simple things in life. One of the things that we will do, and, again, it is with the Department for Infrastructure — it is great to see how Departments are working with each other; we have been working closely with the Department for Communities, the Department for Infrastructure, the Department for the Economy and so forth — is that, instead of taking isolated people to the services, we will see how we can deliver and take the services to the people using rural transport services. It is crucial that those buses are not sitting there doing nothing and that they are used to deliver services to the rural community.

Ms Armstrong: Minister, I wish your family member well. It is a very tough time for all of us, but it hits very close to home when it affects us individually.

I will start off by saying thank you to you and your Department for keeping things going. I also convey thanks on behalf of the fishing industry for the support package that has been put in place. I have been communicating backwards and forwards with the Northern Ireland Fish Producers' Organisation (NIFPO), which is based in Portavogie. They have said that it is a very, very welcome support to the boats, but they have a concern that it does not cover the needs of the crew — the concern that you mentioned. Many of our fishing crew are self-employed share fishermen. Most of them live below the poverty line. As self-employed, they will be reliant on the Government's self-employed income support stream, but we know that it is going to take some time for that to come through, unfortunately. You talked earlier about support for agriculture and farmers. I ask you to consider those crew as well.

NIFPO has concerns about some of their foreign crew in particular. There are 60 nationals working for NIFPO members. They are self-employed, but they are in the country under a transit visa. That visa is based on a reciprocal arrangement between countries and does not require that they pay tax in the UK. Those 60 men have no tax history and, since the collapse of our markets, have had no income and no recourse to government help. Boats are getting some money, but consideration of those vulnerable crewmen is missing from that package. Therefore there is not enough money to pay the boats' bills and crews. I ask you, probably with the Minister for the Economy, if you have any sway, to seek help from HMRC and the UK Government to consider a scheme similar to the hardship scheme, for instance, that is being brought forward for students by the Minister for Communities. Perhaps, we could have something like that for those fishing crews in the interim, until they can claim that money.

I wish you and your family a very happy Easter.

Mr Poots: Thank you. The member, rightly, raises a significant issue and problem. Our fishing industry has been supported greatly by crews from other countries. They were eastern European, primarily, but, in latter years, more of the crews have been from the Philippines and Ghana. They are excellent fishermen — brilliant at repairing the nets. They are skilled people. That is an argument that we have been having with the UK Department for a number of years. These people are not labourers; they are skilled fishermen and need to be recognised as such, coming in.

At this time, one section of those people does not qualify for the 80%, and that is causing problems and hardships. We are aware of it, we have raised it and we are trying to seek solutions to it. I am not sure that that is going to be simple. I am aware that a lot of the boats were out fishing again. There is an intention to go out later this week, because the weather is not suitable for them at this time, but they intend to go out later this week, which may help them to some extent. The problem is that the price that they are getting for their product is significantly down. One good thing is that the fuel costs are also significantly down, but it does not compensate for the amount that the fish is down. However, added to what we have offered, it may help to see them over the next number of months, but I do not see what is offered as a magic bullet for the fishing industry. There are other issues, problems and complications that we need to try to assist them with, and I recognise that.

Mr Dunne: I, too, thank the Minister for his statement. I put on record my appreciation for all your efforts in supporting the agriculture and fishery industry at this difficult time, and for all of your work in ensuring that there is fresh food on the shelves of our shops and supermarkets. I know that you have done a lot of work on that.

Minister, is there an indication of a reduction in the farm-gate price for milk for farmers at this difficult time, in light of the drop in demand that you would assume there is for milk as processors are unable to carry out their work, businesses and schools are shut and a lot of tourist venues are closed?

Mr Poots: The dairy sector is having huge problems; there is no secret about that. The spot price of milk has fallen dramatically. We are probably looking at a spot price for milk of about 15p a litre. That will probably be reflected in what is paid to farmers next month, albeit it will not be as low as 15p, thankfully. We are looking at schemes through which we could support the farming community in that.

There were 12 million litres of surplus milk in the UK last week. A lot of that is down to the restaurant trade disappearing. For example, Lakeland Dairies supplied all of the milk products to many of the aeroplane companies, so, when you opened that wee sachet of milk, it was milk that was produced here. It supplied companies across the world and was very successful, and that has gone. It has had to readapt and try to change its processing lines and find other markets and so forth. It is a desperately challenging time for the food-processing sector. Nobody is buying to use at home those wee sachets of butter that you would use in a restaurant or a hotel.

Such companies are facing real, critical difficulties, and the one sector in agriculture that has large debts is the dairy sector. It has traditionally been more profitable, and, as a consequence of that, the banks have been more willing to lend. Having seven-figure debts exists within the dairy farm sector. It is not super common, but it is not irregular either for dairy farmers to have debts of over a million pounds and several million pounds. That is going to cause real problems if the milk price drops off the cliff. It is important that we are nimble and agile with our response, and that is why I will be encouraging the European Union to be quick in its response. That is why I will be encouraging the UK Government to be quick in their response, and that is why, over the course of the past week in particular and in the previous week, I have been driving home the importance of responding quickly to this crisis and not allowing it to develop into a micro-crisis in the midst of the current health crisis.

Mr O'Dowd: I thank the Minister for a very comprehensive statement and, indeed, a very engaging question-and-answer session. Poots and Lenin just rolls off the tongue. If we add Mr Allister to it — he is away — I thought we might have a revolution on our hands.

I want to return to the issue of rural broadband and acknowledge the investment that his Department has made and the confidence-and-supply money, which, hopefully, will be honoured, if it has not been honoured to date. For many farmers, the deadline for single farm payments is coming on 15 May, and, considering that many will be isolated and rural, obviously, is there an opportunity to extend that deadline beyond 15 May?

Before I end, I also want to offer my support to the Minister's relative who is unwell. I wish them a speedy and full recovery.

Mr Poots: Thus far, as Norman told me earlier, 6,500 people have their single farm applications in, so that is very good. That is out of how many, Norman?

Mr Fulton: About 23,000.

Mr Poots: Twenty-three thousand, so we are sitting now with about 25% in. I encourage people to continue to do that. We have already offered some degree of flexibility at the end. If they put something in and they are not happy about it, they can come back and amend it for a further nearly four weeks up to 9 June. We want to encourage people to do this because we are the only part of the UK that will be paying out in the middle of October, and we do not want to lose that. We want to ensure that that goes to the farming community at that time.

It is very important that farmers do receive their payments in October because, traditionally, the conacre land is paid for in October or November. Therefore, it is important to get that money into the farmers' accounts to allow their cash flow to work at that time of the year. We do not really want to extend the deadline. We will monitor it, and, if it is becoming glaringly obvious that we are nowhere near getting the numbers in that we need, we can reappraise that situation later. At this stage, we want to encourage people to keep working and keep getting the applications in. If they respond to us and get their applications in for 15 May, we will respond to them and get the payments out for 16 October.

Mr Nesbitt: Perhaps I should start by declaring an interest as a former binman as I echo the words of praise that the Minister offered our refuse collectors. If anybody is having difficulty, I will certainly try to get the old crew together and pop round to your house.

I want to thank the Minister and acknowledge the efforts that he is making to ensure that we have a fishing fleet on the far side of this crisis. It is not just about the £1.5 million in cash but the work with the agriculture research and the data gathering. I wonder whether he can expand on the sort of data that is being gathered and whether there is a range of potential conclusions that he has in mind.

Mr Poots: When it comes to being a binman, I will declare something in common. When I was at school, my first job was lifting bins. It was quite well paid at that time. I was very pleased with what we got paid. It was real work, because you had to lift the old grey bins.

Mr Nesbitt: Over your shoulder.

Mr Poots: Very often, they were filled with ash and you had to lift them over your shoulder. It was tough going for a 16-year-old —

Mr Nesbitt: Thirty-six quid a week.

Mr Poots: — and the older binmen used to have a good laugh at you struggling to lift a heavy bin while they lifted the lighter ones that they had spotted first. Those were the days.

I will turn to the work that we are doing in AFBI and in other places on research and on work that we are providing. We have offered testing services and we did that quite early. We have the capacity to test up to 1,000 cases a day, as I indicated in my statement. That will assist in getting those figures up, because once social distancing works, we will start to see figures coming down.

This is how social distancing is working, folks. Before social distancing was put in place, every person who had coronavirus was spreading it to 2.8 others. If you started off with 100,000 people, you would have 280,000 in two weeks' time and, in four weeks' time, that figure would be well over 700,000. That is where coronavirus was going. As a result of social distancing, we are on minus 1, so that number is coming down all the time. We are going to have to get out of social distancing, and the means of doing that is to have appropriate testing. Having adequate testing allows us to determine that someone has had coronavirus and is not going to get it again, so that they can be allowed back into the workforce. If we are going to get out of this, we need to have appropriate testing and research done.

One of the other things that my Department and the agri-sector can offer, if this crisis is bad enough, is the assistance of our veterinarians in hospitals. You might ask: what does someone who treats animals know about treating humans? They are experts in ventilation, and if there is pressure on ventilation, our veterinarians can help. I am just letting you know that if there are additional pressures in that regard, and we have the ventilation equipment and there are staffing problems in the hospitals, that that assistance can be provided.

I am not sure that that is the right answer to Mr Nesbitt's question. I am not sure whether the Deputy Chairperson will allow him to repeat it if I have missed something.

Mr Nesbitt: I am happy enough, but I wonder whether, if fleets are not fishing, that has a positive impact on fish stocks?

Mr Poots: I knew there was something that I had not quite picked up right. When it comes to fish stock, we have a rich supply of nephrops in the Irish Sea — better known as prawns to people who like a nice prawn cocktail. I know that Sinn Féin are into their prawn sandwiches. [Interruption.] [Laughter.] Anyway, for people who like their prawns and so forth, we have a rich supply of nephrops, which are exported around the world. They do very well in the mud in the Irish Sea. That stock is quite good. Our fishermen are catching haddock, of which there is a plentitude at the moment. It is better to finish the haddock stock before it goes into a new egg-laying season so that more haddock can be created. In all of that, then, we have ample supplies of certain fish. Other stocks have been challenged over the years; there has always been a bit of a struggle with the cod supply and the cod recovery programme has never really worked as well as it should have.

The problem that we have in fishing is that 70% of our product is exported and 70% of the fish that we eat is imported. We are importing cod that is processed in China and brought here and we are exporting our nephrops and crabs, which are very popular in the Far East and in China in particular. We are back to this global thing. We do not eat the fish that is produced locally. However, all the indications are that there is still a very rich harvest of particular fish varieties to be taken responsibly. The people who know best about that are those on the boats. They notice changes very quickly and identify them. It is in their interests to ensure that the harvest that exists in the Irish Sea and beyond will be there for them, and future generations, in years to come.

Ms Bailey: I thank the Minister and Department for the statement. I add my voice to the thanks given for the vital role that the waste workers, binmen, vets and farmers have played. A whole host of essential producers, who come under the remit of your Department, have contributed. That is evident from your words.

I note the successful intervention that the Minister made when Belfast City Council announced that most of its household bin collections were to be suspended. Today, the council tweeted to ask people to please stop fly-tipping on the streets. There might be a wee bit more work to be done, but it was a good intervention, and thank you for that.

Most of my questions have been answered. I was looking at access to recycling centres, trying to predict the huge volume of waste, including a lot of hazardous medical waste, that will appear on the other side of this lockdown and pandemic.

We could maybe look at agricultural waste: what is being done and what has been highlighted. The Minister mentioned the dairy industry in particular and a lot of the surplus that has been left. Today, you spoke about “carcass imbalance” and sales dropping. We are coming into the lambing season. What is being done to ensure that this surplus produce will not be, for want of a better phrase, fly-tipped into our rivers? We already see that happen from time to time in Northern Ireland, causing people further harm.

Mr Poots: At the moment, this is a business problem, as opposed to an environmental one. A surplus of goods has already been processed, and that will be cold stored until there is an appropriate time to sell some of them. That will have a significant value, at some point, and, therefore, it will not be wasted or dumped.

However, you touched upon an area wherein we could have an environmental problem. If our chicken and pork processors were to hit problems, there would be series of consequences. The first is that that material would not be available on the shelves of supermarkets, which would cause very significant problems. Chicken and pork, in particular, are very good value proteins, and they are bought by many people for their families. The second problem is that, if they are not slaughtered in the factories, they would have to be slaughtered and got rid of on-farm. How that is done creates environmental and public health problems. We cannot have farms with slaughtered animals that have not been disposed of. Those are the issues.

I mentioned, in particular, that should we hit a problem with processors, we must have contingency plans. We are developing those contingencies and working on ensuring that we have contingency plans in place. However, it is never a contingency that we want to use, because it would be devastating for the farmers. It has the potential to cause public health issues and it is something we need to avoid at all costs. Maintaining the processing units that seek to ensure the welfare of their workers is critical. We have been having conversations with them. Our veterinarians, in particular, have been working very closely with them. We have veterinary inspectors in the factories to assist and develop social distancing. They developed the PPE that is now in many of the factories. Therefore, you have hit upon an issue that we want to avoid. If milk is not collected from farms, it will more than likely be spread on land. That is probably OK. Certainly, it is not OK for it to be dumped into drains, because it is very damaging if it gets into the waterways.

Essentially, we need to identify solutions to ensure that we keep taking the product off-farm. If we do not take the product off-farm, we create a public health and environmental problem. In particular, if one of the milk processors was to stop, that would create massive problems. If one of the pork processors was to stop, again, it would create massive problems. That is why, over the last number of weeks, I have been impressing and stressing the importance of maintaining our food-processing sector and, actually, expressing public gratitude to the people who maintain it, because, number one, they are keeping food on our shelves; number two, they are avoiding a financial catastrophe for a farmer; and, number three, they are avoiding an environmental, public health crisis for all of us to have to pick up.

Mr Carroll: The World Health Organization and the World Trade Organization have warned:

Obviously, global food production will be severely affected, if it has not been already, by this crisis. A major issue will be ensuring that we have adequate food supplies, as countries and workers are forced to go into lockdown. The idea, to be frank, that it is a problem of panic-buying, I think, is wrong.

The Minister referred at the start to the need for flexibility, and he shared some criticisms of corporations, maybe, if you can say that. Does he share the view that relying on the old ways of food production and distribution may not even be possible at the end of the crisis? Does he believe that we need to have a different approach to see a greater role for the state and, especially, his Department in ensuring that we have proper planning and adequate provision put in place so that people do not suffer from food shortages?

Mr Poots: Northern Ireland plays its role way beyond its own shores. There is a population of two billion in Africa, where, a few years ago, it was one billion. One of the means of that population having increased so dramatically is good inoculation; another one has been clean water. Obviously, a population like that also needs to be fed. One of the areas where we have extensive markets for our powdered milk is the continent of Africa. We are very good at producing milk. We can have it dried to a high specification. That is a good, safe food that can go to Africa that they could never produce enough of themselves, given the harsh climate conditions. A lot of it goes to China. That is one of the reasons why our sector is being hit so badly.

In the rest of the United Kingdom — in Great Britain — a lot of the milk that is produced goes immediately, in its form as pasteurised milk, onto the supermarket shelves. They are less sophisticated in what they produce. It comes off the farm as milk, pasteurised, bottled and on to the supermarkets. That is the majority of their sales. The majority of our sales is powdered milk, butters and cheeses, and that is largely exported. We are much more vulnerable in Northern Ireland to the export market and the global market as a consequence. Therein lies the problem when it comes to the dairy sector.

It is important that we continue to provide quality food, because there are people in Africa and China who really benefit from it, and it is good that Northern Ireland plays its part.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): Thank you, Minister, and thank you for answering all the questions.

Agenda item 4 is the time, date and place of our next meeting. We have received confirmation from the Education and Communities Ministers that they each want to make a statement to the Ad Hoc Committee at a meeting to be held on Thursday 9 April in the Assembly Chamber. The Speaker's Office will write formally to all members to confirm that.

That concludes this meeting. Stay safe. God bless.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): The Speaker received notification on 7 April that the Minister of Education wished to make a statement to the Ad Hoc Committee at today's meeting. A copy of the statement that the Minister intends to make is included in your pack. I welcome the Minister of Education and invite him to make his statement, which should be heard by members without interruption. Following the statement, there will be an opportunity for members to ask questions.

Mr Weir (The Minister of Education): Thank you, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker, for the opportunity to update the Ad Hoc Committee on the work that has been undertaken and is under way in the education sector in response to the COVID-19 situation.

I am grateful to all those who work in the early years, schools, youth and wider education sectors for their vital contribution at this very difficult time. The issues that we are facing have never been encountered before, and all areas of society are facing difficult challenges. As ever, the physical and mental health and well-being of the young people in our care and all our staff must be our priority. Our teachers and school leaders are doing an excellent job in supporting our children and young people and providing remote learning to maintain a daily routine.

In particular, I want to thank those schools that are open today for key workers' children and vulnerable children and those that intend to open over Easter and in the weeks ahead. In these extraordinary times, it is heartening that our principals and staff are showing such leadership and compassion for vulnerable pupils and those whose parents are key to the COVID-19 response.

I am sure that members will join me to pay tribute to teaching and non-teaching staff, their trade union representatives and the increasing number of volunteers who are now coming forward, be they school governors, retired teachers, retired classroom assistants or colleagues from the wider education sector. I am deeply grateful to those people for the whole-heartedly constructive and cooperative manner in which they have lent their support to the wider effort to respond to the enormous challenges posed by the COVID-19 outbreak.

Before going into detail on the Department's response to COVID-19, I can highlight that a formal offer on teachers' pay and workload was made yesterday to the five main teaching unions. I am pleased that there has been progress on the issue of teachers' pay and workload. Since returning to the Executive in January, I have made the resolution of this long-running industrial dispute a priority. Indeed, this is one of the main commitments in New Decade, New Approach. I am grateful to Executive colleagues for their overall decisions on the Budget allocation to the Department of Education. They have allowed me to ensure that appropriate financial provision for a pay award has been included in my decisions on the allocations within the Department of Education's 2020-21 budget.

The five trade unions that make up the Northern Ireland Teaching Council will now consult with their members on the proposals in advance of any formal acceptance. I urge all teachers to consider the formal offer, which, if accepted, will bring an end to the industrial action that has been ongoing since January 2017 and has been having a debilitating effect on the sector.

Turning to the COVID-19 situation, the Department's COVID-19 strategy and plan supports the overall Executive strategy. Our plan is built around the following strategic priorities: first, to ensure the continuity of learning for children and young people; secondly, to support vulnerable children and the children of key workers; and, thirdly, to ensure that families do not experience hardship as a result of schools closing. Our central planning assumption is that schools and non-statutory preschool education settings will remain open to accommodate remote learning and to ensure that there is provision for vulnerable children and for key workers' children up to the end of year 10. The vast majority of children should not attend school.

The Department will follow the Public Health Agency's advice at all times and will make use of the COVID-19 legislation and regulation-making powers only where necessary. My Department has put in place emergency response arrangements and is working closely with all its educational partners on a range of very complex issues that have arisen from the coronavirus outbreak. These include the Education Authority (EA) on service delivery issues, the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment (CCEA) and, on a daily basis, the teacher's unions.

Schools are regularly updated with appropriate advice as the situation evolves. These arrangements support the wider Executive response to COVID-19. In the Department, we have focused our work on six priority areas. These are: pay for the teaching and non-teaching workforce; free school meals; support for vulnerable children; distance learning; examinations; and support for key workers. In all those areas, we are attempting to address problems that we have never encountered before. We have been putting in place measures that we have never had to implement before, certainly not on this scale, and we are having to do this at great speed, with no opportunities to properly consult or test. It is really a question of deliver quickly, assess impact on the ground and refine as we go. Of course, all this is being done with a workforce that has been impacted at an organisational level and at a personal level, like everyone else in society, by the issues that this terrible crisis has visited upon us. The officials have risen magnificently to the challenge.

On pay for the teaching and non-teaching workforce, I can confirm that education sector employees will continue to receive normal pay during the COVID-19 crisis. Normal pay will apply regardless of whether people have been quarantined or medically advised to self-isolate, or are unable to work due to caring responsibilities or unable to attend their workplace due to closure. The same arrangements will apply to substitute teachers and non-teaching staff who are providing emergency cover. All current bookings through the Northern Ireland substitute teacher register will be honoured. Absences will not count towards the normal triggers for absence management or contractual sick pay and will not constitute a break in service for pensions or other purposes. We are putting in place contingency arrangements to ensure that payrolls will be processed and payments made.

I recognise that some workers in education, such as the substitute teaching workforce who would normally provide day-to-day cover, will no longer have access to secure work. Proposals have been developed for a hardship fund for those substitute teachers who were providing day-to-day cover in recent months but whose regular work has now ended as a result of COVID-19. A separate bid for this has been made to the Department of Finance and this will be dependent on additional funding.

To address concerns about the impact that school closures will have on children who are eligible for free school meals, a new direct payment scheme has been introduced for those families. From 23 March, eligible families have received fortnightly payments of £2.70 per child per day for each day of term that the schools are closed. To avoid further hardship, the payment will continue over the 10 schools days of the Easter period. To date, over 51,000 direct payments have been made for 93,000 children, and, by 15 April, over 96,000 children's families will have received payments.

We are aware of a number of children who have not received direct payments because no bank account details have been made available to the Education Authority. The EA is working hard to obtain the bank details, and I urge everyone whose children receive free school meals to get their bank details to the EA as soon as possible. We also know there are a number of children whose families have no bank accounts at all, including 360 children of asylum seekers. We are working with the Home Office to resolve that issue urgently.

The Department for Communities has announced a number of additional measures to support the provision of food and assistance to vulnerable groups, and my officials are working closely with that Department to ensure that food is available to those families. As part of the voluntary and community sector response programme, which is coordinated by DFC and was agreed by the Executive, the Youth Service will work with the councils to assist in the provision of food for vulnerable young people. The funding for that was agreed yesterday by the Executive and announced by the Finance Minister earlier today.

The Youth Online website allows young people to register a food need. Going forward, its role is expected to involve the provision of food for over 3,000 vulnerable young people who remain at risk despite the free school meal direct payments. I am grateful for the proactivity that the Youth Service has demonstrated in response to COVID-19 to date. I know that it will have a vital contribution to make, working alongside other partners at local level.

In line with the rest of UK, I am prioritising support for vulnerable children and their parents and carers. I appreciate that school is a protective factor for many vulnerable children. For some, it offers the only stability in their lives. Vulnerable children should therefore be facilitated to attend school where it is in their best interests and safe and appropriate to do so. Schools, parents and carers — and social services, where children have a social worker — should work closely together to determine the safest option for each child. The Education Authority has a range of services in place to provide support for vulnerable children and their parents. My Department continues to engage with colleagues in the health and social care sector to ensure a continuum of support for families, including those children who are on, or on the cusp of, the child protection register, as particular pressures could materialise if they are at home for significant periods. We are also developing further guidance to support vulnerable children, including those who attend special schools. I anticipate that this will be published shortly.

The EA and the health authorities have given assurances that provisions are in place to meet the educational and care needs of children who attend special schools. Where school buildings are closed to pupils, a range of creative approaches is in use, with online learning platforms being used to maintain contact and engage directly with children. Protocols remain in place between schools and Health and Social Care, keeping all the needs of children at the forefront of decision-making. As our children and young people have more free time, it is only natural that they will spend more time online. We want to make sure that teachers, parents and carers have all the knowledge and advice that they need to keep children safe online. I will announce further measures to help them in the coming days.

The Department has published guidance on its website in relation to social distancing and personal protective equipment (PPE) in education settings. Current NHS guidance is that, where staff and children are not symptomatic, no PPE is required over and above normal good hygiene practices. Further guidance is being developed in Great Britain on the use of PPE in education settings, including in relation to children and young people with complex needs. The equivalent Northern Ireland guidance will be published once it has been cleared by the Public Health Agency.

That said, the EA has received a supply of PPE and cleaning materials, which is available to all schools, including special schools, on request. On a number of occasions, there has been delivery of that equipment. It should be noted that, in the main, parents of children who attend special schools have decided to keep their children at home. Where key workers or parents of vulnerable children who normally attend a special school, or indeed any school, wish to send their children to school, they should, in the first instance, discuss this with the school, which will determine whether it can accommodate the request.

In the current context, distance learning is clearly vital to support continuity of learning and provide a sense of purpose and daily routine for our children and young people. My Department, together with the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment, the Education Authority, the Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI) and the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS), is focused on ensuring that appropriate action is being taken to secure, as far as possible, the learning, progression and well-being of our children and young people. Our delivery partners have identified designated link officers who are the first point of contact for schools. These officers are working with schools — every school has a point of contact — to provide pastoral and practical support to ensure that individual issues are resolved promptly and to identify what more can be done to support continuity of learning. Expertise in the EA, CCEA and ETI is being used to ensure that curriculum resources are available when and where needed. There have been additional offers of help from outside those bodies.

Schools have been proactive in supporting home learning, and teachers have devised booklets to guide parents on how to use learning platforms. Substantial capacity and provision exists within the Education Network service to support learning and teaching outside the classroom. We are also seeing some very positive statistics. On Friday 3 April, almost 45,000 individual students and teachers accessed the EA Education Network portal from home. In excess of 80,000 visits to the EA Education Network portal were made from homes over a 24-hour period and over 720,000 emails were sent and received by students and teachers within that 24-hour period.

Turning now to qualifications and examinations, I recognise that exams are a key concern for children and parents. In the absence of exams this summer, my priority is to ensure that pupils can move on as planned to the next stage of their lives, be it starting university, further education, sixth form or an apprenticeship or employment. It is crucial that no one is disadvantaged. My officials have been working closely with CCEA and colleagues across the UK to develop appropriate arrangements that are robust as well as fair. I want to ensure that we maintain alignment with arrangements in England and Wales as far as possible to ensure that learners here are not disadvantaged, particularly in relation to admission to university. However, I need to take account of policy differences between the different jurisdictions and take decisions that, ultimately, are right for the young people of Northern Ireland.

CCEA has provided the Department with detailed advice on a range of options, and my officials have been assessing these and consulting with key stakeholders, including representatives of head teachers and some teaching unions. I expect to be in a position to make key decisions very soon and will announce these as soon as possible. Once I have taken those decisions, CCEA will be instructed to implement them as a matter of urgency. There will be a significant amount of detailed work required, including work to develop an appropriate appeals process and arrangements for private candidates. CCEA is developing detailed guidance for schools. It will be finalised and issued as soon as decisions have been taken.

My Department is also working closely with the Department for the Economy to ensure that those who are taking vocational qualifications are not disadvantaged by the cancellation of scheduled exams and assessments. The Economy Minister made reference to that yesterday.

Members will be aware that the Executive have asked parents to keep children at home, wherever possible, and that schools remain open only for those children who absolutely need to attend. The education sector has been asked to deploy its resources as part of a wider national — indeed, global — effort to keep vital services functioning for the greater good. Schools are not open for normal business. Schools and preschool settings should be open where it is safe to do so, as per PHA guidance, to provide supervised learning for those children who are vulnerable, or whose parents' work is vital for the functioning of essential services, for example, the children of key workers. This is a very last resort: children should not come to school if alternative arrangements can be made.

In recent weeks, between 750 and 1,400 vulnerable children and children of key workers have attended 400 to 500 schools for supervised learning and educational supervision. In these schools, around 750 teaching staff have been on site along with around 600 non-teaching staff. I should say that because those are the individual figures for a particular day, the global number of children will actually be higher because many parents will, for example, have other arrangements for two or three days but want to have their children in school on the other days. The figure can be a little bit misleading.

On a daily basis, we are gathering data from schools and the wider education sector on the key issues, including the number of schools that are open and the number of pupils at schools. So far, uptake of the scheme has been relatively low, which is consistent with the pattern elsewhere in Great Britain. That would suggest that parents are keeping their children at home where it is possible. That could change in the coming weeks due to the predicted surge, but it will depend upon parental choices. Mechanisms are in place to capture the information that is needed to allow the Department and the managing authorities to refine, adjust and replan as necessary in light of the ever-changing situation. If school leaders consider that it is unsafe to open because they do not have the staff available, they should either not open or limit the number of pupils who are permitted to attend accordingly.

In addition, schools have been working on collaborative cluster arrangements. Work is continuing to bed that in. The Department has been working closely with the EA and other education partners to assign a link officer to every school or cluster to ensure that sufficient provision exists to care for vulnerable children and the children of key, critical workers. The system is bedding in well.

The EA has a helpline for key workers and a registration system whereby key workers who are having trouble getting a placement for their children can request additional help. The number of unplaced children has decreased in a matter of days, from 271 to 131. The number continues to come down. We are confident that those children will be placed soon.

An increasing number of school leaders are coming to the fore to establish cluster arrangements with immediate effect. They are supported by EA teaching staff and volunteers to ensure that there is sufficient provision for the children who need it. The Department, the EA and other education partners will continue to work closely to support that leadership in the days and weeks ahead.

I put on record my thanks to the educational leaders in our community who are playing their part to support vulnerable children and the children of key workers by opening their schools and working collaboratively with other schools at this unprecedented time. We are all in this together, and we simply could not do it without that leadership.

Members may be aware that, on 27 March, I announced a volunteering scheme to assist in the response to COVID-19. The aim of the scheme is to give extra support to teachers and other school staff to carry out the various duties that are required for the supervision of children, and they are ready to be deployed if that becomes necessary. Early figures for the volunteer scheme are encouraging. As of today, 1,088 people have applied to be a volunteer. So far, 882 of those people have already been cleared by Access NI. We are continuing to process applications. The scheme will operate alongside the clustering measures that the Department and others are developing.

Finally, in relation to childcare, I am pleased to inform members that my colleague Robin Swann, the Minister of Health, and I have published a joint announcement that sets out the arrangements that we will put in place to provide childcare for vulnerable children and the children of key workers across Northern Ireland. We have secured a significant funding package of £12 million, which will help to address a number of key issues for childcare provision in response to COVID-19. These include: the need to ensure that registered childcare providers, including childminders, who are providing childcare for a reduced number of vulnerable children and the children of key workers, during limited operating arrangements, can do so without risking the sustainability of their provision; to ensure that key workers and parents of vulnerable children can access childcare places and do not experience financial hardship as a result of needing longer hours of childcare or incurring higher costs for the bespoke approved home childcare scheme; and to ensure that registered childcare and day-care providers and childminders who need to operate longer hours, holiday cover or evening provision are supported to do so.

The package of emergency measures also seeks to address sectoral sustainability by developing a support measure for registered settings that have closed. We all need to realise that we must ensure that there is a childcare sector in place when we come out of this crisis. That measure will interact with the financial assistance measures that were announced by the Chancellor and are being administered by the Department for the Economy, of which childcare settings and childminders might be able to avail themselves.

More detail on that package of support measures will be made available. Essentially, we aim to provide a bespoke, approved home childcare scheme to enable key workers to have their childcare needs met in their own homes; enhanced support for registered childminders who provide childcare for the children of key workers and vulnerable children; support for registered day-care centres to remain open for the children of key workers and vulnerable children in locations where key workers need them most and for those settings that have been forced to close; childcare advice and guidance for parents who are key workers, including a helpline; and advice and guidance for registered settings and providers. I hope that the measures that we have announced today will provide much-needed reassurance to parents of vulnerable children and to key workers that a range of approved and registered childcare options is available and, importantly, that the additional costs of keeping key aspects of provision operational during this time will not be passed on to them. Parents who need it will not be required to pay any additional childcare costs during this period that might arise from the approved home childcare scheme.

These measures do not change the starting position that we have adopted: where possible, children should be cared for in their own home. Schools, preschool education settings, registered day-care facilities and childminders should be providing care only for the children of key workers and vulnerable children. It is essential that we work together across the education and health sectors to ensure that vulnerable children and those of key front-line staff can access safe and responsive provision. The new measures will sit alongside the support being provided by schools and preschool education settings for the children of key workers and vulnerable children. I know that childcare is a key issue for many parents. It is even more critical for key workers, and we need to support them in the fight against coronavirus. I hope that members agree that the package of measures that Robin Swann and I have announced today will go some way towards helping key workers access a wide range of childcare provision and help to protect and sustain the childcare sector so that it is in a position to remain open or, for some, reopen when the COVID-19 crisis ends.

It is difficult to overestimate the challenges that our society faces as a consequence of the COVID-19 outbreak. Our lives, family and work are being influenced and impacted on every day in ways that we could never have imagined a few weeks ago. The position on COVID-19 is exceptionally fast-moving, and I have made it my priority to bring as much clarity as possible, as quickly as possible, on the full range of very complex issues that we face. My Department is working hard to support the education sector in the fight against the virus. In the months ahead, the Department will continue to have a crucial role to play not just in relation to the pressure being felt by the education sector but the related health, economic and social issues being felt by our society. I am sure that, by continuing to work closely together, we can make a significant contribution to the overall effort to address and defeat this threat to the well-being of our society.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): I thank the Minister for making his statement. I now invite members to ask questions, and I will allow a period of around one hour for that. It is my intention to allow as many members as possible who wish to ask a question to do so. However, as per Tuesday, that depends on members asking focused and succinct questions. Members may ask one question only, and it must be related to the statement that has just been made by the Minister of Education. The Chairperson of the Committee for Education, Mr Lyttle, will be allowed some latitude, and he can ask two questions of the Minister.

Mr Lyttle (Committee Chair - Committee for Education): Thank you Principal Deputy Speaker, and thank you for your service at this difficult time. I thank the Minister for his statement and for the democratic accountability that it affords the Assembly. That is more important than ever. I also thank the teaching and non-teaching staff across Northern Ireland for their courageous and innovative leadership during the emergency. School leaders have established their own guidance and approaches, and many of our schools are fabricating essential PPE to protect our community. We thank them for that, and we welcome the formal offer to hopefully deliver the long overdue fair teacher pay and conditions settlement. I also thank the children and young people in our community who are staying at home to protect the NHS and to keep us safe.

The Education Minister's guidance to schools is to close, other than to the children of key workers and vulnerable children. That includes children with a statement of special educational need. All special school pupils have a statement of special educational need: that is around 6,000 children across Northern Ireland and, I think, up to 30 schools. The Education Minister will be aware that there is particularly close, one-to-one contact in those settings, so I ask him when he has met the special school leaders. What arrangements has he put in place to make PPE, testing and medical provision available so that special schools can open? What arrangements are in place for that to be provided remotely, when pupils are at home? What action has he taken to enable the reopening of special schools in due course?

Mr Weir: My mathematics suggests that that is more than two questions, but I will try to cover it as one main question.

We are in constant contact with special schools. The member is right about the impact. A "vulnerable child" is not simply defined as anybody who has a statement; it is in a wider context than that. As part of this, there are particular issues with those who are particularly medically vulnerable and those who are not. Sometimes the two can be conflated, although I appreciate that the member is not in any way conflating them.

We are in constant contact with each special school, and the Chair has, I think, made helpful suggestions about direct contact with some of the groups. We find, first of all, that, in the vast bulk of cases, even if their child has a medical vulnerability, most parents have expressed a desire to look after their child directly at home. Many of the schools are not open at present. Where they are open, we are trying to facilitate them, but we have been told by, I think, 23 of the special schools that they have had no request from any parent to be open. It is therefore about accommodating where there is need.

As indicated, where there are requests for PPE, there will be a response. I think that I mentioned that at the Committee. I am trying to find the details. As part of the overall PPE procurement process, while the focus has clearly been on the health service and on health workers, through the Department of Finance's Central Procurement Directorate (CPD), a small stock of PPE has been held back for requests from other agencies and Departments. As a result, a wide range of stock has been obtained, most of which will also relate to hygiene. Stock is constantly being renewed, and there has been a wide range of deliveries. For instance, if you include all elements of stock, there has been some level of delivery to, I think, 580 schools. While there is remaining current stock — things such as aprons and face shields — an amount has been delivered. We have tried to facilitate that where it is needed, where it is necessary and where it has been requested, and that remains the position. Individual employees in special schools have perhaps raised the issue about PPE, but I do not think that we have had a direct request from a school saying that it is closed because of a lack of PPE. Working with the EA, we will be happy to accommodate that, where possible.

On the matter of reopening, there is a wider context that the Executive will have to face, which is to decide when it is safe and appropriate to open schools; indeed, there is a wide range of things to consider. That will be kept under constant review. There are no plans at this stage to reopen in the immediate future. It is important that we get on top of the virus at a time when there is a level of surge. We will obviously tailor any responses that involve the wider school sector as time moves on. It is a moveable situation.

Mr Humphrey: I thank the Minister for his comprehensive statement to the House this afternoon.

Minister, I am sure that you will agree with me and join me in congratulating the north Belfast principals who, a number of weeks ago, gathered together some PPE and delivered it to the Mater Hospital for the NHS staff working on the front line in that hospital. Will you also join me in commending the principal of St Malachy's College in north Belfast, Dr McBride, and his governors and senior management team for making the school available for use by those same workers in the Mater as they continue to fight this wretched disease?

I thank the Minister for all that he, Mr Baker, his permanent secretary, and their team have done. We will reach the peak in the coming weeks, so I ask the Minister to outline what further developments could be put in place for key workers, some of whom may have had difficulty getting their children into school, to assist them to get their children a place at school.

Mr Weir: First, I would like to commend those schools. You mentioned St Malachy's, and I understand that there is a similar position with Methodist College: it is now doing that as well. He mentioned the north Belfast schools. A wide range of schools is doing that. I do not want to name individual schools, because I am sure that I will forget some of them.

One of the things that has been very apparent is the number of schools that, beyond simply the role they have played in providing education or support for key workers, have provided and have looked and seen — particularly because there would be more potential availability in the post-primary sector — what stock and resources they have and, where they have found face masks and aprons, they have provided those. I have seen that across all the sectors and in all parts of Northern Ireland and I completely commend the work that is going on.

