in 2011.

(AQW 19765/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department was notified of 163 confirmed redundancies for Belfast East Parliamentary Constituency Area (PCA) in 2011. The table below details the number of confirmed redundancies in Belfast East in 2011, disaggregated by the reason stated by the company for the redundancies on the advance notification of redundancies form (HR1).

Under the Employment Rights (Northern Ireland) Order 1996 (amended 8 October 2006), companies are only legally required to provide notification of the impending redundancy of 20 or more employees at any one site. Also, redundancies do not necessarily equate to job losses; for example, employees who do not qualify for a redundancy package, such as those on temporary contracts, will not be incorporated into the redundancy figures.

Table 1: Confirmed Redundancies by Reason for Belfast East PCA in 2011

Redundancy Reason	Number
Closure/Administration	59
Reduction in Operating budget	14
Reduced demand for products or services	90
Total	163

Local Employment Intermediary Service: Ballymoney and Ballymena

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) the outreach arrangements in the boroughs of Ballymoney and Ballymena in respect of the Local Employment Intermediary Service; and (ii) and how many clients are currently being assisted in each of these areas.

(AQW 19814/11-15)

Dr Farry:

(i) The Local Employment Intermediary Service (LEMIS) has been marketed directly by way of meetings and formal presentations with Ballymena, Coleraine and Limavady Councils (including community development and neighbourhood renewal teams). An information pack promoting awareness of the service was also forwarded to the community development officer within Ballymoney Council. However, networking and developing good relationships with the Jobs & Benefits Offices (JBOs) and specialist agencies in areas, such as the Youth Justice Agency and organisations that deal with drug and alcohol addictions, are the key means of receiving referrals.

In Ballymoney, the largest proportion of referrals comes from staff in the JBO. Referrals have also been received from Holywell hospital and community addictions team, Triangle Housing, the PSNI, Probation Board (PBNI) and the resettlement team in Maghaberry Prison. Client engagement is usually carried out in the confidential interview rooms within Ballymoney JBO.

In Ballymena, referrals come from a wide range of sources such as PSNI, PBNI, Youth Justice Agency, Careers Service, JBO, Hope Centre, Simon Community Hostel, Living Rivers Hostel, Triangle Housing, Threshold, and the Community Addictions Team. Client engagements tend to be undertaken on an outreach basis often on the premises of the referral organisation, or if this is not possible, then an interview room in a JBO is used.

(ii) Since 1 September 2011 when the service became available, a total of 2 clients have been caseloaded from the Ballymoney area. One of these clients is currently active. A total of 26 clients from the Ballymena area have been caseloaded, of whom 11 are currently active.

Local Employment Intermediary Service

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, using home addresses, to detail the number of people who are availing of the Local Employment Intermediary Service, broken down by council area. (AQW 19815/11-15)

Dr Farry: I have placed tables in the Assembly Library and on my department's website at http://www.delni.gov.uk/. The tables at Annex A detail the number of people who have availed of the Local Employment Intermediary Service (LEMIS), broken down by council area and the number of people who have found full-time employment, through the Local Employment Intermediary Service, broken down by council area, since LEMIS 2 began in April 2011.

Clients living in LEMIS designated areas are free to choose the services of any provider, except in NI Areas 1, 2 and 3 [see Annex C for details of contract provision in Northern Ireland] where individuals must avail of LEMIS from the contracted provider for those areas.

Local Employment Intermediary Service

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, using home addresses, to detail the number of people who have found full-time employment through the Local Employment Intermediary Service, broken down by council area. (AQW 19816/11-15)

Dr Farry: I have placed tables in the Assembly Library and on my department's website at http://www.delni.gov.uk/. The tables at Annex A detail the number of people who have availed of the Local Employment Intermediary Service (LEMIS), broken down by council area and the number of people who have found full-time employment, through the Local Employment Intermediary Service, broken down by council area, since LEMIS 2 began in April 2011.

DEL: Hospitality Spend

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what was the total spend on hospitality by his Department in 2011/12.

(AQW 19855/11-15)

Dr Farry: The total spend on hospitality by the Department in 2011/12 was £26,872.

University of Ulster: Closure of Childcare Facilities

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what discussions were held before the recent decision was taken to close day care nursery on campus locations; and who was involved in these discussions. (AQW 19877/11-15)

Dr Farry: On 8 February 2013 the University of Ulster confirmed its decision to close its university managed childcare facilities in the Magee and Jordanstown campuses from 31 July 2013.

The University has advised that the decision has been taken because the childcare provision has continued to sustain a significant annual deficit of approximately £114k and is therefore no longer economically viable. Also, the University points out that between the two campuses 23 students use the childcare facilities with the majority of students with childcare needs choosing to receive direct financial support in order to avail of childcare facilities closer to their homes/places of residence.

The University states that the change is being implemented with the support of its Student Union. The Student Union has indicated that it was involved in the review of student support under which the crèches fall and that it recognises that the crèches are operating on a significant deficit. It has requested that any monies saved as a result of the closures should be reinvested into effectively supporting student parents with childcare costs.

Also, the University held discussions on the proposal with key stakeholders. In line with agreed procedures when any possible restructuring or closure is being considered, the first meeting took place with the relevant Trade Unions. This was followed by meetings with staff in the day care nurseries and staff from Social Services, the body which has an oversight role in this area. At that stage the discussion centred on the proposed closure pending the completion of an equality screening exercise. All parents with children in the nurseries were informed of the proposed closure by letter.

Further meetings were held with the Trade Unions and with the staff in the nurseries in which the decision to close the nurseries was communicated. At that time parents received a second letter advising them of the decision and a meeting was subsequently held with parents to discuss the decision and the alternatives open to them. The University argues that it was not possible to meet with parents until it had met with the Trade Unions and informed the nursery staff in the first instance.

Stranmillis University College: Board of Governors

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 19318/11-15, what role the Commissioner for Public Appointments had in the decision to re-advertise the post; and how this compares with 2004 when the single applicant was appointed.

(AQW 19880/11-15)

Dr Farry: Before the selection panel made its decision to re-advertise the post of Chairperson of the Board of Governors of Stranmillis University College, advice was sought from the Commissioner for Public Appointments. The Commissioner had no objections to this proposed course of action.

There is no record of the Commissioner having been approached on a similar issue in 2004.

DEL: Staff Childcare Schemes

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what measures he is taking to support staff within his Department and its agencies in accessing affordable childcare.

(AQW 19906/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department for Employment and Learning provides assistance to staff with childcare costs under the NICS Salary Sacrifice Scheme. This scheme, in partnership with Employers For Childcare, currently offers Salary Sacrifice Childcare Vouchers to employees. Staff participating in the scheme can exchange part of their salary each month for vouchers to contribute towards their childcare costs. The benefit of this scheme is that participants do not pay income tax or National Insurance Contributions on this amount, yielding potential savings of over £900 per parent each year.

Details of the Scheme are made available to staff via HRConnect, the NICS HR Services provider. The Scheme has also been promoted in the Department's Core Brief to staff, and includes information on Employers for Childcare Road shows.

The Department also provides a facility for the reimbursement of reasonable additional care costs for dependants, incurred when staff are required by the Department to attend work outside their normal working pattern. This is in accordance with the Reimbursement of Additional Care Costs section of the NICS HR Handbook.

Unemployment: North Down

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what work related schemes are in place to tackle unemployment in North Down.

(AQW 19917/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department is committed to reducing unemployment for all individuals across Northern Ireland, irrespective of where they live. Bangor Jobcentre services the North Down Area and offers a range of services, initiatives and programmes to help jobseekers find employment, particularly people who are unemployed, individuals with disabilities and those with other barriers to work. Services include job search, help with writing a CV or job application form, preparing for interviews, careers guidance, or help with travel costs for job interviews.

In the period of April 2012 to December 2012 my Department helped 952 people move from welfare into work in the North Down area.

Steps to Work (StW) programme

All unemployed clients in the North Down area can participate in the StW programme, which is the Department's main adult return to work programme. The aim of StW is to assist people who are unemployed or economically inactive to find and sustain employment.

Between 1 April 2011 and 31 March 2012, Bangor Jobcentre placed 389 StW clients into employment. From 1 April 2012 to date, 291 StW clients have been placed into employment in North Down. There are currently 627 clients from North Down on the StW programme.

Step Ahead 50+

Part of the Executive's recently announced Economy and Jobs Initiative, Step Ahead 50+ is a new targeted initiative introduced in January 2013 and delivered within the StW programme.

Step Ahead 50+ provides temporary employment with organisations within the community/voluntary sector for up to 26 weeks for those aged 50 years or over who have been unemployed and claiming benefits for at least 12 months.

First Start

Another new initiative recently implemented within the StW programme is 'First Start'. Between now and 2014, First Start will support 1,700 waged employment opportunities across Northern Ireland, each lasting a minimum of six months, for young people aged 18 to 24 who have been in receipt of Jobseeker's Allowance for at least six months.

Youth Employment Scheme (YES)

In March last year the Executive agreed a package of new measures, incorporating the Youth Employment Scheme, to help young people gain experience, acquire new skills and find employment.

In the past few months my Department has been actively working with employers to secure opportunities across Northern Ireland. I have been delighted by the response of employers in the North Down area so far and I expect many more to come forward to offer opportunities for young people in the coming months. We are now focusing our efforts on the young unemployed and are encouraging them to participate in the Scheme.

Pathways to Work

The Department's Pathways to Work programme assists people with health conditions and disabilities move into employment. Currently there are 382 clients participating on the programme in the North Down area.

YMCA Craft Programme

Last September, a programme entitled C.R.A.F.T. (Careers Related Advice and Further Training), which is a joint initiative between my Department, North Down YMCA and the South Eastern Regional College (SERC), was piloted in the Bangor area. 11 young people in the 18-24 year old cohort participated in this programme and the outcomes were very positive. The C.R.A.F.T. programme comprises an 8 week structured programme of Careers Guidance Clinics, Employment Adviser liaison and a series of personal development and training opportunities provided by SERC and the North Down YMCA.

Other Departmental training programmes, such as Apprenticeships NI and Training for Success, are also available across Northern Ireland. These opportunities are open to eligible people from all areas and staff at the Bangor Jobcentre can provide advice on all of the programmes and initiatives available.

University of Ulster: Magee Campus Day Care Facilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, in relation to day care facilities at the Magee Campus of the University of Ulster, to outline; (i) the financial deficit over the last ten years; (ii) any funding prior to and since the construction of the dedicated facility that was received from the EU; and (iii) what oversight was provided by the University to manage the finances of the unit.

(AQW 20257/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department does not hold the information requested. However, my officials have contacted the University of Ulster and have been advised that the financial out-turn for the Magee campus day care facility for each of the last ten years was follows. Figures in brackets represent a deficit.

02/03	3,140
03/04	(20,015)
04/05	(11,799)
05/06	(26,919)
06/07	(49,731)
07/08	(52,693)
08/09	(57,552)
09/10	(65,916)
10/11	(38,782)
11/12	(34,762)

The University has also confirmed that a grant of £193,500 was received from the European Union in 1999 towards the construction of the facility. No EU funding has been received since then.

Management oversight of the facility is provided by professional student support staff. Additionally a nominated individual in the University's Finance Department has responsibility for the preparation of the nursery accounts which includes the provision of financial advice.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

DETI: Hospitality Spend

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what was the total spend on hospitality by her Department in 2011/12.

(AQW 19629/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): The total spend by DETI on hospitality in 2011/12 was £16,986.

Fuel Prices

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the Executive's strategy and action plans for securing reduced fuel prices for local consumers, particularly electricity, home heating oil, petrol and diesel. (AQW 19694/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Executive approved Strategic Energy Framework, published by my Department in September 2010, addresses the issue of encouraging competitive energy pricing under a number of actions. In particular, ensuring there is transparency in setting of electricity and gas prices, encouraging more companies to enter the gas and electricity markets and helping to create conditions which more readily facilitate customer switching.

In addition, my Department is committed to extending the natural gas network to further towns in the West and North West, including Dungannon, Coalisland, Cookstown, Magherafelt, Omagh, Enniskillen/Derrylin and Strabane. This will give both business and domestic consumers in the new licence area access to a wider, and potentially cheaper, choice of fuel.

My Department has also recently introduced support measures to encourage domestic and commercial customers to utilise innovative renewable heating technologies. The Renewable Heat Premium Payment scheme for domestic consumers and the Renewable Heat Incentive for the non-domestic market provide financial support for those wishing to move away from conventional fossil fuels, such as home heating oil.

Whilst my Department has no statutory role in setting electricity prices my officials continue to maintain close contact with the Utility Regulator regarding energy prices, given its important role in electricity and gas regulation.

Retail prices for a range of filling station products and home heating oil fall outside the scope of my Department.

Invest NI: Innovation Voucher Scheme

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what measures are in place to prevent Invest NI funding, particularly relating to innovation vouchers from being abused through double funding on project claims, for example under the Employer Support Programme administered by the Department for Employment and Learning, and have there been any occasions when this has occurred, and with what consequences.

(AQW 19731/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI's Innovation Voucher scheme has robust procedures in place which are accredited under ISO9001 and subject to regular audits. To avoid instances of potential double funding the following measures are in place:

- On the application form, applicants declare that the project in the application is not already in receipt of, or likely to be in receipt of any other public funding.
- Successful voucher applicants choose a Knowledge Provider who agrees a Terms of Reference for the project. This outlines the stages of the project, timescale and cost. The Knowledge Provider confirms in writing that there is no conflict of interest in relation to their engagement as the knowledge provider on the Project. Invest NI assess all project Terms of Reference prior to the issue of a purchase order direct to the Knowledge Provider. No payment is made to the business.
- On completion of a voucher project, the Knowledge Provider provides a copy of the final report to Invest NI. All reports are reviewed against the original Letter of Notification for quality and challenged if necessary prior to payment being made to the Knowledge Provider.
- Invest NI is unaware of any occasion when funding relating to innovation vouchers has been abused through double funding on project claims, for example under the Employer Support Programme administered by the Department for Employment and Learning.

In addition, the Department for Employment and Learning has informed me that each Further Education (FE) college involved in the delivery of the Employer Support Programme (ESP) must adhere to the relevant policy circular (FE 14/11), as well as a Letter of Offer, which is signed by the college Director, in his capacity as Accounting Officer. The Letter of Offer sets out strict parameters for the programme, and specifically precludes any economic engagement or business support activities funded by other Government sources, including innovation vouchers.

To help assure this, the Department for Employment and Learning liaises with Invest NI on a regular basis and commissions an annual audit of college claims by its internal Financial Audit and Support Team.

Additionally, the Department previously commissioned FGS McClure Watters to evaluate the former pilot Employer Support Programme, which included an examination of how activities throughout the programme fitted with other similar programmes, operated by other Government agencies. This report stated that, while there were low risks of potential duplication, there were controls in place to eradicate this.

The Department for Employment and Learning remains aware of the potential for duplication of funding within the programme and is currently implementing an assurance exercise across the FE sector.

Northern Ireland Small Business Loan Fund

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail how applications can be made for the new £5 million loan fund for small businesses.

(AQW 19754/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Ulster Community Investment plc (a subsidiary of Ulster Community Investment Trust) was awarded the contract to manage the Northern Ireland Small Business Loan Fund on behalf of Invest NI. Applications can be made to the fund managers by first completing an enquiry form available through any of the following sources:

- 1 On-line at www.nisblf.com;
- 2 By calling 0800 988 2879; or
- 3 By e-mailing enquiry@nisblf.com.

The fund manager will then contact applicants for more details and assess the loan applications on receipt of the additional information.

Invest NI: Support for Companies in East Belfast

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment why Invest NI support for companies in East Belfast fell from £28.62 million in 2010/11 to £13.27 million in 2011/12.

(AQW 19764/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The actual number of offers made by Invest NI to businesses in East Belfast during 2010-11 was lower than in 2011-12, with a total of 195 and 262 made respectively. However, the results are skewed somewhat by the fact that 2010-11 was an exceptional year where four offers alone added to some £19.6 million worth of assistance, resulting in almost £90 million worth of investment in the East Belfast economy.

These figures empahsise the fact that Invest NI has limited scope for 'directing' investment to specific areas and whilst it is able to influence the location decisions of some inward-investment projects, assistance patterns are demand-led by businesses wishing to improve their competitiveness and gain a larger share of international markets. In the case of established businesses, reinvestment patterns will usually be determined by the existing location of the business. In addition, individual company expansion plans will also be influenced by prevailing economic conditions. For these reasons, there will always be year on year fluctuations in the levels of support within specific areas.

Invest NI continues to offer a wide range of support to encourage the start up and growth of businesses in East Belfast. Invest NI's Boosting Business initiative, encompassing support under five themes: Jobs, R&D, Exports, Technology and Skills, is available to local businesses in the area. From the 1st April 2012 to date, Invest NI's Business Support Team has handled 232 queries from the East Belfast area, and under the EU's Local Economic Development Measure, Invest NI continues to work closely with Belfast City Council to develop a range of projects that will deliver a range of tailored support to local businesses in Belfast.

Bankruptcy Cases

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of bankruptcy cases in the current financial year, broken down by constituency.

(AQW 19790/11-15)

Vacant Factory Space: North Down

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the amount of former factory space that is vacant in North Down.

(AQW 19820/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI maintains an online database which contains the details of a range of available properties across both the private and public sectors. This information, whilst not available at the parliamentary constituency level, can be filtered by council area.

Invest NI is aware of 12 available factories within the North Down council area. Further details on these and other available commercial properties can be found on the NI Business Information website:

www.nibusinessinfo.co.uk/content/search-commercial-property-northern-ireland

It is, however, important to be aware that the information within the database does not comprise a definitive list of all available properties. Invest NI is wholly reliant upon the accuracy of the information provided to it by commercial property agents and developers.

Tourism: Certification Requirements for Accommodation

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether there will be an exemption from current legislation to allow for pop-up accommodation and a residential rent-a-room scheme. (AQW 19852/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Under the Tourism (NI) Order 1992, any proposal for an exemption to the certification requirements for accommodation requires a site specific business case to be submitted to my Department for approval. Until such a business case is received, the Department cannot consider, or conclude on, whether an exemption should be granted.

In the case of potential accommodation demand around UK City of Culture events, it is the responsibility of Derry City Council to assess the need and liaise with NITB to ensure that, in the event that a request for an exemption is deemed necessary and appropriate, a business case is developed and presented to the Department for consideration.

Shale Oil

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what consideration has been given to the awarding of licences for the extraction of shale oil.

(AQW 19883/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Under the terms of the Petroleum (Production) Act (Northern Ireland) 1964 my Department grants licences to search and bore for and get petroleum in Northern Ireland. The petroleum legislation makes no distinction between the different types of petroleum (oil or gas) or the geological formations (e.g. shale or sandstone) in which the petroleum may be found.

The extraction of oil or gas is subject to my Department's approval of a development plan submitted by the Licensee. Such a plan would only follow an extensive programme of exploration and appraisal and it would also be subject to a number of other consents including planning permission.

City of Culture 2013

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether her Department is considering allocating future additional resource to support the marketing of Derry City in its role as City of Culture 2013. (AQW 19899/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has successfully secured £400,000 for a bespoke marketing campaign to support Londonderry as UK City of Culture 2013.

In addition I am seeking a further £600,000 for the remainder of 2013 as part of the advertising approvals process for 2013/14. If approved, this will result in my Department providing total support of £1m to the UK City of Culture advertising campaign.

City of Culture and the One Marketing Plan

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 19087/11-15, whether permission to spend has been granted for the Tourist Board to deliver the £1m media campaign for Derry; and for an update on the One Marketing Campaign for Derry which was submitted to her Department in 2012. (AQW 19901/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I can confirm that approval for expenditure of £400,000 has been granted to deliver a bespoke marketing campaign this financial year, in support of Londonderry as UK City of Culture 2013. I am also seeking approval for a further £600,000 of campaign expenditure for the remainder of 2013 as part of the 2013/14 financial year approvals process.

As the responsibility for the development and delivery of the One Marketing Plan rests with Derry City Council, my Department and its agencies are not in a position to provide an update.

Tamboran Resources

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQWs 18021/11-15 and 19123/11-15, when her Department agreed to a technical variation to the work programme of Tamboran resources. (AQW 19904/11-15)

Mrs Foster: A technical variation to the work programme of Tamboran resources was agreed to on 28 May 2012.

Shale Oil

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether her Department has been informed of any proposals to extract shale oil; and to provide details of what methods of shale oil extraction that are being considered. (AQW 19908/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has not been informed of any proposals to extract shale oil in Northern Ireland.

Wind Farms

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether there are any plans to create more wind farms. (AQW 19920/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Strategic Energy Framework, agreed by the Executive, set a target of 40% electricity consumption from renewable sources by 2020. This target is technology neutral and it will be for the private sector to bring forward development plans which contribute to the target.

Oil or Gas Extraction

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the financial benefits of oil or gas extraction from the coastline.

(AQW 19922/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Taxable profits from the production of oil or gas in the United Kingdom are subject to Ring Fence Corporation Tax (RFCT) and a Supplementary Charge on the company's ring fence profits. RFCT is levied at 30% and the current rate of the Supplementary Charge is 32%, although a Field Allowance was introduced in 2009 to reduce the impact of the Supplementary Charge on new marginal fields. The UK oil and gas fiscal regime is administered by HM Revenue & Customs, Large Business Service Oil & Gas Sector from whom further information is available.

Oil or gas production onshore Northern Ireland is also subject to a 7.5% 'royalty' payable to the former owners of the rights in minerals and petroleum.

In some circumstances it may be more advantageous to develop oil and gas resources that lie beneath the seabed close to the coast from a coastal onshore location rather than from an offshore platform, for a variety of economic, environmental or engineering reasons.

Northern Ireland Small Business Loan Fund

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether the recently-launched NI Small Business Loan Fund could help start-up businesses such as the Ice Dome at Sandy Row, Belfast. (AQW 19951/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

- 1 Any business applying to the Northern Ireland Small Business Loan Fund must be substantially based in Northern Ireland and must provide evidence of funding decline from the private banking sector in support of all loan applications.
- 2 There is a maximum loan amount of £15,000 to start-up enterprises, with potential for follow-on lending up to £50,000.
- 3 Start-up businesses such as the Ice Dome at Sandy Row which wish to enquire about potential funding from the Fund should contact the fund managers, Ulster Community Investment plc through any of the following means:
  - (a) On-line at www.nisblf.com;
  - (b) By calling 0800 988 2879; or
  - (c) By e-mailing enquiry@nisblf.com.

Multilingual Signage: Down District Council Area

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment why the Northern Ireland Tourist Board has refused to provide funding for multi-lingual signage in the Down District Council area. (AQW 19980/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board has not refused to provide funding for multilingual signage in the Down District Council area.

Multilingual Signage: Down District Council Area

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to provide the dates on which communication has been made between (i) the Northern Ireland Tourist Board and Down District Council; (ii) her Department and Down District Council; and (iii) her Department and the Northern Ireland Tourist Board, in relation to the Northern Ireland Tourist Board refused to provide funding for multi-language signage in the Down District Council area.

(AQW 19981/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I would refer the member to the reply I gave to AQW 19980/11-15.

No communication has been made on this basis.

Tourism: Funding Applications Involving the Irish Language

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to list all cases where the Northern Ireland Tourist Board has turned down applications for funding involving the use of the Irish language and to indicate the reasons in each case. (AQW 20004/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board has not turned down any applications for funding involving the use of the Irish language.

Tourism: Multilingual Road Signs

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, when considering the most cost effective way to promote tourism signage through the Northern Ireland Tourist Board, what are the cost implications of a number of languages in addition to English being used on signage.

(AQW 20106/11-15)

Mrs Foster: It is not possible to provide an overall cost as this will vary by project depending on the number, size and shape of signage required, as well as the number of languages to be incorporated.

NITB is keen to ensure that all tourist interpretation and signage is clear; not confusing; and assists the visitor in understanding the importance of the destination.

City of Culture and the One Marketing Plan

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether the recent £400k funding announced for marketing City of Culture 2013 will be used to implement the One Marketing Plan which was submitted by Derry City Council, or whether it will be used by the Tourist Board for its own plans. (AQW 20223/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The delivery and development of the One Marketing Plan is the remit and responsibility of Derry City Council.

This extra investment of £400,000 will integrate with the One Marketing Plan, but be delivered by The Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB). These monies will be used for a bespoke Derry-Londonderry UK City of Culture campaign in both the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland. This is additional to the activity already being delivered by NITB to support marketing efforts for the City of Culture including strong coverage of the City in the current Spring 2013 campaign and the delivery of a bespoke Derry-Londonderry UK City of Culture Events Guide to every home in Northern Ireland (750,000 residential homes).

I welcome this additional funding and am fully satisfied that every opportunity to promote the city in this momentous year is being fully maximised.

Department of the Environment

National Parks

Mr Cree asked the Minister of the Environment what quantitative research has been carried out with the public to establish their attitude towards national parks (i) within the proposed areas; and (ii) throughout the rest of Northern Ireland. (AQW 16925/11-15)

Mr Attwood (The Minister of the Environment): Last year my Department published a comprehensive consultation document on enabling legislation for national parks to gauge public reaction. The responses that were submitted, together with my ongoing meetings with interested stakeholders, will help to inform my decision on the most appropriate way forward with this issue.

National Parks: North Antrim

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of the Environment, in giving consideration to a proposed national park in the North Antrim area, to detail the geographical boundaries of such a proposal. (AQW 16962/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The boundaries of any national park can only be considered as part of the process to designate a park. At this stage, the debate is around the principle of national parks, benefits and disadvantages. Any issue of boundary would only arise later, following any agreement on and passage of legislation.

Giants' Causeway: Visit by UNESCO

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment whether he has been contacted by UNESCO in regard to a visit to the World Heritage Site at the Giants' Causeway; and if so, when he was contacted. (AQW 17097/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I have made it very clear to UNESCO that I will have fully assisted in the visit by a representative to the WHS, in order to assess its overall state of conservation and to provide technical advice, given the developments on the WHS in recent times

Giants' Causeway: Visit by UNESCO

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment what steps he has taken secure a visit for UNESCO to the World Heritage Site at the Giants' Causeway.

(AQW 17118/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I have made it very clear to UNESCO that I will have fully assisted in the visit by a representative to the WHS, in order to assess its overall state of conservation and to provide technical advice, given the developments on the WHS in recent times.

Review of Public Administration

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of the Environment what aspects of local government reform are running two or more full calendar months behind schedule; and when he expects these aspects to be completed.

(AQW 17427/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The scale of local government reform is complex and challenging, so there will be times and places where the timetable changes. That is inevitable and it is necessary, but the overall programme from a DOE perspective and responsibility is on track.

In the past few months the Department has particularly been refining the local government reform timetable, particularly reviewing work in progress and making adjustments to the target dates for specific areas of work, which is normal practice in programme management terms.

In some areas there is cause and time to adjust timescales in order to carry out further work. For example, I decided to slightly delay the introduction of the Local Government (Reorganisation) Bill to the Assembly until early 2013, to enable further engagement with local government on complex finance and human resources issues and to allow further provisions to be drafted on a number of issues, including dual mandate.

I am therefore content that for those areas of the programme under my control, I can advise that no aspects are running two or more calendar months behind schedule.

I will arrange for the most recent timetable to be placed in the Assembly Library.

Drumclay Crannóg

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the artefacts excavated from Drumclay Crannóg being put on permanent display at Fermanagh County Museum.

(AQW 17673/11-15)

Mr Attwood: NIEA Built Heritage has already talked with the Manager of Fermanagh County Museum about creating an exhibition of the Drumclay finds. Due to the nature of the post-excavation work which will be necessary to study and conserve these finds it will be time before this is achieved. Officials in NIEA have been advised by officials in Fermanagh District Council that the Council is in the process of applying to the Heritage Lottery Fund and the Northern Ireland Tourist Board to develop a new display area.

I know of other proposals in relation to the management and presentation of the artefacts. For that reason I intend to convene a gathering of interested persons to identify how to maximise the opportunities for the Crannóg works.

National Parks

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 16919/11-15, how the proposed national parks will help 20,000 unemployed people into work.

(AQW 17838/11-15)

Mr Attwood: National parks elsewhere provide some direct employment, but their impact can be felt more fully in terms of the boost they give to existing businesses and the encouraging environment they provide for the creation of new ones. Some have suggested that national parks provide only part-time, tourist-related jobs. This is not the full story. In the current economic climate we need all the jobs we can get, both full- and part-time. In some of our rural communities, part-time employment can be the difference between people being able to remain in their own locality and having to move away.

National parks are just one way in which to create opportunities for the unemployed. With so many expected to be out of work after welfare reform – and this will be a long-term problem – we need to identify potential employment opportunities. I will therefore continue to meet with interested parties, and consider all that they have to say, before taking a decision on the most appropriate way forward.

It seems a self evident point but one which needs to be made – the economic contribution of our historic environment is substantial but can be multiplied, to have the scale of return in other parts of these islands. To do so requires the protection, the positive development and promotion of our heritage, particularly rural, to, for example, grow tourism to a £1 billion pa industry. Our countryside, rural offering and rural industries are at the heart of economic opportunity. National Parks may or may not be rejected – but rural development and jobs can contribute to addressing not only the in scale represented in potentially 20,000 more being out of work but in tackling the existing 64,000 out of work.

National Parks

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 16919/11-15, to list the parties with whom he had private meetings; and to detail the content and outcomes of these meetings. (AQW 17841/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I have met with a wide variety of groups, including the Ulster Farmers' Union, Mourne Heritage Trust, the Institute of Directors, the Northern Ireland Tourist Board and with Moyle District Council, amongst others.

These meetings provide the opportunity for me both to explain my rationale for advocating national parks and to listen to the opinions and concerns of others. They allow for frank and serious face-to-face discussion in private, as I take stock of where we are in relation to national parks. Such meetings play a valuable role in helping me to determine where we go from here in a situation where there has been some very vocal opposition to the idea of national parks.

I will therefore continue to meet with interested parties, and consider all that they have to say, before taking a decision on the most appropriate way forward.

Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan. (AQW 17892/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I refer the member to my answer of 11 December 2012 in respect of AQO 1302/11-15 in which I stated that it is my intention that the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan will be adopted around the end of March 2013 and potentially into April 2013, as habitat and equality obligations are currently being satisfied.

Raymond McCreesh Play Park

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment what steps have been taken to encourage Newry and Mourne District Council to review its naming of a play park after an IRA terrorist; and how he is seeking to resolve this matter. (AQW 18035/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I acknowledge that the decision taken by the Council has been upsetting and caused anger. I believe that, in living up to the values and ambitions of the Good Friday agreement, there is a responsibility for leadership to demonstrate a commitment to survivors and a process of truth recovery and working to be respectful and sensitive to the needs of victims and the primacy of their needs.

It is the case that Councils are independent of central government and are accountable to their local electorate and ratepayers. Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 provides that all public authorities, including district councils, in carrying out their functions in Northern Ireland, shall have due regard to the need to promote equality of opportunity between certain specified individuals and groups, and have desirability of promoting good relations between persons of different religious belief, political opinion and religious group.

All district councils are directly answerable to the Equality Commission in respect of their Section 75 Duties. I understand that the Equality Commission has written to Newry and Mourne District Council about its decision.

That said, I am writing to the Chief Executive of the Council requesting a report on the process leading to the decision and on all matters relevant to the making of the decision.

Raymond McCreesh Play Park

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment (i) whether he will intervene in Newry and Mourne Council's decision to name a children's play park after an IRA member; (ii) what are the corporate implications for the Council should it be found to have broken the law by glorifying terrorism; and (iii) what input the Council's Good Relations department had in the naming of the play park.

(AQW 18041/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I acknowledge that the decision taken by the Council has been upsetting and caused anger. I believe that, in living up to the values and ambitions of the Good Friday agreement, there is a responsibility for leadership to demonstrate a commitment to survivors and a process of truth recovery and working to be respectful and sensitive to the needs of victims and the primacy of their needs.

It is the case that Councils are independent of central government and are accountable to their local electorate and ratepayers. Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 provides that all public authorities, including district councils, in carrying out their functions in Northern Ireland, shall have due regard to the need to promote equality of opportunity between certain specified individuals and groups, and have desirability of promoting good relations between persons of different religious belief, political opinion and religious group.

All district councils are directly answerable to the Equality Commission in respect of their Section 75 Duties. I understand that the Equality Commission has written to Newry and Mourne District Council about its decision.

That said, I am writing to the Chief Executive of the Council requesting a report on the process leading to the decision and on all matters relevant to the making of the decision.

Review of Public Administration

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the timescale for achieving cost savings to the rate payer as a result of local government reform; and whether these savings will be passed on to the rate payer. (AQW 18246/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The economic appraisal of local government service delivery, published by PricewaterhouseCoopers in October 2009, indicated that under the preferred option (i.e. Transformation with Regional Collaboration), implementation of the local government reform programme could involve expenditure of up to £118 million over five years and achieve savings of £438 million over twenty-five years.

Under this option, it is estimated that the reform programme will begin to realise a reduction in operating costs by 2017/18 with a break-even point in terms of return on the initial investment by 2020/21.

The Regional Transition Committee has commissioned the senior local and central government officers and officials in the Finance Working Group to re-examine the costs and benefits of the local government reform programme.

Work is ongoing with the existing councils and the Voluntary Transition Committees in developing the detailed costs and benefits of the key reform work-streams, identified by the Finance Working Group.

The group's findings and recommendations will be presented to the Regional Transition Committee in March 2013.

Any decisions as to whether savings achieved as a result of local government reform will be passed on to the rate payer will be for the 11 new councils to determine. My view is that with 11 Councils, the escalation of sharing/collaboration between Councils, procurement that supports the local but is also green and value for money (etc) should mean benefits in rate levels to ratepayers.

Sellafield Nuclear Processing Plant

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the extent of his Department's lobbying of and contact with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs regarding accidents which have occurred at the Sellafield Nuclear Processing Plant in the last four years.

(AQW 18332/11-15)

Mr Attwood: At present nuclear energy and nuclear installations are excepted matters under the Northern Ireland Act 1998, and, as such, are not within my Department's remit.

My Department has responsibility for monitoring the environment in Northern Ireland to assess the impact of radioactivity produced elsewhere.

A continuing programme of monitoring the effect of radioactive discharges from nuclear installations in Britain on the Northern Ireland coastline has shown that levels of contamination are negligible in terms of impact on the Northern Ireland population or our marine environment, but I remain very vigilant in this matter.

I take a very close interest in what is happening in relation to developing new nuclear power plants in Britain and I wrote to the Infrastructure Planning Commission in February this year, expressing concern about the potential environmental impact of proposed nuclear power plants in the west of England and Wales and, in particular, the possible effect on the population of Ireland, north and south, given the proximity of the proposed facilities.

I can provide an assurance that, in conjunction with colleagues in the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA), the Scottish Environmental Protection Agency (SEPA) and the Radiological Protection Institute of Ireland (RPII), discharges into the Irish Sea and their impact on the coastline of Northern Ireland will continue to be comprehensively monitored.

Officials from my Department play a part in ensuring that the United Kingdom's obligations under the 1992 Oslo and Paris Convention (OSPAR) for the Protection of the Marine Environment of the North East Atlantic are monitored. This includes ensuring that effective evaluation takes place of actual discharges into the marine environment, and that national plans are in place for the monitoring and control of future discharges.

The monitoring programme includes checks on radiation levels on the coastline at approximately 50 locations around Northern Ireland, as well as routine checks on the levels of radioactivity in seaweed, shellfish and fish. The adequacy of the monitoring programme is reviewed annually, and where appropriate will take into account any changes in the discharges of radioactivity from Sellafield.

My officials have also worked closely with their counterparts in Britain to formalise a national plan for reducing discharges of radioactive substances – the UK Strategy for Radioactive Discharges 2006-2030 – and they will continue to monitor the impact of Sellafield and other nuclear power plants on our environment.

My Department is responsible for regulating, and legislating on, matters relating to the management of radioactive waste. This includes participation in the Managing Radioactive Waste Safely programme.

This programme was initiated in 2001 by the UK Government and the devolved administrations for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland with the aim of addressing the legacy of radioactive waste from a variety of different nuclear energy programmes in the United Kingdom.

In addition NIEA, together with SEPA, EA and the Health Protection Agency (HPA), has been carrying out public reassurance monitoring to demonstrate that environmental radioactivity remains within internationally agreed safety limits and poses no risks to human health.

Radiation levels in the UK are monitored regularly by the Radioactive Incident Monitoring Network (RIMNET). This network includes 95 monitors stationed across the UK, including five in Northern Ireland, to detect increases in background levels of radiation. Any evidence of a nuclear incident of radiological significance for the UK would result in a national alert being raised. These monitors have not detected any increase in the background level of radiation since the Fukushima incident.

There is also a UK-wide arrangement for sampling air and rainwater as part of the UK's duty under the Euratom Treaty. There are seven fixed sampling stations throughout the UK including one at Conlig, County Down. Analysis of the filters from these stations can detect much lower levels of radioactive materials.

In line with the rest of the UK, the frequency of air and rainwater sampling has increased. Results for Northern Ireland to date are comparable with those obtained in the rest of the UK and Ireland and demonstrate that there is no risk to public health or to the environment.

I am advised that the Department has not made representations with, the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs regarding accidents which have occurred at the Sellafield nuclear processing plant in the 30 years before I became Minister.

Planning Applications

Mr Molloy asked the Minister of the Environment what is the current guidance for an application being removed from mainstream planning and being sent to, or requested by, the Minister for consideration; and what is the time frame for a decision on such an application.

(AQW 18410/11-15)

Mr Attwood: During the processing of an application, I regularly correspond with MLAs who have written on behalf of constituents and objectors in connection with certain planning applications. That is proper and I will continue to fulfil that function

In exercising my responsibility for the direction and control of the functions of the Department consistent with statute and the Ministerial Code, I have a legitimate interest in decision making within the Department.

As Minister, it is therefore appropriate that I take a close interest in the operation and effectiveness of the planning functions of the Department. This interest can extend to scrutiny of the management of individual planning applications so that I can be satisfied that the planning functions of the Department are being undertaken effectively or to respond to any issues of concern raised by elected representatives or others.

In terms of timescales, ambitious targets have been set for the processing of planning applications received on or after 1 April 2012. Recently published statistics have highlighted that DOE Planning is providing a speedier, more decisive service, fitter for purpose to strengthen our economy without compromising on protecting the environment.

That said, there will be times when the proper consideration of an application will take further time, may involve the input from senior management, require inspection of sites and assess exhaustively material considerations.

I have received representations from MLAs across parties to look at and consider planning applications. When this is done for proper planning reasons, this is an important role for a Minister.

Review of Public Administration: Cohesion, Sharing and Integration

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment what plans he has to ensure that a Cohesion, Sharing and Integration plan is embedded within councils following the reform of local government.

(AQW 18478/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I firmly believe that central and local Government must live up in spirit and substance to the values and practices of "agreement politics". Recent events confirm the challenge that has yet to be met and the renewed leadership that is required

At the first meeting of the RPA Political reference group on 19/12 and given current circumstances, I raised the issue of flags in the context of council reorganisation. I said there may be a need for this issue to be addressed in the rundown to reform. There may also prove to be a need to also address wider cohesion, sharing and integration issues. If so, that is the approach I will adopt, conscious that Councils in various ways in a number of places are addressing positively CSI issues.

I agree fully that a CSI approach should be embedded in Councils now and in the future. I will look to see if and how this might be done. But it must be all the issues central to CSI, not just some, and all should be addressed comprehensively. Clearly, I will carefully monitor what the political parties together may or may not do and, as CSI is an FMDFM function, what that office is doing. That said, should I need to take forward an RPA/Council initiative, I will seek to do so.

Review of Public Administration: Symbols and Flags

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment what plans he has to seek agreement between all the councils on the issues of symbols and flags following the reform of local government.

(AQW 18479/11-15)

Mr Attwood: At the first meeting before Christmas of the Local Government Political Reference Group - to which all Assembly parties are invited - I raised the issues of flags and related matters. I stated that given the profile and importance of the issue, it may be an issue that the PRG may require to address in the rundown to RPA.

If this needs to be done – as it may – the challenge should not be shirked. I will make an assessment of if this is needed – but will clearly have regard to what is or is not happening around other discussions.

Councils are independent of central government and are accountable to their local electorate and ratepayers. All councils have the same legislative powers, but each has the discretion – currently - to place the relevant emphasis on matters within their control

That said, all district councils are directly answerable to the Equality Commission in respect of their Section 75 Duties. They must and must be seen to comply with these requirements.

Family Car Parking Spaces

Mr Hamilton asked the Minister of the Environment how he plans to use the planning system to ensure the better provision of family car parking spaces.

(AQW 18596/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I am currently considering a number of options in relation to how to use the planning system to provide better provision of car parking for both family parking and pregnant women.

I intend to bring forward proposals for this through the single Strategic Planning Policy Statement which will be made available for public consultation before the end of 2013.

Planning Applications: Sprucefield

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment what impact his announcement in January 2013 on the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan Retail Strategy will have on the public inquiry into the John Lewis planning application at Sprucefield; and whether altering the planning ground rules at this stage permits a fair process.

(AQW 18614/11-15)

Mr Attwood: My Department was considering a major Article 31 planning application for a retail scheme including a Department Store, 19 Retail Units, restaurants and associated infrastructural development at Sprucefield, Lisburn for Sprucefield Centre Limited (S/2009/1045/F). The applicant had indicated that the intended occupant of the Department Store associated with this development is John Lewis Ltd so the scale of the Sprucefield proposal was 20 shops and many restaurants. It was many more than John Lewis, a fact that is increasingly recognised. In order to inform my decision on this major planning application my Department had asked the Planning Appeals Commission (PAC) to convene a Public Inquiry to hear evidence and prepare a report on its findings. The PAC had set a timetable for the Public Inquiry (PI) to open on the 15 April 2013.

To facilitate the preparation of evidence for the Public inquiry the PAC asked me to release my Department's decisions on their recommendations about elements of the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan 2015 relating to Sprucefield. In order to provide certainty and clarity for participants in the Inquiry I issued a statement to this effect on the 11 January 2013. This publication constitutes advance notice of what the Department intends to adopt in the final plan subject to completion of all statutory procedures. There are a number of issues which the Inquiry would have had to carefully consider including the economic impacts of the proposal and the relevant planning policy context.

I am disappointed that the PI will not now proceed. My advice to the PAC had been informed and was faithful to the Executive approved RDS 2035 and planning policy statements; was in the context of shop vacancies and economic downturn; on the assessed retail impact on town and city centres in Greater Belfast and beyond and how this would manifest in job losses and shop closures, and how retail should develop in Greater Belfast going forward.

There was no change in planning rules. In fact, I held to planning rules, policy and regional strategy. In doing so, it was the right advice, at the right time and for the right retail outcome.

Planning NI

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment what responsibility Planning NI has (i) to meet with the objectors to planning applications; and (ii) to respond to the specifics of objections once planning permission has been granted. (AQW 18645/11-15)

Mr Attwood: In dealing with a planning application, the Department is required to have regard to the development plan and any other material planning considerations.

Public opinion in the form of objection is a material planning consideration which must always be fully taken into account. The key issue in considering public opinion is for the specific grounds to be noted and balanced against other relevant factors.

During the processing of planning applications, it may be necessary to inform objectors of changes, amendments or additional information – this will generally be done in writing. However, depending on the nature and volume of objections, it may be considered appropriate to meet with objectors to discuss particular issues of concern.

Similarly, where the Department's opinion is presented to Council, and a deferral on planning grounds is secured, DOE Planning will participate in a meeting to enable issues, including those raised by objectors to be discussed.

In the processing of any application, DOE Planning will take account of objections submitted up until the point that a decisions issues and objectors will be notified of the final decision including were appropriate. If an objection is received following this issuing of a decision notice, DOE Planning may advise on the assessment of issues raised in reaching its decision.

Review of Public Administration

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment to confirm the total costs and savings arising from local government reform as projected in the PriceWaterhouseCoopers report.

(AQW 18659/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The PricewaterhouseCoopers' economic appraisal of local government service delivery, carried out on behalf of and published by the Department in October 2009, indicated that under the preferred option (i.e. Transformation with Regional Collaboration), implementation of the local government reform programme could involve expenditure of up to £118 million over five years and achieve savings of £438 million over twenty-five years.

The Regional Transition Committee has commissioned the senior local and central government officers and officials in the Finance Working Group to re-examine the costs and benefits of the local government reform programme taking account a range of financial factors. These include the 2015 timescale for reform set out in the Programme for Government 2011-15, the sector's Improvement, Collaboration and Efficiency proposals and the changed economic climate in which reform is now being taken forward.

Work is ongoing with the existing councils and the Voluntary Transition Committees in developing the detailed costs and benefits of the key reform work-streams, identified by the Finance Working Group.

The group's findings and recommendations will be presented to the Regional Transition Committee in March 2013.

Review of Public Administration

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the current projected cost of local Government reform; (ii) the current projected savings that will be achieved; and (iii) the level of funding that will be made available to local Government by the Executive to meet the costs of transformation.

(AQW 18660/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The PricewaterhouseCoopers economic appraisal of local government service delivery, carried out on behalf of and published by the Department in October 2009, indicated that under the preferred option (i.e. Transformation with Regional Collaboration), implementation of the local government reform programme could involve expenditure of up to £118 million over five years and achieve savings of £438 million over twenty-five years.

The group's findings and recommendations will be presented to the Regional Transition Committee in March 2013.

In relation to Executive funding for local government reform, my bids to the Executive for local government reform funding in the past two Monitoring Rounds were not successful. However, I continue to press for my paper, seeking the Executive's agreement to fund the transition costs that will not release any long term cash savings to be formally considered by the Executive.

Councils: Finances

Cycling Casualties

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of the Environment what actions his Department is taking to reduce cycling casualties. (AQW 18696/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The DOE has a statutory duty to promote road safety. One of the ways it raises awareness of road safety issues is through the Department's road safety advertising campaigns.

PSNI data shows that drivers are responsible for the majority of collisions and, as such, DOE continuously targets drivers to amend their driving behaviour, encouraging them to never ever drink and drive, to pay attention and to slow down. By changing the attitudes and behaviours of drivers, this is the most effective way of protecting all road users – cyclists, pedestrians, motorcyclists, horse riders, passengers and drivers themselves.

In October 2011 the Department launched the 'Be Cycle Aware' campaign, employing radio and bus rear advertising, in order to remind drivers and cyclists alike to pay attention when sharing the road.

A radio advert targets drivers at the point of danger as they travel in the car during daytime hours when they would be expected to share the road with cyclists.

A second radio advert and bus rear advertising targets cyclists, reminding them of their vulnerability and the need to pay attention and stay safe on the roads. Resources have specifically been directed towards the 'Be Cycle Aware' campaign and it is currently on air every month as part of the Department's monthly road safety intervention radio activity throughout the year.

This activity is in line with Action Measure 124 of the Road Safety Strategy 2020 - "We will give consideration to measures that improve the safety of cyclists; including what cyclists can do to keep themselves safe and what other road users can do".

In May 2012 I launched a campaign that encourages road users to 'respect everyone's journey'. Even though cyclists are not referred to specifically, it is anticipated that the messages to drivers are such that all vulnerable road user groups, including cyclists, will benefit from the safety messages contained within them.

In September last year, I launched a campaign focusing on wider road user responsibility. This campaign urges all road users to behave appropriately and to take responsibility for their actions on the road. The opening scene of the advert addresses cyclist vulnerability by showing an injured cyclist in hospital saying "I was cycling in the bike lane. The driver said the sun was in his eyes." This campaign highlights the fact that over 95% of road deaths and serious injuries are caused by human error and carries the strapline "Kill the Excuses. It's no Accident".

In addition, a 'Cycling Skills & Cycling Safety' leaflet has been developed jointly by DOE and DRD to provide a basic guide for adult cyclists.

The leaflet provides information on the benefits of cycling, advice on basic safety requirements for a cyclist, information on the rules of the road as they apply to cyclists and advice for cyclists on safe use of the road and on interacting with other users, both vehicular and pedestrian. The leaflet is being distributed widely across Northern Ireland.

Currently all road users are provided with detailed guidance through the current edition of the Highway Code which contains rules, information and advice that helps prepare them for the demands of today's roads. Advice on how drivers should treat vulnerable road users, including cyclists, with extra care and attention is covered specifically by Rules 204 to 218 of the Code. Advice for cyclists can be found under Rules 59-82.

Furthermore, the Cycling Proficiency Scheme (CPS) is offered by the DOE Road Safety Education Officer Service (RSEOS) to every primary school in Northern Ireland. The decision to take up the offer lies with the individual schools, as does the decision on whether to include on road / off road training. Over 500 Primary Schools participate in the scheme each year with between 8,500 and 9,000 children benefiting from the scheme annually.

A review of the CPS commenced in August 2012 and is due to be completed in March 2013. The CPS continues to be offered to all primary schools in Northern Ireland while the review is in progress and schools offering CPS are fully supported by DOE RSEOS.

Planning Policy: Cycling Promotion

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the effectiveness of current planning policy in encouraging travel by bicycle.

(AQW 18699/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Cycling is promoted through various planning policies and guidance - PPS 3 'Access, Movement and Parking', PPS 7 'Quality Residential Environments' and PPS 13 'Transportation and land use'. These policies require developers to consider the needs of cyclists in bringing forward proposals for residential development and for development that provides jobs, shopping, leisure and services. Relevant guidance is included in 'Creating Places, Achieving Quality in Residential Developments' which refers to the layout and design of cycle routes, to ensure they are safe and pleasant to use.

I am satisfied that current planning policy and guidance sets the right direction in encouraging travel by bicycle however, its effectiveness is difficult to assess as these policy instruments in themselves cannot guarantee increased cycle usage.

Planning Applications: Wind Turbines

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment how many planning applications are currently in the planning system for single wind turbines with an output level of (i) 0kW to 50kW; (ii) 50kW to 100kW; (iii) 100kW to 200kW; and (iv) 200kW to 250kW; and how many of these applications propose the use of second hand wind turbines. (AQW 18730/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department welcomes the contribution that renewable projects make to the reduction of carbon emissions and acknowledges the importance of processing these applications in a consistent and timely manner. As Minister I am fully supportive of renewable energy and believe firmly in the contribution that renewables make to the economy.

The information provided in planning applications for wind turbines does not always include the output level of the proposed turbine nor whether the proposed turbine will be new or second hand. It is therefore not possible from the information held on the database to provide validated statistical information in relation to this request.

Commercial Car Washes: Waste Water

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment what regulations are in place to regulate the disposal of waste water from commercial car washes.

(AQW 18731/11-15)

Mr Attwood: In relation to car washes making a discharge to a storm sewer or directly to a waterway, Northern Ireland Environment Agency's Water Management Unit protects the water environment primarily through the administration, monitoring and enforcement of discharge consents, in accordance with the Water (Northern Ireland) Order 1999.

The Water Order empowers the Department to take enforcement action should a car wash development fail to comply with its requirements.

NIEA has worked with the Environment Agency in England and Wales, and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency to produce Pollution Prevention Guideline 13 (PPG 13) 'Vehicle washing and cleaning'. PPG 13 details the statutory requirements for vehicle wash operators and highlights best practice measures to prevent such developments causing pollution in the water environment. PPG 13 can be viewed and downloaded from the following web address:

NIEA has also published a guidance leaflet, "Vehicle Wash Operators Guidance", which details the Agency's policy for dealing with this type of effluent, and the environmentally acceptable disposal options. This guidance can be viewed and downloaded from the following web address:

http://www.doeni.gov.uk/niea/water-home/development_management.htm

Hydraulic Fracturing

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the research paper Shale Gas: Mining The Data, published by Durham University, which recommends that fracking should not be permitted in an area where there is less than 1.2km between fresh water acquifers and the fracking zone, and the statement by Professor Peter Styles that a 500m depth between the aquifer and the fracking zone is too shallow; and whether any decision on granting permission for shale gas extraction will comply with these recommendations.

(AQW 18732/11-15)

Mr Attwood: No applications for planning or environmental permissions have yet been received by my Department. However, should such applications be received the nature of the proposal will be assessed against the existing and emerging scientific evidence base. This scientific evidence base will include the work done by Durham University, Professor Peter Styles and a range of other sources, national and international.

In addition, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), Ireland, in conjunction with a Steering Committee, which includes officials from the Northern Ireland Environment Agency, is taking forward a programme of research into the issue of Unconventional Gas Exploration and Extraction. This research will provide a local context to the growing body of research being done elsewhere.

I have always said it is essential to get a full scientific understanding before decisions are taken on hydraulic fracturing.

European Heritage Label Programme

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of the Environment what benefits the European Heritage Label brings to the local economy. (AQW 18739/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Adoption of the label was considered by Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) on behalf of the UK Government in December 2008 in their consultation document 'World Heritage for The Nation, Identifying, Protecting and Promoting our World Heritage'. Having considered responses, DCMS / London decided not to participate.

The consultation considered the extent to which alternative designations 'might help us to respond to the rising costs of bidding for inscription on the World Heritage List, the difficulties of matching the heritage we most value with gaps on the global list, and the steer from the World Heritage Committee that well-represented countries should slow down or suspend nominations'. It noted that 'The UK is broadly content with the principles of the scheme, in particular that it is proposed that the scheme is to be voluntary, which will allow the UK to decide on the extent of any future participation. If we were to participate in the scheme we would need clarity on a number of issues including the costs and responsibilities of involvement; how duplication with the World Heritage List will be avoided; and the extent to which the process for nomination will be open, accountable and inclusive.'