On the support for key workers, broadly speaking as we move ahead, part of it will be achieved through the helpful development of clusters to try to make sure that there are individual opportunities for every key worker. It is interesting that the pattern has been very similar in different jurisdictions. We had a situation on day one, when a certain number of pupils came to schools. Those numbers reduced fairly significantly within a number of days, but have remained fairly level or gone up at times since then. It is quite plausible that we could see a greater level of peak, so the clusters have a role to play. Those are not forced on schools and there will be a number of schools that will want to make individual provisions.

Given the numbers that have been there, we have not had to draw on volunteers. However, the fact that we have had over 1,000 volunteers — nearly 900 of them have been cleared so far — means that we have a ready group of people, who, if there are gaps in particular geographical areas, can step up to the plate. The best way of providing that assistance is probably through the rotation of staff and, where possible, most of the schools that have been open have ensured that those who come in do so on a rota basis so that they would come in only once every number of days. That has not been the case in every school, but it has been in a large number of schools.

A lot of work is being done by officials to collect data daily. That has been very useful. The helpline and, indeed, the contact with the EA has also been very useful and the numbers of unplaced children are coming down day by day. In some cases, to be fair, some of those referrals go beyond what any school could accommodate, because sometimes key workers will make a request on the basis that they are in work until 8:00pm or 10:00 pm and, generally speaking, it would be very difficult for any school to be able to accommodate some of those people. The important thing is that, when we reach the surge, key workers are not denied that opportunity. I have been taken by a number of schools that are staying open to facilitate maybe only one or two children of key workers in their local school communities, but those schools have felt it absolutely worthwhile to remain open to do that.

Every contribution that every school makes is making a difference. We do not know whether one individual could make the difference between somebody's life or death.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): We are nine minutes 40 seconds in and have had two questions. Just as I asked members to keep their questions streamlined, I gently remind my good friend the Minister to do the same. I am sure that that would be appreciated. I call the Deputy Chair of the Committee for Education, Ms Karen Mullan.

Ms Mullan (Committee Deputy Chair - Committee for Education): Minister, I thank you for your statement and the work that you and your Department have done to date during this period. I particularly welcome the ongoing work of the Department and the teachers' unions to bring forward a proposal on teachers' industrial action. Thank you for that.

Minister, according to your Department, 60,000 children are being educated through remote online learning. That is under 20% of the school-going population. I have been working with the post-primary schools in Derry to provide laptops to young people who would not have one in their home. Are you concerned at the level of online learning that is taking place? Will your Department look at providing laptops and connectivity support to those who need it?

Mr Weir: If there is any lack of resources, I am sure that that could be worked through. At times, we will get figures that will be a snapshot of a particular moment in time. For example, I mentioned that in one 24-hour period something like 720,000 emails about online learning went back and forward, so there is a considerable amount being done. A number of schools in certain geographical areas of Northern Ireland, where there are particular problems with broadband, a lot of schools have provided packs, so it is not all simply online learning. A lot of that is focused particularly on the post-primary sector. We will look at whether anything else can be done.

I should say to the Principal Deputy Speaker that I will do my lines afterwards, "I must not take too long to answer". I will write that out 1,000 times for him.

Mr McCrossan: I, too, would like to pay tribute to and express my huge admiration for our teachers, teaching workforce, principals, classroom assistants and other people who are in schools, helping with the children of key workers in the health service at this very critical time.

Minister, I also put on record my appreciation and thanks to you, particularly during these challenging times. I know that it is extremely busy and challenging for you, and I have to say that you have been more than accessible and entirely open — in fact, you have, I feel, an open-door policy. It is very easy to get answers from you, and I appreciate that.

I will follow on from what William Humphrey said about St Malachy's. The school's very important announcement on entering a voluntary arrangement with its local hospital shows great leadership. I wonder, Minister — you have received correspondence from me on this — whether any consideration has been given to the wider school estate, given that schools in every town and village are very accessible for the testing that will be ramped up. Have schools been considered as places for treatment, step-down services or any form of use by the Department of Health that would be appreciated during these times?

Mr Weir: I thank the member. It is important that the public sector as a whole pulls together. The member is right to mention the availability of facilities. Direct arrangements can be made at a local level, but, in many ways, schools remain a public asset. I am more than happy to accommodate anything that is requested. The driver in that must come centrally from the Department of Health. My general assessment — the Health Minister can speak for himself — is that, at the moment, some of the challenges out there are not particularly driven by a lack of space.

The specific case at St Malachy's was that the proximity of its showering facilities to a hospital was extremely helpful. Largely speaking, work around testing has gone on at some MOT centres, for instance. If a location is needed, I will, on request from the Department of Health or the Health Minister, be more than happy to make it available.

Mr Butler: Like the rest of members, I would like to commend you for the service that you have given as Minister of Education. I also commend the permanent secretary and echo Daniel's words that there has been an open-door approach. In these unprecedented times, that has worked better for democracy. I also thank you for your relentless pursuit of praise for key workers — our teachers, teaching staff and support staff — and the incredible job that they are doing. Further to that, in my town, Wallace High School, and Mr Monteith in particular, has done a tremendous amount of work creating PPE visors for front-line workers. I am sure that you will want to thank the school for that, as will the whole Assembly.

Minister, you referred to the ongoing work by CCEA and other exam boards. I understand, having spoken to you about this a number of times at the Committee, that protracted and diligent work is ongoing to ensure that the process is as fair as possible. However, I am increasingly coming across households with two key workers. Perhaps both parents work three, four or five 14-hour shifts a week. I just want reassurance from you that such children will not, perhaps because of a lack of parental help at a key point in their education, be disadvantaged in any awarding of marks, especially for GCSE and A-level exams.

Mr Weir: Detailed proposals are, I think, effectively, ready. I will update members: the particular point reached this week is that discussions were held with important stakeholders such as trade unions, the likes of CCMS, the EA and other organisations. The discussions identified a need for a little fine-tuning, but, broadly speaking, suggested that that would be the case. One of the slight restrictions has been that, while we want to make sure that it is absolutely fit for purpose in Northern Ireland, we also have to make sure that it is compatible with wider opportunities in the UK and that it does not clash with anything in the Republic of Ireland or beyond. I hope to bring that to a conclusion very quickly. I suspect that there would be more direct damage if, for example, we were doing exams next month and late study had been disrupted. The fact that it will be done through a mechanism — whenever that is revealed — involving a mixture of presumed grades and coursework assessment should mean that something done in the teeth of the result will have very little impact.

As part of the overall package to be revealed, there will need to be examination of what appeal mechanism there will be. Let me put it this way: I suspect that all of us who have stood for election have, at various times, felt that we did not get the result that we merited. There is no appeal mechanism in politics, but that will need to be taken account of here. As with a lot of aspects of society, even the short-term impacts will create ripples as we move ahead. At least, it has not been very geographically centred. This applies not just in Northern Ireland but throughout the world, so, broadly speaking, it is about how we, as a society, cope with it.

Mr Givan: I thank the Minister for coming to the Committee this afternoon. Other members have spoken about the Education Minister coming here, engaging and being accessible. He has engaged with me in personal phone calls and been very quick to respond. I want to put on record a comment that a principal of one of the largest schools in my constituency sent to me. This school principal said:

"On behalf of my school community, I am emailing to thank you for your exemplary leadership at this unprecedented time in education ... You are leading from the front, and communication has been transparent, regular and informative ... I am immensely proud of my own school as we continue to support the pupils of parents who are key workers, and we are fully staffed for the first week of the Easter holiday".

It is important that we put on record not just the political appreciation for the Minister but the appreciation of principals who admire the work that he has undertaken in these very difficult and challenging times.

Members, including the Committee Deputy Chair, have raised the issue of the accessibility of online schooling. There are schools that are very much tooled up for online delivery. My children go to Wallace High School and Pond Park Primary School and, every day, those schools email my children with online assessments and feedback. However, not every school and not every home has that online accessibility. There are examples of schools that can deliver effectively, but there are also constituents contacting me who are concerned that there is not sufficient engagement and that they are not getting the necessary support to provide homeschooling. Minister, what more can schools do to provide that support? Also, can you confirm that schools will continue to provide that kind of assistance over the Easter break?

Mr Weir: Schools are continuing to provide that. I am always slightly worried when I hear praise because I just wonder what disaster is around the corner. I am sure that we have all been there. In Northern Ireland, we have the advantage of the C2k system, which enables that level of delivery for the most part. Now, that delivery will not be to every home or every area and, as I said, a number of schools are then providing material. We are working with schools to see if additional learning materials are required, because not every school is at the same level in being able to provide those. Where help can be provided, we will be happy to step up to the mark.

The member mentioned Easter. Initially, quite a large number of schools were open. Some of those then found that no children of key-worker parents needed the school and have closed. However, the concern was that, as it is outside normal term time, there would be a large drop-off at schools over the Easter period. That has not happened. We are maintaining around 400 schools being open. Indeed, the extent to which schools have stepped up to the mark to provide that level of service is an exemplar for our society. I have been delighted to see that. Sometimes we can see negativity in the news. We can see people breaching social distancing and abusing the system. However, throughout this crisis — and the school system is very much at the forefront of it — we have seen people stepping up to provide the best that they possibly can, and I am proud to say that that has happened in our education system as well.

Ms C Kelly: Like other members, Minister, I welcome the positive news in your statement. This afternoon, the Finance Minister announced a funding package for emergency childcare provision. What role will the Department of Education play in that initiative, and when do you believe the new package will be in place to provide the flexibility required by many key workers that has been lacking to date?

Mr Weir: Although that was announced in relation to DE, we have been working very closely with the Department of Health on the issue. From that perspective, there has been a particular problem with childcare and childcare settings because the economies of scale have meant that, in many cases, it has simply not been practical for childcare providers to open, whatever their willingness.

A school can open with a small number of staff to accommodate a small number of children. That is, in many ways, relatively straightforward. However, a lot of childcare providers are private organisations and to do that and sustain it is simply not financially viable. In addition, if they were getting a volume of children, there would be issues around social distancing.

The detail is being worked through with the Department of Health. It has been doing a trawl through its HR of those who need childcare, working through the Department's trusts and, in particular, the early learning section. I suspect that we will see elements of this coming on stream at different stages. For example, for the largest volume, we are looking at maybe 75 childcare settings. Some are ready to go straight away; some will take slightly longer. Some of those settings will be reopening after closure.

I also place on record my thanks to a number of schools that, when this initially kicked off, were not in a position to open but have worked hard to reopen. So, if you like, the traffic has gone both ways.

On the detail and practicalities of the scheme, the work that will identify the requests and need with particular childcare settings, or through the other aspects of the scheme, will largely be driven by the Department of Health and the trusts. My Department stands by, working closely alongside them, to assist them in that task, but Health will probably take the direct lead in terms of the practical implementation.

Mr Buckley: I also put on record my thanks to the Minister for coming to the Assembly today, his accessibility and, indeed, the leadership that he has demonstrated in this difficult time for all.

Much has been said in tribute to teachers and teaching staff, and I concur with it. They have done an excellent job in difficult circumstances. I also place on record, as I am sure the Minister would, our sincere thanks to the many parents who have stepped up to the teaching role in their homes. They have done so with immediate pressures, whether that is the loss of a job or trying to hold on to a job without sending children to school, as the advice has suggested, where there is an alternative to childcare.

Many have been distressed about grades. I welcome the Minister's statement which outlines a way forward, I hope, in the coming days. There are questions around AQA examinations and whether they will be postponed, and how GCSE and A-level results will be calculated, as many parents realise that a mock examination is not always an indication of the reality.

In relation to childcare, can the Minister outline any plans to introduce emergency schools in areas of Northern Ireland where childcare provision has been lacking to date?

Mr Weir: I will deal with a couple of points on that. I hope there has been greater clarity on exams. The broad outline of where we are has been sketched out previously. I want to be in a position where the detail of that can be announced fully as a package, and CCEA would then be ready to write directly to schools and parents.

There has been a good deal of work ongoing to ensure that things are, broadly speaking, aligned. That is particularly important for A-level students. Yesterday evening, I took part in a conference call with the Education Ministers of the four jurisdictions within the United Kingdom. One of the things that was made very clear was that when A-level results are able to be announced — I know that Scotland is in a slightly different position, but certainly between England, Wales and Northern Ireland — that that is done on the same day at the same time: that is critical. There has got to be a little bit of a measured balance between ensuring that on the one hand we keep dates as close as to what they would normally be, but also balancing that against the issue of universities facing a particular difficulty this year, and obviously there will need to be a bit of time given for them to prepare.

In terms of emergency schools, we have scoped out a range of options. First, we are finding that the expected drop-off that would have happened during Easter has not really happened. That means that current arrangements are probably working better than maybe could have been anticipated.

Secondly, we are seeing a range of schools either formally or informally clustering. We are asking schools that are coming together — that can be in groups of two, four or five — that when they are doing that they register with the Department, and the first few of those are starting to appear. On other occasions, we have found situations in which two local schools have simply come together; they may not have made it a formal arrangement, but arranged that side of it as well. That seems to be operating as a driver to provide assistance for key-worker children who would potentially be going to a school that is closed. While the numbers are still not particularly large, we started off with a situation where a minimal amount of children were going to a school that was not their own; steadily, that number is growing.

Where we have a final fall-back position, the feeling is that the cluster side of it, as it develops, will actually work and provide the solution. There is also a fall-back that, if in a particular area it is clear that schools are simply not open and cannot accommodate the children of key workers, there is an opportunity for the EA to open up a school with a range of local staff and volunteers and provide that safety net, but we have not reached that point. With the success of the clusters starting to kick in, I suspect it may be a step that we do not have to take, but it has been something that has been scoped as a possibility if needed.

Ms Ennis: I want to thank the Minister for his time here today; it is very much appreciated. I concur with the remarks by Jonathan Buckley and I want to send a message of solidarity to the parents who are homeschooling children at this time. As a parent who is currently doing that, I can tell you it is not easy — it is very frustrating at times. However, there is support from our schools, and particularly my own child's school Bunscoil an Iúir, and I want to place my thanks to the teachers from that school for their support.

I am glad to hear the Minister say in his statement, and other members have alluded to it, that there will be a robust appeals mechanism for the predicted-grades process. That is very important and students need that reassurance. I want to ask whether, given the prevalence of cross-border study, there has been any contact between the Departments of Education North and South in relation to the admissions process and whether the various options being pursued on both sides of the border will have any adverse impact on students from the North accessing further and higher education in the South and vice versa?

Mr Weir: We have to create a situation that is seamless for everybody. In terms of direct contact on admissions, possibly uniquely, the Department of Education here will operate up to the end of secondary level and a lot of the work with the universities will have happened through the Department for the Economy. There is ongoing contact, and we are confident that there will not be barriers placed North/South or South/North in the same way that there will not be barriers placed east-west. There is recognition from universities across a wide range of areas. Indeed, I think there has also been acceptance, even on a pan-European basis, that grades will be accepted. I think people recognise the very difficult and challenging circumstances, and so there are ongoing discussions across a wide range of jurisdictions. I cannot say that there will not be some teething problems somewhere down the line, or a particular pupil that is left in some difficulty, but, generally, I am confident that arrangements will be in place to ensure that smooth transition across different jurisdictions.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): I wish to associate myself with the member's remarks, speaking as the Key Stage 2 coordinator for our dining room. I very much appreciate teachers this weather.

Mr McNulty: I want to place on record my appreciation and admiration of our teachers, principals and support staff for their versatility and their commitment to playing a very important role in defeating COVID-19. The form of the education system has been entirely reconstituted, and teachers have proven their worth in our communities and our society. I also pay tribute to parents and pupils in the same manner for the responsibility that they have all taken for defeating COVID-19. I am sure that the Minister can reassure the House that grades awarded for A levels will be recognised by universities across this island, across Europe and across the world.

On a more important issue for me personally, I am acutely aware that the enforced lockdown has confined some children to a 24/7 unsafe and frightening environment. Before COVID-19, school was a safe haven for those children, and now there is no escape. The Minister spoke about children who:

Can the Minister give this House a reassurance that no child will be unsafe at home as an outcome of the enforced lockdown from COVID-19?

Mr Weir: I can certainly give the assurance that every possible action will be taken to try to prevent that. The concern that all of us have, and it is something that is shared — I was speaking to other Education Ministers last night, and there is concern and nervousness in every jurisdiction. It is not just about children who are on particular registers or in particular positions. What difficulties will occur in families where, perhaps, we do not know that there is a problem? Indeed, there may not have been much of a problem beforehand, but this will exacerbate some sort of situation.

Every effort will be made to try to protect children. I mentioned that we will be working, in the days to come, particularly on safeguarding issues online. We are working particularly closely with social services and the Department of Health to try to make sure that the range of services that is available to children, through the EA, will continue and, indeed, be tailored for that. Indeed, that is one of the reasons why, when there has been an examination of the availability of school places, it has not been just for key workers. It was also vulnerable children who would benefit from being in school, and that is why they have been a cohort of those who have been in.

It is also the case that, while people may appear, in particular circumstances, on particular registers, we also avail ourselves of the local knowledge within that. Yesterday, for instance, I wrote to all schools, saying — and I know, from talking to some of the schools, that they have been doing this already — that, where you have particular concerns with particular children, you need to bring those forward and reach out to those children. You need to contact and make that information available to social services. One of the key link points, as I mentioned, is that, for each school, there will be a range of link officers who will be there through the Education Authority. They will sometimes be a conduit, as well, between schools. It is about schools looking beyond simply, "Here is a list of names." They will apply a certain level of particular knowledge to that, and I am encouraging schools to do that.

Can I be confident that no child will be unsafe? Sadly, I do not think I am in a position to give that guarantee, in the same way that we all fear that there will be terrible domestic incidents that will happen through, I suppose, evil actions — I was about to say, "as a result of this". Ultimately, if someone commits a domestic crime or a crime against a child, whatever pressures are there should never be an excuse for perpetrating that. Sadly, while we try to avoid it where possible, I think that we will see some instances of that happening. I cannot give a guarantee that no child will be unsafe throughout this, but every conceivable effort will be made to try to protect our children as time moves on.

Ms P Bradley: I join other members in thanking the Minister for the work that he has been doing in these very worrying times and thank him for the measures that he has put in place. I also join other members in thanking all of the teaching family. We know that it is more than teachers who allow for those gates to be opened every morning. I also thank the childminders who are doing a wonderful job. I am glad to note the protections that will be put in place for childcare facilities. We know that this will end someday and we want our children to be able to avail themselves of those childcare facilities. We also know that you have responsibility for the childcare strategy.

In your statement, Minister, you talked about clustering. If I heard you right, you said that it was a voluntary model. Can you expand on that and state how many clusters are up and running?

Mr Weir: The latest information, for those who have directly registered, is that there are around 14 direct clusters, involving around 56 schools. We are encouraging those who have made arrangements to notify the Department. Although there are link officers from the EA to help to facilitate this, some schools will want that help and others are happy to do it on their own. I spoke to a school principal last week who said that although he was running a girls' post-primary school, it was adjacent to a boys' post-primary school, with many siblings attending one or the other. So one school was, effectively, accommodating both sets of children. That would not be a formal cluster but it is there.

The reason why it is voluntary is twofold. First of all, while the overriding aim is to ensure that there is somewhere where a child can be placed in a safe environment, the most successful clusters will happen with facilitation, essentially and embryonically, by agreement and on a voluntary basis. It is also the case, particularly within some primary schools but also in post-primary, that many schools feel more comfortable with fewer children. Having a minimal number of children coming through their door can give reassurance to those parents.

With regard to the clustering, we are talking about the overall numbers, and I do not think that any school, at any stage, has gone beyond about 30 pupils. In most cases, it will be below 20 or very low indeed. A local school might end up with three or four children each day coming through the door. It will have a couple of teachers who are very familiar to those children and that school might feel a lot more comfortable simply operating on its own.

Support is available to schools so that if, for example, they feel under pressure because of staffing, that can be worked on either through the substitute list or volunteers. Clustering is not being forced on schools. We are not saying that schools must close to work with other schools. That, as an embryonic level, seems to have been developing. We are in an unprecedented situation, and it is actually about trying to scope out what is best and trying to adjust according to experience.

Mr O'Dowd: I welcome the Minister's statement and the range of answers that he has given today. It is always useful for the public discourse out there.

I am sure that the Minister will recognise the very wise decision that was made a number of years ago to stick with AS levels and modules during GCSEs and the fact that our not following Mr Gove down that rabbit hole will benefit him in reaching a decision on how we can move forward with exams.

I welcome the fact that the Minister and the Department of Finance are exploring a hardship fund for substitute teachers and how that will be rolled out. Can the Minister give any more detail on that? Is there any light at the end of the tunnel for those substitute teachers who find themselves in significant financial difficulties at this time?

Mr Weir: The Member raises a valid point. I congratulate him: it is probably the first exchange that we have had without academic selection's being mentioned. Even in dark times, there is progress.

We have scoped out a range of options that could be pursued. With regard to substitute teachers, I should point out that, broadly speaking, there are, effectively, two categories of substitute teachers, although there is an invisible line and people can move between the two. The first category covers those who do not have a permanent post in the school, but have a particular contract. A substitute teacher may well be in post for a term or two to fill in for a teacher who is on maternity leave or off work with long-term illness. Where those teachers are in place, and have a contract, that is being honoured. Those teachers are being paid on the same basis as their permanent colleagues.

The member raises an issue that has been a major problem with regard to a large section of the substitute teacher population. They may be described as "casual workers", at least with regard to their timings. They may work a day here and a couple of days somewhere else. That has been a problem because they are not direct employees. They are not self-employed. Even from that point of view, we find ourselves in a slightly different situation structurally from that of England and Wales, for instance. While a lot of those people are also casually employed there, the structures in England and Wales are such that substitute teachers there are largely supplied via agencies, and the agencies have had the opportunity to furlough workers.

Proposals have been put forward. I do not want to speak on behalf of the Finance Minister, but, to be fair, I think that he is very sympathetic to the position that substitute teachers are in. The problem that we have at present is that, in order to do the maximum that we could for those substitute teachers, it would require considerable resource. It is not there in the Education budget. It would be next to impossible to turn round to schools and tell them, effectively, to take a cut to their funding in order to fund staff who will not be providing a service. That really has to come externally. A range of options is being explored. The one problem that we have is that, given the somewhat unprecedented nature of demands, the Finance Minister, to be fair, is dealing with a large range of bids across different Departments. I think that the issue would be relatively high priority, but available resources are not enough and not sufficient at present to meet all those demands.

Each week, we have seen further movement with regard to Barnett consequentials. For instance, last night, we saw that money will be made available to charities. I think, therefore, that where we are today is not the end of the story. We are also looking at whether there are any imaginative solutions, working alongside the Finance Minister. However, I have to caution that it is difficult to see a solution unless additional money is levered in. Certainly, anything beyond that would be suboptimal.

Ms Armstrong: I would like to start by thanking the Minister, although I will declare an interest as the mother of a year-13 pupil, and say that there are a group of students — and it ties in with my question — whose mental health must be considered because, as year-11 and year-13 pupils — as Mr O'Dowd mentioned — they do not know what will happen to them. They will be heading back to school. In your clarification, Minister, can you give some thought to those pupils, who are part way through their GCSEs and what should have been their AS levels?

Thinking about that mental health, stress and pressure, how is the learning, medical and respite care that is normally accessed by pupils at special schools being provided to children and their families who are at home now? You said that many of those families are caring for those children at home. Breaks in care can have significant difficulties for those children, especially with occupational therapy or speech and language. Many principals feel that communication, in the tone and substance, has been somewhat lacking. I just want to ensure that their voices are heard today. Can you give those principals some reassurance that they can pass to families about that support?

Mr Weir: Obviously, some of that support is health-related, so we are working with Health colleagues on that. The EA is reaching out. For instance, on mental health, contingency planning has been implemented to ensure that counselling sessions can continue. With regard to individual circumstances, we are trying as much as possible, working alongside Health, to ensure that there are bespoke interventions for individuals. Where advice goes out, particularly to schools, there is a difficult balance to be struck and that is on a number of fronts.

Around the work that is ongoing, I will make a couple of points. In terms of the balance, some people will see a particular piece of advice as being too prescriptive, while others who receive the same advice respond by saying that they actually want to be told what to do. You will get that simultaneously. Sometimes people will say that you are spending too long in getting a particular piece of advice out, while others will complain that they have not got it yet. It is about striking that balance. There has been a thoroughness in the advice that has been able to be provided, while, as best as possible, trying to give that flexibility to schools.

It is undoubtedly the case — this was particularly true in the first few weeks of this — that things that normally go through the system have had consultation, either formally or informally. I know that there is often criticism in the body politic that it takes forever to turn particular things around or to do particular things. Things that are being studied and looked at in policy development or implementation at the minute, which might, under normal circumstances, take months or weeks, are having to be done in days or hours. That means, therefore, that any advice or guidance is not, by its nature, absolutely perfect. It is why, when we put things out, it is sometimes on the basis of the best possible estimate of what can be done. I think I referred yesterday to something being a work in process. That is not on the basis of the normal meaning of “work in progress”, but it means that it is a process rather than a full stop. It is a comma rather than a full stop, and, consequently, a range of things have to be ongoing.

Mr K Buchanan: I commend those teachers who are facilitating some schools to stay open for the children of key workers.

Social distancing, as we are all aware, is very important and it is the reason why schools have been closed, which has caused massive disruption to childcare and exam preparation. I support this action, which will help to save lives.

Does the Minister agree that reports of 200 people ignoring the social distancing regulations, which everybody is driving home day and daily, by gathering for a funeral in Mid Ulster, are deeply concerning given the direction that has been taken by every area of government? While some played pretend soldiers and risked all the people in our community, the real soldiers are battling day and night in hospitals to save lives, not to cause lives to be taken.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): The member needs to return to the content of the Minister's statement, please.

Mr K Buchanan: I will. Does the Minister support the call for children and young people to stay at home this Easter weekend and to ignore the actions of others?

Mr Weir: This is a period when all in society have got to be responsible. I mentioned earlier that, in the response to coronavirus, we have seen in a very positive way, it bringing out the best in people. From a range of things, in responses at times, it sometimes also brings out the worst. We have seen selfishness in social distancing. My Department has been able to provide further advice on social distancing. Broadly speaking, because of the numbers that have been coming to schools — because parents have been responsible and have taken a view that, where possible, their children should be at home — social distancing has, generally speaking, not been a particular problem in schools.

There was an initial worry, here and in other places, that when the initial decision was taken to try to keep schools open on a partial basis for the children of key workers and vulnerable children, schools would be inundated with thousands of children coming in and it would be very difficult to manage. That worry was not just felt here but was shared in a wider context. People have behaved responsibly. For the most part, very few people have abused the school system.

The member mentioned the Easter period. We are living in extraordinary times, and there has been an extraordinary response. I think that all of us appreciate now more than ever the things that we normally take for granted and see as being normal. For many families, the Easter weekend has traditionally been viewed as the last break before the summer term, before pupils plunge into exams and such things. Quite often, the period has been used by people to go away and spend a few days somewhere, be it at the seaside or wherever. What I will say is that, whatever the temptation to relax, revert to being normal and do things that you would normally do over the Easter weekend, that has to be resisted by people. We are at a critical point, and all of us have a part to play, because none of us knows whether we are a passenger, if you like, for this virus. It is therefore critical, whatever the conditions over Easter, that people remain at home and behave utterly responsibly. That is particularly true for families with children, who will want to see this weekend as some sort of release valve from what has been happening. It is critical that social distancing carry on until we beat this virus.

Mr Durkan: I thank the Minister for his statement, his Department for its response to date to the crisis, and indeed the education sector as a whole for its response, which other members have touched on. I particularly commend the Minister on his collaboration with the Communities Minister, which has now seen the roll-out of money to pay for meals for children who were in receipt of free school meals. We certainly hope that that is what that money is being spent on now.

The Minister referred to the small percentage of pupils who are not getting that access, owing to the fact that their parents do not have a bank account. Can he elaborate a wee bit more on that and on the efforts that his Department is making to make sure that those extremely vulnerable, extremely poor children get the nourishment that they need?

Mr Weir: I thank the member for his comments. There are a number of responses to that. We are in a position unlike that in other jurisdictions. One of our advantages is that Northern Ireland is not that large. Whereas other jurisdictions have had to work through local authorities, and there is great work being done there, we have been able to provide a Northern Ireland-wide solution to things, in particular on the issue of free schools meals, because the vast majority — around 95% — of the cohort entitled to free school meals were also getting a uniform grant. We were at an advantage pretty much from day one, in that a large number of bank account details for uniform grants are held by the Education Authority. We were therefore able to pay that money directly. At the start, approximately 4,000 children fell outside that number, but appeals were then made by the EA for people to get their bank account details to it. Those appeals have been largely successful. Additionally, there will be pupils who will be getting processed to come on to free school meals because of job losses in their household and parents coming on to universal credit, and that work is also being done.

That leaves two particular groups, which we are attempting to reduce in number each day. There are around 500 who, we believe, do not have bank accounts, and ongoing work is being done between the EA and those individuals to try to get them to set up bank accounts to receive the payment.

I will come to the final group in a moment. One of the less noticed parts of the funding package that has been able to be announced today is the £400,000 to Youth Service, which will try to target the money at vulnerable children in vulnerable circumstances, because it is also the case that, unfortunately, although paying money into bank accounts is the most effective and efficient way of getting it to families, doing so will not necessarily guarantee that every child gets a proper meal. Youth Service will therefore use its knowledge to support that aim.

In my statement, I mentioned one other group: that of around 360 asylum seekers. We have worked with the Department for Communities, but we are now working with the Home Office in particular. The methodology is that, although they may not have a bank account, more money can be debited into the system used. I cannot remember its exact name.

Mr Durkan: Aspens.

Mr Weir: Yes. That is it. We are working with the Home Office so that Syrian refugees and others who fall into that category will get direct financial assistance as well. It is about drilling down into the numbers to make sure that we move from the position at the start, where there were 97,000 children to be catered for. That is probably a growing number, but we want to bring down to zero the number who still require that additional help.

Miss Woods: I will keep this brief and to the point, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker, and, perhaps, you will allow me a second question.

What provision will there be for children of key workers who attend fee-paying schools? I am talking about the likes of the Steiner School. Can they be provided with support at local EA-funded school clusters?

Mr Weir: Yes. The idea with the clusters is that we want to reach a situation in which they are open, effectively, to anyone in the local area. I do not want to see a situation in which, if someone comes to a school genuinely — indeed, that is why the EA is trying to help place people. If a school is closed, there is a helpline through which parents can get in touch with the EA. That is starting to be successful in saying, "Here is a child. Here is what is available in the area", and in trying to liaise to ensure that there is placement. As I said, while there were not very large numbers at the start, the numbers of unplaced children have gone down by more than 50% and continue to go down.

The idea and, indeed, the guidance from day one was that people should not be put off because of the sector. If there was a maintained school, it should accommodate those from controlled schools, local Irish-medium schools, integrated schools, private schools or whatever else. There is no barrier to that; indeed, there is no reason why private schools should not continue provision where they can. If someone finds that a local school is closed, the aim, more and more, is to try to find a place for them. To be fair to many schools, a lot of them will be closed in part because, particularly with very small schools, if there is some level of disruption to their staff, it makes it completely unfeasible for them to open.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): Before I indulge the member and allow her to ask a second question, I would point out gently that there were 17 people on my list to speak in the debate and the member was number 16. The reason why I shimmied other people along was to ensure that the member and Mr Carroll were called. Ask your second question.

Miss Woods: Thank you very much; I really appreciate that. What is the Minister's position on Northern Ireland universities being able to conduct admissions in a timely manner, given that the UCAS moratorium ends on 20 April?

Mr Weir: The admissions process is obviously a matter for the Department for the Economy, but we are working on a UK-wide basis to provide solutions. That is one of the reasons why, for instance, it is critical that A level results are published at an identical time so that the universities can all operate within that.

Mr Carroll: Thank you for your discretion, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker. I want to ask the Minister about the situation faced by substitute teachers who work off the register and classroom assistants who do not have a contract. It is concerning that they are still in limbo and do not know whether they will get a pay packet going forward. As the Minister may know, nearly one third of teachers do not have permanent contracts, which, in itself, is a damning indictment of the state of the education sector as it entered the crisis. They are public sector workers who provide an essential service, and many of them are still working from home. What plans does the Minister have to guarantee their wages? To me, a hardship fund does not seem to cover it. What will he do to ensure that those wages are covered?

I have written to the Minister about asylum seekers trying to get access to Wi-Fi services at home. There is also an issue with some of them not having bank accounts to receive payments for free school meals. I want to make him aware of that as well.

Mr Weir: I might have to get into the Tardis to go back in time to answer a couple of those questions.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): Actually, Minister, in my introduction, I said that I would allow "around one hour".

Mr Weir: OK. Your generosity of spirit is great.

On the substitute teachers, we can call it a "hardship fund" or whatever else; it is about trying to get some level of funding that is there. The issue is the demands that are there from society as a whole across a range of Departments. At present, what is in the budget across all sectors is not enough to deal with that. As a country, Northern Ireland is largely dependent on what is in the block grant and in Barnett consequentials. At times, that has been increased through, for example, increasing regional rates — there are relatively small levers — but, from a practical point of view, that is not really an option at present. There is no lack of willingness, I think, across the board to try to tackle those issues. At the moment, the economic packages being presented reflect where we have reached in terms of what is available. The exception to that is the broader transport issue that is coming up. It is a question of trying to tailor whatever help we can. More can happen only if additional money can be levered in. That said, this is a bit of a moveable feast, in that various pots of money seem to become available as we move on. From that point of view, it is not hopeless.

I mentioned that we were working directly with the Home Office on our ability to provide funding to asylum seekers, particularly for children. The Communities Minister has already announced a package that will look particularly at providing food support for a range of vulnerable people, and asylum seekers will, I think, come under that. I do not have details of the Wi-Fi situation to hand, but it could be looked at.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): Thank you, Minister, for answering questions and for your statement. We shall now have a brief suspension of five minutes prior to the statement from the Communities Minister. I remind you of my opening statement about using the appropriate doors to maintain social distancing.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): The Speaker received notification on 7 April that the Minister wished to make a statement to the Ad Hoc Committee at today's meeting. A copy of the statement that the Minister intends to make is included in your pack at page 27. I welcome the Minister for Communities to the Committee and invite her to make her statement, which should be heard by members without interruption. Following the statement, there will be an opportunity for members to ask questions.

Ms Hargey (The Minister for Communities): Thanks very much. Hello, everyone. First, I want to formally recognise the many difficulties and challenges that people and communities, particularly our most vulnerable, face at this time. As the Minister for Communities, I am committed to doing everything in my power to support the most vulnerable in our society. I welcome the opportunity to update the Assembly on the important work that I have undertaken to support and protect people in need during this public health emergency. In recent weeks, intensive work has taken place across the Department for Communities in partnership with our multiple partner organisations to ensure that those most in need are protected and receive the help and support that they require.

One of my key priorities has been to ensure the continued delivery of benefits to those who need them and to introduce necessary changes to the system to provide additional support and flexibilities in these extraordinary times. To date, work has been completed to change the necessary legislation, regulations and operational procedures to provide easier and faster access to universal credit, personal independence payments (PIP), jobseeker's allowance (JSA), employment and support allowance (ESA) and discretionary support. We have seen unprecedented demand in new claims for universal credit, with 45,000 cases received in the last three weeks, a tenfold increase. As a result, we have reconfigured a lot of our services to make the payment of benefit to those who need it our first priority. Since 16 March, the average number of claims received each week has been 16,650. That can be compared with a weekly average of 1,950 new claims before the emergency began. Significant operational adjustments have been put in place that put a priority on payments and supporting the most vulnerable. In the last three weeks, we have made over 35,000 regular payments of universal credit, with 99% of those paid on time. Our average speed to answer calls in these three weeks has been under three minutes. We are answering nearly 95% of calls offered to us. There will be exceptions, but please recognise the context in which our staff are delivering.

All of that has been delivered with a much-reduced workforce due to the circumstances that we operate under. That has resulted in available staff being redirected to priority areas, including dealing with new claims for universal credit and discretionary support and maintaining important telephony services; indeed, I have visited a few of the offices in the last two weeks to meet staff and view the situation for myself. I take the opportunity to pay tribute to staff across the Department, who are providing an exceptional public service under the most severe pressures. Their determination and hard work has helped to ensure that important services continue to be delivered at this really difficult time. These important changes to our operations have presented significant challenges for managers and staff in the organisation. We have worked closely with trade unions to ensure that they comply with social distancing guidelines across our office network, and we have increased cleaning regimes to protect our staff. I also met the trade unions on-site in one of our Belfast offices recently. Many staff now work rota systems to ensure that the guidelines are strictly adhered to, and I commend them for their dedication in working long hours and over weekends to ensure that vital public services are delivered.

Members will be aware that the universal credit standard allowance has increased for everyone by £86.67 a month. In addition, everyone who makes a new claim for universal credit can now apply for a non-repayable universal credit contingency fund grant, which is only available here, through the discretionary support programme. That is publicised through nidirect, the main citizen-facing information portal, as well as the Department's social media channels and the network of independent advice sector and community groups.

I have taken steps to improve our ability to respond to increased demand for discretionary support. I have amended the regulations to widen the grant eligibility criteria to provide a grant for short-term living expenses to assist claimants specifically affected by COVID-19. An online application form for the new living expenses grant is now available, and staff have been redeployed to this area to ensure that we can manage the increase in applications.

I have also suspended face-to-face assessments across the jobs and benefits network, including medical assessments for PIP and ESA, to ensure continuity of awards. Access to telephony channels will continue to be available for anyone claiming universal credit, PIP, ESA, jobseeker's allowance and discretionary support. However, given the significant staff absences experienced across all benefit operational areas and the potential long delays in answering calls, new online application forms for ESA, JSA and discretionary support COVID-19 living expenses are now available on nidirect. The forms can be downloaded, completed and emailed directly to the relevant benefit area for processing.

Due to the COVID-19 emergency, some households in social homes may face difficulties with paying the rent that are beyond their control. I assure those households that their home is secure and they will not be evicted. The Housing Executive and all of the housing associations have given a commitment to treat all rent issues with sensitivity. That will support tenants through this difficult period. The Department will work with housing associations and the Housing Executive to help to keep tenants in their homes and to ensure that the welfare system can provide help to their tenants as fast as possible.

The package of measures recently announced by the British Chancellor, alongside changes to local housing allowance rates and increases in periods of discretionary housing payments, provides some assurance to landlords and tenants at this time. I have also announced that the proposed Housing Executive rent increase will be put on hold until October this year. People are worried about their jobs and the impact of the crisis on their families, and I do not want them to face additional pressures about whether they can pay their rent.

My officials and I are also exploring the groups of people who remain adversely affected by COVID-19, the scale of the issue and the future mechanisms available to the Department to support those groups. I am particularly focused on how we can protect the homeless during this period. We have been working with the Housing Executive, which has taken emergency measures including the sourcing of additional temporary accommodation for those who are homeless or threatened with homelessness. I am thankful that we have had no-one sleeping on the streets of Belfast and Derry in the last two weeks, and I commend those who have worked with us in the Public Health Agency, the Department of Health, the PSNI, the Probation Board and, in particular, local homeless providers to ensure the protection of our most vulnerable groups.

The Department's Make the Call helpline has prioritised its available resources in light of the decision to step back from home visits and attending community events in order to protect vulnerable people and minimise the spread of COVID-19. All additional resources have been redeployed to the telephony team to increase its capacity to assist those who need to access benefit advice and other supports and services. I know that that vital service has been a lifeline to many vulnerable people during the crisis, and we will ensure that the necessary resources remain in place to continue that service.

My Department has also worked closely with Advice NI to support the establishment of a Freephone COVID-19 community helpline. The service is available 9.00 am to 5.00 pm, seven days a week, to ensure that the most vulnerable and those at risk of COVID-19 have access to practical support services and emotional support at this difficult time. The Department also provides funding to Advice NI for the independent welfare changes helpline, which is another important source of information for the public.

Whilst the main focus of the Department has been responding to the ongoing crisis situation, I have continued to progress important work in relation to welfare mitigations. A draft Bill to allow the extension of mitigation payments for the bedroom tax has been shared with the Executive. Once approval to proceed has been granted, the Department will ensure that that is formally presented to the Assembly as quickly as possible. The legislation to extend the remaining welfare mitigation schemes will be laid shortly after the Bill. However, the Department has now implemented contingency arrangements with mitigation payments under the sole authority of the Budget Act from 1 April 2020. That approach has been agreed by the Department of Finance and was announced by the Minister of Finance during his opening statement to the Assembly on the Budget Bill on 25 February this year. The use of the Budget Act will allow the Department to make payments to people who would otherwise be entitled to a welfare supplementary payment. This approach is an exceptional measure that is necessary to protect people and ensure that payments continue to be made. This approach will continue for a short period until the relevant legislation to extend the mitigation schemes is approved by the Assembly.

At this point I place on record my sincere thanks to all of our community and voluntary sector partners, who continue to deliver essential and important services in their communities. I have put in place the Voluntary and Community Sector Emergencies Leadership Group, established by me in February, whose role is to support and input from local government and other stakeholders. The group has a key role in providing collective leadership across government and grassroots community organisations and to develop and implement urgent measures for protecting and supporting communities in need.

This partnership approach has been demonstrated this week with the introduction of the new weekly food distribution service. My Department is investing £10 million in that service over the next three months that will see 10,000 food boxes being delivered each week to the most vulnerable in society during the current lockdown. The box of mainly non-perishable goods will be delivered directly to the door of vulnerable people who have been notified to shield by their GPs and do not have access to local support networks. The boxes will also be available to those who are not shielding but are in critical need of food. Whilst my Department is leading on the initiative, it has been made possible only through collaborative working with the health trusts, councils and, importantly, the voluntary and community sector at the grassroots and with the private sector. This vital service will ensure that those most in need in our society who do not have a support network of family and friends to help them through the emergency will have access to basic food supplies. It will also allow those at risk of social isolation to see a friendly face and know that society has not forgotten about them. There is a tremendous amount of goodwill and generosity in action across our society, which is very welcome at this challenging time.

The Department has taken the lead in responding to the challenges that community and voluntary organisations face in introducing a range of flexibilities in terms and conditions around grant funding, including upfront payments and reduced bureaucracy. In addition, we have introduced a COVID-19 community support fund. This week, I wrote to the 11 local authorities around releasing £1.5 million initially through that fund through local government's existing community support programme. That funding will enable our councils to directly support grassroots organisations in tackling poverty and helping those in greatest need. We have also released £200,000 to the Community Foundation's small grants programme as part of its COVID response programme. I am pleased to work with the Education Minister to announce a new scheme for direct payments to families who would normally benefit from free school meals; I am sure he touched on that earlier. That will extend over the Easter period to ensure that no child goes hungry during that time.

One of the positive aspects to arise from the emergency has been the willingness of people to reach out, to help others and to volunteer their services across a range of areas. I am pleased to work with Volunteer Now in launching its campaign, #HelpEachOther, to direct new volunteers to its online registration and matching platform. Since the launch of the campaign, we have seen over 2,000 people registering and expressing their support. Existing volunteers across health trusts, sporting bodies and other large organisations are also being coordinated to respond to people's immediate needs.

I am conscious that other sectors face significant challenges at this time. I recently announced a new £1 million COVID creative support fund, which will be a mechanism to support individual artists and institutions in finding innovative ways to combat social isolation and address well-being challenges. The arts sector has such an important role to play in keeping spirits high and promoting creativity in difficult times. I have also asked my officials to work with Sport NI and the Sports Forum to consider immediate practical steps that can be taken to support sporting organisations. To date, that has involved the early release of the grants for 2020-21, and we are also seeking to have a programme in place to provide emergency financial relief to grassroots sports organisations.

We are all involved in a fast-moving and challenging situation that demands high flexibility and responsiveness across government, particularly with our partners in the voluntary, community and private sectors. I will continue to work closely with Executive colleagues, with the Committee for Communities and with the Assembly to ensure that we do all in our power to limit the damage of this deadly health emergency and particularly to protect the most vulnerable in our communities. I know that I will have your full support for the measures we have introduced so far, and I am happy to engage further with members to explore how we can all work together to protect everyone in our society.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): I thank the Minister for making her statement and will now invite members to ask questions. You know the routine, folks: short, focused questions to the Minister and no speeches beforehand. The one exception, who, I am sure, will not abuse this, is the Chair of the Committee for Communities, Paula Bradley.

Ms P Bradley (Committee Chair - Committee for Communities): I will certainly try not to abuse that.

First, I thank the Minister for her comprehensive statement. It shows the amount of work that she and her Department have done over the past few weeks, especially in helping the most vulnerable in our community. I also put on record, on a personal level, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker, my thanks for including me in many of those updates as Chair of the Committee. I also thank the voluntary and community sector. The Minister is absolutely right about positive aspects. Some of the stuff that we see on our social media from the voluntary and community sector has been truly imaginative, so "Well done" to them and to the many neighbours who are looking after people in our community.

I just want to touch on two issues, and I will not go over anything that was discussed in Committee on Monday. The first one is to do with collaborative working between councils and the voluntary and community sector, especially with the food boxes and the crisis grants coming in. Is that on a statutory setting or a more formal setting, so that it is rolled out in such a way as all councils have the direction that they require to take it forward? We have noticed over the last week that there has been a bit of an ad hoc approach to the food boxes. That is no criticism of you, Minister, whatsoever; it is just saying that there has not been a direction there.

Secondly, I ask the Minister about priority shopping again. I know that this is in other parts of the UK, and I know that it is not perfect. It is far from perfect, but we have a situation here where people are still waiting for baby food, nappies or sanitary products. People cannot get access to priority shopping, so I just ask whether the Minister, with the Health Minister, can look at that again and see if there is a way forward.

Ms Hargey: It is a very fast-moving situation, and, obviously, people are in crisis now. We are trying to work as quickly as we can to respond to the situation.

We have a formal relationship with local government, in that SOLACE sits on the emergency group, which is across the Executive. I have also established the community and voluntary sector emergencies leadership group, which includes regional organisations and local government is represented as well. It also includes grassroots community organisations.

The way that we have looked at the parcels is that we are working through local councils formally, where each council has been asked to set up distribution hubs. We feel that it is better to work through councils because they know their communities best. They have developed community plans and they have looked at issues of inequality and poverty within their own areas, and we are working with them. When you look at England, for example, and this will feed into the shopping list, the difficulty is that the English healthcare system has one database to work from, but, because we have multiple trusts, we have multiple databases. I know that we are not operating in a normal climate but trying to get that information through and trying not to breach GDPR rules and protocols has proven to be a bit more burdensome than you would initially think. So, there is cross-departmental working between my Department and the Department of Health. We are working with the local health trusts, and I know that, with the council areas, the trusts are working together, collaboratively, to get those lists established as quickly as possible and to make sure that they are streamlined. That will develop over the coming weeks, and we will start to see better consistency.

Initially, 10,400 parcels have been identified, and we do not want to leave anybody out. We know that the issue of poverty, more generally, is an impact and, particularly at this time, when people are losing their jobs and have reduced income, we do not want anybody to feel that they have to go hungry. We can scale-up these boxes and we can make sure that other people can be added. They can phone the COVID freephone community helpline, where they can self-refer. They can also be referred through local independent advice sector organisations or from grassroots community organisations, working with the local council, which can then refer in and respond to that local need. That is how it has been operating. It has not been working perfectly because of the scenario that we are working in, but I am confident that, over the coming weeks, we will start to close any gaps to ensure that no one goes hungry during this period.

Ms Mullan: I want to thank and commend the Minister on her leadership, the speedy action and level of support that she has made available to those most in need. In my community, I have been involved in delivering some of that support. People are very grateful, particularly for the free school meal payment and the food boxes. I also want to commend the community and voluntary sector.

Minister, this is rightly a worrying period and, with reduced household incomes, I am being asked by constituents for clarity around bedroom tax. Can the Minister provide an estimated time frame for when the Executive will approve the paper on the extension of the bedroom tax?

Ms Hargey: I answered some of your question in my opening statement. I have the Bill drafted and it is being presented to the Executive. I am just waiting for that to be signed off within the Executive. The key thing is that the payments are continuing. They did not stop in April, and it was important that they continued for all the mitigations that were in place before the start of April. That will continue until the agreement and the legislation comes in. It has been drafted and it is ready to go. It just needs to have the Executive approval. The regulations are drafted and ready to go as well. They will not take as long because they do not need the legislation. The payments are continuing. As soon as I can present the Bill to the Chamber, I will, as quickly as I possibly can. No one will feel the impact; they will not see the difference because the payments are continuing.

Mr Durkan: I thank the Minister for her statement, and commend her Department for the fantastic manner in which it has responded to the crisis. I pay particular tribute to those who are on the front line and those who are on the phone line in advice services. I also thank those who are in the back rooms, who sometimes are forgotten, but whose busyness is reflected in the plethora of positive press releases that we see emanating from the Minister's Department, reflecting the great work that is going on there.

The Minister will be aware that, last night, the Chancellor announced a new £700 million package to support charities. Subsequent to that, there was a statement from the Secretary of State that Northern Ireland will receive at least £10 million of that. Is the Minister in a position yet to clarify how much of that money charities here in the North will get, given the importance of such support for the charity sector, particularly at this time? Has she envisaged how any such scheme might be rolled out in the future?

Ms Hargey: I know that it is a worrying time for a lot of charities, particularly for those that deliver end-of-life care facilities, for example, that just cannot close down. They rely very heavily on donations and sponsorship, which, obviously, are not there now because of the restrictions that are in place. My understanding is that the Finance Minister is looking at that at the minute. I do not know what the definitive budget from the Barnett consequentials will be. The Finance Minister is looking at it at the moment. He is in discussions with the Treasury and he will make an announcement soon. We have an Executive meeting tomorrow. I am not sure whether he will bring an update to that meeting. I have not seen the agenda yet. I imagine that it will be announced in the coming days, because our priority is to get that money released as soon as possible — I am sure that you have seen that charities are closing now — and ensure that it is directed to those who need it. I am sure that members will be informed once that is announced.

Mr Allen: I echo the sentiments of my Committee colleague across the Chamber in commending the Minister, her back-room staff and all officials in the Department, and, indeed, the many organisations and individuals right across Northern Ireland who have selflessly stepped up to the mark to support each other within their respective communities.

In her statement, the Minister mentioned the universal credit contingency fund. Indeed, she highlighted the fact that it is unique to Northern Ireland. Minister, are you satisfied that the current budget for the contingency fund is sufficient to meet the scale and number of individuals who may require to avail themselves of it? You highlighted a tenfold increase of 45,000 over three weeks. Is there enough in that budget? Is there the provision to increase that budget if need be?

Ms Hargey: Thanks very much for that. Obviously, we are keeping those issues under constant review. I engage with social security staff regularly because of the pressure that that system is under. We do have the finances for the contingency fund at the minute. We have bid for increased moneys for contingency and discretionary support from the COVID-19 budget. We are waiting on the announcement from which that will flow. We will make additional changes to discretionary support around the income threshold in order to ensure that more people can avail themselves of it. At the moment, we are satisfied that the money is there for those who need it. We have paid out over £300,000-odd in support so far. We know that, if the criteria change, that will increase again, so we are keeping it under constant review. I know that Executive colleagues are supportive of that when it comes forward because it goes directly to families who need it. We are OK at the moment. As I say, if more resource is needed, we will make those bids to the Department of Finance.

Ms Armstrong: I would like to start off by thanking the Minister. I am sure that it has been a baptism of fire for you. I also want to say that your staff in Communities have excelled. I think that the thousands upon thousands of people in the community who depend on them at the moment would like them to know that their work has not gone unnoticed.

Quite a few members have asked questions that I was going to ask. One thing that I am quite cautious about, Minister, is the number of people who have applied for universal credit. We now have people who have come into the benefits system who have never faced that before. They have never understood exactly how much paperwork people have had to do. I hope that there will be a change in society's attitude towards people who have to live on benefits, given that more people will see what they have to go through. What preparations are going to happen for those people who have applied for universal credit, because their cash flow has been in difficulty, but who are waiting to be furloughed or for a redundancy package to come in? How do we help those people to understand that, when that money comes into their bank account, they may be moved out of the universal credit system because there is another lump sum of money there? Can you give any assurances to people that we will know that that is furlough money or that it is redundancy money? Can you explain to those people who are newly on benefits what will happen to them?

Ms Hargey: A couple of members have mentioned the staff, and the staff have been absolutely amazing under extreme pressure. That is why I made it my point to go out to a number of the offices, just over a week ago. Obviously, they are afraid, because they are going to work and they have loved ones, family and maybe people with underlying health conditions. They are also determined that they are public servants delivering essential front-line services, like many other low-paid workers that we are seeing throughout the crisis. I commend the work that they are doing. They have been absolutely brilliant, and I have not encountered any barriers. People are putting their hands up to get involved, and I have to say fair play to each and every one of them.

We have stood down certain business areas in the Department and that is to ensure that the first priority is to make sure that benefit payments are made and that we can get those payments out as quickly as possible. We will pick up on the other work behind the scenes.

Universal credit takes real-time information on where people's incomes are at the minute. People are getting advice. We are putting more resources into our universal credit team because it is under pressure. We also have people working from home: because it is an online system, they are able to do that. Again, they are working weekends and they are working during the night time so that we can make sure that we can respond to that as much as possible, so they are offering those additional supports to people who are coming in.

They are also meeting on a regular basis with our independent advice sector via virtual online meetings. That has proven to be really beneficial, as well. Where changes have happened, the independent advice sector is getting that information out to communities and to the people that it engages with. That is because, like you say, there have been thousands who have never had to engage with the benefits system, who are now doing it in social security.

We are continuing to support them and there are plans in place in the Department, and whilst our priority now is to focus on getting payments out, we are obviously looking at the next phase and what we will need to do. Plans are being drawn up at the moment and that is being reviewed on a daily, if not hourly, basis, by Colm and the rest of his team. We will update members as we move through those periods.

The big thing for me, and I know that it was mentioned, is what people in the social security system have to live on. People are seeing the impact of that now, and I hope that, after this emergency, people look at society differently and that we look at embedding a rights-based approach and that we have a new economic order that protects the most vulnerable in our society, because, through the crisis, we are seeing that our front-line workers are our lowest-paid workers, and something needs to change.

Mr Buckley: I thank the Minister for her statement. It rightly prioritises the protection of the most vulnerable and we know that a tragic reality of COVID-19 is death and the agonising task of arranging a funeral. The Minister talked yesterday, in a press conference, of the 78 families, so far, that would not be able to say goodbye to loved ones. While difficult, it is accepted begrudgingly in the difficult circumstances. Would the Minister agree with me that that stands in stark contrast with what has appeared to have happened yesterday in County Tyrone, where a mass public gathering at a Republican funeral of a former Sinn Féin councillor took place? That has caused much distress, as was outlined by my colleague Mr Buchanan, and has caused much distress to families who have had to bury loved ones in isolation and on their own. It has caused a lot of mixed messaging. Minister, would you join with me in condemning that activity, that reckless behaviour, and would you raise it with your Executive colleagues and the appropriate authorities?

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): The member is very close from being far removed from the content of the Minister's statement. In the context of the Minister's previous remarks at a press conference and the fact that she related to community groups and their work, and the member prefaced that, I will allow that, but he is on very thin ice with that question.

Ms Hargey: This is a difficult time. People are dying from this virus. People are losing loved ones, whom they cannot say goodbye to. It is important that people adhere to the public health guidance and the messages that are being put out there. I heard the PSNI say yesterday that it does not want to enforce in the first instance. It wants to try to engage and work with people. We know that these are draconian measures that are being brought in, and I think that that is accepted. On the whole, people understand the reasons for them. What I will reiterate today is that we need to work collectively as a community to save lives at this time. I appeal to everyone out there to ensure that they are adhering to the public health guidance so that we can save lives.

Ms C Kelly: Like other colleagues across the Chamber, I thank the Minister for the work that she has done and the mitigations that she has initiated to ensure that the most vulnerable are protected as best as possible. Can she provide additional details on how the partnerships involved in the collation of information and the delivery of shielding boxes will work on the ground?

Ms Hargey: As was touched on earlier, we are working with the local health trusts on collating the database of names that they have of people who are vulnerable. The 40,000 letters that went out to those in the North who have been asked to shield also have the phone number of the Freephone COVID-19 community helpline, so those people have been told that if they feel that they have no family support or cannot access food because they have been asked to stay in, they can self-refer on that database. We are taking names that way.

We are working with local councils as well. Each council has been asked to establish hubs within its council area, where those parcels can then be dropped off by food suppliers and subsequently distributed. We are also asking local councils to be involved, because they know their communities. Local community organisations know their communities as well. We are therefore asking people to feed in information and names of those who are vulnerable. Even if you did not get a letter from the doctor, if you feel vulnerable because you have no support network, you can self-refer through the Freephone COVID-19 community helpline as well.

We are trying to use as many avenues as we can. We do not have one single database or list, and that proves difficult, so we are trying to find other ways in which to close any gap that there is, in order to make sure that no one falls through the net in the time ahead. We need everybody's effort to ensure that we can do that. We are seeing it at the moment with football teams, Gaelic teams, rugby teams, Church groups and community groups all getting behind this effort at the grassroots level. We just need to make sure that we are getting the word out that the food boxes are here and are telling people how they can self-refer.

The situation will change over the next couple of weeks. Hopefully we will be able to refine things more and bring in more people. Moreover, the £1.5 million in funding that is going to local councils can be used for food security. I have seen local community groups in Belfast, Derry, Lisburn and other areas putting together food parcels. I would rather that somebody get two food parcels than none. As we move forward over the next couple of weeks, we want to make sure that nobody falls through. Therefore, engage with the local council and get community groups involved through the council.

We are doing work through the health trusts as well. We are also working with the three sporting codes — Ulster GAA, the Irish Football Association (IFA) and Ulster Rugby — on how we can use the activists and volunteers among their membership. One of the particular areas on which we are trying to work with them is the distribution of essential medicine and prescriptions for those who are shielding and those who are vulnerable. Hopefully, we will have that rolling out in the coming weeks also.

Mr Givan: I thank the Minister for coming to the Assembly and giving us that comprehensive statement. She is right to point out all the different sporting groups and community organisations that are doing great work. I am pleased that she namechecked Lisburn, because quite a number of groups, some of which she has already met, in Ballymacash, for example, have undertaken specific COVID-19 response efforts and are doing fantastic work. Thank you for that.

In Great Britain, there are schemes in place in which supermarkets have been able to identify the most vulnerable to prioritise the delivery of goods. I understand that your Department is leading on the engagement with supermarkets, and it is important that we get a system in place so that people can get the delivery of goods because of the demand that is there and their lack of access to supermarkets.

Minister, it is also important, in light of the comments by the deputy First Minister, who has gone out of her way to call out Ministers and businesses when they have breached, that you take the opportunity to call out the incident in Ballinderry in the deputy First Minister's constituency that has caused huge consternation and that my colleague Mr Buckley referred to.

Ms Hargey: First, on supermarkets, we are working with the main retailers and supply chains to see what we can do. As I said, the difficulty at the moment is that we do not have one database. We are trying to quickly establish that database and pull it together so that it can be shared. Supermarkets also have to create an online IT system for that. There have been really good discussions with the supermarkets on how we can identify those who are vulnerable. I am hopeful that we will get a resolution to that over the coming week or so and that that will open up new slots.

It is also important to notice — again, we are seeing it through the power of social media — that a lot of small, independent retailers are also doing home deliveries. It is important that we show support to them because they are doing some brilliant initiatives and are even supporting local food banks, church halls and sports halls in the delivery of food to those who need it most. I know that they have opened up services. The Consumer Council has an online list of all those local small independent retailers and the COVID-19 freephone community helpline can provide lists of retailers in local areas. We are also looking at the Volunteer Now list to link in with local councils and community organisations. There is a list of volunteers that can collect shopping for people, and we are trying to match volunteers to those who may be vulnerable or may have to shield during this public health emergency. It will come in different forms, but we will work with the supermarkets in the time ahead.

On your last point, I am not here to get into a political squabble or to call out every single incident where people may not be following the public health guidelines. That leads you down a rabbit hole from which there is no return and which helps no one. People are dying and families are grieving at the loss of loved ones. I have seen that in my community, where an elderly mother and grandmother lost her life and her family will not see her again. As a political leader, my role is to call on people to follow the public health advice and ask them to do that, because it saves lives. The more that we can encourage people to do that —. The PSNI and other enforcement agencies are doing the same. Their first port of call is to engage and encourage and, if nothing is listened to, to look at enforcement. It is very much about engaging and encouraging first. I want to do that today and I will continue to do that, along with the other Executive Ministers.

Ms Ennis: Undoubtedly, the COVID-19 crisis has had an immediate impact on our sports scene. The decision by all the sporting codes to cease activities and competitions will not have been an easy decision to make but it is, undoubtedly, the right decision at this time. I commend all the sporting organisations, but particularly the governing bodies of the GAA, soccer and rugby for stepping up to the mark and playing their part in the civic response to the crisis. I commend the Minister — she mentioned it in her statement — for some of the support that she is making available to our sports clubs. Will she provide a little more detail on what action she is taking at this time to support our sports sector and what measures she will introduce, or is thinking of introducing in the future, to relieve the financial burden and the uncertainty that our sports scene and grassroots sports clubs are facing at this time?

Ms Hargey: One of my last arranged visits before this crisis, which had to be cancelled, was to one of our sports grounds, Windsor Park. Sport makes a really good contribution, and we want to make sure that, at the other end of this emergency, sports have sustained. We know that mental health issues result from physical inactivity. At the other end of this, we will need our sports teams to lift morale and community spirits. They play a vital role there. Over the last couple of weeks, on my instruction, my Department's officials have been engaging with the Sports Forum and with sporting codes across the North, looking at what the issues are. I have set out my intention to launch and roll out a sport relief fund, which is about trying to work with grassroots sporting organisations in order to give them financial assistance in the time ahead. We are finalising the criteria for that funding through engagement with the sporting codes and the Sports Forum. We hope to announce that fund soon.

I have also engaged with the Minister for the Economy on the rates issue. I wrote to her just recently, and I know that she is looking at this in the wider context of business support and rates to see what we can do to ensure that sports clubs can be included in the relief that is being laid out. There is an Executive meeting tomorrow. I am not sure whether this issue is yet on the table, but those conversations are ongoing with sporting teams. I will continue to engage with them, and my officials are engaging with them weekly to ensure that they sustain beyond this emergency.

Mr McNulty: I thank the Minister for her statement. Like her, I applaud the work of her Department, in unison with so many sporting organisations and community and voluntary groups that are working together in a phenomenal surge of goodwill and volunteerism that will, hopefully, help us all to defeat COVID-19.

The Minister may or may not be aware of the financial quandary that many cross-border workers now find themselves in as an outcome of the COVID-19 pandemic. Many cross-border workers — these are people who have helped to rebuild the economy on this island, who pay their taxes, who have mortgages and who have families to feed and bills to pay — are not eligible for universal credit because of their specific circumstances. Will the Minister back the call from Colum Eastwood, the MP for Foyle, for an urgent meeting of the North/South Ministerial Council to agree a bespoke financial support package for cross-border workers who fall between the cracks and have no support from the existing COVID-19 support schemes?

Ms Hargey: The Executive, through the First Minister and deputy First Minister, the Finance Minister and, of course, the Minister for the Economy, have already been in conversations on this issue. They have been engaging with the Irish Government to see whether a resolution can be found. We have seen the strife that many living in border communities are facing, and there has been commentary even in the South. Hopefully, a resolution can be found as soon as possible. I know that it is high on the agenda of Ministers around the Executive table and has been discussed with the Tánaiste and others in the Southern Government.

Part of the next phase of community support that I am rolling out is the announcement of an initial £1·5 million for councils. However, conscious of rural poverty and poverty in and around our border communities, I want to look at a second tranche that will start to look at rural poverty. I will work with Edwin Poots and DAERA to see whether there are things that we can do jointly. As part of the COVID-19 community support fund, it will look at areas such as access to food, those who are on a low income and struggling, and connectivity. Cross-border workers are high on the Executive's agenda. There is no resolution yet, but there have been direct engagements with the Tánaiste and with the Southern Government more broadly.

Mr Butler: I thank the Minister for her statement and also for her kind words for the community effort in Lisburn and Lagan Valley, which were picked up by the Member for Lagan Valley, Mr Givan. Paul mentioned Ballymacash, but there is also Laganview Enterprise, which you are aware of and have met, and which is making a tremendous effort, and Via Wings; you may take up an invitation to go and visit it as well to see the work that it is doing. I thank the Minister for the efforts that she has made. As my colleague Kellie Armstrong said, you have hit the rails running as a new MLA.

I also want to thank your staff for the effort that they are putting in. Many of us will have been in contact with those involved in all facets of your Department, and they have been only too ready to offer help. My question is on that very point. Obviously, there will be some sickness and a lot of people trying desperately hard to meet the needs of the most vulnerable in our society. Are you confident that you have in place a support mechanism for your workers who, like all those on the front line, are carrying a heavy burden, and that those support services will not just be there in this hour of need but will be carried through to the time when we revisit normal business here?

Ms Hargey: Thanks very much. It is a good question. Those workers are nearly forgotten sometimes, because they are not always seen face to face. However, they are essential front-line workers who cannot be forgotten. They are delivering essential services, sometimes to the most vulnerable in our communities.

As I said, I went around some of the offices. People are frightened; they are afraid. There were distancing issues at the start because of the nature of these offices where people work quite closely together. After engagements with the trade unions in the last couple of weeks — I recently met NIPSA on-site in one of the offices — to ensure that we are protecting workers, we have put in social-distancing measures and are making sure that work stations are cleaned regularly throughout the day, because those were some of the concerns of people who were coming in to do their job.

A good part of the workforce are working from home and, obviously, we have had to increase the IT supply to allow them to do that. We are also working staff on a rota to ensure that there are not too many of them on the floor. That obviously puts a pressure on the system, which is just something that we are continually having to manage. That is why I engage regularly with the managers in our social security system. It is such a vital service, particularly given that almost 40,000 people need it now because they have lost their jobs.

We will continue to work. Staff who we have met are nervous now, and we are concerned about the mental health and stress impacts that this will have afterwards. We will continue to engage with the trade unions around what we can do and what other support we can provide.

More broadly, an issue that I was going to look at anyway, even before this emergency, is agency staff. There is a large population of agency staff within DFC; that is the nature of the DWP's year-on-year contracts. However, our agency staff are at the fore at this time and really showing their dedication to come to work every day. I want to look at that in the longer term because I feel that, if you have been working there for a few years, you are not agency and should be a permanent member of staff with the same terms and conditions as everybody else. That is one of the areas that I want to look at.

There is the ongoing pay negotiation, which needs to be addressed urgently. The unions are actively engaging with the Department of Finance on the issue of pay. We are paying for the car parking of those who are working in our benefits offices, mainly in Belfast but in other areas as well including Derry. We are also introducing lunches into the system twice a week, and we will look at what else we can do beyond that. In conversations that I had with the unions even before this healthcare crisis, I recognised that many staff within my Department are low-paid staff. However, it is being shown in this crisis that they are delivering fundamental services that society needs. That needs to be recognised in the time ahead, and I want to play my part in making sure that we deliver on that.

Mr O'Dowd: This follows on from Mr Butler's question, and your response to that somewhat answers the question. You mentioned that 40,000 workers have lost their jobs and are now turning to social security benefits such as universal credit to survive the crisis and the impact it has on them and their family. Have you enough staff available to administer universal credit? Are they able to process the huge amount of work that is coming their way? I also want to add my thanks — indeed, our thanks — to the staff and to you, Minister.

Also, I want to thank the Clerk/Chief Executive and the staff of the Assembly for facilitating the last couple of meetings. It takes a huge background operation to keep this place going, and we appreciate their work as well, thank you.

Ms Hargey: The main priority for my Department is to make sure that benefits are maintained and are paid to those who need them, particularly at this time. For that reason, we have stopped certain parts of the Department from working and have redirected those staff to front-line social security benefits to make sure that payments are being made and applications are being processed. I know that some staff are working from home because they are shielding or are unable to come to work because of a family member, and they have the IT equipment and are doing a lot of that work from home.

We have just re-prioritised the work that we are doing to ensure that benefits are the key priority in the time ahead. We have also streamlined the forms, have stopped face-to-face assessments and have closed the benefits offices to the public, and that has really helped. We have also streamlined the forms for JSA and discretionary support to ensure that we cut down the bureaucracy and get the processing times down quickly.

Things are working at the moment and we are, obviously, keeping them under constant review. Within the Executive emergencies group ensuring that social security payments continue to flow and that staff are there is a key priority. It is only down to the dedication of our staff — I cannot emphasise that enough — and particularly agency staff, who are going above and beyond every day to process payments and take thousands of calls. They are doing tenfold what they would do in a normal day in the Department, and it would not be possible without them.

Mr Lyttle: I briefly add my condemnation to the alleged defiance of social distancing guidelines that appears to have taken place in County Tyrone, and I thank the vast majority of people in Northern Ireland who are staying at home to save lives during this public health emergency.

I thank the Minister for her statement and welcome the investment that has been made in weekly food deliveries to vulnerable people in our community, and I commend the community and voluntary sector's response in helping with that scheme. What information is being used to ensure that these essential food deliveries reach the people who need them most?

Ms Hargey: As I said, there is no definitive list yet, and it is work in progress. We are working with the health trusts in terms of the databases they have, and the health and social care boards on categories of vulnerable people. We also know who the 40,000 people who are shielding are, and we have made direct contact with them.

Primarily, the food boxes are for those who do not have existing support networks and do not have friends or family who can get them the essentials. This is to fill that gap. However, I recognise that there is poverty out there.

There is inequality, and that has an impact on finances and people's ability to buy essential food, particularly at this time. Therefore, we want to make sure that food boxes reach those people too. That is why, over the coming weeks, as we start to roll this out, we need all that information from local councils.

We will continue to work with the health and social care trusts and with the Department of Health more broadly. We are also engaging through GPs, through the letters that have been issued and through people on the ground. People know their communities. I live in a community and have been an activist my whole life. I was out last night in my local area, where the local residents' group delivered more than 200 food parcels — not those boxes. They easily identified the need in the community. They put out calls on social media and on leaflets to identify anyone else who needs help, because people will fall through the gaps. You have the difficulty that people will not self-refer, so how do we get others in the community to refer somebody, if they feel there is a vulnerability there? We have to be as flexible as we can to make sure that we reach as many people as we can. It is about society as a whole playing its part in trying to identify those people and for that list to be centralised and disseminated out amongst the 11 councils. The role of the local authorities has been brilliant. They are under immense pressure in terms of lost income, trying to redirect services and keeping their staff safe, but they have gone above and beyond to work with the Department and connect to local communities to ensure that we reach those people.

It is a work in progress. If you have other ideas, we are more than interested to listen to you, but it will develop over the coming weeks. The more people we can include, the better.

Mr McCrossan: "Thank you" to the Minister for her statement. I know the House and the Minister will join me in offering the prayers and condolences of the House to the families of the 82 people who have sadly died as a result of this dreadful virus and sending our thoughts and prayers to the many families who are impacted directly, with a loved one battling this awful disease. I join the Minister in commending the tremendous work of the front-line key workers in her Department. They have certainly stepped up way beyond the call of duty and have delivered on a huge scale, given the demand on the Department. Minister, you are to be commended on your leadership on that.

It is important, in these times, to recognise that, out of all the awfulness of the virus, so much good has come out in our community. I witness at first hand, throughout West Tyrone, the huge levels of kindness, generosity, sincerity and the selflessness of our communities, particularly when you consider businesses that have opened their doors, like the Red Pepper in Castlederg, the Hidden Pearl, the Strabane Community Project, Mark McDermott in Strabane. Those four examples, in a day, deliver in excess of 1,500 meals to a wider area. That is an unbelievable and generous contribution to vulnerable people in our society, and I want to put firmly on record the thanks of the House to everybody across Northern Ireland who is stepping up and doing a huge amount to support people.

Minister, my question is focused on discretionary support. I know you have touched on it quite a bit today, and I thank you for the efforts around that and the staff. I have no doubt they are inundated with queries. I have had some difficulty, in that applications that were submitted two weeks ago have still not been processed or answered. There may be an obvious reason for that, in that the demand is so significant. I wonder what is being put in place to make that a more efficient system. Has there been a cap on the amount that a person can claim, or is it unique to circumstances? Finally, how often can someone apply? If they were to receive, say, £100 this week, can they apply again in a fortnight?

Thank you again Minister for your work around this. It is appreciated.

Ms Hargey: Thanks very much. Like the other benefits, there has been a huge uptake in demand for discretionary support, and it had been under pressure. We have realigned our services and staff to support that. The difficulty with discretionary support is that it is a manual system and you have to be in work, so those working from home are not able to do it. That added a pressure a number of weeks ago, and we are working through that and rectifying it. I have changed the regulations and brought in an additional measure under discretionary support that, if you are impacted by COVID-19 and have to self-isolate, you can access discretionary support as well. It will be done through a grant and will not be a loan. You can get that grant more than once. Obviously, that is about people who are in crisis, and we will respond to that crisis in the here and now. If it is access to food or paying essential bills like rent, electric or heat, they can get access to those discretionary support payments.

I am also changing the regulations to lift the income threshold. At the minute, it is just over £18,000. The benefit cap is at £20,000, so I want to lift it above that benefit cap to ensure that more people can be brought in. I hope that that will be tabled in the Chamber just after the Easter recess.

Miss Woods: Minister, I too commend you and your Department for your work and the commitment made to our most vulnerable citizens at this time.

My question is on eligibility criteria and the publication of such to make it easier for people to apply to two funds. First, are you minded to publish the criteria by which your Department awards grants, in order to make it easier for people to make a successful application for the universal credit contingency fund? Secondly, are you able to detail even further the expanded eligibility criteria for people to apply to the discretionary support fund?

Ms Hargey: The changes to the discretionary support fund came through the Assembly a couple of weeks ago. Anyone who has to self-isolate or has symptoms of COVID-19 and has to stay within their home, and who is under financial pressure, can apply for the grant through discretionary support. We have streamlined all the forms to try to make it as easy as possible, because even I get confused trying to navigate the system. All that information is now being put up and streamlined on nidirect.

We are also working on the COVID community helpline number. It is being managed by Advice NI, so you can phone that helpline number or the Advice NI helpline number. Advice NI is working with a lot of the independent advice sector in managing that phone line, and again you can get support there in going through, or trying to navigate your way through, the system. We are looking at a new communication that can be either in a leaflet or online that really sets out the changes that the Department has made. Obviously, there have been a lot of changes, and it is hard to keep up. The Committee raised that at the start of the week. We are working on it at the moment so that it can be streamlined and can go out.