The DOE response on 16 Feb 2009 was: 'Because of the potential of such work to act as a catalyst we favour participation in the European Heritage Label. This may allow a way of compensating for efforts which have not achieved nomination to UNESCO and of allowing further development of such a process to contribute to wider social and economic aims. We agree, however, that, to be fair, any designation should be rigorously assessed and subject to similar criteria to World Heritage Designation.'

DCMS reported as follows at the end of the consultation: 'There was no clear support for the idea of alternative designations such as the European Heritage Label or the putative National Heritage List, because resources that would have to be deployed on other such schemes would simply reduce the resources for already hard pressed World Heritage Sites, and the benefits of these alternative designations was not clear. The Government agrees with that these proposed designations do not offer a viable alternative to inscription on the World Heritage List.' That is the current position of the UK Government which has the final say on such matters in the EU. Clearly, it is not one I share or the DOE argued for.

I therefore agree with the view expressed by my predecessor, however, that the European Heritage Label does have the potential to highlight important parts of our heritage. The Walls of Derry/Londonderry are a good example of this.

Their bid to the UK Tentative list was unsuccessful in March 2011 partly because European walled cities are represented on the International list. That said, I have again been considering how to take this idea forward – namely, how to potentially get NI heritage sites listed as World Heritage sites.

European Heritage Label Programme

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of the Environment what correspondence his Department has had with the British Government regarding its decision not to participate in the European Heritage Label programme. (AQW 18741/11-15)

Mr Attwood: It was the British Government that decided not to participate in the EHL programme. DOE argued for participation. I agree with that argument. I understand that the London decision was based upon the results of a public consultation on World Heritage which mentioned this as a potential alternative.

They concluded that: 'There was no clear support for the idea of alternative designations such as the European Heritage Label or the putative National Heritage List, because resources that would have to be deployed on other such schemes would simply reduce the resources for already hard pressed World Heritage Sites, and the benefits of these alternative designations was not clear. The Government agrees that these proposed designations do not offer a viable alternative to inscription on the World Heritage List.

As I have confirmed, the Department of the Environment expressed support for the Label during the consultation. Following the outcome of the consultation, officers participated in the next stage of the process of assembling an updated Tentative List of World Heritage Sites. This list was published by Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) in March 2011.

At that time, an argument was advanced for the Walled City to be prepared for the tentative list. It did not happen. I have recently been talking about this issue, raised it with DCMS officials and a representative of UNESCO at a meeting on 21 February 2013. This is a matter I intend to again push.

Councils: Maintenance of Services During Snowfall

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of how local councils are coping with the current snowfall.

(AQW 18768/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Most councils reported that they were unaffected to any significant degree by the recent snowfall. Of those that were, all reported that their winter preparedness plans had coped well with maintaining council functions and that it was mainly refuse collections and cleansing operations that were disrupted. Six councils implemented gritting agreements to clear pedestrian areas at the request of the Department for Regional Development.

Aerial Surveillance Equipment

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of the Environment how much has been spent by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency on aerial surveillance equipment in the last five years.

(AQW 18780/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Over the last five years a total of £5,438 was spent on aerial surveillance equipment by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency.

This equipment comprised camcorders, BluRay recorders, televisions, batteries, memory cards and cables, and is used for the monitoring of site integrity of areas of special scientific interest (ASSIs).

Review of Public Administration: Resource Funding

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment why it was necessary to bid for a further £16.2m resource funding in respect of Local Government Reform in the January monitoring round; and what are the consequences of the refusal of the request.

(AQW 18782/11-15)

Mr Attwood: As the reform of local government is an Executive commitment, I believe that some of the costs might reasonably be expected to be funded by the Executive. It is my view that the transition phase of the local government reform programme is critical to success and the Executive should meet the upfront costs - particularly those that have no cash releasing benefits for the sector.

This will ensure that delivery of the key implementation work streams is achieved.

I have taken the opportunity at each of the 2012-13 monitoring rounds to bid for reform funding. The most recent bid, in the January Monitoring Round, was for £16.2 million and, unfortunately, was not successful.

My view was supported by the Assembly on Monday 28th January when it agreed a Motion acknowledging the significant workload and substantial costs involved in the delivery of the Executive's local government reform transition, as proposed under the Review of Public administration; believing that the Executive should provide financial support for the reform process, including for future rates convergence; and calling on the Executive to provide financial support to councils to cover the upfront costs of RPA, which yield no short-term savings, and to ensure that these costs do not result in rate increases.

I am in ongoing discussions with Executive colleagues to agree a funding package for local government reform.

Planning Bill: Economic Development

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment how the introduction of a statutory duty to promote economic development in the planning bill would impact on planning decisions. (AQW 18789/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Clause 2 of the Planning Bill will place a duty on the Department in formulating planning policy to do so with the objective of furthering sustainable development; promoting or improving well-being and promoting economic development. Clause 2 will also place a similar duty on anybody or person exercising any future development plan functions.

These policies and plans are key material considerations which are to be taken into account in the determination of planning applications along with all other material considerations relevant to any particular planning application.

Planning Bill: Regulatory Impact Assessment

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether a regulatory impact assessment was conducted on clause 2 of the 2012 Planning Bill prior to its introduction.

(AQW 18790/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Planning Bill was subject to a regulatory impact assessment which was conducted by the Department prior to its introduction to the Northern Ireland Assembly.

The regulatory impact assessment can be viewed on Planning NI website www.planningni.gov.uk.

Planning Bill: Planning Appeals

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether the proposals in the 2012 Planning Bill will apply to planning appeals that are currently being assessed.

(AQW 18792/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Clauses 11, 12 and 21 of the Planning Bill bring forward reforms to planning appeals. These reforms will not apply to appeals that are currently being assessed.

It is anticipated that Clause 11 'Appeals: time limits' will take effect in relation to planning decisions issued by the Department after the commencement date of this provision.

Similarly it is anticipated that Clauses 12 and 21 'Matters which may be raised in an appeal' and the "Power of planning appeals commission to award costs" will apply to planning appeals which are received by the Planning Appeals Commission after the commencement date of this provision.

Planning Bill: Compatibility with the European Convention on Human Rights

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department has conducted an assessment to ascertain whether clause 10 of the 2012 Planning Bill is compatible with clause 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which guarantees the right to a fair trial.

(AQW 18793/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department has assessed whether Clause 10 of the Planning Bill is compatible with Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights.

The Department considers that clause 10 is not incompatible with that Article (see section 6(2)(c) of the Northern Ireland Act 1998) and would in its view be within the legislative competence of the Assembly.

Planning Policy Statement 18

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether he will initiate a review of the application of PPS18, similar to that conducted on PPS21, to address the inconsistencies of application in different planning divisions. (AQW 18855/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department welcomes the contribution that renewable projects make to the reduction of carbon emissions and acknowledges the importance of processing these types of applications in a consistent and timely manner.

In order to improve consistency in decision making I have established a Sub Group of the Planning Forum to look at measures to improve planning performance for renewables and to consider issues such as licensing requirements, resources and structures.

To date this work has resulted in the majority of renewable applications being redirected from Strategic Planning Division to the Area Office network which has increased capacity to speed up the decision making process. Prior to the redistribution of this work training was rolled out across the Area Offices to ensure consistency in decision making.

Performance within each area office is carefully monitored and a Performance Action Plan has been put in place in order to improve and manage performance. This action plan identifies a number of initiatives and allows for the monitoring and active management of performance against challenging targets.

However, applications for wind turbines differ in complexity and in quality of submission and are attracting increasing levels of objection. Consultation with a number of statutory and non-statutory bodies is required to inform the decision making process and all of these issues may prolong the processing of an application.

To improve the consultation process and to reduce the number of consultations staff have been provided with additional training to ensure consistency in carrying out consultations and reminded that they should only consult in the correct circumstances and avoid unnecessary consultations and delays.

I will continue to work with key stakeholders to ensure that Planning delivers in an efficient and timely manner and continue to monitor performance to ensure consistency across the area office network.

I therefore have no plans to review the operation of PPS18 at this time.

Hare Coursing

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment how many times Section 38 of the Wildlife and Natural Environmental Act (Northern Ireland) 2011 has been used to convict a person of illegal hare coursing. (AQW 18858/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Section 38 of the Wildlife and Natural Environment Act 2011 prohibits hare coursing events. The PSNI is responsible for enforcement of this legislation and I am informed that no prosecutions have been taken for organising or participating in a hare coursing event.

This is a matter I will raise at the next Partnership for Action against Wildlife Crime (PAW) meeting on 18 April 2013.

Taxis

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department plans to introduce any new legislation on taxis. (AQW 18913/11-15)

Mr Attwood: As part of the suite of subordinate legislation to give effect to the Taxis Act 2008 approved by this house, Taxi Operator Licensing was introduced in September 2012. Building on this positive change I remain fully committed to providing a safe, fair and fit for purpose taxi industry in Northern Ireland. Other important changes which will help achieve this goal include introducing the ability for the public to hail any taxi in the street; new specifications on wheelchair accessible vehicles; and a taxi vehicle licensing regime that make it easier to tell if a taxi is legal. All of these in combination will give customers more choice of taxis and taxi owners more opportunities for business. In addition, taxi meters will be rolled out, to the benefit of drivers and customers, and a regulated maximum fare will be introduced for all taxis.

While I am committed to introducing the changes in a timely manner, the timing of each change will be subject to the legislative scrutiny process.

I will shortly confirm the timeline to bring about these reforms. In doing so, I will work to ensure that the interests of drivers and owners and their needs are properly recognised, mindful that these are difficult economic times. I firmly believe that these changes will bring about benefits for operators, drivers and passengers alike.

Taxi Metering: Foyle Constituency

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of the Environment when taxi metering will be introduced for operators in the Foyle Constituency.

(AQW 18979/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I remain committed to reform of the taxi industry in Northern Ireland.

I am considering the timeline to bring about these reforms, including the introduction of taxi metering, which is an essential element of working towards providing a fit for purpose taxi industry. In doing so, I will work to ensure that the interests of drivers and owners and their needs are properly recognised mindful that these are difficult economic times. I firmly believe that these changes will bring about benefits for drivers and passengers alike.

Taxi Fares and Taxi Metering

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the taxi fare and taxi-meter consultation. (AQW 18981/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I consulted on proposals to introduce new taxi fare and taximeter regulations between 17 November 2011 and 17 February 2012. The Department received written responses representing the views of 3,637 people.

These responses have been analysed and a synopsis was provided to the Environment Committee for its consideration. The synopsis is also available on the Departmental website:

http://www.doeni.gov.uk/index/information/foi/recent-releases/publications-details.htm?docid=8756

Taxi fares and taxi-meters are being implemented as part of the Taxi Reform Programme. I will shortly confirm the timeline to bring about these reforms, which will include the introduction of taxi metering.

Planning Applications: Ministerial Interventions

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of the Environment to list the planning applications, apart from Article 31 applications, in which he has intervened since May 2011.

(AQW 19029/11-15)

Mr Attwood: During the processing of planning applications I regularly correspond with MLAs who have written on behalf of constituents and objectors in connection with certain planning applications.

In exercising my responsibility for the direction and control of the functions of the Department consistent with statute and the Ministerial Code, I have a legitimate interest in decision making within the Department.

As Minister, it is therefore appropriate that I take a close interest in the operation and effectiveness of the planning functions of the Department. This interest can extend to scrutiny of the management of individual planning applications so that I can be satisfied that the planning functions of the Department are being undertaken effectively or to respond to any issues of concern raised by elected representatives or others.

I can confirm that I have received representations from members of all political parties in the Assembly, met delegations involving these parties and made inquiries in relation to a number of applications.

Planning Applications: Sprucefield

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment why his Department refused planning permission for the John Lewis store at Sprucefield.

(AQW 19090/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I have not refused the major Article 31 planning application for a retail scheme including a Department Store, 19 Retail Units, restaurants and associated infrastructural development at Sprucefield, Lisburn for Sprucefield Centre Limited (S/2009/1045/F). However the applicant has exercised their right to withdraw the planning application rather than participate in a Public inquiry which has now been terminated.

In light of the nature of this proposal, the complex issues involved and the significant third party interest my officials had asked the Planning Appeals Commission (PAC) to convene a Public Inquiry to hear evidence and prepare a report on its findings.

The PAC had set a timetable for the Public Inquiry to open on the 15 April 2013 and I am disappointed that the applicant has chosen to withdraw at this late stage.

The PAC asked me to release my Department's decisions on their recommendations about elements of the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan 2015 relating to Sprucefield to facilitate the preparation of evidence for the Public inquiry. In order to provide certainty and clarity for participants in the Inquiry I issued a statement to this effect on the 11 January 2013. This publication constitutes advance notice of what the Department intends to adopt in the final plan subject to completion of all statutory procedures. The Inquiry would have allowed careful consideration of the issues including the economic impacts of the proposal and the relevant planning policy context on which the PAC could provide an Independent Inquiry Report. This would have allowed the planning application to be considered in light of a careful interrogation of all the relevant issues within the Public Inquiry Report before a final Ministerial decision was made.

In my view, the PI would have been the best course to pursue. Among other matters, it would have assessed the retail impact of the 20 stores Sprucefield application on Belfast, Bangor, Lisburn and other Greater Belfast town centres and many other locations outside Greater Belfast. The information would have been of major and multiple retail impacts, which in my view would be measured in multiple retail closure and major job losses. In my firm judgement, if I did not acknowledge this and give advice, inter alia, informed by this stark reality, I would have failed in my Ministerial duties.

Historical and Heritage Sites

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of the Environment whether he plans to task an organisation, other than the Northern Ireland Environment Agency, with the promotion of historical and heritage sites. (AQW 19093/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The economic potential of our heritage sites was powerfully revealed in the report I commissioned last year: 'A Study of the Economic Value of Northern Ireland's Historic Environment' which received much positive comment in the Assembly debate on Monday 21st January. I am determined that the full value to the community of our rich built heritage is realised. I am therefore convening a Summit in April of key stakeholders to examine ways in which the report's recommendations and the issues raised in the debate can be progressed, including the question of how to strengthen the performance of the Built Heritage Directorate of the Environment Agency. I will make appropriate changes to promote our rich built heritage in Northern Ireland once I have heard community views at the Summit.

The 'summit model' which I have deployed on a number of issues has worked well, moved issues forward, brought wise advice from outside government into government. I believe that likely conclusions and actions coming out of the summit will see a further strategic shift in protection and positive development of our built heritage and heritage led development.

MOT: Online Vehicle History Check

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment whether he plans to introduce an online system for checking vehicle MOT history, similar to that provided by Vehicle and Operator Services Agency in England, Wales and Scotland. (AQW 19102/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I am aware that the Vehicle and Operator Services Agency (VOSA) in Britain has an online vehicle MOT history check facility. This enables the user to check previous MOT test dates, odometer reading (mileage) and details of any failure items, or to check whether an MOT test certificate is authentic. The vehicle registration mark and MOT test number or V5 (registration document) number are necessary in order to access these MOT test details.

I clearly see the benefits of this system; however implementing such a system in the Driver and Vehicle Agency (DVA) would require significant IT development. My Department is currently progressing a review of the future delivery of vehicle testing which will identify and evaluate technical options for the delivery of vehicle testing services. An online vehicle MOT test history check facility, similar to that provided by VOSA in England, Wales and Scotland, will be considered as part of this review.

Review of Public Administration

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment which departmental functions will be transferred to local government under the Review of Public Administration.

(AQW 19104/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The package of functions to transfer to the new councils from central government departments is currently under review by Ministers and the Executive. Confirmation is expected soon.

Planning Enforcement Orders: Lisburn District Council Area

Mr Craig asked the Minister of the Environment how many Planning Enforcement Orders are currently outstanding in the Lisburn District Council area; and what procedures he has put in place to speed up this process. (AQW 19117/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Planning Enforcement Notices are provided for in Planning legislation rather than Planning Enforcement Orders and there are currently eight enforcement notices where court action is being considered by the Department or is pending within the Lisburn City Council area.

I am fully committed to swift and robust enforcement action being taken whenever it is warranted. This is a message that I have conveyed to all of my officials - including those in the Downpatrick Area Planning office who are responsible for planning enforcement in the Lisburn City Council area.

In recognition of the need to enhance the standard of service delivery in planning enforcement, additional staff resources were recently devoted to the enforcement section in Downpatrick and the office is now in the process of implementing a more focussed and proactive approach to this area of work.

The Department already has in place an Enforcement Strategy which sets out the objectives for planning enforcement, the guiding principles and priorities for enforcement action and performance targets. Officials in the Downpatrick Area Planning office are committed to complying with the strategy and the agreed targets.

I have asked senior management to closely monitor how the additional resources and a more focused and approach are impacting and improving performance in the Lisburn City Council area.

DOE: G8 Summit Additional Resources

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment what additional resources his Department will receive to cover any additional costs from the G8 summit taking place in Fermanagh in June 2013 and from where the resources will be allocated. (AQW 19150/11-15)

Mr Attwood: On 4th February I announced a £1 million funding package for environmental improvements to tackle dereliction and dilapidation in towns and cities. As part of this package, £380k has been made available to Fermanagh District Council, as hosts for the G8 summit, to tackle dereliction and decay in the area. I have identified this funding from within my Department's budget and will continue to carefully monitor budgets to ensure the best use is made of all available resources.

It may be possible to further enhance the environmental landscape in Fermanagh, ahead of the G8 summit, at the beginning of the next financial year. In which case, I will be seeking early confirmation that additional funding will be made available to my Department in the June Monitoring Round.

Environmental Damage

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment what fines his Department has imposed for environmental damage, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 19193/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The scale and imposition of fines imposed on environmental offenders is not a matter for my Department. The courts independently impose penalties on the evidence gathered by the Department and presented by the Public Prosecution Service (PPS).

Table one below summarises the total value of fines levied by the Courts for breaches of environmental regulations or pollution cases and the value of assets recovered under the Proceeds of Crime Act.

Table One	2010	2011	2012
Court imposed fines	£114,650	£153,398	£193,075
Recovery under POCA	£200,000	£662,300	£ 50,001

See Note 1.

It should be noted that the courts have also applied custodial sentences for the most severe offences.

In addition, the Department's Planning Service, which prosecutes cases where damage has been caused to our Historic Environment, has recorded the fines imposed on Table Two – based on the last three financial years.

Table Two	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12
Court imposed fines	£35,400	£350	nil

Notes:

- 1 The figures provided do not include the small number of fines associated with Wildlife Order offences which are prosecuted via the PSNI.
- 2 The Member may wish to refer to the enforcement, compliance and other statistical reports available on the NIEA website where further detail is available.

Kindertransport, Millisle

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of the Environment whether he has given any consideration to the listing of the Kindertransport Farm, Millisle.

(AQW 19265/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The department has considered these buildings for listing on three separate occasions. They were first recorded in 1973 and again visited in 1998 as part of the more detailed Second Survey of Buildings of Architectural and Historic Interest. On each of these occasions they were considered not to meet the statutory test of Article 42 of the Planning Order (1991) i.e. they were not assessed as 'buildings of 'special architectural or historic interest'.

They were inspected and recorded again in 2009 following a Listing Query from the President of the Belfast Jewish Community. This survey has not yet been fully assessed.

I have asked the Northern Ireland Environment Agency to compete this review and I will write to you again when this has been carried out.

Kindertransport, Millisle

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of the Environment, given the disrepair of the Kindertransport Farm, Millisle, and the historical significance it has in the legacy of Holocaust survivors, whether there has been a decision made to restore the site. (AQW 19266/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The structures on this site are not designated and are therefore currently not eligible for support from the Department of the Environment. However, this status is currently under review and, should they become listed, then eligible works of repair would attract assistance under the terms of the Listed Building Grant-Aid Scheme.

Dereliction Funding: North Down

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, following his Department's announcement that £1m will be spent to tackle dereliction, whether any towns in North Down will be included; and to detail the criteria by which towns have been, or will be, chosen.

(AQW 19368/11-15)

Mr Attwood: In November 2012 the Department invited all councils to make bids for dereliction funding. No proposal was received from North Down Borough Council, thus there were no towns in North Down included in the funding allocations announced.

Councils were asked to set out how their bid would provide one or all of the following

- benefits to tourism;
- a contribution to regeneration and tackling social need;
- an impact in strengthening and reinforcing existing co-operation and collaboration between NICS departments;
- a spin-off "multiplier" effect on the local economy, both in terms of jobs created, and the positive impact on the private sector and the local community.

The detailed criteria against which proposals were assessed were:

- need an examination of the need for the work, its wider contribution to the area and any potentially complementing interface with initiatives of other Departments;
- impact including consideration of the context and timing of any related event or projects which prompt and support the council's proposal;
- preparedness account being taken of the council's thoroughness in planning the project and developing tenders etc.
   to ensure a practical ability to spend funding in line with its allocation; and
- synergies with relevance to the local community consideration of the views and aspirations of local interest groups or residents and assessing how the work would interface with local priority needs and what longer term benefits might ensue

It was based on a scoring matrix informed by the above criteria that monies were allocated with additional particular regard to the main Belfast – Derry road at Dungiven and the Newry and Mourne Council area give the world Fire and Police games.

As a result £2.2 million has now been allocated in an initiative that did not exist years ago. Given the popularity and impact of the scheme, I believe my argument for continued dereliction funding, including from monitoring rounds, is strong.

Dereliction Funding: Larne Borough Council

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of the Environment why Larne Borough Council's bid for Intervention money was unsuccessful; and to outline the criteria used to examine applications.

(AQW 19404/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Following a call for proposals to tackle dereliction in our towns and cities, the Department received bids from 22 councils, as well as one from the Causeway Coast and Glen cluster. I have committed over £1million from my own Departmental budget to fund this work, but as my bid for additional funding in January Monitoring was unsuccessful, it was not possible to fund all bids in this financial year, and therefore the bids had to be prioritised. I hope to be in a position to offer funding to more councils, including Larne, if further finance is forthcoming. I look to members to support me in this effort.

The individual proposals were assessed and scored against the criteria set out below.

Councils were asked to set out how their bid would provide one or all of the following

- benefits to tourism:
- a contribution to regeneration and tackling social need;
- an impact in strengthening and reinforcing existing co-operation and collaboration between NICS Departments;
- a spin-off "multiplier" effect on the local economy, both in terms of jobs created, and the positive impact on the private sector and the local community.

The detailed criteria against which proposals were assessed were:

- need an examination of the need for the work, its wider contribution to the area and any potentially complementing interface with initiatives of other Departments;
- impact including consideration of the context and timing of any related event or projects which prompt and support the council's proposal;
- preparedness account being taken of the council's thoroughness in planning the project and developing tenders etc.
   to ensure a practical ability to spend funding in line with its allocation;
- synergies with relevance to the local community consideration of the views and aspirations of local interest groups or residents and assessing how the work would interface with local priority needs and what longer term benefits might ensue.

It was based on a scoring matrix informed by the above criteria that monies were allocated with additional particular regard to the main Belfast – Derry road at Dungiven and the Newry and Mourne Council area give the world Fire and Police games.

As a result £2.2 million has now been allocated in an initiative that did not exist years ago. Given the popularity and impact of the scheme, I believe my argument for continued dereliction funding, including from monitoring rounds, is strong.

Maze/Long Kesh Site

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the historical legal advice that he, or his predecessors, requested regarding the listed status of the Maze/Long Kesh site.

(AQW 19405/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I confirm that I have not sought legal advice previously in this matter, but also confirm that advice was sought in the previous mandate.

The concept of legal professional privilege safeguards the rights of a person or organisation, including the Department, to obtain legal advice on a confidential basis and to refuse to disclose such information in the interests of the wider administration of justice. It has been the settled view that in this context, legal advice is not disclosed.

I will however consider the matter further.

Planning Enforcement Notices: North Down Borough Council Area

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment how many planning enforcement orders are outstanding for the North Down Borough Council area; and how this quantity of orders will be addressed. (AQW 19406/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Planning Enforcement Notices are provided for in Planning legislation rather than Planning Enforcement Orders. There are currently 5 Enforcement Notices outstanding within the North Down Borough Council area; for three of these court action is being considered by the Department or is pending, one is the subject of an appeal and is within the jurisdiction of the Planning Appeals Commission and the other is in the process of being complied with.

I am fully committed to swift and robust enforcement action being taken whenever it is warranted. This is a message that I have conveyed to all of my officials - including those in the Downpatrick Area Planning office who are responsible for planning enforcement in the North Down Borough Council area.

In recognition of the need to enhance the standard of service delivery in planning enforcement, additional staff resources have recently been devoted to the enforcement section in Downpatrick and the office is now in the process of implementing a more focussed and proactive approach to this area of work.

The Department already has in place an Enforcement Strategy which sets out the objectives for planning enforcement, the guiding principles and priorities for enforcement action and performance targets. Officials in the Downpatrick Area Planning office are committed to complying with the terms of the strategy and the targets set out therein. These targets include bringing 70% of cases to a conclusion within 39 weeks (9 months) of receipt of complaint.

I am monitoring how with additional resources in place and a more focussed and proactive approach now being taken to enforcement, progress is being made towards improving performance in the North Down Borough Council area.

Dereliction Funding: Unsuccessful Applications

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the unsuccessful applications from each local council to the Dereliction Fund.

(AQW 19409/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The councils which were not allocated funds in the phase of the dereliction funding programme announced on February 4th were -

- Antrim Borough Council
- Armagh City and District Council
- Ballymena Borough Council
- Ballymoney Borough Council
- Banbridge District Council
- Carrickfergus Borough Council
- Castlereagh Borough Council
- Coleraine Borough Council
- Coleraine Borough Council

- Cookstown District Council
- Dungannon and South Tyrone Borough Council
- Larne Borough Council
- Limavady Borough Council
- Newry & Mourne District Council
- Newtownabbey Borough Council
- Omagh District Council
- Strabane District Council

Ards Borough Council withdrew its bid.

A proposal received from the Causeway Coast and Glen Cluster was not allocated funds.

Since that time it has been possible to fund the proposal of Limavady Borough Council and Newry & Mourne Council.

Councils were asked to set out how their bid would provide one or all of the following

- benefits to tourism;
- a contribution to regeneration and tackling social need;
- an impact in strengthening and reinforcing existing co-operation and collaboration between NICS departments;
- a spin-off "multiplier" effect on the local economy, both in terms of jobs created, and the positive impact on the private sector and the local community.

The detailed criteria against which proposals were assessed were:

- need an examination of the need for the work, its wider contribution to the area and any potentially complementing interface with initiatives of other Departments;
- impact including consideration of the context and timing of any related event or projects which prompt and support the council's proposal;
- preparedness account being taken of the council's thoroughness in planning the project and developing tenders etc.
   to ensure a practical ability to spend funding in line with its allocation; and
- synergies with relevance to the local community consideration of the views and aspirations of local interest groups or residents and assessing how the work would interface with local priority needs and what longer term benefits might ensue.

It was based on a scoring matrix informed by the above criteria that monies were allocated with additional particular regard to the main Belfast – Derry road at Dungiven and the Newry and Mourne Council area give the world Fire and Police games.

As a result £2.2 million has now been allocated in an initiative that did not exist years ago. Given the popularity and impact of the scheme, I believe my argument for continued dereliction funding, including from monitoring rounds, is strong.

Wind Farms

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of the Environment which Departments have been consulted on the effects on people living in close proximity to wind farms.

(AQW 19604/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Planning Policy Statement 18 'Renewable Energy' (PPS18) sets out my Department's policy for development that generates energy from renewable resources.

The key objective of PPS18 is to ensure that the environmental, landscape, visual and amenity impacts associates or arising from renewable energy development are adequately addressed.

To ensure there are no unacceptable adverse impacts on public safety, human health or residential amenity arising from any wind farm proposal, my officials routinely consult with the relevant Council's Environmental Heath Department. Where specific concerns are raised, my officials will also consult with the Public Health Agency.

Taxi Operator Licensing

Mr Storey asked the Minister of the Environment how many taxi operators have applied for a taxi operator's licence in the last three years, broken down by council area.

(AQW 19642/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Table 1 below details the numbers of applications received by the Driver & Vehicle Agency for taxi operators' licences, from September 2012 to 13 February 2013, set out by district council area. These figures have been sourced from the Agency's own internal information systems and have not been validated as Official Statistics.

Aggregation by district council area has been made using the latest central postcode directory (Jan 2013), which is available from the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency.

Table 1

	Taxi Operator

Taxi Operator Licensing

Mr Storey asked the Minister of the Environment whether he is satisfied that all taxi operators have a taxi operator's licence. (AQW 19643/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Since the introduction of taxi operator licensing in September 2012, a total of 1,916 applications for operator licences have been received. It is estimated that, of the currently licensed 9,500 taxi vehicles, 7,100 are covered by the applications received, and that would represent a compliance rate of 75%.

While I cannot be satisfied with that level of compliance with what is an important road safety and customer service initiative, positive progress is being made, and my Department will continue to use all of the measures available to it to promote and improve compliance.

Wind Turbines

Mr Ross asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the current planning applications for single wind turbines on agricultural land in (i) East Antrim; and (ii) Northern Ireland.

(AQW 19727/11-15)

Mr Attwood: As of 31 December 2012, there are 18 current planning applications for single wind turbines on agricultural land in East Antrim and a total of 639 single wind turbine applications in Northern Ireland. Please note that this information has been sourced from a live database, is subject to change following validation, and will not equate to any finalised official statistics which may be later published on the topic.

Wind Turbines

Mr Ross asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the current planning applications for multiple wind turbines on agricultural land in (i) East Antrim; and (ii) Northern Ireland.

(AQW 19728/11-15)

Mr Attwood: As of 31 December 2012, there are no current planning applications for multiple wind turbines on agricultural land in East Antrim and a total of 37 multiple wind turbine applications on agricultural land in Northern Ireland. Please note that this information has been sourced from a live database, is subject to change following validation, and will not equate to any finalised official statistics which may be later published on the topic.

Road Deaths

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of the Environment what plans he has to further reduce the number of people killed on roads. (AQW 19733/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I welcome the further reduction in road deaths during 2012, with the recorded level of 48 being the lowest since records began in 1931. One death is, however, one too many and I have started the conversation about moving towards a vision of zero fatalities.

As Minister of the Environment, I have responsibility for co-coordinating a strategic approach to road safety. This is achieved primarily through the delivery of the Road Safety Strategy to 2020 which contains over 200 action measures aimed at further reducing the number of people killed on our roads. Responsibility for delivering individual measures falls to each relevant department and agency, working in partnership and a report on progress is published annually by the Department of the Environment

Within the context of the Strategy, I am bringing forward a number of new road safety initiatives. To improve the position further will require bold and radical action and the introduction over the next few months of new legislation will be of particular note.

A Road Traffic (Amendment) Bill will introduce measures to tackle drink driving and introduce a system of Graduated Driver Licensing (GDL). This Bill will, along with other provisions, lower the drink drive limit and amend the learner and novice driver regimes, the latter with the objective of reducing the number of new driver casualties and of other road users killed and seriously injured by new drivers. The Bill will also cover the wearing of helmets on quadricycles on public roads. The Bill is expected to be introduced in April 2013. Drink drive and helmet-wearing provisions will begin to come into operation as soon as possible after the legislation is in place and GDL measures will begin to be seen from April/May 2014.

A further Road Traffic (Amendment) Bill is planned for 2014 which will introduce the recognition, between Northern Ireland and Ireland, of penalty points for key motoring offences and may also be used to introduce other provisions including new anti-drug driving laws.

Through its ongoing programme of awareness campaigns, my Department will continue to deliver road safety messages to all road users. A new campaign will represent a progression towards the 'Vision Zero' philosophy and help pave the way for the operationalisation of the new legislation. This will begin a step change in road safety but is a natural progression from our current casualty position and the core messages in DOE's most recent campaigns: 'Respect Everyone's Journey' and 'Kill the Excuses. It's No Accident!'.

This new campaign will aim to engage everyone in adopting, pursuing and owning a goal of zero road deaths. It will challenge us all to take personal responsibility for our own road safety and for that of other road users.

A second campaign later in the year will address seatbelt wearing. The DOE's most recent seatbelt survey has shown that, although seatbelt wearing rates remain high at 98%, around 6% of back seat passengers are still not using a seatbelt or other suitable restraint. The Survey also shows that adults are less likely to wear a seatbelt than children. Despite moving from having the lowest rate of seatbelt wearing to the highest, when compared with England, Wales and Scotland, significant challenges remain if we are to move towards 'Vision Zero'. It has been estimated that some four lives, thirty-nine serious injuries and one hundred and seventy-six slight injuries would have been saved each year (from 2008-2010) had a 100% wearing rate been observed. The purpose of our new campaign will be to renew the 'No Seatbelt, No Excuse' message to prevent a drift away from compliance, in particular amongst younger and older passengers, in some of our most vulnerable age groups.

An ongoing programme to modernise the Department's Road Safety Education Officer Service (RSEOS) will result in a fit for purpose service for our young people that is specifically designed to meet their needs. New, high quality road safety teaching resources, developed to address local issues, will help to strengthen our collaboration with teaching professionals. New resources are being developed for both primary and post-primary schools which will be made available through NI Direct and the C2K educational website or issued to schools as the year progresses. These resources, together with existing initiatives, will support the continuing delivery of road safety education by professional teaching staff in a regular structured way through the curriculum, in line with best practice. By making our resources available through C2K, we will bring them directly to teaching professionals, making it easier for them to plan a road safety lesson. A number of the new resources will also be available to youth and sporting organisations to help deliver the road safety message to the traditionally hard to reach target audience 17 to 24 year old male and those not in education, training or employment. The RSEOS will continue to work closely with schools and partners to ensure road safety education remains high on the agenda.

Establishing a sound evidence base is crucial in identifying key road safety issues and problems and deciding how to tackle them. The road safety research programme, established as part of our work on developing the Strategy and involving road safety partners, helps to identify emerging trends and assist in targeting interventions more effectively. A number of research projects have been carried out and have led to the development of 22 new action measures that were added to the Strategy in 2012. The programme, which is reviewed annually, includes ongoing statistical analysis, projects carried out by partner organisations and assignments commissioned by DOE.

MOT: Exemption of Historic Vehicles from Testing

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 12917/11-15, for an update on the development of a policy on the exemption of pre-1960 classic or historic vehicles from the MOT test. (AQW 19774/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I have answered a number of similar questions over the past months, most recently in December 2012 (AQW 17367/11-15).

The Department consulted on possible exemption of certain categories of historic vehicles from MOT testing. The responses indicated that there is broad support for exemption of pre-1960 vehicles from periodic testing.

The Environment Committee has indicated that it is content with the Department's proposed way forward following the consultation, which is to make use of the exemption in Roadworthiness Directive 2009/40/EC concerning the periodic testing of pre-1960 vehicles. This would align with the British Government's exemption, from 18 November 2012, of pre-1960 vehicles from MOT testing.

However on 13 July 2012, the European Commission published a 'Roadworthiness Package' which, amongst other things, addresses periodic roadworthiness tests for motor vehicles, therein making changes to the rules that apply to historic vehicles; the proposals are expected to be introduced no earlier than August 2014.

I explained in my most recent written answer on this matter that, if implemented as then drafted, these proposals would narrow the parameters within which the Department can provide for exemptions to historic vehicles, as the definition of an historical vehicle was more prescriptively described. While the Department's policy intentions remained the same; that is to make exempt pre-1960 vehicles from the MOT regime, we had to be mindful of the changing legislative context, to ensure that any changes we make are not made redundant by incoming EC Regulations.

Following receipt of a further update on the EU negotiations regarding the roadworthiness package, one of the main amendments in which was a change to the definition of "historic vehicles" which allows vehicles that have not undergone "substantial" changes to be still classed as historic, I have instructed officials to proceed with legislative amendment to exempt pre-1960 vehicles from the MOT test.

There are a number of issues that have needed to be resolved, including provision for a voluntary MOT test for such vehicles (for purposes including cherished plate transfer), where Northern Ireland law differs from British law and have needed careful attention. However, I believe that we are now close to resolving these issues with the Departmental Solicitors. Subject to receipt of final advice, the Department will now amend the relevant legislation to exempt pre-1960 vehicles from MOT testing and I will shortly confirm the timescale to bring about this legislative change.

Beach Cleaning

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment what more his Department can do to enforce beach cleaning by local councils.

(AQW 19827/11-15)

Mr Attwood: District Councils are already under a legal duty, as respects relevant land for which they are responsible, to ensure that the land is, so far as is practicable, kept clear of litter. The legal definition of "litter" is quite wide and includes, for example, any refuse, filth, garbage or any other nauseous, offensive or unsightly waste. The law, namely the Litter (Northern Ireland) Order 1994, also provides that District Councils shall have regard to a Code of Practice on Litter in discharging the litter clearing duty. The Code provides Councils with practical guidance on the discharge of the litter clearing duty, including specific guidance on beaches.

The Code of Practice on Litter is a statutory Code which Councils must have regard to. In respect of beaches the Code makes clear that amenity beaches (including inland beaches where a substantial number of bathers or beach users congregate) should, as a minimum standard, generally be kept clear of all types of litter during the traditional bathing season from 1 May to 30 September inclusive. The Code states that it is expected that during this time of the year, beaches be subject to a frequent monitoring routine and be cleansed to as practicable a standard as possible.

The duty to clean beaches applies to items or materials originating from discharges directly to the marine environment as well as discarded items from beach users. As a guide, only litter comprising manufactured or processed items or materials that have been discarded, disposed of or abandoned, by intent or accident, should be removed. Litter should include processed food items but it does not include seaweed or twigs, which contribute to maintaining the local ecosystem. The Code also makes clear that there may be issues of practicability relating to litter removal from beaches and particular care will be needed in respect of sensitive habitats.

The law also provides that a court may act on a complaint made by any person on the ground that he or she is aggrieved by the defacement, by litter, of any relevant land of a district council. If the court is satisfied that the land in question is defaced by litter the court may make an order ("a litter abatement order") requiring the district council to clear the litter away. Failure to comply with a litter abatement order is an offence.

The legal position is therefore quite robust as, in addition to placing a legal duty on Councils to, as far as is practicable, keep land clear of litter it allows the Courts to act on a complaint by any person on the ground that he or she is aggrieved by the defacement, by litter, of any relevant land of a district council. The Department does not have any legal power to enforce cleaning of land, including beaches, by District Councils. It is only the courts that are empowered to make a litter abatement order as referred to above.

In addition to the legal position as outlined above, the Department is also moving forward in developing a Northern Ireland Marine Litter Strategy which seeks to build on the strengths of existing measures, identify proposals that will help overcome weaknesses, and maximise opportunities and minimise threats to addressing the levels of litter present in the coastal and marine environment

The important role of Districts Councils in beach cleaning will be highlighted within the Marine Litter Strategy, which also makes reference to the inclusion of beach cleanliness in the annual Northern Ireland Litter Survey. The availability of accurate and reliable information on the levels of coastal litter will help identify those District Councils which are delivering on their commitment to keep our beaches clean.

It is also important to point out that beach cleaning is only one of a series of activities undertaken by District Councils to deliver clean beaches. Councils deliver education initiatives and awareness campaigns, such as the Coleraine Borough Council "Line Out" campaign, which raises awareness among anglers on appropriate waste disposal. Also, projects like the Coastal Guardians Project being delivered by Ards, North Down and Down District councils in partnership with the Strangford Lough and Lecale Partnership help to maintain beach cleanliness. This project has produced the "Coastal Guardian Pack" containing litter pick equipment, and has strengthened the capacity of local volunteers to remove litter.

These measures are aimed at effecting behavioural change to reduce reliance on the activity of beach cleaning to deliver a clean and healthy coastline.

In addition to these matters, I have convened a series of Beach Summits, the purpose and outcome of which is to address beach issues – litter, water quality, signage, information, awards (etc) all of which demonstrates a firm DOE commitment to beach management and coastal development.

Recycling

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment what percentage of (i) mixed plastics; (ii) paper; (iii) newspapers and magazines; and (iv) plastic bottles that are sent to reprocessing plants can't be recycled; and what is done with these materials.

(AQW 19881/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department has no regulatory reason to hold this information. Further there is currently no direct legislation relating to the quality of recyclates. This has meant a large variation of quality standards in re-processing plants and Materials Recovery Facilities (MRFs).

In Britain, DEFRA has recently published proposals for a Quality Action Plan (QAP) to promote high quality recycling of dry recyclates. The QAP sets out a range of measures to be implemented in the coming years, including the reporting on recycling rates. The QAP applies to England, however it is hoped that all the Devolved Administrations will work closely together on the issue of quality to help:

- Increase public confidence and participation in recycling
- Support growth and the economy
- Improve market inefficiencies, and
- Deliver significant environmental benefits.

Alongside the QAP, DEFRA has published a Consultation Paper on draft Materials Recovery Facility (MRF) Regulations for insertion into the Environmental Permitting (England and Wales) (Amendment) regulations (2013). The amendment regulations could potentially come into force in October 2013 and MRFs over a certain size will be required to measure quality from April 2014.

In conjunction with the new regulations, DEFRA intends to publish a mandatory Code of Practice for MRFs in England and Wales. This will require MRFs to put in place robust quality management systems and take representative samples of the facility's input and output material (including the residual stream) and measure the composition of each sample by material type (i.e. paper, glass, plastic and metal). DEFRA aims to get over 90% of MRFs measuring quality.

Scotland issued similar proposals on the 21 February 2013 and Zero Waste Scotland and WRAP have proposed undertaking a joint UK-wide study of waste transfer/bulking stations to determine the average quality of each of the key recyclate streams. Both DEFRA and the Welsh Government have stated their willingness to participate in the study.

To ensure a level playing field for recyclates, provide consistency, prevent upsurges of waste movements and achieve higher quality of recyclates it will be important that the Department follows a similar and timely pathway as the rest of the UK. This should include the publication of a Quality Action Plan, MRF Recyclate Regulations and a mandatory Code of Practice.

Failing to do so will mean that there will be a lack of robust data and a continued variation of standards in local MRFs. More importantly it will exacerbate the growing trend locally to produce solid recovered fuel (SRF) and refuse derived fuel (RDF) from residual waste materials for recovery in incinerators and cement kilns.

Biodiversity

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 19046/11-15, whether the 2016 target on biodiversity commitment still stands or has been pushed back to 2020; and to outline the reasons for any change in the target date. (AQW 19892/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The new target date reflects the renewed focus, both within the EC and the wider international community, to halt biodiversity loss by 2020. I am currently reviewing the NI Biodiversity Strategy so that it sets out specific and challenging targets for on-going action, both within DOE, other government departments and agencies, as well as business and voluntary organisations.

To that end, I see this revised Strategy as a means to increase awareness and focus attention on the importance and benefits of protecting our biodiversity, within the wider EC and international objectives. The strategy proposes to include actions from a wider sector of the community. I am committed to implementing on-going practical measures to halt biodiversity loss through safeguarding vulnerable habitats and species and whenever possible, restoring important ecosystems.

The revised strategy's targets will be regularly monitored which will assist determine if the overall objective of halting biodiversity loss will be realised during the period covered by the strategy.

Flooding: Surface Water Flooding

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of (i) residential; and (ii) commercial properties at risk due to surface water flooding.

(AQW 19910/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Historically many cities and towns in Northern Ireland, as elsewhere in UK, have been built in valleys and along river corridors and thus have resulted in increased flood risk. The Department recognises that the effects of flooding on human activity are wide ranging, impacting on the economy, social well being and the environment.

The Department consults with Rivers Agency when a development plan is being prepared to ensure that such plans do not bring forward sites or zone land that may be susceptible to flooding, unless there are exceptional circumstances, or it is considered appropriate to put mitigation measures in place.

However, the planning system cannot in itself prevent the flooding of properties but it does acknowledge the risks and uncertainties associated with climate change. The Department considers that actions to address these matters through the planning system should be based on a precautionary approach. This approach is embodied in the policies set out in Planning Policy Statement 15 'Planning and Flood Risk' to ensure that the development decisions we make today and in the future does not increase flood risk. The Review of PPS 15 will bring forward new planning policy and guidance in addressing surface water flood risk to new development.

It should be noted that it is the responsibility of the applicant to identify potential flood risk as early in the development process as possible and demonstrate how the development can be made safe through design and flood resilient construction and that it does not increase flood risk elsewhere. The Department's responsibility in respect of flooding does not affect the liability position of developers or owners.

Surface water flooding maps were published by Rivers Agency in December 2011. In the period between December 2011 and September 2012 1,273 residential and 134 commercial applications have been approved within these areas. This figure includes new and replacement as well as alterations and extensions to existing properties. The Department does not monitor the commencement or completion of building works and therefore cannot advise how many of these are actually constructed.

Planning and Local Government Group: Professional Planners

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment how many professional planners are employed by Planning Service in each division.

(AQW 19921/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Planning and Local Government Group employs the following number of professional Planning Staff in each of the following locations:

Location	Number of Professional Planning Staff Employed
South Antrim Area Planning Office, Ballymena	34
Belfast Area Planning Office, Belfast (Bedford House)	44
Planning & Local Government Group Headquarters, Belfast (Millennium House)	75
Northern Area Planning Office, Coleraine	20
Southern Area Planning Office, Craigavon	54
Downpatrick Area Planning Office, Downpatrick	44
Western Area Planning Office, Enniskillen	9
Northern Area Planning Office, Londonderry	26
Western Area Planning Office, Omagh	34
Total	340

Dereliction Funding

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of the Environment whether he plans to have any further rounds of dereliction funding for town centres.

(AQW 20003/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Following my announcement on 4 February 2013 of a £1 million funding package to tackle dereliction in Fermanagh, Down, Lisburn, Moyle and Belfast councils, a further £0.2 million has been identified for properties within Newry & Mourne District Council, Limavady District Council and Belfast City Council.

I see dereliction funding as a rolling programme which I am planning to maintain into the next financial year and beyond. Existing bids will be reconsidered as and when further funding becomes available and councils will have the opportunity to refresh their bids at that point if they so wish. I believe monitoring rounds provide a mechanism to roll out the scheme across the Council areas, particularly those which have not benefited to date. For a relatively small sum the dereliction fund can have a big impact. The evidence is for all to see. I hope others will back me.

DVLA Coleraine

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the future of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency office and jobs in Coleraine; and what assurances he can give that the facility and jobs will be maintained. (AQW 20258/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Vehicle licensing is delivered in Northern Ireland by the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA), under an agreement between my Department and the Department for Transport. The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency in Swansea, which is responsible for vehicle licensing services across the United Kingdom, is nearing completion of a project to integrate the separate NI and GB computer systems in order to produce an integrated system capable of meeting the vehicle licensing needs of customers across the UK.

DVLA have proposed to use the integrated computer system to transfer all the work not done online or in Post Offices to Swansea and to terminate the agreement with DVA, mirroring developments in Britain, where the closure of all the regional and local motor tax offices is currently under way.

I am completely opposed to this proposal because of the impact on staff in DVA, who have consistently provided high standards of service; because of the impact on the local economy, especially in Coleraine, where most of the jobs are based; and because of the impact on the economy of NI as a whole. I have made it clear to Ministers in London repeatedly since becoming DOE Minister that I oppose reduction in public sector jobs, when public expenditure should be used as a stimulus to growth and when NI is so deeply hit by recession.

Since June 2011, I have been lobbying Ministers at Westminster about the threat to jobs, and encouraging local public representatives from right across the political spectrum to do likewise. I have presented a dossier of evidence to London on the reasons why jobs should be retained and how they can be.

I shall also be meeting with Stephen Hammond, Parliamentary Under Secretary of State at the Department for Transport, in London on 5 March 2013 to discuss the matter further, and at that meeting I intend to again make the case for the retention of vehicle licensing services, and the associated jobs, in Northern Ireland.

I again request support for my efforts to protect jobs and resistance to the approach London has already deployed in Britain.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Aerial Photography Costs

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the cost to Land and Property Services of the use of aircraft for aerial photography and other related purposes in each of the last five years.

(AQW 19639/11-15)

Mr Wilson (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): The cost to Land & Property Services for the use of aircraft for aerial photography and other related purposes in each of the last five years is detailed below:

2012/2013	£155,532.36 (at 11 February 2013)
2011/2012	£131,788.08
2010/2011	£ 55,971.02
2009/2010	£ 68,693.70
2008/2009	£ 51,545.99

Care for the Elderly

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what assessment his Department has made of the Barnett consequentials as a result of the proposed changes to inheritance tax to help fund elderly care in England. (AQW 19658/11-15)

Mr Wilson: Recent announcements have been made proposing changes to how care for the elderly will be funded in England. My officials have spoken with HM Treasury officials about the implications of these announcements for Northern Ireland.

The detail of these changes, along with the budgetary implications, are still being analysed in HM Treasury so at this early stage the amounts are not known. However, it has been confirmed that Northern Ireland will receive Barnett Consequentials as a result of any changes to relevant Whitehall budgets.

My officials will continue to liaise with HM Treasury on this issue and I will update the Assembly of developments in due course.

Rates Arrears: North Down Borough Council

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many people in the North Down Borough Council area were in rates arrears in each of the last three years.

(AQW 19914/11-15)

Mr Wilson: Information on the number of people in the North Down Borough Council Area who were in rates arrears in each of the last three years is not available. Information is available on the number of occupancies in the North Down Borough Council Area that had rates outstanding at the end of each rating year. An occupancy represents a liable ratepayer at a property at a given time.

The table overleaf shows the number of occupancies in the North Down Borough Council Area with rates arrears at the end of each rating year.

Number of Occupancies in the North Down Borough Council area with rates arrears at end of year

Financial Year Ending:	Number of Occupancies
31st March 2010	4,421
31st March 2011	3,696
31st March 2012	4,342

Performance and Efficiency Delivery Unit

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to list the number and type of Performance and Efficiency Delivery Unit reports that are currently active or have been commissioned by each Department since 2007.

(AQW 19943/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The table overleaf sets out the number of reports by the Performance and Efficiency Delivery Unit (PEDU) that are currently active or which have been commissioned since the unit was established in April 2008.

The types of report produced by PEDU are mainly in respect of securing improvements in the delivery of services or reducing the costs of providing services.

It should be noted that most of the work of PEDU has been commissioned by the Executive, reflecting the requirements of all Departmental Ministers. In addition the table excludes the reports produced by PEDU in respect of the monitoring of the delivery of the Executive's Programme for Government, and the provision of advice when the monitoring reports have shown less than expected levels of progress. This work is taken forward in support of officials in OFMDFM.

Vacant Properties

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether it is the responsibility of home owners to notify Land and Property Services of vacant properties in their ownership.

(AQW 20064/11-15)

Mr Wilson: There is no legal requirement for homeowners to notify Land & Property Services (LPS) of vacant properties in their ownership. However, there is a moral obligation on all ratepayers to pay what they rightfully owe to help maintain the public services that we all avail of and rely on. It is also in the home owners' best interests to notify LPS, as failure to provide timely ownership information can lead to a large backdated bill.

Vacant Properties

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, in instances were Land and Property Services discover a vacant property, how far back can the property be rated.

(AQW 20069/11-15)

Mr Wilson: Rating of Empty Homes legislation was introduced on 1st October 2011. As a consequence, any domestic property that was vacant at 1st October 2011 will be liable for rates from that date.

Rates: Debt

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the amount of rate debt in (i) Antrim; and (ii) Newtownabbey Borough Council areas, for each of the last five years.

(AQW 20070/11-15)

Mr Wilson: Information on the amount of rate debt in the Antrim and Newtownabbey Borough Council Areas in each of the last five years is not available. Information is available for the last three financial years.

The table overleaf shows the rate debt in the Antrim and Newtownabbey Borough Council Areas at the end of each rating year. The figures for the year ended 31st March 2012 include debt arising from empty homes which became liable for rates on 1st October 2011. They are therefore not directly comparable with previous years.

Rating Debt at End of Year

Financial Year Ending:	Antrim Borough Council	Newtownabbey Borough Council
31st March 2010	£4,086,811	£6,826,648
31st March 2011	£3,977,115	£6,512,287
31st March 2012	£3,853,551	£6,944,950

Mortality Statistics

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the mortality statistics for each of the last five years, broken down by cause of death.

(AQW 20124/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The table overleaf details the number of deaths registered by cause of death1 from 2007 to 2011. More detailed statistics are available in the 2011 Registrar General Annual Report published on the NISRA website: www.nisra.gov.uk/archive/demography/publications/annual_reports/2011/Table6.1_2011.xls

Due to improvements in automatic coding, deaths previously jointly coded as I63.9 'Cerebral infarction, unspecified' and F03.0 'Unspecified dementia' are now coded to F01.1 'Multi-infarct dementia'. This has been implemented in Northern Ireland for 2011 Registrations onwards. This change in coding has had an impact on Cause of Death figures by decreasing the overall number of deaths from 'Diseases Of The Circulatory System' and increasing the number of deaths from 'Mental And Behavioural Disorders'

DHSSPS: Budget

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline the increased budget allocation to the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety during 2012/13.

(AQO 3485/11-15)

Mr Wilson: During 2012-13, the DEL budget allocation to DHSSPS increased by £62.597m comprising a net increase of £53.885m in Resource provision and £8.712m in Capital provision.