I will have a look at the issue of universal credit. I am not sure, but I would have assumed that the eligibility criteria would be there. I will take that back, and come back to you on it.

Mr Carroll: I thank the Minister for her statement. I have a question in relation to renters in this crisis — all renters, including low-paid workers, the unemployed, students and everyone else. It seems to me that a lot has been done for landlords, but not enough for tenants. The bigger question, really, is how we can have a situation where low-paid or vulnerable people are able to afford to keep a roof over their heads. I am concerned that not enough is being done to support them. For example, landlords can avail themselves of a three-month mortgage holiday, yet there are no provisions in place to provide a suspension of rents as exists in other European countries. In this context, landlords might actually be able to make money out of the situation, because they can avail themselves of mortgage holidays while extracting rents throughout this crisis. To me, that seems bizarre. Thousands are, obviously, losing their jobs, others are having a reduction in wages and many are struggling. My view is that there should be an immediate rent suspension for those impacted by this, and I believe that the Minister, the Executive and the Westminster Government should be doing everything in their power to achieve this.

If I may, Mr Speaker, as we are under time, can I quickly ask the Minister about the benefit cap? I believe that the benefit cap should be scrapped immediately. It was always wrong and unjust, and it should have no place in this crisis. Many workers are obviously doing more hours to ensure that our shelves are stocked. Does the Minister agree that the benefit cap should be replaced, and does she have any plans to scrap it?

Ms Hargey: Thanks for your kind comments, Gerry.

I suppose the first thing is around renters. I live in a working-class community in south Belfast. I know the impact that this is having on working people and on working-class communities. Obviously, a variety of changes have been introduced within my Department in trying to protect the most vulnerable within the private-rented sector, but also those in the social sector who are paying rents. We have an agreement with housing associations and the Housing Executive that no one will be evicted from their home because they cannot keep up payments. The important thing when you are looking at the payment increase is that over 70% of the income of the Housing Executive comes through housing benefit. It is important that those payments continue, through the social security system, into the Housing Executive. You will know yourself — you have raised it on previous occasions — that the Housing Executive is under critical pressure. We have to make sure that we can maintain our stock at the end of this, particularly for those who need it the most: those working-class communities that are vulnerable. We need those housing benefit payments to continue to flow throughout this crisis, and beyond this crisis as well. I have suspended the rental increase, which is at a cost of £4.5 million for the next six months. I have put that on hold and, obviously, that is money that cannot be used to upgrade the stock. Those are the difficulties and challenges that we face.

With regard to other areas that we have looked at, I do not have the power to instruct that rent is not paid within the private rented sector. Some of that legislation rests with Westminster and I do not have the power around that. I am introducing legislation here. It will come to the House on 21 April, I think, and that is about extending the notice to quit to ensure that no one, as a result of COVID-19, is going to be evicted from their home.

I am also issuing clear guidance to landlords this week and I reported this to the Committee at the start of this week. It says clearly to landlords that, if they get the three-month holiday, it should be passed on to the tenant. I will also be issuing clear guidance around the process that landlords must follow in engaging with their tenants and giving them a reasonable time with regard to their financial situation so that if anything goes to court, the court can clearly see the Department's guidance and take that into account. We are also engaging with the Court Service around that.

With regard to housing payments, the local housing allowance has been increased as a result of changes; 100% of that payment is now going to be paid and that is going to be covered over the 13 weeks. I am looking to see if I can extend the discretionary support housing payments and to change or increase the criteria to allow more people to come into that. With regard to the discretionary support allowance, through the normal social security system, if people are in crisis because they have to self-isolate, they can apply for that grant under the COVID-19 discretionary support for housing.

We are looking at more. I know that there are issues in the private rented sector and I am trying to address those. We can only take it step by step, so we are looking at it. I know that students have been adversely impacted and we are looking to see what further changes we can make. If I can bring changes, I will do it. There is no problem there, whatsoever. If people have suggestions and it is within my remit or power, I will definitely do it.

We are engaging with the National Union of Students, which tweeted me today. We are proactively trying to look at everything that we can. We are moving, firstly, on the eviction stuff because that needs a legislative change, and it has to have Royal Assent, which will be heard on the Floor of the House on 21 April. We will continue to move on other areas of housing.

I have touched on the issue of homelessness. We have done a lot of work on that issue. I am glad to report that, in the past two weeks in Belfast and Derry, because of the amazing work by those at the coalface in the Housing Executive, we have not had any rough sleepers — those who have had no choice but to be on the streets. Again, it has been really good how people have worked together. I have to commend those working at a community level and within that sector for the amazing work that they have been doing. We are committed to extending that over the coming period.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): As noted by Mr Carroll, we have around four and a half minutes left. In Tuesday's meeting of this Committee, I said that if there was time left over I would allow members who had any burning questions that they wanted to ask, to rise in their place.

Mr Givan: One of the issues that was brought to my attention is on the pressure being put on local government and councils across Northern Ireland. They have triggered their emergency planning mechanisms but they are also facing significant financial implications as a result of that. What support is the Minister's Department able to provide?

Ms Hargey: We have released emergency financial assistance. I wrote to local councils at the start of this week. If they are responding to a crisis — normally this would have happened in flooding incidents — my Department will cover the emergency costs associated with that, if that is increased staff costs. We have initiated that as part of this public health emergency. We have had the community support fund filtered via the local councils and we are working with them on the food boxes. We know, as I touched on earlier, that there is a loss of income for councils. That is a huge loss of income and we are in the middle of compiling what that is going to look like in the time ahead. We plan to make a bid to the Minister of Finance. At this point, obviously, the initial bids that are coming through Finance are to deal with the emergency in the here and now, in order to try to save lives, protect the most vulnerable and ensure food supplies. I am acutely aware of the impact that it is having on councils. We are making those financial bids for the loss of income, because that income is used for essential services in council areas. We are working with local government and SOLACE on that. That will be presented to the Minister of Finance and, ultimately, to the Executive.

Mr O'Dowd: During the past 50-odd minutes or so, the Minister has outlined a range of initiatives and interventions that her Department has made in a very short period to protect people at this time. She said in one of her answers that her Department was collating information on a number of those issues. Can she provide the Assembly with a figure for the financial contribution that her Department has made to protect the most vulnerable people in society?

Ms Hargey: I do not have that figure. However, I can get the figure for those changes, which will include the bid that we got yesterday for homelessness services and others. It goes into the tens of millions of pounds. If benefit support is included, it probably goes way above that. I can get that information and share it with members.

Ms Armstrong: I did not get the chance to ask about this issue earlier, Minister. I am sure that you have seen on Facebook and different social media that a number of volunteers have come together to provide food banks. You talked about it earlier. They are not in any organisations: they are simply good-willed people who have come together to meet the needs of their communities. When we take learning from this situation, can we consider how we can help those people, who are using their own cars and fuel to go out and deliver prescriptions and groceries to people's homes, and who, out of the kindness of their hearts, have come together in this crisis and have really shown how wonderful the Northern Ireland community is?

Ms Hargey: I agree, 100%. The amount of goodwill has been amazing. As you say, it is not always in structured groups, albeit I would encourage volunteers to get involved in activism in that way. It has been amazing. Whether it is a neighbour or somebody in the street looking after or identifying somebody else, or just having a chat or a phone call, it has been absolutely amazing. I suppose that the important thing is that, if people are out and using petrol, or whatever, they should go and speak to the local council, because part of the community support fund, which is going through local councils, covers those types of issue to try to support grassroots work during the crisis to ensure that we respond to those needs. Nobody should be out of pocket, especially if they are volunteering. I encourage them to speak to the councils.

As I said, we will look at that fund. I have agreed that I will review it in the next six weeks in order to ensure that it is fit for purpose and to see whether we need to look at additional resource for it in the time ahead. They may not want to, but I would ask them to speak to their councils. The local council could pick that up through the community support fund.

Yes, there could be a day of recognition for a lot of people across society. The bigger issue for me is whether society will change in the time ahead. Will the economic system change and protect the most vulnerable? Will it look at the front-line workers who are, often, the lowest paid? If that is what changes after this emergency, maybe some good will come out of it.

Mr Buckley: I want to go back to what my colleague Kellie Armstrong said. We have seen some of the best in our community groups. In my constituency, John Lawson of the Head O'The Road bar and restaurant has provided meals to isolated people in rural communities. I think of Phyllis Abraham of the Edenderry community group. Those people are doing fantastic work. Is there any way in which we could help organisations to target people who, potentially, may be missed in the epidemic, particularly people in rural communities who do not go and seek help, but are now living in isolation? In many cases, they are very elderly people who are on their own.

Ms Hargey: I agree, 100%. You are right. Many chefs and people who are out of work and not getting any income are actually out volunteering now. They have turned their kitchens into community hubs and are making sure that they provide hot meals. We are working with the Now Project and chefs across the North.

We are doing the free school meals, the food boxes, the money that is going out through councils, and organisations are doing that, as well, through food parcels. As not every older person cooks and gets one hot meal a day, we are trying to see how we can work with local restaurants, local chefs and even social enterprises that do food preparation to see if we can provide a hot meal or a ready-made meal service. Again, tell them to contact the Department and we can link them in.

The other thing is the COVID community fund, that I announced yesterday, and it is going through the councils. That money can be used in the local council areas and the kind of priorities for that are around food, and making sure people have access to food. If that is linking in and working in partnership with local restaurants, that is good, if it is meeting the need.

It is also around financial security. Again, I know from Belfast, because that is where I live, they are buying gas cards and they are doing top-ups to make sure that people have the essentials, so some of the money is being used for that. The other issue then is connectivity, particularly for rural areas and border communities as well.

As I said, I am looking to the community support fund to ensure that funding is mainly disseminated on the basis of objective need and population size, so the likes of Belfast and others will get an increased amount. I recognise there is a gap in rural areas, around rural poverty, and particularly in areas with border communities as well. I am looking to see if I can add an additional fund to support those local areas, and I will announce that in the short-term, as well.

Miss Woods: Minister, with the food box scheme, there have been some significant concerns raised with me, through community organisations, around who makes the decision on who can get a box. There is some confusion with the councils and, as you said earlier on, there is no definitive list yet, but who would make that decision? Would it be the trust or the GP? Or is it through referral or through the council? If there is not any guidance, can that be issued?

Ms Hargey: I will just go back to local councils to ensure that that is filtering out. The guidance is for anyone who is shielding for the next three months. They have a letter from their GP and they have to shield. It is not for all of those people because there are 40,000 of them, but it is identifying those people who do not have a support network. People who, if they are in their home for the next three months, do not have somebody who can get them food. They maybe do not have the financial wherewithal to get the food. The boxes should be targeted at those people, but we want to go beyond that. In England, that is how the scheme is working, but I recognise that there is food poverty out there anyway, let alone in the midst of this public health emergency.

I want to get those boxes to as many people as we can. Therefore, the scheme has to be flexible. That is why I want to work with local councils and local community organisations, because they are better placed than I am. When you look at a health trust's list and you look at the vulnerable people that may be on that list, there are a lot of people out in the community who are not on that list, but they are vulnerable. Therefore, we need to use as many mechanisms as we can to do that. We are on 10,400 parcels at the minute, and we can grow that if we need to grow that further. I am sure that the Executive will be supportive. — we have £10 million in the budget at the moment — if there was a need to look at more, we could do that. I will make sure that the guidance is reissued to local councils, but it is important that we do not limit it. If somebody is in need of a food box and they are saying that they have no other support, or do not have the financial means to get that food, they should receive a box.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): Agenda item 5 is the time, date and place of the next meeting. We have received confirmation from the Health Minister that he wishes to make a statement to the Ad Hoc Committee at a meeting to be held on the afternoon of Wednesday 15 April. We have also received confirmation from the Infrastructure Minister that she wishes to make a statement to the Ad Hoc Committee on the afternoon of Thursday 16 April. Formal notification to Members will be issued this afternoon by the Speaker's Office. That concludes this meeting of the Ad Hoc Committee. The meeting is adjourned.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): Item 1 of today's business is the minutes of the previous meeting, held on 9 April. Members are asked to note the minutes, which the Deputy Chair has agreed. Members should also note that the Minutes of Evidence from that meeting have been published as an Official Report, which is available on the Committee's web page.

Item 2 is a statement from the Minister of Health. The Speaker received notification on 9 April that the Minister wished to make a statement to the Ad Hoc Committee at today's meeting. A copy of the statement that the Minister intends to make is included in members' packs at page 8.

I welcome the Minister of Health to this meeting of the Committee and invite him to make his statement, which should be heard by members without interruption. Following the statement, there will be an opportunity for members to ask questions.

Mr Swann (The Minister of Health): Good afternoon. I welcome the opportunity to update members with the latest developments regarding COVID-19.

As I have said in numerous statements to the Assembly, to the Committee and to the public, we are living in unprecedented times. People are understandably anxious and they are worried about the safety of their families, especially those who are older or who have underlying conditions. People are unnerved by the empty streets and town centres. Of course, after this morning's news that our economy is currently experiencing its fastest and deepest decline in the history of Northern Ireland, people are understandably concerned about what the future will hold for them.

We are living through scenes that only three months ago would have been wholly unimaginable. For future generations, 2020 will be remembered as the year of the coronavirus. This is a serious virus, and we have seen in too many countries across the world the frightening pace at which it has spread. Nevertheless, we must remember that for the vast majority of people who contract it, the virus will be mild and they will make a full recovery.

However, as we all know, not everyone who gets it survives. Sadly, there are homes right across the country that are grieving. No matter how long this lasts, we must never ever forget that behind every statistic is a human being: a mother, a father, a brother, a sister, a friend, a person who will have been loved and is now missed.

In all the briefings that I get and all the calls and meetings that I take part in, nothing drives home the tragedy of this virus more than seeing the pictures of funerals with only a very small number of permitted mourners. Wakes and large funerals are understandably not able to happen right now, but that is not how we usually say goodbye to our loved ones.

I want to take this opportunity to once again put on record my sincere thanks to all those who continue to deliver our vital services: our front-line health and social care staff, our police officers, those who are looking after the children of our key workers and those who are ensuring that there are supplies on the shelves. There are too many to mention, but it is important that we recognise here today the significant time, energy and commitment that is being invested by so many to keep us safe in our homes.

I will now take some time to explain the approach that I have adopted to deal with this emergency and to outline some of the significant actions that have been key to my response.

There has been much focus and discussion on the issues of personal protective equipment (PPE), testing and the reporting of COVID-19-related deaths in recent days and weeks. I assure you that I and my team across the health and social care (HSC) sector are acutely aware of the challenges arising from these issues, and we are working tirelessly to ensure that every conceivable effort is being made to help people keep safe, stay at home and protect our NHS.

Key to informing the decisions that I and Executive colleagues will need to make in the weeks and months ahead is the work being undertaken by the COVID-19 modelling group. The projections provided by this group are informing the work that needs to be progressed to ensure there is sufficient PPE available; that testing is scaled up; that our hospitals, GP services and community pharmacies have capacity to deal with the demands they are facing; and that key services within the community are prepared to deal with the challenges they are facing today — and every day — until this disease has been defeated.

To meet the additional need for staff, once again, our health workers have stepped up. Many hundreds have gone through additional training, and, as of 6.30 am today, the HSC workforce appeal, which was launched only 3 weeks ago, has had 18,354 expressions of interest, which have been converted into 10,777 formal applications to date — a conversion rate of nearly 59%, which is double what could normally be expected in a recruitment campaign. In fewer than three weeks, almost 300 people have been offered or appointed to posts, with over 3,000 now job-ready or about to be job-ready, subject to completion of final checks.

Clinical applications, of which there have been 2,784, have been prioritised for processing. This includes former doctors and nurses who are returning to service, many from retirement. I pay tribute to their dedication and thank all applicants for rallying to this cause.

The team is now turning its attention to processing the 7,993 non-clinical/support worker applications. This support will be crucial in our response to COVID-19. Online applications have been paused while the team works through these applications. The campaign is sophisticated and social media-driven, so further expressions of interest can be sought quickly if there are further areas of high demand.

It is important to note that we are putting processes in place to support the independent sector, in addition to the HSC, from applicants to the workforce appeal.

The response from our pharmacists and primary-care colleagues has been phenomenal. Despite all pressures, our chemists remain open and continue to provide their essential service.

Similarly, as members will know, we have opened a series of COVID-19 centres — 10 in total — which have seen more than 1,300 patients already. They have moved mountains and, I have no doubt, will continue to do so.

Importantly, along with a number of additional supports across the community and government, the HSC is also putting in place mental and emotional support for their workers at this very difficult, challenging and often emotional time.

Modelling colleagues have indicated that the peak here may now, potentially, be less severe than we had feared, in this first wave at least. I am sure you will all agree when I say that it was reassuring, but not surprising, to see the positive and responsible approach adopted by the vast majority of people in Northern Ireland who adhered to social distancing over the Easter holidays. We have risen to the challenge and, I have no doubt, will continue to do so.

We cannot be certain of how this first wave will play out. No modelling can predict the future, but we can acknowledge that the unprecedented social distancing restrictions on all our lives are starting to make an impact. However, there can be no grounds whatsoever for complacency.

The focus now, as much as ever, has to be on staying at home, saving lives and protecting our health service. Difficult times lie ahead, I have no doubt. However, I am confident that we are ready to face them together. Indeed, I and my Executive colleagues are working closely to ensure that we are working as one in our plans and in our actions.

In partnership with the Department for the Economy, Northern Ireland's further and higher education institutions are now making an invaluable contribution to the fight against COVID-19 by creating personal protective equipment and joining the research for a vaccine.

In partnership with the Department of Education, we have developed a package of measures to provide emergency childcare for key workers.

In partnership with the Department for Infrastructure, a number of MOT centres have become available to test people rather than vehicles. In partnership with the Department for Communities, the response to this emergency has been focussed on the local community, by the local community.

Indeed, across every Department, partnership working has resulted in innovations and progress that we could not have imagined possible just a matter of weeks ago.

I turn now to the issue of PPE. I have been clear about the challenges with PPE. COVID-19 is a worldwide issue and protecting staff and patients impacts as much elsewhere as it does locally. The pressures on supplies are significant globally, and, as I have said on a number of occasions, that there is not a country in the world that truly knows the path that this virus is going to take. Would I like to have more PPE? Of course I would. That is why I am committed to ensuring that we rigorously pursue every viable supply source, both locally and elsewhere.

The four nations PPE plan was published last Friday, and we are working closely with England, Scotland and Wales on all aspects of that plan. We have already supported each other by way of mutual aid and that will continue in the weeks and months ahead.

I know there have been some concerns expressed at the fact that, in recent weeks, I had agreed to mutually aid England. I can confirm that I did send 250,000 gowns to England over the last two weeks — those supplies will be immediately reimbursed once their stocks arrive. Equally, when I recently reported a shortage of eye protection equipment, England and Wales acted quickly to help us. We must remember all of this is in the context that the UK Government have already sent Northern Ireland over 5·6 million items of PPE. So, I make no apologies for sharing our stock, because when we need some, the other UK nations are not reluctant to share theirs. That demonstrates the value and success of the four nations approach we have been taking.

None of us can work on our own in our battle against COVID. Equally, we continue to explore new supply lines with the Republic of Ireland. We have significantly increased supplies from local agents. Local industry is to be commended as it continues to show itself to be adaptable, innovative and responsive to changing operational environments.

China is the most significant source of worldwide supplies. The work led by the Department of Finance and the Department of Health to secure PPE is important and at a critical stage. We continue to work to ensure all possible steps are taken to open up a supply chain that meets our needs and supports our four nations approach.

I have already underlined the vital importance of distribution and deployment to all front-line settings and stressed that all staff must know where to turn within their organisations when they have concerns or questions.

I remind colleagues of the scale of this issue. We must continue to support our staff, and indeed the broader community, in helping them understand and make informed decisions about when, and how, PPE should be used. The correct use of this precious resource is as equally important as is confidence in supply chains. However, if we are asking staff to trust the guidance on what PPE they need, then they are understandably relying on us to get the right PPE to them and at the time they need it. That is why, after speaking to the Chief Medical Officer, we have now agreed that there is going to be a thorough examination of the flow of PPE. I have made it clear that it would be inexcusable if delays saw PPE remaining in stores or in trust buildings, waiting for onward allocation whilst staff and care facilities were going without.

I turn now to another key issue that I have been focussed on: the provision of testing and the significant role it has, and must continue to play, in our fight against COVID-19. I would like to reassure you that testing is growing and will continue to do so as rapidly as is possible. As of this morning, the total number of individuals tested for COVID-19 in Northern Ireland stands at 13,672. That figure includes 4,151 healthcare workers. However, it is important to note that, because testing was not specifically targeted at healthcare workers at the outset, that figure may underestimate the true number of healthcare workers tested.

In today's figures, we are reporting an additional 121 confirmed cases and, sadly, a further six deaths. That represents six more families in mourning, and we should keep them in our thoughts at this time. I am also aware that, in recent days, there has been growing commentary asking why, if our testing capacity stands at over 1,000 — I am glad that it does — the number of tests being reported daily is often below that. Whilst a number of issues can have an impact on the daily figures, an important point that I wish to stress to members and to members of the media is that it often takes more than one test to confirm a positive or negative diagnosis. Of the 577 individuals that are being reported today, a number will have been tested more than once, so we will have carried out many more than 577 tests. The difference in tests and testing capacity is not what it may first appear.

I am also committed to further scaling up our daily capacity through existing health and social care laboratory space and through external partners at local and national level. Just yesterday, I visited DAERA's Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute (AFBI) with my Executive colleague Minister Poots to talk with officials there about the work that they will now undertake as part of a consortium in Queen's University Belfast and Ulster University to assist the health service in testing up to 1,000 samples a day from suspected COVID-19 cases. You will be aware that testing is now also being carried out at a number of DVLA sites to support local trust capacity and through the national initiative at the SSE Arena testing site, and there will soon be testing at a second testing centre in Londonderry, which is due imminently. Further sites are at an advanced stage of development. In addition, the expert working group has been established to lead on the expansion of testing across all our laboratory services in health and social care facilities and to consider options for the utilisation of other testing facilities, including those in the commercial sector. In the testing strategy, which has been shared with the Executive and the Health Committee, I have made it clear that the overall testing policy will be adjusted over time as testing capacity increases and priority groups for testing are expanded. Similarly, the strategy also includes a pledge that testing will soon move towards surveillance of COVID-19 in the population to inform the planning of services, including surge capacity, and to estimate population immunity.

I know that members will also be keen to hear an update on COVID-19-related deaths in care homes. I would like to take a few minutes to reassure members that care home providers and staff in Northern Ireland are working extremely hard to keep some of the most vulnerable people safe, and I recognise their commitment and dedication here today. I am committed to providing all the support that they need to continue this vital work, and, as such, the Public Health Agency is working very closely with local care homes, providing expert support and detailed advice in the event of infections and outbreaks occurring. Where care home residents and/or staff are symptomatic, they are being tested, and testing is being increased. There has been much focus in recent days on deaths that occur outside hospital settings. Let me again be clear about this: every single one of our residents in nursing and care homes matters just as much as every other citizen in our society.

The process for registering deaths in the community takes a number of days and involves a doctor completing a death certificate and a number of additional steps being undertaken by the General Register Office and the Northern Ireland Statistical and Research Agency (NISRA). NISRA publishes a weekly bulletin on all deaths registered in Northern Ireland, and, from this week, the bulletin will provide information on all COVID-19-related deaths registered in Northern Ireland across hospital and community settings. However, for clarity on this issue, I will highlight that many of the deaths of our care home residents are already being captured in the figures being published, as many of the patients are first being admitted to hospitals.

Members, I am conscious that my statement is lengthy and that you will be keen to ask a number of questions on a range of issues, but I would like to take another few moments to update you on some of our key actions that are ongoing to support the emergency response across the HSC.

A key component in the emergency response has been work to maximise HSC's capacity to treat COVID-19 patients. Each trust has also taken steps to significantly increase critical care capacity at local hospitals. We now have 143 adult ICU beds, with a further 12 paediatric beds. Today, there are 49 COVID patients in ICU, with a further 38 non-COVID patients. Thankfully, that means that, as it stands, and before even more beds come online for any further increase in critical care admissions, we have 56 spare ICU beds. We also have 197 ventilators, but, as was demonstrated with the Prime Minister's recent ICU experience, not all ICU patients require ventilation. We also have 3,820 geriatric and acute beds. At present, there are 603 COVID-related inpatients, including confirmed and suspected cases. There are a further 1,345 non-COVID patients in hospitals across Northern Ireland, meaning that, as it stands, we have almost 1,900 empty beds. If our modelling is accurate, that should be more than sufficient capacity to meet the surge.

In the event of an extreme surge, Northern Ireland's first Nightingale hospital has now been established at Belfast City Hospital. The unit will initially treat a mixture of patients who are critically ill and those who require admission to hospital with less acute symptoms. However, if the surge is more severe than expected, this new regional unit will have the capacity to treat up to 230 ventilated patients from across Northern Ireland. In this scenario, if local ICU services come under severe pressure, either due to the weight of demand or due to staff absence, they may need to be folded into the Nightingale hospital in a carefully planned and phased process, while ensuring that local services are still equipped to safely treat a small number of critically ill patients. However, I stress that much of the day-to-day, non-COVID business of the health service continues. People are still having strokes and heart attacks. That is why I urge anyone who suspects that they need to talk to a doctor or present to a hospital to do so. While having empty beds is positive, equally I do not want to see people who need to be in hospital not coming forward.

In recent days, I have also approved two decisions to activate military aid to civil authority (MACA). This was something that I announced almost a fortnight ago that I was minded to do. The first decision relates to the need to redistribute medical equipment between hospitals across Northern Ireland to ensure that all hospitals have the necessary equipment, including ventilators, required to fully enact their surge plans. The second relates to the provision of technical advice and assistance to explore the potential for the development of a new, temporary Nightingale facility. There have been lessons learned in the course of our preparations for this surge, and one is the need for a regional facility that can react quickly to changing patterns of demand in the event of an extreme surge of COVID-19 patients.

In addition, HSC trusts are now accessing hospitals in the independent sector to treat urgent non-COVID patients across a number of elective specialities. It is expected that between 120 and 135 procedures will be carried out per week across a range of red-flag and urgent cases. These will include breast surgery, gynae cancer surgery, plastic surgery, urology procedures, general surgery and ophthalmology, as well as potential for a small number of local anaesthetic procedures to be undertaken. The HSC will fund this activity on the basis of compensating the independent sector on a net cost recovery, not-for-profit basis.

On next steps, I very much wish that I could provide some certainty on what the future holds for us all. Modelling has indicated that we are now in the peak of the first wave of the pandemic, but it is too early to confirm whether the current figures represent the peak. In the absence of a vaccine, we will have to plan for a potential second wave of COVID-19 cases later in the year, once restrictions are eased or lifted and normal life gradually resumes. While there are grounds for hope that the outbreak can be brought under control through maintenance of the current restrictions, coupled with the continuation of the high level of compliance that has been observed by the people in Northern Ireland, the outbreak has not yet reached the point where the restrictions can be relaxed. The progress achieved through good adherence to the restrictions by the people of Northern Ireland will be lost very quickly if there is any adverse change in compliance with the existing social-distancing measures or relaxation of the restrictions that help achieve that compliance. It is clear that, in Northern Ireland, as elsewhere in the world, the restrictions are causing hardship, distress, anxiety and economic harm. They represent a level of interference with family life, work, religious practice, social and cultural activity, leisure, sporting and educational pursuits that is alien to our way of life.

My Department has carried out the required review of The Health Protection (Coronavirus, Restrictions) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2020, drawing on the advice of the Chief Medical Officer and the Chief Scientific Adviser. On the back of that review, the Executive have today agreed that the restrictions and requirements set out in the regulations continue to be necessary if we are to continue to flatten the epidemic curve, manage the capacity of the health service and keep COVID-19 deaths to a minimum. There will be a further review, which will inform how we progress, and the position will be closely monitored. However, now, as before, the message remains the same: please keep safe, stay home and protect our NHS, as it is working to protect us.

I will conclude by appealing to members and to the general public. I have previously expressed concern about noise on social media and elsewhere that is distracting from the work that we are doing and from our life-saving messages to the public. That noise remains a challenge. We seem to have a lot of self-appointed experts commenting minute by minute. We seem to have lots of people on Twitter who have secured doctorates in epidemiology in a few short weeks. They are entitled to their opinions. They are not entitled to their own facts.

I urge everyone to avoid speculation or rushing to judgement. Comparing our statistics and our actions, favourably or otherwise, with those of other countries is premature at best. It is highly likely that this planet will be battling the coronavirus well into 2021 at least. The prospect of a second surge later this year must weigh heavily on all our minds. This is no time for final verdicts to be delivered, favourable or critical, because we are in this for the long haul.

We will also have to face up to difficult conversations down the line about when or whether or not to ease any social-distancing restrictions. That time is not now. At this moment in time, we have to stick firmly with the measures we have, but the time will come for those discussions, and we have to face them together, honestly and openly. There will not be any easy decisions, because simply maintaining the current lockdown indefinitely would have serious repercussions for many people's mental and physical well-being. We will all have to weigh up our options very carefully, working closely with colleagues across these islands, to ensure that we take the right decisions at the right time. Thank you.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): I thank the Minister for his statement. I will now invite members to ask questions. I will allow one hour for this and it is my intention to allow every member in the Chamber to ask a question. Of course, to enable that to happen, I need members' cooperation and for them to be focused and succinct in their questions. Members may ask one question and it must be related to the Minister's statement. As is normal, the Chair of the Health Committee will be allowed some latitude to ask an additional question. I invite Colm Gildernew, the Chair of the Health Committee, to ask a question.

Mr Gildernew (Committee Chair - Committee for Health): I thank the Minister for his statement. I acknowledge and endorse his comments about the hard work of staff. I also pass on my condolences to the additional six families who have been bereaved as a result of this dreadful virus.

In your statement, Minister, you referenced the fact that modelling cannot tell us what the future holds. However, we have been aware for some time from the World Health Organization (WHO) and the European Centre for Disease Prevention and Control (ECDC) that the way in which to tackle and fight the virus is first to test, then to trace the people who have been in contact with those with positive tests and then to isolate those people. In light of that, it is my view that testing should have happened more extensively and longer ago. The Chinese have a saying:

"The best time to plant an oak tree was 20 years ago. The second best time is today."

I ask you today, Minister, what plans are in place and when you will be in a position to roll out testing to our care home sector and to the staff who work in it, in order to protect the most vulnerable people in our society.

You mentioned in your statement that you would:

"rigorously pursue every viable supply source"

for PPE. You will know that I wrote to you some weeks ago about the European procurement scheme. My second question is this: were you made aware of that scheme by the British Government, and would you have taken part in it had you been? Are you now pursuing the potential for us to purchase PPE for our front-line staff via that route?

Mr Swann: I thank the Chair for his questions. I also thank him for the support that he has given to our healthcare workers, because I know that it is gratefully received and appreciated.

Especially with the additional 1,000 tests a day coming online through AFBI, we are now moving to a position in which we can move on to our next phase of testing, and it is exactly as the Chair laid out. It is in the testing plan that we shared with the Committee. How we move once we get out of this phase, how we find out where the virus is in the community and how we make sure that we lock that area down — I do not mean that we lock it down physically but that we lock down the virus in the area — is by testing and tracing. The Chair is well aware that we have always been pushing to get as many tests done in Northern Ireland as we can. The ability to test more people through the partnership working that we see both in our own health labs and in AFBI's labs and through taking part in the national testing programme will enable us to take testing to the next stage, which is something that I want to do as quickly as possible, and the Chair is well aware of that.

With regard to testing in care homes, we put out a notice at the start of the week that any resident of a care home — I say that deliberately, because I have heard people talk about "patients" in care homes: they are "residents" of care homes — who has shown symptoms will be tested. That is the guarantee that we have made, and that is what we will do. It is vital that we support people in care homes so that they get tested as they need it, including the staff. It is also about reassuring the family members of people in care homes that we are here to make sure that their relatives receive the support and protection that they require.

The Chair may remember that we took criticism at the start because we closed down visiting at care homes quite early, which caused emotional stress. I announced yesterday that, at that minute in time, we had 32 care homes with COVID-19-positive patients in them, which relates to one in 12 of the care homes in Northern Ireland, whereas, across the water in England, it is one in six. I am therefore hopeful that that early intervention will have restricted the number of care homes in which we see positive cases, and we are making further support measures available.

The Chair asked specifically about PPE. I have not seen the letter that he has written to me, but I am sure that it will be one of many that are there for me. I was not made aware of the EU-wide procurement scheme, and I can say openly standing here that I was not briefed on it at the time. Would I have availed myself of it? The member knows well that I would avail myself of any scheme or mechanism to get PPE to our front-line workers, and that is why I am thankful that, working through the member's party colleague the Minister of Finance, we have progressed the work that we are doing internationally and locally to source PPE supplies for all our front-line staff. The member will know how the Minister of Finance is working with representatives in China who are working with the British embassy out there to secure a supply line from China. More important is the ability for us to repurpose and reskill our manufacturing processes in Northern Ireland, because that economic support and recovery is vital to those people. I was with the member's colleague, the Minister of Finance, at Huhtamaki in west Belfast, and they will be able to upskill to provide four million face shields per day. That is a vital piece of PPE that our front-line workers need. When we start to produce that locally, it means that we can get that security of supply chain. One of the things that the virus has proven in regard to our supply chains, especially with the likes of PPE, is that that just-in-time, international delivery pipeline is good when there is no threat, but, once we start to see threats, we need to make sure that we can secure our own PPE and support individuals in our home markets.

There was an e-tendering process for additional Northern Ireland suppliers and manufacturers to come online. It was being managed by the Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) in the Department of Finance and, I believe, closed at midday yesterday. I spoke earlier with the Minister of Finance, and he has said that they are working through the options and offers that went into that bidding process so that we can get more Northern Ireland companies up and running and producing PPE.

Mrs Cameron: I thank the Minister for his statement to the House today. Minister, you referred to the good reaction from the public to the stringent measures that have been put in place. That includes, obviously, social distancing. In order to give context to my question, I will read a bit of the guidance given on a question on the government site. The question was:

"Can I exercise more than once a day if I need to due a significant health condition?"

It goes on to say:

"If you have a specific health condition that requires you to leave the home to maintain your health - including if that involves travel beyond your local area - then you can do so. This could, for example, include where individuals with learning disabilities or autism require specific exercise in an open space two or three times each day - ideally in line with care plan agreed with a medical professional."

Can you clarify or produce further guidelines to that piece of government guidance, given the large number of individuals who have a diagnosis of autism in Northern Ireland?

Mr Swann: I thank the Deputy Chairperson for her question. I know that she has been a long-time champion of those with autism, and I know the challenge that the current social distancing and the stay-at-home restrictions put on some individuals who have autism and suffer from being confined in their home. I was part of a ministerial four nations meeting earlier, and it was indicated that there has been a 21% increase in calls to the likes of the Samaritans.

In regard to the specific guidance for those with autism, the key point that she refers to is about a care plan on advice from a medical professional. For those who need to go outside their home more than once a day, it would be with that guidance and support from a medical professional. I am willing to get specific guidance to the member in regard to autism, because I am also conscious that that guidance advises that any physical activity that is undertaken should be limited to close to home. It is not about getting in the car to go to somewhere else for a walk; it is about using the area close to your home for that support and always remaining in line with the other social-distancing regulations to remain two metres apart from anybody else you meet, unless they are a carer or a member of your household.

There are exclusions or specific cases where people can go outside their home more than once a day under medical guidance, but it is not something that I want to see abused. It is something that I want people to do under advice and guidance. I am happy to get more guidance to the member.

Mr McGrath: I thank the Minister for his statement. I commend him for the work that he has done recently in some very difficult circumstances. It is not often that Ministers get praise, but, certainly in my constituency, people recognise the work that he is doing, and I want to pass on that message.

I want to ask the Minister about deaths in care homes. There has been a change in the way that deaths are verified and certified, maybe not so much in the certifying but certainly in the verifying. Is that causing some of the time lag, maybe because it is care home staff rather than doctors and nurses who have to carry out the verification? Is that causing the slight delay in the reason for death being communicated to doctors, who then certify those deaths? That can take several days to come through.

Let us set that against some statistics. Last week, NISRA stated that we had 434 deaths, 55 of which were coronavirus-related. However, if we compare that week with the average over the last five years, there is a 30% increase in the number of deaths, which means that there are probably around 80 deaths that do not fit with the statistics that we have had over the last number of years. Is there an opportunity there to establish that some of those deaths are coronavirus-related but are not being recorded? Is it possible to tighten up as best we can how deaths are verified and certified?

Mr Swann: Again, the member brings to light one of the current issues that we are dealing with. It is always one of the issues that come up when individuals or members of the media start talking about numbers. I want to say to people, "Please remember that these are individuals". Too often in these conversations, when people start to look at graphs and numbers, they forget that there is a loved one behind every one of them.

There was a piece of work being done between the Public Health Agency (PHA) and NISRA, which falls within the Department of Finance, to ensure that we captured every death that was related to coronavirus. The discrepancy between the PHA-reported deaths and those coming through from NISRA is specifically that those being reported by the PHA were people who had been tested and confirmed to have coronavirus in the last 28 days and had passed away in a hospital setting.

The member may recall that, when we started reporting deaths — we are talking about deaths in Northern Ireland — it was because someone had passed away with COVID with an underlying condition. NISRA picks up the death of someone who dies with a condition with COVID as an underlying condition. NISRA picks up the deaths of people who die with COVID but not of COVID. It is about a more rigorous way of recording deaths, rather than someone being missed out. However, we have to be cognisant of the additional deaths that fall outside the normal average, which is something that has been raised in other countries. It is an awful way to talk about death. There have been 143 deaths, and the member has referred to that. NISRA is doing a bigger piece of work to break those deaths down and determine the underlying cause.

As I said in my statement, what concerns me as Health Minister is that there are people who may have had a stroke or a mild heart attack but are staying away from hospitals rather than seeking help and support. The message that I want to put out is that, if you need to go to a GP or a hospital, please do so. Do not be afraid to do so: the NHS is here to help.

Dr Aiken: I thank the Minister for his statement. He does not need expressions of support from us because he has it in spades. I particularly welcome the revelation that over 4,151 healthcare workers have been tested so far. Will he give a commitment that we now have sufficient testing capacity, through both local and national testing channels, so that we can test all the healthcare workers who need to be tested?

Mr Swann: I should have said in response to Colin McGrath's question that, when people talk about praising me, the only reason that the Department is seen to be doing the job that it is doing is the work of those in our National Health Service and in community pharmacy and those who fill shelves in shops and all of that. This is not about any individual or any one Department; this is about society in Northern Ireland actually working.

As regards testing of healthcare workers, I am now confident that, if a healthcare worker needs to be tested, they can be tested, should that be through the testing facility in a trust or through the national testing facility, currently at the SSE and, as I said earlier, one will be opening shortly in Londonderry. Hopefully, in the next couple of weeks, there will be a further one in the south and south-west that will utilise the Randox test. We can get front-line healthcare workers tested.

Regarding an updated figure for staff across health and social care trusts, I suppose that members, the media and the public always look to the numbers. Of the 60,096 people working in the health and social care trusts as of 10 April, which is the most recent data that we have, there are 274 staff out because of COVID-19; that is 0·4% of the workforce. Updated figures will come shortly. The number of staff who are isolating is 1,430, or 2·1%. They may be self-isolating or shielding because of underlying health reasons. So, 2·5% of the entire health and social care staff were off at that point in time, but that can be compared with 3·6%, or 2,500 members of staff, who were off due to other health matters at the same time.

When it comes to testing our health and social care staff, we will make sure that they are tested when they need to be tested.

Ms Bradshaw: Minister, you will recall that, at a Health Committee meeting a few months ago, I raised the issue of guidance for expectant parents, and I asked you, at that time, to put up the guidance from the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists. Since then, that guidance has been updated, and the section relating to front-line employees who are pregnant states that they should seek to move to an admin role or to another part of the health trust. That is not always happening, and even though they may have PPE or have risk assessments carried out, front-line healthcare workers are living with chronic stress right now because they feel that they should not be in work and that that is having an impact on their pregnancy etc and that it could possibly lead to long-term issues in relation to perinatal mental health, for example. What is your assessment of the current support that pregnant front-line workers are getting and what is the long-term plan for supporting them?

Mr Swann: Again, if a member has a case like this, they should bring it to me, because I am prepared to look at it, even if it is on an individual basis. As the member mentioned, the advice and guidance was updated. It should be in the remit of the employer to offer an alternative working place. If they are not doing so, or cannot successfully do so, then I am happy to look at the case and take it forward. If the member wants to, she can talk to me outside, after the briefing, because I do not think it is appropriate to discuss individual cases now rather than the generality. I will check the guidance to the trusts, but I think, as the member mentioned, it was updated to say that they should be moved to an admin position or one that does not require interaction with patients who might pose a risk. Again, if the member has specific cases, I will take them up with her, and she can contact me.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): Members, I need your cooperation. You need to be focussed and succinct if everyone is going to get to ask a question.

Mr Easton: I thank the Minister for his statement. As he knows, I fully support everything he, his staff and the health service have been doing, and I pay tribute to them for the excellent work that they have been doing.

I am concerned about the independent sector, particularly nursing homes. In my constituency, one nursing home has 10 cases of COVID-19, and, having spoken to some of the staff, I understand that there is an issue with getting PPE to the independent sector. Is that an area where we could possibly use the army to get supplies out to ensure that all staff have the correct PPE?

Mr Swann: I thank the member for raising this point. There should not be an issue with PPE. As the member indicated, the private-sector care homes have direct access. They have a point of contact within each trust should they have an issue with PPE. There are also support mechanisms if there are COVID-19-positive patients within care homes. There are support mechanisms within the Public Health Agency. Also, a number of weeks ago we moved some staff from the usual inspection process that the RQIA maintains, to a support mechanism whereby we can use their professional skills, whether they be as social workers or nurses, to advise and support care homes with COVID-19-positive residents.

At this minute time, there should not be an issue in the independent sector with care homes having a problem with PPE. I am also aware that a direct contact app has been set up through which every care home has the ability to contact RQIA directly should they have any concerns about testing, support or PPE. There should not be a case where a care home is still experiencing problems in obtaining PPE. If there is, I am happy to have a conversation with the member outside the Chamber, get the name of the care home and make sure we can get this addressed.

Mr Sheehan: The Minister will be aware that the countries that have been most successful in tackling the virus, for example China, South Korea, Singapore and Japan, have used a combination of measures. They have used widespread testing, rigorous contact tracing, isolation and social distancing. However, on 12 March the British Government took a clear policy decision to cease all contact tracing, and a similar policy decision was taken here, presumably by yourself, Minister. Those decisions not only run counter to international best practice, but they also run counter to advice given by the World Health Organization. Will the Minister tell us when he is going to reverse that decision and put in place a comprehensive programme of testing and rigorous contact tracing?

Mr Swann: Again, in response to the member's question, I will refer him to my statement in which I talked about how we will be increasing our capacity for testing and how it is a drive and target, not just for me, but for the Executive.

With regard to contact tracing, when we get through this surge, move into the next phase and start to see where the virus is present in our community, that is the point when the contact tracing becomes a vital tool. At this minute in time, we are working with colleagues from environmental health and other agencies to make sure they can be trained-up and skilled in what contact tracing actually is, because it is not just something you can throw anybody into.

We want to make sure that, when we go into the next stage involving contact tracing, the people who are doing it are fully skilled and realise its importance. That is why, in the initial cases that we had, we were able to utilise the highly-skilled individuals in the Public Health Agency to do that contact tracing, and that proved vital. If the member recalls, our very first case was an individual who landed in Dublin Airport and then travelled to their residence in Belfast. Through the Public Health Agency working with the Health Service Executive (HSE) in the Republic of Ireland, we were able to trace all the contacts that individual had from when they got off the plane until they arrived home in Belfast.

Therefore, it is a skill that is not just as easily picked up as some may believe, but it is something we are already working on so that, when we come to the next phase of how we tackle COVID-19 within our community, we have people there and ready to do that. So, the member can be assured that, when it comes to the next stage of how we manage and tackle COVID-19 within Northern Ireland, and within the community, we will have the people in place to do that.

Mr Dunne: I thank the Minister, and I again reassure him of our support for his leadership to date on this very important issue. We should, again, pay tribute to all the health professionals for the high level of care that has been given to everyone throughout Northern Ireland. It is a good example and we are very fortunate as we are probably getting the best level of care in the world, and to date there has been great success.

Minister, the level of PPE that has been available to our GPs is a matter that I raised with you some time ago, its having been brought to my attention by a constituent who is a GP, some weeks ago. There is still some concern out there about the provision of PPE for GPs within their practice and also the use of an antibody test. I forwarded information to your office some time ago about a local GP — in fact, a number of GPs — having sourced an antibody test that costs £5 per test. He was keen to get that into the service. Can we have an update on that antibody test and the possibility of its being used? Health professionals believe that it would do a lot to reassure their staff and would go a long way to ensuring that people are available to continue with the good work that they are carrying out.

Mr Swann: I thank the member for his kind words of support for those working in the National Health Service.

There are a number of antibody tests on the market, but none of them is yet verified or certified for use. A national working group is leading the work on that aspect of the pandemic response. That working group includes membership drawn from HSE England, Public Health England, and the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency. All tests — even the one that the member refers to — that may have potential for wider use in population testing are first triaged according to strict MHRA criteria. If a test is successfully triaged, it will be subject to further detailed work, according to the nationally agreed processes and protocols. Staff from the HSC in Northern Ireland are well embedded across the work programme being led by the national working group, and regular updates are provided to each meeting of the expert advisory group on testing. It is envisaged that HSC staff will actively contribute to work progressing through that national programming body.

At this point, no suitable antibody test has been identified for use on a population basis, but I will continue to update Executive and Assembly colleagues as the national and local work progresses in that regard. What would be worse than no test is having a bad test. If the antibody test is not efficient in its reproducibility or repeatability, you could be telling somebody that they are clear when they are not. I would rather make sure that the antibody test is right before we utilise it.

In regards to PPE going to GPs, there was a major piece of work and updated guidance was put out at the end of last week. There was a major push on PPE across the sector, including to GPs. That should have completed this week, as well. I would be surprised if GP practices out there still do not have PPE kit. One of the reasons why we established the COVID centres was so that, if anybody was phoning a GP and being triaged at that point, they were directed, if necessary, to a COVID centre, so they did not have to present specifically to a GP surgery. That work is ongoing, and, again, if the member knows of specific GP surgeries that still have not been supplied or need supplies of PPE, please get in contact.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): Members, we are halfway through the time for questions and we have only got to question 9, so I need your support — succinct and focused.

Dr Archibald: I thank the Minister for his statement. Like others, I offer my condolences to those who have been bereaved and express my gratitude to all our front-line workers.

Minister, you will likely be aware that my party colleague Colm Gildernew and I wrote to you last week about agency workers in the HSC and, in particular, their terms and conditions. Will you consider offering temporary contracts to all agency staff on Agenda for Change terms and conditions to help to provide stability during the crisis?

Mr Swann: I thank the member. Our workforce is being looked at and that is one of the many avenues of upskilling and upping the numbers of our workforce across the HSC sector. That increase includes the volunteers who are coming in to support our HSC, those who are coming back into practice — nurses, doctors — and student nurses. We have brought forward a number of general medical practitioners in their training. So, we are looking at every avenue to make sure that we have the workforce in place.

I have not looked directly at bringing agency workers onto the payroll under Agenda for Change, but we are looking at every avenue to make sure that those who are working in our health service are receiving the best support that we can give them at this time. It is not something that I have ruled out, but it will not be imminent in the next couple of days. I do not want to mislead either the agency workers or the member herself, but we will look again to see where the staff are in our National Health Service and those supporting roles. It is like when you go to war. When any country goes to war, the most valued person that they have is their soldier in the front line. When we go in to tackle coronavirus, the most important people that we have are those health workers. In peacetime, people often forget their army and their volunteers. When we get through coronavirus, we must not forget the sacrifice and the dedication of our National Health Service.

Mr O'Toole: Like others, I associate myself with the comments, first, paying tribute to our amazing healthcare staff and also offering condolences to the families and friends of those who have lost people in Northern Ireland to this awful virus.

In answer to a previous question, the Minister noted that Northern Ireland's first case of COVID-19 arrived here via Dublin airport. With that in mind and given the memorandum of understanding last week and his acknowledgement that all-island contact tracing is an inevitability, particularly in the context of what is now very low passenger transit between the islands of Britain and Ireland, when can we expect to see a joined-up all-island testing-and-tracing strategy brought forward by his Department?

Mr Swann: The member will be aware of the memorandum of understanding, which he referred to. We do meet regularly and talk regularly with our counterparts in the Republic of Ireland. Our Chief Medical Officers are well intertwined, but one of the things that the member has to be conscious of is that we are two jurisdictions that share this island. While we do work closely together and we will continue to work closely as we tackle COVID-19, it will be a joint approach but a joint approach that is North/South and east-west. When it comes to specific all-island approaches and all-island mechanisms, we will work in collaboration with our partners in the Republic of Ireland, as we do with our partners across the United Kingdom.

Mr Chambers: I thank the Minister for his comprehensive statement today. I note that he referenced the noise coming from social media and some media commentators and others, who recently appear to have become fully qualified scientists. It is unhelpful and it can cause disquiet in the minds of the public, who the Minister is seeking to protect. It must be acknowledged that the Minister and his staff in the NHS and associated services have moved mountains over a short period of time. My question is: can he provide an update on the work being undertaken on COVID-19 research and development?

Mr Swann: It was a pointed comment in my statement, because some of the noise that is generated is not just unhelpful but is undermining to some of the key workers in our National Health Service. It is unfair that commentary is often misguided and based on a tweet that somebody has put out from someone who is not a real person to start with.

The next phase is the medical trials, and a number of those are ongoing where we will be looking to what medication may be useful in either reducing the ferocity of the virus or as an antigen or a vaccine to prevent it entering society. Our Chief Medical Officer here in Northern Ireland chairs that working group, so the member can be reassured that Northern Ireland will be fully linked in to any UK-wide approach to any trial of medication or vaccine that will be brought forward.

Mr Middleton: I join others in thanking the Minister for the work that he is doing, along with all of those key workers on the front line, who are doing everything that they can to save lives. Minister, this morning, I spoke with a senior consultant in my constituency, who raised concerns like the ones that you have around people in our communities who have serious conditions, such as heart conditions and strokes, who are not attending their appointments and are not going to the hospital. Ultimately, that will lead to further complications, if not death. Minister, can you remind people that they need to take those conditions seriously, and, whilst being mindful of COVID-19, they must not put their health at risk and they should attend their appointments?

Mr Swann: I cannot stress that enough. If anything leaves here today, it should be the reinforcement of the message that those who need to go to the GP or an emergency department should do so. GPs are now triaging, and if there are COVID symptoms, the patient is sent to the COVID-19 centre. Most of our EDs now have a dual-track approach, and those who present with COVID or respiratory conditions are treated separately from those who are experiencing stroke or heart attack symptoms. I urge the Northern Ireland public to remember that our health service is still here to serve you. It is our National Health Service, which is free at point of delivery and point of use. That is what it is there for. If you need to present with any medical condition, please do so, because it is still there to support you. As I said in my statement, it is reassuring to have the number of empty beds that we have in the preparation for the surge, but I am cognisant of the fact that there are people who could be utilising those beds, but are not.

Mr O'Dowd: I thank the Minister for his statement and answers thus far. The two self-appointed experts who most concern me in the entire debate are Boris Johnson and Dominic Cummings and the influence that they have had on the strategy around tackling COVID-19. I accept, as the Minister said in his statement, that there will be time afterwards for a closer examination of all of those things.

PPE has come up, time and time again. In his response to several members' questions on the independent sector, the Minister said that there should not be an issue, and in response to another question about GPs, he said that they should have the equipment. However, time and time again — night after night — we hear stories from reputable news agencies that front-line staff are seriously concerned about the level of personal protective equipment that they have. Can the Minister redouble his assurances and recheck, again, that the proper equipment is going out to front-line services? PPE covers a broad range of issues, from gloves and aprons to purpose-built masks. Can the Minister redouble his efforts? I know that he is sincere in his efforts — I have no question about that — but there is clearly a difference between what the Minister is telling the House and the experience of some front-line staff.

Mr Swann: I thank the member for acknowledging our sincerity. The sincerity is across my Department and our health service. As I said in my statement, the Chief Medical Officer came to me in his push to make sure that the correct PPE is being made available. The supply of PPE is a challenge, worldwide, but I do not want it to be sitting in a stockpile or in a warehouse and not getting to the person who needs it. The regulations and guidance that we put out are to make sure that the PPE is used at the appropriate point in time by the people who need it.

The member is right: PPE covers a multitude of items and issues. In the past seven days, we have issued more than 12 million pieces of PPE. In 2019, our usual weekly distribution was just over one million, so, year-on-year, we have put out 11 million more pieces of PPE. I want to be assured — I need to be assured — that it is getting to the people who need it. So, I say to members, with genuineness, if a care home or GP is telling you that they do not have that PPE, it should not be. That is why I have asked the Chief Medical Officer to put in a more stringent approach.

We have seen an improvement over the past number of weeks. We had wards on which nurses were reporting that they had run out or faced shortages of PPE on a Saturday night or a Sunday morning, but we have worked on that; we have cracked that. A number of GP practices are saying that they do not have it, but we are working on that, and I believe we are cracking it. Care homes in the independent sector are meant to procure their own PPE, because they are independent and private suppliers, but we have made it very clear that, as a health and social care system, we will support them in the obtainment of PPE, should it be through access to our own stocks, because it is important that we support the residents in their homes as well.

The member can be reassured that I will do all that I can, should that mean that I have to work with the Chief Medical Officer to put a team in place that has to go out to walk wards and GP surgeries and visit care homes to make sure that that PPE is in the right place. We will do that.

Mr Lyttle: I offer my condolences to the families bereaved by COVID-19 and I thank health staff who are risking their own safety to limit the impact of this disease. It is clear that public compliance with coronavirus restrictions is also saving lives, but, as the Minister acknowledges, this public health emergency also has the potential to cause anxiety and distress for many people. Will the Minister establish an emergency mental health assessment unit to receive urgent referrals for those suffering with mental illness during this time?

Mr Swann: I thank the member for his question. Looking down and seeing him sitting in my chair is one of the disconcerting things about this Committee of the House. [Laughter.] As I said earlier in regard to strokes and heart attacks, people who are suffering from mental health traumas and anxiety should be looking for the same support from our National Health Service, because it is still there to support them. It may have been repurposed where we are taking telephone triage more than face-to-face contact but I reassure the member that that support mechanism should still be there for those who need it.

What we also have to be cognisant of is that, on the other side of this — and there will be another side to this — the level of mental health, anxiety and stress that we will see, not just in society but in our health and social care workers, will be immense. We are already working in the health service and across trusts to make sure that mental health and well-being provision is there for our staff, because there will be a point when, because of the pressures, anxieties and stress of the working environment that they are in, they will need that support and we will have to be there to provide it.

Mr Storey: I thank the Minister for his update and for the information that he has given. I share the sympathy that has been expressed not only to those families who have suffered as a result of the passing of a loved one through COVID-19, but to those families, some neighbours of our own today, who have had to bury loved ones in very difficult and challenging circumstances, given the restrictions that have to be in place. Our thoughts and prayers are with all those who have lost loved ones at this time.

I welcome the Minister's comments, particularly in regard to pharmacists, and the money that he released recently to community pharmacy. He knows that we have raised that issue with him previously. I also welcome his comment about not forgetting our National Health Service after this and that our community pharmacists will not be not forgotten.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): Can the member come to a question?

Mr Storey: You will be aware, Minister, that changes have been made to the operation of the Causeway Hospital in Coleraine, particularly in relation to ICU and maternity services. I have not been speaking to a keyboard warrior or individuals on social media, but to a retired consultant from the Causeway, whom I spoke to in the last 24 hours. He expressed grave concern about ensuring that these are only temporary measures and that they will not be used as long-term decisions to undermine the long-term viability of the Causeway Hospital.

Mr Swann: The member will be aware — I brought a copy of it with me because I thought that it probably would be raised today — of the press release and the reassurance that was issued by the Northern Health and Social Care Trust. It restated that it is a temporary arrangement and reflects the limited anaesthetic, medical and ICU nursing workforce in Causeway, and the fact that other hospitals, such as Antrim Area Hospital, have been specifically set up to deal with such cases. So, in regards to the concerns that were raised, including on social media, the Northern Trust moved itself to reassure the public.

The member's opening comments were about the perception of death and how we treat it in Northern Ireland. How we look at death in Northern Ireland has always been a very personal, family and community-based experience. It is how we come together as a community to provide support to the families who have been bereaved and also to make sure that they are aware of the support that continues to be there. Where we are today is that we do not get the chance to get that closure. For those people who lose their lives to COVID-19, whose family members do not get to hold their hands in that final moment: that is a challenge that we are working on. That is the challenge in ICU, and it is taking a toll on the nurses. It gives me reassurance and pride in our nursing workforce when they can put out a message to the families of those loved ones that, "Your family member did not die alone. We were there". That is a big onus on any individual, but it is a reassurance to those families who could not be there at that final moment that the dedication and love of our health staff is there to support them.

In regards to community pharmacists, I cannot stress enough my thanks and appreciation for how much they have stepped up. The work that they have done in the past number of weeks has been immense. They have also brought in changes to their opening hours, with the pressure and number of prescriptions that they are putting out. They have done an invaluable piece of work in supporting the health service, and, as I said when I last met them, they are part of the health family. That is how they are perceived, and that is how they should be treated.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): I call Melissa McHugh.

Mr McHugh: It is Maolíosa not Melissa.

I thank the Minister for his statement. I know that you do not like to talk about statistics, but New Zealand was talked about today and the strategies that have been adopted there, and one statistic that jumped out is that one is three times more likely to die of coronavirus in Britain than they are on the island of Ireland. There is food for thought there, and I want you to consider that when you are looking at strategies.

Aside from that, there are 5,566 receivers of direct payment for care. How do those workers who are technically employees for care access PPE and testing? With the recent guidelines published on 9 April, there is a feeling that those workers have effectively been abandoned.

Mr Swann: I assure the member that we are putting in support measures for those people who are looking after their loved ones and have taken on that direct care, so the supply and support will be there and further guidance will be issued as to how they can access that.

In comparing one nation's death rate with another, as I said earlier, I will not go there. I will not go into that level of analysis at this point in time because we do not know where we will finish.

Ms McLaughlin: Thank you for your statement today and for the additional information that you have shared with us. Before this crisis, our social care was in dire straits anyway. Our community care and home care were in difficulties, and now we see even greater pressure being put on them. I had occasion over the weekend to speak to quite a number of our home care and community care teams and they are confused about the guidance in relation to PPE. They do not believe that they have sufficient PPE, and they think that the guidance coming out from PHA and RQIA and the trusts, in many ways, is conflicting and it changes rapidly. What is appropriate and correct one day is maybe not appropriate and correct the next day. As a doctor in a care home said to me, it is like the parent who goes into the cupboard to see what they are going to have for dinner. They open the cupboard and say, "This is what we are having for dinner today" because that is what is in the cupboard. PPE cannot be distributed in that manner. People are feeling confused —

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): Can the member ask the question, please?

Ms McLaughlin: — and do not feel confident. Can we have a joined-up approach between the various clinical bodies and organisations to make sure that the right PPE is in the right place at the right time for the right carers?

Mr Swann: Again, that is the reassurance that I have given, because when it comes to those in community and social care, it is often those who are least noticed that we now most especially value, and that is where we are finding ourselves with those workers.

On the guidance, I am not going to take exception to what the member said, because the current guidance that we are working on is an agreed set of guidance that was brought together not by trusts, not by the PHA, but was brought together by the Chief Medical Officers of all four nations and the Chief Nursing Officers of all four nations, supported by the Royal College of Nursing, the Royal College of Midwives and the Royal College of General Practitioners. Therefore, the guidance that we have for what members of our health service should be wearing at particular times is guidance that was brought forward in consultation with all those organisations, and it is also based around the principles of the World Health Organization, and what we see as developing PPE standards across the world.

Therefore, I do not believe that the guidance has changed that often. It changed over a week ago, which actually made PPE more accessible to those people who wanted to use it in different circumstances. It is about the clarity of how that information is being cascaded down through our independent and private providers, and that is maybe where the challenge is, and that is something that our Chief Nursing Officer has worked to address with a number of online seminars and demonstrations on what PPE should be used in different locations. There was also a tick-box exercise about what PPE should be used in each setting, but we will make sure that the information and guidance is being cascaded down in a manner, and using a method, that can be easily understood.

Mrs Barton: Thank you, Minister, for your statement. I want to look a little bit further and ask what support you have put into the guidance for those particular people who have lost loved ones to COVID-19 and have not had the chance to say goodbye or to grieve properly.

Mr Swann: I will say to the member that there is bereavement guidance and there are support organisations out there. This is a very challenging time for anyone who loses a loved one to COVID-19 and who is not able to be there in those final moments, but, again, it goes back to what I said to Mervyn Storey: how we perceive death over this period will be challenging for many people because they will miss that final part of closure that they often get when they see a loved one pass away. It is about making sure that the support mechanisms are there through bereavement counselling and other methods, including churches, community groups and faith-based organisations.

Due to social isolation, wakes, visits to the house and the other traditional parts of grieving in Northern Ireland are not happening. Therefore, it is not just that family members are losing a loved one. They are not getting that support that they would often get through the network of family members and the local community. It is important that, as a community, we come together to support those individuals who lose loved ones, and not just those lost from COVID-19, but through other natural methods or medical conditions. We should make a special effort to support those individuals at this time.

Ms Bailey: I heard with interest the Minister's comments on social-distancing restrictions. When he said:

"there can be no grounds whatsoever for complacency."

He is, of course, right, and that:

"The focus ... has to be on staying at home".

Of course, he is right again. Therefore, Minister, why are women still being told to travel on journeys of up to two or three days to access abortion services during this COVID lockdown? Why can the trusts here, having started an early medical abortion (EMA) service off their own bats, with no support, direction or funding from either you or your Department, not be allowed to prescribe from home to reduce travel, just as has been done elsewhere in these islands?

Mr Swann: The member will know that abortion and termination in Northern Ireland is a controversial issue, and, as such, I referred the matter to the Executive over a week ago. I am aware that some trusts are performing EMA. The Chief Medical Officer has written to them about the requirements that they should be following in regards to the regulations that were put out by the Northern Ireland Office at the end of last month. Those regulations were not widely consulted on with or brought forward by this House, but they were brought forward by the Northern Ireland Office. Unfortunately, that is where that service and that delivery remains, and it remains a controversial and contested issue in Northern Ireland. I am aware that trusts are performing it and supporting women who need it.

Mr Allister: I commend the Minister and the health workers whom he represents for the sterling efforts to contain and to deal with the crisis. I particularly commend him for not shrinking from the necessary resort to military aid, even though, of course, it provoked the predictable and scurrilous attack upon him, again, by the deputy First Minister, who, once more, put politics before saving lives.

I want to ask the Minister, in particular, about the much-speculated Chinese order. Is there such an order, or will there be such an order? A senior official raised concerns, over a week ago, about the unreliability of the potential product, given that 35% of Chinese product has not been suitable. Where do those concerns stand? Will he give us an update on that?

Mr Swann: In regards to the member's opening comments, I will not be distracted in any shape or form from the work that I have to do, as Health Minister. I have a duty to the people of Northern Ireland to make sure that we get through this crisis and this virus as well as we can. To quote the head of the World Health Organization, Dr Tedros Ghebreyesus:

"Please don't politicize this virus. It exploits the differences you have at the national level. If you want to be exploited and if you want to have many more body bags, then you do it."

That was his response to Donald Trump. I think that it is right that we do not politicise the virus and how we react to it in Northern Ireland.

Specifically, in regards to the PPE order from China or wherever else, the member will be very clear, from my statement, that I will accept PPE and get PPE from wherever we need it at this time. The UK policy on PPE is working on three pillars, as it is talked about: the international, which includes our supply from China; the national, which is our support from the United Kingdom; and the local, where we look to local manufacturers. In regards to the quality of the consignment coming from China, the current procurement route that we are using and the Department of Finance is utilising is embedded with the British Embassy in China. That is the avenue that we are working on, in conjunction with the UK Government and the other three nations, to secure that supply of PPE and to ensure that its quality is what we require.

Mr Carroll: I want to share some concerns raised with me about our care homes, but, before I do, I give my sympathies for everybody who has died from the virus, in particular, those in care homes, particularly in Our Lady's care home in the Beechmount area in my constituency. We have to ask what message it sends out when the Health Department did not add the numbers of people who died in care homes to the official register. For weeks, people were likely passing away in our care homes and the Department did not see fit to add their names to the official deaths register. That implied that those lives were not worth counting alongside everybody else who died from the disease. That is a deeply disturbing development in the crisis.

We have heard from far and wide — from care home providers, staff and family members — of situations in which care home providers and staff are ill-equipped, with not enough or inadequate PPE. On top of that, we are being told that a large section of the multimillion-pound offer of equipment coming in may be faulty. Does the Department have the basic capacity to check that equipment before it comes in? It truly reflects —

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): Will the member come to his question?

Mr Carroll: — the shambolic situation that we are in.

I come to my question. One former public health official, John Ashton, has suggested that the real figure for deaths could be twice as many as the official figure touted by the UK Government, because deaths in care homes are not counted as part of the official figures. Do the Executive and the Minister take the view that many old people will be collateral damage in this health pandemic?

Mr Swann: I take great exception to what the member has just accused me and my Department of doing. I can assure him that we care. I can assure him that I care. I can assure members that there are nights when I do not sleep, when I think about what we are doing and what we have to do the next day. When he talks about not caring for people who are in a care home, does he honestly believe that I or Members of the House or staff in my Department do not have family members in those care homes? How dare you? How dare you accuse us of not caring? I can assure you that my Department and my officials care as much about every citizen and every individual in Northern Ireland as we do anybody else.

In regard to the numbers, the member is well aware, because a statement was issued yesterday. The individuals who are recorded by the Public Health Agency are those who passed away in hospital and who had been tested in the past 28 days. NISRA is responsible for the statistics on deaths that are recorded through death certificates. There is a time delay and a lag in the recording of those. That information has been brought forward, and that was done on 3 April. This week's NISRA statistical bulletin will show where those people died, whether that was in hospital facilities or in care home settings. So, do not ever accuse us or this Department of not caring for the individuals who are in care homes: we do.

I also say to the member that, with regard to the care home that he named, I think, from reading the front page of 'The Irish News' today, that a number of the deaths that were recorded in the care home were of people who had passed away in or had been in a hospital facility within the past 28 days and had been tested for coronavirus, so they will have been part of the PHA report as well as the NISRA report. That is all I will say to the member on this occasion.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): That concludes questions on the Minister's statement. We shall now have a brief suspension of five minutes prior to the next statement from the Economy Minister. I remind all members about the importance of maintaining social distancing when leaving or, indeed, entering the Chamber during the suspension. I ask you all to please do so via your nearest door. The meeting will resume in five minutes.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): The Speaker received notification on 10 April that the Minister for the Economy wished to make a statement to the Ad Hoc Committee at today's meeting. A copy of the statement that the Minister intends to make is included in your tabled pack at page 3. I welcome the Minister to the meeting and invite her to make a statement, which should be heard without interruption. Following the statement, there will be an opportunity for members to ask questions.

Mrs Dodds (The Minister for the Economy): Thank you for the opportunity to bring members up to date on my Department's response to the COVID-19 crisis.

The daily death toll from the virus is horrendous. My thoughts, first and foremost, are with grieving families across Northern Ireland, people in hospital or ill at home and the NHS staff who are working to save lives daily.

The biggest health emergency that Northern Ireland has ever faced has also created an unprecedented economic crisis. My role as Economy Minister right now is to try to mitigate the worst impacts on our economy by protecting as many livelihoods as possible. By doing that, I believe, we will safeguard the economic foundations on which recovery must be built. That is why we are working to distribute over £400 million in support packages to businesses across Northern Ireland and why I am in near-daily contact with Ministers in Westminster, working on behalf of businesses large and small, on behalf of sectors including manufacturing, tourism, construction, aviation and haulage, and on behalf of workers and the self-employed.

The need to prepare the local economy for a return to normality at some point is the driving force behind the work we do to help furloughed or redundant workers retrain or find work in the sectors where they are needed most. My priority is to do everything in my power to try to protect jobs, safeguard supply chains and sustain businesses. However, let us be in no doubt about the scale of the task. COVID-19 has brought to a halt a significant portion of global economic activity. Exporting and importing have become more difficult, supply chains are significantly disrupted and international travel has all but ceased. A swathe of industries has had to close down to wait out the crisis. Others are dealing with dramatically reduced orders and sales. Our tourism industry collapsed overnight, and businesses are dealing with crippling uncertainty. We will be dealing with the economic aftershocks for a long time to come, and, make no mistake, all sectors of the economy will be affected. Economists in my Department and externally anticipate significant falls in GDP during quarter two of this year, while holding out some hope for a rebound later in the year.

A small number of companies remain open with strict social-distancing measures in place. Others, such as the retail and health sectors, have stepped forward and have even expanded to play a crucial role in supporting the effort to tackle COVID-19. In the darkest of times, I have seen the best of business. Companies have repurposed production lines; workers have volunteered to help whenever they can; staff facing lay-off have asked how they can use their skills to fill gaps created by sickness; and others have offered support in sourcing and importing vital resources. However, I am acutely aware of the hardship facing many business owners and workers. We are rolling out grants to some of our most severely affected businesses. As far as I am aware, this is the largest financial package ever to be made available to local businesses. The schemes, which, in normal circumstances, would take months to put in place, are being delivered in a fraction of that time. I want to go on record and state my appreciation of the work of the officials in my Department as well as the Department of Finance in getting to this stage.

The first payments under the small business grant scheme were made nine days after the original announcement. Since then, nearly 15,000 businesses have received the £10,000 grants, totalling around £150 million. I know from speaking to owners that those payments help businesses to survive, pay their staff and plan for the future. The scheme has now been extended to include small industrial businesses that qualify for industrial derating. That expansion will cover around 2,500 additional businesses.

The Executive have also agreed the £25,000 grant scheme, which will open on 20 April. It will be crucial to our hospitality, tourism, leisure and retail sectors, which have been hit particularly badly. Over 4,000 businesses, many of which were among the first to take the hit from the crisis, will benefit. Businesses will be required to apply for the scheme, and I encourage those who consider themselves eligible to apply as soon as we open for applications. We aim to make the process as easy as possible, and, to achieve that, Department of Finance officials have advised that the portal will be fully operable by 20 April. I assure businesses that, as soon as applications have been verified, the grant will be paid. We will not wait until the end of the application process before making the payments. The scheme will run over the next month and will deliver funds to ease the cash-flow problems of some of our hardest-hit businesses.

The Executive have committed to providing a three-month rates holiday to all businesses from April to June. It is my view that that is one of the most effective ways to support the sustainability of the wider economy and I believe that it should be extended further. For many companies, rates are a huge outlay and it would make a positive contribution if the Northern Ireland Executive were able to match other parts of the United Kingdom in this respect.

The UK-wide job retention scheme, which I lobbied long and hard for, allows businesses to keep people on their payroll by providing up to £2,500 a month for furloughed employees. Self-employed workers can also receive 80% of their taxable profit over the last three years, capped at £2,500 a month. That applies to those with trading profits below £50,000. Those are critical measures, which are providing support to tens of thousands of businesses and workers across Northern Ireland. However, I am acutely aware that others across Northern Ireland are facing financial hardship but, as yet, have not been able to access any of the existing national or regional grant schemes. We are currently working out how best to assist them. At the Executive meeting on 10 April, we agreed the need for a further scheme. A budget has been identified and we are examining the ways in which that money can be delivered. We will look to fill the gaps for businesses that are not already receiving funding.

The increases to working tax credit and universal credit by £1,000 a year will help the most vulnerable. The coronavirus business interruption loans scheme is a further tool and should be a crucial step in getting cash flow to firms in this difficult period. Our national Government have undertaken a huge amount of public borrowing to support the economy in the short term. It is important that the support provided nationally and by the Executive is deployed to limit job losses so that, come the recovery, workers can come off furlough and back into the workplace.

As the impact of the crisis bites deeper, assistance will need to be targeted to those who need it most. The shutdown of many industries in Northern Ireland, the collapse in footfall around our towns and cities and emerging survey evidence all indicate that the reality is that there has been widespread furloughing of workers by many firms. Invest NI client companies have notified it that over 30,000 jobs have been furloughed. Outside of Invest NI's client base, many more will have been furloughed too. However, it is worth noting that we have seen many examples of large-scale furloughing of workers by firms, but what we are not seeing, as yet, are examples of large-scale redundancies.

In assessing all the available economic indicators and data, my Department's economists fear that the number of workers in Northern Ireland that will be directly impacted by the shutdown could well go beyond 200,000, with widespread job losses too; potentially as many as 25,000 in the short term. Outside of the labour market, their analysis also suggests that house prices look set to be negatively impacted and trade and investment appear set to stall. However, while that analysis is based on assumptions and indicators which can, and do, change, we can say with certainty that the economic impact is set to be deep and far-reaching, and many across Northern Ireland will need ongoing support. The latest information on every support scheme that is currently available to businesses can be found at the nibusinessinfo website.

There has also been significant pressure on the aviation industry and on haulage and ferry companies, which has led to a dramatic reduction in our air and sea connectivity. That is a very important issue, which I continue to raise with Government Ministers in London. In respect of Northern Ireland's vital air connectivity with Great Britain, my officials, alongside those in Finance and Infrastructure, are working with the UK Department for Transport to provide support to maintain Northern Ireland air connectivity during the COVID-19 crisis period. Indeed, Ministers Mallon, Murphy and I wrote yesterday to the UK Chancellor in support of the Department for Trade business case, seeking UK Government support to maintain strong air links between here and GB. I am hopeful that that intervention will realise a support package.

Aviation will also have an important role to play in the recovery of our tourism industry. I am conscious that the tourism and hospitality sector was one of the first sectors to experience the impact of COVID-19. I thank those who are on the front line and working in vital industries such as food, manufacturing, telecoms and retail. Our energy supply has remained constant throughout this crisis. Turning on the heat, flicking a light switch and cooking a meal are all made possible by the thousands of energy workers who are making sure that everyone has the energy they require.

I am planning to speak to Mr Kwarteng about how the energy system is coping across the UK, and my Department is maintaining solid communication at all levels with the system locally. Generators, network operators, suppliers and those representing consumer interests have all stepped forward in recent weeks to ensure that people's needs are met. I also take this opportunity to thank them.

The safety of workers must remain an absolute priority. If people can work at home, they should, but for those who cannot, the work environment should be safe and follow the public health guidance. In response to some concerns raised, the stakeholder engagement forum was convened, comprising unions and business groups. It has provided advice on priority business sectors and codes of practice, which I will bring to the Executive on Friday.