These changes reflect the net impact of allocations by the Executive, technical transfers between departments and internal reclassifications initiated by DHSSPS in Monitoring Rounds; allocations in relation to the Executive's Invest to Save Scheme, the Childcare Strategy, Delivering Social Change initiatives and reduced requirements in respect of depreciation and delayed capital projects.

Efficiency Delivery Programme: NIAO Report

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the Northern Ireland Audit Office report on the Review of the Efficiency Delivery Programme.

(AQO 3486/11-15)

Mr Wilson: I welcome the report by the Audit Office on the Efficiency Delivery Programme. The report contains a number of recommendations for departments in relation to the assessment and monitoring of any efficiency programme and anything that encourages transparency and accountability is to be welcomed. The report also calls for greater challenge and scrutiny of how departments deliver efficiencies. I am firmly of the view that this is a role that Assembly Committees should undertake – holding departments to account for delivery of efficiencies. The Audit Office report also contains a number of recommendations for my department and my officials are due to report on these to the Finance Committee next month.

Income Tax Revenue

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he has requested an accurate figure of income tax revenue from the Treasury rather than estimates.

(AQO 3494/11-15)

Mr Wilson: I have not requested an actual income tax revenue figure for Northern Ireland as regional tax data is not routinely published by HM Treasury or HMRC. This would not be a straightforward exercise and I do not have any expectation that it is one that the Treasury would be willing to undertake at this time. That is why it has been necessary to estimate Northern Ireland's share of the various tax revenues that are collected nationally in the UK. Scotland have had to do likewise in producing their Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland report.

DFP: Contracts

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel why his Department predominantly uses multi-trade term contracts which may discriminate against small and medium-sized enterprises. (AQO 3495/11-15)

Mr Wilson: Most construction contracts in both the private and public sectors are let as multi trade contracts. This ensures that the responsibility for the management of individual subcontractors rests with a main contractor, who is best placed to coordinate the different trades. This approach is much more cost effective for public bodies as it has lower staffing and operating costs, compared to placing individual trade contracts.

Multi-trade procurements are particularly relevant in the use of frameworks to deliver maintenance and minor works. Many public bodies simply do not have sufficient technical and professional staff to be able to procure and manage the number of individual contracts that changing from multi-trade contracts would require.

Rates Arrears

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the current levels of rates arrears and recovery for commercial and domestic properties.

(AQO 3496/11-15)

Mr Wilson: At the end of the 2011/12 financial year there was an outstanding debt of £70.7 million associated with domestic properties (including £7.9 million debt associated with vacant domestic properties) and an outstanding debt of £90.8 million debt associated with non-domestic properties. These figures do not take into account almost £609,000 that had been receipted at year-end but without the required level of detail provided to allow the payment to be allocated to an account.

Land & Property Services provides ratepayers with a number of opportunities to pay their rate bills, or to put in place a payment arrangement. If payment or a payment arrangement is not forthcoming, Land & Property Services will use the court process to attempt to collect the debt or to enforce the judgement of the Court against the rate payer.

Land and Property Services

Ms Brown asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the work of Land and Property Services. (AQO 3497/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The work of Land & Property Services (LPS) plays a key role in supporting the delivery of the NI Executive's Programme for Government for Northern Ireland 2011-15 in many areas.

LPS is currently making good progress against most of the corporate targets. The position as at 31st January 2013 against LPS three Key Targets is as follows:

- (i) LPS has collected £1057.2 million in rates against the target "To collect £1.1 billion (cash value of rates)and transfer to Paymaster General's Account during 2012-13";
- (ii) LPS is focusing on extensive recovery action and is making steady progress to reduce the level of rating debt against the target "Value of the end of year rating debt to be £145 million excluding rating of empty homes"; and
- (iii) INSPIRE* Annex I and II download services implemented at 31 December 2012.
- * The aim of Infrastructure for Spatial Information In the European Community (INSPIRE) is to establish a data sharing portal which meets the demands of the EU Directive for Northern Ireland for discovering, viewing and downloading spatial data.

During the next few years, LPS will face additional challenges because of the review of public administration (RPA), Non-Domestic Revaluation and even Welfare Reform. I am committed to ensuring that LPS, as a key part of my Department, has the required resources to manage these additional challenges.

Net Fiscal Balance Report

Mr Molloy asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether the Net Fiscal Balance Report 2009-10 and 2010-11 methodology, originally designed to produce the Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland, is intended to provide an accurate estimate of individual revenue items.

(AQO 3498/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The methodology and consequently the report is not intended to provide an accurate estimate of individual revenue items – many of these have been estimated, in the absence of actual regional data, on the basis of high level assumptions and apportionment factors. Rather the report provides an overall assessment of Northern Ireland's aggregate fiscal position, and as such, the report indicates that individual estimates should be interpreted with caution.

Corporation Tax

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline any recent discussions that he has had with the British Prime Minister on the devolution of Corporation Tax.

(AQO 3499/11-15)

Mr Wilson: I have not had any discussions with the Prime Minister recently in respect of corporation tax.

The First Minister and deputy First Minister wrote to the Prime Minister on 29 November 2012 to request a meeting to discuss the findings of the Joint Ministerial Working Group on Rebalancing the Northern Ireland (NI) economy, which had considered the scope to devolve responsibility for corporation tax to the NI Executive.

The Prime Minister replied on 9 January 2013 agreeing to the request, with a date for the meeting now arranged for the end of March.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

DHSSPS: Special Adviser

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) whether his Special Adviser has made any declarations of interest, pursuant to the obligation on civil servants; (ii) how such declarations are recorded; and (iii) whether they are open to public inspection.

(AQW 19292/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety):

(i) My Special Adviser has not made any declarations of interest;

(ii) My Special Adviser is required to declare any potential conflict of interest to the Establishment Officer in Departmental HR in accordance with the conduct provisions in Section 6.01 of the Employee Relations part of the NICS HR Handbook. Records of declarations of potential conflict of interest are held by Departmental HR in a Register of Interest and on the individual's Personal File;

(iii) The Register of Interest is not open to public inspection, with the exception of declarations made by Departmental Board members, which are published in the Department's Annual Resource Accounts.

Rare Disease Plan

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how the rare disease plan will be implemented. (AQW 19776/11-15)

Mr Poots: In line with the 2009 European Council Recommendation on Rare Diseases, the final UK plan representing all four Countries is expected to be published by the end of 2013. When the Plan is published it will be for each devolved administration to decide how to implement it within their respective jurisdictions and my Department will set out its proposals on how it should be implemented in Northern Ireland.

Ambulances

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the arrangements for the deployment of ambulances from Altnagelvin Area Hospital to hospitals in each of the other Health and Social Care Trust areas, outside high demand times.

(AQW 19782/11-15)

Mr Poots: The deployment and dispatch of ambulances are entirely operational matters for which the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (NIAS) is responsible. It should be noted that NIAS is a regional service which dynamically deploys its emergency response resources both within and outside times of high demand. This means that the nearest available ambulance will respond to any emergency call. Therefore it is quite possible that resources based outside its Western Division area will respond to calls within the Western Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust. Similarly, ambulance vehicles normally based outside the Western HSC Trust area will respond to calls within that area if required.

ENT: Treatment

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) to detail the number of new patients requiring an ENT outpatient appointment or treatment in each of the last four years, in each of the Health and Social Care Trusts; (ii) whether demand for ENT treatment has risen over the last four years; (iii) why demand for ENT treatment has risen; and (iv) whether his Department intends to employ more doctors to undertake ENT outpatient appointments or treatment to ensure that waiting lists for ENT treatment are reduced, and to provide further details on this recruitment.

(AQW 19846/11-15)

Mr Poots: The number of new patients who were waiting for a first Consultant-led outpatient appointment in the ENT Specialty has risen steadily over the last four years. Details in respect of each Health and Social Care Trust are set out in Table 1 below.

Table 1

	Quarter Ending
HSC Trust	31/03/09	31/03/10	31/03/11	31/03/12
Belfast	1,672	2,243	2,143	3,892
Northern	1,560	1,682	2,567	2,667
South Eastern	1,263	1,950	1,455	1,737
Southern	1,586	1,832	1,888	1,984
Western	1,071	1,457	1,472	1,712
N. Ireland	7,152	9,164	9,525	11,992

Inpatient admission in the ENT specialty has also steadily risen over the last few years, as detailed in Table 2 below.

Table 2

		Quarter	Ending
HSC Trust	31/03/09	31/03/10	31/03/11	31/03/12
Belfast	972	966	1,605	1,660

	Quarter Ending
HSC Trust	31/03/09	31/03/10	31/03/11	31/03/12
Northern	518	474	433	461
South Eastern	236	132	230	316
Southern	671	454	486	599
Western	473	470	511	729
N. Ireland	2,870	2,496	3,265	3,765

The reasons for the increase in demand for elective care services, including ENT treatment, can include demographic changes, changes in primary care, greater public awareness and reduced waiting times.

I am advised that the Health and Social Care (HSC) Board has recently allocated an additional £514,000 to meet demand and reduce waiting times across both assessments and treatments in the ENT specialty.

The Southern HSC Trust is currently recruiting an ENT consultant, and the Northern Trust is looking at increasing clinical capacity within its ENT service. The Belfast Trust has a vacancy caused by a consultant's retirement which has been advertised as a locum post. The Western Trust and South Eastern Trusts have no plans to recruit additional doctors however additional Outpatient Clinics and Theatre Lists will be undertaken by the South Eastern Trust's ENT Consultants between now and the end of March 2013 to ensure ENT waiting lists are reduced.

Holywood Arches Health Centre

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why the care in the community centre service in Holywood Arches Health Centre was stopped; (ii) which management body in his Department made this decision; and (iii) how much it would cost to reinstate the scheme.

(AQW 19847/11-15)

Mr Poots: The service at the Holywood Arches Health Centre was approved by the HSCB Primary Care Partnership Project Board as a pathfinder pilot to evaluate the potential for a GP-delivered service outside hospital.

It was commissioned by the Belfast Local Commissioning Group (LCG) in September 2011 to run as a pilot until June 2012; the LCG subsequently decided to extend it to December 2012.

The pilot will now be evaluated by the HSCB with the aim to test the potential of the scheme to be extended regionally. The cost of the pilot scheme was £10,250 per month.

Hospital Appointments

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what strategies are being pursued to reduce the number of missed hospital appointments.

(AQW 19869/11-15)

Mr Poots: I have been advised by the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) that HSC Trusts have implemented or are implementing a number of measures to reduce the number of missed hospital appointments. These include:

- Applying flexible partial booking systems for most outpatient appointments and some review appointments, as opposed to fixed appointment booking systems. Partial booking allows patients to choose an appointment time of their choice no more than six weeks in advance of attendance;
- By the end of 2013 all Trusts should have some form of text messaging or voice messaging service in place to remind patients of their appointment date; and,
- Trusts now require hospital consultants, under the terms of the Integrated Elective Access Protocol (IEAP) to provide at least six weeks notice of annual leave to allow outpatient and review clinics to be planned with some degree of assurance

The number of patients who "Did Not Attend" their appointment and the number of cancelled appointments by hospitals has reduced in recent years and I welcome this improvement.

Family Fund

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the current level of funding that his Department provides to the Family Fund; and what funding is planned for the next financial year. (AQW 19924/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Family Fund has already received its total funding allocation of £1.57m from my Department for this financial year. Funding allocations for the next financial year in respect of voluntary organisations, including the Family Fund, are currently being assessed in line with my Department's priorities.

Antrim Area Hospital: Laboratory Assistants

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why some laboratory assistants at Antrim Area Hospital are still being paid within Band 2 while other assistants within the Northern Health and Social Care Trust are on Band 3 or higher, given that they were advised that their Band 3 pay had been approved in March 2012; and (ii) when they will receive the pay rise and back pay.

(AQW 19931/11-15)

Mr Poots: I have been advised that the process for considering applications submitted by staff under the Agenda for Change (AfC) Clustering Agreement has not yet been completed.

Laboratory Assistants in Antrim Area Hospital have not been advised of the outcome of any applications which have been submitted. The Laboratory Assistants who have submitted applications will be advised of the outcome when the process in respect of their application is complete.

Independent Living Fund

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how he will maintain the Independent Living Fund after 2015.

(AQW 19953/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department is now doing all it can to help ensure that those disabled people in Northern Ireland who are most in need of care and support are not disadvantaged by the decision of the Department for Work and Pensions to close the Independent Living Fund (ILF) with effect from April 2015.

The ILF monies will not be lost to NI and my officials will develop transitional arrangements for current recipients of the ILF. They will also work closely with the other devolved administrations to help develop alternative longer-term arrangements for the future provision of the care and support previously funded by the ILF. Draft proposals will be submitted to the NI Executive for consideration in due course.

Health and Social Care Trusts: Statutory Continuing Healthcare

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether all Health and Social Care Trusts commission statutory continuing care; and how the Trusts that do not commission this care are meeting the needs of patients who have been assessed, using the Single Assessment Tool, as requiring continuing care. (AQW 19956/11-15)

Mr Poots: Departmental Circular ECCU 1/2010 'Care Management, Provision of Services and Charging Guidance' provides Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts guidance on the provision of continuing healthcare in NI. Within our integrated health and social care system, HSC Trusts are responsible for carrying out assessment of needs for individuals with continuing healthcare needs. All HSC Trusts have confirmed that they comply with the aforementioned Departmental guidance.

Transforming Your Care: Statutory Residential Homes Top-up Fees

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assurances he can give that residents of statutory residential, homes which are facing closure, will not be subject to top-up fees in their new place of residence and that good practice will be followed for those transferring to other accommodation. (AQW 19957/11-15)

Mr Poots: The TYC proposals around statutory residential care describe a phased closure of a number of older people's statutory residential homes in a managed way over a 3-5 year period. Part of the TYC vision is that in future people will be offered alternatives to such formal care via 'enhanced' domiciliary care packages in their own homes or by the provision of accommodation in 'supported living' environments.

Should a statutory residential home be identified as suitable for closure and residents are required to transfer other accommodation, it is current Trust practice to always seek care placements at the regional tariff rate in the first instance. Where a suitable residential placement at regional rate is not available, there is an existing policy in place whereby the Trust will fund any 'top up' charge without the requirement for an individual or family member to fund this cost differential. This approach will continue as the planned changes to statutory residential provision are rolled out.

It is anticipated that numbers of residents transferring to other accommodation will be kept to a minimum by ceasing new admissions to homes which are identified for closure. However, it is inevitable that some residents may have to transfer and when this occurs they will be fully supported by the trust to find a suitable alternative. I can assure you that the health and wellbeing of the current residents will be central in this change process.

Food Advertising

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what consideration his Department has given to a ban on the advertising of foods high in saturated fat, sugar and salt before 9pm. (AQW 20008/11-15)

Mr Poots: Broadcast advertising is a reserved matter, and is therefore not within the remit of my Department. However, the Obesity Prevention Framework, known as A Fitter Future for All, recognises the impact of advertising food high in fat, salt, and sugar, particularly on our children and young people.

I have therefore raised this issue with my counterparts in the UK Government, calling for greater restrictions on advertising these products, including potentially introducing a 9pm watershed or making it a requirement that companies that want to continue to advertise such products have to provide funding to support the advertising of our public health messages.

Eating Establishments: Displaying Calorie Information on Menus

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what efforts his Department has made to encourage eating establishments to display calorie counts on their menus. (AQW 20009/11-15)

Mr Poots: I launched the Food Standards Agency's (FSA) Caloriewise pilot scheme on 24 April 2012. This pilot aimed to encourage caterers to display calorie information on their menus. A number of catering companies participated in the pilot including Sodexo, Mount Charles, the Streat, Botanic Inns, and Aramark. In addition, three Health and Social Care Trusts are displaying calories in staff and visitor cafes and restaurants.

This pilot finished in October 2012 however the companies involved continue to display Calorie information whilst the evaluation of the pilot is underway. A detailed evaluation report of the scheme is due to be published in July 2013, and following this consideration will be given to rolling the scheme out across Northern Ireland.

Family Fund

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the impact of recent reductions in funding for the Family Fund on (i) families who will now be unable to receive funding; and (ii) the Health and Social Care Trusts and other associated services.

(AQW 20027/11-15)

Mr Poots: No such assessment has been undertaken. I regret that it was necessary to reduce my Department's support for the Fund in 2011/12 but in a very challenging financial climate, I must ensure that the funding I have available is maximised to meet the needs of as many people as possible who rely on health, social care and public safety services.

My Department's contribution of £1.57million during this financial year has enabled the Family Fund to help almost 2,700 families with disabled children in Northern Ireland.

Family Fund

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the meetings that he has held with representatives of the Family Fund on securing funding for 2013/14.

(AQW 20028/11-15)

Mr Poots: I have not met personally with representatives of the Family Fund to discuss funding for 2013/14. However, my officials met with their representatives on 31 January 2013 when a range of issues, including funding provision for 2013/14, were discussed.

Sports Therapists

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what consideration has been given to the state registration of sports therapists, in light of the recommendation by the Health and Care Professions Council. (AQW 20038/11-15)

Mr Poots: The recommendation by the Health and Care Professions Council for the regulation of sports therapists has to be reconsidered in light of the coalition government's priority for reducing regulation.

Currently, Sports Therapists have the option to voluntarily register with the Complementary and Natural Healthcare Council (CHNC) which is sponsored by the Department of Health.

My Department will continue to work with the other UK countries in considering any future arrangements for this particular group.

Organ Donation Waiting List

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people were on the organ donation waiting list in each of the last five years.

(AQW 20045/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested is held by NHS Blood and Transplant (NHSBT), which is the organ donation organisation for the UK. The latest published information can be found on the NHSBT website at:

http://www.organdonation.nhs.uk/statistics/downloads/northern_ireland.pdf

Organ Transplants

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many organ transplants have been carried out in each of the last five years.

(AQW 20049/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested is held by NHS Blood and Transplant (NHSBT), which is the organ donation organisation for the UK. The latest published information can be found on the NHSBT website at:

http://www.organdonation.nhs.uk/statistics/downloads/northern_ireland.pdf

Northern Health and Social Care Trust: Through-floor Lifts

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety which companies are employed by the Northern Health and Social Care Trust to service through-floor lifts.

(AQW 20074/11-15)

Mr Poots: We have been advised by the Northern Health and Social Care Trust that Pollock Lifts currently install lifts within the Trust. They are responsible for the repair and maintenance of all lifts during the one year warranty period from the date of installation.

Following cessation of the warranty period responsibility then transfers to the Trust's Repair/Maintenance Contractor who is currently Olympic Lifts.

All contracts are procured through PALS.

Tri-nations Tender: Surgical Gloves

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the (a) company name; (b) lot; and (c) unit price of the tenders awarded for surgical gloves and surgical under gloves under the tri-nations tender (NP569/11). (AQW 20098/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested is shown in the table below. It should be noted that, until it is known which gloves in each lot will be used by each Health & Social Care Trust, the exact prices payable cannot be determined.

Family Fund

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans his Department has to help the Family Fund meet the needs of low income families with children with a severe disability or illness. (AQW 20218/11-15)

Mr Poots: In the current financial year, my Department provided £1.57million to the Family Fund to support approximately 2,700 families with disabled children in Northern Ireland. The Fund was able to provide the families with a range of help with items such as beds, bedding, clothing, computers, games consoles, sensory equipment and specialist toys, day trips, family breaks, washing machines and other white goods. My Department will continue to support the family fund in the forthcoming financial year.

DHSSPS: Transport Services

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what efforts his Department, in conjunction with other Departments, has made to co-ordinate transport services. (AQO 3501/11-15)

Mr Poots: Officials from my Department met with Department of Regional Development (DRD) officials in early 2012 to explore the potential for a collaborative approach between Northern Ireland's health and public transport sectors. Following this, DRD developed a proposal to run a pilot project in the Dungannon and Cookstown District Council areas to assess the benefits of a more joined up approach to the design and delivery of publicly funded passenger transport services. My Department is a member of the Project Board along with representatives from the Departments of Regional Development, Education and Agriculture and Rural Development

Older People: Social Care

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he intends to reform the system of social care for the elderly.

(AQO 3500/11-15)

Mr Poots: Every day thousands of vulnerable people in our communities – and not just older people – are supported by the full range of social care services. Members will be aware, however, that social care is coming under increasing pressure because of demographic change, increasing expectations and a challenging financial climate.

That is why I have committed to a three stage process of reform in Northern Ireland. The first stage commenced on 17th September 2012 when I launched 'Who Cares? The Future of Adult Care and Support in NI' for a six month period of public consultation.

Following consideration of the responses to this ongoing consultation my department will prepare a further paper outlining a number of potential reforms. This will then be subject to further consultation before final reforms are identified and agreed.

Organ Donation

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when the public consultation on new proposals around organ donation will be launched.

(AQO 3507/11-15)

Mr Poots: Mr Speaker, with your permission, I will answer questions 8 and 10 together, as they relate to organ donation.

I am aiming to announce in the near future the process and timetable for a consultation exercise which will seek the views of the general public, transplant related charities, donor families, those on the waiting list and the health service community on proposals to increase organ donation in Northern Ireland. This will include exploring public attitudes towards an opt-out system. In all of this my clear aim is to send out a strong message for people to sign on to the organ donor register.

ENT: Waiting Lists

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many patients have had to be referred for private ENT procedures because of the long health service waiting lists. (AQO 3508/11-15)

Mr Poots: The latest figures available for the period from 1 April 2012 to 31 December 2012 show that 2289 outpatients and 318 inpatients and daycases were referred to the Independent Sector. It is unacceptable that anyone has to wait overly long for treatment and I look to the Health and Social Care Board and Trusts to achieve the waiting time targets that I have set for all specialties including ENT. The Board has recently allocated an additional £514,000 to meet demand and reduce waiting times across both assessments and treatments within the ENT specialty.

Organ Donation

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the timescale for the consultation aimed at maximising organ donation rates.

(AQO 3509/11-15)

Mr Poots: Mr Speaker, with your permission, I will answer questions 8 and 10 together, as they relate to organ donation.

I am aiming to announce in the near future the process and timetable for a consultation exercise which will seek the views of the general public, transplant related charities, donor families, those on the waiting list and the health service community on proposals to increase organ donation in Northern Ireland. This will include exploring public attitudes towards an opt-out system. In all of this my clear aim is to send out a strong message for people to sign on to the organ donor register.

Paediatric Congenital Cardiac Services

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the Paediatric Congenital Cardiac Surgery public consultation, including when he intends to make a decision. (AQO 3510/11-15)

Mr Poots: You will be aware that I asked the Health and Social Care Board, in association with the Public Health Agency, to establish a Working Group to consider the future requirements for delivering a paediatric congenital cardiac surgery and interventional cardiology service for Northern Ireland. Following public consultation on a draft document which included a commissioning specification, criteria, and options for the future delivery of this service, the Working Group submitted a post-consultation document, to the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) for consideration.

This document is in the form of a framework which includes amended service specification, options and scoring, agreed by the Working Group, following consideration of representations received during the public consultation.

The Board approved this document on 14 February 2013 and has submitted it to my Department for consideration. I am aiming to reach a decision on whether to approve the document as soon as possible.

If I approve the framework it will then be applied by the HSCB to each of the options outlined in it, with the aim of identifying a preferred way forward for the provision of services for children with heart disease in Northern Ireland. The preferred way forward will then be submitted to me for consideration and I am aiming to make my final decision on the future arrangements for this service within the coming months.

The post consultation document is available on the HSC Board website.

Accident and Emergency Departments: Belfast

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the closure of the Accident and Emergency unit at Belfast City Hospital has been a contributory factor in increasing waiting times across the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQO 3511/11-15)

Mr Poots: The temporary closure of the Accident and Emergency unit at the Belfast City Hospital has not had any significant impact on waiting times across the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust. In fact, the Belfast Trust has made particularly good progress in reducing 12 hour waiting times for patients. In January 2012, 416 people waited longer than 12 hours in Belfast Trust emergency departments; compared with January 2013 when no one waited longer than 12 hours in any of the Belfast Trust hospitals.

While I welcome this improvement there is no room for complacency in further reducing patient waiting times and I continue to look to the Health and Social Care Board to work with all Trusts to ensure that a focus remains on improving the performance of our emergency departments.

On 5 February 2013 I launched the consultation document on proposals for the future configuration of emergency department services in Belfast. I encourage everyone to respond to the consultation giving their views on the proposals to the Health and Social Care Board.

Transforming Your Care: Stakeholders

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on plans for engagement with key stakeholders during the implementation of Transforming Your Care. (AQO 3512/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Health and Social Care Board has undertaken an extensive range of engagement activities in the development of the Transforming Your Care Review in 2011, during the development of local Population Plans in 2012 and throughout the recent public consultation for Transforming Your Care: Vision to Action which completed on 15th January 2013.

The HSCB is currently analysing all of the consultation responses for Transforming Your Care: Vision to Action and will be reporting to my Department shortly on the findings of this consultation. I will consider the HSCB's consultation report and then make an announcement on the way forward.

During the implementation phase of Transforming Your Care, a programme of engagement with staff, service users, the general public and key stakeholder organisations will be undertaken. Vision to Action proposed that implementation would take place over a 3-5 year period and engagement would be ongoing throughout this time. Where any significant specific local changes are to take place, a further formal period of public consultation would take place with specific involvement of local stakeholders.

Tobacco Products

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether his Department still supports a move to standardised packaging of tobacco products.

(AQO 3513/11-15)

Mr Poots: I am supportive of any measure which would lead to a reduction in smoking prevalence and, in particular, a reduction in the uptake of smoking by young people. That is why I agreed in March last year to the inclusion of Northern Ireland in a UK-wide consultation exercise on standardised packaging for tobacco products. The consultation ended in August 2012 and the Department of Health in London is due to issue a summary of the consultation responses in the near future.

Only when I have received and fully considered the consultation summary report and a separate analysis of local responses, will I make a decision as to whether standardised packaging should be considered for introduction in Northern Ireland.

Department of Justice

Northern Ireland Policing Board: Percentage Disablement Reviews

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice on what basis does the Northern Ireland Policing Board initiate Percentage Disablement Reviews for retired Police Officers aged over 65; and what guidance pertains to such reviews. (AQW 17851/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice ): The Policing Board is legally obliged, where an injury pension is payable, under the Police Service of Northern Ireland and Police Service of Northern Ireland Reserve (Injury Benefit) Regulations 2006 to periodically review the degree of the former officer's disablement.

The Northern Ireland Office issued guidance relating to the calculation of the percentage disablement award for over 65s in their circular 6/2007. Following the "Simpson" judgment this guidance was withdrawn by the Department of Justice and on 20 June 2012 new guidance issued. Copies of the letters can be obtained from the Department's website www.dojni.gov.uk under Medical appeals.

The administration of the Injury Benefit Scheme is the responsibility of the Policing Board. As I am committed to respecting the independence of its role you may wish to direct any further queries to the Chief Executive of the Policing Board.

Northern Ireland Prison Service

Lord Morrow asked Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18621/11-15 and in light of legislative requirements and government policies, why the Northern Ireland Prison Service is unable to comply by processing and providing such information in a way so as to facilitate access in an accurate and timely manner.

(AQW 19601/11-15)

Mr Ford: There is no legislative basis or policy which requires the information requested to be held centrally. It is recorded on individual staff files.

Alastair Hetherington

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, for a breakdown of the costs of the prosecution and subsequent acquittal of Mr Alastair Hetherington at Belfast Crown Court on Wednesday 6 February 2013. (AQW 19618/11-15)

Mr Ford: The estimated costs to date of the prosecution and subsequent acquittal of Mr Alastair Hetherington at Belfast Crown Court are detailed in the table below:

Cost Type	Estimated Cost £
PSNI <sup>1</sup>	Not Available
PPS Prosecution <sup>2</sup>	1,366.73
Defence (Legal Aid Costs) <sup>3</sup>	13,001.50
Court (Judiciary and Staff Costs)	4,930.26
Jury Costs	1,181.32
Facilities (e.g. Courtroom Accommodation)	675.00
Total	21,154.81

- 1 The PSNI have not provided costs as all costs associated with attendance at court was pre-detailed duty and no additional costs were incurred.
- 2 This figure represents the PPS costs paid to date, however final costs for all fees for counsel and witness expenses have not yet been billed.
- 3 This represents an estimated cost from the Legal Services Commission for Crown Court fees. No claims have been received to date in this case.

Death in Custody

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, to detail (i) the number of outstanding recommendations in respect of HMP Maghaberry, Magilligan and Hydebank Wood that have not been implemented arising from death in custody investigations or other external reviews; (ii) the authors of such reports/recommendations with the dates of publication; and (iii) why senior Northern Ireland Prison Service management has not yet implemented the recommendations.

(AQW 19620/11-15)

Mr Ford:

(i) The number of outstanding recommendations in respect of each of the establishments is contained in the table below:

	Total Number of NIPS Recommendations	Total Number of Outstanding Recommendations
Hydebank Wood	193	126

	Total Number of NIPS Recommendations	Total Number of Outstanding Recommendations
Maghaberry Prison	248	143
Magilligan Prison	174	45

- (ii) A list of the reports specific to each unit is provided at Annex A.
- (iii) The recommendations contained in these reports serve as an important driver for change and the main themes have, where appropriate, been incorporated into the wider Strategic Efficiency and Effectiveness (SEE) and Prison Reform programmes. The scale of the change programme currently underway is considerable and, as I have said on a number of occasions, it is clear that lasting and effective reform will take time.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Counselling Service

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18697/11-15 and AQW 17826/11-15; (i) whether he wishes to revise his answer in terms of the non-inclusion of transport costs given that the answer to AQW 16983/11-15 stated that the cost of the clinical sessions involving the prisoner's wife as well as her travel costs to the Prisoner Assessment Unit was around £8,000 and; (ii) to clarify the status of the review.

(AQW 19622/11-15)

Mr Ford: A Prison Service review has established that the actual cost to NIPS of treatment, in respect of the prisoner's wife, was £4,800, not £8,000.

AQW/18697/11-15 confirms that NIPS did not meet any costs for transport for the prisoner's wife.

The review into the circumstances surrounding this case is still ongoing.

Harold Greer

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail a breakdown of the costs in the case of Harold Greer at Londonderry Crown Court.

(AQW 19623/11-15)

Mr Ford: The estimated costs to date of the trial and associated hearings relating to the case of Harold Greer at Londonderry Crown Court are detailed in the table below:

Cost Type	Estimated Cost £
PSNI <sup>1</sup>	Not Available
PPS Prosecution <sup>2</sup>	3,404.04
Defence (Legal Aid Costs) <sup>3</sup>	13,585.20
Court (Judiciary and Staff Costs)	4,586.50
Jury Costs	1,044.63
Facilities (e.g. Courtroom Accommodation)	485.00
Total	23,105.37

- 1 The PSNI have not provided costs. All duty associated with the case was pre-detailed duty and no additional costs were incurred.
- 2 This figure represents the costs paid by PPS to date, however final costs for all fees for counsel and witness expenses have not yet been billed.
- 3 This represents an estimated cost from the Legal Services Commission for Crown Court fees. No claims have been received to date in this case.

Death in Custody: Colin Bell

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18806/11-15, to detail the reason for applying an exemption under the Data Protection Act 1998 in terms of withholding the requested information.

(AQW 19664/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) withheld the information requested to protect the identity of those concerned as disclosure would be contrary to the Data Protection Act 1998.

Prison Service Code of Conduct

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18877/11-15, and given the delay in producing a new Code of Conduct and Discipline whether senior Northern Ireland Prison Service management gave consideration to adapting the Ministry of Justice National Offender Service Conduct and Discipline Code issued on 4 March 2010 for those directly employed by NOMS and Her Majesty's Prison Service to meet the needs of the NI Prison officers. (AQW 19670/11-15)

Mr Ford: As stated in my answer to AQW/18877/11-15, the Department of Finance and Personnel (DFP) has overall policy responsibility for Conduct and Discipline in the Department of Justice. The new Prison Service Code of Conduct has therefore had to be developed with appropriate input from DFP as well as other business partners including the National Offender Management Service.

Hydebank Wood: Prisoner Association

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18619/11-15, whether the prisoners in question have been afforded adequate association under Rule 55, which states that every prisoner shall be given the opportunity of association for not less than one hour each day which may be taken as exercise in the open air, weather permitting. (AQW 19671/11-15)

Mr Ford: Prison Rule 55 does not apply to inmates of a Young Offenders Centre. Recreation for this category of inmate is provided for in Prison Rule 96 (2). This states that 'inmates shall regularly be given such physical recreation, training and exercise as are required to promote health and physical well-being'.

I am satisfied that this Rule is being correctly applied within Hydebank Wood Young Offenders Centre.

Kerb Crawling

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many convictions, broken down by court division, have been secured for kerb crawling in each of the last five years.

(AQW 19672/11-15)

Mr Ford: Kerb crawling may be prosecuted under Article 60 of the Sexual Offences (Northern Ireland) Order 2008. This act came into effect on 2nd February 2009 and data shows there were no convictions for kerb crawling in 2009, the latest year for which data is available

Data are collated on the principal offence rule; only the most serious offence for which an offender is convicted is included.

Conditional Discharges

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AWQ 19272/11-15, whether a conditional discharge is to be treated as a conviction once the related proceedings have come to an end and the individual concerned has not breached its terms. (AQW 19687/11-15)

Mr Ford: Further to my previous answer, a conditional discharge is given by the court following a conviction and as such will form part of any criminal record used by the court for sentencing purposes in any subsequent conviction. The conditional discharge does not however constitute a conviction for the purposes of putting a suspended sentence into effect.

The Rehabilitation of Offenders (Northern Ireland) Order 1978 also applies to the conditional discharge. The rehabilitation period for a conditional discharge is one year or the period of conditional discharge whichever is longer. Once the rehabilitation period has been completed the conviction is treated as spent and in many instances need not be declared for employment purposes.

There are nevertheless certain occupations or situations where the conditional discharge must still be made known. As also indicated in my previous answer, the conditional discharge will form part of a standard or enhanced criminal record conviction certificate – though not part of a basic certificate – as produced by AccessNI.

The full legislative provisions on the conditional discharge are provided in Articles 4 to 7 of the Criminal Justice (Northern Ireland) Order 1996.

Legal Aid

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice to detail the total amount of Legal Aid provided, in each of the last three years. (AQW 19691/11-15)

Mr Ford: The total amount of expenditure on legal aid funding, excluding administration costs, in each of the last three financial years is as follows.

09/10	£96.9m
10/11	£93.3m
11/12	£101.7m

Prison Officers

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18759/11-15, to provide a breakdown of how many are (i) male; (ii) female; and (iii) former prison officers.

(AQW 19743/11-15)

Mr Ford: Of the 79 staff recorded as having declared a disability 37 are male and 42 are female. This total includes two male prison officers who left the Service during the past year.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Code of Conduct and Discipline

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18877/11-15 and given that the Northern Ireland Prison Service Code of Conduct and Discipline is almost 18 years old, for his assessment of prison officers not being afforded fairness comparable to that of their counterparts in Great Britain where the discipline code is up-to-date and includes mandatory fundamental procedures that are not applicable to Northern Ireland prison officers,

(AQW 19755/11-15)

Mr Ford: It would be inappropriate to compare the operation of the current Northern Ireland Prison Service Code of Conduct, which was agreed locally, with the disciplinary codes of other jurisdictions.

Gangmasters

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many convictions have been secured against unlicensed gangmasters, per court division, in each of the last five years,

(AQW 19756/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Gangmasters Licensing Authority has confirmed that in the last five years there were 3 convictions against unlicensed gangmasters – one in 2010 at Omagh Magistrates' Court and two in 2012 at Armagh Magistrates' Court.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Code of Conduct and Discipline

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 17821/11-15, to detail (i) the grade of the staff member of the Northern Ireland Prison Service leading the Code of Conduct and Discipline project; (ii) when the person was appointed and by whom; (iii) how many Northern Ireland Prison Service staff, broken down by grade, are involved in the project; and (iv) when they were appointed and by whom.

(AQW 19757/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Grade 7 developing the new disciplinary system for the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS), including the new Code of Conduct, was appointed on 16 January 2012 through the HR Directorate in Prison Service Headquarters.

As stated in my answer to AQW 17821/11-15, the Grade 7 is working on this process alongside a range of key stakeholders from the Department of Justice, the Department of Finance and Personnel, the Prison Governors' Association, and the Prison Officers' Association.

Prisoners: GCSE Qualifications

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the number of prisoners who gained GCSE qualifications in grades A* - C or equivalent; and (ii) the number of qualifications broken down by age group, in the last three academic years. (AQW 19760/11-15)

Mr Ford: During the calendar years 2010, 2011 and 2012 the numbers of prisoners who gained GCSE qualifications in grades A* - C or equivalent are as follows:

Grade	С	С	С	В	В	В	Α	Α	Α	A *	A *	A *
	2010	2011	2012	2010	2011	2012	2010	2011	2012	2010	2011	2012

Prisoners: Higher Education Qualifications

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number and age profile of prisoners who have been awarded higher education qualifications, in the last three years.

(AQW 19761/11-15)

Mr Ford: During the last three years the number and age profile of prisoners awarded higher education qualifications are included in the tables below:-

Table A: Hydebank Wood

	2010	2011	2012
18 – 25	1	6	7

High Court Case Costs

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 17560/11-15, to detail the estimated costs in Legal Aid for a typical case of this nature, taking into consideration the level of counsel and the duration. (AQW 19796/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission does not receive any bills or indication of the costs of High Court cases until the bill has been taxed by the Taxing Master.

The average cost paid by the Commission for High Court cases of this nature during the period April – December 2012 was £9,138. The Commission cannot indicate if the costs in this case are likely to be greater or lesser than this figure.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Staff Training Days

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18448/11-15, to detail (i) the average number of training days each prison staff member received in 2011/12 and; (ii) how this compares with 2010/11 when the Key Performance Target was five days but the average training was 3.4 days.

(AQW 19799/11-15)

(AQW 19807/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- (i) In 2011/12 an average of 2.6 training days was delivered per staff member.
- (ii) The average training days for 2011/12 were limited as a direct result of staff not being available for training due to operational needs.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Staff Dismissals

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the total number of officers and healthcare staff dismissed from the Northern Ireland Prison Service since 2005, broken down by grade and gender; (ii) the number of staff that, on appeal to the Northern Ireland Prison Service, were notified that the Code of Conduct and Discipline and/or other statutory procedures during the investigation and adjudication were not adhered to; (iii) the number of successful appeals; and (iv) the number of staff that appealed to the Northern Ireland Civil Service Appeals Board and in respect of each, whether the panel found that the decision to dismiss was unfair or that proper procedures were not complied with.

Mr Ford: Since 01 January 2005, 30 officers including healthcare staff were dismissed from the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) for either disciplinary or inefficiency reasons. It is not possible to provide a breakdown of numbers by grade in view of the necessity to protect the identity of those concerned. However, the breakdown by gender is 21 male and nine female.

Of those who appealed the dismissal to NIPS none were notified that the Code of Conduct and Discipline and/or other statutory procedures during the investigation and adjudication were not adhered to; but this may have been raised as mitigation and discussed at appeal. There were no successful appeals.

Since 1 January 2005, 14 officers dismissed from NIPS appealed to the Civil Service Appeal Board (CSAB). To date, in six of the appeals the CSAB found that either the decision to dismiss was unfair or proper procedures were not followed.

The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust assumed responsibility for the delivery of prison healthcare services in April 2008, though staff remained employed by NIPS. In April 2012, the Trust assumed employment responsibility for prison healthcare staff. Since 1 April 2012, the South Eastern Trust has not implemented any disciplinary procedures in relation to any member of prison healthcare staff.

Questions for Written Answer: AQW 18388/11-15

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18388/11-15, to detail any exemption used applied by the Northern Ireland Prison Service within the scope of the Data Protection Act in respect of each of the five parts of the question. (AQW 19809/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service withheld the information in respect of each of the five parts of the question in order to protect the identity of those concerned.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Code of Conduct and Discipline

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18877/11-15, to detail (i) the complexities; (ii) the reasons for the delay, given that the Code of Conduct and Discipline was raised in the Pearson Review Team Report in June 2009, in the Ackah and Deane Report in December 2009, in the NI Civil Service Appeals Board Annual Report of 2009/2010 and by various external agencies since those dates; (iii) whether the new Code of Conduct and Discipline is in development or draft format; and (iv) when the new system will be fully operational.

(AQW 19811/11-15)

Mr Ford: A draft format of the new Code of Conduct is currently being considered by the Northern Ireland Prison Service along with key business partners. With regard to the other points raised, I refer the Member to the responses given to AQW 17821/11-15 and AQW 18877/11-15.

Courthouses: Union Flag

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to list all the courthouses that did not fly the Union flag on a designated day during the last twelve months and to detail the action taken by the Department in each case. (AQW 19813/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Union flag was not flown at Ballymena, Enniskillen, Londonderry and Dungannon Courthouses on 6 February 2013 due to an oversight by G4S Secure Solutions (UK) Limited (G4S), the security and ancillary services provider to the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service (NICTS). This is being addressed through contract management mechanisms.

There has been one other instance when the Union flag was not flown on a designated day in the last 12 months. This occurred at Newtownards Courthouse on Sunday 11 November 2012, when G4S could not get access to the flagpole as contractors had inadvertently sealed the access window during repairs. G4S reported this to the NICTS site Premises Officer and the contractors were recalled to reinstate access.

Inquests

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice, following the announcement that up to 21 inquests are now likely to proceed, to outline the expected duration of these inquests and the estimated total cost. (AQW 19817/11-15)

Mr Ford: The duration and cost to prepare for and hear an inquest can vary significantly depending on a range of factors including the volume of evidence and complexity of the issues to be considered.

It is not therefore possible to provide accurate estimates of either the duration or costs of these inquests.

Bangor Courthouse

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice to outline the projected annual maintenance costs of Bangor Courthouse when it has closed.

(AQW 19818/11-15)

Mr Ford: The projected maintenance costs for Bangor Courthouse, after closure, are estimated at between £2,500 and £3,000 per annum.

Antisocial Behaviour

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice what measures his Department uses to tackle anti-social behaviour. (AQW 19826/11-15)

Mr Ford: The measures which my Department uses to tackle anti-social behaviour are based on partnership working at a strategic and local level to deliver a range of interventions based on a model of prevention, intervention and enforcement.

The Community Safety Strategy 'Building Safer, Shared and Confident Communities' recognised that several statutory agencies have a role to play in addressing anti-social behaviour and in order to effectively tackle anti-social behaviour all of these agencies would have to work in unison.

To enhance partnership working at a strategic level my Department has established an interagency anti-social behaviour Delivery Group, to take forward the delivery of the strategic objectives of the Community Safety Strategy. The Delivery Group has developed an Action Plan which incorporates measures designed to agree roles and responsibilities of agencies in responding to incidents of anti-social behaviour, ensuring appropriate powers are in place to tackle anti-social behaviour and to take forward recommendations from the recent Criminal Justice Inspection report on the criminal justice system's approach to addressing anti-social behaviour.

At a local level, tackling anti-social behaviour is a strategic priority for the Policing and Community Safety Partnerships and their local action plans include measures and initiatives to deal with locally identified problems of anti-social behaviour. These measures will vary depending on local concerns but include neighbourhood watch, use of CCTV, community safety wardens, educational programmes, engagement and diversionary programmes and intergenerational programmes.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Staff Declared Unfit for Duty

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to provide a breakdown by prison facility of (i) number of prison staff who were declared unfit for duty in 2011 because of illness or injury; (ii) number of days for which they were absent; and (iii) the cost of their absence to the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

(AQW 19854/11-15)

Mr Ford: The table below shows the number of prison staff declared unfit for duty broken down by prison establishment, and covers the period 1 January 2011 - 31 December 2011:

Establishment	Number of Staff Absent	Working Days Absent
Hydebank Wood	181	5180
Maghaberry	486	15244
Magilligan	173	4608
PECCS	108	3868
Total	948	28900

The cost during that period to the Northern Ireland Prison Service in terms of Occupational Sick Pay was £3,460,079.18.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Staff

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether newly qualified prison staff shadow experienced prison officers when they are first in contact with prisoners or enter landings; and how long any such shadowing is carried out before new officers are allowed to operate without supervision.

(AQW 19856/11-15)

Mr Ford: Within each prison establishment newly qualified prison staff shadow experienced prison staff when they initially come into contact with prisoners or enter landings. The length of time shadowing experienced staff continues is dependent on operational constraints.

Alleged Payment of Prisoner Drug Debts

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 5315/11-15, whether he consider any revision to his answer in light of the assertion that two Northern Ireland Prison Service staff were instructed to take the money to the home of a relative of the prisoner in question in full knowledge that it was to settle a drug debt and commit a crime of aiding and abetting the commission of an offence.

(AQW 19857/11-15)

Mr Ford: The response to AQW/5315/11-15 was based on a full and thorough investigation of all of the circumstances and information available at that time.

The Northern Ireland Prison Service does not have any new or additional information that would require any further consideration to be given to the outcome of the investigation and the preventative actions already taken.

Prisons: Body Scanners

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice what is the cost to date of the prison scanner search pilots in (i) HMP Hydebank; and (ii) HMP Magilligan, including equipment and staff training. (AQW 19864/11-15)

Mr Ford: The costs to date of the pilots of millimetre wave technology are as follows:

Magilligan Prison	Hydebank Wood
£14232	£22019

The costs included in these prices are for installation of the equipment, leases, enabling works and staff training.

The equipment leased for Magilligan was an ex-demonstration machine hence the differential in costs.

Prisons: Body Scanners

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice, if the outcome of the current body scan pilot scheme for prisons proves to be inconclusive, whether he intends to commission a further pilot scheme with other machines. (AQW 19876/11-15)

Mr Ford: I am committed to seeking a viable, less intrusive alternative to our existing practice of full searching.

Although the recently completed pilot and evaluation of Millimetre Wave technology showed that there were limitations to it as an alternative to full body searching, the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) will, if possible, continue to work with suppliers to see if such technology can be improved for application in the prison environment.

I also intend to take forward a Justification Application under the Justification of Practices Involving Ionising Radiation Regulations 2004 in relation to the initial piloting and possible use of Transmission X-ray scanners.

This application is well advanced and it is expected that it will be ready for submission to the Department of Energy & Climate Change (DECC) within a few weeks.

Anti-social Behaviour Orders

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Justice how many Anti-Social Behaviour Orders have been issued, broken down by (i) gender; (ii) age group; and (iii) constituency in the last 12 months.

(AQW 19937/11-15)

Mr Ford: The most up-to-date statistics from the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunal Service show there were 12 Anti-Social Behaviour Orders (ASBOs) issued during 2012.

The 12 ASBOs are broken down as follows:

- (i) Gender 12 male, 0 female,
- (ii) Age group Six ASBOs were issued to males aged under 18, five ASBOs were issued to males aged over 18 and the age of one ASBO recipient was unknown, and
- (iii) Assembly Constituency Three ASBO recipients lived in North Belfast, three lived in South Antrim, two lived in North Antrim, two lived in South Down, one lived in East Belfast and the Assembly Constituency of one ASBO recipient was unknown.

Historical Enquiries Team

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Justice why he is unable to answer questions relating to the Historical Enquiries Team. (AQW 19972/11-15)

Mr Ford: As Minister of Justice I am responsible for providing the legal and resourcing framework for the Historical Enquiries Team's (HET) reviews into past cases and am happy to answer any questions on these matters. However the scope and remit of the HET is a matter for the Chief Constable, who is accountable to the Northern Ireland Policing Board. I am committed to respecting the operational independence of the Chief Constable and the role of the Policing Board.

You may therefore wish to direct any operational questions you may have about the HET to the PSNI.

PSNI: Injury-on-duty Award Reviews

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice whether he has considered suspending injury on duty award reviews for retired officers reaching the age of 65.

(AQW 19987/11-15)

Mr Ford: Under Regulation 35 (1) of the PSNI and PSNI Reserve (Injury Benefit) Regulations the Policing Board is legally obliged to periodically review the degree of disablement of an injury-on-duty award. It is a matter for the Policing Board to decide if a suspension of reviews is appropriate.

PSNI: Injury-on-duty Award Reviews

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice how many Injury-on-Duty Award Reviews for those aged 65 have been carried out, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 19988/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Policing Board provided the following details of reviews carried out at age 65 by the Selected Medical Practitioner:

2008	11
2009	31
2010	1
2011	0
2012	36

PSNI: Injury-on-duty Award Reviews

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice whether his Department has sought legal advice on the legality of reviewing Injury on Duty Awards when the recipient reaches the age of 65.

(AQW 19989/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Department has not sought legal advice on reviews of Injury on Duty awards when the recipient reaches the age of 65. The arrangement of reviews is the responsibility of the Policing Board as per Regulation 35 (1) of the Injury Benefit Regulations 2006.

PSNI: Injury-on-duty Award Reviews

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice to detail the arrangements in place to convey, in confidence, the Results of Injury on Duty Awards to recipients, given the security threat posed to former police officers.

(AQW 19990/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Department and the Policing Board take all measures possible to ensure the security of former officers is not compromised. It would not be appropriate to detail the arrangements in place as to do so would, in itself, compromise such arrangements.

Community Restorative Justice Schemes

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice how many Community Restorative Justice Schemes are in operation. (AQW 19997/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are 15 community-based Restorative Justice Schemes accredited under the Government Protocol which are currently operational.

Human Trafficking

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Justice to detail the aspects of the Criminal Justice Bill that will tackle Human Trafficking. (AQW 20051/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Criminal Justice Bill introduces new offences of human trafficking which will bring Northern Ireland law into line with the criminal aspects of the EU Directive on preventing and combating trafficking in human beings. The new offences respond to the international dimension of human trafficking and ensure that those operating across international borders are not immune from prosecution.

Clause 5 will create an offence to enable the prosecution of a British citizen, habitual resident of Northern Ireland or body incorporated under the law of a part of the United Kingdom who has trafficked someone anywhere outside the United Kingdom for sexual exploitation. Clause 6 will create a similar offence where a person has been trafficked outside the United Kingdom for labour or other exploitation. Clause 6 also removes the requirement for the victim to have been previously trafficked into the United Kingdom so that an offence will have been committed where a person who has not previously been trafficked into the United Kingdom is trafficked within the United Kingdom for the purposes of labour or other exploitation. This is already an offence in relation to trafficking for sexual exploitation.

In addition, Clause 6A of the Bill will remove the existing provision for summary conviction of human trafficking offences, to make human trafficking offences triable on indictment in the Crown Court, where the maximum term available is generally 14 years. As a consequence, sentences for human trafficking offences will be included in the schedule of offences referable to the Court of Appeal by the Director of Public Prosecutions on the grounds that he considers them to be unduly lenient.

Union Flag: Court Estate Properties

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice to outline the number and location of court estate properties that are subject to the designated days principle for the flying of the Union flag.

(AQW 20105/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are currently 21 courthouses subject to the flying of the Union flag on designated days. These are listed on the table below:

Antisocial Behaviour: Bangor and Holywood

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Justice what action is being taken to tackle anti-social behaviour in (i) Bangor; and (ii) Holywood town centres.

(AQW 20176/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Department supports a range of initiatives designed to tackle anti-social behaviour across North Down at both a strategic and local level.

North Down Policing and Community Safety Partnership (PCSP) has identified tackling anti-social behaviour as one of its key strategic priorities. The PCSP Action Plan for 2012-2013 includes several local initiatives aimed at addressing anti-social behaviour 'hotspots' within the North Down Borough.

These initiatives include the Priority Youth Engagement and the Streetsafe Mobile Youth Engagement projects, both working with 'hard to reach' young people to provide advice and support, as well as educational and personal development opportunities. These programmes are delivered within areas of identified need throughout North Down, including Bangor town centre and the Holywood districts of Redburn and Loughview.

At weekends, Bangor town centre also has in place a Street Pastor Service, the Community Safety Warden scheme and a project called Bangor Against Night-time Disorder (BAND), all of which are aimed primarily at reducing and preventing violent and alcohol-related crime, as well as anti-social behaviour.

Through local consultation, North Down PCSP is currently developing its action plan for April 2013 to March 2015. This will aim to address locally identified policing and community safety issues, including anti-social behaviour.

Union Flag

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) whether a member of staff in a courthouse has been suspended for failing to take down a Union flag; (ii) on what date the alleged incident occurred; (iii) when and how the matter was reported; (iv) when the member of staff was suspended and on what grounds; (v) which court house was involved; (v) on what date he was made aware of the incident; and (vi) whether an allegation such as this constitutes a criminal offence.

(AQW 20184/11-15)

Mr Ford: No member of Northern Ireland Courts & Tribunals Service (NICTS) staff has been suspended for failing to take down a Union flag.

The raising and lowering of the Union flag on NICTS buildings on designated days is carried out under contract by G4S Secure Solution Ltd (G4S). Any disciplinary action regarding the performance of duties by G4S employees is a matter for G4S

Flying the Union flag on a day not designated under The Flags Regulations (NI) 2000 is not a criminal offence.

Department for Regional Development

Translink Pupil Pass

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) how many pupils applied for a Translink Pupil Pass; and (ii) how many Pupil Passes were issued, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 19608/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): The table below sets out the information provided by Translink.

	Applications	Passes issued
2011/12	2,614	1,601
2010/11	3,087	1,949
2009/10	3,882	2,393

Translink Pupil Pass

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) for a breakdown of the numbers of Translink Pupil Passes issued for (a) Metro only services; (b) Ulsterbus only services; (c) NI Railways only services; and (d) a combination of services; (ii) to detail the annual cost for Pupil Passes issued; and (iii) to itemise the separable costs of passes issued for (a) Metro only services; (b) Ulsterbus only services; (c) NI Railways only services: and (d) a combination of services, for each of the last three years.