We already have examples of successful social distancing at work where production lines have been extended, break times staggered, canteen tables restricted to one per person, and increased cleaning and physical measures, such as Perspex panels to minimise contact, have been introduced. We will make sure that that good work continues, and I will do everything in my power to ensure that we have a safe workforce. Working with industry will save lives.

Our economy is changing very significantly, leading to a change in direction for many businesses. However, we know that improving the digital skills of our workforce will enhance our competitiveness and increase productivity in the long term. I also believe that investing in digital skills provides an opportunity to reinforce our competitive advantage in areas such as cybersecurity, data analytics and robotics. I want to provide individuals, particularly those who are furloughed, with the opportunity to improve their digital skills. To begin the process, we intend to provide a range of online digital courses via our careers portal. Those courses will be free for everyone and provide an opportunity for individuals to use their time at home to prepare for the future.

My Department is also helping people seeking alternative employment. Our careers advisers are supporting people in matching their skills and experiences to opportunities and demand, including full-time, part-time and temporary roles. There is high demand in sectors such as health, retail and agri-food.

Our universities and colleges have been forced to close their doors for face-to-face learning, but they remain active in the fight against COVID-19. Students and staff at our higher and further education institutions have been providing and creating personal protective equipment, joining the research for a vaccine and volunteering and joining the health service workforce.

I am acutely aware that the stopping of face-to-face teaching has had a particular impact on how vocational qualifications will be awarded. I have instructed my officials to work with CCEA and other regulators as a matter of urgency to identify the fairest way of issuing grades.

I am aware that the downturn in the hospitality sector will have had an impact on students who often work in that sector. With that in mind, I have requested an extension to increase student hardship funds as we move into the third semester. I hope that that can be doubled, and I will be discussing that with Executive colleagues. Those students have stepped up and I thank them for that.

In the severest of times when our resilience is being tested, I cannot promise that every job or every business will be saved because this crisis will leave no one unscathed, but I will do all I can to counteract the severest impacts and protect the livelihoods that support families and communities in Northern Ireland. We will get through this, and when we do I believe the measures we have put in place will form the foundations on which our businesses can build our economic recovery.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): I thank the Minister for her statement. There will now be a period of around an hour for members to ask questions. It is my intention to allow all members to ask a question, but again I will need your cooperation, and those asking questions must be focused and succinct. Members may ask only one question, and it must be related to the statement. The Chair of the Committee for the Economy will be allowed some latitude and allowed to ask an additional question.

Dr Archibald (Committee Chair - Committee for the Economy): I thank the Minister for her statement. As she outlined, the economic impact and the impact on local businesses is severe and that is beginning to be shown through business surveys. In particular, cash flow is an issue. Minister, you addressed that somewhat in your statement, but the announcement over the weekend about the £25,000 grant and the potential for it to take three weeks to administer caused anxiety and distress to many in those sectors. I wrote to you about this over the weekend, I spoke to you about it this morning and you addressed it somewhat in your statement when you said:

“as soon as applications have been verified the grant will be paid.”

Will you expand a little bit on how we can ensure that this money will get to businesses as quickly as possible? I very much welcome the news about the student hardship support. The Minister will know that that is something I have pushed for, and it is very welcome. I also ask that you look at how we support students who do not go to university in the North.

Finally, my second question is about those not covered by the current schemes. For example, our very innovative and vibrant social enterprise sector, where we have a number of businesses doing really important work, and also the charitable sector and sole traders. Will you outline what is being planned to support people working in those sectors?

Mrs Dodds: I thank you as Chair of the Committee for the continuous cooperation and work that we do together on the very important issues that impact on all of our lives.

The £25,000 grants are now going to be available to those in retail, hospitality, tourism and leisure; that is an important expansion of where the grant is now going from what was originally intended. Quite a bit of work has been done to try to get additional companies included from those sectors.

As you are aware, there are £10,000 grants for small businesses that qualify for small business rates relief. There is already a process for small manufacturing companies who qualify for the grant already and they are easily identifiable in the system. We have been able to work very well with Finance to make sure that those companies are identified quite quickly. We have been able to pay out those grants very quickly.

The £25,000 grant is slightly different in that we had to create a process, and it took some time to look at all of the databases. I had originally hoped that this grant would be live today, but that has been delayed for just a few days until 20 April because the Department of Finance need to make sure that the web portal is fully functioning and will provide those applying for the grant with a fairly seamless application process. Therefore, at the request of the Department of Finance, we have delayed its introduction just for a few days. However, I talked to the Department and the Minister today, and we agreed that, if we can bring it forward, even by a day, we will do that, in order to get it out as quickly as possible. It is not in anyone's interests to delay it, in any shape or form.

There will be an online application process. It is a very simple process, but it gives comfort and financial comfort around the process. As soon as we are able to verify the application, we will pay it in exactly the same way that we paid the smaller £10K grants; so, as quickly as possible.

I acknowledge the work put in by my officials and Department of Finance officials in creating a scheme and a payment system in a very short time.

I say, for the benefit of members, that, every week, the Chair of the Committee and I have a bit of a catch-up on all the issues that rumble around the Committee. I undertook to look at students who do not go to university in Northern Ireland but are subject to universities, maybe in England, Scotland or Wales, that are continuing to ask them to pay for accommodation in the third term when they are not there. I will undertake to look at that. I suspect that it is up to each university and the particular hardship schemes that it introduced, but I will look at that.

For our part in Northern Ireland, we will continue, for students, to pay grants or loans into the third term. In order to try to address the issue of hardship, we have also asked the Executive for support to increase the amount of money that is available to each university in its student hardship fund. Each university has a separate student hardship fund, which is directed at those who are in financial difficulties, particularly those with disabilities, lone parents and those who find it more difficult within the system. I would really like to get the Executive's support to double that, so that we would have a substantial amount in that fund, in each university. I do not want to create a new process. I have tried to stick with the process that is there and not to reinvent the wheel in a difficult situation.

We are looking at how we can offer help to businesses that have not yet been identified, including those in the social enterprise sector. I hope to be in a position to make a further announcement on grants reasonably soon.

For those in the charitable sector, the Finance Minister updated us today that, as a Barnett consequential of the money that was announced for the charities sector, additional money will come to Northern Ireland for Northern Ireland charities and, as far as I am aware — not to steal anyone's thunder — for charities like the hospice and so on, which really are valuable and have seen a huge decline in the money that people are able to raise for those good causes.

All of those are in the system and will be working their way through.

Mr Middleton: I thank the Minister for her statement. Minister, on Friday, I took part in a q-and-a MLA session via video link with the Londonderry Chamber of Commerce and a number of its members. One of the key issues that came out of that was around the essential and non-essential workers, and I appreciate the fact that an engagement forum has been set up to look at that. Can the Minister give clarity as to when that would be available? Given the fact that there is now an extension of three weeks to the current restrictions measures, it is important that we have that clarity for businesses.

Mrs Dodds: Yes, thank you. I think that that is essential and clear, and I am glad that you are conducting all your business online too. It seems quite strange that we are conducting conversations with Ministers, across the United Kingdom, with Zoom at every opportunity.

First, I will take the opportunity in the House to congratulate those who have spent their time in the engagement forum; the trade unions and the businesses that have come together to do important work. A paper will go to the Executive on Friday, and that will update them and ask them to make decisions on the work of the engagement forum. I can tell the Committee that the engagement forum has produced two pieces of work. One is a code of practice agreed between unions and businesses around safe working practices, and this is really a very valuable tool for us going forward. One of the things that I talk about often in Executive meetings and with officials is the path back to recovery and the gentle steps that we will have to take to ease ourselves back into recovery and into full work mode. I believe that social distancing will be with us for a considerable period of time, and that continuing engagement of the forum, along with the Health and Safety Executive, the Public Health Agency and so on, on that piece of work will be a very valuable contribution to that.

The forum has also produced a further piece of work around essential and non-essential workers. I will present that to the Executive and take their view on it, and I am sure that that will be published reasonably soon thereafter.

Ms McLaughlin: Thank you, Minister, for your statement. It is very welcome. All the schemes that you have outlined have been welcomed by the business community. I suppose that the biggest complaint that we are getting is to get that cash as quickly as possible into business accounts, and that is where the difficulty lies. Scotland is already administering the £25,000 scheme, and we have not got to that part yet. Cash is key for those businesses. A lot of businesses felt that they have been vilified —

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): Can we have a question?

Ms McLaughlin: — because they were operating and working, and I think that it is great to hear the Minister welcoming those businesses that have repurposed. It is important to say that.

I would like a bit more clarity on the self-employment support coming forward. Can that be speeded up? We have a lot of small entrepreneurs who are not going to get any cash until maybe later on in June. Can she give us a bit more detail on that scheme?

Mrs Dodds: Thank you to the member for the question and for the comments around the businesses. I am acutely aware of the need for cash flow, and I am acutely aware that many businesses face dire circumstances. People who have spent their lifetime building a business are in significant difficulty through absolutely no fault of their own. That is important, and we will endeavour to get the £25,000 scheme as quickly as is possible out into the community and into the business community.

On cash flow, one of the things that we have been able to do with our Government in London is to keep a constant flow of contact through various groups. I dial in every week, and tomorrow I will be dialling in to the economic response group, which is chaired by the Chancellor. So, we have a very good and open channel of communication to bring these issues forward. Of course, both the job retention scheme and the scheme for the self-employed are matters for national government and for Her Majesty's Treasury. I will, again, bring some of these issues forward, and I have written to the Chancellor about these.

There are two things that I think are absolutely massive and pertinent to your question. The first is the issue of getting money from the job retention scheme for furloughed workers to companies as quickly as possible. We were told by the Chancellor on our last call that this scheme and this web portal would open on 20 April, with payment to be made thereafter. Almost without exception, many of the people on the call made the point that money needed to flow fairly quickly for those furloughed workers because that is what businesses were depending on to run their April payroll. That point has already been made.

Two things come up, over and over again, from those who are self-employed. One is the length of time that it is taking for the implementation of the scheme. To that, the Chancellor, invariably, will reply that we are doing huge schemes on an unimaginable scale in a very, very short time — and I am quoting him, not advocating for him. That does not help the self-employed people who have lost their business outlets, again, through no fault of their own. The timescale is, therefore, important.

The other issue that comes up over and over again relates to those people who became self-employed in the previous tax year. It is worth noting that I have made representation for those people, because they have not had time to file a tax return; they cannot fill the qualifying of the three-year averaging that the scheme asks for. We have made representation on behalf of those people. I think of some of the people who have written to me. There are heartbreaking stories. People have signed up for the leasing of equipment, and so on, and invested their life savings in a new self-employed venture and been met with this. Their help, at the moment, is universal credit. That is deeply damaging to the economy, to entrepreneurs and to what we want to encourage for all our businesses.

Mr Stewart: I thank the Minister for her statement. As usual, it raises more questions than answers. Sadly, I am allowed only one question today. As the Minister will probably know, I have asked a number of questions in recent weeks by letter. I would appreciate it if you came back to me on those issues, Minister.

As you said, the Government interventions, to date, have been substantial, to say the least, but 50% of companies in Northern Ireland are entitled to nothing, and, of those companies that are entitled to a grant, less than half has already got it. It is important that we get that out there as quickly as possible. Cash is king, and there are businesses that I am talking to every day that have only days or weeks to go. We need to do more. We need to get more money to those companies. Will you give an undertaking to look at a bespoke version of the Welsh economic resilience model, which they launched at the end of March? Some £500 million has been put into that fund, and companies can access grants of up to £100,000. We are staring into an economic abyss, Minister. It is a health crisis now, but it is going to become the biggest economic crisis in history, and we need to do whatever we can.

Mrs Dodds: I thank the member for his question. It is a very important issue — one on which I have been working. We have been concentrating on getting the grant packages out, helping companies with some of the difficulties they are having via the loan scheme, which, again, can be considerable, and in addressing issues relating to the self-employed and job retention scheme. However, we will be turning our minds to the recovery. The Welsh resilience fund provides one model of how we can do that. Invest NI has been asked to look at the schemes and measures that we will need to help the Northern Ireland economy in its recovery. I will be going to the Northern Ireland Executive and asking for considerable investment in Northern Ireland businesses and the Northern Ireland economy in order to help them to recover, not just to mitigate where we are now. I will be asking for investment in packages that will be important around the recovery of the economy. We are doing work on that. Significant work is being done in the Department with our economists and some health economists. I am acutely aware that we will need to maintain some of the practices that we have currently in the workplace, but I am also aware that economic recession has its own health impacts and we want to address those in a holistic manner. We will be looking for a package for the Northern Ireland economy. We will be looking at something along the lines of the Welsh resilience fund, for instance, but we will not be looking at just its mitigation measures; we will be looking at something to take us a step further.

Mr Muir: I thank the Minister for her statement and for all the work that is being done to date by officials, not only in her Department, but also in the Department of Finance. It is greatly appreciated.

Unfortunately, my clear view is that the speed of delivery of the grants is not acceptable. Significant numbers have still not received the £10K grant; a significant survey about that came out from the local chambers today. People are having to resort to the benefits system to survive because of those.

The delays around the £25K grants are just not acceptable. The timescales that were announced on Friday night left business owners in tears. What is the Minister planning to do to ensure that the timescales for the delivery of assistance is accelerated? Scotland announced a similar scheme of around £25K on exactly the same day that the Minister did — the money was paid out on 6 April. Why is Northern Ireland again behind the curve in relation to assisting businesses?

Mrs Dodds: I thank the member for his questions. Let me first address the £10K grant scheme. You indicated that many thousands of businesses have still not been paid those grants. At the start of this scheme we indicated that there were a number of businesses that we could pay directly because Land and Property Services (LPS) already held bank account details for them, and those businesses have been paid. We opened the web portal for the remaining businesses, and those that applied via it have been paid. We have around 17,000 applications for grants, over 15,000 of which have already been paid. Some others are awaiting verification, some had an incorrect ratepayer

ID number, some just had mistakes in the application process, and we are working through those.

One of the things that I plan to do over the next week or so is to try to have some further public announcements about the £10K grants scheme. At the start, we saw an initial rush of businesses applying to the scheme, but that has seen a tailing off over the last number of days. We want to remind businesses that, if they are eligible, if they receive small business rates relief or if they receive industrial derating, they can apply for the £10K grants scheme, but they need to do so through the portal. We have paid everyone for whom we hold details. We need to harness your energies, help and support in advising businesses in your local area that if they have not applied to the £10K grants scheme they should please do so if they fall into one of the particular categories. There are not tens of thousands of applications outstanding. There is potential for many more to come in, but we need businesses to actually apply and give us their details: we will respond to that.

On the £25K scheme, I have already explained that it is a new scheme. We prioritised the £10K scheme because it obviously reaches many, many more businesses. The £25K scheme is now there. It is unfortunate that the portal is just not at a stage that it can go live at the moment but, as I said, I spoke today to the Finance Minister at the Executive and we agreed that we would look at that again and see if there was a way that we could do it. The application system is not long or complicated but it does require verification, as you would expect, and as soon as we can verify applications, those businesses will be paid.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): Members and Ministers, we have been averaging five minutes for a question and answer, and if that continues only 12 of the 21 members who wish to ask a question will be afforded that opportunity. I ask everyone to be much more focused and succinct in their questions and answers.

Mr Dunne: I, too, thank the Minister for her statement. We all recognise the effort that she and her staff in the Department for the Economy have put in, alongside the work of the Finance Department. It is important that we, as elected representatives, continue to lobby and work to ensure that we do all that we can to support our local businesses at this very important time.

Again, I urge prompt action on the £25K grant.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): Can we have a question?

Mr Dunne: Yes, indeed, Deputy Speaker; I will get there. I emphasise the need for prompt action. Perhaps the Minister could comment on the point, as we have noticed, that leisure is now included. I assume that that would include golf clubs and, perhaps, football clubs. Can we have some clarification on the point that was made earlier that a number of businesses have fallen through the cracks and are not in any particular scheme? I have had an example of that in my constituency today of a small manufacturing business, which was delighted to hear about the change in industrial derating but, because it is over £15K NAV, it is not eligible. We need to look at trying to broaden out the whole scheme to include vital businesses such as that one.

Mrs Dodds: I thank the member for his question. We will be looking at those businesses that have not been identified by any of the schemes that are so far available. In his paper last Friday, the Finance Minister indicated that a further £40 million has been set aside to look at more schemes for those businesses. We fully intend to use that money to support businesses through a very difficult period.

It was decided that we would include leisure in the £25K grant scheme because it is a mirror of the scheme that operates in the rest of the United Kingdom, of which leisure is a part. It will be open to any leisure business that can show that it has suffered hardship because of the COVID-19 emergency that we are experiencing.

Mr Sheehan: I thank the Minister for her statement. I am sure that she, like many other MLAs, has been contacted by companies that service gas boilers and who are concerned about having to carry out their work in the context of the social distancing guidance. Difficulties have been highlighted around accessing premises where individuals are ill or are social isolating. There are some people who are reluctant to allow engineers to come into their premises. That is a particular issue in the rented and social housing sectors, where the landlord has a statutory obligation to carry out annual servicing. I know that the Health and Safety Executive guidance states that —

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): Can we have a question?

Mr Sheehan: — those services can continue. Will the Minister consider a temporary, short-term suspension of the annual checks and a relaxation of the obligation on landlords that would alleviate some of those problems?

Mrs Dodds: I thank the member for his question. I have taken specific advice on that issue from the Health and Safety Executive, which has advised that gas boilers need regular servicing and that there is an obligation to ensure that those boilers are serviced. I understand the issues around social distancing and people's reticence to allow others into their home. However, I am absolutely clear that we must put the safety of people first, whether they are in the private or public rented sector. Indeed, I advise private individuals that if they have a gas boiler, then the servicing of that boiler is an absolute must. Personally, I could not live with myself if something happened to somebody because of an accident from a gas boiler that had not been serviced. We have given contractors some latitude around the timing issue.

Mr Storey: The Minister has expanded various grant schemes and I thank her for that. Unlike some other members, we appreciate all that has and is being done by her staff. However, will one- or two-person businesses — I am thinking, for example, of a coach company in my constituency that has fallen below the £25,000 and the £10,000 grant limit — be eligible for the expansion that she has referred to?

Mrs Dodds: Thank you for the question. I cannot give a guarantee on a specific example, but the intention is to look at businesses that have, at this minute in time, no route to specific help. I have been contacted by coach operators; maybe someone who has a couple of coaches who operates those for the tourism industry who has leasing requirements on those vehicles and overheads to pay, yet tourism has all but stopped. I understand the issue, and I hope to address some of those issues in the new scheme that we will bring forward.

I am also thinking of small businesses that perhaps are in an enterprise park where the park pays the rates and the small businesses are not easily identifiable in that park. Those are businesses that are operating and we would like to see help extended to them as well, and the same with the social economy sector. We will be doing some work with Finance to try to help with that sector. So, there are still a number of issues that have to be addressed, and we are committed to doing that in a future scheme.

Mr Gildernew: I thank the Minister for her statement and answers to questions here today. You will be aware that, under the job retention scheme, furloughed workers will be adversely affected when seeking maternity entitlements. In the first 39 weeks of maternity leave, mothers are entitled to statutory maternity payments, which equate to 90% of their average gross weekly earnings. However, instead of being entitled to 90% of their usual earnings, furloughed workers will instead be entitled to 90% of their furloughed earnings, which are only 80% of their regular wage. That discrepancy will skew the calculations of the average gross weekly earnings and place them at a financial disadvantage. Will the Minister seek to address that issue with the British Treasury?

Mrs Dodds: Thank you for the question. Your colleague has already written to me about that particular issue, and I have already taken it forward. I recognise that there is that kind of anomaly; when a scheme is brought forward in haste, there will always be people that it does not quite fit with. So, yes, is the answer.

Mr O'Toole: I thank the Minister for coming and giving us an update. Like other members, I thank her officials and those in the Department of Finance, who, I know, as a former civil servant, are working very hard on this stuff. It is difficult. This stuff takes time.

She referred to the devastating scale of the economic shock that Northern Ireland and, indeed, the entire world faces. New survey data out today from the various chambers — Belfast, Derry and Newry chambers — indicates that nearly half of businesses are not trading at all at the minute. In light of that, and in light of the depth of the economic shock, does she agree with me that the UK Government's current position that they will not seek an extension to the Brexit transition — and I hate to even mention Brexit in the current circumstances — is absurd, if it was not immoral, given how much they risk vital supply chains of food and medicine at the end of this year?

At the end of last week, I wrote to the Executive asking the First Minister and deputy First Ministers to make representations on behalf of all the Northern Ireland institutions, which are the only devolved institutions specifically mentioned in the withdrawal treaty, which she will well know, given her past as an MEP. Will she agree with me that it is squalid and immoral that the UK Government will not ask for an extension in the current circumstances? Will she agree with me that the last thing that Northern Ireland business needs is the jeopardisation of supply chains by —

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): The member has asked the question.

Mr O'Toole: — the UK leaving without a trade deal at the end of this year. Will she agree with me —

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): The member has asked the question.

Mr O'Toole: — that the Northern Ireland Executive should write to the UK Government and make those representations urgently?

Mrs Dodds: It is always nice to get back to the subjects that we know. Back to Brexit.

A Member: [Inaudible.]

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): Order.

Mrs Dodds: Thank you for the question. I will address it in two parts. You are right that there is a huge shock to the economy, not just the economy here in Northern Ireland, but the world economy and the UK economy. I read a report this morning that indicated that, across the United Kingdom, up to two million people could find themselves unemployed following this. Those are very sobering and difficult statistics, and remember: for every one of those people there is a family, and that is a person. Those are very difficult issues. There are huge issues to be dealt with in the economy about how we actually proceed gently out of the phase we are in, bearing in mind that we need to keep people safe and keep lives safe. Yes, I agree with you on that.

On Brexit, it will, of course, be up to the United Kingdom Government to decide whether to seek an extension. There are a number of views about seeking an extension. Some people believe that to seek an extension would merely be to prolong the agony and that we could get this done within the required time. Others believe that to seek an extension would mean that we simply further prop up the European Union, which will be under significant stress because of the downturn in the world economy. Those are issues that we will, of course, discuss with the Government in due course, but, for now, our focus pretty much at every meeting that we are involved with is on the immediate impact of COVID and the economic situation we are in.

Dr Aiken: Thank you, Minister, for your remarks. I was particularly struck by one of the things you said when you were making your statement. When you were talking about rates, you said that an extension of the rates holiday:

"would make a positive contribution if the NI Executive was able to match other parts of the United Kingdom".

Are the Northern Ireland Executive exploring extending the rates holiday from three months to six months and beyond? That is particularly important to critical areas of our economy.

Mrs Dodds: It is critical, and we currently have grant schemes that help businesses with rateable values under £15,000. We have grant schemes that help businesses in certain sectors with rateable values up to £51,000, but, actually, for many of our businesses, the most significant help that we can give them is additional help with their rates bill. Businesses have written to me about that, and I believe that it would be a very significant contribution to businesses, going forward. I believe that we should extend the rate scheme to match other parts of the United Kingdom. As you are well aware, it differs in some parts of the United Kingdom, but we should try to stretch ourselves to extend that because that is where we will give real help particularly in our tourism and hotel sector and to some of our retailers who have been very badly hit by the situation that we are in. Therefore, I am in full agreement with you. I have brought the issue up at the Executive and will continue to push it.

Mrs Cameron: I thank the Minister for her statement. On the back of the previous question, we understand, fully appreciate and completely support social-distancing measures, but can the Minister comment on the harm to the economy from the current social-distancing rules? I think in particular about very personal roles such as hairdressers, beauty therapists and even dentists, and I declare an interest as someone who is rapidly growing much long grey hair. [Laughter.] On a serious point, Minister, these are peoples' livelihoods, and they are desperately affected by the rules. Do you have a comment to make on that?

Mrs Dodds: I, too, declare an interest: COVID hairstyles are not the best that we have had.

I absolutely agree with you. Those sectors of our economy have simply had to close, and some of them will find it very difficult to open again. We really need to work with them into the future to try to ensure that they have the support they need. I am aware that some of our local businesses will be able to avail themselves of the furlough scheme and so on, but it is important that we recognise their contribution to the economy. Helping them further via rates is one of the issues that will be most significant to them, because rates are such a huge part of the bills and are ongoing. Those are the standing bills that they have to pay and that they have to meet all the time. I have made those points to the Executive.

Mr O'Dowd: Minister, thank you for your statement. My advice is to go grey gracefully. [Laughter.] I welcome the fact that the Executive have set aside £40 million for businesses that fall between the stools. On my way here, I was notified about a business that employs 11 workers in a rural community that may fall between the stools. There is hope there yet.

I specifically want to ask about the insurance business. I know that it is not a devolved matter, but I think that the Minister can have some influence. Insurance companies are refusing to pay out on the pandemic issue, even though businesses have paid huge premiums over many years in good faith. Will the Minister engage with the Treasury and others and the financial regulators for the insurance industry to ensure that the insurance industry pays out to businesses that have been paying their premium?

Mrs Dodds: "Yes" is the short answer to that. I, too, know of businesses in my area, in Upper Bann and further across Northern Ireland that have paid for cover for these exact reasons and, because COVID-19 is not named in the policy, have been told that they cannot claim in the current pandemic. A bit of a mixed message has come from the Government in the past — "They will pay out, because I say that they will pay out" — but, of course, the insurance industry does not operate like that. I will, of course, continue to make representation on behalf of those businesses. That cover is significant. It is quite an outlay for businesses to have it, and some of them thought that, in covering themselves in that way, life would be a little easier and are very disappointed to find that they are not included.

Mr Lyttle: In response to a previous question about the extreme cash flow problems facing businesses that are ineligible for existing grant schemes, the Minister advised that Invest NI was scoping a recovery package. This is not an issue of recovery; it is an issue of survival. Given that cash flow is such a serious problem for such businesses, when will the Minister follow the lead of Scotland and Wales and deliver the hardship cash funding to ensure that businesses survive?

Mrs Dodds: There are two elements to the work that we would have to do. One is the mitigation elements, and we have outlined the work that has been done so far. Those are really important. They are really important for the survival of businesses and how they will be able to pick up again. There is also the issue for us that we would be doing wrong if we were not looking at and planning for recovery and the future. That is also an important part of our work. We discussed it at the Executive today, and I will discuss with them again on Monday some of the actions that need to be taken and some of the issues that will need to be dealt with. It is always good to have those people to advise and support policy decisions of government going forward.

Mr Easton: I thank the Minister for her statement. As the Minister is aware, the impact on our air connectivity has been substantial. Does she have plans to help with that for the foreseeable future, when we maybe get back into the way of things?

Mrs Dodds: That is a really valuable and important piece of the work that we have been doing over the last number of weeks. Our air connectivity in Northern Ireland is at an absolutely critical stage. There are no flights, bar freight flights, out of Belfast International Airport. City of Derry Airport is down to one flight a day, which is the public-supported flight. Just last week, BA announced that it was discontinuing the London Heathrow route temporarily and that the only flight would be one return flight a day via Aer Lingus. Northern Ireland's air connectivity to the rest of the United Kingdom is absolutely at a critical stage, and we all, as Members of the House, need to be aware and cognisant of that.

I have been working with the Department for Transport in London, as have Nichola Mallon and, in Finance, Conor Murphy, trying to bring forward help and support for those airports, particularly for the routes that keep us connected to the rest of the United Kingdom. We want to ensure that, when we are able to pick up with the economy, when air travel resumes, we have airports that are in a position to service that demand in the economy and that we have the routes there to do so. I speak on a regular basis, probably weekly, with every one of the airports, and my officials are in constant contact on the issue. I hope and think that it will have positive results, but it will be for both the Department for Transport and the local Executive to ensure that our air connectivity to our biggest market is maintained and that our airports are resilient going into the future.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): I call Maolíosa McHugh.

Mr McHugh: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. You got it right this time.

Minister, thank you for your statement. The grant schemes that have been announced so far are welcome, but they have been directed towards businesses with premises. A self-employed scheme for those who are eligible will not be available until June, so what supports are being looked at for sole traders or businesses without premises in the interim?

Mrs Dodds: I hope that that support will be resolved through the additional scheme that will be announced shortly.

Mr McGrath: Thank you, Minister, for your statement today. I echo the remarks made earlier about golf clubs. A number have contacted me, and they feel that they fall between a number of the stools. Maybe the inclusion of leisure could help them, because they also see themselves very much as tourist providers. The ones in my constituency such as Ardglass Golf Club and Royal County Down, are certainly visited by many people from outside Ireland. There are tourism businesses that do not hold rateable value, such as the Saint Patrick Centre, and there are others. Could they be considered in your deliberations about some of the businesses that might have fallen between the cracks?

Mrs Dodds: "Yes" is, again, the short answer to that one. There is such a myriad of business models and ways in which those business present themselves and interact with government and agencies in the ability to identify them. Hopefully, a scheme that is not too prescriptive but allows different businesses to apply will help in identifying businesses that, so far, have not been easily identifiable through the existing channels that we have.

Mrs Barton: Minister, thank you for your statement. My question is in regard to the small business grant. Can you confirm whether a business that pays rates on a number of properties will be entitled to an equal number of grants? I think of a business that is run under one title but has properties, perhaps, in Enniskillen, Omagh, Banbridge etc.

Mrs Dodds: The issue is brought up to me regularly. The Executive decided that the small business grant scheme and the £25,000 grant scheme would be one grant per business, irrespective of the number of outlets that that business had. That is where it is at the moment. However, I recognise the difficulties that that presents. When we see how the scheme works out, I would like to try some sort of mop-up exercise for some of the more difficult issues within the scheme and see how they can be addressed. At the moment, the guidance is clear: it is one grant per business, irrespective of the outlets that those businesses have.

Ms Bailey: I thank the Minister for her statement, and for her reminder that this is the biggest health emergency ever faced. She is absolutely right that the daily death toll from the virus is horrendous. The numbers will continue to rise for some time.

The Minister said that a small number of companies remained open, with strict social-distancing measures in place, and that she will do everything in her power to ensure that we have a safe workplace and workforce. What can the Minister do for the numerous workers, particularly from retail and the postal sector, who are given no option but to continue working? They are contacting me, in serious distress, and telling me stories about what is going on behind the scenes — in the warehouses and freezers — where we do not see on the shop floor. They are being told to share uniforms, jackets and gloves. Some postal workers are saying that they are busier than they are at Christmas. Their distribution centres are taking the overflow from Amazon, which is on a bumper bonanza, dealing with the consumerism that is going on. One postal worker asked me, "Why am I delivering new clothes to people who have got nowhere to go to wear them?".

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): The member has asked her question.

Ms Bailey: They still feel that social distancing and adequate sanitation for handwashing etc are not in place. What does the Minister have within her power to help reassure those people and make sure that they have safety?

Mrs Dodds: The member is quite right. I have said over and over again — I make no apology for saying it — that the workplace should be safe. In previous weeks, I have worked with a number of firms to resolve some of their well-known issues, as have the Health and Safety Executive and the Public Health Agency. In fairness to firms and many of our food firms, they have stepped up to the plate and spent significant amounts of money on trying to ensure that they have appropriate and safe working conditions for the people who work there. That includes looking at choke points such as the clock-in areas, the canteens, the changing areas etc.

Many firms are doing good things, particularly some of the agri-food firms that I have worked with over the past number of weeks in helping them achieve the standards that they have now, and they should be commended for that. However, we are not complacent. The message still is that you must provide a safe workplace. If you are not providing a safe workplace, the people within that workplace should take up their complaint with the Health and Safety Executive, which will investigate but also work with the workplace and business to try to ensure that the workplace is safe. They will work together to make sure that there are proper and appropriate measures in place.

I do not know the complaints — they have not come to me — but I suspect that no one should be asking people to share uniforms in this day. That should not be happening. If there are complaints, I encourage you to contact the Health and Safety Executive and make sure that those complaints are investigated. The message from me as Minister is clear: the workplace must be safe.

Mr Allister: A few weeks ago, when the Executive were publicly rowing about whether businesses should be open or closed, your response, Minister, was to announce a stakeholders' forum, which was going to bring forward the answer. Three weeks later, we still have not got the answer. Is there yet an agreed Executive position on whether a business, which can practice safe distancing, can and should be open? I ask that because, at the end of all this, we still have to have an economy. Can we, please, have direction that allows such businesses to open, conscience-free, instead of some Ministers pretending that they are inhibiting public health?

Mrs Dodds: I have already addressed the member's question but perhaps he was not in the Chamber at the time. I asked the forum to come together. It is a forum of unions and significant business representative bodies. They have worked very well on the issue and have produced guidance on workplace practices, which I will take to the Executive on Friday. They have also produced a list of essential workers. It will be for the Executive to decide how they take that forward, but we will have that discussion on Friday. I do not want to pre-empt that, but the member knows very, very clearly that I want this economy to thrive and to do well, but I want people to be safe and for their health to be looked after as well. We have to find the balance between the two, and those are the difficult choices and decisions that have to be made at the moment. Yes, there is a substantial piece of work from the forum. I thank them for that and that will be considered by the Executive on Friday.

Mr Carroll: The Minister stated that 25,000 jobs could be lost in the short term. One estimate says that there could be 100,000 job losses here in total. Does the Minister accept that the current economic strategy of over-reliance on the market, has not always worked, with getting PPE and testing being the two main issues? Does she believe that, on the other side of this crisis, we need to have a different economic approach that is not focused solely on the interests of the market or maximising private profits but on meeting human needs for food, housing and other issues. Finally, what role, if any, has her Department played to coordinate, direct and, if necessary, implore industry and businesses to do all that they can to tackle this crisis?

Mrs Dodds: I will take the last part first. I am very proud of the businesses in Northern Ireland. Many of them, such as O'Neill's, faced closure, but they repurposed and they are producing scrubs for the NHS. They are doing work that is crucial and vital to the fight against COVID-19. There are other businesses, and I think of a blinds company in Northern Ireland that is producing visors for people who work with COVID-positive patients. Companies in Northern Ireland have been doing an enormous amount of innovative work, repurposing and thinking how they can help in a very difficult crisis for them. I pay tribute to each and every one of them, including food companies and supermarkets, whose workers go out day after day to meet the public and do their job. It is very important that members make that tribute to them.

On whether I believe that there has been an over-reliance on the market, I suspect very strongly that the member and I will not agree on economic strategy, but I congratulate him on getting that into his question on this occasion. I think that the impact on jobs will be very severe and very great. That is why I am keen to try to get measures in place that will help us with economic recovery. It is why I am keen to talk to businesses about their needs and to work with Executive colleagues to have a package that will help us to recover and keep our businesses resilient in the face of a very grave crisis.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Beggs): That concludes questions on the Minister's statement. Item 4 on the agenda is the time, date and place of our next meeting. We have received confirmation from the Infrastructure Minister that she wishes to make a statement to the Ad Hoc Committee at a meeting to be held tomorrow afternoon, Thursday 16 April. We have also received confirmation from the Education Minister that he wishes to make a statement to the Ad Hoc Committee at the meeting to be held tomorrow afternoon. Formal notification has been sent by the Speaker's Office to members. That concludes this meeting of the Ad Hoc Committee. The meeting is adjourned, and I invite members to leave by the nearest door.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): Members are welcome to this meeting of the Ad Hoc Committee on the COVID-19 Response. Item 1 is the minutes of the previous meeting, which was held on the 15 April. Members are asked to note the minutes, which the Deputy Chairperson Mr Roy Beggs has agreed. Members should also note that the minutes of evidence from that meeting will be published later today in the Official Report and will be available on the Committee's web page.

Item 2 is a statement from the Minister for Infrastructure. The Speaker's Office received notification on 9 April that the Minister wished to make a statement to the Ad Hoc Committee at today's meeting. A copy of the statement that the Minister intends to deliver is included in members' packs. I welcome the Minister for Infrastructure to the Committee meeting. I also welcome Mrs Katrina Godfrey, permanent secretary of the Department for Infrastructure, who is accompanying the Minister today. I invite the Minister to make her statement, which, as members know, should be heard without interruption. Following the statement, there will be an opportunity for members to ask questions.

Ms Mallon (The Minister for Infrastructure): Thank you, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker. I am grateful for the opportunity to update the Ad Hoc Committee today.

This is not an easy time for any of us. It is an unimaginable time for all those families who have lost loved ones to COVID-19 and who are denied by the same virus the traditional way of saying goodbye, which we have known and drawn comfort from for generations. I begin today by sending my heartfelt condolences to every one of those families. I know that I speak for all of us in the Chamber when I say that we are with you and that you are in our prayers.

The challenges that we are facing due to coronavirus cannot be underestimated. The words "crisis", "emergency" and "pandemic" are now everyday language, but this is not everyday life. While we are dealing with the chaos, the pain and the suffering, we must also be strong and have hope that this extraordinarily difficult time will not last forever.

I am proud to stand here as a citizen of this place. Thanks to the efforts made and the leadership shown across our community, we have seen positive signs that our health service is coping and that social-distancing measures are working. We cannot be complacent, however. As my colleague the Minister of Health has continued to stress, we must — all of us — continue to play our part, because each of our individual actions will determine the future for our community. It is a huge responsibility, and one that I know that the people of Northern Ireland are prepared to bear.

I wish to update members on my actions to deliver on my responsibilities as your Minister for Infrastructure. I am clear that addressing the unique challenges presented by coronavirus requires us all to work together towards the common goals of protecting the health and well-being of our healthcare workers and citizens and, crucially, of saving lives.