(AQW 19609/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The table below sets out the information provided by Translink.

	Metro Only		Ulsterb	us Only

Narrow Water Bridge

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 19002/11-15, what are the implications on the proposal for the Narrow Water bridge project; and whether there is a requirement for legislation to enable this proposal. (AQW 19657/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As a general principle, obstruction or extinguishment of public rights of navigation requires legislation. The extent to which any public rights of navigation in Northern Ireland may be obstructed, by the proposed bridge, is being taken account of as part of a detailed consideration of the proposed design.

Where a person other than DRD proposes to construct a bridge over navigable waters in circumstances to which Article 4 of the Roads (NI) Order 1993 applies, DRD must seek to make an Order under that Order and in accordance with Schedule 8 to the Roads (NI) Order 1993.

Speed Limit

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development what consideration he has given to reducing the speed limit in built up areas to 20 miles per hour.

(AQW 19661/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Roads Service's existing speed management policy is highly supportive of the roll-out of 20 mph zones and 20 mph speed limits in residential areas and in urban locations, where high numbers of vulnerable road users are present. The Northern Ireland Road Safety Strategy to 2020 contains Action Measures which are reflective of Roads Service policy.

When assessing the potential for a road to have a 20 mph speed limit introduced, many factors have to be taken into account, such as mean speed, collision history, streetscape, community support, function and demographics. Each road will likely be different in terms of its suitability to have a reduced limit applied and the normal solution has been to install engineering measures, such as road humps and central islands, so the reduced speed limit is, in effect, self enforcing.

The Road Safety Strategy also contains a commitment to pilot schemes for 20 mph limits without additional self-enforcing engineering measures. All these commitments are subject to the availability of funding in these financially-constrained times. Agreement has now been reached with the PSNI on enforcement issues for 4 pilot schemes and Roads Service is currently identifying suitable sites. Roads Service will, in due course, be monitoring the effectiveness of these schemes, along with similar pilots being undertaken in tandem by road authorities in Scotland, Wales and the Republic of Ireland, to inform the way forward on this issue

Rural Roads Maintenance: Dungannon, Cookstown and Magherafelt

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Regional Development how much has been spent on rural roads maintenance and capital works in the Dungannon, Cookstown and Magherafelt Council areas, in each of the last three years. (AQW 19673/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service accounts do not separately distinguish between urban or rural roads, however, details of the maintenance and capital expenditure for the entire road network in Dungannon, Cookstown and Magherafelt council areas in the 2009/10 – 20011/12 financial years are provided in the table below:

		2009/10 (£k)	2010/11 (£k)	2011/12 (£k)
Magherafelt	Capital	3,190	2,843	3,216
	Operation & Maintenance	1,925	2,797	2,207
Cookstown	Capital	2,365	2,520	3,778
	Operation & Maintenance	1,866	1,902	2,109
Dungannon	Capital	6,750	5,509	7,573
	Operation & Maintenance	3,149	4,446	3,290

It should be noted that, while base levels of expenditure will generally reflect the size of the relevant network, substantial variations across boundaries and years can arise, primarily due to expenditure on major capital works schemes, such as the A4 and Carland Bridge and/or the relative success of bids during the various Monitoring Rounds.

Bus Passes

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the criteria used on applications to half price bus passes for people with a disability.

(AQW 19674/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: There are currently 4 different categories under which a person may apply for a Half Fare SmartPass. The categories and their respective criteria are:

Disability Living Allowance: The applicant must be in receipt of either the higher or lower Mobility component of Disability Living Allowance (DLA).

Partially Sighted: The applicant must be registered with a Health & Social Care Trust as partially sighted.

Learning Disability: The applicant must be known to a Health & Social Care Trust as having a learning disability.

Licence Refused: The applicant must have had a driving licence refused or revoked on medical grounds.

Water and Sewerage Charges: Annual Revenue from Non-domestic Properties

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the annual revenue from water charges for businesses. (AQW 19688/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that the revenue for all non-domestic properties liable for measured and unmeasured water and sewerage charges was around £70 million in 2012. This revenue will change each year as tariffs are updated.

Water and Sewerage Charges: Non-payment by Businesses

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what was the level of non-payment of water charges by businesses in each of the last two years.

(AQW 19695/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that out of a total annual revenue of around £70 million for all non-domestic properties liable for measured and unmeasured water and sewerage charges the level of non-payment was around £1.7 million in 2011 and £1.8 million in 2012.

Railways: Londonderry to Coleraine Line

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development, following the planned reopening of the Londonderry to Coleraine railway line on 24 March 2013, what marketing will be used to promote the service. (AQW 19737/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised that it plans a significant integrated marketing campaign for the end of March/beginning of April to coincide with the re-opening of the line on 24 March.

An advertising campaign will include radio, press, outdoor, digital and social media. It will be targeted to locations on the Londonderry Line, including Derry~Londonderry, Coleraine, Ballymena, Antrim and Limavady.

Greater Belfast media release and public relations activity will also target daily, regional and broadcast press. A household mailing of the timetable and a voucher to incentivise travel will be undertaken.

An official opening event will take place, along with a series of local community events and joint marketing with local stakeholders (including Councils, Tourism partners and City of Culture) will be delivered.

Car Parking: On-street Facilities in Belfast

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the monies generated from motorists using on-street parking facilities in Belfast, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 19739/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of income generated from the use of on-street parking facilities in Belfast, in each of the last five financial years, are provided in the table below:

Financial Year	Income Generated
2011/12	£2,710,492
2010/11	£2,485,701

Financial Year	Income Generated
2009/10	£2,435,486
2008/09	£2,437,581
2007/08	£2,398,818

er will be aware that the costs associated with the provision of parking services and parking enforcement, including contractual payments to NSL Services Group, exceed income received from the use of on and off-street parking and parking enforcement and the deficit is funded by my Department.

Street Lighting

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the criteria that determine whether a road is eligible for street lighting.

(AQW 19742/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service uses a wide range of criteria to determine whether a road is eligible for street lighting, depending on the type of road and situation being considered. The key issues are generally whether lighting will enhance safety for road users, and improve the effectiveness of the road network.

At a more detailed level, the following criteria are the most commonly used:

- for major traffic routes, street lighting is provided where it is justified on the basis of economic appraisal, and at roundabouts and certain types of junctions;
- in urban areas, street lighting is generally provided for most built-up roads within the speed limit, although paths which only give rear access to properties, or are alternative routes to already lighted roads or footpaths, will generally not be lit; and
- in rural areas, street lighting may be provided where it would contribute to a reduction in the number of night-time collisions, or where there is a community of at least 10 dwellings located within a 200m road length. In applying this criterion, each public building, which has a significant level of evening use by the community, will count as two dwellings.

Further detail in relation to the relevant criteria for any specific situation may be obtained by contacting the street lighting engineer at the local Roads Service Divisional Headquarters.

Translink Buses: Fuel

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much Translink has spent on fuel for buses, for each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 19749/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The following table details the relevant information which has been provided to me by Translink. It should be noted that the fuel costs quoted are the gross cost, not reduced by fuel duty rebate. It should also be noted Translink fuel costs are impacted by fuel hedging arrangements.

	2011/12	2010/11	2009/10
Ulsterbus	£20,758,769	£20,018,734	£23,067,273
Metro	£6,966,597	£6,903,049	£7,725,032

Traffic Wardens

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many traffic wardens are employed. (AQW 19750/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: It is assumed the Member's question refers to within Northern Ireland. Traffic Attendants are employed by a private company, NSL Services Group, which is contracted by my Department's Roads Service to provide parking enforcement and car park management services.

NSL has confirmed that, as of 13 February 2013, a total of 177 Traffic Attendants and Senior Traffic Attendants are employed by the company.

Car Parking

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many parking tickets have been issued for cars overstaying their time at sites operated by his Department.

(AQW 19751/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: 7,678 Penalty Charge Notices (parking tickets) were issued, during the period 1 January 2012 to 31 December 2012, to vehicles in Roads Service's Pay and Display car parks that had stayed beyond the permitted time period, as displayed on the parking ticket.

In the same period, 4,924 parking tickets were issued to vehicles, after the expiry of time paid for at on-street Pay and Display locations and 104 parking tickets were issued to vehicles which were parked for longer than permitted at on-street 'limited waiting' locations.

It should be noted that in all cases, a ten minute grace period is allowed beyond the period permitted for parking, whether it be paid or limited free waiting.

Door-2-Door Transport Scheme

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development in light of his statement on door-to-door transport on 12 February 2013, whether there will be any reduction in the services. (AQW 19753/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I refer to my statement to the House. In bringing forward the changes, my Department does so with the intention that the maximum level of service cannot only be maintained but improved. There will be no cut to the budget for the delivery of services under this interim arrangement and it would be my hope that Disability Action and the operators will have success in not only maintaining services but improving them.

A4 Dual Carriageway

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development how many householders who live alongside the A4 dual carriageway have been compensated as a result of damage to their property following its construction. (AQW 19759/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: To date, my Department has received 185 claims for compensation for loss of property (Part 1 Claim under the Lands Compensation (Northern Ireland) Order), following vesting of lands in respect of the A4 dual carriageway, and the A4 Annaghilla and A5 Tullyvar road realignments. Of these, 157 have been agreed under all heads of claim, including injurious affection to retained lands. Injurious affection includes, for example, severance and physical factors, such as noise, vibration etc.

My Department is also in receipt of 15 further claims for injurious affection to properties where land has not been vested from the owner (Part 2 Claims under the Lands Compensation Order). None of these have currently been agreed for payment.

Railways: Derry to Coleraine Line

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans are in place to promote and market the re-opening of the Derry to Coleraine railway line.

(AQW 19763/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised it plans a significant integrated marketing campaign for the end of March/beginning of April to coincide with the re-opening of the line on 24 March.

An advertising campaign will include radio, press, outdoor, digital and social media. It will be targeted to locations on the Londonderry Line, including Limavady, Antrim, Ballymena, Coleraine and Londonderry.

Greater Belfast media release and public relations activity will also target daily, regional and broadcast press. A household mailing of the timetable and a voucher to incentivise travel will be undertaken.

An official opening event will take place, along with a series of local community events and joint marketing with local stakeholders (including Councils, Tourism partners and City of Culture) will be delivered.

A6 Road Scheme

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the proposed A6 scheme. (AQW 19767/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Member will be aware that the Northern Ireland Executive Budget 2011-15 allocated funds to continue development work of a dual carriageway from Londonderry to Dungiven, including a dual carriageway bypass of Dungiven, as one overall project.

I am highly supportive of this particular scheme and a number of other significant projects, including the A26 Glarryford Dualling, York Street Interchange and A6 Randalstown to Castledawson.

I can confirm that development work for the complete Londonderry to Dungiven project is well advanced. Following the publication of Draft Orders for the overall scheme, in December 2011, I approved the holding of a Public Inquiry to give objectors, supporters, my Department's Roads Service and others a fair opportunity to be heard and put forward their case either for, or against, the scheme. The Public Inquiry sat for six days between 24 September and 2 October 2012. The Inspector expects to complete his report before the end of March 2013. Having given careful consideration to his findings and recommendations, I will, in due course, issue a response in the form of a Departmental Statement.

The Investment Strategy for Northern Ireland 2011-2021 includes construction of a number of high priority schemes on the M2, A6 and A26, as part of a £390 million package funded through alternative finance in the period 2015/16 to 2020/21. However, a commitment to fund the revenue consequences of this roads package will be required, therefore, the timing will depend upon future resource budget settlements. In the event of alternative finance not being available, the scheme could be included, together with other priority schemes, in the bidding process for conventional funds, in the next Budget period.

River Foyle: New Bridge

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the plans for a new traffic bridge over the River Foyle, Derry.

(AQW 19768/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can advise the Member that following a review of the strategic road network around Londonderry, a report, published in 2010, concluded there would be a benefit in providing a new road bridge across the Foyle in the vicinity of Newbuildings. This was only in the context of a larger project linking the A6 to the A5 and on to other possible National Roads Authority schemes in County Donegal.

This link is still at the conceptual stage and is not part of the current strategic roads programme, but may be considered, along with other competing priorities, for inclusion in future roads programmes.

Belfast Harbour Commissioners

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 19202/11-15, why the anticipated £40m transfer from the Harbour Commissioners to the Executive budget will not be available and why it was not known when the announcement was made that it would be secured as part of the Executive's fundraising efforts. (AQW 19812/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My previous answer explained that the detail on delivering the Belfast Harbour Commissioners' contribution was delegated to the Budget Review Group.

The Budget Review Group agreed that the Department should focus on working collaboratively with the Belfast Harbour Commissioners on release of value projects. As I previously explained, it was agreed that the Commissioners would take forward, from within their resources, proposals for investment in Foreign Direct Investment accommodation in 2013/14 and consider other suitable projects in future years.

Traffic: Average Speed at Peak Times in Belfast

Mr McDevitt asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 19051/11-15, to detail the average peak speed of traffic on arterial roads in Greater Belfast between 2001 and 2011. (AQW 19823/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Member will be aware that Roads Service carries out a Journey Time Survey for the Belfast Metropolitan Area on a biennial basis, to measure the journey times on 11 predetermined routes in the Belfast Metropolitan Area during the morning peak traffic period.

Details of the results of the surveys carried out in 2001, 2005, 2007, 2009 and 2011, indicating the average speeds during the morning peak period (07.30 – 09.15) are provided in the table below:

Potholes: Cannyreagh Road, Donaghadee

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what action is being taken to repair potholes on the Cannyreagh Road. Donaghadee.

(AQW 19824/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Cannyreagh Road, Donaghadee is inspected on a two monthly cyclical basis and any defects, considered to be hazardous to the public, are identified and programmed for repair in accordance with established Roads Service maintenance guidelines.

The most recent routine inspection of Cannyreagh Road, undertaken on 29 January 2013, identified four recordable defects, in the form of potholes. Defect repairs are carried out within pre-determined target timescales ranging from one day to four weeks, depending on a combination of the severity of the defect and the type of road, as set out in the above-mentioned guidelines. With regard to the four defects noted on the last inspection of Cannyreagh Road, two have been repaired and the remaining two have a target repair date of 26 February 2013.

Other potholes, which may develop between routine inspections and are noted by Roads Service officials or reported by members of the public, are also dealt with in accordance with the maintenance guidelines.

Blue Badge Scheme

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) whether the procedure for renewal of a Blue Badge has changed, particularly in relation to the issue of medical evidence; (ii) to outline any changes that have been made; (ii) when these changes were introduced; (iii) what consultation was taken prior to any changes; and (iv) whether all Badge Holders were notified of the changes which would apply at the time of renewal.

(AQW 19859/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service has not made any recent changes to the procedure for renewing a Blue Badge, particularly in relation to the issue of medical evidence.

However, Roads Service is currently developing proposals for changes to the Blue Badge Scheme in Northern Ireland, to take account of the UK wide reform of Disability Living Allowance and how it will use the new assessment for Personal Independence Payment to determine eligibility for a Blue Badge. A number of other administrative changes and improvements to the Blue Badge Scheme are also being considered. Any proposed changes to the Blue Badge Scheme in Northern Ireland will be subjected to full public consultation.

E-car Charge Points

Mr Dickson asked the Minister for Regional Development how many times each E-car charge point has been used since the activation of the Charge Point Management System in July 2012. (AQW 19866/11-15)

Car Parking

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on any plans to transfer control of local car parks to local councils.

(AQW 19871/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In September 2012, I announced a moratorium on the increase in car parking fees which the Executive had sanctioned and funded. As part of this initiative, I undertook that my Departmental officials would consider, with councils who expressed an interest, alternative arrangements for the management of car parks, other than Park and Ride sites.

As explained in my response to the Member's Assembly Question, AQW 19096 11-15, the Minister for the Environment is currently consulting with Executive Colleagues on the list of functions to transfer under the current programme of Local Government Reform. As part of these consultations, I indicated that off-street car parks (other than Park and Ride) could transfer to councils under Local Government Reform proposals. However, this would be subject to there being no detriment to my Department's financial position. Transfer of this function is also subject to careful consideration of a number of other issues. These include, having adequate enforcement, IT and management systems in place in councils, consistency of approach across the councils and the identification of a suitable mechanism for consultation between Roads Service and councils regarding traffic management.

Street Lighting: Galliagh Area of Derry

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the impact that the removal by Roads Service of street lighting in the Galliagh area of Derry will have on residents' safety. (AQW 19900/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service is renewing the street lighting system in the Galliagh area of Londonderry to upgrade it to modern standards in terms of performance, safety and reliability. The new street lighting will comply with current Roads Service policy and standards. Under that policy, roads and footpaths, which only give rear access to properties or are alternative routes to already lighted roads or footpaths, will generally not be lit.

Given that all houses in the area will have improved street lighting on the roads and footpaths to their front accesses, it is considered that removal of the old street lighting from rear pathways should have no significant impact on the safety of residents.

Sewerage System: Millisle

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the proposed sewerage treatment works in Millisle. (AQW 19919/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that its £2.2 million capital project to upgrade the sewerage system in Millisle, to deliver improved bathing waters and reduce the risk of out-of-sewer flooding within the area, is included in its PC13 Business Plan covering the period April 2013 to March 2015.

Negotiations to obtain a site for a new pumping station at Millisle Presbyterian Church car park were inconclusive and NIW is now in the process of negotiating with Ards Borough Council for a suitable site on council land adjoining the Church car park. When agreement for a suitable site has been reached, NIW will seek planning permission for the pumping station and the consent of Northern Ireland Environment Agency for construction of a new sea outfall pipeline. Subject to obtaining statutory approvals and completion of lands acquisition, NIW will be seeking tenders in late 2013 with the view of construction commencing in Spring 2014 with completion approximately one year later.

Flooding: Surface Water

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Regional Development how many (i) residential; and (ii) commercial properties are at risk due to surface water flooding.

(AQW 19929/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service does not hold the information you have requested.

Responsibility for drainage infrastructure is shared between Roads Service, Rivers Agency and Northern Ireland Water (NIW). Accordingly, officials from these agencies have produced Best Practice Guidelines and a Flooding Hotspots register, detailing procedures for liaison and co-ordination of emergency response. The combined flooding hotspots register, maintained by Rivers Agency, provides details of locations across Northern Ireland at greatest risk of flooding.

In addition, officials from the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development have advised that a Preliminary Flood Risk Assessment indicates that around 20,000, or 2.5% of the properties in Northern Ireland, are sited in an area that is shown to be at risk of surface water flooding to a depth greater than 300mm, from a 1 in 200yr [0.5% Annual Exceedance Probability (AEP)] rainfall event. Approximately three quarters of these properties are listed as residential.

Roads: Noise Levels

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the permissible increase in road noise levels before his Department will consider mitigation measures.

(AQW 19934/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Increases in noise levels, arising from the construction of a new road, should be considered in terms of both the interior and exterior of residential buildings.

The statutory permissible noise level, arising from construction of a new (or altered) road as set out in the Noise Insulation Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1995 (NIR), is 68 decibels (dB). This legislation is intended to ensure that increases in noise levels within the interior of residential buildings, arising from a newly constructed road, should not constitute a nuisance. This legislation sets an exterior noise level of 68 dB as the threshold to establishing whether interior noise levels should constitute a nuisance. The legislation requires that greater than 1dB of noise must be attributable to the new road. In instances where exterior noise levels, arising from a new road, exceed 68dB, my Department has a duty to provide mitigation either by way of a sound barrier (if practicable) or, alternatively, through the provision of noise insulation to residential buildings.

There are no statutory limits on acceptable exterior noise levels to safeguard the enjoyment of gardens/barbeque areas etc by residents. The Design Manual for Roads and Bridges (DMRB), which has been adopted by the four UK Highway Authorities, recommends that when road traffic noise, as a result of a new road, causes an increase in exterior noise levels of 3dB in the long term, a detailed noise assessment should be undertaken, to establish if mitigation measures should be considered. It should be noted that whilst 3dB is the limit to establish if a detailed assessment is required, a 3db increase in noise level cannot automatically be held as constituting a nuisance. The 3dB increase is not seen as a trigger whereby mitigation measures must be implemented, but is instead a threshold of potential significance from which other factors should also be considered, to determine if the impact would be considered significant. If the impact is deemed to be significant, the practicality of mitigation can be reviewed, to establish if the effect can be ameliorated.

Car Parking

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the current policy on the use of public car parks for events.

(AQW 19938/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The use of car parks is regulated by the Off-Street Parking Order (Northern Ireland) 2000. In addition to setting out conditions relating to the parking of vehicles, the Order only authorises the use of car parks for:

- the collection of recyclable materials;
- advertising; and
- displaying information to the public.

For each of these purposes, a licence, issued by my Department, is required.

However, my Department's Roads Service permits councils to use public car parks to facilitate council sponsored events, provided that:

- Roads Service is indemnified against all claims arising from the use of the car park;
- the use of the car park does not contravene the legislation governing the car park, in particular attention would be drawn to the requirement that trading is not permitted; and
- they accept responsibility for the management of the car park, including any temporary diversions required by the use of the car park.

Car parks are generally not made available to private organisations. However, when organisations such as the Boys' Brigade, Girls' Brigade, Scouts or Guides request permission for car parks to be used on Sunday afternoons as a starting point for church parades, Roads Service offers no objection, provided anyone with a right to park in the car park is not denied that right.

Roads Service: Complaints from Whistleblowers

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) all investigations arising from complaints by whistleblowers to Roads Service in relation to contracts in the last three years; and (ii) the outcomes of the investigations. (AQW 19945/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The term "whistleblower" has no formal legal definition; however, it is generally taken to refer to those who are described as "workers" who can make "qualifying disclosures" under the terms of the Public Interest Disclosure Order (Northern Ireland) 1998. Whilst there have been four investigations arising from complaints to Roads Service, in relation to contracts, in the last three years, I am able to confirm that only one was made by a "whistleblower" based on the above definition, whereas it is unclear if the sources of the other three complaints were internal or external. Details of all four investigations and the outcomes are provided in the table below:

Nature of Complaint	Outcome of Investigation
Contractor, working for Roads Service, hiring plant from a company in which a RS employee has an interest.	No evidence of impropriety or wrongdoing found.
Shortcomings in Procurement of Maintenance Contract.	Complaint substantiated and disciplinary action taken against a member of staff.
Contractor, working for Roads Service, sub-contracting work to a company run by a family member of a RS employee.	No evidence of impropriety or wrongdoing found.
Roads Service employee hiring plant and labour from a company in which he has an interest.	Ongoing.

Roads Service has also received some complaints from 'aggrieved' contractors relating to the procurement of contracts, which have been the subject of investigations, however, details are not included in this answer as officials do not consider such individuals to be whistleblowers.

Rosscor Bridge, Fermanagh

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the upgrading of Roscor Bridge in Fermanagh. (AQW 19952/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service plans to lay a new skid resistant surface on the 'Bailey bridge' section at the northernmost span of Rosscor Bridge. In addition, it plans to attach steel mesh panels to the existing steel parapets to enhance pedestrian safety at this location. Roads Service anticipates this work will commence in April/May 2013.

Longer term plans for Rosscor Bridge include, replacement of the 'Bailey bridge' section with a reinforced concrete structure, and structural repairs to the existing reinforced concrete bridge. However, due to the high costs associated with this work, progression will be dependent upon special funding being made available, as the extent of these repairs is well beyond the scope of what can be achieved within current maintenance and bridge strengthening funding allocations.

Roads Service: Liability Claims

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many claims have been made against Roads Service, in the last three financial years.

(AQW 20001/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the number of claims made against my Department's Roads Service, in each of the last three financial years, are detailed in the table below:

Year	Employer's Liability	Public Liability	Total
2009/2010	19	3,629	3,648
2010/2011	17	3,727	3,744
2011/2012	13	2,908	2,921

Final figures for the current financial year, 2012/2013, are not yet available.

A37 Road: Lane Improvements

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the progress that has been made in implementing lane improvements for overtaking on the A37 between Limavady and Coleraine.

(AQW 20019/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Planning for the Gortcorbies Climbing Lane scheme on the A37 is well advanced and my Department's Roads Service has now developed an environmentally friendly and cost effective design that is suitable for the attractive Binevenagh Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. This addresses the earlier concerns about disposal of surplus material, arising from construction of the scheme.

At present, there is no provision in the 2011-2015 budget for construction of this scheme. Spending beyond the current budget period on schemes of this nature will depend on future budget settlements and consideration of the competing priorities.

Resident Parking Schemes

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 19219/11-15, to list any areas where resident parking schemes have been refused because they do not meet his Department's criteria. (AQW 20020/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The areas where Residents' Parking Schemes have been refused due to their not meeting criteria set down by my Department's Road Service are listed below:

- Riverside, Antrim;
- Victoria Street, Armagh;
- Cullybackey Road, Ballymena;
- James Street, Ballymena;
- Bushmills Road, Coleraine;
- Circular Road, Coleraine;
- Prospect Terrace, Dromore (Co. Down);
- Fairview Avenue, Enniskillen;

- Aberfoyle Crescent, Londonderry;
- Bond Street, Londonderry;
- Newry Street area, Markethill;
- Campsie Avenue, Omagh;
- Gallows Hill area, Omagh;
- Johnston Park, Omagh; and
- Alexander Terrace, Strabane.

Sewerage System: Millisle

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development, following the latest spill of raw sewage at Millisle Beach Park, what steps will be taken to prioritise the installation of a new pumping station which NI Water had indicated would be in place by 2013. (AQW 20271/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that the out-of-sewer flooding was caused by heavy rainfall which overwhelmed the existing pumping station at the same time there was a collapse on the emergency overflow pipeline from the pumping station.

A £2.2 million capital project to upgrade the sewerage system in Millisle, in order to reduce the risk of out-of-sewer flooding within the area and to deliver improved bathing waters, is included in NIW's PC13 Business Plan covering the period April 2013 to March 2015. The project was programmed to be delivered in 2013 but has been delayed by the legal process associated with the acquisition of a site for the new pumping station. NIW is now in the process of negotiating with Ards Borough Council for a suitable site on Council land. When agreement has been reached, NIW will seek planning permission for the pumping station and the consent of Northern Ireland Environment Agency for construction of a new sea outfall pipeline. Subject to obtaining statutory approvals and the completion of lands acquisition, NIW will be seeking tenders in late 2013 with the view of construction commencing in Spring 2014 with completion approximately one year later.

Railways: Future Railway Investment Consultation

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the reasons for holding public meetings on the Future Railways Consultation document only in Belfast, Londonderry and Dungannon and not at locations along the Larne, Newry and Bangor routes.

(AQW 20327/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The public meetings were arranged to give people the opportunity to find out more about the costs and benefits of further railways investment and to hear views on how the strategic direction for capital expenditure should be prioritised. In order to facilitate as many people as possible participating in those events, the three locations for the Future Railway Investment consultation meetings were chosen to provide a reasonable geographical spread across Northern Ireland. However, my Department will consider any requests from interested parties to hold further meetings before the close of the consultation period on 12 April 2013.

Department for Social Development

Social Security Appeal Tribunals: North Down

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of social security benefit appeal hearings in North Down in each of the last five years, broken down by venue.

(AQW 19408/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): The information cannot be provided in the format sought. However, the table below sets out the number of sessions convened by The Appeals Service (TAS) at the venues included in the Newtownards tribunal district for each of the last five financial years. TAS currently uses venues at Bangor Signal Centre, Ards Business Centre and Newtownards Courthouse. It also used Sketrick House until July2011.

	June 2007 to March 2008	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12
Number of sessions convened	145	317	333	353	352

Notes:

- (1) The Appeals Service cannot provide information before June 2007.
- (2) During the period June 2007-March 2008 appeals emanating from this area were also listed in Belfast.
- (3) The Newtownards tribunal district includes venues at Newtownards and Bangor.
- (4) The number of appeals within each session can vary and is dependent on the type of benefit involved, type of hearing requested (oral or on the papers) and complexity of appeal.

Social Housing: Newbuilds

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development for a breakdown of the locations of social housing new builds, in each of the last three financial years and in this year to date.

(AQW 19466/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The tables attached detail the locations of social housing new builds for the last three financial years and the year to date. It should be noted that the tables do not include "Off the Shelf" or "Rehabilitation units".

Year	Number of New Builds
2009/10	1,243
2010/11	1,752
2011/12	984
2012/13 (year to date)	157

Ballycastle Strategic Town Development and Action Plan

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the implementation of each of the 33 recommendations in the Ballycastle town Masterplan.

(AQW 19798/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Ballycastle Strategic Town Development and Action Plan published in April 2009 is a long term strategy lasting up to 15 years. This work was commissioned by my Department and produced in partnership with Moyle District Council. Responsibility for the implementation of the individual actions set out in the strategy rests with the relevant stakeholders, including the private sector and public bodies including Government Departments and other statutory agencies. The strategy covers a wide range of regeneration actions to realise the full social, economic and environmental potential of the town

One of the earliest actions completed in the Strategy was establishing a new town centre partnership to co-ordinate its delivery. This partnership comprises members from Ballycastle Chamber of Commerce, Councillors, and public sector agencies including DSD. To date the work completed includes four actions on the organisational structures and three actions for environmental improvements on gateway signs, a town trail and a river walk. These schemes have been funded by DSD, NITB and Moyle District Council.

My Department will continue to work with Ballycastle Town Partnership and Moyle District Council to assist where possible in the delivery of the other initiatives in the town strategy.

Town Centre Properties

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development what grants are available to tidy up shop fronts for empty or run down business premises.

(AQW 19828/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department's Urban Development Grant scheme is targeted at bringing derelict or vacant Town Centre properties back into productive use and at enhancing the commercial viability of existing properties. Owners of eligible properties in specific priority urban areas can apply to the Department for grant aid.

My Department has also provided funding for seven pilot ReStore projects in Belfast, Londonderry, Larne and Lurgan over the past four years. The greater part of the funding was allocated towards enhancing shop fronts of existing businesses. This scheme is currently being evaluated.

In addition, my Department, in conjunction with district councils and traders forums, has undertaken a programme of revitalisation schemes designed to refresh local business premises in town centres. The schemes undertake a number of approaches designed to make town centres more attractive to shoppers, including painting shop fronts and providing new signage where appropriate. To date, 17 regional towns and cities have availed of these schemes, with schemes due to commence in another 14 towns by March 2015.

Housing Executive: Decent Homes Standard Plus

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development, in light of suggestions that the Housing Executive stock is one of the best in Western Europe, to detail the calculation used to arrive at the figure of £1billion needed to bring the stock up to standard.

(AQW 19830/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive advise that the £1 billion figure is taken from the Housing Executive's Maintenance Investment Strategy. It was estimated that £945.3 million would be required for the following five years in order to maintain progress and to meet 'Decent Homes Standard Plus' by 2021.

The figure comprises:

- £673.3 million to meet/maintain Decent Homes Standard (DHS) Plus, as defined by Savills;
- £110.1 million for what were deemed essential landlord costs that had not been included by Savills; for example: Fire Doors, general maintenance, estate infrastructure works, anticipated demolitions etc;
- £51.8 million for Disabled Persons Adaptations;
- £110.1 million for what were deemed desirable (albeit non-essential) works that had not been included by Savills; for example: replacement of Economy 7 heating; upgrading to double glazing; cladding for multi-storey blocks; and environmental improvements.

Housing Executive: Financial Responsibilities

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development why it is not considered best practice for the Housing Executive to have responsibility for its own borrowing, investment, financial and accounting duties.

(AQW 19831/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive's Accounting All Government Departments including their Agencies, NDPB's, Public Corporations and Arm Length Bodies are governed by HM Treasury rules and should operate within the broad framework established by HM Treasury.

In Northern Ireland, Managing Public Money Northern Ireland (MPMNI) is the guidance issued by DFP which relates mainly to the proper handling and reporting of public money and the main principals for dealing with resources used by public sector organisations in Northern Ireland.

Officer must ensure that his organisations' activities achieve high and reliable standards of regularity and propriety as laid down in HM Treasury guidelines.

As part of the public sector the Housing Executive's responsibilities for borrowing, investment, financial and accounting duties are governed by HM Treasury rules and MPMNI guidance.

Social Housing: Double Glazing

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the timeframes for the replacement and installation of double glazed windows in Housing Executive properties in Donaghadee.

(AQW 19849/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive advises that it has a double glazing scheme on site for the Ards Peninsula, which includes 59 properties in Donaghadee. The contractor started in Portaferry, is working up through the Peninsula, and should be starting work in Donaghadee in approximately four to five weeks time, which should complete double glazing installation in Donaghadee.

Social Housing: Double Glazing

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the timeframes for the replacement and installation of double glazed windows in Housing Executive properties in Millisle.

(AQW 19851/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that there are no double glazing installations programmed for Millisle, as all their properties in the village have already been double glazed through previous External Cyclical Maintenance schemes.

Home Insulation

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development what was the cost of the insulation supplied to households through Warm Homes on the Area Based Approach pilot compared to the insulation price for households not qualifying under Warm Homes

(AQW 19884/11-15)

Mr McCausland: It is not possible to directly compare the costs associated with the two schemes without making assumptions about the nature of the work, the location of the properties and the size of the dwelling. However, on an indicative basis, assuming 200mm of insulation for an 80 m² loft, the figures are as follows:

1) With soffit Vents

Warm Homes: £8.70 per m<sup>2</sup> Affordable Warmth: £9.60 per m<sup>2</sup>

2) With Slate Vents

Warm Homes: £14.22 per m<sup>2</sup>
Affordable Warmth: £12.75 per m<sup>2</sup>

3) With Tile Vents

Warm Homes: £12.88 per m² Affordable Warmth: £12.00 per m²

These figures should be taken as indicative only because of the complexities involved.

Boiler Replacement Scheme

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development (i) the number of queries to the Boiler Replacement Scheme since the scheme was launched; (ii) the number of jobs completed; (iii) the target number of jobs which would have been expected to be completed at this stage; and (iv) for a breakdown of the types of replacement, such as oil to oil, oil to gas, or oil to repewable

(AQW 19885/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Since the Boiler Replacement Scheme was launched in September 2012:

- 28,223 queries have been received;
- 9,992 completed applications forms have been received;
- 4,908 approvals have been issued;

- 1,348 boiler replacements have been completed;
- 1,051 oil to oil replacements have been completed;
- 297 conversions to gas have been completed.

The number of boiler completions at any time depends on the response times of the applicants. Over the Christmas period and in to January 2013 it is to be expected that there will less installations. From February 2013 onwards it is reasonable to expect that the number of installations will increase as at present. The number of completions to date is consistent with a reasonable response time from applicants coupled with the time of year.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Youth Groups and Projects

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development what grants are available for setting up youth groups and projects. (AQW 19887/11-15)

Mr McCausland: Within my Department there are no specific funding programmes for setting up youth groups and projects. However as previously advised there are a number of Programmes accessible to young people, these include the Neighbourhood Renewal Programme and the Volunteering Small Grants Programme.

Funding through the above Programmes may be made available for setting up youth groups and supporting projects where a priority need has been identified and resources can be made available.

Social Housing: Rent Increases in Rinmore Drive, Creggan

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the rent increase for tenants of properties in Rinmore Drive, Derry since the transfer of the properties to Apex Housing Association. (AQW 19896/11-15)

Mr McCausland: There was a total of 55 houses in Rinmore Drive, Creggan that transferred from the NIHE to Apex Housing Association. Of the 55 properties, 14 have had improvements completed with the rent charge increasing accordingly, 4 are currently undergoing improvements and the rent charge has not changed at this stage. Improvements to the remaining 37 properties have not yet commenced and the rent charge has also not changed.

The table below details the properties that have had improvements carried out with the amount charged in rent shown before and after improvements

Welfare Reform: Underoccupancy, Foyle Area

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development how many people or families are at risk of financial penalty for underoccupation in each district within the Foyle Constituency.

(AQW 20015/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information is not available in the format requested as the Housing Executive does not routinely collate information by Parliamentary Constituency.

However, the Housing Executive estimates that within its District Office areas of Waterloo Place, Waterside and Collon Terrace, the number of cases at risk of financial penalty for under-occupation is 3,364. This information is drawn from Housing Benefit claimants affected which includes families, couples and single people.

Emigration

Mr McMullan asked the Minister for Social Development whether levels of emigration impacts on his departmental budget. (AQW 20034/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department's main business areas are social security (including child maintenance & enforcement), housing and urban regeneration/community development. As such, emigration, which by implication could potentially reduce the demand for these services, is not factored into departmental budgetary considerations.

Welfare Reform: Underoccupancy, North Belfast Constituency

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister for Social Development how many people or families are at risk of financial penalty for under-occupation in the North Belfast constituency.

(AQW 20050/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information is not available in the format requested as the Housing Executive does not routinely collate information by Parliamentary Constituency.

However, the Housing Executive estimates that within its District Office areas of North Belfast, Newtownabbey 1 and Newtownabbey 2, the number of cases at risk of financial penalty for under-occupation is 4,160. This information is drawn from Housing Benefit claimants affected which includes families, couples and single people.

Volunteering Strategy

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development when he will make a decision on the volunteering infrastructure. (AQW 20203/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I am committed to ensuring effective infrastructure support for volunteering in order to successfully deliver on Northern Ireland's first ever Volunteering Strategy. My Department is presently considering delivery options for such support and I expect new arrangements to be put in place later this year. In the interim period arrangements are being developed by my officials to ensure the continued support for volunteering.

Volunteering Strategy

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development whether he will grant an extension on the volunteering funding package.

(AQW 20204/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I am committed to ensuring effective infrastructure support for volunteering in order to successfully deliver on Northern Ireland's first ever Volunteering Strategy. My Department is presently considering delivery options for such support and I expect new arrangements to be put in place later this year. In the interim period arrangements are being developed by my officials to ensure the continued support for volunteering.

Advice Services Transition Fund

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development whether the Advice Sector in Northern Ireland will be able to avail of the £65 million Advice Services Transition Fund that was created by the Cabinet Office and The Big Lottery Fund. (AQW 20226/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The £65m for Free Advice Services announced by the Cabinet Office on 26 October 2012 represents a mix of existing public spend and Big Lottery funding for advice services in England only.

However my Department provides funding of approx £4.5m per annum for a range of advice provision, including regional advice support, frontline advice support, housing advice and advice supporting benefit uptake.

Peace Building and Conflict Resolution Centre

Mr Nesbitt asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they will publish any market research carried out on the location of the Peace Building and Conflict Resolution Centre at the Maze site; and which other locations were considered or tested.

(AQW 18905/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): The Peace Building and Conflict Resolution Centre is being built at Maze/Long Kesh in accordance with Recommendation 3.3.12 of the All-party Maze Consultation Panel Report (February 2005).

The Maze Consultation Panel Report "A new future for the Maze/Long Kesh" 24 February 2005 recommended that the Government should commit immediately to the design and construction of a major new conflict transformation facility specified to the highest architectural standards appropriate to an international centre of expertise, and embracing iconic art elements in the specification sufficient to signify the major political and social investment in promoting peace and prosperity and the transformation of society.

Maze Consultation Panel Membership: Political Nominees

David Campbell, Chair (UUP)
Michael McKernan, Vice Chair (SDLP)
Roy Bailie, UUP nominee
Gerry Cosgrove, SDLP nominee
Mairtin O'Muilleoir SF nominee
Edwin Poots, DUP nominee

Extensive consultations take place on an ongoing basis with many stakeholder groups, reference groups and local residents to obtain how their needs may best be met on the site.

Joseph Rowntree Foundation: Measuring Poverty

Ms Lo asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they have met with the Rowntree Foundation to discuss the issue of measuring poverty and to learn from other jurisdictions. (AQW 19523/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We have not met with the Joseph Rowntree Foundation to discuss measuring poverty. However, officials, along with colleagues from other departments, have met with JRF in relation to the development of the longer term approach to the Delivering Social Change (DSC) framework. This framework has been established by the Executive to achieve a sustained reduction in poverty and disadvantage.

Officials will continue to keep in contact with JRF to monitor its work on a UK anti-poverty strategy and to exchange ideas and information as the Programme for Government work on tackling disadvantage progresses.

Childcare Strategy

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, in relation to the consultation on the childcare strategy, (i) what engagement has taken place with employers on their inclusion in providing solutions to childcare for employees; (ii) what assessment has been made of the benefits to businesses from providing childcare support for employees; (iii) how businesses can be incentivised to provide childcare solutions to their employees; and (iv) whether they have considered introducing regulations which would require some employers to provide childcare.

(AQW 19786/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Public consultation on the Childcare Strategy is underway. It is an opportunity for all with an interest in childcare, including employers and employers' groups, to put forward proposals to inform and shape the final Strategy. The Department has been accepting written submissions since the start of the consultation on 5 December 2012 and public consultation events, which began on 20 February, will provide a further opportunity for direct engagement in the Strategy's development. All proposals for the future Strategy are welcome and will be taken fully into account. In parallel to public consultation, research is being undertaken to identify and critically assess options, including those put forward during consultation, for potential intervention in the childcare sector.

Ebrington Barracks

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the construction of an underground car park at Ebrington Barracks.

(AQW 19962/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The tender for the construction of a car park and enabling platform at Ebrington closed in December 2013 and a contractor has been appointed. It is expected that work on the project will commence in March 2013.

Child Poverty

Dr McDonnell asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they intend to bring forward any new initiatives to tackle child poverty.

(AQO 3409/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Child Poverty Strategy, which was agreed by the Executive in March 2011, continues to inform and steer the actions that are being taken forward by all departments in fulfilment of their obligations under the Child Poverty Act 2010. The second annual report on the delivery of the Child Poverty Strategy is due to be laid before the Assembly by the end of March.

Under the Delivering Social Change framework, we are aiming to deliver a sustained reduction in poverty and associated issues across all ages, as well as improving the health, wellbeing and life opportunities of our children and young people.

The early work taken forward under the framework is focusing on the needs of children and families in order to ensure that the most urgent and significant problems in our society are addressed, including deprivation, social exclusion and disadvantage.

In line with this initial focus, we recently agreed a Children and Young Persons Early Action Document which identifies key priorities to be taken forward over the coming years. The initial six Signature Programmes which we announced on 10 October 2012 have been designed to address some of the key priorities identified within the Early Action Document.

We are keen that further such programmes are identified as a rolling programme of initiatives and are currently giving consideration to a range of possible future signature programmes for a second phase of work to be taken forward. This may include the development of further interventions to specifically tackle the issue of child poverty.

Victims and Survivors Service

Mr Byrne asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the work of the Victims and Survivors service. (AQO 3410/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Victims and Survivors Service, which opened in April 2012, aims to provide a high quality service to victims and survivors based on individual assessed needs and the provision of high quality services to meet these needs through the funding of Victims' groups, the direct commissioning of interventions and financial assistance to individuals in difficulty.

The Service is committed to ensuring that, through the individual assessment process, victims are made aware of the full range of services appropriate to their needs. The aim is to empower victims and survivors, introducing them to organisations and locations where they can avail of appropriate and effective treatment and/or support tailored to their specific needs. The Service has conducted nearly 300 assessments to date.

Additionally, the Service is in the final stages of completing the assessment of more than 50 applications from groups for funding from the Victim Support Programme 2013-15. This programme will enable groups to provide a wide range of health and wellbeing and social support services directly to victims and survivors in need of help and assistance.

Once the necessary final pre-contract checks have been completed, the Service anticipates that Letters of Offer will be issued to successful groups from March 2013.

Delivering Social Change Framework

Ms McCorley asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they plan to bring forward any further Delivering Social Change Signature Projects in the future. (AQO 3411/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The early work taken forward under the Delivering Social Change Framework is focusing on the needs of children and families in order to ensure that the most urgent and significant problems in our society are addressed – problems such as poor educational outcomes, poor physical and mental health, economic activity, social exclusion and disadvantage.

In line with this initial focus, we recently agreed a Children and Young Persons Early Action Document which identifies key priorities to be taken forward over the coming years. The initial six Signature Programmes we announced on 10 October 2012 were designed to address some of the key priorities identified within the Early Action Document.

The Delivering Social Change Framework aims to reduce poverty and associated issues across all ages, and so whilst this initial focus is on the needs of our children and young people through the delivery of these six Signature Programmes, its longer term objective is to lay the basis for sustained social improvement for all our vulnerable groups. We are therefore keen that further such programmes are identified as a rolling programme of initiatives and are currently giving consideration to a number of possible future signature programmes for a second phase of work to be taken forward.

Family Fund

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what actions they have taken, or intend to take, to address the financial shortfalls facing the Family Fund, given their role in co-ordinating disability issues. (AQW 20030/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Family Fund is supported financially by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety. Decisions about the allocation of resources to the Fund rest with Minister Poots.

Our Department has co-ordinated the delivery of a new Disability Strategy which will place the rights of people with disabilities firmly in the context of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of People with Disabilities. Under the Strategy, the Executive is committed to reducing poverty among people with disabilities and their families and to protecting their right to an adequate standard of living. Ministers from all relevant departments will be reporting through the Delivering Social Change framework on the progress they are making towards achieving that goal.

Childcare Fund

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what criteria were set for Departments to bid for the £12m funding ring-fenced for childcare.

(AQW 20031/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Executive has allocated £12 million over the current Comprehensive Spending Review period to support the development of the Childcare Strategy.

In bidding for a share of the Fund, departments must demonstrate that their proposal contributes to the development of childcare and that it is additional to existing baseline provision for the delivery of childcare services.

Social Protection Fund

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) to detail the bids received for the funding set aside for the Social Protection Fund; (ii) to outline the process that Departments must follow to submit a bid; and (iii) how their Department is addressing the immediate requirements of people who may need to avail of this funding.

(AQW 20090/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We would refer you to the answers in AQW 18548/11-15 and AQW 19590/11-15 dated 24 January and 14 February respectively.

Childcare Fund

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 19221/11-15, what mechanism will be used to distribute the remaining money in the Childcare Fund; and will it be opened up for non-government organisations to apply. (AQW 20174/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: At present, the Executive Childcare Fund is open to bids from Government Departments only. However, these departments can and do bid for funding that ultimately could be delivered to non-governmental organisations or they could bid for a scheme for non-governmental organisations to apply to. A decision on how to proceed with the Fund over its remaining years 2013/14 and 2014/15 will be taken during the development of the Childcare Strategy. This will allow the deployment of the remaining money in the Childcare Fund to align with the emerging priorities of the Strategy.

Peace Building and Conflict Resolution Centre

Mr Swann asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how many residential bedrooms will be constructed as part of the Conflict Transformation facility at the Maze.

(AQW 20224/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The planned facilities at the Peace Building and Conflict Resolution Centre currently include shared office space along with conference and meeting facilities that can be utilised by local and visiting groups to help further the aims and objectives of organisations working in this important sector. The plans do not include residential bedrooms at this stage.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Horse Meat in Beef Products

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what measures she is putting in place to ensure that there is no recurrence of the contamination of beef with horsemeat. (AQW 18685/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): The Food Standards Agency (FSA in NI) is the central competent authority in matters of food safety and authenticity here. DARD is the competent authority in NI for the Beef Labelling Regulations.

All slaughter premises here (including the facility that formerly slaughtered equines) are staffed by DARD veterinarians and Meat Inspectors. DARD staff are present at all times when slaughter is occurring, to ensure the Food Business Operators' compliance with public health legislation and traceability. Local cutting premises are subject to regular, risk-based audit by DARD vets, for the same purposes.

These activities are governed by a Service Level Agreement with the FSA in NI. Senior officials from DARD and FSA maintain regular formal and informal contact to ensure consistent and effective delivery to the agreed standard, and the FSA performs regular checks and independent audits to ensure the quality of work delivered on its behalf.

These measures have proven effective with to date no reports from the FSA of any finding of horse cross contamination or carryover connected to any of the local slaughter plants.

In response to the recent findings, and current concerns, however, the FSA has developed a 4 point action plan which is being implemented in conjunction with the food industry and other government departments (including DARD) here and across Britain.

In addition to the FSA's food authenticity survey of processed meat products, I asked the FSA (NI) to urgently begin an enhanced programme of inspections in cold stores, and in other meat processing establishments, across the north. This enhanced regime commenced on 6 February and will sit alongside the wider sampling survey.

As part of this, DARD officials have also initiated a series of enhanced checks and inspections in all the red meat slaughter and cutting premises for which it is the FSA's delivery agent. My officials are also working closely with the FSA to ensure that public confidence in beef from animals that have been born, raised and slaughtered here is maintained.

The purpose of this enhanced programme of inspections is to establish the sources of incoming meat ingredients to each establishment and assure that consumers' interests are being protected in relation to the declaration of the meat species in the establishments' products, and the precautions adopted by manufacturers to reduce or eliminate unintended inclusion of low levels of species that are not declared.

Consideration will be given by my officials as to what further actions are appropriate and proportionate, when the investigations under way are complete.

Halal Meat Products

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what legislation exists in relation to the processing, sale and distribution of Halal meat products; and how such processes are inspected. (AQW 19660/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Food Standards Agency in the north is the central competent authority in matters of food safety, composition and labelling of food offered for human consumption. The statutory rules and regulations that apply to traditional meat and meat products also apply in relation to processing, sale and distribution of meat and meat products described as Halal. In relation to hygiene, processing, authenticity, labelling, sales and distribution, the Food Safety Order 1991 and subordinate legislation apply.

In relation to the welfare of animals, the method of slaughter for the provision of Halal meat is controlled by DARD under the Welfare of Animals (Slaughter or Killing) Regulations 1996.

All meat placed on the market is produced in accordance with EU food hygiene legislation and is inspected to the same standard.

Enforcement of food safety, food composition and labelling requirements are conducted by Council Environmental Health Officers who carry out hygiene and food standards inspections. Each food business is registered on a premises database and assigned a risk rating to facilitate a programme of inspections/interventions. The scope of hygiene and food standards inspections/interventions is set out in the Food Law Code of Practice and the Practice Guidance.

All slaughter premises here are staffed by DARD Veterinarians and Meat Inspectors. DARD staff are present at all times when slaughter is occurring to ensure the Food Business Operators' compliance with public health and animal welfare legislation and traceability. Local cutting premises are subject to regular, risk-based audits by DARD vets, for the same purposes.

These activities are governed by a Service Level Agreement with the FSA in the north. Senior officials from DARD and the FSA maintain regular formal and informal contact to ensure consistent and effective delivery to the agreed standard, and the FSA performs regular checks and independent audits to ensure the quality of the work delivered on its behalf.

Under the Beef and Veal Labelling Regulations 2010 there is a requirement for any non-compulsory labelling information regarding the characteristics of the meat, such as method of production or breed, to be approved as a voluntary claim. This would include claims for Halal beef. These Regulations apply to fresh and frozen beef and veal but not processed products. All voluntary claims must be approved by DARD, following verification by an independent verifier. These claims are checked during DARD beef labelling inspections and independently verified on an annual basis.

Horse Meat in Food Products: DARD Meetings with DEFRA

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the interaction her Department has had with the Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs with regard to tackling the horse meat scandal. (AQW 19662/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: DEFRA is responsible for matters of food authenticity in England and Wales, while the FSA has this responsibility in Scotland and here.

FSA is responsible for Food Safety in all areas of the country.

As the current issue is primarily one of authenticity rather than safety, DARD officials have been in regular contact with officials from the FSA (NI) with whom responsibility for both authenticity and food safety here rests.

I have participated in tele-conferences with the Defra Ministers and Devolved Administrations on 3 occasions, and most recently in Brussels on 25th February when possible improvements to horse traceability, extension of DNA testing regimes, and the acceleration for enhanced Country-of-origin labelling proposals were discussed.

DARD officials have also contributed to the development of an Action Plan with FSA and Defra.

DARD: Central Investigation Service

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the process used to decide whether the Central Investigation Service will proceed with a fraud investigation case.

(AQW 19746/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Cases of suspected fraud referred to the Central Investigation Service (CIS) for investigation are immediately registered on the CIS database and reported to the NIAO.

The Head of Central Investigation Service (HCIS) is responsible for reviewing all suspected fraud case referrals and assessing whether or not they merit investigation. While all case referrals merit consideration for investigation, the circumstances of each case will differ and, therefore, each must be considered on its own merits. The HCIS considers a broad range of factors as detailed in the CIS Procedures Manual.

If the HCIS identifies any significant issues of concern, and where it is proposed to not to proceed to fraud investigation, the views of the Head of Branch and the Investigation Officers (IO) will always be sought.

After deliberations the case will either proceed to fraud investigation or the case will be assessed and returned to the relevant business area with the rationale for closure and appropriate recommendations regarding redress.

The CIS Procedures Manual contains policies, procedures and aide memoires for staff reference and adherence, where applicable.

Bovine Viral Diarrhoea

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in relation to ongoing Bovine Viral Diarrhoea schemes, what plans her Department has to incentivise farmers to efficiently dispose of infected persistent infection calves rather than allow them to return to the herd.

(AQW 19971/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: At farm level, production diseases such as BVD and Johne's Disease can have a significant impact on productivity. Such diseases are not subject to national control programmes and because their impacts are mainly at farm level, it is the responsibility of industry to take the lead in tackling them.

I therefore welcome the launch last year of Animal Health and Welfare NI (AHWNI), which has been set up by industry to lead on the development and promotion of initiatives to tackle such diseases.