I welcome the opportunity to provide an update to members on the ways in which my Department is contributing to the fightback against COVID-19. I will set out clearly for members how I am doing all that I can within my remit and powers, and also by working collaboratively to support Executive colleagues, especially the Minister of Health, in our collective endeavour to support our NHS and to save lives.

I am sure that members will agree that there are few services more critical to our health and well-being than the availability of clean drinking water and the ability to treat our waste water effectively. Throughout the crisis, Northern Ireland Water has worked tirelessly to ensure that those services continue. That has involved prioritising essential work and changing work practices to ensure that social-distancing rules are adhered to. I know that keeping staff and customers safe has been a key focus of Northern Ireland Water. Northern Ireland Water's front-line workers are undertaking essential maintenance and repair work to make sure that our water keeps flowing and our drains do not get blocked. I encourage the public to show them support. They deserve our respect and our thanks.

Northern Ireland Water is also doing what it can to support its customers. I am pleased to be able to announce that Northern Ireland Water will not implement the increase in tariffs planned for April and will hold off on this until October at the earliest. The company will also defer issuing bills until July at the earliest. This will create a short-term cash flow problem for Northern Ireland Water, but I am putting arrangements in place to resolve this within my current budget cover.

More concerning, however, is the very sudden loss of income from the non-domestic sector as a result of this crisis, which will not be recovered. This is creating a serious gap in Northern Ireland Water's operating budget that must be met. I have already raised this matter with the Minister of Finance and Executive colleagues and will continue to work with them to find a resolution that manages this risk, protecting this vital service and protecting our communities from COVID-19.

I turn now to the issue of connectivity. The need for connectivity at a time when we are separated has never been greater. Now, more than ever, it is so very important that we continue to manage and maintain our transport network. We must ensure that emergency services can be kept moving and that key workers, including healthcare staff, equipment and supplies can travel safely or be transported to where the need is greatest.

Our ports and airports, the key gateways into the North, are struggling during this crisis to maintain air and sea connectivity. The ban on non-essential travel, which is needed to fight this pandemic, means that passenger numbers have plummeted. In addition, as non-essential businesses close, the downturn in manufacturing production has also had a significant impact on our hauliers and ferry operators. These sectors are interconnected. We rely on our ports, ferry companies, hauliers and airports to ensure that supply chains are maintained. If we fail to maintain resilience in those supply chains, it will impact each and every one of us, and it could impact our ability to restore our economy when the health emergency recedes.

I assure members that I am doing everything that I can to ensure that our ports, ferry companies, hauliers and airports receive the support that they need so that they can continue to provide the connectivity and the critical supply chains that we need, especially between here and GB.

As well as working on a cross-departmental basis, in particular with the Economy and Agriculture Ministers, I have been engaging with my counterparts in Wales and Scotland, with the result that we have been able to set out a clear and compelling and shared case to the Secretary of State for Transport for intervention to support supply chains. I am also continuing to engage with my counterpart in the South, as we need to maintain the critical supply of food and, in particular, oxygen through Dublin port.

As well as focusing on ferry links, we are very much focusing on the needs of our hauliers so that they can stay in operation and are able to maintain the supply of critical goods for us and ensure that essential trade from here to GB and from Dublin to the North can continue. As I have said several times, information sharing and cooperation across these islands is key in the fight against COVID-19.

In addition, members will be aware of changes that I have made to the requirements relating to drivers' hours to secure and maintain deliveries and movement of all important goods that people in our communities, in particular vulnerable people, need at this time. This temporary relaxation of the rules reflects the current exceptional circumstances that we find ourselves in, and it must only be used where necessary. I will continue to keep the position under constant review and will ensure that measures are taken to extend the relaxation further if required, while making sure that the balance is maintained between relaxation and road safety as we protect our community at this difficult time.

Our public transport network continues to play a key role in facilitating essential travel, including for many in our health and social care sector at this difficult time. It is for that reason that the public transport network continues to operate, albeit in a reduced capacity. Translink has introduced working practices to ensure that all staff who attend work can follow social-distancing guidelines. Gloves and hand sanitisers are being provided to all front-line staff and protective screens have been fitted to all buses in use. All staff carrying out cleaning duties are trained to follow a safe system of work, and I am assured that they are given the correct personal protective equipment (PPE).

As a small token of our appreciation for the life-saving work that our healthcare colleagues are delivering, I have introduced free public transport for health workers during the COVID-19 outbreak. Translink continues to engage with all the health and social care trusts by offering assistance for any transport-related services, including passenger transport or delivery services. This has been well received by all the trusts and is providing important support to our workers while they face unprecedented pressures.

In relation to ensuring connectivity across the region for key workers and goods, I have supported the Rathlin ferry operator and the local community on Rathlin to ensure that essential goods, services and support continues to be provided to the island.

Community transport operators have also been contributing to wider efforts to support the vulnerable. I have been heartened to see how community transport operators have transitioned their services to assist with the delivery of prepaid groceries, prescriptions, food parcels or fulfilling essential journeys, and I am pleased that, with the support of Minister Poots, I have been able to support them in doing that.

The outbreak of COVID-19 has caused significant challenges and changes to a wide range of businesses, and the taxi industry is no exception. The regulations introduced by the Health Minister allow taxis to continue to operate but they do so in a context where only essential travel is permitted, and I know that taxi drivers are facing real challenges. My announcement last week provides for the automatic renewal, without prior testing, of taxi vehicle licences that were due to expire during the current emergency. That will ensure that those vehicles can remain on the road during this period. It is a temporary measure to reflect the exceptionally challenging times of this current pandemic.

My officials are also working urgently with officials in the Department for Transport to find a quick solution to licences that require medical assessment. As soon as I am in a position to update members and affected drivers, I can reassure you that I will immediately do so.

At the same time, I have been encouraging other ministerial colleagues to respond to the needs of taxi drivers and operators with clear health and safety guidance on keeping drivers and customers safe, and to explore opportunities for the sector to repurpose its services to play a wider role in supporting those who are being shielded or who are vulnerable. I will continue to work with Ministers to ensure that we do all that we can as an Executive to assist taxi drivers, who are a key part of our transport network and should be supported at this time.

The need to avoid non-essential travel and maintain social distancing, in line with Government advice, has also made it necessary for me, and all other Ministers, to prioritise services and determine which departmental functions should be significantly reduced or stopped during this emergency period. In determining which services to prioritise, I have reflected the need to stop the spread of the virus and save lives and the need to support those working to keep us safe and keep our critical supply chains open and to protect livelihoods. A further consideration is to ensure that we keep a focus on the work needed to avoid unnecessary problems or difficulties that could divert the emergency services or disrupt necessary travel, while maintaining support for the most vulnerable in our communities.

In common with other Departments, my Department is ensuring that staff who can work from home are not required to be in the workplace. Where a job can be done from home, my senior team has made it clear that staff are expected to work from home, and I am pleased to report that that is happening.

We have also moved a number of our services online, including the DVA's driver licensing renewal service. There are, however, some services that people rely on and that simply cannot be delivered from home, including essential works on our transport, water and sewerage infrastructure. Where staff have to come into the workplace or onto a site to perform an essential role, all necessary steps are being taken to protect them. That includes ensuring that there is adequate social distancing and that appropriate personal protection equipment is made available and used in line with the relevant guidance.

In order to protect staff and to enable my Department to focus resources on responding to the COVID-19 pandemic, a number of departmental functions and services that could not be considered essential have been stopped or significantly reduced. I have suspended parking charges for DFI-operated on-street parking and parking enforcement, with a small team retained to respond to illegal parking that is unsafe or blocking access to or for emergency or essential services, and driver and vehicle testing for all but emergency or essential services has also been temporarily suspended. Reducing or stopping those services has meant that we can refocus some of our efforts to support our health trusts in the fight against COVID-19. I assure members, however, that I understand the inconvenience that that presents and that this situation is being kept under regular review in line with public health advice.

Turning to planning, I will highlight some of the steps that I have taken to ensure that our regional planning system continues to function effectively. Thus far, I have issued letters to councils urging a relaxed and positive approach to enforcement, specifically on essential deliveries and pubs, restaurants and cafes that are providing takeaway services during this emergency period.

My officials have also provided information and advice to all 11 councils on the ongoing operation of the planning system through this time. We in my Department will continue to play our part by progressing the statutory casework that we handle, including notified and called-in planning applications, and by discharging our responsibilities on councils' development plans.

I also hope shortly to bring forward a legislative amendment to the Assembly that, subject to Members' agreement, would temporarily remove the requirement to hold a public event as part of the pre-application community consultation for major planning applications. To support that, I propose to issue guidance for applicants and councils on appropriate replacement measures to ensure that public participation in the process is not compromised.

I am also aware that the operation of council planning committees has been impacted. My officials have moved quickly to approve amended schemes of delegation to reduce the number of applications that would be required to go before planning committees. They have also been liaising with officials in the Department for Communities who are working to prepare regulations concerning the meetings of councils that would, if agreed, enable committees to operate effectively during this time.

I assure members that, in planning and right across my Department's functions, we will continue to work closely with other jurisdictions, councils and planning stakeholders to explore the obstacles and the temporary solutions that are needed to get us through this period.

Throughout this period, I have maintained a focus not only on the responsibilities of my own Department, but on how it can make its skills and resources available to support others, particularly those in our health service. Through the use of DVA vehicle test centres in Belfast and Newtownards to date, I am proud to have been able to support the Health Minister in helping to rapidly increase testing to help save lives.

My Department has also provided storage space at depots in Dungannon and Craigavon for use as required by the Southern Health and Social Care Trust. That has freed up much-needed space in Craigavon Area Hospital and has provided a local, secure and accessible facility for the daily transfer of supplies. A further approach for storage space in the greater Belfast area has been received from our health service colleagues, and we will do whatever we possibly can to assist in meeting their needs. I have provided access to free parking at Crumlin Road Gaol for healthcare workers who are based at the Mater Hospital, and, from last Friday, I also opened up access to the site at the gaol for the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust to facilitate decontamination of ambulances and disposal of contaminated PPE material.

I want to put on record my appreciation to all the staff in my Department. From the beginning of this crisis, they have worked tirelessly to find solutions to the new challenges that this virus continually presents. We are all in this together and, in my Department, we will continue to do all that we can to support the work of Minister Swann and our healthcare heroes as they put their lives on the line to save ours.

In closing, there is no doubt that these are incredibly challenging times. Sadly, it is likely that, in the days ahead, it will get even more difficult. However, we must continue to work together and support each other to ensure that we continue to deliver for all of those who rely on our public services. Together we can get through this, and never before has the message been so clear to the people of Northern Ireland to stick together while staying apart. My message to everyone at home is that all of us can and must play our part. The advice is clear: stay at home to save lives. By looking out for each other, we will get through this, we will recover from it and we will be stronger as one community for it.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): I thank the Minister for her statement. There are a few housekeeping rules, members. I will allow around an hour for questions to the Minister. As this is a Committee meeting and not a plenary meeting of the Northern Ireland Assembly, it is appropriate for the Minister, if she wishes, to seek answers from the permanent secretary as well as providing answers herself. There are 21 members listed to ask a question. Therefore, it is very important that members ask a single, focused question that relates to the Minister's statement. The one exception that will be made is for the Chairperson of the Committee, whom I now call.

Miss McIlveen (Committee Chair - Committee for Infrastructure): I welcome the Minister's statement and congratulate her, the Department, Translink and Northern Ireland Water for stepping up and doing all that they can during this difficult time. I also want to place on record my condolences to the families who have lost loved ones and to pay tribute to the key workers who continue to serve our community.

In regard to the haulage sector, the Minister refers to connectivity and protecting critical supply chains. Is she satisfied that everything that can be done is being done to increase the maximum permitted authorised weights for vehicles, and, most importantly, is she working with others to provide the urgent financial support that hauliers require to ensure the continuity of our medical and food supplies?

I will turn to planning. I appreciate that the Minister has outlined some of the things that she plans to do. Does she intend to introduce measures to extend planning permissions that are approaching the expiry of the time limit for development, similar to the provisions in schedule 7(8) of the Coronavirus (Scotland) Act, which provides for permissions that are due to expire within six months to be automatically extended by 12 months?

Ms Mallon: I thank the Chair for her questions. In terms of the hauliers' situation, the member will be aware that we have brought forward a number of relaxations on enforcement of drivers' hours. We have also extended MOTs for lorries and relaxed rules around deliveries of stores to try to assist. The one area that we are still exploring is the one that she highlighted about weight. We are actively considering that and working with the sector on it.

In terms of the package, the member is absolutely right. Our hauliers are critical in ensuring that we have a secure supply of food, medicines, PPE and other vital supplies. I have been in very regular contact with the Department for Transport in England. We have fed very closely into Northern Ireland's business case for a financial package for our ferry operators and hauliers, and we are hopeful that that is being actively considered by Treasury at the moment. We are hopeful that they will recognise the critical impact that it will have here. I assure the member that I will continue to make representations to Ministers in England and continue to work with my colleagues in Scotland and Wales and in the South, because the member may be aware that we are wholly reliant on Dublin port for our access to oxygen. While we are not in a position to know when a package will be announced, I am very hopeful that we will get there very soon. We have pressed on the Department for Transport and on Treasury that time is of the essence and that we need intervention urgently.

Mr Boylan: I thank the Minister for her statement and I welcome the measures that she has introduced to date. I want to take her back to the issue of taxis. She mentioned medical assessment, but there is also the issue of periodic training and the certificate of professional competence (CPC). Obviously, the taxi industry is very anxious at the minute because people are waiting to renew their licence. Will she give a commitment to resolve this matter as soon as possible and will she agree that the taxi industry needs a cash injection as well?

Ms Mallon: I thank the member for his question. As the member will know, we had to bring in new legislation to extend the PSV provisions. It took longer than I would have liked, but it was a much more complex issue than just issuing temporary exemption certificates (TECs).

The issue of medical assessments is presenting a particular problem because, rightly, our healthcare workers and GPs are very much focused on the fightback against COVID-19. I assure members that we are working urgently to try to find a solution to that problem. I recognise that it is a difficulty, and, if legislative change is required here, I will do it. I am very much focused on finding a solution.

The member asked about training. As he will know, 35 hours of training are required over a five-year period. A number of the trainers have developed online versions of the training and I encourage drivers to take that up. The member may also be aware that DVA made an announcement that it is content that no enforcement action will be taken against drivers whose CPC expires between 1 March 2020 and 30 September 2020. I also anticipate that that is likely to have to be reviewed again in due course given that so many elements of the training and licensing process have been impacted as a result of this crisis. I assure you on that front.

There is no doubt that the taxi industry has been hit hard by this. I have been working with Executive colleagues and we pushed the UK Government for a financial package for the self-employed, but there are flaws with that in terms of the time it takes to access it. I am also very cognisant of the fact that there are a number of drivers who cannot avail themselves of that. The Ministers who take the lead on financial support for those whose livelihoods have been hit are the Minister of Finance, the Minister for the Economy and the Minister for Communities. I assure members that I have been raising this issue with them. They are aware of it and are keen to explore the options.

Mr Durkan: I thank the Minister for her statement, for the leadership that she has shown throughout this very difficult period and for the many actions that her Department has taken. The fact that it has done so much is reflected in the length of her statement.

I will take the Minister back to taxis. Mr Boylan raised the issue. Taxi drivers have undoubtedly been hit hard by this crisis. There is an obvious lack of fares and, to many drivers, there also seems to be a lack of fairness. Taxis have always been a valuable service but now, in many instances, they are literally a lifeline. The Minister referred to her officials working with the Department for Communities, which I understand takes the lead on redeployment. She also quite rightly pointed out that the Department for the Economy has a role. Will the Minister provide us with an update on what work the Executive as a whole are doing to support the taxi industry at this time?

Ms Mallon: I thank the member for his question. I was conscious of the length of the statement and I assure the member that we had to take a number of action points out because officials in my Department have worked so hard. They have worked so hard with officials in DAERA, the Department of Finance, the Department for Communities and officials right across the Executive. On the issue of taxis, yes, I am responsible for the regulatory side of things, and I laid out in the statement a number of actions that we have taken to resolve issues. There are still some other issues, and we are working to resolve those. The issue of financial assistance falls to Executive colleagues, and I know that they are looking at the matter. I have written to them, and they have responded. Collectively, the Executive, are very conscious of the financial difficulties facing the taxi industry.

I have always thought, from the beginning of the crisis, when we started to see the scale it, that the real solution for both the taxi industry and the most vulnerable in our society is around the repurposing of the taxi industry: redeployment so that they can deliver pre-paid groceries — we know that that is a problem for supermarkets — or medicines from community pharmacies and so forth. I still firmly believe that there are huge opportunities in that area, and I know that the Minister for Communities is exploring options with local government to see what we can do there. I have made the commitment that my officials are keen to work. There are no regulatory barriers to redeployment, so it is something that I will continue to work on with Executive colleagues and local government to try to progress.

Given the severity of the situation and the fact that taxis have been listed as an essential service under the regulations and that the public are being told not to engage in travel unless it is essential, the taxi industry, by its very nature, will have to adapt during this period. Be assured that I am doing what I can on the regulatory side but am also working proactively with ministerial colleagues who have responsibilities in other areas so that we can provide the support that the taxi industry needs and deserves at this really difficult time.

Mr Beggs: I thank the Minister for her statement and for keeping the Assembly up to date on relevant issues. Minister, you referred in your statement to last week's decision to enable taxi vehicle licences to be renewed automatically without prior testing. Prior to that, MOTs were given extensions as a result of COVID-19 and, indeed, as a result of faulty lifts earlier in the year. Some of those MOT extensions are coming to an end. Can you assure those drivers that they, too, will be given renewals so that they can keep their vehicles on the road? That will apply to many key workers.

Ms Mallon: I can give the member that assurance. My Department has done considerable work to ensure that we are in a position where, if the need arises for further temporary exemption certificates to be issued to motorists, that will be the case. It is important to say that the trigger for that remains that the customer has to book the MOT appointment, which will automatically trigger the TEC, if a secondary TEC is required. I make the point that we have to encourage people to make that booking in the first place.

The member will know that, as a result of this crisis, the Department moved to issue temporary exemption certificates to four-year-old vehicles. That was not the case previously. The other outstanding issue concerned taxi drivers and the PSV, and we have now resolved that. We are conscious that, as time goes on, certain customers will have to see a further extension of their TEC, and we are putting all the necessary arrangements in place.

Mr Muir: I thank the Minister for her statement, and I echo the words of other members in passing condolences to those who have lost loved ones as a result of the COVID-19 crisis. The terrible human impact on everyone is something that we need to keep in our minds.

I really appreciate the update you have provided, Minister, in relation to logistics. That is a key issue. There are logistics companies in my constituency that have built up their business over many years and family generations and now face financial ruin, so it is really important that support is given, particularly by the Department for Transport. We look forward to an update on that, and I appreciate the work that you are doing on it.

My question is about Translink, and I declare for the record that I was previously an employee of Translink. It has been reported that Translink will potentially need £100 million to continue. The fares revenue of the company has plummeted and is now very low, although services are still operating. I am really grateful to the staff for continuing to operate those services, but the patronage has gone down. What are the plans in the short and medium terms to safeguard the future of Translink as a public transport operator in Northern Ireland?

Ms Mallon: I thank the member for raising that issue. It is very important. As you point out, Translink already had financial difficulties from having to dip into its reserves over a number of years. That has been profoundly escalated as a result of the COVID-19 crisis. We have seen a dramatic reduction of 90% to 95% in passengers across bus and rail that has brought with it a dramatic reduction in income. You are absolutely right: the financial pressures and the hole that is emerging in Translink are deeply worrying.

Members will also know that the Finance Minister announced a COVID-19 budget. There was no allocation to DFI in that, but money has been held in the centre, and I have received assurances from the Finance Minister that money will be forthcoming in recognition of the very difficult financial situation that Translink finds itself in as a result of the pandemic. The fundamental question, though, for all of us in this is this: do we as an Executive and as an Assembly believe in having a publicly owned public transport network? That is the fundamental question that we will have to address, and it is recognition of the fact that our public transport network is essential at this moment in time in transporting our key workers and our healthcare workers to and from work. It will be essential in our economic recovery, and it is, of course, essential in the other global crisis that we all face: the climate emergency. I welcome the assurances from the Finance Minister that there will be further allocations in the COVID-19 budget, and I think that Translink is a compelling case for that. I believe that that is, rightly, recognised by all Executive colleagues.

Mr Hilditch: I thank the Minister for her statement. There is some great work going on in transportation and in infrastructure.

Minister, you pointed out in your statement the importance of various networks of connectivity and transport at this time. What guidance and discussions have there been for companies that would assist the roads section of the Department in maintaining the road network at this time, particularly on the essential road maintenance programme?

Ms Mallon: Our officials are in close contact with those who have contracts for that work. Obviously, we have responsibility for our staff, and we have been clear that, where work is not deemed to be essential, it should not take place. Where it is deemed to be essential and has to be on-site, social distancing guidance must be adhered to and PPE must be given to our staff because their safety is paramount. We are also working with contractors who can assure us that they can apply all that guidance and have those supports and protections for their workers. Others say that they are struggling and finding it difficult to do that, and we are working with them as closely as we can, because, above everything else, the safety of workers and of the public is absolutely paramount. There is nothing that comes before it.

Ms Anderson: I thank the Minister for her statement. I commend the front-line workers in your Department who are supplying us with clean, safe drinking water and making sure that the sewerage systems operate and those in Translink who transport the essential workers. I want to mark that down as well.

I was contacted a few weeks ago by workers who were concerned about PPE in relation to your Department, so I acknowledge what you have said today about ensuring that that is all now in place. Have you been in touch with the trade unions to make sure that those workers are comfortable and confident with the protections that are in place and feel reassured that, with the PPE that is now in place, the protection will continue into the future as we live through this awful pandemic?

Ms Mallon: I thank the member for her kind comments about our front-line staff. They are doing tremendous work. It might sound glib, but it is true that not all heroes wear capes, so I thank her for her recognition of that.

Yes, I have been engaging with the unions; in fact, I have a teleconference, I think, with NIPSA on Friday — you lose track of days in the middle of all this — to talk about these issues just to give reassurances. I want to add to the tribute that you paid to our front-line workers. I do not want to single out any group, because, in my Department, there are so many people doing tremendous work, but I think of our Translink workers, who are going out to their daily work to transport our essential key workers. Over and beyond that, they have redeployed their services across our health trusts so that they can transport staff to and from hospital sites. They are giving over car parking free to health workers who work in hospitals and have to stay in hotels at night. Members of Unite, the union for Translink workers, have been donating money out of their own pockets so that they can provide toiletries to our healthcare workers who have to stay overnight in hotels and other places. That feeds into a wider analysis and into a wider discussion that we should have as an Assembly about reorientating our understanding of the value that we place on our workers across society and re-evaluating the fact that the essential workers who are seeing us through the pandemic are often the lowest paid. When we get through this and as we are getting through this, there is a discussion that we need to have as an Assembly about the types of public services that we want, the type of economy that we want and the type of society that we want.

Mr K Buchanan: The Minister referred in her statement to staff working from home etc. Are many people in your Department suffering from the virus or illness? Has homeworking been taken up?

Ms Mallon: I am not aware that we have. We have numbers who are self-isolating, and I will maybe pass your question over to the permanent secretary. We are seeing a very good uptake of homeworking. There are challenges around IT equipment — I do not think that any of us ever thought that we would be in this situation and in it so quickly — but we are trying to meet the challenges by trying to make sure that our staff at home have the essential IT equipment to do their job.

My view on this is simple: if you have to come to work but cannot carry out your work safely, the work should not be carried out until we can make sure that safety mechanisms and protections are in place. If you can work from home, we have to do absolutely everything that we can to ensure that you are able to work from home.

I will now pass over to the permanent secretary to speak about staffing figures.

Mrs Katrina Godfrey (Department for Infrastructure): To reassure the member, I can say that, like everybody else, we have staff in a number of categories. We have staff who are vulnerable and absolutely must stay at home. We have had, sadly, instances of staff who have been quite gravely ill and have been hospitalised, but the latest information is that they are making full and good recoveries. We have a fairly significant number of staff who are required to self-isolate because of symptoms in other family members. We are managing all of that. We are managing it with huge goodwill and support and with a commitment to public service from the 3,000 men and women who make up the Department. Like everybody else, we are finding new ways of working that, I suspect, we will not lose completely when we come out the other end of this.

Ms Kimmins: I thank the Minister for her statement. It was very good. I echo the comments made about all front-line workers. There is such a broad range of people among us out providing a key service.

I welcome the decision to defer water bills. The Minister will know that it is an issue that I have been raising. I am pleased to hear that, because it is important to support local businesses at a time when they are struggling, through no fault of their own, to make a lot of payments. It is good news. I just want to ask whether the deferment of water bills will also apply to those who have received a bill after COVID-19 started. If anyone has outstanding bills since the beginning of this, will theirs also be deferred?

Ms Mallon: May I check that and come back to the member to make sure that I give her an absolutely accurate answer?

Ms Kimmins: Thank you.

Mr Catney: I thank you, Minister, for your statement. I also pass on my condolences to all those who find themselves bereaved at this time because of COVID-19. It is a difficult time. There is not a chance for them to grieve properly. I thank the Minister for her kind words.

The Minister has done tremendous work, acting quickly and efficiently to deploy what resources her Department has to support citizens and industry. As well as the COVID-19 effort, in particular I welcome the offer of MOT centres for testing and as a site for ambulance cleansing. Can the Minister provide an update on what other resources have been made available and say whether Executive colleagues have taken on providing similar support to the Department of Health?

Ms Mallon: I thank the member for his question and for his kind words. In truth, I want to pay tribute to the Health staff and the staff in my Department who have worked so closely to ensure the transformation that we have seen of two of our MOT centres — Belfast and Newtownards — into much-needed COVID-19 testing centres. In fact, I was out this morning. I visited the Newtownards COVID testing centre with Minister Swann. It was amazing to see it in action; to see our front-line healthcare workers, who have been redeployed from other Departments, and the number of people who are going through. The MOT model and the COVID testing model are a perfect match for each other. We are hopeful that others will come online. I have offered all of the MOT centres right across the North to the trusts because that is important if we are to rapidly increase testing.

All of us in the Executive recognise that this is primarily a health crisis. If we are to get through it, we absolutely have to work together. Our primary concern should be that we do everything that we can individually, within our Departments and across Departments, to support our healthcare workers. Also, we are mindful that it is an economic crisis and we are working together to ensure that we get through this by working and planning together to make sure that we recover from it in the best possible way that we can.

Mr Nesbitt: I begin by echoing the sentiments expressed by Mr Durkan in terms of the leadership being shown by the Minister, not just her actions. In fact, not just her words. The tone that she has deployed in her public comments has been very important: assured and reassuring.

My question is with regard to the impact on budget lines, because the whole Executive are now taking actions that were unplanned and probably unprecedented in their scale. Mr Muir mentioned a figure for Translink, which the Minister neither confirmed nor denied. It would be useful to know what the impact is and how you think that may play into the debate, which you mentioned will follow the crisis, about what sort of public transport system we want in the future.

Ms Mallon: I thank the member for his very kind words. There is no doubt that the financial impact of COVID-19 on the Department for Infrastructure is hugely significant. At present, we are looking at a potential figure of £178 million. As Mr Muir pointed out, Translink has gone public on this. We are talking of an impact of over £100 million on Translink.

At this moment in time, none of us know the certainty about the duration of this crisis. As a Department, we are working through modelling the financial impact on Northern Ireland Water. In my statement I touched on the dramatic loss in income there, in Translink and in DVA because of the measures that we have had to take. We also have to be mindful that this comes against a backdrop in which the Department for Infrastructure, for historical reasons that I do not think it is appropriate to go into right now, was already in a difficult financial position.

I will not dress it up; I will be honest about that. There are huge challenges across all Departments. The COVID-19 budget allocations have not all been fully met and my Department is the one that is waiting. It is really important that we work together and recognise the critical importance of our waste water infrastructure and a publicly owned transport network. We should not dress it up. We are facing huge financial challenges. While we welcome interventions that might come from the UK Government, and we are reassured that more will be coming, it will never be enough. We are going to have to reorientate how we look at and finance our public services, and that debate needs to take place.

Mr Frew: I agree with the Minister and I would welcome that debate on how our public utilities are factored in and how they could invest in the infrastructure.

I thank the Minister for last week stepping in on a constituent's case about an MOT. That was greatly appreciated by me and that constituent. However, such cases seem to be a trend because I received a number yesterday and today on the same issue: when people go to fulfil their test, the MOT centres are closed and those people are not getting any documentation, either before turning up or after, with regard to an exemption certificate. I also heard today that the email system may have crashed or jammed, which means that they cannot contact the MOT centres and the organisation behind them. Can the Minister shed some light on that and investigate it after this meeting?

Ms Mallon: Yes. The member raises an important issue. I am aware of it because of contact from members and also from contact with members of the public. That is why, at the weekend, I put up a post to explain the situation with TECs and to make it straightforward. It is a cumbersome process because of the lack of automation. It is difficult trying to communicate to people that they need to book a test for a centre that is closed to be able to get a temporary exemption certificate. Given the volume of work and the impact of social distancing and working from home on our staff, it is taking much longer than we would like for hard copies of certificates to reach people's homes. There is also a bit of a delay in updating the website to enable people to check their registration to see if a TEC has issued. I know that causes concern and that people are then afraid to drive. I assure members and members of the public that, if you book your MOT test, you will automatically be issued with a temporary exemption certificate in our system.

The email system has not crashed. I wrote the email address down because I suspected that some members might ask about this. It is dva.customerservices@infrastructure-ni.gov.uk. That is the central point of contact. We checked today before I came here and I am advised that there is no backlog in that email address. The member might be referring to the fact that, over the Easter weekend, the DVA website crashed. I became aware of that and we have asked Capita for a full explanation as to how that happened. It seemed to be resolved very quickly, but it caused confusion among members of the public. We are taking steps to make sure that we do everything we can to prevent that from happening again because, now more than ever, customers are reliant on communicating with us online.

Ms Ennis: I thank the Minister and the permanent secretary for being here today. I concur with the sentiments of colleagues across the Chamber about planning. Minister, your Department needs to issue guidance to councils on that issue sooner rather than later because it is a costly and stressful exercise and applicants need reassurance.

The measure on the relaxation of drivers' hours was taken to secure the supply lines, and I understand and appreciate the reasons for that. Our drivers are on the front line making sure that our shops are stocked and that we have access to supplies. Has the Minister been engaging with the drivers and their representatives? They are under a lot of pressure at this time. Can the Minister give us assurances that they are being supported to the best of her ability?

Ms Mallon: I thank the member. My chief planner has written to all councils and is engaging with them, but if a council feels that it is not getting sufficient support from the Department, please come to me with that information and we will look at it. There must be some breakdown in communication, because I know my planning team has been very active on that front.

On the issue of lorry drivers and so forth, yes, I have been engaging with the representative bodies. We had a very successful and productive teleconference in which they were able to discuss a number of issues. It has been a very productive working partnership. The industry and its representatives have been very quick in coming to us to identify difficulties and in coming forward with suggested solutions. They have also been working with my officials very positively and proactively to resolve issues. I want to put that on record.

For me, part of this experience is about learning, and it has reinforced to me the need to do government with people, to be informed by representatives and to have a more dynamic approach to finding solutions. Engagement with the representatives of the hauliers, with the industry and with lorry drivers has been very insightful for me, and we have made a lot of progress by taking that approach. I want to maintain that approach going forward.

Ms Armstrong: I thank the Minister. I love talking about infrastructure, so I am a happy girl today. I thank you and your team. A heck of a lot of hard work has been going on through your Department. People may not see that Infrastructure has a key role in this pandemic, but it absolutely does. I also take the opportunity to pay tribute to my former colleagues in community transport who, when the tough times come along, certainly come out and represent. To get back to my question: a bit like my colleague Mike Nesbitt MLA in Strangford, I am concerned about the future of your Department. While it is working extremely hard now, filling gaps and providing a vital service, I am very concerned that, often, Infrastructure is the poor relation when it comes to funding, and, although you have a huge budget, it tends to be last on the list when key moneys are being allocated. The last thing that I want to see is Northern Ireland Water failing to meet its standards. My colleague Mr Andrew Muir MLA asked about Translink. Translink is our one public transport provider. Unlike the rest of the UK, we have one public service provider. They do not cherry-pick.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): Can I ask, Ms Armstrong, that you get to the question, please?

Ms Armstrong: Sorry. I will.

Northern Ireland Water is in the same boat. Both organisations need money, and we know that we have a Budget coming forward. What work will you be able to do to consult to maybe bring forward the integrated public transport strategy and the future of Northern Ireland Water so that neither fails?

Ms Mallon: I thank the member for her comments and her question. I will take the community transport operators first. I have been amazed and uplifted by the way in which the community transport sector has stepped up, has so quickly repurposed its services and is playing a critical role by making sure that food and medicines are going to people who are shielding and who are vulnerable. It is true community spirit in action, and I would not expect anything less from community transport. I am genuinely very heartened by it.

I also welcome the member's comments about infrastructure. I have made those comments since I took up the portfolio. It is often seen as bricks and mortar, cement and roads. Infrastructure is actually about connecting each of us to critical services and to each other. It is the bedrock upon which you build a strong economy and a connected society and how you tackle the climate emergency.

I have tried, since I took up the portfolio, to communicate it in that way and to make people see, as I did when I took up the post, how it clearly impacts on every aspect of our daily lives. From the moment that you get up in the morning and turn on your water tap to how you get to and from school or work, to whether homes are built in your area and whether factories and other employment opportunities can be progressed, it all comes down to infrastructure. I have become very passionate about it, much more passionate than I was before, and I put my hand up to that because I now realise how critical it is to each of us and our future.

Like you, I share serious concerns about the financial situation facing my Department. I had serious financial concerns prior to COVID-19, and those have dramatically escalated as a result. The first thing that the Executive and the Assembly have to do is recognise and accept the value and importance of infrastructure and what it can do to transform lives, and then we need to work together to see how we finance that. That will require having difficult conversations, but I am up for having difficult conversations. It is something that I think and hope will not fall along party lines — maybe I am being too optimistic. There are difficult issues that we must grapple with because we are talking about the essential supply of clean drinking water, the effective treatment of waste water and other public services. These things go to the very heart of our society. So, it is a conversation that I want to have with my Executive colleagues and others, and I think that we can agree on an approach to it.

Mr Humphrey: I thank the Minister for her statement. I very much welcome the Minister's collaborative approach, working across government. I have no time for politicians playing politics with these issues at this time; it is simply unacceptable when people face such a threat.

The Minister referred to front-line staff. I equally commend front-line staff in the Department for Infrastructure. As she said, they deserve our respect. As regards potential threats and intimidation of staff, what steps have the Minister and her Department taken to protect those members of staff? Can I also ask, in relation to part of the question that my colleague from Strangford, the Chair of the Infrastructure Committee, asked earlier about planning, whether the Minister intends to introduce extended planning measures similar to those introduced in Scotland?

Ms Mallon: I thank the member. There is, sadly, a problem with our front-line essential workers being subjected to abuse from others who cannot understand why they are at work. It is something that I have discussed with others. I tried to be very public in saying that we need to value, to say "Thank you" to and to appreciate our front-line workers, and I know that Executive colleagues have been doing the same. It is very important that we reinforce the message that those who are out on our roads working are doing so because they are providing essential services to all of us, and I encourage all members to help in getting that message out there.

There is no excuse for intimidation. It should not be tolerated. When you think about the fact that these people are going out and are putting themselves at risk to keep essential services running for you and me, you see that it is even more deplorable. I have to say, however, in saying that, that it is at times like this that we can see the true face of our society, and while we have a small number who may be engaged in that type of behaviour, the vast majority of people have stepped up, are working to help each other and are working together to get through this.

I apologise to Miss McIlveen, because I omitted to answer her question, so thank you for giving me a second opportunity to do so. I am aware that this is an issue, and I am aware that legislation has been introduced in Scotland. It will require primary legislation here, so we are exploring that as an option. The difficulty is that if applicants have planning permission that is imminently going to expire, the legislative option is not going to be a solution for them. One route is renewal, and, granted, they have to pay a fee for that, but that has been significantly reduced to the new fee, and we have been engaging with councils to say that, if that is the case, they should please process applications as quickly as possible. The other route is the commencement of works, but, again, it is not a straightforward situation. There is case law about what will be accepted, so there is no straightforward answer yet. However, to assure you, we are looking at a legislative option, but it just would not be a timely option, and that will not help the people who find themselves in this situation.

Ms Sheerin: I thank the Minister for her statement and echo the comments of colleagues across the Chamber in honouring the front-line workers and extending sympathies to anybody who has lost a loved one during or because of this crisis.

You would not know it today, but, for almost the entirety of this crisis, we have had a spate of good weather across the North, and that has meant that people who are furloughed or working from home have been taking the opportunity to exercise outdoors near their home. I know that the rural roads in my locality have never seen as many cyclists, walkers or runners, and, obviously, everybody is practising social distancing. Meanwhile, roads are seeing less car traffic, which leaves us in the situation where the few motorists who are still travelling might take the opportunity to speed in areas where they normally would not, which compromises road safety for all. Some measures that have been proposed to mitigate that risk include a temporary reduction of the speed limit as well as public awareness campaigns. In other countries, extra bike lanes have been put in place to allow increased space and safety for cyclists making essential journeys —.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): Could the member get to the question, please?

Ms Sheerin: I am getting there. Is the Minister considering any initiatives to improve road safety and potentially alleviate the pressure on an already stretched health service during this coronavirus outbreak?