In support of this industry-led initiative I am pleased to announce that my Department will provide start-up funding to help Animal Health and Welfare NI deliver its BVD eradication programme and to develop a Johne's Disease control programme.

I have no plans to incentivise farmers who participate in the AHWNI BVD eradication programme to dispose of 'persistently infected' calves. This issue did not form part of AHWNI's Strategic Plan on which the economic appraisal was based. However, as an additional incentive, the proposed start-up funding to AHWNI includes support to subsidise the cost of confirmatory testing of positive animals and their dams. The aim of this testing is to confirm that such animals are PI animals, and not transiently infected, before they are sent to slaughter.

The success of AHWNI's BVD initiative will depend on farmers' buy-in, not just in terms of their participation in the voluntary testing, but also in terms of their willingness to take the necessary actions to deal with infected animals.

In addition to the financial support for the BVD initiative, my Department is also delivering BVD awareness training through the Rural Development Plan in conjunction with AHWNI. The purpose of this training is to help make farmers and PVPs aware of the steps they can take to tackle BVD and the clear economic advantages to the farmer of so doing.

Horse Meat

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether farmers have incurred any costs as a result of the horse meat crisis.

(AQW 19999/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There has been extensive testing of meat and meat products in the past few weeks to identify the presence of equine DNA in food. These have included tests carried out by the FSA, DARD and the industry itself.

Farmers have not incurred the cost of these tests.

I met with retailer representatives on 13 February and made it clear to them that the cost of sampling food should fall on those businesses importing or utilising product which doesn't have the authentication provided by our own local traceability systems and that such costs must not fall to our primary producers whose product is second to none.

Fishing Fleet

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how her Department is helping the fishing fleet. (AQW 20000/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department, through the European Fisheries Fund, provides significant financial support to the local fishing fleet. As well as offering individual grants to vessel owners wishing to modernise their vessels, grant awards have also been made under the Collective Action measure to initiatives which seek to, among other things, improve safety on board, provide training opportunities and improve the sustainability of the marine stocks. To date over £1.75m of EFF and DARD funds have been committed to projects which directly benefit the catching sector. An additional £3.36m has been awarded for improvements to harbour facilities and £0.98m to science projects which both provide indirect benefits to the NI fishing fleet.

My Department also assists the fishing fleet by working to maintain and increase the fishing fleet's fishing opportunities. My Department funds the Agri-food and Biosciences Institute (AFBI) who carry out fish stock surveys and data collection, which contribute to scientific stock assessments. Where these assessments demonstrate that fishing is sustainable my Department will argue in Europe for fishing opportunities to be maintained or increased. For example at the December 2012 Fisheries Council we were able to secure a 6% increase in the Area VII prawn quota, which is our most important stock, as well as a freeze in annual cuts in fishing effort. In addition, during 2012, my Department worked with the industry and the Commission to obtain an increase in the Irish Sea herring quota over a two year period. This was made possible thanks to additional DARD funded AFBI stock surveys that provided evidence that the herring stock could sustain higher fishing levels.

Ballypatrick Forest

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) who has sporting rights in Ballypatrick Forest; (ii) what are their responsibilities; and (iii) does their public liability insurance cover car owners on the public road. (AQW 20047/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: (i) My Department does not own the sporting rights for Ballypatrick forest. I am not in a position to provide you with the name of the private individual owning the sporting rights. The name of the private individual is withheld in line with their expectations of confidentiality and that all processing will take place in accord with Data Protection Principles,

- (ii) key responsibilities of those exercising sporting rights are given in the Wildlife and Natural Environment Act (Northern Ireland) 2011,
- (iii) my Department does not hold information on the public liability insurance cover of this private individual.

Horse Meat in Food Products: DARD Meetings with Food Retailers and Trade Bodies

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many meetings she has had with food retailers and trade bodies since the news of the horse meat scandal became public knowledge. (AQW 20056/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I have had one joint meeting with representatives of the NI Independent Retail Trade Association (NIIRTA) whose members include Spar, Costcutter, Vivo, NISA and many local traders, the NI Retail Consortium (NIRC) whose members include Tesco, Sainsburys, Marks & Spencer and Asda, and a Lidl representative, to discuss the horsemeat issue and promote the reputation of local produce.

I have also had further meetings with the Equine Council for NI(ECNI) and the Chief Executive of Safefood in Dublin since the news of the horsemeat scandal became public knowledge.

Horse Meat in Food Products

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) how she plans to mitigate the damage caused by the horse meat scandal to the business of exporting meat; and (ii) the discussions she has had with Invest NI on this matter.

(AQW 20058/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The ongoing horsemeat issue facing the meat processing industry is deeply concerning to consumers, and to the wider meat sector as it is an important part of the agrifood industry which sustains up to 92,000 jobs, and represents around 20 per cent of total private sector employment.

I will continue to work closely with the Food Standards Agency and other government Departments and agencies, including Invest NI, to ensure all efforts are made to protect the reputation of our home grown produce, the sector, and its contribution to our economy.

To date, and to the best of my knowledge, the horsemeat issue has had a limited impact on the industry here in the North as it does not reflect the high quality and traceability of our own locally produced beef and lamb. I will continue to do all that I can to ensure that consumers are made aware, our beef is second to none and that they should have every confidence in the supply chain.

The LMC Beef & Lamb Farm Quality Assurance Scheme and extensive traceability controls throughout the supply chain assure our customers of the total integrity of our beef and lamb. I will encourage consumers to continue to include locally produced red meat as part of their balanced diet and support our local industry. I have already met with representatives of the multiple retailers and emphasised to them the benefits of sourcing quality assured beef and lamb products from the north and building dedicated, sustainable supply chains with our farmers.

My officials have been in regular contact with their counterparts from Invest NI and continue to monitor the situation and share information on a daily basis.

I believe our industry is well placed to grasp any export opportunities that may arise due to the inevitable change in circumstances within existing supply chain arrangements in national and international markets and my Department will work alongside Invest NI and others to explore and develop any such opportunities.

Countryside Management Scheme Inspectors

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, to outline (i) the guidelines used by Countryside Management Scheme inspectors to determine the correct planting of hedgerows (a) prior to; and (b) after November 2012; and (ii) the guidelines used during these inspections.

(AQW 20062/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

- (i) DARD staff who carry out inspections for the NI Countryside Management Scheme check against management requirements for hedgerow planting which can be found on pages 59 to 65 of the Countryside Management Scheme 2007 – 2013 Information booklet. This booklet is available on the DARD website at the following link:
  - http://www.dardni.gov.uk/ruralni/dard_cms_info_cmb.pdf
  - This information was used both (a) prior to and (b) after November 2012.
- (ii) The guidelines used during these inspections are supplied in part (i) of this answer.

Countryside Management Scheme

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, with regards to the Countryside Management Scheme, to outline the rationale behind the updated guidelines issued in November 2012. (AQW 20063/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In November 2012 an addendum was issued as part of the NI Countryside Management Scheme (NICMS) 2007 – 2013 Information Booklet. This addendum provided updated scheme information which reflected changes to guidance for new NICMS agreements with a start date of 1 January 2013. The main changes in the addendum related to eligibility of scrub and the impact of ash die-back disease on availability of ash plants for Field Boundary Restoration.

Changes to advice about scrub reflected an alignment of NICMS with the scrub eligibility requirements developed in response to EU audit criticism.

The ash die-back advice informed scheme participants that, following the introduction of emergency legislation, supplies of ash plants will not be available for the coming planting season for the Field Boundary Restoration option within the NICMS or other options which could involve the planting of ash (such as Ungrazed Grass Margins planted with Native Trees).

DARD: Central Investigation Service

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in relation to the Fraud Investigation Service, to detail (i) the number of staff employed; (ii) the number of alleged fraud cases that is has investigated; (iii) the number of convictions secured; (iv) the amount of money it has recovered; and (v) the operating costs of the unit, over the last five years. (AQW 20065/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In can confirm the following in relation to the five elements to your question:

- (i) There are currently 3.8 Full Time Equivalent (FTE) staff in post in DARD Central Investigation Service (CIS). This includes:
  - 1.0 Deputy Principal (DP) Head of CIS
  - 2.0 Staff Officer (SO) Investigators
  - 0.8 Administrative Officer (AO)

At 1 April 2011 there were 4.8 FTE staff in post. During 2011/12 this reduced by 1 SO Investigator to the 3.8 FTEs currently in post.

At 1 April 2010 there were 6.8 FTE staff in post i.e. 1 DP, 5 SO Investigators and a 0.8 AO. During the 2010/11 year this reduced by 2 SO Investigators to 4.8 FTEs.

At 1 April 2009 there were also 6.8 FTE staff in post.

At 1 April 2008 there were 5 FTE staff in post i.e. 1 DP, 3 SO Investigators and 1 AO. During the 2008/09 year this increased by 2 SO Investigators to 6.8 FTEs (the AO moved to part time working).

(ii) In the current 2012/13 year to date, 51 DARD cases of suspected fraud have been investigated by CIS. During the previous 4 year period, the following number of DARD cases were investigated:

2011/12	29 cases
2010/11	20 cases
2009/10	30 cases
2008/09	31 cases

- (iii) 3 fraud convictions have been secured in the past 5 years. In addition, in this period the CIS obtained 10 cases of successful regulatory/legislative convictions.
- (iv) It is not the responsibility of CIS to recover monies. Recommendations are made to the responsible business area, including, potentially, the application of penalties.
- (v) The running costs to DARD of the Central Investigation Service for each of the last 5 financial years were as follows:

2008/09	£172,000
2009/10	£148,000
2010/11	£122,000
2011/12	£154,000
2012/13	£137,000 (projected)

The figures provided are net of income generated from work undertaken for other Government Departments and Agencies.

Ballypatrick Forest

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the damage caused to trees in Ballypatrick Forest due to the numbers of Sika deer; and, to detail the acceptable number of deer for the forest. (AQW 20066/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The damage caused to trees in Ballypatrick forest is primarily limited to some areas of recently planted sites and does not cause a threat to the long term sustainability of the forest. Forest Service continues to keep this under review as part of their normal forest monitoring.

The capacity a forest has to hold deer at a given point in time is dependent on the available habitats and food, both inside and outside the forest. Ballypatrick Forest is a large upland forest containing 1,470 hectares where planting began in the early 1950's and the harvesting and replanting of this first crop of trees is ongoing. To protect newly planted trees, my Department would not wish to see deer numbers at Ballypatrick forest in excess of approximately 120 deer in total.

Illegally Disposed Animal Carcases

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many cases of illegally disposed animal carcases have there been reported in the last three years.

(AQW 20079/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There have been 110 reports of burial of cattle by farmers during the period 01/01/2010 until 31/12/2012. This method of disposal is illegal and the farmers concerned have been advised of this. Enforcement action will be taken against any farmer who repeats this action. To date no farmers have been prosecuted for this.

DARD receives reports of illegal dumping from members of the public and enforcement agencies. These reports are received on sporadic but infrequent occasions. All reports are investigated and of these 21 were investigated by the Central Enforcement Team resulting in 10 convictions.

Measure 3.1 Farm Diversification Funds

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how much is uncommitted in Measure 3.1 Farm Diversification funds, in each of the groups.

(AQW 20099/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The table below details the figures you have requested. There are also a number of applications going through the assessment process that are not counted at this stage as committed funds.

DARD: Legal Advice

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how much her Department has spent on legal advice in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 20127/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Departments legal costs for the last three financial years, as reported in the Departments resource accounts are as follows:

Financial year	Amount
2009/2010	£182,200
2010/2011	£186,757
2011/2012	£205,079

However, please note that these costs are specific to legal fees only and do not incorporate expenditure relating to compensation, outlay and other costs. These costs do not include DSO notional charges.

DARD: Fraud Hotline

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 19384/11-15, for a breakdown of the costs incurred by her Department in relation to raising public awareness of the Fraud Hotline, in each of the last three years. (AQW 20136/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Department has not publicised the Fraud Hotline over the last three years and has therefore not incurred any costs. However, the Department has developed a Counter Fraud Strategy target to raise the public's awareness of the Fraud Hotline through a new poster campaign. The publicity campaign will be launched later this year.

Shooting Rights: Forests Owned by the Forest Service

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the tenure of the shooting rights for each forest owned by Forest Service.

(AQW 20145/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: There are currently 70 Licence Agreements in place for shooting rights in forests owned by my Department. The tenure of these forests is as follows.

Forest Service Land: Access

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how she will ensure that the safety of members of the public accessing Forest Service land is balanced with the needs of people who use the land for recreational and sporting purposes.

(AQW 20146/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Forest Service facilitates a large and varied range of activities and events in our forests each year. The safety of forest users is primarily achieved through adherence to the Occupiers Liability Order (NI) 1987 and the implementation of the Forestry Act (NI) 2010 and the supporting Forestry Byelaws.

Permission arrangements whereby third parties use Department land for activities and events are kept under review to ensure landowner responsibilities are fulfilled and organisations carrying out activities do so safely.

It is also important that all forest users act in a manner that protects their own safety and the safety of others who may be affected by their actions and our new byelaws provide us with a means to regulate the responsible use of forestry land by visitors.

Dog Licences

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 18770/11-15, to detail the number of dog licences registered in each of the last three years, broken down by council area. (AQW 20161/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Dog control is legislated for here by the Dogs Order 1983, as amended by the Dogs (Amendment) Act 2011. Councils enforce this legislation and provide statistics to my Department regarding its operation.

The table below details the number of dog licences issued in 2010, 2011 and 2012 in each Council area.

Slaughterhouses

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail any incidences and the location of illegal slaughterhouses or rendering plants, over the last three years; and what action was taken against the operators. (AQW 20185/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: All approved slaughter premises here are staffed by DARD veterinarians who are present at all times when slaughter is occurring, to ensure the Food Business Operators' compliance with legislation.

There has been an instance of a suspected illegal slaughterhouse found here during the last 3 years. This was brought to DARD's attention by other enforcement authorities during investigations into criminal activities.

There are 2 rendering plants approved here to process fallen animals and carcasses. These are inspected on a monthly basis by Department staff to ensure that they are complying with the regulations. There have been no instances of illegal rendering plants found here during the last 3 years.

Land Mapping

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether, prior to the discovery of the software error in the LPIS mapping system, any of the early batches of maps distributed were affected by the error. (AQW 20189/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: None of the maps in the early batches were affected by this error.

It is possible, however, that some maps in all batches may have had fields missing for different and unrelated reasons, for example where they were not declared on the previous Single Application form or where a field had been modified during the data capture process.

Rural Development Programme: Solar Energy

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 19543/11-15, to detail the value of the grant awarded to each successful application, broken down by Local Action Group.

(AQW 20200/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The grant awarded to each successful application to Axis 3 of the Rural Development Programme for solar energy projects are as follows:

Cluster	Number of Successful Solar Applications	Grant Awarded £
DRAP	2	50,000 8,000
LRP	2	1,327 300
NER	1	30,000
SOAR	1	2,400

BTEC Certificate in Advanced Professional Investigative Practice

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 19381/11-15, to detail the training requirements and cost of attaining the BTEC Certificate in Advanced Professional Investigative Practice. (AQW 20230/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Central Investigation Service (CIS) does not currently have any staff undertaking the qualification. The Chartered Institute of Public Finance & Accountancy (CIPFA) is the training provider. Further information on the current programme and related costs would be available on their website. WWW.cipfa.org/training.

On-farm Inspections

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many on-farm inspections her Department has carried out in the last five years.

(AQW 20336/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In accordance with the rules governing the administration of the Single Farm Payment Scheme, my Department must carry out on-the-spot checks on at least 5% of applicants each year. These checks verify eligibility of claims under scheme rules. Table 1 summarises the number of land eligibility inspections carried out on farms claiming Single Farm Payment in each of the last five years.

Table 1: Single Farm Payment (SFP) Land Eligibility inspections from 2008 to 2012

Year	SFP Land Eligibility Inspections
2008	1,935
2009	1,932

Year	SFP Land Eligibility Inspections
2010	1,921
2011	1,893
2012	1,871

Single Farm Payments: Revised Entitlements

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) the number of cases of single farm payment entitlements that have been revised in the last five years; and (ii) how many of these were following an on-farm inspection.

(AQW 20356/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

- The number of farm businesses that have had their Single Farm Payment (SFP) entitlements revised at least once in the last five SFP scheme years is 10,931.
- ii) Our SFP Entitlement Register does not hold information that shows the specific reason(s) for SFP entitlement revisions. However, it is likely that the majority of these entitlement revisions will have taken place because of reduced eligible land identified during on-farm checks. Farmer notified changes of land eligibility can also prompt a revision of SFP entitlements.

Single Farm Payments: Review Applications

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) the number of applications that have been submitted for review using Review of Decisions application form in the last five years; and (ii) how many reviews have been successful.

(AQW 20357/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: From 1 January 2008 to 31 December 2012, my Department received 1,574 Stage 1 review applications and 264 SFP Stage 2 review applications. Of these, 32 Stage 1 and 20 Stage 2 applications did not proceed because the application was lodged after the required deadline or was subsequently withdrawn by the applicant.

Of the remaining 1,542 Stage 1 applications, 1,403 reviews have been completed. Of these the Department changed 182 of its original decisions either in full or in part.

Of the remaining 244 Stage 2 applications, 162 reviews have been completed. Of these the Department changed 28 of its original decisions either in full or in part.

Neonicotinoid Pesticides

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she has any plans to introduce a ban on the sale or use of neonicotinoid pesticides.

(AQW 20402/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department is working with the three other devolved administrations on this issue, as the European Commission have requested views on the future of neonicotinoid pesticides on a member state basis. My officials are also liaising with their counterparts in the south.

Given the environmental and economic concerns relating to neonicotinoids, it is vital to take a proportionate and evidencebased approach to this issue, considering all of the many factors that affect bee populations. Therefore, DEFRA has commissioned field trials, to assess the impact on bees, which will produce final results and evidence within the next few months.

The vast majority of neonicotinoids are used for the treatment of seeds and their use here in the north is relatively limited. Pesticide usage statistics from 2010, provided by the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute, indicate that the neonicotinoids were used for seed treatment on 0.6% of the agricultural land area in the north of Ireland.

Ash Dieback Disease: Hurling Stick Manufacture

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what discussions she has had with An Cumann LúthCleas Gael on the supply of ash for the manufacture of camáin (hurling sticks) and the difficulties caused by the outbreak of ash dieback disease.

(AQW 20494/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: At present I have had no discussions with An Cumann LúthCleas Gael about the supply of ash for hurley making. However I met hurley stick makers and other forestry stakeholders at a meeting in October last year in Armagh. I explained the options open to us to prevent Chalara ash dieback becoming established here and I learnt from the hurley makers that there were regular imports of ash logs mainly for hurley sticks and for fire wood.

As this is a potential pathway for the introduction of Chalara ash dieback disease I explained that I thought this was an unacceptable risk to Ireland and that I intended to work closely with the authorities in the south along the lines of a "fortress Ireland" approach. The legislation which I introduced on the 6 November meant that ash can only be imported under certain technical conditions as set out in the order. I believe this is a proportionate response to the risk of introducing disease in wood which will allow manufacturers to continue producing hurley sticks.

Similar legislation has been made in the Dáil.

Northern Ireland Countryside Management Scheme Payments

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what the steps are being taken by her Department to ensure there are no further delays to the Northern Ireland Countryside Management Scheme payments. (AQW 20511/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department has taken a number of steps to ensure more timely payments are made under the NI Countryside Management Scheme (NICMS).

One of the main reasons for delayed payments for 2010 claims was that the number of inspections had to be increased in-line with EU legislation. This was because a high level of farmer non-compliance and over-declaration was detected at initial scheme inspections. In response to this my Department has assisted farmers to help them meet the management requirements of their scheme agreement.

Subsequently we have made good progress with NICMS payments for 2011 claims. At 28 February last year, 85% payments had been made for 2010 claims, whereas we had paid 99% of claims at the same date this year. This improvement is, in part, due to my decision last year to reduce the number of new applications which were progressed to agreement stage.

My Department has already started inspecting 2012 claims and payments will begin once inspections are complete. We plan to start making 2012 payments in May, which is four months earlier than the 2011 claims commenced last year.

Badger Sett Surveys

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail (i) the total number of farmers in the 100 square kilometre area between Banbridge and Rathfriland who received letters asking for their permission for the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute to conduct badger sett surveys on their land; and (ii) the total number of (a) positive; and (b) negative responses received to date from those farmers.

(AQW 20512/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Letters issued to 619 farmers in the 100km² area between Banbridge and Rathfriland seeking their permission for AFBI to conduct a badger sett survey on their land.

To date, 295 (47.7%) 'Yes' responses and 49 (7.9%) 'No' responses have been received with a further 16 letters returned as undeliverable.

Permissions continue to be received daily and, in order to encourage timely responses and to maximise the number of permissions received, DARD Direct are phoning those landowners who have still to respond and a reminder letter also issued on 1 March 2013.

Farm Safety

Mr Moutray asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what plans her Department has to introduce a funding programme aimed at farming families which would allow the implementation of Health and Safety measures on farms. (AQO 3561/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In November 2012 the Farm Safety Partnership, which incorporates representatives from my Department, the Health and Safety Executive for Northern Ireland (HSENI), Ulster Farmers Union (UFU), National Farmers Union Mutual (NFUM) and Young Farmers' Club of Ulster (YFCU) launched the Farm Safety Action Plan to look at ways to significantly reduce work related deaths, injuries and illnesses on farms and to drive up health and safety standards on farms.

One area where the Partnership has been exploring is the potential for financial assistance to farmers to promote improved health and safety on farms and I expect a report on its findings to come forward in the near future. I will give serious and immediate consideration to any recommendations from the Farm Safety Partnership in the short and medium term to fund or resource any proposals that will improve health and safety on our farms.

However it is my belief that providing funding for equipment is only part of the answer and that Health and Safety awareness must be incorporated into the day to day activities of the entire farm family. My Department has developed a new health and safety short course directed towards the farming family and this is currently being rolled out across the north and I would encourage as many farmers and family members to enrol on this course as soon as possible.

Farm Maps

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what action she is taking to rectify the inaccurate maps that have been sent out to farmers for the 2013 Single Farm Payments applications. (AQO 3570/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As a result of a technical fault, 3560 farm business maps were created which had a significant number of fields missing when compared to the farmer's previous Single Application Form. The problem is confined to maps processed as part of the last batch of maps (but a minority of that batch) which issued on 6 February.

This technical problem has now been repaired. I have issued a Press Release advising affected farmers that amended maps are available on-line and via DARD Direct offices. Additionally, their Single Application Form will be printed and sent out 2 weeks later than originally planned to provide additional time to advise of any necessary map adjustments, which can be preprinted with the updates farmers report. My Department has written to all affected farmers advising them of this.

Rural Development Programme: Grants

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the effectiveness of the Joint Committees and Local Action Groups in delivering Rural Development Programme grants. (AQO 3566/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Undoubtedly the economic climate has greatly affected the implementation of Axis 3 however the Clusters have now spent almost £40m of the total £100m budget and most are now nearing 100% commitment of all project funds. Over 718 projects are complete with an overall investment to date of £29m and this has helped to create almost 300 much needed jobs in rural areas. More importantly many rural communities and businesses are being sustained by Axis 3 of the Rural Development Programme through these difficult times and are being provided with the infrastructure and equipment to maximise recovery.

But I am not being complacent and I have introduced monthly monitoring with a quarterly review of expenditure targets to ensure that all Clusters are achieving their targeted spend and where underspend is identified that these funds are removed and utilised effectively across the programme to ensure that no funds are returned to Brussels.

Broadband: North-West

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline her plans for improving rural broadband to assist rural dwellers in the North West.

(AQO 3568/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I have agreed to commit £5m to the Broadband Delivery UK project to be used exclusively to target rural areas of high deprivation that currently have no fixed wire infrastructure to access broadband to try and target disadvantage in rural areas. These funds are in addition to the £2.5m my Department has already invested in the Next Generation Broadband project.

My priority is to target areas of deprivation using the multiple deprivation indicators to give rural dwellers the opportunity to be part of the digital revolution and hopefully benefit through better access to the internet and online services. This in turn will give rural businesses and dwellers the opportunity to benefit in real terms from the expansion of the digital world. It is fundamental that we put in place this important infrastructure so that rural areas are not disadvantaged. I know rural parts of the North West will be amongst those that will benefit from this investment.

Puppy Farms

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how her Department is tackling the issue of puppy farms

(AQO 3569/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Welfare of Animals (Dog Breeding Establishments and Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 2013 was passed by the Assembly on Monday 18 February 2013 and will come into operation here on 1 April 2013.

The Regulations will provide commercial dog breeders with clear standards which they must meet and maintain to ensure the welfare of all breeding bitches, stud dogs and pups in the establishment. The Regulations provide powers for action to be taken where a breeder does not meet these standards. I have ensured that Council inspectors have powers to take action and to prosecute any commercial breeder who is operating in sub-standard conditions.

I am confident that the new enforcement powers and penalties will act as a deterrent to those taking part in illegal dog breeding activities.

I appreciate that regulation alone will not stop so called "puppy farming". This will take a concerted effort by members of the public, future dog owners, good breeders and enforcement agencies working together to identify breeders, licensed or unlicensed, who put financial gain before the welfare needs of their dogs and pups. However, I believe that the new enforcement powers and tough penalties introduced by the new Regulations send out a clear message that such activities will not be tolerated. As I said in the Chamber on Monday 18 February, working together we can and will stop puppy farming.

Agrifood: Meat Contamination

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how the Veterinary Inspection Service is collaborating with Food Standards Agency officials in relation to dealing with meat contamination concerns in the agrifood sector. (AQO 3571/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Food Standards Agency in Northern Ireland (FSA NI) is the competent authority in matters of food safety and authenticity, while DARD delivers meat hygiene official controls on FSA's behalf in approved slaughterhouses, cutting plants and game handling establishments, and hygiene inspections on dairy and egg farms. These activities are governed by Service Level Agreements with the FSA.

The response between Northern Ireland Departments has been co-ordinated through the Food and Feed Incident Management Group, which is chaired by my Chief Veterinary Officer. The Group has met a number of times.

In operational matters, senior officials from DARD and FSA in NI have maintained regular formal and informal contact throughout the incident. The Food and Feed Incident Advisory Panel, chaired by the Food Standards Agency and on which Veterinary Service in represented, has met several times. There is ongoing and regular liaison between FSA and Veterinary Service officials at all levels of both organisations.

Officials from DARD Veterinary Service and Agri-food Inspection Branch also assist the FSA with additional specific inspections on request. In this respect, Veterinary Service staff have carried out a comprehensive round of inspections of all local red meat cutting plants, in the second half of February, and with AfIB, have assisted FSA with a number of investigations during this recent incident.

Bovine Viral Diarrhoea

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what compensation arrangements are being put in place to deal with young calves classified as Persistently Infected from Bovine Viral Diarrhoea. (AQO 3572/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: At farm level, production diseases such as BVD can have a significant impact on productivity. Such diseases are not subject to national control programmes and because their impacts are mainly at farm level, it is the responsibility of industry to take the lead in tackling them.

I therefore welcome the launch last year of Animal Health and Welfare NI, which has been set up by industry to lead on the development and promotion of initiatives to tackle such diseases.

In support of this industry-led initiative I was pleased to announce that my Department will provide start-up funding to help Animal Health and Welfare NI deliver its BVD eradication programme and to develop a Johne's Disease control programme.

I have no plans to incentivise farmers who participate in the AHWNI BVD eradication programme to dispose of 'persistently infected' calves. This issue did not form part of AHWNI's Strategic Plan on which the economic appraisal was based. However, the proposed start-up funding to AHWNI includes support to subsidise the cost of confirmatory testing of positive animals and their dams. The aim of this testing is to confirm that such animals are PI animals, and not transiently infected, before they are sent to slaughter.

The success of AHWNI's BVD initiative will depend on farmers' buy-in, not just in terms of their participation in the voluntary testing, but also in terms of their willingness to take the necessary actions to deal with infected animals.

Food Exports

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the consequences for the agriculture industry from expanding its place in the global food marketplace. (AQO 3573/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The agri-food industry here has shown steady growth over the last decade with the food and drink processing industry alone achieving sales of £4bn in 2011, mostly in external markets. We are all aware, and concerned, about the dramatic fall in farm incomes in 2012. This should be viewed as a setback, and should not deflect our desire to continue to sustainably expand the industry.

The world's population is continuing to grow, with increasing demands for the type of food that we produce – high quality meat and dairy products in particular, and I know that our food companies are well set to meet these opportunities. However, food companies will only be able to meet the rising demand in the market if they have a sustainable supply of raw materials. We know we have producers with the skills and passion to deliver, but above all they need to be profitable.

Growth in itself will not guarantee profitability. Further global expansion will bring challenges such as increased exposure to rising feed and fuel costs, tailoring product to the exacting demands of different markets, stiff competition from other growing economies, and the need to balance growth with environmental sustainability.

To reap the potential rewards of growth, the industry needs to become more efficient, productive and innovative; it needs to be able to stand over the quality, safety and traceability of its produce and also to work more closely with others in the supply chain

I expect these and other issues to be covered by the Agri-Food Strategy Board when it releases its report in the coming weeks.

Food: Local Produce

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in light of the recent horse meat scandal, what additional resources she will provide to encourage shoppers to buy local produce. (AQO 3574/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: This whole issue has been regrettable and my Department continues to work with the Food Standards Agency who lead on the investigation relating to the horse meat issue. To date, and to the best of my knowledge, the horsemeat issue has had a limited impact on the industry here in the North as it does not reflect on the high quality and traceability of our own locally produced beef and lamb. I will continue to do all that I can to ensure that consumers are aware that our beef and lamb are second to none and that they should have every confidence in the supply chain.

My Department will be reopening the NI Regional Food Programme in March which will allow eligible agri-food trade and representative bodies to apply for financial assistance relating to the delivery of agri-food initiatives. The predominant aim of the Regional Food Programme is to raise the awareness of quality, regional food both amongst domestic consumers and international markets, and to promote its consumption by providing financial support in the following four key areas – regional fairs/shows, information programmes, award ceremonies, seminars/workshops. Successful applications to the programme can obtain up to 50% financial contribution on eligible expenditure.

The objectives of the programme are to assist the local agri-food industry to develop and expand profitable and sustainable markets, to develop a thriving rural economy by raising the profile of local quality food and to increase co-operation and communication between all sectors of the local food industry, therefore providing a united front to buyers and consumers. By reopening the programme there will be a great opportunity for the industry to work together to highlight the benefits of purchasing local produce.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

DCAL: Projects Delivered

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the projects her Department and its arm's-lengths bodies have delivered since May 2007, broken down by constituency.

(AQW 18881/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): Information in the form requested is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Review of Public Administration

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure which departmental functions will be transferred to local government under the Review of Public Administration.

(AQW 18947/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The functions which my Department plan to transfer are as follows:

Armagh County Museum

Armagh County Museum will transfer to the new Armagh/ Banbridge/ Craigavon Council.

Water Recreation Sites

Twenty water recreation sites will transfer to local councils. These are small sites which complement other leisure facilities owned by councils.

Northern Ireland Museums Council (NIMC)

The NIMC provides a support service to local government and independent museums. My department is currently completing a review of NIMC as part of its wider review of Arm's Length bodies, which includes consideration of whether any of its functions should transfer to local government.

Ice Hockey Teams

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what funding opportunities are available to ice hockey teams. (AQW 19018/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport NI, which is an arm's length body of my Department and distributes funding to sport in the north of Ireland, has advised that it currently has no funding opportunities available for ice hockey teams.

However, Ice hockey teams that are affiliated to Ice Hockey UK, the recognised governing body of the sport in the north of Ireland, may be eligible to apply for future Exchequer and Lottery funded programmes offered by Sport NI. Ice hockey clubs can register via the Sport NI website to receive updates on future funding opportunities as they arise.

Lough Erne: Pike

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, in relation to the motion that was carried in the Assembly on 21 February 2012, for her assessment of how the inclusion of an indigenous fish section in the Department's Action Plan is relevant to current actions in Lough Erne in relation to pike.

(AQW 19177/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: DCAL is currently taking steps to develop a strategic plan for all fish stocks on Lough Erne. The Department will use scientific advice as the basis for the sustainable management of fish stocks on the Erne and consideration will be given to all factors that may impact on stocks, including commercial fishing.

Cycling Clubs: Funding

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the funding provided to cycling clubs in each of the last five years.

(AQW 19226/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Over the last five financial years, up to 31 March 2012, Sport NI has provided exchequer funding directly to three cycling clubs totalling £22,075. The details are provided in the table below: -

Date	Club Name	Programme	Amount
11/2/2010	Clann Eireann Cycling Club	Awards for Sport	£1,590
11/2/2010	Newry Wheelers Cycling Club	Awards for Sport	£3,161
16/12/2010	Ballymoney Cycling Club	Sport Matters: Capital and Equipment Programme	£17,324

Cycling

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what her Department has done to develop the sport of cycling. (AQW 19227/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Development of the sport of cycling in the north of Ireland is the responsibility of the governing body of the sport, Cycling Ulster. However, Sport NI, an arm's length body of my Department, has provided both exchequer and lottery funding of £1,119,797 to help Cycling Ulster develop the sport in the north over the last five financial years.

In addition, Sport NI provides on-going advice and guidance to Cycling Ulster on a range of development matters, including strategy development, governance, talented athlete support, club development and coaching standards.

Boxing

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how many registered boxing clubs there are in each constituency. (AQW 19257/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: There are a total of one hundred and one boxing clubs across the north of Ireland which DCAL understands are currently affiliated to the governing body for the sport, the Irish Amateur Boxing Association (IABA). The numbers affiliated to the IABA within each constituency are detailed below: -

Constituency	Number of Clubs
Belfast East	2
Belfast North	10
Belfast South	3

Foyle Cup

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she would consider providing departmental funding for the Foyle Cup Annual Football Tournament.

(AQW 20010/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, through the NI Tourist Board (NITB), is responsible for events policy including provision of support and funding to events including sporting events such as the Foyle Cup. Consideration may be given to future potential funding in the context of my Department's priority of "Promoting Equality and Tackling Poverty and Social Exclusion.

Department of Education

Working Class Protestant Children

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Education how the Education and Skills Authority will meet the needs of working class Protestant children.

(AQW 20082/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): I welcome the fact that eventually I have been asked by a unionist representative, about the needs of protestant working class children in regards to the role of ESA.

When ESA is established it will be with a balanced and representative membership incorporating the representatives of Transferors of Controlled Schools. It will be equipped with statutory responsibilities for raising standards and school improvement. Therefore, the main way that ESA shall help Protestant working class children will be by working to improve their educational outcomes. Indeed, ESA will be a regional organisation with the capacity to address our uneven profile of educational achievement and performance – within which pockets of disadvantage and underachievement have prevailed. It will bring a common approach to support services focussing on equality and consistency.

In addition to this, ESA shall also be a delivery organisation that, for the first time, has a statutory responsibility for coherent and strategic area-planning of educational provision. It will also provide a regional School Development Service and Governor Support Service.

Finally, ESA shall be supported in its functions by the sectoral body for Controlled Schools. This body will act as advocate and representative for the interests of its sector to both DE and ESA.

Area Planning Process: Further and Higher Education Colleges

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education whether he will include Further and Higher Education Colleges in the Area Planning Process; and why they have not been included to date.

(AQW 20092/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Further and Higher Education Colleges are not the responsibility of my Department. However, educational provision at these facilities may have an impact on Area Planning at post-primary level.

One of the objectives of the Terms of Reference for Area Planning is to take full account of appropriate and relevant FE sector provision for 14-19 year olds. As I stated in my statement to the Assembly on 26 February, the draft post-primary plans provide the foundation on which to move forward and will be further developed to ensure they comply with the Terms of Reference

Literacy and Numeracy

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education, in light of the recent Northern Ireland Audit Office report into literacy and numeracy levels and given that the 2011 Trends in International Mathematics and Science Study and Progress in International Reading Literacy Study results show that 76 percent of pupils learning maths were taught by teachers whose main area of study was primary education and did not include a maths specialisation, how his Department intends to raise standards. (AQW 20116/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Our pupils performed exceptionally well in the recently published Trends in International Maths and Science Study (TIMSS) and Progress in International Reading Literacy Study (PIRLS). Our primary pupils were ranked the highest performing English speaking region in the world in both reading (ranked 5th out of 45 countries) and numeracy (ranked 6th out of 50 countries). Whilst the TIMSS study reported that 76 per cent of Year 6 pupils here were taught mathematics by teachers whose main area of study was primary education without specialisation in mathematics, it also reported that 91 per cent of pupils were taught by teachers who felt 'very well prepared' to teach mathematics.

The Department sets the minimum entry requirements for courses of Initial Teacher Education (ITE) and has determined that all entrants to primary education courses must have achieved a standard equivalent to a GCSE Grade C or higher in English or English language, mathematics and in a science subject. While these are the minimum entry requirements, entry to ITE courses here is highly competitive and B Ed students generally have higher qualifications than the minimum entry requirement.

The ETI institutional inspection reports from 2009 (B Ed programmes) and 2010 (PGCE) which focused on the preparation of student teachers to develop literacy and numeracy skills amongst pupils through their teaching practice found explicit differentiation within the numeracy session between the learning intentions for the students and those for the children; the high importance given to the link between the students' own mathematical confidence and competence and their ability to teach numeracy effectively and the provision of remedial support for those students who have particular difficulties with aspects of mathematics.

I have in place a coherent set of policies designed to improve educational outcomes for young people and to address the root causes when pupils are not achieving to their full potential. These policies are working but the challenge now is to ensure their effective implementation by all schools so that the improvement in educational outcomes continues, especially for pupils in socially deprived areas.

In addition, I launched an advertising campaign "Education Works" in September 2012. The campaign is of vital importance and aims to raise the value we, as a society, place on education. It aims to inform and engage all parents, in particular those from the most disadvantaged backgrounds, to become more involved in their child's education. It is also intended to impact upon home/family and attitudinal factors by providing parents with consistent, authoritative information on the importance of education and the steps they can take to support their child in achieving good educational outcomes.

Specific Departmental interventions, such as the Delivering Social Change project which will recruit 230 additional teachers, are intended to have a positive impact on the raising-standards agenda by improving the educational outcomes for pupils who are most at risk of underachieving.

On the 1 March I announced an additional £3m to be targeted at raising educational standards in each of the next two years. £1m per year will be used in developing literacy and numeracy programmes in disadvantaged areas. A further £2m per year will be used to develop community initiatives to increase family and community involvement in education and will be awarded to projects that can identify schemes which meet the priorities of my Department and the Programme for Government targets set by the Executive for educational improvement.

Legal Advice Costs

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how much his Department has spent on legal advice in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 20128/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The table below sets out how much my Department has spent on legal advice in each of the last three financial years. This includes notional costs in relation to the Departmental Solicitors Office (DSO), which are identified separately and the movement in legal provisions which is included in Other legal below. The credit figure in 2011-12 is due to the write back of a number of provisions relating to legal costs which were deemed no longer necessary.

	DSO Notional Fees £'000	Other legal £'000	Total legal £'000
2009-10	197	5	202
2010-11	108	110	218
2011-12	109	(68)	41

End Child Poverty Campaign

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the correlation between the findings of the recently published report by the End Child Poverty campaign and the level of educational underachievement. (AQW 20156/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Social background is the strongest factor impacting on attainment here. I note the findings of the End Child Poverty campaign report, which again underlines the strong correlation between social background and attainment. I note particularly that the West Belfast parliamentary constituency has the highest level of child poverty in the north of Ireland and also had the lowest level of pupils achieving 5 or more GCSEs A*-C (or equivalent), including English and Maths in 2011.

I am determined to break the link between disadvantage and underachievement - through encouraging schools to set high expectations for their pupils and supporting and, where necessary, challenging schools to improve. I have a coherent suite of policies in place to raise standards and tackle educational underachievement in schools. These policies include the school improvement policy, the literacy and numeracy strategy, the revised curriculum, entitlement framework, the framework for early years education and learning and the SEN and inclusion review.

However, the continued use of academic selection by grammar schools is a barrier to addressing underachievement in disadvantaged communities. It disadvantages children from those communities even further as evidenced by the disproportionately low number of pupils entitled to free school meals who attend grammar schools. It damages children's confidence, their motivation to learn, and lowers their expectations of themselves contributing to the high levels of underachievement we are seeking to tackle. That is why academic selection needs to end now and my Department is working to bring that about.

In addition to my policies, my Department provides a range of assistance, programmes and services to ensure that disadvantaged children have access to and can fully participate in school life, obtain formal qualifications, enhance their employment opportunities and ultimately provide a route out of poverty. These include the provision of Free School Meals and clothing allowances and a range of programmes targeted at socially deprived areas, including Sure Start, extended schools, full service provision, Achieving Belfast and Achieving Derry Bright Futures and nurture units.

School Mergers

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Education to set out the legal position in relation to schools from different sectors who wish to merge; and whether he has any plans to revisit this in light of Area Planning. (AQW 20159/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Under current legislation there is nothing to preclude schools of different management types merging. The legislative vehicle for such a merger would be a development proposal under Article 14 of the Education and Libraries (NI) Order 1986.

This would require the publication of a development proposal which should specify the size, location and management type of the proposed new school. The management type would have to draw from those covered by current legislation which are controlled (including controlled integrated), Catholic maintained, grant-maintained integrated or voluntary maintained. There is no provision for hybrid status.

I have no plans to change the legislative provision on this issue at this time. However, I will keep this under review in light of whatever recommendations emerge from the Shared Education Advisory Group.

Integrated Education

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education how his Department has delivered on the Belfast Agreement commitment to facilitate the development of integrated education.

(AQW 20219/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: As well as the commitment made in the Belfast Agreement, the Department of Education also has a statutory duty to encourage and facilitate the development of integrated education, which was introduced in 1989. I take that statutory duty, and the subsequent commitment made in the Belfast Agreement, very seriously.

The integrated education sector is one that has seen considerable growth. Since the signing of the Belfast Agreement in 1998, the numbers of pupils availing of integrated education has increased from 11,382 to 21,031 according to the latest school census figures. The number of integrated schools has also increased from 40 in 1998 to 62 in 2013.

To help with the facilitation of integrated education, my Department provides funding to the Council for Integrated Education (NICIE) to assist the development of integrated schools for public benefit. Funding of £628k has been allocated for 2012/13.

In addition, DE also provides funding to help schools with the process of transformation to integrated status. This assists schools in the initial stages of the transformation process and with the employment of a teacher, from the minority community in the school, to assist with religious education. The budget available for 2012/13 is £261k.

I recognise the vital and valuable contribution that the integrated sector, together with all other sectors of education, makes to building a peaceful and stable future for our children.

However, as is the case for all of the other education sectors, my Department responds to parental demand for integrated education. It funds integrated schools that are robust, do not involve unreasonable public expenditure and meet the specified criteria. It does not favour one education sector over another.

Professional Qualification for Headship

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 19187/11-15, whether he intends to make the Professional Qualification for Headship qualification mandatory; and when this will occur. (AQW 20243/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: During school inspections the Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI) assesses the effectiveness of leadership and management but does not routinely investigate which qualifications the principal may or may not hold. The most recent summary of ETI evaluations of leadership and management can be found in the Chief Inspector's report for 2010-2012

However, ETI has recently completed a three year review of school leadership development with a main focus on the Professional Qualification for Headship (PQH) programme. The report is being finalised and a publication date will be advised shortly.

In light of:-

- the development of a new professional support service in the Education and Skills Authority (ESA);
- The current review of teacher education encompassing leadership development; and
- The challenging financial climate

the Department plans to review leadership programmes to ensure that they continue to be responsive to the needs of schools and reflect the challenges of education in the 21st century.

These deliberations will inform any decisions on making leadership programmes mandatory.

Schools: Review of Computer Based Assessment System

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 19583/11-15, what is the anticipated timescale for the completion of the review.

(AQW 20244/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have asked for all elements of the review to be completed before June 2013 to allow communication on the way forward in good time for the autumn term of 2013.

Professional Qualification for Headship

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the effectiveness of the leadership across the 449 schools where the Principals hold a Professional Qualification for Headship qualification. (AQW 20245/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: During school inspections the Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI) assesses the effectiveness of leadership and management but does not routinely investigate which qualifications the principal may or may not hold. The most recent summary of ETI evaluations of leadership and management can be found in the Chief Inspector's report for 2010-2012 the Department plans to review leadership programmes to ensure that they continue to be responsive to the needs of schools and reflect the challenges of education in the 21st century.

These deliberations will inform any decisions on making leadership programmes mandatory.

Learning Support Units: South Eastern Area

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 19963/11-15, for his assessment of the distribution of Learning Support Units within the controlled sector in the South Eastern area in relation to geographic convenience; and how he proposes to address any existing deficit.

(AQW 20259/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: It is the Education and Library Boards which are responsible under special education legislation for identifying, assessing and, in appropriate cases, making special educational provision for children with special educational needs in their areas. The distribution of Learning Support Units in the South Eastern Education and Library Board (SEELB) area is, therefore, the responsibility of that board.

The SEELB has advised that the location of Units in the controlled sector should be viewed in the context of other specialist provision namely;

- i Special Schools for pupils with moderate learning difficulties located at Beechlawn Special School, Hillsborough; Killard House Special School, Donaghadee and Longstone Special School, Dundonald;
- ii. Specialist provision for pupils with social communication difficulties including Autistic Specrum Disorder located at The High School, Ballynahinch; Fort Hill Integrated College, Lisburn and Priory Integrated College, Holywood.

The Board reviews the number, type and location of all Learning Support Units and specialist provision on an annual basis.

School Mergers

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education what priority he places on the identification of schools as suitable for merger or transformation to integrated status as a priority; and how his Department is supporting schools through this process. (AQW 20264/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education does not identify schools as suitable for merger or transformation to integrated status. The impetus for transformation comes from a number of sources, for example, the school Board of Governors, Principal, staff or parents, or the wider community.

However the Department does provide funding to help schools with the process of transformation to integrated status. This assists schools in the initial stages of the transformation process, and with the employment of a teacher from the minority community in the school to assist with religious education. The budget available for 2012/13 was £261k.

The Department also funds the NI Council for Integrated Education (NICIE) to promote, encourage and facilitate integrated education. This includes the provision of support for transformation as appropriate.

Area Planning Process

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education what discussions he has had with the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development on ensuring that the area planning process is rural proofed.

(AQW 20266/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department's Sustainable Schools Policy is the framework used for assessing the viability and long term sustainability of schools and it is a key driver for the Area Planning process.

The policy was assessed against the Rural Development Council's rural proofing checklist set out in its report, Striking the Balance, before publication in 2009 and no adverse impact was identified. My Department also engaged with officials from the Rural Policy Branch of the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development when the policy was being developed to ensure that it adequately addressed rural needs.

The policy recognises the needs of rural communities and this is reflected in the lower enrolment threshold for rural primary schools and the accessibility criterion which provides guidance on home to school travel times.

I fully appreciate the central place a school has for many communities, both urban and rural, and this is recognised explicitly in the Sustainable School Policy through the Strong Links with the Community criterion.

School Mergers

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education what consideration will be given to the merger of schools across sectors as a way of ensuring access to education provision.

(AQW 20267/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have said, and it is specified in the Terms of Reference for Area Planning, that I would welcome realistic, innovative and creative solutions to address need, including opportunities for shared schooling on a cross sectoral basis which maximises the use and sharing of the existing schools estate.

It is a matter for school managing authorities in the first instance to identify where these opportunities exist. Any proposals brought forward to my Department will be given serious consideration, but will need to align with Area Planning, be sustainable, have the support of the school management, parents and the local community and conform to current legislation.

I await the report from the independent Ministerial Advisory Group on advancing Shared Education, which is due with me very shortly. Any recommendations arising from that report will be taken into consideration as area planning develops.

Education: Professional Support

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail the £25m savings from the budget for professional support. (AQW 20278/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The £25m of recurring savings from the budget for professional support are to be delivered from the following areas:

DE: Administration and Management Costs

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail the make up of the £15m savings being made per year from administration and management costs and the years in which the savings will be achieved. (AQW 20279/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department's published Savings Delivery Plan details the areas where savings are to be delivered across the 4 year Budget Period 2011-15. The table below details out the areas from where the administration and management costs savings are to be delivered:

£m

Education and Library Boards: Practice and Costs

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail the variation in practice and costs across each of the Education and Library Boards.

(AQW 20280/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The reports prepared by the Performance and Efficiency Delivery Unit set out examples of variation in practice and costs across a range of services provided by the Education and Library Boards.

These reports have been published on the Department's website and placed in the Assembly Library.

Lisnaskea High School

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education whether a Community Impact Assessment will be carried out on the possible closure of Lisnaskea High School; and to outline the rational behind this decision. (AQW 20313/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: As I advised the Member on 25 February, in my answer to his earlier question on this issue, I am aware that the Western Education and Library Board is currently processing a statutory Development Proposal (DP) to support the merger of Lisnaskea High School with Devenish College. However, until a Proposal is published, the issues involved are entirely a matter for the Western Board to consider.

Area Planning Process: Rural Proofing Training

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Education how many staff from (i) the Education and Library Boards; (ii) the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools; (iii) his Department have undergone rural proofing training; and how many of these staff are involved in Area Planning.

(AQW 20337/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The table below details the number of staff who have undergone Rural Proofing training and how many of these staff are involved in Area Planning:

	(i) ELBs	(ii) CCMS	(iii) DE
Attended Rural Proofing training	9	0	2
Involved in Area Planning	8	n/a	0

Horse Meat in Food Products: School Meals

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education what steps are being taken to ensure that school meals do not contain products contaminated with horse meat.

(AQW 20343/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: It is important to note that the Food Standards Agency (FSA) has advised that there is no reason or evidence to suspect that there is a food safety risk from products which contain horsemeat or horsemeat DNA. However, it is not acceptable that mislabelled frozen meat products have been found in the food supply chain.

In line with advice provided by the FSA, I have written to the Chief Executives of the Education and Library Boards (ELBs) to emphasise that, whilst there is no evidence that products which contain horsemeat or horse DNA pose a food safety risk, in circumstances where a Board is made aware that mislabelled frozen meat products are being supplied to schools it is imperative that immediate action is taken by the ELB to ensure these products are withdrawn and removed from school menus.

The ELBs remain in close contact with their suppliers to ensure that they are updated as soon as a supplier is made aware that a product may be mislabelled and that the necessary action is taken. I am aware that the ELBs wrote to schools and school meals kitchens recently, following the decision by a supplier to withdraw certain burger items pending receipt of test results, to advise that these products must not be used and will be removed by the supplier.

The Department has also written to schools in the voluntary grammar and grant maintained integrated sectors to advise that where a school is made aware that mislabelled frozen meat products are being supplied to schools immediate action should be taken by the school to ensure these products are withdrawn and removed from school menus.

I have agreed that the Food Standards Agency will circulate to the Department and the Boards any communications in relation to the horsemeat incident/investigation.

I consider that through this approach we can ensure collectively that early action is taken to seek to ensure that mislabelled products are not supplied to schools.

Area Planning Process: Shared Education

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education what action he is taking to encourage shared education within the area planning process, particularly within the legislative process.

(AQW 20368/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Terms of Reference for Area Planning requires engagement across all sectors and explicitly encourages creative and innovative solutions, including opportunities for shared schooling across sectors. The degrees of sharing may, however, be different to reflect local circumstances.

Area Planning Guidance issued by my Department in February 2012 also emphasises the commitment to shared education, highlighting the need for a willingness to develop more opportunities for sharing of both curricular provision and infrastructure in line with Departmental commitments in the Programme for Government.

I am also awaiting the report of the Ministerial Advisory Group on Shared Education, which is due shortly and I will consider the need for any further guidance in relation to how schools can share education after I have had time to consider their advice.

Area Planning Process: School Mergers

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education when he will issue guidance on how schools from different sectors can merge or share education as part of the Area Planning process.

(AQW 20369/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Terms of Reference for Area Planning requires engagement across all sectors and explicitly encourages creative and innovative solutions, including opportunities for shared schooling across sectors. The degrees of sharing may, however, be different to reflect local circumstances.

Area Planning Guidance issued by my Department in February 2012 also emphasises the commitment to shared education, highlighting the need for a willingness to develop more opportunities for sharing of both curricular provision and infrastructure in line with Departmental commitments in the Programme for Government.

Primary School Pupils: Millisle and Donaghadee

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many children attend primary school in (i) Millisle; and (ii) Donaghadee. (AQW 20371/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There are two primary schools in Donaghadee in 2012/13. These are: Donaghadee Primary School, which has an enrolment of 431 pupils; and,

St Anne's Primary School, which has an enrolment of 46 pupils.

There is one primary school in Millisle, Millisle Primary School. This school recorded an enrolment of 190 pupils in the 2012/13 school census.

Area Based Plans: North Down

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education at what stage of development are the Area Based Plans for (i) primary; and (ii) post-primary schools in North Down.

(AQW 20393/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

(i) Primary Area Plans

The Primary Area Plans I commissioned were received in my Department at the end of January 2013. I have directed the Boards that these be released for consultation on the 19th March, with an extended consultation period open until the end of June. This will allow for wide ranging discussion and further development of the plans.

My intention is that dialogue at local level, taking onboard the lessons learned in the post-primary process will result in more practical and sustainable solutions, including the potential, where appropriate, of increased sharing of accommodation and resources.

(ii) Post-primary Area Plans

Following my statement to the Assembly on 26 February 2013, the revised area plans for post-primary provision were released by the Education and Library Boards. The revised plans for the North Down area are available on the South Eastern Education and Library Board website - http://www.seelb.org.uk/

I have written to each Board outlining my Department's views on their plan and setting out how I plan to move forward. In the coming weeks my officials will meet with the Boards and CCMS to discuss in detail the Department's assessment of the plans and to identify areas where further work is needed.

A Steering Group will be established to assist the Department to co-ordinate and oversee the continuing development of the area plans. My Department will chair this group and it will include representatives from the Controlled, Maintained, Integrated and Irish-medium sectors. The group's work programme will aim to fill the gaps in the current area plans, to embed a single approach to area planning and to identify priority areas for action in the short to medium term.

Area Based Planning

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education how an area is defined under Area Based Planning. (AQW 20396/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards, working with CCMS and engaging with other school sectors, have been tasked with developing strategic plans based on each Board area. Board areas comprise varying numbers of complete District Council areas ranging from one for the Belfast Board area to nine for the North-Eastern Board area.

District Council area level is the lowest level for which official population projections are published. These data, together with schools' census data, provide basic information necessary for projecting the levels of provision required. However, planning authorities may develop local solutions for areas within District Council boundaries providing that these are, in aggregate, consistent with the overall need for places.

Entrepreneurship

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Education what actions he is taking to promote entrepreneurship as a viable career option to children in schools.

(AQW 20399/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Employability, including entrepreneurship, is a key theme underpinning the revised curriculum which aims to better prepare all our young people for all aspects of life and work and enable them to develop as confident and articulate individuals, able to play their full part in our society and economy.

At primary level through the area of Personal Development & Mutual Understanding, pupils are now given opportunities to develop the knowledge, skills, understanding, attitudes and personal qualities related to enterprise and entrepreneurship.

At post-primary level, entrepreneurship is covered under the Employability strand of Learning for Life and Work with a focus on Work in the Local and Global Economy, Career Management and Enterprise and Entrepreneurship. Pupils are given opportunity to reflect on their own skills and areas for self-development; to explore the changing concept of 'career' and various types of jobs, including in the local area; to explore enterprise and entrepreneurship; and to develop and practise some of the skills and attributes associated with being enterprising.

In addition to schools delegated budgets, my Department also provides funding to a number of organisations to provide enterprise, employability and innovation events and programmes either in school or at larger regional events, for both primary and post-primary pupils. These organisations include Young Enterprise, Sentinus, School Employer Connections, Charter Work Experience and a number of Business Education Partnerships. My Department, in partnership with Invest NI, has also provided funding to a number of enterprise/innovation programmes, including the 'Make Your Mark Challenge', as part of Global Entrepreneurship Week, and 'The Stock Market Challenge' event. Such events help to promote an enterprise culture within the classroom and to develop in our young people more innovative and enterprising skills and attitudes that our economy needs.

Dundonald High School

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education to outline the rationale for the proposal to cease education at Dundonald High school from 2014.

(AQW 20403/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Responsibility for planning the Controlled schools' estate is a matter for the Education & Library Boards in the first instance. In the case of Dundonald High School (HS) this is the South-Eastern Education & Library Board (SEELB).

Any proposal to close a school requires publication of a statutory Development Proposal (DP). I understand that at present the Board is conducting a pre-publication consultation on the possible closure of Dundonald HS. This would involve consultation with the school's Board of Governors, parents of pupils at the school and staff at the school, and with other schools which the Board considers might be affected by the proposal. Following this, the Board will decide whether or not to proceed with the DP.

Should the Board decide to proceed, a two month consultation period will follow publication of the DP. This provides the opportunity for all interested parties to comment. It is only after the consultation period, when I have all the pertinent information and the comments received in support of or objecting to the proposal, that I will consider the rationale underpinning it in deciding whether to approve the DP.

Dundonald High School

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education how many pupils left Dundonald High School with five or more GCSEs at grades A*- C, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 20405/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information requested is contained in the table below.

Dundonald High School was subject to a follow-up inspection in October 2012 undertaken by the Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI). The ETI reported that overall, the quality of education provided by the school was inadequate. The areas for improvement identified by the ETI in the report include the need to raise standards across the school, including performance in public examinations.

Based on the findings of this follow-up inspection, the school re-entered the Formal Intervention Process with effect from 17 December 2012. The school had previously been in the Formal Intervention Process from December 2009 to September 2010

Dundonald High School

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education what consultation has been undertaken on the proposal to cease education at Dundonald High School from 2014; and for his assessment of the community response to this proposal. (AQW 20406/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Responsibility for planning the Controlled schools' estate is a matter for the Education & Library Boards in the first instance. In the case of Dundonald High School (HS) this is the South-Eastern Education & Library Board (SEELB).

Any proposal to close a school requires publication of a statutory Development Proposal (DP). I understand that at present the Board is conducting a pre-publication consultation on the possible closure of Dundonald HS. This would involve consultation with the school's Board of Governors, parents of pupils at the school and staff at the school, and with other schools which the Board considers might be affected by the proposal. Following this, the Board will decide whether or not to proceed with the DP.

Should the Board decide to proceed, a two month consultation period will follow publication of the DP. This provides the opportunity for all interested parties to comment. It is only after the consultation period, when I have all the pertinent information and the comments received in support of or objecting to the proposal, that I will consider the rationale underpinning it in deciding whether to approve the DP.

Education and Skills Authority: Headquarters

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education what locations are under consideration for the headquarters of the Education and Skills Authority.

(AQW 20409/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education & Skills Authority will be a regional organisation with a very strong local presence to provide effective support to schools, children and young people. At present any work on future location is focussed on maintaining continuity of service through staff based in their current locations.

It is anticipated that when restructuring is complete, services will be organised to achieve maximum effectiveness. ESA headquarters will be established to support the ESA Chair, ESA Board members and the Chief Executive.

No specific locations for an ESA headquarters are currently under consideration.

Head Teachers

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 19842/11-15, which discussions between departmental officials and unions and employers have been on the position of head teachers; and what the outcomes of these discussions were. (AQW 20480/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There have been discussions about an Efficient Discharge Scheme which would enable Employing Authorities to terminate the employment of teachers of any grade, including principals and vice-principals. There have been no discussions specifically on the position of head teachers.

Pupils Studying Languages

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of pupils who studied (i) French; (ii) German; and (iii) Spanish to GCSE level in schools in the South Belfast constituency, in each of the last three years. (AQW 20490/11-15)

Department for Employment and Learning

University of Ulster: Day Care Nursery, Jordanstown Campus

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Employment and Learning (i) what assistance his Department is providing to staff and students who made use of the childcare facility at the University of Ulster to find alternative arrangements; (ii) what assurances he can give in the absence of a childcare strategy for NI that everyone will now be able to access suitable and affordable alternative arrangements; and (iii) whether he has any concerns that the University of Ulster has broken its contract with students who have paid to study at the University on the basis that it provided childcare facilities. (AQW 19911/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): The University of Ulster has advised that it is to close its university managed childcare facilities in the Magee and Jordanstown campuses from 31 July 2013. The University has reported that the provision was sustaining an ongoing annual deficit of approximately £114k and therefore the University no longer considers it to be economically viable. The University has pointed out that between the two campuses 23 students currently use the childcare facilities

To assist students and staff in their search to find alternative arrangements the University has compiled a list of all nurseries in the relevant areas, their availability and average costs. My officials have also contacted both the Western and Northern Health and Social Care Trusts to determine the extent of alternative childcare provision within a 3 mile radius of the Magee and Jordanstown campuses. There are 12 day nurseries in the Magee campus area and 10 in the Jordanstown campus area. Both Trusts have advised that there are a considerable number of registered childminders within each area. Many of the childcare providers report falling levels of occupancy for full-time places.

The average cost of full-time childcare nursery placements is between £120 and £140 per week at Magee and between £140 and £152.50 per week at Jordanstown. Childminding costs are around £3 to £4 per hour. These costs are in line with that charged by the University.

The package of financial support available to students with childcare responsibilities will remain unchanged. My Department makes available a means tested Childcare Grant to full-time students who have dependent children in registered or approved childcare. Payment is based on actual childcare costs paid in respect of registered or approved childcare for children under 15 (or 17 if the child is registered as having special educational needs). In addition, full time students with dependent children may be entitled to a means tested parent's learning allowance.

The University has advised that it will maintain its current levels of financial support for childcare for those students who are in need. Student parents can apply to the Student Support Fund and are also eligible to apply to the Student Hardship Fund. The amounts awarded are discretionary and dependant on students' individual circumstances. This support is paid irrespective of where the care is provided.

In the case of university staff a Salary Sacrifice Childcare Voucher Scheme is available for staff who use external childcare facilities. Staff are given the option of exchanging part of their gross salary for Childcare Credit voucher credit in order to save on the cost of childcare fees. Because the deduction is from gross salary, staff are effectively using some of their tax and National Insurance contributions to meet childcare costs.

I appreciate that the closures may well inconvenience a small number of staff and students. However, given that the financial support packages available for childcare will be unchanged and also because there is evidence of alternative provision being available locally at a cost similar to that charged by the University for its on-site provision, those affected by the closure should be able to access suitable and affordable alternative arrangements. My officials will continue to monitor the situation to ensure that there are no adverse affects on my Department's objectives to widen participation in higher education.

The University has provided my Department with assurance that it remains committed to its Student Charter including the Charter for Student Support. The University maintains that it is providing financial support for childcare in the form that the vast majority of students prefer, namely direct financial support. Most of the University of Ulster students who are supported for childcare choose to use the direct financial support available in order to avail of childcare facilities at locations which suit their individual needs.

Local Employment Intermediary Service

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether the reach of the Local Employment Intermediary Service is sufficiently cross-community and whether it has been audited in relation to this and its Section 75 obligations. (AQW 19925/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Local Employment Intermediary Service (LEMIS) is a community employment initiative designed to help the "hardest to reach" in the targeted areas of Belfast, Londonderry, Strabane, Newry & Mourne, Moyle and Cookstown find employment. In addition to these areas, LEMIS is also available on an outreach basis throughout Northern Ireland to individuals with a common employability barrier to finding work i.e. the homeless, ex-offenders/ex-prisoners, people with a history of drug/alcohol misuse and care leavers.

Analysis of LEMIS data indicates that the religious background of participants is as expected in each area e.g. the majority of participants in the Greater Shankill are perceived as Protestant while the majority of participants on the City side in Londonderry are perceived as Catholic. In the other less defined areas the religious background of participants tends to be more mixed. All the community organisations who deliver the LEMIS service work together as a network. They meet on a regular basis, formally and informally, to share best practice, help each other and work collaboratively on joint projects. LEMIS data indicates that clients from all the priority groups originally agreed are accessing the service. Section 75 data in respect of religious background, ethnicity, age, marital status, gender, dependents and disability for all LEMIS clients is recorded and collated on a quarterly basis. This information is used to inform the Labour Market bulletins produced by the Department and is copied to the Equality Commission for information.

Higher Education: Student Mothers

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the impact on student mothers and their continuing capacity to avail of higher education, following the decision by the University of Ulster to close the day care nursery at its Jordanstown campus.

(AQW 19940/11-15)

Dr Farry: On 8th February 2013 the University of Ulster confirmed its decision to close its university managed childcare facilities in the Magee and Jordanstown campuses from 31 July 2013. The University has advised that the decision has been taken because the childcare provision has continued to sustain a significant annual deficit of approximately £114k and is therefore no longer economically viable. Also, the University points out that only 14 students use the childcare facilities at the Jordanstown campus with the majority of students with childcare needs choosing to use all direct financial support available in order to avail of childcare facilities closer to their homes/places of residence.

The package of financial support available to students with childcare responsibilities will remain unchanged. My Department makes available a means tested Childcare Grant to full-time students who have dependent children in registered or approved childcare. Payment is based on actual childcare costs paid in respect of children under 15 (or 17 if the child is registered as having special educational needs). A student with one child can receive up to £148.75 a week (85% of actual costs of £175 a week). Full time students with dependent children may also be entitled to a means tested parent's learning allowance.

In addition, the University has advised that it will maintain its current levels of financial support for childcare for those students who are in need. Student parents can apply to the Student Support Fund and are also eligible to apply to the Student Hardship Fund. The amounts awarded are discretionary and dependant on the student's individual circumstances. This support and the services I have mentioned already are paid irrespective of where the care is provided.

To assist students in their search to find alternative arrangements the University has compiled a list of nurseries in the Jordanstown area, their availability and average costs. Also, my Officials have been advised by the Northern Health and Social Care Trust that within 3 miles of the Jordanstown campus there are 10 nurseries registered for 397 places. On occasions these are only running at about 70% of capacity. The average cost ranges between £140 and £152.50 per week which is in line with the £150 charged by the University for a full-time childcare place. There are also 104 childminders registered within the comparable area for 570 places. Most childminders would charge parents £3 - £4 per hour and many are reporting that they do not have their full registered numbers.

I appreciate that the closure may well inconvenience a small number of students. However, given that the financial support package available for childcare is unchanged and also because there is evidence of alternative provision being available locally at a cost similar to that charged by the University for its on-site facility the closure of the childcare unit should not impact adversely on the ability of student mothers to continue their higher education studies.

Dyslexia

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the proportion of young people with a dyslexia related disability admitted to Health Profession courses at the University of Ulster compared to the other faculties of the University, in each of the last three academic years.

(AQW 19975/11-15)

Dr Farry: The table below details the proportion of first year enrolments admitted to courses within the "Subjects Allied to Medicine" subject area, aged 20 and under, at the University of Ulster who have self-declared that they have a dyslexia related difficulty compared to all other courses in each of the last three academic years, for which data are available.

Academic year	Subjects Allied to Medicine	All Other Courses
2009/10	2.4%	2.6%
2010/11	2.0%	2.4%
2011/12	1.5%	3.3%

Notes:

- 1 Information on disability is collected on the basis of a student's self assessment.
- 2 HESA's disability coding frame changed in 2010/11 and therefore the figures for 2009/10 are not directly comparable with the 2010/11 and 2011/12 figures. In 2009/10, students with dyslexia related difficulties are those who assessed themselves as having a "specific learning difficulty e.g. dyslexia." Whilst in 2010/11 and 2011/12 students with dyslexia related difficulties are those who assessed themselves as having a "specific learning difficulty such as dyslexia, dyspraxia or AD(H)D".
- 3 Health Profession Courses at the University of Ulster have been classified as Subjects Allied to Medicine.
- 4 'Young people' have been defined as aged 20 and under.

Employers: Education and Training Requirements

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQO 3267/11-15, to outline what forums are available for employers and professional bodies to identify and articulate their education and training requirements, in order to inform colleges.

(AQW 20013/11-15)

Dr Farry: Skills for Care & Development is the sector skills council for social work, social care and children's services in Northern Ireland. Its Northern Ireland Board, "Workforce Development Partnership" meets every quarter.

The Workforce Development Partnership is made up of representatives from the NI Social Care Council, DHSSPS, DEL, Health Boards, public and private employers and trade unions in the Social Care Sector. It is a representative body which brings the needs of employers in the sector to the attention of the sector skills council.

While Further and Higher education colleges do not attend the Workforce Development Partnership, Gerry Cunningham, Head of Qualifications and Standards, NI Social Care Council meets the colleges on a quarterly basis as part of the post graduate course review.

My officials have also contacted the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety who have confirmed the following.

"The Post Registration Nursing Education Commissioning Group (ECG) provides a forum where any specific training requirements can be raised for discussion and evaluation. Training courses may then be commissioned by the Department as part of the annual ECG Plan. The current ECG Plan does not include any training relating to counselling."

University of Ulster: Childcare Provision

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) whether he submitted a bid for monies from the Executive Childcare Fund to sustain childcare provision at the University of Ulster in Jordanstown; (ii) the outcome; and (iii) if no bid was submitted, to outline the reasons for this.

(AQW 20021/11-15)

Dr Farry: The University of Ulster has taken a decision to close its university managed childcare facilities in the Magee and Jordanstown campuses from 31 July 2013. The University informs that the childcare provision has continued to sustain an annual deficit of approximately £114k and is therefore no longer economically viable. The University points out that 14 students use the childcare facilities at Jordanstown with the majority of students with childcare needs choosing to use the direct financial support available in order to avail of childcare facilities which suit their individual needs.

The University of Ulster is an autonomous body and as such is entirely responsible for its own policies around student services including childcare provision. It would therefore be inappropriate for my Department to bid for funding for such a service.

University of Ulster: Childcare Provision

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the decision by the University of Ulster to close the day care nursery at the Jordanstown campus.

(AQW 20023/11-15)

Dr Farry: The University of Ulster has decided to close its university managed childcare facilities in the Magee and Jordanstown campuses from 31 July 2013. The decision has been taken because the provision has continued to sustain an annual deficit of around £114k and as such the University believes it is no longer economically viable. Also, the University points out that 14 students use the facilities at Jordanstown.

The University has stated that it will maintain its current levels of financial support for childcare for those students who are in need. Student parents can apply to the Student Support Fund and also to the Student Hardship Fund. The amounts awarded are discretionary and dependant on the student's individual circumstances. This support and the sources I have mentioned already are paid irrespective of where the care is provided.

My Department makes available a Childcare Grant to full-time students who have dependent children in registered or approved childcare. The maximum grant differs depending on the circumstances of the student. In addition, full time students with dependent children may be entitled to a means-tested parent's learning allowance.

The Northern Health and Social Care Trust have advised that within 3 miles of the Jordanstown campus there are 10 nurseries registered for 397 places. These are running at about 70% of capacity. The average cost ranges between £140 and £152.50 per week. This is in line with the £150 charged by the University for a full-time place. There are also 104 childminders registered within the comparable area for 570 places. Most childminders would charge parents £3 - £4 per hour, which is on a par with university crèche charges, and many are reporting that they do not have their full registered numbers.

I appreciate that the closure may well inconvenience a small number of students. However, the financial support package available for childcare is unchanged and also there is evidence of alternative provision being available locally at a cost similar to that charged by the University for its on-site facility. The closure of the childcare unit may not, therefore, impact adversely on the ability of student parents to continue their higher education studies. My officials will continue to monitor the situation to ensure that there are no adverse affects on my Department's objectives to widen participation in higher education.

University of Ulster: Childcare Provision

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how the decision by the University of Ulster to close the day care nursery at the Jordanstown campus correlates with his Department's target of widening participation in higher education. (AQW 20025/11-15)

Dr Farry: Widening Participation in Higher Education by students from those groups which are currently under-represented, in particular students from disadvantaged backgrounds continues to be a key priority for my Department. Last September, I was pleased to launch Access to Success the regional strategy for widening participation in higher education. The vision of this strategy is that any individual in Northern Ireland should be able to gain access to the higher education that is right for them, irrespective of their personal circumstances.

The University of Ulster argues that it took a decision to close its university managed childcare facilities in the Magee and Jordanstown campuses from 31 July 2013 because the provision sustains an annual deficit of approximately £114k and is therefore no longer considered economically viable. The University points out that 14 students use the childcare facilities at the Jordanstown campus.

I appreciate that the closure of the childcare facilities may inconvenience a small number of students. However, because of the financial support which is currently available to students, and also because alternative childcare provision is available locally at a cost similar to that currently charged by the University, the closure may not impact adversely on my Department's objective to widen participation in higher education. My officials will continue to monitor the situation to ensure that there are no adverse affects on my Department's objectives to widen participation in higher education.

The package of financial support available to students with childcare responsibilities will remain unchanged. My Department makes available a means tested Childcare Grant to full-time students who have dependent children in registered or approved childcare. Payment is based on actual childcare costs paid in respect of registered or approved childcare for children under 15 (or 17 if the child is registered as having special educational needs). In addition, full time students with dependent children may be entitled to a means tested parent's learning allowance.

The University has stated that it remains committed to providing direct financial support for childcare, which is the expressed preference of the majority of eligible students. Student parents can apply directly to the university's Student Support Fund and/or Student Hardship Fund. The amounts awarded are discretionary and dependant on students' individual circumstances. All of the available support is paid irrespective of where care is provided. This allows students more flexibility to choose the childcare provision which best meets their needs and to avail of childcare facilities closer to their homes.

My officials have been advised by the Northern Health and Social Care Trust that there is a range of available nursery provision within 3 miles of the Jordanstown campus, some of which are operating at about 70% of capacity. The average nursery cost ranges between £140 and £152.50 per week which is in line with the £150 charged by the University for a full-time childcare place. There is also a range of childminding provision with most childminders charging parents £3 - £4 per hour and with many reporting that they do not have their full registered numbers.

The Access to Success strategy will require each higher education provider to produce a detailed annual Widening Access and Participation Plan, which will clearly set out its activities and expenditure to support students from disadvantaged backgrounds. The strategy seeks to put in place a student centred approach with tailored support mechanisms to ensure the successful progression and retention of students, including those with dependents.

Employment Schemes

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the employment schemes that are specifically aimed at getting people aged over 45 back to work.

(AQW 20135/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department provides a range of employment programmes that are available to adults of all ages.

Steps to Work (StW) is the Department's main adult return to work programme. The aim of the programme is to assist the unemployed or economically inactive to find and sustain employment. StW is available to anyone aged 18 years old or over (16 in the case of lone parents) who is unemployed or economically inactive, irrespective of whether or not they are in receipt of benefit. The programme has no upper age limit.

Participation in StW provision is a mandatory requirement for all Jobseekers Allowance (JSA) claimants aged 25 and over who have been claiming JSA for 18 months.

Between September 2008 and September 2012 (the latest date for which statistics are available) 17,430 participants (17% of all starts) aged over 45 started the StW programme. Between September 2008 and June 2012 (the latest date for which statistics are available) 13,030 participants aged over 45 left the StW programme. Of these leavers 3,080 (24%) moved into unsubsidised employment.

In direct response to the economic downturn my Department, as part of the Northern Ireland Executive's Economy and Jobs Initiative, introduced an additional employment strand to the StW programme. This strand, called Step Ahead 50+, will provide eligible participants aged 50 and over who have been out of work and in receipt of benefit for 12 months or more with the opportunity to avail of a fixed term job lasting up to 26 weeks in the Community and Voluntary Sector. Step Ahead 50+ will offer 300 job opportunities in 2012/13, 400 in 2013/14 and a further 400 in 2014/15. At 26 February 2013 a total of 75 clients have started this new strand of StW provision.

My Department is currently developing a new adult return to work programme which will replace StW in 2014. This new programme, called Steps 2 Success, will be available to unemployed people aged 18 and over. The mandatory point at which clients aged 25 and over will join Steps 2 Success will be 12 months in receipt of JSA. This is 6 months earlier than the current StW programme which has a mandatory entry point after 18 months in receipt of JSA for this age group. Clients who have been identified as having significant barriers to employment will be able to join Steps 2 Success early.

The Local Employment Intermediary Service (LEMIS) is a community employment initiative designed to help the "hardest to reach" in the targeted areas of Belfast, Londonderry, Strabane, Newry & Mourne, Moyle and Cookstown, find employment. In addition to these areas, LEMIS is also available on an outreach basis throughout Northern Ireland to individuals with a common employability barrier to finding work i.e. the homeless, ex-offenders/ex-prisoners, people with a history of drug/alcohol misuse and care leavers.

There is no age restriction on people who want to use the LEMIS service. During the period April 2011 to March 2012, 352 LEMIS clients (16%) of those case loaded were in the 41 to 50 age group. A further 258 clients (12%) of those case loaded were in the 50 plus age group. Of these numbers 69 clients (15%) of LEMIS participants who moved into employment were in the 41 to 50 age group and a further 41 clients who moved into employment were in the 50 plus age group.

Finally, my Department's Disability Employment Service has a range of programmes and services, targeted at people of all ages, and specifically designed to support those who have health and disability related barriers to employment. These include, Work Connect, Condition Management Programme, Workable (NI) and Access to Work.

More detailed information on my Department's programmes can be found on the Department's website (www.delni.gov.uk) or by contacting a local Job Centre/Jobs and Benefits office.

DEL: Information Service

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many staff are employed in his Department's Information Service; and what is the annual cost of this service.

(AQW 20168/11-15)

Dr Farry: There are 4 Information Officers employed in press functions and 4 Information Officers employed in marketing functions. There are 8 administrative staff employed in providing support in marketing, event management, internet, intranet and web administration functions.

The annual cost of this service at the end of the last full financial year (2011-2012) totalled £582,780.

Education Maintenance Allowance: Budget

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what is the proposed budget for the Education Maintenance Allowance; and what proportion of this is funded by his Department.

(AQW 20242/11-15)

Dr Farry: Following the agreement by the Executive at its meeting on 7 February to introduce a number of changes to better target the means tested Education Maintenance Allowance scheme, its estimated budget requirement for the financial year 2013/14 is £25.8m, to which the Department of Education will contribute £1.85m and the balance of £23.95m will come from my Department.

Students Attending English Universities

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many students from Northern Ireland have attended universities in England as first year undergraduates, in each of the last five years. (AQW 20249/11-15)

Dr Farry: The information on total Northern Ireland domiciled student enrolments at English Higher Education Institutions as first year undergraduates in each of the last five years is detailed below.

Year	Total
2007/08	3,635
2008/09	3,640
2009/10	3,520
2010/11	3,935
2011/12	4,420

Source: Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA)

Notes:

- 1 Figures are rounded to the nearest 5.
- 2 The above figures include enrolments for first year undergraduates only.

Figures for NI domiciled enrolments at the Open University have been excluded from the above table. Although The Open University is defined as an English Institution it is likely that any NI domiciled enrolments will not be based in England.

Higher Education: Distance Learning

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what steps he has taken to develop distance learning higher education qualifications based in local universities.

(AQW 20251/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department's Higher Education Strategy for Northern Ireland, "Graduating to Success", published in April 2012, identifies the need for a more flexible learning environment which includes the expansion of distance and online learning. Distance learning is currently available through the Open University and other private providers. The strategy has set the objective that by 2018, modular and distance learning will be expanded to all students in higher education. A project team is currently being established to take forward this commitment

In December 2012, I met with the Director of the Open University in Ireland to discuss Northern Ireland's Higher Education Institutions' involvement with their Futurelearn initiative. Futurelearn will bring together a range of free, open, online courses from leading United Kingdom Universities, drawing upon the Open University's expertise in delivering distance learning and pioneering open education resources whilst increasing accessibility to higher education for students across the UK and in the rest of the world. Queen's University, Belfast is one of 17 UK Higher Education Institutions to become a supporting and working partner of Futurelearn Ltd.

Degree-level Qualifications: Further Education Colleges

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many students have been studying for higher and degree level qualifications in further education colleges, as opposed to universities, in each of the last five years. (AQW 20253/11-15)

Dr Farry: The number of students studying for higher and degree level qualifications in further education colleges in each of the last five years for which data are available is detailed in the table overleaf.

Number of Students Enrolled in Higher Education Courses at NI Further Education Colleges (2007/08 - 2011/12)

Notes:

- (1) The figures presented above are a student headcount as opposed to enrolments (where the same student can be enrolled more than once).
- (3) Data are rounded to the nearest 5 in line with data disclosure protocols.

Degree-level Qualifications: Further and Higher Education Colleges

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many degrees from universities in Northern Ireland and elsewhere have been studied under licence in local further and higher education colleges.

(AQW 20254/11-15)

Dr Farry: All of the 'Degree' level courses delivered by the six Further Education Regional Colleges or the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise are either validated by Northern Ireland Universities or franchised from UK Universities.

Validated courses, namely Foundation degrees, are courses that are developed and delivered by the partner institution (ie. the college) and where a student on the course is an associate student of the validating University. There are currently 32 full-time and 25 part-time Foundation degree courses available across the Further Education Regional Colleges and the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise. Many of these programmes are offered in more than one local college.

Franchised courses, namely Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science degrees, are courses which are developed by a UK University and taught by a partner institution with the same content, structure, delivery and assessment as the home course at the University. Students are registered students of the awarding University. There are currently 12 such full-time degree courses and 18 part-time degree courses delivered across the six Further Education Regional Colleges and the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise.

Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 2006

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether he forsees any changes being made to Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations. (AQW 20269/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department is in the process of conducting a public consultation on proposed changes to the TUPE Regulations, and this consultation will remain open until 11 April 2013. Any potential changes to the TUPE Regulations will only be decided upon after careful consideration of all responses to the consultation, and a full assessment of the impacts of any possible changes.

Industrial Tribunals: Audio Record of Proceedings

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether a litigant in person can arrange to make an audio record of the proceedings at an Industrial Tribunal hearing. (AQW 20314/11-15)

Dr Farry: The default position, by virtue of the Contempt of Court Act 1981, is that tribunal proceedings may not be recorded without leave of the tribunal. However, the Rules of Procedure governing industrial tribunals grant broad discretion for a tribunal chair to manage proceedings on a hearing by hearing basis. Therefore, should any party apply to make an audio recording of the proceedings, it is a matter for the tribunal chair to consider and decide, in all the circumstances of the case, whether to grant leave.

In addition, the majority of industrial tribunal proceedings are now digitally recorded by the tribunal and a transcript can be made available to parties where a matter is before the Court of Appeal or the High Court, in the circumstances set out in the Tribunal President's Practice Direction which is available on the tribunals' website, www.employmenttribunalsni.co.uk.

Careers Advice and Training Programmes

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how his Department ensures that careers advice and training programmes meet the needs of local industry and how often this is reviewed. (AQW 20332/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department's Employer Engagement Plan sets out how we will work with employers to help them up-skill and re-skill their workforce to meet the current and future needs of our businesses and the economy. A wide range of activities is taken forward in support of this objective.

Careers Advisers ensure that any advice they give is always tailored to the individual needs of the client but is informed by relevant and up to date Labour Market Information, which is developed and maintained by my Department, coupled with the regular briefing provided by the Sector Skills Councils. All Careers Advisers receive continuous professional development to ensure that their knowledge of industry and its requirements is fully up-to-date and embedded in their working practices.

The ultimate aim of my Department's Skills Solutions Service is to help companies become more productive and competitive within their sector. The Skills Solutions Service works proactively with local industry, helping companies to access all of the services available to recruit staff suited to their needs, and providing them with the opportunity to upskill and re-skill their current employees through the provision of bespoke training.

My Department's leadership and management development programmes were reviewed in 2011, leading to the introduction of a new, enhanced suite of programmes in January 2013.

The ApprenticeshipsNI programme offers high quality training to apprentices to equip them with the knowledge, understanding and competence to work at a high level in their chosen occupation. Each apprentice follows an industry recognised framework which is agreed with the relevant Sector Skills Council or Industry-Led Representative body who, on behalf of the sector's employers, determine the skills, knowledge and relevant standards required. You will already be aware that I recently announced plans to undertake a review of apprenticeships and youth training. My intention is to make the review process inclusive and to engage with all the relevant stakeholders. The review findings will be reported in the autumn of this year.

Tribunal User Group

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline (i) whether attendance at the Tribunals User Group, established by the Office of the Industrial Tribunals, is open to a litigant in person; and (ii) to detail any other similar user groups for such people.

(AQW 20354/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Tribunal User Group was established as a forum for employment law practitioners and representatives from interested bodies such as the Labour Relations Agency, the Equality Commission and my Department to engage with the industrial tribunal and Fair Employment Tribunal judiciary on the technical operation of tribunal rules and practices.

The objective of this engagement is to ensure that tribunals meet their overriding objective, namely to deal with cases justly; to ensure that parties are on an equal footing; to deal with cases in ways which are proportionate to the complexity or importance of the issues; to ensure that matters are dealt with expeditiously and fairly; and to save expense. This is not an appropriate forum for tribunal claimants or respondents.

I am, nonetheless, conscious of the need for the tribunal system to respond to the needs of all of its users. My Department has supported a number of tribunal research projects which have engaged existing and former tribunal claimants and respondents in informing the direction of tribunal reform. Furthermore, as part of the ongoing employment law review, my Department is engaging with organisations representing the interests of individual claimants as well as more frequent users of the system.

Finally, if any claimant or respondent is unhappy about either the tribunals' administrative service or judicial conduct, there are procedures in place to raise concerns and have them investigated. Where parties provide feedback on their tribunal experience with suggestions for improvement, all options are considered and, where appropriate, implemented.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

City of Culture 2013

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what action her Department is taking to specifically market the City of Culture 2013.

(AQW 19370/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): I would refer the Member to the reply I gave to AQW 19087/11-15 regarding NITB's activity to promote the UK City of Culture 2013 programme of events.

In addition, Tourism Ireland is responsible for marketing the island of Ireland in Great Britain and overseas markets and in 2013 will support the UK City of Culture by implementing a major programme of promotional activity focusing on Londonderry UK City of Culture and on other big events taking place in 2013 such as the World Police and Fire Games and the G8 summit. Activity includes an eight page supplement on Londonderry in the Sunday Telegraph, a series of advertorials placed in travel sections of national press and an e-marketing campaign targeting approximately 800,000 potential GB visitors.

Further activity from both agencies will take place as the year progresses.

Trade Contacts with China

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what business opportunities are available following the development of trade contacts with China.

(AQW 19923/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I am delighted to report that a broad range of opportunities exist in China for Northern Ireland businesses. Announcements were made during the last trade mission in November by Wrightbus, Yelo, textHELP and Glenarm Salmon. I visited the Shenyang Aircraft Corporation and Shenyang Dimplex Electric companies both of which are important links in the supply chain of our companies here. I also promoted our universities and FE colleges in government meetings. Companies both on the multi-sector trade mission and exhibiting at the Food Hotel China Show have generated a significant number of leads which will require follow up. With commitment from our companies, there are clearly opportunities to grow our export sales to China.

Tourism: Multilingual Signage

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether legal advice has been sought and received on Northern Ireland Tourist Board funding for the erection of multi-lingual signage.

(AQW 19982/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Tourist Board sought and received legal advice on this issue.

Tourism: Forecasting Accommodation Demand Research

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment when she expects the Northern Ireland Tourist Board commissioned Oxford Economics research into Forecasting Tourism Accommodation Demand to be released. (AQW 19984/11-15)

Mrs Foster: This research, completed in 2011, relates to tourist accommodation supply and the potential shortfall against visitor projections to 2020. The research was commissioned for internal use only, with a view to contributing to the evidence base for future accommodation policy. A consultation exercise is planned for later this year which will also be used to inform the Department's policy position on this matter.

It was not planned to externally release the research.

Tourism: Forecasting Accommodation Demand Research

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment why the Oxford Economics research into Forecasting Tourism Accommodation Demand has not yet been released.

(AQW 19985/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I would refer the member to the reply I gave to AQW 19984/11-15.

Tourism: Forecasting Accommodation Demand Research

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail any engagement her Department has had with the Department of the Environment on the results of the Oxford Economics research into Forecasting Tourism Accommodation Demand.

(AQW 19986/11-15)

Mrs Foster: There has been no engagement with the Department of the Environment on the results of this research.

Tourism: Forecasting Accommodation Demand Research

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for his assessment of the Oxford Economics research into Forecasting Tourism Accommodation Demand; and whether he is proposing any action based on this research. (AQW 19992/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I would refer the member to the replies I gave to AQW 19984/11-15 and AQW 19986/11-15.

Equal Pay

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the measures in place to ensure that multi-site Foreign Direct Investors award equal pay.

(AQW 20006/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department does not have the authority to dictate the level of pay offered by international investors. Furthermore, it is essential that companies are allowed the scope to invest where they consider they will operate most profitably. This includes taking into consideration the market rate for salaries and other operating costs. Companies will pay the levels that they believe reflect the skills and experience needed to fill a range of roles and functions, which themselves may vary by location.

Prime Minister's Visit to India: Northern Ireland Businesses Represented

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many Northern Ireland businesses are represented on the Prime Minister's current visit to India.

(AQW 20131/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Randox Laboratories and Wrightbus were asked to participate in the Prime Minister's trade mission to India. Unfortunately, neither company were able to participate due to other business commitments.

Invest Northern Ireland's next organised trade mission to India is planned for 15th-19th April, it is anticipated that fifteen local companies will take part.

The mission will visit Mumbai and New Delhi and will be supported by Invest Northern Ireland's office in Mumbai.

Inward Investment: India

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the measures her Department is taking to encourage inward investment from the Indian sub-continent.

(AQW 20132/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest Northern Ireland has permanent offices within the British High Commission network in India, located in Mumbai and Bangalore. The offices focus on inward investment, trade development and university linkages.

In December 2011, Invest NI appointed a new country manager in Mumbai and added a new Business Development Director in Bangalore to increase sales and promotional activities. Their primary focus is seeking Indian IT and Business Service companies to establish near shore operations in Northern Ireland to service UK and European clients. They are also establishing linkages with a fast emerging aerospace industry.

Regional Aid

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the discussions she has had with the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills regarding the Regional Aid position post 2013. (AQW 20139/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS) leads on the UK's interaction with the European Commission on Regional Aid Guidelines (RAG). My officials, along with their counterparts in the other devolved administrations, are working closely with BIS officials to ensure that the interests of the devolved administrations are fully and appropriately reflected in the UK's interactions with the Commission. In particular, my Department has been keen to ensure that, post 2013, Northern Ireland's continuing unique circumstances are reflected in the revised RAG which are currently being developed.

Over the last eighteen months, I and my officials have been engaging extensively with BIS, at both a Ministerial and official level, regarding proposed revisions to the RAG and in particular on the UK Government's proposal to remove Northern Ireland's automatic assisted area status post 2013. This engagement has included several discussions and correspondence between myself and the Minister of State for Business and Enterprise, as well as ongoing correspondence with the Business Secretary of State Vince Cable on the issue.

I and my officials will be continuing to press BIS, at both a Ministerial and official level, over the coming months to highlight the Northern Ireland position in relation to Regional Aid in order to secure the best possible outcome in this regard.

Conference Facilities

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of local conferencing facilities; and the action she intends to take to improve the facilities.

(AQW 20140/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Business Tourism, which includes Meetings, Incentives, Conferences & Exhibitions, is worth £100 million to the visitor economy in Northern Ireland.

The Belfast Waterfront is awaiting funding decisions to enable a £20 million extension to be operational by the start of 2016. The venue will then have an additional 2,000sqm exhibition space, 5 breakout rooms each to accommodate 200 delegates and a banqueting facility for 750 people transforming it into a fully integrated convention centre.

This extension is being supported by my Department through the Northern Ireland Tourist Board.

G8 Summit: Visitors

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many visitors are expected to attend the G8 summit. (AQW 20141/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The G8 Summit is recognised as an unprecedented opportunity to show the world what a great place Northern Ireland is to invest, work, study and visit. NITB, Tourism Ireland and Invest NI will be capitalising on the worldwide marketing opportunities it presents. It is not possible to estimate at this stage the future impact on visitor numbers arising from the Summit.

Flag Protests

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what additional actions have been undertaken by her Department in light of the impact of the flags protests on (i) tourism; and (ii) local business. (AQW 20142/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department continues to work closely with the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB), Tourism Ireland and Invest NI to ensure that the benefits of Northern Ireland are promoted as a place to invest, work, visit and study.

My Department, through NITB and Tourism Ireland has agreed to provide a financial stimulus package to help promote Belfast. The elements of this package include a contribution to the Backin Belfast marketing campaign and broader tourism messaging in the Republic of Ireland and Great Britain markets, including a co-operative marketing campaign with carriers.

In addition NITB will continue to promote Northern Ireland as a visitor destination to the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland markets through its Spring 2013 campaign which was launched on the 28 January 2013 featuring TV, Radio, Press, Outdoor, Digital and Social media coverage.

Tourism Ireland will implement a campaign of targeted marketing activities for Northern Ireland, targeting visitor growth from GB and from Europe through the targeting of the six top performing markets of Germany, France, Italy, Nordics, Spain and the Netherlands and from the US.

Invest NI has recently completed a series of inward investment company visits over a nine week period. In total nineteen company visits have taken place since 3 December, with no visits cancelled, including seven company visits with the Japanese Ambassador on 16 & 17 December.

On 16 January Oxford Consulting Group announced the creation of 33 new jobs in Northern Ireland.

Credit Unions

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 19822/11-15, to detail (i) the financial assistance that has been provided to the Irish League of Credit Unions and to the Ulster Federation of Credit Unions to help credit unions that require guidance and assistance on the transitional arrangements; (ii) the remaining financial assistance available; and (iii) the date when the financial assistance will no longer be available.

(AQW 20206/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Detailed separate proposals put forward by each of the representative bodies have been considered and officials are finalising the terms of bespoke Letters of Offer with the intention that financial support of up £20,000 each will be available to the Ulster Federation of Credit Unions and the Irish League of Credit Unions to claim against expenditure incurred from the date of my statement to the Assembly on 22nd May 2012. It is anticipated that representative bodies will submit claims shortly after acceptance of the Letters of Offer.

Banks

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what action she is taking to encourage banks not to reduce their presence in high streets of towns.

(AQW 20288/11-15)

Mrs Foster: While my Department has no statutory control of the banking sector, I fully recognise the challenges banks are facing as they seek to recapitalise and restructure and the implications this has on local operations and staff.

The DFP Minister and I have recently met with all the main banks in Northern Ireland and the various issues and impacts around bank restructuring were raised during these meetings. However, it should be recognised that bank locations are ultimately commercial decisions.

I have also previously met with representatives from the Irish Bank Officials' Association, the Finance Union, to discuss the issue of job losses in the banking sector and I am aware that the Finance Minister is due to meet with them again in the near future. We will continue to monitor this situation closely.

G8 Summit

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether there will be opportunities during the G8 summit to promote Northern Ireland internationally as a tourist and investment location.

(AQW 20307/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The G8 Summit at Lough Erne will provide unprecedented opportunities for both Tourism Ireland and Invest NI to promote Northern Ireland internationally. Both organisations are developing marketing plans to capitalise on the great opportunities the Summit presents.

Giro d'Italia 2014

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether the planned route of the Giro d'Italia 2014 will take include the Mourne area.

(AQW 20384/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Grande Partenza or Big Start of the Giro d'Italia is coming to Northern Ireland in May 2014. This is one of the three classic cycling races in the world, attracting huge media coverage across the globe.

The exact route has yet to be finalised. This is the remit of RCS Sport who will work with the teams to develop the route. RCS Sport has many years experience designing cycling routes that will be challenging for the cyclists and entertaining for the thousands of spectators and TV viewers to watch.

NITB would be keen that they include the Mournes in the route, as one of Northern Ireland's designated Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty, and will be working with them to encourage this where possible. However this will be dependent on the feasibility of this as judged by RCS Sport.

Tourism: Available Rooms in South Down Constituency

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of available rooms in (i) bed and breakfasts; (ii) hostels; and (iii) hotels, in the South Down constituency area.

(AQW 20385/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The number of available rooms in the Banbridge, Down and Newry & Mourne District Council areas is as follows:

(i)	Bed & Breakfasts (Includes Guest Houses, Bed & Breakfasts and Guest Accommodation)	406
(ii)	Hostels	115
(iii)	Hotels	575

The breakdown of rooms by category and council area is as follows:

Category	District Council Area	Rooms Units	Total Premises

	Down District Council	309	6
	Newry & Mourne District Council	231	6
	Total	575	15

	Down District Council	90	12
	Newry & Mourne District Council	41	5
	Total	135	18
Guest Accommodation	Banbridge District Council	-	-
	Down District Council	5	1
	Newry & Mourne District Council	17	2
	Total	22	3
Bed & Breakfast	Banbridge District Council	24	9
	Down District Council	138	40
	Newry & Mourne District Council	87	32
	Total	249	81
Hostel	Banbridge District Council	-	-
	Down District Council	77	4
	Newry & Mourne District Council	38	5
	Total	115	9
	Grand Total	1096	126

The Northern Ireland Tourist Board does not hold this information on a constituency basis.

Tourist Accommodation

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what venues in South Down are registered with her Department to provide tourist accommodation.

(AQW 20386/11-15)

Mrs Foster: There are 283 premises certified by the Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) to provide tourist accommodation in the Banbridge, Down and Newry & Mourne District Council Areas.

The information requested is only available in Microsoft Excel spreadsheet format and a copy has been placed in the Assembly Library.

NITB has provided the list by categories of tourist accommodation. NITB does not hold this information on a constituency basis.

Department of the Environment

Gas Extraction

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether, in conformity with the approach of the Irish Secretary of State for Natural Resources, Fergus O'Dowd, he can assure the public that his Department will not make a decision on whether to permit unconventional gas extraction ahead of the publication of the Irish Environmental Protection Agency report into the safety of the process.

(AQW 18643/11-15)

Mr Attwood (The Minister of the Environment): I consider that it is best to assess unconventional gas extraction when more and fuller science is available. At that stage, a fuller evidence base will be available than currently. Consequently, I firmly believe that only with a fuller range of science, including that from the FEPA which DOE is participating in and helping to fund, will there be a science basis to consider and conclude the proposal for fracking.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), Ireland, in conjunction with a Steering Committee, which includes officials from the Northern Ireland Environment Agency, is taking forward a programme of research into the issue of Unconventional Gas Exploration and Extraction. I believe this is important work.

It is also important to note that this is a programme of research and the Steering Committee intends to publish a number of interim reports while the programme is underway, with a final report published at the end of the programme.

No planning applications or other environmental permissions have yet been received by my Department; however should such applications be received the nature of the proposal will be assessed against the existing scientific evidence base. As I have said, this will include the outputs from the EPA led programme of research as well as scientific evidence from a wider Britain, European and global context.

I have always said it is essential see the fullest range of science before any decisions are taken on permitting hydraulic fracturing. That is firmly what I believe. That is firmly how we should proceed.

Hare Coursing

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment what is being done to enforce the ban on hare coursing. (AQW 18857/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The PSNI is responsible for enforcement of this legislation. However, while such authority is not within my control, given my responsibility for protecting our wildlife, I take a close interest in the work of the Partnership Against Wildlife Crime (PAWNI) which brings together all bodies involved in and with an interest in protecting our wildlife, including the PSNI. I will continue to support PAWNI in promoting effective enforcement of the law.

Taxis: North Down

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment how many taxis operate in North Down. (AQW 18914/11-15)

Mr Attwood: There are 519 taxis licensed in the North Down area broken down as follows:-

BT19	143
BT20	70
BT21	21
BT22	75
BT23	210

Taxis: North Down

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment how many prosecutions there have been for illegal taxis in North Down over the last three years.

(AQW 18915/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The numbers of inspections, prosecutions and fixed penalty tickets issued to taxis detected in the North Down area are tabulated below. The figures do not cover a full three-year period because the Driver & Vehicle Agency's enforcement database was not in operation until 1 April 2010.

Period	Number of Taxis Stopped	Number of Prosecutions	Number of Fixed Penalty Tickets Issued*
1 Apr 2010 – 31 Mar 2011	20	5	0
1 Apr 2011 – 31 Mar 2012	62	2	7
1 Apr 2012 – 30 Sep 2012	19	3	4

The figures for prosecutions and fixed penalty tickets issued relate to a variety of public service vehicle offences, as there is no specific code for an illegal taxi.

Bangor Health Centre

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) whether his Department has received a planning application to extend Bangor health centre; and (ii) at what stage of the planning process the application currently sits. (AQW 19313/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department received a planning application on 31st March 2011 for the refurbishment and extension of the existing Bangor Health Centre. Full planning permission was granted for the development on 27th May 2011. To date, the Department has received no further applications to extend the building.

Pump Street, Derry: Excavations

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of the Environment what action his Department is taking in relation to excavations occurring in Pump Street, Derry.

(AQW 19317/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I recognise that a number of interested parties, including the Health and Safety Executive, PSNI, Roads Service, the Dean of the Cathedral and Derry City Council, have all expressed concern over reports of the clearing of this 'tunnel' in Pump Street, Derry. After this activity was first reported in 2009, NIEA Built Heritage staff officers contacted the person engaged in this tunnelling and sent him two letters expressing their serious concerns about the potential for collapse, explosion or damage to services, such as electricity supply. They requested him to stop, whilst also working to make all relevant agencies aware of the potential dangers. However, my staff in NIEA: Built Heritage inform me that because this is a late 18th or 19th century drain of little archaeological value, they do not believe that it falls within their remit to take matters further. I understand that no built heritage legislation has been broken, so consequently it is difficult for me to recommend any further action by NIEA: Built Heritage on this matter unless there is a significant change in circumstances. However, I can report that the Derry Area Planning Office, who closed an enforcement investigation into this case in March 2010, has recently received additional information and reports of work. My staff in the Derry Area Office has informed me that they will expedite a fresh investigation as a matter of urgency to determine if any unauthorised tunnelling has taken place. If a breach of planning control is indentified, I have instructed that appropriate enforcement should be taken to remedy the breach as a matter of urgency.

Renewable Energy Planning Applications: Lagan Valley

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of the Environment whether he will ensure that Roads Service does not cause unnecessary delays to renewable energy planning applications that can have significant economic benefit to the economy in the Lagan Valley area.

(AQO 3292/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Minister for Regional Development has advised that his Department's Roads Service has received consultation requests from DOE Planning, relating to three separate applications for proposed anaerobic digester plants within the Lagan Valley area. Roads Service has responded positively on two of the applications and is seeking further information on the third.

Roads Service has advised that it dealt with the applications (following receipt of the necessary information from the applicant) in accordance with the response times set out in its service level agreement with my Department.

On receipt of responses from DRD Roads Service my officials prioritised the further processing of the applications.

Drumclay Crannóg

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment where the artefacts that were excavated from Drumclay Crannóg in Co. Fermanagh will be displayed once the excavation process is complete. (AQO 3297/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The excavations at Drumclay Crannóg have revealed a huge variety of artefacts and information, and the excavations are still ongoing. The ownership of the artefacts being found rests, at present, with the Department of Regional Development, as they have been recovered from their land. However, it would be appropriate for these artefacts to be put on permanent display in County Fermanagh, and the Fermanagh County Museum is a potential home. There have been other suggestions in relation to the display of artefacts, even the re-creation of the crannóg and more than one location in Co. Fermanagh has been suggested. Work is still going on at the crannog, and my officials will be in discussion with their counterparts in DRD Roads Service about post excavation requirements, including the long-term display of these artefacts. Officials in NIEA: Built Heritage already talked with the Manager of Fermanagh County Museum about creating an exhibition of the Drumclay finds.

The importance of and the character of the crannóg finds means a comprehensive approach is needed. In moving forward, I will meet with those who have expressed an interest in being involved in the future management of other artefacts.

Dereliction

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQO 3284/11-15, which councils have put forward proposals to tackle dereliction.

(AQW 19369/11-15)

Mr Attwood: 22 councils put forward proposals to tackle dereliction and these are listed below. Additionally there was a proposal received from the Causeway Coast and Glen Cluster.

- Antrim Borough Council
- Ards Borough Council
- Armagh City and District Council
- Ballymena Borough Council
- Ballymoney Borough Council

Incineration Contracts

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the progress being made with the award of 25-year incineration contracts by the three waste management authorities. (AQW 19587/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Much of the detailed information pertaining to the waste infrastructure procurements is subject to restrictions imposed by public procurement law and commercial confidentiality requirements. However, I can provide the following summary of the current position of each project.

On 15 October 2012, SWaMP2008 announced the termination of its long-term waste infrastructure procurement following its decision on the basis of legal advice not to contest a challenge to the legality of its bidder consortium. The Department has requested a Post Project Evaluation from SWaMP2008.

The NWRWMG procurement is to provide Mechanical Biological Treatment (MBT) (140,000 tonnes capacity) and a Gasification plant (80,000 tonnes capacity), its Joint Committee having previously ruled out mass burn incineration as a potential solution.

At its meeting on 13 December 2012 the Executive agreed the provision of financial support to the NWRWMG to a maximum of £35 million over fourteen years. This commitment would materialise once the proposed waste infrastructure has been constructed and is operational, which NWRWMG has forecast will happen during 2015/16, subject to council ratification.

Following approval of the NWRWMG Appointment Business Case for its project by DOE and DFP, the members of its Joint Committee decided at their meeting on 19 December to recommend the appointment of a Preferred Bidder to deliver new waste infrastructure for the north-west region to their constituent councils for their consideration. That recommendation is currently progressing through the democratic cycle of council meetings.

The arc21 procurement involves a two stage process with up front Mechanical Biological Treatment (240,000 tonnes capacity) of Municipal Solid Waste to gain additional recyclate and biologically treat the remaining material to produce a fuel for combustion in a second stage conventional Energy from Waste facility (210,000 tonnes capacity).

arc21 is in the latter stages of dialogue with its remaining bidder and is working through a range of procurement issues, including affordability, land assembly and planning and permitting. It had previously forecast appointment of a Preferred Bidder in February 2013 but does not now expect that to happen until September 2013.

Council Invoices

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of the Environment to explain the delay in responding to AQW 18186/11-15; and to list by (i) name; and (ii) date the information received by his Department from each council. (AQW 19677/11-15)

Mr Attwood: My department does not hold the information requested which had to be requested from each of the 26 councils. The response therefore took longer to collate than the standard response time for Assembly Questions. The details requested relating to responses are set out in the table below. The question has now been responded to and I attach a copy for your information.

Local Government Staff: Compassionate Leave

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the procedures for compassionate leave for local government staff. (AQW 19873/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The vast majority of employees in district councils are employed under the employment conditions set out in the National Joint Council for Local Government Services National Agreement on Pay and Conditions of Service. That agreement provides for Special Leave under Part 3, paragraph 7.9 in the following terms:

"Additional leave with or without pay may be granted in special circumstances at the discretion of the employing authority. Authorities shall give particular consideration to granting reasonable paid time off for dependants as defined under the Employment Relations Act 1999".

The Labour Relations Agency advises that -

- a dependant is the husband, wife, child or parent of the employee. It also includes someone who lives in the same household as the employee. It does not include tenants or boarders living in the family home, or someone who lives in the household as an employee, such as a live-in housekeeper; and
- in cases of illness or injury, or where care arrangements break down, a dependant may also be someone who reasonably relies on the employee for assistance. The employee is entitled to take a reasonable amount of time off in the above circumstances. The legislation does not specify the amount of time off which is reasonable, since this will vary according to the circumstances of the emergency. The time off is not for caring but for making longer term care arrangements.

Planning Bill

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment what assessment he has made of the assertion by the Confederation of British Industry, in its summary of the January Planning forum, that clause 2 in the Planning Bill would give more weight when making decisions to economic considerations; and whether he has received legal advice on this issue. (AQW 19903/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Clause 2 of the Planning Bill does not give economic considerations more weight over other material considerations in the determination of applications for planning permission. I can confirm that the Department has received legal advice on this issue.

Flood Plains

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of (i) domestic; and (ii) non-domestic properties which have been built on flood plains, broken down either by council area or constituency. (AQW 19912/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Historically many cities and towns in Northern Ireland, as elsewhere in UK, have been built in valleys and along river corridors and thus have resulted in increased flood risk. The Department recognises that the effects of flooding on human activity are wide ranging, impacting on the economy, social well being and the environment.

In the last 5 years from April 2008 to September 2012 5,363 residential and 3,995 non-residential planning applications were approved within flood plains. This figure includes new and replacement developments as well as alterations and extensions to existing properties. This is categorised by Council District and year in the table attached. The Department does not hold records detailing how many of these approved applications were constructed.

The planning system cannot in itself prevent the flooding of properties but it does acknowledge the risks and uncertainties associated with climate change. The Department considers that actions to address these matters through the planning system should be based on a precautionary approach. This approach is embodied in the policies set out in Planning Policy Statement 15 'Planning and Flood Risk' to ensure that the development decisions we make today and in the future does not increase flood risk.

Road Accidents: Night-time Collisions

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of the Environment what consideration will be given to (i) non-regulatory approaches in reducing night time collisions involving young and other new drivers; and (ii) the feasibility of technological solutions, following the outcome of the Review of the Learner and Restricted Driver Schemes and Graduated Driver Licensing Consultation. (AQW 19913/11-15)

Mr Attwood:

(i) Following the consultation on the review of the Learner and Restricted Driver Schemes and Graduated Driver Licensing, I decided not to include night time restrictions in the package of measures I announced in May 2012, due to concerns about the enforceability of such restrictions and the extent to which they would impact on access to jobs, education and sporting and social activities especially in rural areas.

Instead I have decided on an alternative approach to reduce the number of night time collisions involving young and other new drivers, through the development of awareness campaigns which highlight the risks associated with new drivers driving at night, together with improved driver training.

One of the measures to be included in the forthcoming Road Traffic (Amendment) Bill will require the completion of a 'Learning to Drive' syllabus evidenced by a compulsory student logbook. Consideration is being given to requiring learner drivers to undertake and record that they have taken some driving lessons and/ or practice at night.

Regulating for night time restrictions is however an area which I may need to return to in future if the current proposals, including a passenger carrying restriction, do not prove sufficient in reducing night time collisions involving young and other inexperienced new drivers.

(ii)A further non regulatory measure my Department is taking forward at my behest is the impact and feasibility of technological solutions in improving the road safety of young drivers.

In particular my officials have been exploring with the local motor insurance industry the potential impact of young driver "Pay How You Drive" insurance products linked to in car technology capable of monitoring driving performance. In addition to monitoring and providing feedback on their driving performance and thereby helping to improve it, these products in effect also incentivise young drivers to adopt voluntary night time driving restrictions by offering cheaper insurance premiums for drivers who avoid driving at night.

A pilot study using information from local insurance companies' own pilot studies is to be undertaken to assess the impacts of telematics and its potential effectiveness in changing driver behaviour.

Planning: Vacancies for Professional Planners

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment how many vacancies for professional planners exist in each planning division. (AQW 19918/11-15)

Mr Attwood: DOE currently does not have any vacancies for professional planners.

Question for Written Answer: AQW 18041/11-15

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 18041/11-15, when he intends to answer this question given that it is now significantly overdue.

(AQW 19978/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The response to AQW 18041/11-15 issued on 24 February 2013.

Beaches: Blue Flag Status

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment which beaches have Blue Flag status. (AQW 19998/11-15)

Mr Attwood: In 2012 Northern Ireland had 11 Blue Flag Beaches: Magilligan (Benone), Magilligan (Downhill), Castlerock, Portstewart, Portrush Mill (West), Portrush Curran (East), Portrush (Whiterocks), Crawfordsburn, Tyrella, Murlough (Co Down) and Cranfield Bay.

The international Blue Flag scheme is administered in Northern Ireland by Tidy Northern Ireland. Blue Flag awards for 2013 have not been announced yet. The announcement is not expected before late May or early June.

Shale Oil Extraction

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment (i) whether his Department has been informed of any proposals to extract shale oil; (ii) to detail the method of shale oil extraction that is being considered; and (iii) what understanding his Department has of the environmental impact of shale oil extraction.

(AQW 20012/11-15)

Mr Attwood: My Department has not been informed of any proposals to extract shale oil in Northern Ireland. My Department therefore has no information on extraction methods being considered, given DOE has received nothing on a proposal, if there is any.

Flooding: Drumnakilly Quarry

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment when he intends to bring a resolution to the flooding issue with the quarry in Drumnakilly that is affecting local residents; and whether his Department has made this issue a priority since it was raised on 16 January 2013.

(AQW 20014/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Flooding in itself does not fall within my Department's remit, Rivers Agency is the body with statutory responsibility for flooding issues. In an effort to expedite a resolution to this issue I have instructed my officials in NIEA to take a multi-agency approach with Rivers Agency, DOE Planning and DRD Roads Service. As I have said, I am turning over every stone to have this matter resolved.

As part of this approach, at a recent meeting between NIEA and Rivers Agency, on 24 January 2013, it was identified that a number of investigatory actions were required to identify the specific cause or causes of the flooding and ultimately to determine how the issue can be resolved.

NIEA, Rivers Agency and Road Service have undertaken investigations on the site to determine the cause of the flooding. These investigations revealed two significant blockages. One blockage consisted of a plastic fertiliser bag in a gully on the McKiernan's property and the second blockage, in the storm line below the McKiernan's property, consisted of silt and other debris.

The plastic bag blockage was removed and the sand and gravel cleared by jetting the pipeline. Once the 2nd blockage was removed the floodwater began to dissipate immediately. A camera survey of the pipeline was also carried out which indicated that poor levels in the pipeline may be the most likely cause of the silt and other debris accumulation. Investigations are ongoing as to how the pipeline levels issue will be resolved. A follow up Rivers Agency inspection of the site, on 14 February 2013, confirmed that the flooding had ceased.

There continues to be an issue with discharge of water from the sand quarry upstream of the affected property. There is no record of the quarry owner having received consent from Rivers Agency, to discharge storm water from the quarry. In order to get retrospective consent the Quarry owner made application on 31 January 2013 in accordance with the Drainage (NI) Order 1973 to discharge storm water into the upstream end of the culvert that runs through the affected property. I am advised that Rivers Agency is currently withholding consent until a detailed drainage assessment has been carried out and submitted to the Agency for approval.

I can assure you that my Department has given this case a high priority and in addition to the proactive measures taken, as outlined above, both DOE Planning and NIEA have previously taken robust enforcement action in relation to this site and a number of further enforcement processes are currently ongoing.

My Department will keep all stakeholders updated on progress at this site, including the residents affected by this issue, and their representatives.

In addition, planning applications have been recommended for refusal and temporary stop notices have been served, with the opportunity to proceed to full enforcement. Moreover, a prosecution file has been submitted to the PPS.

In all the above ways, it is very clear the priority given by my Department.

Marine Bill

Mr Hamilton asked the Minister of the Environment when the Marine Bill will proceed to Consideration Stage. (AQW 20054/11-15)

Mr Attwood: It is my intention that the Marine Bill proceed to Consideration Stage as soon as possible, subject to agreement of proposed amendments by my Executive colleagues and scheduling by the Business Office. I have asked my Marine Bill paper to be considered by the Executive, under the "three meetings" rule.

Planning Appeals

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment how many planning appeals have been lost by the Planning Service over the last three years.

(AQW 20078/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The number of appeals received by the PAC, decided and allowed in the last three business years is set out in the table below.

Business Year	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12
Appeals Received	515	435	451
Appeals Decided	1304	681	332
Appeals Allowed	516	226	91

Councils: Chief Executives

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment which councils employ a Chief Executive on a (i) temporary; or (ii) part-time contract.

(AQW 20115/11-15)

Mr Attwood:

- (i) The following councils employ Chief Executives on a temporary basis:
  - Cookstown District Council
  - Down District Council
  - Dungannon and South Tyrone Borough Council
  - · Strabane District Council.
- (ii) The Chief Executive of Strabane District Council is employed on a part -time contract.

DOE: Staff Travel Claims

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the cost to his Department of staff travel claims in each of the last three years.

(AQW 20194/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The table below provides the expenditure on staff travel claims in the Department for the last three years 2009/10 to 2011/12.

Business Area	2009/10 £	2010/11 £	2011/12 £
Department (excluding agencies)	389,958	298,636	287,656
Northern Ireland Environment Agency	260,282	289,446	292,362
Driver and Vehicle Agency	300,161	256,682	331,572
Total	950,401	844,764	911,590

The general increase in costs between 2010-11 and 2011-12 is in a small part, a consequence of the change in the NICS mileage rate from 40 to 45 pence. I have asked for a breakdown in the increase in NIEA travel, year on year, for the last three years, the increase in DVA costs by 18% 2010/11 – 2011/12 (partly due to training in relation to the migration from a previous financial system to Account NI) and how the costs generally can be controlled.

Beaches: Good Beach Summit

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment when the next Beach Summit will take place. (AQW 20198/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The next Good Beach Summit will take place in late May or Early June. A firm date has not been fixed yet because the Summit is to run in conjunction with the presentation of international Blue Flag Awards to our best beaches. Tidy Northern Ireland administers the Blue Flag Awards in Northern Ireland.

Beaches: Quality

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the progress that has been made on improving the quality of beaches.

(AQW 20199/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I have now hosted five Good Beach Summits and meaningful progress has been made in a wide range of priority areas which collectively contribute to better beaches and a better beach experience.

The multi-strand action Plan groups work streams under four headings;

- Improve Water Quality;
- Improve Beach Cleanliness, Facilities, Management and Signage;
- Keep the Public and Media Batter Informed;
- Support the Coastal economy.

Notable areas where particularly good progress has been made include:

- Sewerage infrastructure improvements (eg Ballyholme and Newcastle);
- Catchment source apportionment studies (specifically including septic tanks) at Waterfoot, Ballygally, Browns Bay, Ballyholme and Ballywalter;
- Signage Project in line with revised Bathing Waters Directive;
- Development of a Marine Litter Strategy.
- Protection of the public from polluted bathing water through a warning system.
- Development of a dedicated beaches web site BeachNI.

All participants agree that the Good Beach Summits should continue although, there is an ongoing drive to include more coastal community and representative groups. The next Summit will be run in conjunction with the presentation of Blue Flags to our best beaches at the end of May or in early June. The Blue Flag Awards scheme is administered in Northern Ireland by Tidy Northern Ireland.

Wind Farm Applications

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of the Environment how many wind farm applications were (i) accepted on appeal; and (ii) withdrawn, in each year since 2008.

(AQW 20201/11-15)

Mr Attwood: In the period 1 April 2008 to 30 September 2012 a total of 4 appeals were allowed and 14 withdrawn for wind farm applications as detailed in the table below.

Table 1

Financial Year	Allowed on Appeal	Application Withdrawn

Mr Attwood: In the period 1 April 2011 to 30 September 2012, a total of 4,532 planning applications for rural dwellings have been received and 1,560 have been decided – 1390 (89%) approved and 170 refused. The table below shows these categorised by local government district.

Planning Applications: Farm Dwellings

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of the Environment how many planning applications for farm dwellings have been received since June 2011, broken down by district council area; and how many were (i) refused; and (ii) approved. (AQW 20210/11-15)

Mr Attwood: In the period 1st June 2011 and 30 September 2012, 1358 planning applications have been received for a new dwelling on a farm. This figure is inclusive of applications for dwellings on a farm, replacement farm dwellings and dwellings for horse breeders.

Planning Applications: Retirement Dwellings

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of the Environment how many planning applications for retirement dwellings have been approved since June 2011, broken down by district council area. (AQW 20211/11-15)

Mr Attwood: In the period 1 April 2011 to 30 September 2012, 4,532 planning applications were received for rural dwellings and 1,560 applications decided of which 89% (1,390) were approved.

The information provided in the description of a proposed development does not always detail whether the proposal is for a retirement dwelling. As a result the Department is unable to further categorise this information in the detail requested.

The Table below shows the number of applications received, approved and refused per district council area from 1 April 2011 to 30 September 2012.

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of the Environment how many planning applications for business premises have been (i) refused; and (ii) approved, since June 2011, broken down by district council area. (AQW 20212/11-15)

Mr Attwood: In the period June 2011 to end of September 2012, 801 applications identified as proposals for business premises have been decided, 753(94%) of which have been approved and 48 (6%) have been refused. This is broken down by local government district in the table below.

Notes:

1 September 2012 Is Our Latest Published Information.

Planning Application Q/2011/0220/O

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 18988/11-15, why he has yet to reply to correspondence from my office on planning application Q/2011/0220/O. (AQW 20229/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The response to AQW 18988/11-15 issued on 21 February 2013.

Wind Turbines

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the current planning applications for multiple wind turbines on agricultural land in North Down.

(AQW 20247/11-15)

Mr Attwood: There are no current planning applications for multiple wind turbines on agricultural land in North Down however, the Department is currently processing two planning applications for single wind turbines on agricultural land within the same jurisdiction.

Planning application W/2011/0268/F was received on 24 May 2011. It seeks permission for a single 225kw wind turbine with a blade diameter of 27m and hub height of 30m at a site 210m North East of 78 Ballymiscaw Road, Holywood.

Planning application W/2011/0549/F was received on 08 December 2011. It seeks permission for a single wind turbine with a 30m hub height and 30m blade diameter with maximum output not exceeding 250kw at a site 457m South East of 69 Green Road, Bangor.

Cars: High Intensity Discharge Headlights

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what consideration is being given to altering MOT test regulation on cars with high intensity discharge headlamps.

(AQW 20300/11-15)

Mr Attwood: High Intensity Discharge (HID) headlights have been fitted in certain motor vehicles for a number of years. Compared with the more common Halogen headlights, HID headlights are more efficient, have a longer life and can be up to three times brighter. The benefit of this extra brightness is that it enables drivers using HID lights to see approximately 30% further than a Halogen System. The downside of this extra brightness is the potential to cause excessive dazzle to oncoming traffic. Dazzle can be caused if the lamps are dirty or aimed too high. Vehicles with HID headlights are therefore legally required to have a headlamp washer system and levelling system fitted before they are permitted to enter into service within Europe.

The assessment of the presence and operation of these headlamp cleaning and levelling devices was introduced into the annual vehicle test in compliance with European Roadworthiness Directive 2010/48/EU. This requirement was introduced into the annual vehicle (MOT) test in Northern Ireland on an advisory basis from 1 February 2012, and became a reason for failure from 1 May 2012. The use of vehicles on the road which do not have the washer or levelling system fitted to HID headlights is illegal and poses a potential road safety risk. A vehicle will fail the test in Northern Ireland where a mandatory headlight washer or levelling device is missing, inoperative or otherwise obviously defective.

The Department's operations, as detailed above, are fully in line with European Roadworthiness Directive 2010/48/EU and we therefore have no plans to alter the current MOT test regulation on cars with high intensity discharge headlights.

Minister of the Environment: Visits to Local Council Meetings

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of the Environment on how many occasions he has made official visits to local council meetings in the last 12 months.

(AQW 20306/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Since January 2012, I have attended a meeting of each of the 11 Voluntary Transition Committees. I have also chaired four Regional Transition Committee meetings. I have attended a number of other meetings with Councils and their members. These were not in full Council formats. I have also met a range of local Council delegations on a number of matters.

Giro d'Italia 2014

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of the Environment, in light of the announcement that a stage of the 2014 Giro d'Italia cycle race will be held in Armagh City, whether he will consider working with the local council to address issues of dereliction and gap sites with funding similar to that which was made available to Derry and Portrush for the City of Culture and the Irish Open respectively.

(AQW 20316/11-15)

Mr Attwood: As members know I believe the dereliction intervention should be "rolled out" across all NI Councils. To date, 8 Councils have benefitted from funding.

I am keen to assist any council where dereliction funding might be worthwhile and effective. I will be bidding to maintain into 2014. The Armagh bid, along with all other council bids, will be reconsidered as and when further funding becomes available and I hope it will become available quickly including through in-year monitoring rounds.

Any council can refresh its original bid if it wishes. Indeed I am writing to Councils to ask if they wish to adjust their bid. Armagh City Council may wish to reflect the importance of the 2014 Giro d'Italia cycle race in any revised bid.

Review of Public Administration: Transition Committees

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the timeframe for the statutory implementation of transition committees.

(AQO 3477/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I expect to lay the draft regulations for the operation of the Statutory Transition Committees in the Assembly in April. Subject to their passage through the Assembly process, this would enable Transition Committees to be placed on a statutory footing in May/June 2013.

To achieve this, I intend using the existing primary powers contained in the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Northern Ireland) Act 2010. However, as part of the process to constitute the Statutory Transition Committees, the regulations must be considered firstly by the Environment Committee and then debated in a plenary session of the Assembly and later approved by resolution of the Assembly before they can be made.

Scrap Metal

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of the Environment whether he intends to introduce legislation to further regulate the scrap metal trade.

(AQO 3478/11-15)

Mr Attwood: Regulation of the scrap metal trade as an industry falls outwith the powers of the Department of the Environment. Therefore, I have no plans to introduce further legislation to regulate the industry as such.

However, what the DOE can and does do is regulate the waste/environmental activities carried out by scrap metal dealers and I am already taking steps to strengthen environmental legislation to help combat this problem.

While environmental measures will not address fully the problem of metal theft, it is considered that they will be useful to assist in dealing with the problem, since it has been identified that environmental legislation has a role to play in tackling the issue of metal theft, due to the fact that metal thieves often also commit environmental offences.

Therefore, with effect from 4th March 2013, the Department is commencing the powers contained in Articles 5, 9, 14, 15 and 16 of the Waste (Amendment) (Northern Ireland) Order 2007 and Sections 1 and 2 of the Waste and Contaminated Land (Amendment) Act (NI) 2011. When commenced these provisions will:

- Allow the Department to issue fixed penalty notices for certain offences;
- Allow authorised officers (and in some cases constables) to stop, search and seize vehicles and to detain seized property; and
- Provide the Department with powers to make subordinate legislation in relation to waste carriers, including the power to impose certain conditions on waste carriers and to inspect vehicles to ensure compliance with such conditions.

A number of these primary legislative provisions, once commenced, will require further subordinate legislation. Therefore, commencement of the above powers will not, necessarily, provide a quick fix, as policy development and consultation will be required but work on this legislation is already started and officials are working to progress the necessary subordinate legislation as quickly as possible, taking account of other work priorities.

In addition, other proposals being looked at by the Department include amending the Duty of Care Regulations to remove the 7-days grace for waste carriers/holders to produce documentation to the Department upon request. The intention of this amendment is to make it a requirement to carry/hold the appropriate documentation with the waste to which it refers and make it an offence not to do so. This will allow authorised officers or the police to 'weed out' illegal transfer of wastes, including metal. Consultation on these proposals has already commenced and will close on 26 April 2013. Allowing for Assembly processes it is hoped that this legislation will be introduced by early Summer 2013.

Fly-tipping: Hazardous and Non-hazardous Waste

Mr Moutray asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the number of outstanding referrals or complaints of fly-tipping of hazardous and non-hazardous waste that were reported to the Northern Ireland Environment Agency within the past year. (AQO 3479/11-15)

Mr Attwood: NIEA have currently four referrals reported under the fly-tipping pilot arrangements which remain outstanding.

Planning Application: Sprucefield

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department had made an assessment of the impact of the former retail planning application at Sprucefield on other retail centres in Lurgan, Portadown and Craigavon. (AQO 3481/11-15)

Mr Attwood: A major Article 31 planning application for a retail scheme including a Department Store, 19 Retail Units, restaurants and associated infrastructural development at Sprucefield, Lisburn for Sprucefield Centre Limited (S/2009/1045/F) was withdrawn by the applicant on the 31 January 2013.

This was on the eve of the date on which evidence was due to be submitted to the Planning Appeals Commission by the parties to the anticipated Public Inquiry on the 15 April 2013. The Department had in preparation for the inquiry considered the potential retail impact of the proposal on settlements within 60 minute drive time from the proposal. This assessment indicated that the proposal, when considered with other approved retail development of a similar nature, would significantly detract from the retail centres of Lurgan, Portadown and Craigavon with cumulative impacts respectively of 7.7%, 18.3% and 35.6 % respectively.

Vehicle Licensing Integration Project

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the Vehicle Licensing Integration Project. (AQO 3483/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency in Swansea are responsible for vehicle licensing throughout the United Kingdom but services are provided to customers in Northern Ireland by the Driver & Vehicle Agency under an agreement between my Department and the Department for Transport.

At present there are two separate IT systems involved, one for Northern Ireland and one for Britain, and DVLA are currently in the process of developing a fully integrated system for the whole of the UK.

An integrated system, which DVLA plan to have ready by November 2013, will enable customers here to get access to the enhanced services that have been available in Britain for many years, services denied to motorists in Northern Ireland by a lack of investment by DVLA in the IT system here. When this system is implemented, customers will be able to renew tax discs online or by telephone and carry out a wide range of transactions at Post Offices.

Although the introduction of online facilities and better services at Post Offices would be positive developments in themselves, DVLA are also proposing to use the integrated computer system to transfer all of the work not done online or in Post Offices to Swansea and to terminate the agreement with DVA, mirroring the planned closure of the regional and local motor tax offices in Britain and the centralisation of work in Swansea. That would take away the funding for 323 jobs in DVA, and reduce the quality of the services provided locally to those who rely currently on access to trained staff.

I am completely opposed to this proposal because of the impact on staff in DVA, who have consistently provided exceptionally high standards of service; because of the impact on the local economy, especially in Coleraine, where most of the jobs are based; and because of the impact on the economy of Northern Ireland as a whole. I have made it clear to Ministers in London that now is not the time to be cutting further public sector jobs when the Executive is working hard to stimulate and re-balance the economy, in difficult and challenging economic circumstances.

I am meeting the Transport Minister in London again on 5 March to discuss the current position and to press the case for the retention of vehicles licensing services, and the associated jobs, in Northern Ireland.

Car Insurance

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of the Environment what discussions he has had with the Minister of Justice and others to produce a package of measures that could lead to a lowering of the cost of car insurance, particularly for young drivers. (AQO 3484/11-15)

Mr Attwood: I am committed and taking any action. Separately, and working with the Minister of Justice, other Executive colleagues and relevant interests, the aim is to bear down on motor insurance costs.

To this end, I have been engaging extensively with insurance, legal and consumer organisations to identify and monitor concrete actions that can be taken to tackle the high cost of insurance premiums here. This work includes consideration of the issues of legal costs, referral fees and claims management companies, personal injury claims and telematics products. This work has included two recent meetings with the Association of British Insurers, Law Society (NI) and Consumer Council on 14/11/2012 and 08/02/2013. The agenda has been to decisively address insurance premiums, particularly for young drivers and rural dwellers. Motor insurance issues are also discussed at meetings of the Ministerial Group on Road Safety which I chair and which Minister Ford attends.

In addition, as part of my response to the problem, there are some practical and legal measures being taken forward in the Department. My officials are progressing a number of major road safety initiatives including graduated driver licensing, anti-drink and drug driving measures and mutual recognition of penalty points across the island of Ireland. The primary objective of these measures is to clearly reduce road deaths and serious injuries, but subsequent reductions in insurance costs would be an important secondary benefit. In my meeting with the ABI, I have been making the argument that if Northern Ireland has the most bold and radical driving regime in these islands and a consequence on road deaths/serious injuries, the insurance industry must reflect this in premiums, especially for young drivers.

MOT: Testing Guidelines

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of the Environment whether he has any plans to align MOT testing guidelines with those in England and Wales, particularly in the case of pre 1960 classic or antique vehicles; and when this alignment will occur. (AQW 20365/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Department has consulted on possible exemption of certain categories of historic vehicles from MOT testing. The responses indicated that there is broad support for exemption of pre-1960 vehicles from periodic testing, in line with the British Government's exemption which has been in place since 18 November 2012.

The Environment Committee has indicated that it is content with the Department's proposed way forward following the consultation, which is to make use of the exemption in Roadworthiness Directive 2009/40/EC concerning the periodic testing of pre-1960 vehicles.

However on 13 July 2012, the European Commission published a 'Roadworthiness Package' which, amongst other things, addresses periodic roadworthiness tests for motor vehicles, therein making changes to the rules that apply to historic vehicles; the proposals are expected to be introduced no earlier than August 2014.

If implemented as then drafted, these proposals would narrow the parameters within which the Department can provide for exemptions to historic vehicles, as the definition of a historical vehicle was more prescriptively described. While the Department's policy intentions remained the same; that is to make exempt pre-1960 vehicles from the MOT regime, we had to be mindful of the changing legislative context, to ensure that any changes we make are not made redundant by incoming EC Regulations.

Following receipt of a further update on the EU negotiations regarding the roadworthiness package, one of the main amendments in which was a change to the definition of "historic vehicles" which allows vehicles that have not undergone "substantial" changes to be still classed as historic, I have instructed officials to proceed with legislative amendment to exempt pre-1960 vehicles from the MOT test.

There are a number of issues that have needed to be resolved, including provision for a voluntary MOT test for such vehicles (for purposes including cherished plate transfer), where Northern Ireland law differs from British law and have needed careful attention. However, I believe that we are now close to resolving these issues with the Departmental Solicitors. Subject to receipt of final advice, the Department will now amend the relevant legislation to exempt pre-1960 vehicles from MOT testing and I will shortly confirm the timescale to bring about this legislative change.

Review of Public Administration: Shadow Councils

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment, given the short time frame envisaged for the Statutory Transition Committees, is he is still planning to introduce Shadow Councils in 2014. (AQO 3542/11-15)

Mr Attwood: The Executive believes it is essential to provide for a shadow period prior to the new councils assuming their full range of powers and functions.

The Statutory Transition Committees, which will come into effect in May/June 2013, will play a key role taking forward convergence work and in gathering information for the use of successor councils in shadow form, to enable the new councils to "hit the ground running" as quickly as possible following the next local government elections. The new councils will, during the shadow period, use the information and advice provided by Statutory Transition Committees to aid them in taking key decisions in the run down to assuming their full range of powers and functions on 1 April 2015.

Some key tasks for completion during the shadow period will include: striking the rate for 2015/16; agreeing a budget for the new councils; deciding upon the name and status of the new councils, and agreeing key documents such as the corporate and business plan of the new councils.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Northern Ireland Departments: Employee Childcare Provision

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what Departments are doing to provide childcare for their employees. (AQW 19791/11-15)

Mr Wilson (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): Departments do not provide childcare for civil servants. They will however reimburse staff for the costs of additional registered childcare if they are required to attend work outside their normal work pattern, in line with the provisions of the NICS HR Handbook

In addition, the Northern Ireland Civil Service operates a Salary Sacrifice Childcare Voucher Scheme to assist staff with the costs of registered childcare. Under this arrangement staff agree to sacrifice a proportion of their salary in order to receive vouchers that are used to pay for registered childcare.

Civil Service Pension Schemes

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 19001/11-15, what the current contribution rates are for (i) employees; and (ii) the employer in the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme compared with the North/South Pension Scheme; and whether the intended alignment will include removal of final salary provision from the North/South scheme.

(AQW 20039/11-15)

Mr Wilson: Contribution levels in the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (NI) are as follows:

(i) Employee		(ii) Employer

A single employers' contribution rate for North/South Bodies is not available for the North/South Pension Scheme. The total pension costs for each body are disclosed in their annual accounts alongside wages and salary costs. These figures allow the computation of an effective employer's rate for each individual body, for example DFP sponsors one North/South Body, the Special EU Programmes Body (SEUPB). The effective employer's contribution rate for SEUPB in the calendar year 2011 was 31.2%.

The intended alignment will include removal of final salary provision from the North/South scheme, subject to transitional protection arrangements for existing members.

Public Sector Land or Property

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel why surplus public sector land or property is offered first to other public sector bodies; and under what legislation or authority is this policy enforced. (AQW 20081/11-15)

Mr Wilson: This advice is contained within my Department's policy documents Managing Public Money NI and Central Advisory Unit's Disposal of Surplus Public Sector Property in Northern Ireland (March 2010 edition).

Once requirements are clearly identified and where it makes sound commercial and economic sense to do so, surplus public sector land or property is normally offered, in the first instance, to other public sector bodies at market value. This saves the public purse significant additional costs involved in having to locate and acquire alternative property, which would be costly both in time and money, particularly where the exercise of compulsory purchase powers might otherwise be necessary.

Unemployment

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many people, currently registered as unemployed, have been out of work for a period of (i) up to six months; (ii) between six months and a year; (iii) between one and two years; (iv) between two and three years; (v) between three and four years; and (vi) over four years.

(AQW 20133/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The official measure of unemployment is sourced to the Northern Ireland Labour Force Survey (LFS). However, the LFS is a sample survey and the information overleaf for unemployment by duration is not sourced to the LFS because of the relatively large confidence intervals around the estimates. This is due to sample size constraints in the LFS.

The table overleaf is sourced to the claimant count measure of unemployment. This shows the number of persons claiming unemployment related benefits in Northern Ireland at January 2013 disaggregated by the requested durations.

Table 1 - NI Claimant Count by Duration at January 2013

Duration	Total
0-6 Months	33,225
6-12 Months	15,110
12-24 Months	13,575
24-36 Months	2,725
36-48 Months	615
48+ Months	335
NI Total	65,590

This table may not add up due to roundings.

Unemployment

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many people registered as unemployed for two or more years are aged (i) under 25; (ii) 25-35; (iii) 35-45; and (iv) over 45.

(AQW 20134/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The official measure of unemployment is sourced to the Northern Ireland Labour Force Survey (LFS). However, the LFS is a sample survey and the information attached for unemployment by age and duration is not sourced to the LFS because of the relatively large confidence intervals around such estimates. This is due to sample size constraints in the LFS.

The table overleaf is sourced to the claimant count measure of unemployment. This shows the number of persons claiming unemployment related benefits in Northern Ireland at January 2013 for two or more years, disaggregated by the requested age groups.

Table 1 - NI Claimant Count by Age at January 2013 for claimants claiming two or more years.

Age	Total claiming for two or more years
Under 25	225
25-34	875
35-44	940
45 and Over	1,635
NI Total	3,675

Narrow Water Bridge

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel when he will make an announcement on whether his Department has approved INTERREG IVA Programme funding for the Narrow Water Bridge.

(AQW 20149/11-15)

Mr Wilson: The Narrow Water Bridge project is currently seeking funding through the INTERREG IVA Programme and DFP are the accountable department in Northern Ireland.

DFP is currently involved in the process of critically reviewing the project. In addition, input has been sought and received from interested departments, DOE and DRD, to ensure the project can fully comply with all requirements imposed.

The project must fully progress through the agreed assessment process and all issues satisfactorily dealt with before a decision can be taken.

Titanic Signature Building

Mr McDevitt asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what steps were taken to ensure that the tendering process surrounding the Titanic Signature Building was compliant with EU tendering requirements. (AQW 20181/11-15)

Mr Wilson: Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) advised the Department of Enterprise, Trade & Investment (DETI) in relation to the procurement of the Titanic Signature Building (TSB). This procurement was covered by the requirements of The Public Contract Regulations 2006 (the Regulations).

DETI took the view that there was no other realistic or feasible location, other than the site on which the TSB is located. The TSB could not be constructed without the consent of the leasehold owner of the site, Titanic Quarter Limited (TQL). TQL was not prepared to relinquish its exclusive rights to the site to enable competitive tendering of the development.

In these circumstances - where the contracting authority does not have a choice between different tenderers when awarding a contract - direct negotiation with one contractor can be used. Compliance of this approach with the Regulations was confirmed by legal counsel.

CPD therefore recommended that DETI award a contract to TQL on the basis of a single tender negotiation.

Public Spending Schemes: Sub-contractors and Suppliers

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the measures which are being undertaken by his Department to protect sub-contractors and suppliers in public spending schemes; and what is entailed in the proposed Project Bank Accounts.

(AQW 20222/11-15)

Mr Wilson: On 15 November 2012 the Procurement Board, which I chair, endorsed measures to protect subcontractors and suppliers in government construction contracts. The measures include:

Ensuring that contractors are paid within 10 days of the date of their invoice;

 Ensuring that all contractors are signed up to the Construction Industry Forum Northern Ireland (CIFNI) Fair Payment Charter;

- Ensuring that Project Managers check that subcontractors and suppliers are being paid promptly; and
- Ensuring that government contracts are not awarded to contractors who:
  - are in administration:
  - · habitually fail to pay their subcontractors and suppliers promptly; or
  - submit abnormally low tenders or sub-economic tenders.

On 12 December 2012 I wrote to my Ministerial colleagues asking them to introduce these measures in their departments and Centres of Procurement Expertise.

Project Bank Accounts (PBAs) were introduced in January 2013 for all new construction contracts tendered by Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) that have an estimated value of over £1million and a significant subcontracting element.

A Project Bank Account is a bank account which holds the money in trust for the supply chain. This helps to protect the money in the event of administration or receivership and accelerates payment to the supply chain. Suppliers, including the main contractor, are paid simultaneously, usually within five days of the contracting authority depositing funds into the Project Bank Account.

DFP: Information Service

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many staff are employed in his Department's Information Service; and what is the annual cost of this service.

(AQW 20261/11-15)

Mr Wilson: There are currently six posts in the Department's Information Service, consisting of five Information Officer posts and one administrative support post. However, due to staff turnover, two of the Information Officer posts are currently vacant.

In the financial year 2011/12, the latest complete year for which information is available, the total cost of Information Service staff in DFP was £228,878.

Narrow Water Bridge

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, in light of the motion agreed by the Assembly on 4 December 2012, for an update on the provision of funding for the Narrow Water Bridge project. (AQW 20301/11-15)

Mr Wilson: At the Assembly debate on the 4 December 2012 the factors influencing the decision making process for the Narrow Water Bridge project were clearly outlined. A decision on the project could not be prejudged and the costs, benefits, value for money, deliverability and risk would be key issues in the assessment process being undertaken by the department. This remains the position.

DFP is currently undertaking an internal critical review of the project. This process also involves input and discussion with DRD and DOE as policy responsible departments for elements of the proposal. These departments must also ensure the project adheres with relevant statutory undertakings.

DFP officials have and will continue to progress the project through the assessment process in a timely manner. A decision on the project will be taken when all information is in place to do so.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on support services for patients with myalgic encephalomyelitis.

(AQW 19949/11-15)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): I have been advised by the Health and Social Care Board that an outline service model has been developed for patients with Myalgic Encephalomyelitis/Chronic Fatigue Syndrome (ME/CFS) with input from patients, carers and service providers. The key elements of the model are: a designated clinical lead for ME/CFS in each Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust; a regional network of expertise; and, the provision of systematic programmes to support patients to manage their condition.

It is anticipated that a draft commissioning specification will be drawn up by the end of March 2013 which will guide the implementation of the service model in each Local Commissioning Group area to ensure consistency across Northern Ireland.

The Health and Social Care Board and Public Health Agency will work with HSC Trusts to develop a regional care pathway and network. Following on from this HSC Trusts and primary care will work together to ensure that local care pathways are implemented, consistent with the model.

Health Infrastructure Board

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 15307/11-15, for an update on the Health Infrastructure Board, particularly in relation to the development the Health and Social Care campus for Derry.

(AQW 19955/11-15)

Mr Poots: As previously indicated, the HSCB consultation document on 'Transforming Your Care: Vision to Action' included an illustrative model of 'hub and spoke' Health and Care Centres, which included Waterside and City side.

The HSCB is currently analysing all of the consultation responses for Transforming Your Care: Vision to Action and will report to my Department shortly on the findings of this consultation. I will then review the HSCB's consultation report and will make an announcement on the way forward.

The Health Infrastructure Board is continuing to explore alternative funding models to support this programme of work. Future developments in this area will be dependent on the outcome of both this work and the TYC consultation process and will be subject to the normal business case approval process.

Belfast Health and Social Care Trust: Legal Advice Costs

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust has spent on legal advice for issues that have arisen through their complaints department, in each of the last five years. (AQW 19959/11-15)

Mr Poots: The spend by Belfast Health and Social Care Trust on legal advice for issues that have arisen through their complaints department, in each of the last five years, is set out in the table below:

2011/12	2010/11	2009/1	2008/09	2007/08
£263	£287	£2,512	£984	£346

Prisoners: Illegal Drugs

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many times prisoners have been treated for the effects of illegal drugs in each of the last five years, broken down by prison facility, including HMP Hydebank Young Offenders Centre.

(AQW 19979/11-15)

Mr Poots: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has been responsible for the delivery of healthcare services in NI Prison Service establishments since 1 April 2008. However, due to the fact that prisoners are often moved around all three prison establishments, it is not possible to break the requested statistics into specific locations. Information on the number of prisoners who have been treated for the effects of illegal drugs is set out in the table below.

Year	Number of prisoners treated for the effects of illegal drugs
2008	17
2009	14
2010	30
2011	35
2012	40

South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust: Paramedics

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of hours worked by paramedics in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust in each month of the last three years; and what is the forecast of the number of hours which will be worked in each of the next twelve months. (AQW 20022/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information is not available in the format requested and could only be obtained by the NI Ambulance Services Trust at a disproportionate cost. However the Trust has provided the number of hours worked by Paramedics, Paramedics in Training and Emergency Medical Technicians based in stations and deployment points which are located within the South Eastern Local Commissioning Group area as follows:

	Actual Number of Hours Worked			Forecast Number

Multiple Sclerosis

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what self-management programmes are available for people diagnosed with Multiple Sclerosis in each Health and Social Care Trust area. (AQW 20029/11-15)

Mr Poots: People diagnosed with Multiple Sclerosis are supported through a variety of ways to self manage their condition. This may include access to structured patient education programmes, but often will involve information and self management advice provided on a one to one basis. For example, specialist MS nurses will often meet with people who are newly diagnosed with Multiple Sclerosis to provide them with information and guidance to help them self manage their condition and will continue to be available to provide ongoing advice and support according to an individual's needs and wishes as their condition evolves.

Currently, there is no comprehensive dataset of the number and type of dedicated structured patient education and self-management programmes available across Northern Ireland for people with long term conditions, including those with Multiple Sclerosis.

However, my Department has a Programme for Government commitment which is to enrol people with a long term condition (and who want to be enrolled) on a dedicated chronic condition management programme. The year one milestone for 2012-13 is to identify patient education and self-management programmes that are in place in each HSC Trust area, including information about the number and type of programmes, provider organisations, and the number of attendees. My officials are working with the Public Health Agency to establish a dataset of such programmes for the baseline year 2011-12, and this is on target for completion by 31 March 2013.

Once in place, this will help inform priorities for commissioning of patient education and self management programmes into the future. Arrangements will also be put in place to monitor progress against the PfG commitment over time, including the number and type of patient education and self management programmes available.

Electrophysiology Procedures

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 17786/11-15, how recent staffing changes at the Southern Health and Social Care Trust will affect the delivery of future electrophysiology (EP) procedures and the additional proposed sessions; and for a breakdown of patient waiting times for EP tests. (AQW 20033/11-15)

Mr Poots: I am advised by the Southern Health and Social Care Trust that an Electrophysiology (EP) clinician will be leaving in April 2013 and the Trust is currently working to fill this vacancy. Additional sessions commenced in January 2013 and additional capacity has also been secured from the Independent Sector for this service. The Trust is working with the Health and Social Care Board to retain and further expand this capacity during 2013/14.

A breakdown of the numbers waiting for an EP test is given in the table below.

Weeks waiting	Number of patients <sup>1</sup>
0 – 9 weeks	13
>9 – 13 weeks	14
>13 – 21 weeks	27
>21 – 26 weeks	11
>26 – 36 weeks	29
> 36 weeks	44

<sup>1</sup> This information has been supplied by the Southern Health and Social Care Trust

Paramedics: Non-driving Duties

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many paramedics, who have been employed in the last five years, are restricted to non-driving duties because of medical conditions.

(AQW 20035/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested is provided in the table below.

Year	Number of Paramedics/Paramedic Supervisors restricted to non-driving duties because of medical conditions
2007/08	5
2008/09	4
2009/10	4
2010/11	4
2011/12	7

Northern Ireland Ambulance Service: Drivers

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many paramedics and emergency vehicle drivers in the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service have lost their driving licence in the past five years because of (i) alcohol related offences; and (ii) other traffic offences; and how many of these personnel are still serving as paramedics in the service.

(AQW 20036/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Northern Ireland Ambulance Service has advised that three paramedics were disqualified from driving in the past five years because of alcohol related offences of whom two remain employed as paramedics. One emergency vehicle driver was disqualified for another traffic offence.

Fire Stations: Cushendall

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why Cushendall has not yet been provided with a new fire station; and what is the timescale for providing this facility.

(AQW 20040/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Cushendall Fire Station is not sufficiently high up the Northern Ireland Fire & Rescue Service list of priorities to be funded in the current budget period. Until decisions are made on priorities for the next budget period, it is not possible to set a timescale for this project.

Crèche and Daycare Facilities: North Down Constituency

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of (i) crèche and daycare facilities in the North Down constituency; (ii) children registered at each facility; and (iii) children on the waiting list for each facility.

(AQW 20044/11-15)

Mr Poots: The table below details the number of crèche and daycare facilities in the North Down constituency

Parliamentary Constituency	Day Nurseries	Out of Schools	Crèches	Playgroups	Total
North Down	19	6	3	30	58

It is not possible to provide detail on the number of children registered at each facility or waiting lists for each establishment as this information is not held by HSC Trusts.

Organ Donors

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many registered organ donors there were in each of the last five years.

(AQW 20046/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested has been supplied by NHS Blood and Transplant, which is the organ donation organisation for the UK and is responsible for matching and allocating donated organs.

Date	Total number on the organ donor register	New registrations <sup>1</sup>	Registrations still on the organ donor register
31/03/2007	377,533
31/03/2008	396,718	36,451	36,301
31/03/2009	440,123	43,394	43,275
31/03/2010	477,150	37,419	37,307
31/03/2011	485,050	14,492	14,431
31/03/2012	521,040	36,570	36,479
19/02/2013	547,774	27,260	27,219

Note: 1 excluding duplicate withdrawals and withdrawals registered in error. 2 registrations in the period 1 April 2012 to 19 February 2013.

Example, the total on the ODR as at 31/03/2007 was 377,533 and there were 36,451 new registrations between 01/04/2007 and 31/03/2008. But the numbers will not add up to 396,718 due to withdrawals due to death or other reasons. 36,301 out of 36,451 registrations were still on the ODR as at 19/02/2013 and are included in the total of 547,774.

Organ Donors

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many new people have joined the organ donor list in each of the last five years.

(AQW 20048/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested has been supplied by NHS Blood and Transplant, which is the organ donation organisation for the UK and is responsible for matching and allocating donated organs.

Date	Total number on the organ donor register	New registrations <sup>1</sup>	Registrations still on the organ donor register
31/03/2007	377,533
31/03/2008	396,718	36,451	36,301
31/03/2009	440,123	43,394	43,275
31/03/2010	477,150	37,419	37,307
31/03/2011	485,050	14,492	14,431
31/03/2012	521,040	36,570	36,479
19/02/2013	547,774	27,260	27,219

Note: 1 excluding duplicate withdrawals and withdrawals registered in error. 2 registrations in the period 1 April 2012 to 19 February 2013.

Example, the total on the ODR as at 31/03/2007 was 377,533 and there were 36,451 new registrations between 01/04/2007 and 31/03/2008. But the numbers will not add up to 396,718 due to withdrawals due to death or other reasons. 36,301 out of 36,451 registrations were still on the ODR as at 19/02/2013 and are included in the total of 547,774.

IVF Treatment

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he has considered providing three full cycles of IVF treatment to couples, as recommended in National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidelines. (AQW 20057/11-15)

Mr Poots: The 2004 NICE guidelines on fertility treatment recommended that eligible couples should be offered up to three stimulated cycles of treatment. As this was published before my Department entered into an agreement with NICE in July 2006, the guidelines have not been endorsed for Northern Ireland.

Currently, although we aspire to provide up to three cycles of treatment as recommended by the 2004 NICE guidelines, financial restrictions make this unachievable. Currently we provide one publicly funded treatment to those who meet the criteria and, from 1 April 2012, one frozen embryo transfer is also offered to new referrals who meet the clinical criteria. To increase the number of individual treatments provided within current funding could limit the number of women who could access the service.

NICE has recently published revised guidelines on fertility, which updates and replaces the 2004 guidelines. These guidelines will now be considered by my Department for their applicability to Health and Social Care service provision in Northern Ireland. We will reach a view on this as soon as possible.

Water: Fluoridation

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he has any plans to add fluoride to the water supply.

(AQW 20075/11-15)

Mr Poots: I am still considering my position on fluoridation of the water supply in Northern Ireland and continue to consult with Executive colleagues on the matter before I come to a decision.

If a proposal to fluoridate the water supplies is made, the appropriate evidence from reputable scientific and medical sources will be considered, and we are required under The Water and Sewerage Services (Northern Ireland) Order 2006 to consult and ascertain public opinion. Should such a consultation proceed, we would welcome the views of all interested parties, at that time.

Crisis Centres and Service Providers for Victims

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given the increase in incidents of domestic violence, whether any additional funding will be made available for crisis centres and service providers for victims. (AQW 20091/11-15)

Mr Poots: My Department provides funding for organisations and projects with a regional focus and in this context Women's Aid Federation Northern Ireland as a regional organisation, receives core funding for central administration costs. In addition to this, my Department also contributes funding towards the running of the 24 Hour Domestic Violence Helpline.

Work is underway to appoint a service provider for the provision of an independent advocacy service for potential high risk victims of domestic violence across Northern Ireland. My Department will contribute towards the running costs of this service.

My Department does not directly fund health and social care related services provided by local groups; these services are supported by the Health and Social Care Trusts for the delivery of appropriate services.

Emergency Ambulances: Paramedics

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he has any plans to remove paramedic assistants from emergency ambulances and replace them with drivers, leaving only one paramedic staffing emergency ambulances.

(AQW 20102/11-15)

Mr Poots: There are no Paramedic Assistants in the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service Trust. The reform and modernisation of the ambulance service is primarily a matter for the Chief Executive and Board of the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service Trust. In considering the potential for any change to the provision of emergency ambulance services I would expect the Trust to reflect on best practice in relation to the workforce and the required skills and scope of practice to ensure safe and effective patient care.

Rapid Response Vehicles

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether there is a difference in the criteria for Rapid Response Vehicles used locally compared with those used in England.

(AQW 20110/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (NIAS) has advised that there are some differences between rapid response vehicles (RRVs) working in Northern Ireland and those operating in England. This can include different vehicle profiles, specifications, hours of operation and suitability of calls.

In addition, all NIAS RRVs are crewed by highly skilled paramedics who perform a wide range of clinical interventions, whereas those in England may be crewed by lower grade emergency medical technicians. Furthermore, NIAS RRVs operate between 08:00hrs and midnight whereas some Ambulance Trusts in England operate RRVs on a 24hr basis.

Rapid Response Vehicles: Lone Worker Policy

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the lone worker policy will impact on the use of Rapid Response Vehicles.

(AQW 20112/11-15)

Mr Poots: The Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (NIAS) introduced a formal lone worker policy in 2007 following recommendations from its Health and Safety Committee. However, NIAS already had lone worker and dispatch procedures in place since 2003 to support its rapid response vehicle (RRV) paramedics.

NIAS reviewed these procedures during 2012 and is now working to amalgamate them into a more comprehensive Standard Operating Procedure (SOP) for RRVs. NIAS does not expect the revised SOP to have any impact on the RRV response model which has now been in place for 10 years. It remains the case that RRV paramedics can be stood down from certain calls, for example those that might place them at risk of harm.

Rapid Response Vehicles

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, over the last twelve months, what was the average time that Rapid Response Vehicles had to remain at a call out whilst waiting for an ambulance to arrive, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust area.

(AQW 20113/11-15)

Mr Poots: Information on the average time between the arrival of a Rapid Response Vehicle (RRV) to a call out and the arrival of a conveying A&E ambulance is provided by Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust in the table below1:

HSC Trust	Average Time from Arrival of a Rapid Response Vehicle until Arrival of an A&E Conveying Ambulance (01/02/2012 – 31/01/2013)2
Belfast	00:14:28
Northern	00:13:26
South Eastern	00:16:20
Southern	00:12:39
Western	00:11:22
Total	00:14:06

Source: Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (NIAS) Health & Social Care Trust

- 1 These figures should not be interpreted as 'waiting times' as RRV paramedics will provide life sustaining care including defibrillation, airway protection and drug administration until the conveying A&E ambulance arrives.
- 2 Includes all Emergency and Urgent calls where a RRV arrived at the scene of the incident and was followed by a conveying ambulance.

Ambulances

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many ambulances are available in each Health and Social Care Trust; and how many of these ambulances are used to provide cover in the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust area.

(AQW 20114/11-15)

Mr Poots: Ambulances are stationed in particular locations across Northern Ireland, with allocation based on the nearest available appropriate ambulance at any given time, resulting in resources crossing over HSC Trust boundaries on a daily basis. It should therefore be noted that the number of ambulances available in each HSC Trust does not reflect the cover provided at any given time.

Information on the number of emergency ambulance vehicles available at ambulance stations within each division/HSC Trust area is shown in the table below:

Division / HSC Trust	Number
Belfast	15
South Eastern	21
Northern	32
Southern	22
Western	24
Total	114

Source: Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (NIAS) Health & Social Care Trust

It is not possible to accurately detail the number of ambulances used to provide cover in the Belfast HSC Trust as cover and availability vary due to changeable factors and could only be measured at a point in time.

Intensive Care Units

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of Intensive Care Units that were operational in each of the last five years; and how many units there were per million of the population. (AQW 20123/11-15)

Mr Poots: The number of intensive care units that were operational in each of the last five years and the number of units per million of the population are detailed below;

Year	Number of Intensive Care Units	NI Population	Rate Per 1,000,000 Population
2007/08	12	1,759,148	6.8
2008/09	12	1,775,003	6.8
2009/10	12	1,788,896	6.7
2010/11	12	1,799,392	6.7
2011/12	12	1,806,873	6.6

Ovarian Cancer

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what advice his Department issues to GPs regarding the early detection of ovarian cancer.

(AQW 20138/11-15)

Mr Poots: In May 2012 my Department endorsed NICE Clinical Guideline CG122 – The recognition and initial management of ovarian cancer. The Department passed this to the HSC Board for dissemination to service providers including GPs.

The HSC Board draft Commissioning Plan for 2013/14, which is to be considered and approved by my Department, includes reference to NICE CG122 on ovarian cancer.

Ovarian Cancer

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many women have been diagnosed with the early stages of ovarian cancer in each year since 2010. (AQW 20147/11-15)

Mr Poots: ANSWER (input from Northern Ireland Cancer Registry)

The table below gives the number of women diagnosed with both the early and advanced stages of ovarian cancer in each year since 2010.

The number of women diagnosed with ovarian cancer (ICD-10 C56) in N. Ireland in the years 2010 and 2011, by stage of disease

Ovarian Cancer

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many women have been diagnosed with advanced stage ovarian cancer in each year since 2010.

(AQW 20148/11-15)

Mr Poots: ANSWER (input from Northern Ireland Cancer Registry)

The table below gives the number of women diagnosed with both the early and advanced stages of ovarian cancer in each year since 2010.

Childhood Adversity

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the Northern Ireland Commissioner for Children and Young People report "Still Vulnerable - the impact of early childhood experiences on adolescent suicide and accidental death".

(AQW 20163/11-15)

Mr Poots: I welcome the publication of the report by the Northern Ireland Commissioner for Children and Young People. It supports the findings of an overview report commissioned and launched by my department earlier this year. The overview report analysed the findings of a number of case reviews undertaken by the Regional Child Protection Committee following the death or serious injury of children, in circumstances where abuse was a known or suspected factor. Key learning points from the overview report will be taken forward by the Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland (SBNI) which came into operation in September last year. Within its draft Strategic Plan, the SBNI has identified as a strategic priority the need to improve inter and intra-agency assessment processes to ensure that they take account of children's experience of multiple adversities as well as focusing on individual incidents.

If we are going to be able to respond effectively to childhood adversity, we need to build and strengthen parental capacity. My Department's Families Matter strategy recognises the need for parents and families to be supported in bringing up their children, particularly through the provision of early intervention support mechanisms such as Family Support Hubs. We are in the process of establishing Family Support Hubs across Northern Ireland. The objective of each Hub is to enhance awareness, accessibility, co-ordination and provision of family support resources in local areas, with an emphasis on prevention and early intervention.

Regrettably, as demonstrated by the Commissioner's report, too many young people die each year in Northern Ireland following suicide or accidental death. It is essential that Departments work together to provide services which intervene earlier in a sustained and co-ordinated approach to reduce these tragic incidents. We published the Protect Life Strategy in June 2012 and the Public Health Agency (PHA) has in place a training action plan for suicide awareness and mental health promotion which seeks to deliver and improve uptake of training by those in "gateway" positions such as GPs, A&E staff, teachers, youth workers, youth custody officers and sports coaches.

Finally, a number of the recommendations in the Commissioner's report were directed at my department in conjunction with the Health and Social Care Board, the Children and Young People's Strategic Partnership, the Public Health Agency or the Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland. These are actively being considered.

Health and Social Care Trusts: Meal Costs

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the total number and average cost of (i) breakfasts; (ii) lunches; and (iii) dinners served in (a) hospitals; and (b) nursing and residential care homes, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust area over the last 12 months.

(AQW 20167/11-15)

Mr Poots: The data is not currently held centrally.

However, the action plan accompanying the recently issued "Strategic Framework for the Delivery of Health & Social Care Catering Services" includes a plan to collect more accurate, more detailed management information on catering costs.

Epilepsy

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what services are in place to help people who have epilepsy.

(AQW 20177/11-15)

Mr Poots: I am advised by the Health and Social Care (HSC) Board that epilepsy services are provided locally in the five HSC Trusts, either through their local neurology service and/or via the outreach neurology service provided by the Belfast HSC Trust. More complex cases are referred to the regional neurology service for assessment and further management if required e.g. neurosurgery / neuroradiology. There is a pre-pregnancy clinic, in the Belfast HSC Trust, for women with epilepsy who are planning pregnancy.

The majority of children with epilepsy are cared for by paediatricians, in conjunction with general practitioners and the primary care team. As much care and support as possible is normally provided close to a child's home and this will include services such as physiotherapy, speech and language therapy and occupational therapy if they are necessary. Children who require specialist care may be seen at the Royal Belfast Hospital for Sick Children, where a paediatric neurology team is skilled in the management of more severe epilepsy. They may also be referred to other centres in the UK, such as Great Ormond Street Hospital for specialist expert assessment, advice or ongoing management, depending on their needs.

Tooth Decay: Children in North Down

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for a breakdown of the numbers of children being treated for tooth decay in North Down, in each of the last five years. (AQW 20179/11-15)

Mr Poots: This information is not available.

Drug Addictions

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what strategies are being pursued to reduce the number of people with drug addictions.

(AQW 20196/11-15)

Mr Poots: In 2012, I launched the revised cross-departmental strategy to prevent and address the harm related to alcohol and drug, known as the New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs Phase 2. Approximately £8 million is allocated to its implementation each year, and additional funding is provided through the mental health budget for the provision of treatment and support services.

The NSD seeks to direct action across five pillars: education, prevention and early intervention; harm reduction; treatment and support; law and criminal justice; and monitoring, evaluation and research. It also contains a number of priority areas for action including: developing a regional commissioning framework for alcohol and drug services; tackling drug-related anti-social behaviour; targeting those at risk and vulnerable; reducing the availability of illicit drugs; and addressing local community issues.

A range of services is available across Northern Ireland that support the NSD Phase 2 and details of these can be found online at: http://www.publichealth.hscni.net/publications/drug-and-alcohol-directories-services.

Drug Addictions: North Down

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an estimate of the number of people in North Down who have a drug addiction; and how many of these people are receiving treatment for drug addiction. (AQW 20197/11-15)

Mr Poots: Information on the number of people in North Down who have a drug addiction; and are receiving treatment for drug addiction is not available within the Department.

The Northern Ireland Drug Addicts Index holds information on all those persons registered in concurrence with the Misuse of Drugs (Notification of and Supply to Addicts) (Northern Ireland) Regulations 1973. It should be noted that addiction as measured by the Northern Ireland Drug Addicts Index does not mean that those people are being treated for their addiction. Information on the Northern Ireland Drug Addicts Index is not available at Constituency level, therefore the number of patients registered at Trust level is given. The latest information available relates to 2011 when there were 23 registered addicts in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust area.

Information on individuals presenting to treatment services with problem drug use is collected on the Northern Ireland Drug Misuse Database (DMD). The DMD holds information on problem drug users presenting to treatment services for the first time, or for the first time in six months or more. A problem drug user is defined as a person who experiences social, psychological, physical or legal problems (related to intoxication and/or regular excessive consumption and/or dependence) as a consequence of their own use of drugs or chemical substances. It is important to note that being in treatment for problem drug use does not necessarily constitute addiction. Information on the Northern Ireland Drug Misuse Database is not available at Constituency level, therefore the number of problem drug users presenting to treatment services at Trust level is given. The latest information available relates to 2011/12 when there were 430 problem drug users who presented to treatment services based within the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust area.

DHSSPS: Information Service

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many staff are employed in his Department's Information Service; and what is the annual cost of this service.

(AQW 20214/11-15)

Mr Poots: The information requested is shown in the table.

Table: DHSSPS Information Office Staffing and Cost

Information Officers	7
General Administrative Staff	3
Annual Cost (2011/12)	£352,692

Information Officers provide a professional communications service - including media, online and advertising services - with office support by general administration staff.

Patients: Residential and Nursing Care Sector

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assessment tools are utilised in determining the care needs of patients in the residential and nursing care sector; and how this is translated into deciding the appropriate level of financial support.

(AQW 20312/11-15)

Mr Poots: Assessment via care management is the way in which complex need and risks are managed by HSC Trusts in terms of longer term placement decisions.

The Northern Ireland Single Assessment Tool (NISAT), developed primarily in relation to assessing the needs of older people and now being used in some physical and sensory disability programmes, was designed to support the exercise of professional judgement in the care management process. The tool is structured in component parts and uses domains which can be completed according to the level of health and social care needs experienced, from non-complex to complex. Use of the tool is intended to promote consistency of access to high quality services across Northern Ireland.

A financial assessment should only commence after an assessment of the service user's health and social care needs has been completed. The Health and Personal Social Services (Assessment of Resources) Regulations (NI) 1993 set out the form of the financial assessment used to determine how much an individual is required to contribute toward the cost of social care provided in a residential care or nursing home.

Full information on the care management process, the provision of services including placement of service users in residential care or nursing homes, and guidance on charging for social care provided in the residential care and nursing home sector is available in Circular HSC (ECCU) 1/2010, issued by my Department in March 2010.

The circular can be accessed using the following link:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/hsc-eccu-1-2010.pdf

Meningitis B Vaccine, Bexsero

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when the Meningitis immunisation Bexsero will be made available to families.

(AQW 20315/11-15)

Mr Poots: Vaccination policy in Northern Ireland and the rest of the UK is guided by the recommendations of the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI), an independent expert advisory committee that advises the four UK Health Ministers on matters relating to the provision of vaccination and immunisation services. JCVI consider all the available medical and scientific evidence before recommending which vaccines should be offered.

The JCVI has begun an evaluation of the impact and cost-effectiveness of possible meningitis B vaccination strategies. This evaluation requires a complex analysis and final JCVI advice is not expected until later in the year. I will consider the JCVI recommendation when I have received it.

Private Clinics

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to list the procedures under which the Health Service refers patients to private clinics; and the cost of contracting these services to private clinics. (AQW 20462/11-15)

Mr Poots: I am advised by the Health and Social Care (HSC) Board that the Health Service refers patients to the Independent Sector: either as an Extra Contractual Referral (ECR) where a clinician can demonstrate an exceptional clinical need to do so; or where it is not possible (for clinical reasons) to deliver a local service; or under the Elective Reform Initiative (Waiting List Initiatives) where there is a gap between the demand for a service and the capacity a HSC Trust can offer. Generally, the Board's preferred option is that HSC Trusts should offer additional "in house" (i.e. HSC based) activity but the Board will fund Independent Sector transfers at the Trust's request where additional in house capacity cannot be offered.

The HSC Board spends approximately £25m each year in transferring patients for treatment under the ECR process, of which around £6m p.a. would be spent with Independent Sector providers. Under the Elective Reform Initiative, funding for transfers to Independent Sector providers in 2011/12 was £52.6m.

Abortion

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what has been the outcome of the departmental monitoring of the recorded reasons for abortions within the Health Service; and what the monitoring results reveal. (AQW 20607/11-15)

Mr Poots: Work on the development of an information system to provide additional detail on the grounds for termination of pregnancies carried out in Northern Ireland is continuing. It is my intention that any new system will collect robust and consistent information from independent providers in addition to health and social care organisations. Officials are currently addressing how this can best be achieved.

The Department continues to collect statistics on the number of terminations of pregnancy carried out in Health and Social Care facilities in Northern Ireland

Department of Justice

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Competency Framework

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice what is the current status of the proposed Competency Framework for all management grades, custody officers and offender supervisors. (AQW 19927/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): The Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) is currently carrying out an exercise to determine the most appropriate competency framework to put in place for operational management grades, custody officers and offender supervisors.

The competency framework is currently under review and it is being developed alongside role descriptions.

Prisons: Provision of Audio and Electrical Goods

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 17217/11-15, to provide a breakdown of what is available under the term audio/electrical goods.

(AQW 19932/11-15)

Mr Ford: Audio/electrical goods which are available under the current contract are CD players, hair clippers, shavers, radios, desk lamps, DVD players, digital recorders, freeview boxes, TVs, hairdryers, straighteners, portable music systems, digital TV receivers, lamp bulbs, a kettle, a playstation, headphones and video players.

Each prison establishment will provide audio/electrical goods which reflect the diversity of their prisoner population.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Procurement of Televisions

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to televisions bought by the Prison Service, to detail (i) the date of the most recent order; (ii) how many televisions were purchased; (iii) the specifications of the televisions; and (iv) the total cost. (AQW 19935/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service last placed an order for 30 19 inch LED flat screen televisions with its contracted supplier on 7 February 2013.

In line with Commercial in Confidence guidelines, I cannot divulge pricing as this would disadvantage the supplier in any future tendering process.

Northern Ireland Prison Service

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to allegations that a prison officer planted details about Governor Steve Rodford in a republican prisoner's cell at Maghaberry, whether the matter was reported to the PSNI for investigation. (AQW 19968/11-15)

Mr Ford: I can confirm that the matter was reported to the Police Service of Northern Ireland for investigation.

Police and Crime Commissioners: Injury on Duty Award Reviews

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice how many police forces in other parts of the UK automatically carry out Injury on Duty Award reviews at the age of 65.

(AQW 19991/11-15)

Mr Ford: This information is not readily available. There are 43 Police and Crime Commissioners (PCCs), formerly police authorities, in England and Wales and Police Authorities in Scotland. Regulations place a duty on them individually to decide when to carry out reviews of Injury on Duty awards at the age of 65.

Kenneth Douglas

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice who made the decision that Kenneth Douglas was fit for release. (AQW 20041/11-15)

Mr Ford: Decisions on the release of life sentence prisoners are taken by a multi disciplinary case conference typically including representatives from the Northern Ireland Prison Service, the Probation Board for Northern Ireland and an independent psychotherapist.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Compliance Audits of Disciplinary Procedures

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of times that the Northern Ireland Prison Service carried out compliance audits in respect of (i) the conduct and discipline of staff, with particular emphasis on adherence to the Code of Conduct and Discipline including scrutiny of the conduct/standard of investigations comprising allegations of gross misconduct; (ii) the scrutiny of the conduct of Adjudications by Governors; and (iii) the scrutiny of appeals determined by senior Northern Ireland Prison Service management.

(AQW 20042/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service does not carry out formal compliance audits of disciplinary procedures. However, where considered necessary, internal reviews have been carried out in respect of individual cases to ensure that the conduct and discipline policies are complying in all areas of applicable legislation, and that those conducting the adjudications and hearing the appeals do so in accordance with current agreed guidelines.

Newly Qualified Prison Officers

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice when a newly qualified prison officer can have direct contact with prisoners. (AQW 20055/11-15)

Mr Ford: Prison Custody Officers will have direct contact with Prisoners during their initial training and upon taking up their posting at their permanent station.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Voluntary Staff Exit Scheme

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice what percentage of Northern Ireland Prison Service staff who successfully applied for the Voluntary Staff Exit Scheme, were members of the Prisoner Officers' Association. (AQW 20067/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Prison Officers' Association is an independent body and the Member may wish to write to it directly about this matter.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Assaults on Prison Staff

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 19302/11-15, whether he intends to revise his answer in light of the dismissal in November 2012 of a prison officer who was seriously assaulted by a prisoner and unable to return to work due to his injuries, and no post offering light duties was made available.

(AQW 20093/11-15)

Mr Ford: Due to the Data Protection Act 1998 it would not be appropriate to discuss an individual case.

Prisoners: Illegal Drugs

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to the recent BBC Spotlight programme, to clarify on how many occasions in the last two years notices have been posted in prisons to alert prisoners to illegal drugs in operation and who makes the decision to display these notices.

(AQW 20095/11-15)

Mr Ford: Since 2011 the number of notices alerting prisoners to illegal drugs in operation which have been displayed in prison establishments is as follows:-

Magilligan Prison	5 notices
Maghaberry Prison	4 notices
Hydebank Wood	1 notice

The decision to issue these notices is taken by a member of staff at governor grade.

Prisoners: Supporting Prisoners-at-risk Process

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to outline the reasons for the Supporting Prisoner at Risk process (i) not being viable for all vulnerable or at risk prisoners; and (ii) being operated using a system of potential risk grading. (AQW 20096/11-15)

Mr Ford:

- (i) The Supporting Prisoners at Risk (SPAR) process adopts a multi-disciplinary approach which is specific to the care and management of individual prisoners who have self-harmed, or been identified as being at risk of self-harm or suicide. SPAR is not a 'one size fits all' system as it assists prison staff in assessing the individual needs of vulnerable prisoners during periods of immediate crisis.
- (ii) At the SPAR multi-disciplinary case conferences, potential risk is assessed and appropriate interventions put in place to support the individualised care of the prisoner in distress.

PSNI: Equal Pay

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice, following the success, in 2010, of an equal pay claim regarding a lead case by a part-time reserve police officer, who claimed less favourable treatment of fixed term employees (Prevention of Less Favourable Treatment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2002, is there any distinction in how other officers awaiting settlement will have their cases funded.

(AQW 20103/11-15)

Mr Ford: Two individual cases were settled in 2010 on the merits of the individual circumstances in those cases. There are a number of other cases still awaiting listing in the Office of the Industrial Tribunal and it would be inappropriate to comment.

DOJ: Legal Advice Costs

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice how much his Department has spent on legal advice in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 20130/11-15)

Mr Ford: Expenditure on legal advice for the DOJ, including its agencies but not its arm's length bodies, for 2010/11 and 2011/12 is provided in the table below. However, this excludes the NI Courts and Tribunals Service (NICTS) as legal advice costs cannot be separated from total legal costs.

DOJ Body	2010/11	2011/12
Core Department	£3,195	£181,272
NI Prison Service	£1,763	£43,894
Compensation Agency	£397,727	£272,448
Youth Justice Agency	£8,184	£11,959
Total	£410,869	£509,573

Expenditure on legal advice for 2012/13 cannot be provided as the Department and its agencies no longer record these costs separately.

Prisons: Meal Costs

Mr Copeland asked the Minister of Justice to detail the total number and average cost of (i) breakfasts; (ii) lunches; and (iii) evening meals served in prisons over the last 12 months.

(AQW 20165/11-15)

Mr Ford: The total number of meals served in each establishment from 1 February 2012 to 31 January 2013 is detailed as below:

	Breakfast		Evening Meal	Total Meals
Maghaberry	360,900	360,900	360,900	1,082,700
Hydebank	84,226	84,226	84,226	252,678
Magilligan	189,538	189,538	189,538	568,614
Totals	634,664	634,664	634,664	1,903,992

Each establishment has a daily budget of £2.71 to provide every prisoner with a breakfast, lunch and evening meal.

The average cost of breakfast is £0.51. Lunch and evening meal costs fluctuate daily but are a combined average of £2.20 daily.

Prisoner Ombudsman

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 19334/11-15, when the remit of the Prisoner Ombudsman changed on such matters and where can the documentation be found. (AQW 20180/11-15)

Mr Ford: Pursuant to my response to AQW 19334/11-15, the Prisoner Ombudsman's remit covering such matters has not changed.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Suspension From Duty Policy

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 19388/11-15, (i) to provide a copy of the Prison Service Suspension From Duty Policy for the period in question; (ii) how often each suspension from duty should be reviewed; (iii) whether all suspensions are reported to the Minister, as required by legislation; and (iv) to outline the relevance of point (iv) in his answer

(AQW 20186/11-15)

Mr Ford: Operational staff employed by the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) are suspended from duty in accordance with the procedures outlined in the Code of Conduct and Discipline.

Each case of suspension is reviewed on an individual basis as outlined in the Notification of Suspension Form; the applicable conditions of which are agreed between the Governor and the individual suspended from duty.

I am notified of all cases of suspensions imposed on operational grades by NIPS.

Northern Ireland Prison Service: Suspensions From Duty

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 19230/11-15 and AQW 18652/11-15, (i) to detail the number of cases in which the Ombudsman provided information to the Director General or Deputy that resulted in suspensions from duty or disciplinary investigations; (ii) on receipt of such information, in how many cases the Prison Service conducted preliminary inquiries prior to directing disciplinary investigations; (iii) how many meetings concerning staff who would be subject to disciplinary procedures took place between the Ombudsman, the Director General or Deputy; (iv) in how many cases the Ombudsman requested CCTV footage for examination retrospective to the deaths; and (v) at what point prison staff were made aware that the Ombudsman was investigating CCTV footage.

Mr Ford:

- (i) I refer the Member to the responses provided to AQW 18562/11-15 and part (v) of AQW 19230/11-15 and reiterate that the Prison Service has not suspended individuals on the basis of discussions between the Prisoner Ombudsman and the Director General or Deputy Director General, however suspensions and disciplinary proceedings have followed on receipt of reports from the Prisoner Ombudsman.
- (ii) In accordance with the current Code of Conduct and Discipline it is essential that preliminary inquiries are carried out to establish facts prior to directing any internal disciplinary investigations;
- (iii) Meetings are not convened with the Prisoner Ombudsman to discuss staff subject to disciplinary procedures;
- (iv) CCTV footage is an important source of independent evidence and it is normal practice for the Ombudsman to request this following a death in custody and/or in circumstances where this may assist in a complaint or serious incident investigation; and
- (v) The Northern Ireland Prison Service would be aware at the point at which such a request is made.

Prisons: Televisions

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 18499/11-15, to detail the incidents where televisions have been damaged during prison riots over the last five years.

(AQW 20188/11-15)

Mr Ford: During the last five years there have been no incidents within the Prison Service recorded as a riot. Detailed information is not readily available regarding individual items damaged during any indiscipline and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

DOJ: Information Service

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice how many staff are employed in his Department's Information Service; and what is the annual cost of this service.

(AQW 20216/11-15)

Mr Ford: There were twenty-one members of staff employed in the Department and it's Agencies' Information Services as at January 2013, nine of whom are administrative staff who provide a media monitoring service for all of the Executive Departments and public bodies through Service Level Agreements. The full time equivalent staffing figure (FTE) is 19.6.

The annual salary cost of this service is £703,741.99 approximately.

The responsibilities of the twenty-one staff are as outlined below:

Number of staff	Responsibility
9	Information Officers on loan from the Executive Information Service.
9	Administrative staff who provide a media monitoring service for the Department of Justice, other NI Departments and public bodies through service level agreements.
3	General service grades who provide a press office function within the NI Courts and Tribunal Service.

Prisons: Security and Cleaning Services

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to detail the contractors, including contract costs, that provide security and/or cleaning services in each prison, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 20268/11-15)

Mr Ford: The table below details a list of the contractors that have provided security and/or cleaning in each prison in each of the last five years. For security reasons the names of the contractors have been withheld:

Contractor	Activity	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13
A	Maghaberry - Security to Restricted Construction Site	-	-	15,000	75,000	46,000

Court Estate Properties

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice how the available resources will be spent when disposal of surplus court estate properties has been completed.

(AQW 20310/11-15)

Mr Ford: The utilisation of any funds generated from the disposal of surplus court estate will be considered as part of my Department's Estate Strategy which is under development.

Royal Ulster Constabulary George Cross Foundation

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Justice to detail what consultation took place before advertising the vacancy for Chair of the Royal Ulster Constabulary George Cross Foundation.

(AQW 20333/11-15)

Mr Ford: There is no statutory requirement to consult in relation to this appointment, which is being conducted in accordance with CPANI guidance. DOJ officials did however receive correspondence in relation to the terms and conditions relating to the post of Chair from outgoing Trustees. The views expressed were taken into consideration before the current process began.

Royal Ulster Constabulary George Cross Foundation

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the current working practice, including the number of days worked and the location, of the Chairman of the Royal Ulster Constabulary George Cross Foundation; and (ii) how an eight day per month contract reducing to four days per month will be of benefit to the work of the Foundation. (AQW 20352/11-15)

Mr Ford: The post of Chairman is part-time as set out in the original terms of appointment. These state that the time commitment is dependent on the prevailing business needs of the Foundation. However it is acknowledged that Foundation business may entail approximately 2-3 days per month or as required.

As this is an unremunerated position my Department does not monitor the number of days worked over and above the minimum time commitment required, nor the location of where that work is carried out.

The anticipated time commitment of 8 days per month for the Chair takes account of the advancement and completion of the police museum, a significant undertaking for the Chair and fellow members of the Foundation's Board.

Foundation Trustees are fully engaged in the Foundation's business, a full-time project manager responsible for the day to day running of the police museum project is in place and dedicated administrative staff also provide valuable support.

This combined support is beneficial to the Foundation in the delivery of its functions and is an indication of the commitment that my Department is giving to maintaining and promoting the valuable work of the RUC GC Foundation.

Social Media

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice whether he has any powers, or plans, to regulate the use of social media sites. (AQW 20477/11-15)

Mr Ford: Regulation of the internet is not an issue which falls within the responsibilities of our devolved Executive. Under the Northern Ireland Act 1998 it is specifically recorded as a reserved matter. Decisions on regulation are for central Government to make through the Department for Culture, Media and Sport.

Prisons: Body Scanners

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice to detail the cost to his Department of the trial tests on scanning machines for prisons. (AQW 20478/11-15)

Mr Ford: The costs to date of the pilots of millimetre wave technology are as follows:

Magilligan Prison	Hydebank Wood
£14232	£22019

The costs included in these prices are for installation of the equipment, leases, enabling works and staff training.

Policing and Community Safety Partnerships

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Justice what is the limit on the number of meetings from which members of the Policing and Community Safety Partnerships can be absent before they are no longer considered to be a member. (AQO 3525/11-15)

Mr Ford: There is no specified limit on the number of meetings from which PCSP members can be absent prior to removal specified either in legislation or in the Code of Practice for the exercise of functions by PCSPs.

The ability to deal with persistent non-attendance is provided for in the Justice Act (Northern Ireland) 2011, the legislation governing the operation of PCSPs. Within this Act it states that the Policing Board, or local Council, with the approval of the Board, can remove a political or independent member if they are satisfied that the member is unable or unfit to discharge their functions as a member of the PCSP. Such action would be taken only after careful consideration of all the evidence.

Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust: Grafton Recruitment

Mr F McCann asked the Minister of Justice what role Grafton Recruitment played in the events organised by the Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust to promote rehiring opportunities for retired police officers in autumn 2008, October 2009 and March 2010.

(AQO 3523/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust organised information events on 25 September 2008 and 22 March 2010. Grafton Recruitment attended and presented at both these events which focussed on employment opportunities within the security sector. PRRT also held an Innovation and Business event on 14 October 2009 – Grafton Recruitment were not represented at this event. A number of recruitment organisations attended and presented at the events on these dates and were invited on the basis of their presence in the market place.

Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust: Grafton Recruitment

Mr Molloy asked the Minister of Justice to confirm whether any members of the Board of Directors of the Police Rehabilitation and Retraining Trust have also been members of the PSNI's Internal Audit Committee during the lifetime of Grafton Recruitment's contract for the provision of agency, consultancy and associate staff. (AQO 3522/11-15)

Mr Ford: As stated in response to AQO 3515 during Oral Question Time today, the PSNI's Director of Human Resources is a member of the PRRT's Board of Directors. The Director of Human Resources is also a member of the PSNI's Audit and Risk Committee, and has been a member since its inaugural meeting on 25 March 2004.

Bail Conditions

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to explain whether it is lawful for a District Judge to apply a bail condition to a third party, not charged before the court, requiring the person to hand over any communication device they possess, and if this has happened what action the Department intends to take.

(AQW 20568/11-15)

Mr Ford: Bail decisions, including any conditions attached to them, are a matter for the independent judiciary acting within the law. There are well-established appeal and review mechanisms in relation to court decisions where the parties are not content. My Department has no role in relation to individual cases.

Prisons: Body Scanners

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Justice what contact the Prison Service had with the manufacturers regarding the scanner pilot at Magilligan Prison and Hydebank Wood Young Offenders Centre. (AQO 3527/11-15)

Mr Ford: It is important to state that the objective of this process of technological evaluation was to establish whether a viable solution was available that would serve to reduce the level of intrusion inherent within our existing procedures.

From the start I was clear that any solution must, as a minimum, perform at least as well as our current processes and that the security and safety of all within our prisons was and remains paramount.

Following an evaluation of the Millimetre Wave Scanners at Magilligan and Hydebank Wood the Prison Service found that in the operational environment there were limitations to the technology as there was a reliance on the compliance of the prisoner to be scanned and that our current full searching processes provided a higher level of security and therefore provided greater assurance.

It is important to remember that Millimetre Wave Body Scanners use technology that is primarily for the threat environment experienced by the aviation industry which is different to that present within our prisons and it is not in use in any prison in the United Kingdom. I remain very grateful to the manufacturers for their help and support throughout the pilot.

While I share the Prison Service's disappointment at the outcome of the pilot I am heartened by their determination to continue to seek a modern viable alternative to our existing practice of full searching.

To this end I have just received the Prison Service's Justification Application for seeking permission to pilot the use of transmission x-ray technology and after a short period of consideration I shall, as required by the legislation, register it with the Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC)

Finally it is important to state that the requirement for full searching on entry to and exit from the Prison and in some other circumstances must remain until a satisfactory alternative can be found.

Minister of Justice: Meetings with the Home Secretary

Mr McDevitt asked the Minister of Justice how many times he has met with the Home Secretary since 1 January 2013. (AQO 3528/11-15)

Mr Ford: I have not met with Theresa May MP, the Home Secretary, since 1 January 2013. While I had planned to meet Mrs May at the Justice and Home Affairs Council Meeting in Dublin on 17-18 January, she was unable to attend this meeting. However, I did meet with Mark Harper MP, Minister of State for Immigration who attended in Mrs May's absence and I had a discussion with the Home Secretary via a phone call on 23 January 2013.

I have also met with James Brokenshire MP, Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Security on two occasions since 1 January 2013.

Ethnic Minorities: Criminal Justice Inspection Report

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the implementation of the recommendations contained in the last Criminal Justice Inspectorate report, especially those concerning ethnic minorities. (AQO 3524/11-15)

Mr Ford: Criminal Justice Inspection published its follow-up inspection of the management of hate crime by the criminal justice system in 2010. Of the 19 recommendations from the review, 12 had been fully achieved, 3 partly achieved and 4 had not been achieved at the time of the review.

The recommendations that had not been achieved related to three broad areas: the development of an Intermediary Service, the effectiveness of management information systems in tracking hate crime cases through the system and the development of a specific hate crime strategy.

I published a revised Community Safety Strategy in July 2012, which sets out key commitments to tackling hate crime. Action plans have been agreed on all aspects of the Strategy, including on hate crime, and have been agreed by the Justice Committee. A multi-agency delivery group has been established to take forward the hate crime action plan. This provides the strategic context for addressing all forms of hate crime.

My Department will shortly pilot Registered Intermediary Schemes to assist vulnerable victims, witnesses and defendants with significant communication difficulties to provide evidence. This will be taken forward as part of the new five year victims and witnesses strategy.

In relation to the recommendations on monitoring hate crime cases through the justice system, work was undertaken on foot of the follow-up inspection, with changes made to the IT systems of a number of agencies.

Further work was identified as a result of these changes, and work is near completion to provide accurate, timely and comprehensive information on hate crime cases, from arrest to conviction. These statistics will be monitored regularly by the Hate Crime Delivery Group and will enable the effectiveness of the legislation to be kept under review.

Department for Regional Development

Road Schemes

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline, in order of priority, the planned major road schemes. (AQW 20068/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): Over this Budget period to 2015, investment in the Strategic Road Network is concentrated on the provision of dual carriageways on the A8 (Belfast – Larne), A2 (Shore Road, Greenisland) and A5 routes. Construction work commenced on the A8 in July 2012, and is anticipated to commence on the A2 in March 2013. Whilst preliminary works are being carried out on the A5, progression of the scheme is the subject of a legal challenge.

Beyond 2015, the Investment Strategy for Northern Ireland 2011-21 includes for construction of a number of high priority schemes on the M2, A6 and A26, as part of a £390 million package funded through alternative finance in the period 2015/16 to 2020/21. However, a commitment to fund the revenue consequences of this roads package will be required, and so the timing will depend upon future resource budget settlements. In the event of alternative finance not being available, the scheme could be included, together with other priority schemes, in the bidding process for conventional capital funds, in the next Budget period.

Further schemes are contained within the Roads Service Preparation Pool and Forward Planning Schedule (http://www.drdni. gov.uk/index/roadimprovements.htm), with those in the Preparation Pool generally attracting a higher priority. The availability of future funding will, however, influence the programming of these schemes.

Parkgate Quarry

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department has been contacted by the Department of the Environment about assessing the suitability of surrounding roads before any decision is taken on the planning application for Parkgate Quarry.

(AQW 20087/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service, as a consultee through the planning process, has assessed the suitability of the haul routes and, having taken account of the improvements proposed by the applicant along this route, is satisfied the roads are capable of dealing with the traffic generated by the development.

Road Maintenance: Limavady and Coleraine Borough Council Areas

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development how much was spent on road maintenance in Limavady and Coleraine Borough council areas, in each of the last two financial years. (AQW 20104/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of expenditure incurred by my Department's Roads Service on road maintenance in the Limavady and Coleraine Borough Council areas, in each of the last two financial years, are set out in the table below:

Limavady Borough Council	2010/11 (£K)	2011/12 (£K)
Structural Maintenance	2,303	3,431
Routine Maintenance	558	618
Other Maintenance	629	408
Coleraine Borough Council	2010/11 (£K)	2011/12 (£K)
Structural Maintenance	2,373	3,617
Routine Maintenance	421	897
Other Maintenance	745	543

The term 'road maintenance' includes Structural, Routine and Other Maintenance activities, definitions of which are set out below

- Structural Maintenance includes resurfacing, surface dressing, patching and structural drainage;
- Routine Maintenance includes grass cutting, weed control, verge maintenance and gully emptying etc; and
- Other Maintenance includes expenditure on highway structures, winter maintenance and traffic maintenance.

DRD: Legal Advice Costs

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much his Department has spent on legal advice in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 20126/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The legal costs for my Department in each of the last three financial years are provided in the table below.

Year	Legal Costs (£000's)
2009/10	2,514
2010/11	2,757
2011/12	3,131

The figures provided exclude legal costs associated with the conveyance of land for road schemes which are capitalised into the total cost of the road scheme and therefore could only be determined at a disproportionate cost.

Blue Badge Scheme

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister for Regional Development how parking provision for blue badge holders on non-publicly owned property is monitored, and how he ensures that the provision meets all statutory requirements.

(AQW 20144/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has no responsibility for the regulation or enforcement of parking on non-publicly owned land. The provision and specification of parking facilities is normally a requirement of a planning consent, with DOE Planning the authority responsible for such matters.

DRD: Information Service

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development how many staff are employed in his Department's Information Service; and what is the annual cost of this service.

(AQW 20170/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The DRD Press Office employs five staff at a cost of £208,032.80 for the 2011/2012 financial year.

Snow Blower Vehicles

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development to which areas the newly purchased snow blower vehicles were deployed during the recent adverse winter weather.

(AQW 20175/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service last purchased snow blower vehicles in 2005. During the recent adverse winter weather, snow blowing vehicles were deployed in the following areas:

- The Mournes (C312 Slievenaman Road and B27 Moyad Road);
- Finnis, Banbridge (U4166 Dree Hill Road and U4211 Carrigagh Road);
- Larne (C70 Starbog Road, C66 Carnalbanagh Road, U4016 Mullaghsandel Road, U2121 Lough Road and U4014 Glenview Road);
- Ballymena (U2102 Douglas Road, U2102 Shilnavogy Road, U2168 Omerbane Road and U2169 Tullykittagh Road); and
- Feeney, Dungiven (U1188 Plantation Road, U1191 Barnes Road and U1181 Ballyrory Road).

From experience, Roads Service has found that snow blowers require at least 300mm depth of snow to operate efficiently.

Roads: Unadopted Roads and Housing Developments in Fermanagh District Council Area

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the unadopted roads and housing developments in the Fermanagh District Council area; (ii) the amount of bond remaining on each development; (iii) the estimated cost to bring each development up to the level required for adoption; (iv) the name of each relevant developer; (v) whether the developer in each case is still trading; and (vi) what works are required within each development to bring it up to the required standard for adoption.

(AQW 20182/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As of March 2013, there are 113 unadopted housing developments, in the Fermanagh District Council Area, for which my Department's Roads Service currently has road bonds in place. However, several developments are being delivered through phased construction under separate bonds. Therefore, the total number of bonds held is greater than 113.

Detailed information relating to individual bonds is deemed commercially sensitive. However, I can confirm the total value of bonds currently held against private developments in Fermanagh is £9 million.

The estimated cost of outstanding works on each development and details of the work required is not available. This level of detail is only collated when an Article 11 Notice is to be served on the developer providing notice that my Department intends to complete the work and draw on the bond surety.

Whilst Roads Service has some local knowledge relating to the likely trading status of individual developers, my Department must rely upon the receipt of a deed of appointment from a receiver to definitively establish that a developer is no longer trading.

DRD: Staff Travel Claims

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the cost to his Department of staff travel claims in each of the last three years.

(AQW 20193/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The cost to the Department for Regional Development of staff travel claims in each of the last three years is detailed as follows:

Year	Spend (£000's)
2009/10	2,354
2010/11	2,219
2011/12	2,172

Of the £6.75m spent during the three year period 97% (£6.55m) relates to vehicle mileage claims.

Ash Dieback Disease

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Regional Development what measures have been put in place, and what forward planning is being conducted, to prevent the spread of Ash Dieback when cutting roadside hedgerows.

(AQW 20205/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As most roadside trees and hedges are on lands adjacent to public roads, it is the responsibility of property owners, or occupiers of those lands, to ensure that trees and hedges do not endanger or obstruct road users. Roads Service periodically places notices in the local press and farming journals reminding owners and occupiers of their responsibilities.

Roads Service does not usually cut hedges, unless it is absolutely essential for road safety purposes.

However, I have confirmed with my Ministerial colleague at the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD), Michelle O'Neill, that farmers in receipt of payments under Single Farm Payment and other land based schemes, such as LFA and Agri-environment schemes, must adhere to Cross-compliance and the requirements of Good Agricultural and Environmental Condition (GAEC). One of these requirements prohibits cutting of hedges during the period 1 March to 31 August.

Minister O'Neill also informs me that scientific evidence indicates that cutting ash plants and trees during the June to October period may increase the risk of Chalara infection. DARD advises all farmers and landowners to refrain from cutting hedges and ash trees during this period, when the risk of infection is highest, and delay the commencement of cutting, until November at the earliest, where possible.

Officials from the Plant Health and Horticulture Inspectorate within the Agri-food Inspection Branch of DARD has advised officials within Roads Service's Engineering Policy Branch of the mechanism for reporting Ash Die-back disease symptoms to DARD and of biosecurity requirements. Details of these procedures will be included within a Director of Engineering Memorandum (DEM) that will issue or be brought to the attention of relevant staff within Roads Service.

Reservoirs

Mr Dickson asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail any planned repair work to reservoirs. (AQW 20227/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that it plans to carry out repair work on education tower valves and pipe work at the following impounding reservoirs which will ensure that their safety is not compromised - Dorisland, Copeland, Lough Mourne, Lower South Woodburn, Middle South Woodburn, Upper South Woodburn, North Woodburn, Church Road, Portavoe, Lower Ballysallagh, Upper Ballysallagh, Lower Conlig, Upper Conlig, Killea, Knockbracken, Boomers and Fofanny. It is anticipated that this work will commence in April 2013 and be completed by December 2014.

In addition, NIW undertakes periodic inspections at its impounding reservoirs and carries out minor maintenance on an ongoing basis.

Railways: Fuel Efficiency

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Regional Development whether fuel efficiency on Northern Ireland Railway's Class 3k and 4k sets is best maintained by leaving engines running for long periods when trains have reached their destinations before making the return trip.

(AQW 20328/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised that all NI Railways trains (Class 3000 and Class 4000) are equipped with auto shutdown/stable mode which shuts all but one engine down after circa 20 minutes. One auxiliary engine remains running to preserve basic on-train heating, lighting and system supports. This is considered the most cost effective engine management system.

Cycle Lane: A2 Bangor to Belfast Road

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development whether any assessment has been made of the possibility of a cycle lane on the A2 Bangor to Belfast road between Ballyrobert and Holywood. (AQW 20394/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department's Roads Service's proposals for transport in the Belfast Metropolitan Area are presented within the Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan (BMTP). The Plan aims to provide for and encourage a greater use of public transport, walking and cycling. Roads Service's primary focus is to therefore develop the cycling network, as envisaged within the Plan.

Whist I can see the benefit and merit in providing the cycle facilities you have suggested, unfortunately, this route has not been identified within the BMTP. However, officials have added this proposal to their list of areas for future consideration.

Northern Ireland Water

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the value of depreciation of Northern Ireland Water's assets for each of the last three years; and (ii) the consequential cost to his Department.

(AQW 20397/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The table below shows (i) the value of depreciation of Northern Ireland Water's assets for each of the last three years, and (ii) the consequential cost to my Department for the same period.

	2009-10 £m	2010-11 £m	2011-12 £m
Depreciation – Northern Ireland Water's statutory accounts	62.1	47.8	55.6
Depreciation – public expenditure implications for DRD	61.5	42.7	50.3

Northern Ireland Water

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much funding does his Department provide to subsidise Northern Ireland Water.

(AQW 20432/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In 2012/13 the subsidy paid to NIW by DRD on behalf of customers will be £282 million. This means that consumers do not have to pay directly for water and sewerage services in line with the Executive's Programme for Government commitment not to introduce domestic charges.

Department for Social Development

Northern Ireland Housing Executive: House Security

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister for Social Development what action the Northern Ireland Housing Executive is taking to enhance security of their houses in areas of high criminality; and how many housing units have been fitted with (i) strengthened doors; (ii) low level door locks; and (iii) reinforced windows, in each of the last four years. (AQW 19793/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): The Housing Executive does not make any difference from a specification view point for areas of high criminality. They advise that all new Door-Sets, inclusive of door and frame, which are installed in their properties through planned maintenance programmes are to a standard which includes the Police "Secured by Design" licence. Doors meeting this specification have been replaced on a condition basis over the last four years within External Cyclical Maintenance schemes and Kitchen Replacement schemes. However the actual number of doors replaced within these schemes has not been separately recorded and is not available. From 2012 to 2015, the Housing Executive will have installed 18,000 "Secured by Design" fire doors to their flats and maisonette stock as part of their fire door replacement programme.

In relation to ii) and iii) the Housing Executive maintenance records cannot supply the detail on locks or windows.

The Housing Executive liaises with PSNI and other agencies when specific issues are brought to light and where applicable have amended specifications to help address specific problems.

Drumtara, Ballee, Ballymena

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Social Development what action has been taken to fulfil the pledge by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive to provide Drumtara in Ballee, Ballymena with a community house. (AQW 19878/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive advises that approval was granted by their Chief Executive's Business Committee on 26 November 2012 to award community letting at 168-171 Drumtara, Ballee, Ballymena, to Seven Towers Cultural Community and Educational Association (STCCEA).

As the four flats had been vacant for some time and in a poor state of repair, approval was granted for 'change to tenancy repairs' to bring the properties back from void status. A schedule of the necessary work has been prepared and it is estimated that these works could cost in the region of £76,000. Before work can commence, this expenditure needs the approval of the Housing Executive's Chief Executive's Business Committee and it is hoped this will be considered at their meeting in March 2013.

Drumtara, Ballee, Ballymena

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Social Development what proposals the local community has put forward for the vacant site formerly 60-69 Drumtara, Ballee, Ballymena; and what position the Northern Ireland Housing Executive has taken on these proposals.

(AQW 19879/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive has advised that the Seven Towers Cultural Community and Educational Association (STCCEA) requested the use of 60-69 Drumtara, Ballee, Ballymena, as an allotment project in March 2012. The site in question was former Housing Executive dwellings which had been demolished and the Housing Executive had obtained planning approval for replacement dwellings on it.

The STCCEA looked at alternative sites but none were feasible and they asked for their original request to be reconsidered. This is currently being progressed through the Housing Executive's approval system. They estimate that if approval is granted - under their Housing Executive's Growing Spaces Project - the allotment could be operational in a few months.

Boiler Replacement Scheme

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the number of boiler replacement scheme applications that have been (i) registered; (ii) processed; and (iii) successful since the launch of the new scheme in 2012, broken down by constituency area.

(AQW 19897/11-15)

Public Car Parks: Events

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the current policy on use of public car parks for staging events.

(AQW 19933/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department does not have a policy on the use of public car parks for staging events. In circumstances where my Department owns a car park, it is managed by the Department for Regional Development's Roads Service on my Department's behalf.

Housing: Derelict Houses

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development what assessment he has made of (i) the number of homes remaining derelict at Ballysally, Coleraine; and (ii) the ability of a Housing Association to bring these properties into use during the 2013/2014 financial year.

(AQW 20017/11-15)

Mr McCausland: There are currently a total of 19 vacant properties in the Ballysally estate in Coleraine which are owned by SHAC Housing Association. Oaklee Housing Association, in conjunction with SHAC, currently has plans to refurbish 10 houses (4 of which are vacant) in the first half of 2013/14.

I am however committed to ensuring that all of these vacant properties are refurbished as a matter of priority. I have therefore instructed my officials to meet with Oaklee Housing Association to instruct them that all these vacant properties should be refurbished as a matter of priority.

Housing Rights Service

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister for Social Development how much funding his Department has allocated to the Housing Rights Service in each of the last five years.

(AQW 20071/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The table below shows the amount of funding which has been allocated to the Housing Rights Service in each of the last five years.

	Year
	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13

Housing Rights Service

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister for Social Development how many cases the Housing Rights Service has dealt with in each of the last five years; and why the people involved contacted the Service. (AQW 20072/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The table below shows the number of clients which Housing Rights Service has dealt with since 2008.

	Year
2008/2009 2009/2010 2010/2011 2011/2012					2012/2013

Housing Rights Service receives funding from the Department to provide advice to clients in respect of finding accommodation, housing debt, renting privately, repairs and homelessness. From 2009 this has included mortgage debt advice

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Mortgage Repayments

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development what action his Department will take to assist people who are struggling with mortgage repayments; and when the action will be taken. (AQW 20083/11-15)

Mr McCausland: My Department funds a Mortgage Debt Advice Service to help those experiencing difficulty making mortgage payments avoid the distressing prospect of court action and possible repossession. This free advice service, operated by the Housing Rights Service, has received funding until March 2015. The service operates during office working hours and now includes an online advisor and evening opening hours to 8.00pm on Tuesdays and Thursdays and can be contacted directly on 0300 323 0310.

My Department also provides help through Support for Mortgage Interest to people receiving certain social security benefits.

Housing Executive: Double Glazing

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQO 3363/11-15, for a breakdown of the £5.5m savings. (AQW 20183/11-15)

Mr McCausland: In relation to a breakdown of the £5.5m savings, this information is not currently available as the Housing Executive's tender price assumptions are commercial and confidential and cannot be shared with third parties as this may adversely affect the tender process.

Housing Executive

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development whether Housing Executive tenants will retain their statutory right to choose whether their estate is transferred to another social landlord, such as a housing association, when the Housing Executive undergoes its proposed reform.

(AQW 20225/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I want to stress from the outset that I view this as the start of a process of discussion and deliberation during which my Department will engage and consult widely with key stakeholders to develop the detail behind these high level proposals and to ensure there is consensus and agreement. I can confirm that, in accordance with Article 88C of the Housing (Northern Ireland) Order 1981, as inserted by Article 92 of the Housing (Northern Ireland) Order 1992 and amended by Article 128 of the Housing (Northern Ireland) Order 2003, Housing Executive tenants will be consulted on any proposed transfers of housing stock to other landlords.

My aim in reforming housing delivery structures is to provide a sustainable model for housing that ensures we can continue to deliver well maintained housing stock for tenants, improve the focus on strategy and ensure value for money for taxpayers.

Welfare Reform Bill: Underoccupancy

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development how much revenue is expected to be raised by the proposed underoccupancy rate in the Welfare Reform Bill.

(AQW 20274/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The introduction of the size criteria for new and existing working-age claimants living in the social rented sector will replicate that which already exists for Housing Benefit claimants living in the private rented sector thereby bringing the two sectors more into line with each other.

The measure is designed to contain Housing Benefit expenditure which has seen a dramatic rise from £312m in 2003/04 to £455m in 2009/10, rather than raise revenue.

Initial estimates, based on rent levels for 2012/13, show savings of approximately £13.9m in relation to Housing Executive tenancies, and a further £6m from Housing Association tenancies.

Welfare Reform: Underoccupancy

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development what communication his Department has had with the Department of Work and Pensions regarding the bedroom tax, given that Iain Duncan Smith has instructed his officials to look again at how the bedroom tax will impact on disabled people.

(AQW 20276/11-15)

Mr McCausland: I have had a number of very productive meetings with Lord Freud in relation to all aspects of Welfare Reform and more recently, specifically in relation to the underoccupation restriction.

I can confirm there is no change to the current policy situation and the introduction of the underoccupation restriction will proceed as planned, in Great Britain, in April 2013.

The Department for Work and Pensions is commissioning an independent evaluation of the underoccupation deduction. An initial draft will be available in 2014 and a final draft in 2015.

Housing Executive Properties

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development what is the target time for a Housing Executive property to be made fit for purpose for a new tenant once the previous tenant has moved out.

(AQW 20281/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The Housing Executive advises that the turnaround or target time for re-letting a property that becomes vacant is based upon the cost of the Changes of Tenancy works. The relevant timescales in relation to the turnaround times are as follows: -

Value of works required to complete Change of Tenancy	Turnaround time (days)
£0.00 - £500	5 working days
£500 - £2,000	10 working days
£2,000 - £5,000	20 working days
£5,000 - £8,750	30 working days
£8,750 - £50,000	40 working days
£50,000 +	60 working days

The Housing Executive has advised that in the main the value of work needed at change of tenancy falls below the £2,000 level and is therefore completed within 10 working days.

Hostels: North Down

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how many people in North Down live in hostels. (AQW 20285/11-15)

Mr McCausland: The information is not available in the format requested as the Housing Executive does not routinely collate information by Parliamentary constituency. However, the table below details the number of households placed in temporary accommodation by the Housing Executive in response to their homelessness duties in their Bangor District Office area at 12 February 2013.

Household type	NIHE Hostel	Voluntary Sector Hostel	Total
Singles	2	8	10
Families	4	2	6
Total	6	10	16

It is important to note that there are placements in other self referral hostels in Bangor of which the Housing Executive would not be aware.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Welfare Reform: Definition of Bedroom

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development to provide details on the dimensions and specifics of what constitutes a bedroom that will be subject to the bedroom tax.

(AQW 20395/11-15)

Mr McCausland: There is no statutory definition of what constitutes a bedroom in social security legislation as dimensions and questions of suitability of a room for use as a bedroom are irrelevant for Housing Benefit purposes. This is due to the fact that tenancy agreements and rent levels generally reflect the number of bedrooms in the property and may take into account their size. It is in the tenant's best interest to decide at the point of accepting the tenancy whether the accommodation is of a suitable size for their needs.

Welfare Reform: Underoccupancy

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development whether foster carers with a spare room will be subject to the underoccupancy penalty; and whether he will consider proposing an exemption for foster carers to the underoccupancy rule. (AQW 20460/11-15)

Mr McCausland: It may be helpful if I explain that the introduction of the size criteria for working age claimants underoccupying in the social rented sector will bring this sector into line with the approach already in place in the private rented sector, where the rate of Housing Benefit is related to the size of dwelling the claimant needs.

As with claims in the private rented sector, a room for a foster child will not be included when calculating how many bedrooms a family unit requires. Therefore, a household that has an extra room for a current or potential foster child will be treated as under-occupying and there are no plans to introduce a specific exemption for this particular group.

Rather than creating blanket exemptions for broad categories, support will be made available in Northern Ireland by way of Discretionary Housing Payments. This is a more appropriate way of dealing with vulnerable claimants as these Payments offer flexibility based on local decisions helping to ensure that scarce resources can be targeted as needed. So as not to discourage foster carers, and in recognition that there may be cases where it would make sense to provide additional support, Discretionary Housing Payments could help to meet housing costs between placements.

The Discretionary Housing Payments budget in Northern Ireland has been increased substantially and this increase includes additional funding of £1.005m in each of the years from 2013/14 to 2016/17, specifically targeted at people who live in significantly adapted accommodation (due to someone in the household having a disability) and foster carers (including those between placements) who find themselves with a reduction in their Housing Benefit due to under-occupation.

Shale Oil

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what consideration has been given to the awarding of licences for the extraction of shale oil.

(AQW 19883/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): Under the terms of the Petroleum (Production) Act (Northern Ireland) 1964 my Department grants licences to search and bore for and get petroleum in Northern Ireland. The petroleum legislation makes no distinction between the different types of petroleum (oil or gas) or the geological formations (e.g. shale or sandstone) in which the petroleum may be found.

The extraction of oil or gas is subject to my Department's approval of a development plan submitted by the Licensee. Such a plan would only follow an extensive programme of exploration and appraisal and it would also be subject to a number of other consents including planning permission.

No such plans have been submitted to my Department in respect of shale oil extraction.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of new housing units planned under the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan, broken down by council area. (AQW 18266/11-15)

Mr Attwood (The Minister of the Environment): The adopted version of the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan (BMAP) will set out the Department's conclusions on the number of new houses required for each council area. I am currently working closely with officials to finalise the plan policies and proposals. The Department is currently assessing the recommendations contained within the Planning Appeals Commission's (PAC) reports which were produced following the Public Inquiry.

It would be inappropriate to release the figures you requested ahead of the publication of the adopted plan, but I did publish the PAC report on BMAP in 2012 as I believed it was necessary and reasonable for people to see its recommendations.

Mr McCartney asked the Minister of the Environment (i) whether his Department carried out a revised Environmental Impact Assessment determination, for planning application A/2008/0408/F, after it accepted an amendment to the application which introduced new settlement lagoons that did not feature in the original proposals; and (ii) if not, to outline the reasons why. (AQW 12900/11-15)

Mr Attwood (The Minister of the Environment): A revised Environmental Impact Assessment determination was carried but it concluded that an Environmental Impact Statement was not required as the nature and extent of the amended development proposal was judged not to give rise to significant environmental effects.

I have asked for a full submission on this matter to consider the issue further.

Department for Social Development

In this Bound Volume, page WA 329, please replace AQW 19885/11-15 with:

Boiler Replacement Scheme

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development (i) the number of queries to the Boiler Replacement Scheme since the scheme was launched; (ii) the number of jobs completed; (iii) the target number of jobs which would have been expected to be completed at this stage; and (iv) for a breakdown of the types of replacement, such as oil to oil, oil to gas, or oil to renewable. (AQW 19885/11-15)

Mr McCausland (The Minister for Social Development): Since the Boiler Replacement Scheme was launched in September 2012:

- 28,223 queries have been received;
- 9,992 completed applications forms have been received;
- 4,908 approvals have been issued;
- 1,348 boiler replacements have been completed;
- 1,051 oil to oil replacements have been completed;
- 297 conversions to gas have been completed.

The number of boiler completions at any time depends on the response times of the applicants. Over the Christmas period and in to January 2013 it is to be expected that there will less installations. From February 2013 onwards it is reasonable to expect that the number of installations will increase as at present. The number of completions to date is consistent with a reasonable response time from applicants coupled with the time of year.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

(6) But subsection (5) does not apply (and subsection (7) applies instead) where that person is a person whose licence has been revoked under Article 46(2) of the 1998 Order.

- (7) Where this subsection applies, paragraphs (3) to (6) of Article 46B of the 1998 Order have effect as if that person had been recalled to prison under paragraph (2) of that Article on commencement.
- (8) Articles 46A and 46B of the 1998 Order apply to an existing licensee as they apply to a person who is released on licence under Article 46 of that Order (as substituted).