Ms Mallon: I thank the member for her question. The Department has engaged in communications strategy for a lot of this: road safety messages as well as social-distancing messages to those who are out walking and cycling. I have been giving consideration to changing speed limits, but we have to be mindful that we have to get to the other side of this, and I do not want to add further confusion to the situation, so, at present, we are very much focused on putting out and raising, as you say, public awareness on the issue. We will continue to do that. I will engage with the PSNI again after today to get a better understanding of the speeding problem and to see whether we can work more collaboratively on that as well.

Mr O'Toole: I thank the Minister for giving us an update today. Like lots of people, I join her in paying tribute to the extraordinary effort and commitment made by people working in her Department who are out there every morning at the front line delivering services for us. She will probably agree that those people, like everybody else, will want to have access to testing for COVID-19. What conversations has she had with other Ministers, including the Health Minister, about the need to urgently scale up testing and contact tracing in Northern Ireland as part of not only managing the current peak but moving to the next stage of this crisis? In addition, has she had any conversations about the possibility of bringing in outside expertise to scale up contact tracing and testing?

Ms Mallon: I thank the member for his question. It is an important one. I am pleased to have received assurances from the Health Minister and the Chief Medical Officer on their commitment to scaling up testing and the testing regime in Northern Ireland. As I have outlined, I am very pleased that my Department is able to play its part by handing over its MOT centres to help rapidly increase testing.

I think that all of us recognise that it is very clear that the medical evidence and the facts lead us to the conclusion that we absolutely need to test, test, test and trace. It is very important that we follow the medical advice and are open to the learning that comes from it. I am happy to raise with the Minister of Health and my other Executive colleagues issues that the member has highlighted, but the overarching principle has to be that we follow the medical evidence. Nobody has anything to be threatened by or to fear from listening to a wide range of evidence, but it is also really important that we continue to work together. At this time, of all times, there is no justification for point-scoring or for a "them versus us" approach. I am committed to doing what I can with Executive colleagues and to doing all that I can in my Department to make sure that we play our part, particularly in ramping up testing.

Mr Butler: Thank you, Minister, for a very good brief. Thank you for your unstinting cooperation, especially with the Minister of Health. I am sure that he is deeply appreciative of it, as are all the people of Northern Ireland. That type of leadership promotes good community cohesion.

Minister, my question is about LGV licences. I know that I have asked you about this previously, and it is to do with medicals. It became apparent to me just this week that we have a real need to protect life, and you have said that keeping people safe is your number-one commitment. A lot of drivers who drive fire appliances and emergency vehicles have to undergo regular medical assessments, and they are perhaps going to fall foul of COVID-19 and all the fallout from it. I am just looking to see whether you have any update for us or whether you can make any commitment even to expedite and prioritise people who provide that service on the front line to attain their licence.

Ms Mallon: I can reassure the member that, while we are working to find a comprehensive solution to the medical assessment and licensing issue, priority is being given to those who require their licence for essential or emergency services. If members therefore know of drivers who, given the role that they play, require that service but are not able to get prioritised, please flag it up with me. Undoubtedly, our healthcare workers are under immense pressure, but I think that all of us recognise that we need to be doing everything that we can to ensure that we keep our essential and emergency services moving and available.

Mr McNulty: I thank the Minister for her statement and for her answers thus far. I echo the sentiments of all in the Chamber by offering my condolences to those families who have sadly been bereaved by COVID-19 and by wishing well all those who are fighting the virus, as well as the healthcare workers who are helping them to recover from it. I pay tribute to you, Minister, for your rock-solid leadership in the throes of this crisis. Well done. I also pay tribute to your Department's front-line workers, in infrastructure, transport, water and waste water treatment. Those people are out rolling up their sleeves and steering the wheels that ensure that our society's machine can keep on turning.

I welcome your Department's announcement today on non-domestic water and waste water charges. That will be a very welcome relief for many in the business community. I ask the Minister to confirm that the measures will also be available to the farming community, which has also been very hard hit by the COVID-19 pandemic.

Ms Mallon: I thank the member for his very kind words. Yes, it will apply to farmers.

Mr McNulty: Thank you.

Miss Woods: I, too, thank the Minister for her statement and for coming to the Chamber today. I also thank her for the great response time that I got on behalf of constituents. It is very much appreciated.

My question is about the possible allocation of road space during the pandemic. As we know, there has been a great reduction in the number of cars on the roads. Would the Minister be minded to look at implementing temporary cycle and pedestrian lanes for people to use, adhering to social-distancing rules, which would make it easier for people in urban and other areas to access safer areas for exercise, as other countries such as Mexico, the United States, Canada and EU cities Berlin and Budapest have done?

Ms Mallon: I thank the member for her kind words about the efficient response on constituency issues. It is important that we do not lose sight in the middle of this pandemic that we are there to serve our constituents, and I am very conscious of that and want to retain a focus on that.

I do see the merits in what the member suggests. I suppose the difficulty that we find ourselves in is that we are in the middle of a pandemic. There are pressures on our staff, and we are focusing all our efforts in responding to and planning for COVID-19. That does not mean that we do not recognise the importance of the issue that she raised. I spoke earlier about the need to reorientate and to do things differently after the crisis and not just to go back to the way it was. The issues that she has touched upon are the kind of issues that I want to be very proactive about and look at. We need to look at active travel; I committed to that before the crisis. We need to look at reshaping our space and our places so that they are people-centred.

So, it is something that I am looking at, but, in realistic terms, the ability to progress it at this time is limited in scope. However, it is something that I want to continue to progress when we get to the other side of this.

Mr Carroll: I thank the Minister for her statement. I want to raise the Minister's response to pleas from the trade unions to extend free public transport to all essential workers. I think that she said that she had no plans to do this. The move to offer public transport to health and social care workers was the right thing to do and widely accepted and praised, but I think that it is now imperative that it should be extended to those in the public sector and in retail, and those who are risking their health every day to ensure that we have food and other services. The Minister mentioned that many of those workers are low paid. They were disgracefully low paid before the crisis — now that their role has been elevated dramatically, it is clear that their pay is inadequate. It is evident for all to see.

Does the Minister have any plans to review the decision around extending free transport to all workers? She rightly paid tribute to Translink staff. Does she have any plans to review her decision around reduced daytime bus services to ensure that the drivers in particular are not unnecessarily behind the wheel for long periods of time?

Ms Mallon: On the issue of reduced services: yes, there will be further reductions in services while maintaining essential routes to make sure that our healthcare and essential workers can get to and from their places of work. We are doing a piece of analysis there, but there will be further reduction in services.

The member raises an issue that I have been grappling with, because I absolutely recognise and appreciate the role of essential workers. I am trying to weigh up the practicalities of rolling out that extension, because, for it to operate, it would mean offering free transport to everyone. It would be very difficult — it would actually be impossible — to be able to categorise workers. I am considering the unintended consequences of incentivising the use of public transport across Northern Ireland as the lockdown continues. People might want to avail themselves of public transport and, because it would be free, come out and use it unnecessarily.

I can assure the member that, in principle, it is something that I would be very supportive of, but, as a Minister, I have to think through the intended and unintended consequences of my actions. I am keeping the situation under review.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): I thank the Minister for her statement and the answers to the questions.

In accordance with precedence that was established at the first meeting of the Committee, we have around nine minutes left for questions. If members have any pressing questions that they wish to ask the Minister, they should rise in their place. If not, we can set the Minister free. No further questions? The answers were comprehensive, Minister, so congratulations.

That concludes questions on the statement. We will now have a brief suspension of 10 minutes prior to the statement from the Minister of Education. I remind members of the rules about social distancing. Please use the door nearest to you when exiting the Chamber. Thank you.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): Order, members. Item 3 is a statement from the Minister of Education. The Speaker's Office received notification on 15 April that the Minister wished to make a statement to the Ad Hoc Committee at today's meeting. A copy of the statement that the Minister intends to deliver is included in your pack. I welcome the Minister of Education to the Committee meeting and invite him to make his statement, which should be heard by members without interruption. Following the statement, there will be an opportunity for members to ask questions.

Mr Weir (The Minister of Education): Perhaps I should start by passing on my condolences, as other members have, to those who have lost their lives in recent days with this terrible virus.

I welcome the opportunity to update members on decisions that I have taken to ensure that young people in Northern Ireland, who were due to complete their GCSE, AS and A-level qualifications this summer, will be awarded grades that will enable them to move on to the next stage of their lives.

On 19 March, the First Minister and deputy First Minister announced a radical package of measures that the Executive were taking to deal with the unprecedented challenges facing our society as a result of the COVID-19 outbreak. Amongst many other things that included the closure of schools from Friday 20 March for an unspecified period, something which is, in itself, unprecedented.

With schools closed and young people unable to complete all the work that is required for this year's public examination series, it was vital that consideration was given to how best to provide certainty to the system, particularly for those who were entered for examinations, as soon as practicably possible. I am very aware of the importance of those exams for the future of the young people who have been working so hard towards them. However, it was clear from the point at which the decision to close the schools was made that it would be very unlikely that the examinations could take place as scheduled. Therefore, following engagement with, and in line with ministerial colleagues in England and Wales, I announced on 19 March that GCSE, AS and A-level exams would not proceed.

From that point on, my priority was to ensure that we put in place a robust process that would provide the young people who are affected with fair and equitable results. Those results should reflect their hard work and effort. Equally, they should enable them to make judgements and decisions about the next stage in their education, training and employment. I am sure that everyone will agree that it is important that the 2020 cohort of students are not disadvantaged in comparison with those who went before them or those who will come after them.

Over the past few weeks, my officials have been working with the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment (CCEA) to develop a process that has fairness at its core; to the young people whose lives will be impacted by the current circumstances, to the teachers who have supported those young people along their journey and share their joys and disappointments, and to the families of those young people who are undoubtedly anxious about the potential impact that the situation may have on their children's future. The Department has received a number of queries from pupils, parents and teachers, who are all anxious to know what will happen. Today, I will provide the certainty that they seek about the process for awarding A-level, AS-level and GCSE qualifications.

I am also mindful that many young people in schools have been able to access a wide range of vocational qualifications through the entitlement framework, and they, too, seek certainty. While I cannot provide that certainty today, I can assure members that we are working closely with officials in the Department for the Economy who lead on vocational qualifications policy. Collectively, we are very aware of the need to ensure that the young people who are taking those qualifications are, likewise, not disadvantaged. The Minister for the Economy will provide clarity on those qualifications in the next few weeks.

I have a detailed paper from CCEA that sets out a series of options for each of the qualifications that are under consideration. CCEA had undertaken an options appraisal, which included testing each of the options against four criteria: fairness; burden reduction; impact limitation; and minimising uncertainty. That advice was carefully considered by my officials and me, and subsequently tested with advisers in the Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI).

As part of the process to develop proposals that would have the confidence of the education system, my officials consulted with representatives of head teachers and teaching unions, as well as other education stakeholders. I want to thank those organisations for their constructive engagement in these difficult circumstances. I have taken their views into account in arriving at my decisions. While I am sure that not everybody will agree with everything, I am hopeful that my decisions will continue to have the support of the education system. Everyone recognises that there is no perfect solution, but I am confident that we now have a process that will lead to our young people being awarded the results that they merit and which will enable them to progress to the next stage of their lives, whether that be on to further education or training or into the world of work.

Teachers, in particular, will have a key role to play in the alternative form of assessment. I will come to the detail of that in a minute. I believe that it is the right approach to take: who knows better the aptitudes, abilities and educational achievements of those young people than their teachers, who have guided them through the past few years on their educational journey? I want to pay tribute to all of our teachers for the way in which they have adapted to the current circumstances and for making every effort to ensure that teaching and learning continue in the best way possible. I also thank them in advance for helping to implement the arrangements that we are now putting in place for awarding qualifications to ensure that their students are able to progress.

Northern Ireland has an open qualifications market, which means that learners can choose qualifications offered by a range of examination bodies across England, Wales and Northern Ireland. The GCSE and A-level brands also operate on a three-country basis. Scotland is in a slightly different position. Therefore, it is important, to ensure continued comparability and portability of these qualifications, that we are aligned, as far as possible, with the arrangements in England and Wales, while recognising that the approach also needs to reflect policy differences. I believe that the decisions taken provide for the appropriate alignment while also being in the best interests of young people in Northern Ireland.

Although 98% of young people in Northern Ireland's schools take CCEA GCSEs and 87% take CCEA A levels, a small number take qualifications offered by English and Welsh examining boards. Those qualifications will be subject to the arrangements in the respective jurisdictions. The Office of Qualifications and Examinations Regulation (Ofqual) and Qualifications Wales have published guidance on their website setting out the relevant arrangements.

In relation to the qualifications offered by CCEA, which are taken by the vast majority of students, I can confirm that I have instructed CCEA as follows. Young people due to complete their full GCSE, AS and A-level qualifications will be issued a set of results this summer in order to allow them to progress to further study or employment. Unit-level results will not be provided to young people due to take a GCSE qualification module.

I will cover each of the four main general public examination series in turn, starting with A levels. Students due to complete an A level this year will, in the absence of examinations, receive a calculated grade. The grade will be based on a combination of teacher professional judgement, which includes grading and rank ordering by schools, and proven statistical modelling. This statistical modelling will also include a value-added element to take account of the impact that resits would normally have had on final A-level outcomes — these are AS-level resits that have already taken place. Students will not be required to take A-level examinations through an additional sitting such as an autumn series. However, if they wish to sit examinations, there will be the opportunity to do so in the summer of 2021. Effectively, those examinations would be in the form of resits.

In Northern Ireland, AS qualifications are not only stand-alone qualifications but contribute to A-level qualifications when combined with what are known as the A2 exams. For this year, the AS level in 2020 will be decoupled from the A2 A level. Therefore, those due to complete an AS level will receive a calculated grade. However, this will not contribute towards the awarding of an A level in the summer of 2021. The AS grade in 2020 will be calculated using a combination of teacher professional judgement, involving grading and rank ordering by schools, and pupils' prior performance, including GCSE mean scores.

In summer 2021, students who continue on to the A2 will have two options. They can choose to sit only the relevant A2 papers in the summer of 2021. In that case, the A level will be awarded on the basis of those papers, with the AS component treated as a missing paper. The marks will be retrospectively calculated using recognised statistical modelling. The process is one normally used when a student is, for example, unable to sit a paper due to illness or other unforeseen circumstances, so this is something that has been used in the past.

Alternatively, a student may choose to sit both AS and A2 papers to achieve an overall A-level grade. In this case, the AS component will be calculated using statistical modelling, as in the first option. Very importantly, I want to make clear that the overall A-level grade will be awarded on the basis of the higher of the two marks for the AS component: the actual performance in the paper or the calculated mark.

Young people who are completing components for their GCSE qualification and are due to complete those qualifications in 2020 — generally speaking, year 12 pupils — will receive a calculated grade. This will be based on a combination of teacher professional judgement, including grading and rank ordering by schools, and the average centre performance over the past three summer series.

Finally, in relation to GCSE units, which are otherwise known as modules, GCSEs in Northern Ireland are modular and so enable students to take exams for units making up the full qualification at different times over the two-year course of study. Some continue to take all units at the end of the second year, but many year 11 students were due to take a number of units this year.

For those students taking units that will not lead to the completion of the GCSE qualification this year, no grades will be issued or awarded this year. Those learners will participate in the summer 2021 series and, for each GCSE, they will have the following options. Those learners not entered for any modules in a given GCSE in summer 2020 should aim to sit, as originally planned, the elements of the relevant GCSE in the next academic year, which could include some units being taken in November, January or March as part of the normal 2020-21 examination series.

Those learners entered for part of a GCSE in 2020, but not due to complete the qualification, will have two options in the next academic year. They may choose to sit only the outstanding units of their qualification, with the remaining units being treated as missed papers and marks calculated on the basis of the units taken in 2021, again using recognised statistical modelling to arrive at an overall calculated grade. Alternatively, students may choose to sit all units of their GCSE qualifications in the normal 2020-21 examination timetable. Calculated marks for the units for which they were entered in summer 2020 will also be generated. Again, the higher mark achieved for those units, either the calculated mark or the actual performance, will be used to arrive at the overall GCSE grade.

I appreciate that this is all very complex and technical in nature — members may realise that I have taken quite a long time to absorb it all myself — but CCEA will be providing more detailed advice and guidance to schools, parents and young people as a matter of urgency and has also published answers to frequently asked questions on the CCEA website.

In all the discussion of these options, I was conscious to keep learners at the centre of any solution. I believe that the solution that I have outlined does just that. It provides flexible options where possible to ensure that learners, particularly those in years 11 and 13, are not overburdened. Nevertheless, they do have the option of sitting exams for all parts of their qualifications if they so choose.

As I said earlier, teachers are a crucial part of this process. We will be relying on them for the information needed to arrive at calculated grades. Schools have a wealth of information to evidence the achievements of their students, including demonstrating progress over the current academic year. I am confident that they will be able to work with CCEA to provide students with fair and robust results. Again, I want to thank every teacher for their support in this process.

What are the next steps that need to be taken? First, CCEA will be issuing detailed guidance to schools, parents and young people highlighting the arrangements that I have just outlined. That will include more detail on the information that schools will have to provide to begin the process of collating the relevant information at the end of May. CCEA will provide advice and support for teachers as required.

CCEA is also developing an appeals mechanism that will be as robust as possible. While it will not be possible to review marking in the normal way, it is nonetheless important that young people are able to appeal if they feel that the process has not been applied appropriately in their case. CCEA will take into account the steps that Ofqual and Qualifications Wales are taking in developing an appeals mechanism. As with normal processes, there will also be an opportunity for students to take examinations in summer 2021 should they wish to.

There are a number of other issues that need to be finalised, and work is continuing apace. For example, I will be considering a number of matters relating to data collection, an issue that is likely to be handled at UK level to ensure consistency of approach. In any examination process, confidentiality is paramount in producing robust and reliable outcomes. This process requires teachers to maintain that confidentiality, and they cannot share examination assessments with parents or pupils in advance of submitting those assessments to CCEA. Parents and pupils should not ask for, nor expect to receive, this information. Teachers have a complex task ahead of them, and they must be offered the opportunity to assess pupil performance objectively and holistically.

Another issue on which work is ongoing is in relation to private candidates. Those are students who have not been taught in school; they might be home-schooled, following distance learning programmes, or studying independently. Where a school or a centre has accepted entries from private candidates — that would often be from adults doing GCSEs or A levels — those students should be included in the data provided by the school where the head of centre, generally the principal, is confident that they and their staff have seen sufficient evidence of the young person's achievement to make an objective judgement.

CCEA is exploring whether there are alternative options for the small number of students who do not have an existing relationship with a school. Being honest, it may not be possible to find an acceptable solution for every private candidate.

Finally, I am confident that results in England, Wales and Northern Ireland will issue on the original published dates. Therefore, AS and A-level results will issue on 13 August and GCSE results will issue on 20 August. It is important that the results issue in the three jurisdictions at the same time, so that no one is placed at an advantage or disadvantage.

The proposals that I have outlined should provide schools, teachers, young people and their families with the clarity that they have been calling for in relation to qualifications. I hope that that will also show that fairness is at the heart of the approach that I have adopted, and that our young people can be assured that the grades that they receive will reflect the work that they have put in over recent years.

Extraordinary circumstances have necessitated the introduction of new arrangements to replace these examinations, which have been used over many years, but I am confident that the measures that we have announced today will enable our young people to continue on their journey through life despite the disruption created by the COVID-19 outbreak.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): I thank the Minister for his statement. I now invite members to question the Minister on the content of his statement. I have 19 members listed who wish to ask a question, so it is important that the questions are focused and are directly related to the content of the Minister's statement. The one person who will get a bit of leeway on that in this debate is the Chairperson of the Committee for Education, Mr Chris Lyttle.

Mr Lyttle (Committee Chair - Committee for Education): Thank you Principal Deputy Speaker, and I too thank the teachers, parents and pupils of Northern Ireland for the positive way in which they are responding to the public health emergency. Their sacrifice and compliance with social isolation and social distancing is, literally, saving lives, and we ask them to keep going.

I thank the Minister for his work on this challenging matter. The Minister has decided that grades will be based on a combination of teacher judgement, rank order of schools, statistical modelling and a resit factor. What exactly is meant by the rank order of school?

The Minister also said that grading will reflect the work that pupils have put in over recent years. Obviously, that cannot reflect the work that pupils would have done in preparation for exams, so why has the option of rescheduling examinations been discounted on this occasion?

Mr Weir: I thank the member for his comments. The member may have picked me up slightly wrong on rank order; it is rank order within a school. So, if you are ranking a certain number of pupils in a particular subject, they are ranked. There will also be within the statistical modelling a certain level of indication of what you may call centre assessment. While we are trying to use as many statistics as possible, if the principle driver is the teacher performance, there has got to be some degree of cognisance that, while there would be very detailed guidance and it is not simply a predicted grade that will be given by CCEA to schools, it is human nature that some schools may, shall we say, treat their particular cohort of pupils either very strictly or more generously than others. So, there has got to be some level of adjustment within that. Probably the biggest single influence in this will be the teacher assessment — the grade that they will predict and notionally award for their pupil may not necessarily be the end grade, so that is why that has to be put in place.

On the other issue that the member raised about broad — preparation —

Mr Lyttle: It was about rescheduling of exams.

Mr Weir: Yes, sorry, rescheduling. That is a matter that was looked at, and there were a couple of issues. There is, obviously, an appeals mechanism. On principle value, the issue of resits will have the most direct relevance to a university place. If we were having a full resit, it would have to be right across the board on everything available and that would introduce considerable additional cost and complexity to the system. Also, by the time that we were able to produce resits, it would be past the post for anybody who, for example, was applying to a university. So, there will be the opportunity for a resit, if anybody wants it, as part of the normal process in the summer of 2021, but there is very limited value to providing resits in the autumn.

Members will see the complexity of the arrangements that have had to be put in place. To some extent, the position in Northern Ireland, particularly around A levels, is that we have much more of a statistical database than in England because there is no progression in England, as part of the overall process, from AS level to A level. That means that we can use the AS-level information, which can then be used in statistical modelling, whereas, in England, they have to base the grades purely on teacher assessment. There is an argument that because we are producing a more complex and, indeed, more data-driven process, it necessitated resits. Effectively, however, there is a safety net on two grounds: the appeals process, which will look at whether the process has been applied correctly; and, ultimately, the summer exams in 2021.

Mr Humphrey: I thank the Minister for his comprehensive statement on this very important issue. I also thank him for his time and commitment, in the most difficult of circumstances, over the last number of weeks.

Minister, the issue is vitally important to the young people, their parents and their teachers, and I take this opportunity, on behalf of my party, to thank the principals, teachers and all others in the education family for all their hard work and the responsible attitude that they have adopted over the last number of weeks. How will the appeals be considered? Will this be done by the Department of Education or CCEA? As you set out in your statement, these issues are complicated and complex. How, therefore, will the information be communicated to the learners, their families and teachers?

Mr Weir: Communication will be through CCEA whenever the detailed guidance is there. The initial stage of what has been announced today is being shared by CCEA directly to schools, more or less as we speak.

The appeals process will be organised by CCEA to ensure that we have a robust system to check the process rather than individual marking. That process will be agreed, largely speaking, to try to be aligned, as much as possible, with England and Wales so that we have a comprehensive system. It is important that there is comparability and portability, but also that our students, by way of an appeals process, are not disadvantaged in any way. Therefore, there has to be an appeals mechanism that mirrors what is in place elsewhere. If we had, for example, a more generous appeals system than in other jurisdictions, when universities are awarding places, they might assume that a grade was achieved only because of the particular appeals process. That is why the ongoing work to drill down into the detail of the appeals process will not just involve CCEA, but CCEA working closely with the Office of Qualifications and Examinations Regulation (Ofqual), which is the overall examinations and qualification board for the United Kingdom.

Ms Mullan: I thank the Minister for his statement and for providing clarity on the summer examination arrangements. I would also like to thank the teachers and the unions that have supported the Minister in this work.

Minister, you will be aware of the issue around the levels of attainment of working-class boys and some others. That group of students would not have had access to the level of extra tuition that some of their peers would have had throughout the year. Has consideration been given to how we can reduce the extent to which these students may be disadvantaged with regards to results and the admissions process?

Mr Weir: That is why it is vital in terms of attainment levels. The member will note that in each of the areas where grades are going to be awarded — be it A level, AS level or GCSE — although we have statistical data that will help to refine that, a lot of it will be based on teacher judgement and teacher indication. They will know, for want of a better word, where a student has got ability but has not been given the same advantages. There is an opportunity, if you like, to trust the individual assessment of teachers to be able to provide that. That should provide balance in producing the end results.

Mr McNulty: I thank the Minister for his statement and answers so far. I pay tribute to teachers, principals, pupils, parents and all who are involved in education, who have had to reconstitute their roles completely in an entirely different education environment.

Earlier today, I spoke to the principal of a major school in Armagh. The city has been a centre of education for many centuries. He expressed concern about the impact of your proposals on those from certain socioeconomic backgrounds who may not have access to IT, computers or even broadband, and how they may be disadvantaged by that particular solution. I recognise that we are in uncharted territory. However, does the solution mean that some children from certain socioeconomic backgrounds will be disadvantaged?

Can you also clarify what you mean by “recognised statistical modelling”? Thank you very much, Minister.

Mr Weir: I will deal with the latter point about the statistical model. It is a technical device that is known as z-scores. That is the modelling that is used, and is, effectively, writ large, when, every year, a certain number of pupils, for reasons outside their control, are not actually able to participate in an examination. That might be due to illness or because, for example, on the eve of the exam, there is a family bereavement and they are unable to do it. Every year, through CCEA, there is a cohort of pupils at various levels who have missed a component of their exams. Analysis of past performance enables that to be calculated out and to, effectively, replace the missing element of it.

I live in Bangor, which could compete with Armagh for the title of “land of saints and scholars”, such is the background of those two great places. As the member mentioned — it comes back to the point that I made earlier to Karen Mullan — to some extent, the driver at the heart of it will be adjustments that can be made from the statistics, but teachers’ assessments will be absolutely critical to all elements of it. Teachers are in a good position to be able to evaluate on the basis of trying to take into account children’s socioeconomic backgrounds and attainment levels. Obviously, at the moment, one concern is the extent to which some pupils have been denied the same opportunities as others in the past few weeks. Statistics are based, largely, on historic information and what has happened until now. Therefore, to some extent, the problems of the past few weeks will not actually be to anybody’s detriment. Indeed, while we all want to see as much of a return to normal as possible, there may be an argument that, with regard to coaching, which is, quite often, for the purposes of an examination, the current situation could create a more level playing field than would actually happen through examinations.

Mr Frew: I thank the Minister for his statement. Will the teachers’ assessments cover a specific period, or will that be left up to teachers? If it is left up to teachers, how can the Minister ensure that there is a level playing field right across the country?

Mr Weir: There will be detailed guidance. In many ways, the teachers will have to take a holistic view. Obviously, there will be elements, particularly with regard to A levels, where there is data that can be used very specifically. Therefore, the level of data will be the driver on each element of that. CCEA will issue detailed guidance to schools on how they are to collect, format and use data, and make those assessments. No school should be in the dark about the actions that it needs to take.

Ms C Kelly: Minister, thank you for your statement. The unprecedented times that we are in mean that we have had to make decisions and policy changes very quickly and without the level of consultation that we usually insist on. Did any international examples of best practice in the provision of exams inform your approach?

Mr Weir: CCEA has, I think, examined all the evidence. Part of the problem that we all face in a range of areas is that, as she rightly mentioned, policy issues that normally make months — indeed, they would be mulled over for years and deeply consulted on — are having to be made in weeks, days or, sometimes, even in hours. On consultation, we tried to go to, for instance, the main teaching unions in particular. We had lengthy sessions with them, and with a range of other educational stakeholders, such as the Education Authority, CCMS and the ETI, to highlight, effectively, what was being proposed and to make adjustments. To be fair, although some responses expressed concerns that little adjustments were needed, nobody felt that the direction of travel was wrong.

On consultation, I should say, for balance, that one criticism was that principals in England were able to announce their approach a week or two ago. We took a little longer because we wanted to make sure, as far as possible, that we had something that was fit for purpose and that we could bring people along. The A-level situation in England, because the AS level is entirely decoupled, was that the data-driven option was not there. Therefore, England was left with one option. It is very easy to make a decision when you have only one choice that can be made.

I should also say, as my statement mentions briefly, that, in arriving at this position, a range of options was developed and was available for each of the four cohorts. All were assessed against the key criteria. The option that produced the best possible outcome overall when judged against those criteria was selected. This has all been very carefully thought through, and the advice of others has been fully taken into account.

Mr K Buchanan: I thank the Minister for his statement. My question relates to A2 students who are finishing this year. Will there be any disadvantage to students from Northern Ireland who apply to universities in other parts of the United Kingdom?

Mr Weir: No. Universities have accepted and recognise the methodologies being used. There are particular Northern Ireland nuances, but we are probably in a position that is very akin to that of Wales, and our approach is very similar. England is slightly different, but we do not envisage any disadvantage to anybody seeking a university place. I was pressing on this, as was the Welsh Government in particular, to try to ensure that, in as regulated a way as possible, all results will come out at the same time. That is also important. Only today, I think, has full agreement been reached that there will be a situation in which A-level results will come out on 13 August. Similarly, that agreement will apply to other results. That means that, when it comes to competing for university places, everyone should, as far as possible, be on a level playing field.

Mr Butler: I thank the Minister for his statement. I echo his heartfelt comments to the families recently bereaved through the pandemic.

Minister, your statement refers to this being pupil-focused, as you said repeatedly at the Education Committee, and I thank you for that. You said that there was a consultative process with the teaching unions. I was looking at the potential difficulties arising from this process. One that often raises its head is the pressure that is put on teachers. Teachers will now have predicted grades thrust upon them. Did the teaching unions raise any concerns about the pressures that teachers will find themselves facing?

Mr Weir: Meetings were held with different groups across the board, including the teacher unions. General issues and concerns and nuances were raised, and we have tried to build those in. I do not think that there was any particular disagreement with the general direction of travel and route that we have taken. One of the concerns will be to try to protect teachers both in terms of their workload — inevitably, this will involve a certain amount of additional work — and, as we have indicated, by ensuring that confidentiality is built into the grades that teachers give at least up to that point; indeed, there is provision for that under the regulations. Data protection is an issue that is being looked at on a UK-wide basis, because, again, we want to make sure that this is as robust a process as possible and one that does not sustain any form of malpractice or outside pressure.

Ms Anderson: I thank the Minister for his statement. I also express our condolences to all those who have died in hospital or care settings from the deadly COVID-19 virus.

Minister, I listened intently to what you said about the students of 2020 not being disadvantaged and having to move on with their lives. You then answered some colleagues' questions on universities. There will be more demand from students on our local universities because of everything that has happened. I would like to ask you about the collaborative work that is going on. You mentioned the Minister for the Economy. It will be crucial that you work together so that those students are not disadvantaged. You will not be surprised that Karen Mullan and I have focused primarily on Magee. We are looking at the medical school, and, God knows, we need it now more than ever. We have an excellent facility there for nursing students. For the students of 2020 whom you spoke about, it would be good to get an understanding of the work that is going on between the two Ministers to make sure that they are not discriminated against or disadvantaged.

Mr Weir: There is close cooperation. Obviously, Economy has the lead on university places and will do the more detailed work on that. It will also have to be done on a cross-jurisdictional basis. I appreciate that there are particular issues with Magee, and work has been done on that between the Economy Minister and the Health Minister. The fact is that all 2020 students are in a similar position. I mentioned one of the criteria being limiting the impact: part of that is about ensuring that the knock-on impact on 2020 students is kept to a minimum in respect of not just university places — for the most part, those competing for university places in the autumn of 2020 will be from the same cohort — but the jobs market in the years ahead. Somebody who left school in 2020 must not be seen as the poor relation. That is why we wanted to ensure that what was there was as robust as possible and did not lead to people having to play some level of catch-up. Inevitably, it is difficult to take any action without there being some forward impact, and that will be the case for many aspects of this. Fairness is probably the overriding impact issue. With those four criteria, we try to protect the 2020 cohort as much as possible.

Mr O'Toole: Thank you to the Minister for giving us an update. I echo his words on teachers, who have been very flexible and shown real leadership during the crisis.

Further to some of the previous questions, I want to ask him about conversations that his Department has had with UCAS on unconditional offers. Others have asked about that, and I know that university and HE policy sits with the Department for the Economy, but, clearly, this needs a joined-up approach. I understand that UCAS has extended the moratorium on unconditional offers. How has his Department engaged with UCAS in managing that process? How will that be communicated in a joined-up way to students who will be looking at this and thinking, "What does this mean for me in terms of how I interact with UCAS?"?

Mr Weir: The principal point of contact with UCAS is through my colleague at the Department for the Economy. What is important and where UCAS have a critical role to play is that we do not want to see the universities have a competitive race against each other with a danger of a race to the bottom in wanting to suck in as many students as they can.

One area where there is a worry across the board in universities is that they will have difficulty in filling spaces in 2020, both because one of the impacts may be a damaging of the international market and because there may be a general perception across the world, in the UK and in the Republic that maybe it is best to hold off for a year, so that there will be higher proportion of students wanting to defer. Therefore, there is a degree of danger that universities try to act unilaterally, and UCAS is the key body that is trying to hold those together.

There is a wider conversation to be held about what support can be there for universities. As I said, if they feel that, economically, they could be in great difficulties next year, in the wider context that is something that is done not just on a Northern Ireland-wide basis but on a cross-jurisdictional basis.

Mr Nesbitt: I want to return to the idea that teachers will play a key role in the alternative form of assessment. The Minister said:

"This is, I believe, the right approach to take. Who knows better the aptitudes, abilities and educational achievements of these young people?"

When that regime was proposed as an alternative to an 11-plus style exam in choosing pupils post-primary school, teachers were dead set against that proposal. Are teachers entirely comfortable with this? Does it set a precedent of some sort?

Mr Weir: It is normally John O'Dowd who raises the 11-plus. I do not know whether the Member for Strangford is acting as a proxy on that.

I do not think that it sets a precedent for anything. It is undoubtedly the case that there has been consultation and work with the teacher unions. I think that all of us would accept that not only is this not the perfect solution, it is not something that would be put in place in normal times. However, it is clear that the principal driver, in terms of that level of knowledge, are teachers. This is a bespoke solution that is trying to deal with the overwhelmingly different circumstances that we face following the coronavirus. Therefore, I do not think it is right and would not like to see read-across into other situations. It is about trying to provide the best possible solutions in incredibly difficult circumstances.

At some stage, I am sure, the House will have debates during this term about what is done about post-primary transfer. We may all take our different positions on that. This is principally focused on students from years 11 to 14 and the particular solutions that are required in what, we hope, is a unique year. We hope that this will not have to be revisited next year or the year after. We hope that we are into brighter times by that stage.

Minister, you touched on England and Wales in your statement and your comments since: is the model that you have outlined today consistent in approach to the model that has been adopted in others places in the UK?

Mr Weir: Scotland is in a slightly different position because they have Highers and students are at different ages when they reach that point. Effectively, their university students start more or less a year earlier.

There has been close work by CCEA with Ofqual. We are in a different position in Northern Ireland, particularly as regards our A levels and the data that can be produced. The major contrast is the connection between AS results and A levels, whereas, in England, there is no relationship between the two. To that extent, it is about getting something that is fit for purpose for Northern Ireland but trying to get as much compatibility as possible. From that point of view, England is in a slightly different position from the rest of the UK. Northern Ireland and Wales have adopted a similar approach and there are similar positions between those jurisdictions, but all three are largely compatible, at least, with each other, and there is portability of exam results with those organisations. It should also be indicated that, as I mentioned, there will be a minority of students whose grades will come through boards that are based in England or Wales. That will be governed by the regulations that are there.

Mr Boylan: I also thank the Minister for his statement. I just want to go back to the appeal process and the fact that, obviously, we could see a high volume of appeals. Is there independent oversight? What would that look like? Can you define exactly what the process is now, typically and normally, against what will come from this?

Mr Weir: There will be more work to be done on the appeal process because we want to make sure that the process is compatible with what happens elsewhere. As I said, it is about ensuring that our students are not put at a disadvantage by having something radically different from what happens elsewhere. If we had a more generous position on appeals, that could count against our pupils because it might be regarded that they had, if you like, an easier route. That will be something that does not entirely stand alone in Northern Ireland; there will have to be continuing work by CCEA with Ofqual to develop that for the autumn. It will be largely based on process issues rather than someone simply saying, "I should really have got a better grade. I have much greater ability than that", partly because the appeals process is likely to report for individuals in the autumn period. There is not a particularly great advantage to that individual in getting a change at that point, because the key point of entry will be for the following year for entry to university and students will also have an opportunity to take those examinations again.

Clearly, it will want to identify if there has been a flaw in the process, if there has been, for example, some problem in the data going from the school to CCEA or there has been some fundamental mistake made in that. The grounds for those appeals will likely be relatively narrow, but, as I said, we have the second safety net of students being able to do a resit. Particularly for years 11 and 13, there is a retrospective fitting from next year's exams and the routes which they go down; if they go down both routes, the higher of those results will apply to them.

Ms Armstrong: I declare an interest as the mother of a year 13 pupil. Minister, a number of students will be very happy with you today; some will not be so happy. I know that, in my day, when you did mocks they usually marked them hard. There is no way that I would have got the grades that I got in the end if that had not scared the life out of me.

I will get to my question. Minister, CCEA obviously provided you with options, and you have taken the decision that you have taken. Can you outline what those options were and whether they were equality impact-assessed? On the basis of an equality impact assessment, normally, at this time of the year, teachers are preparing pupils for post-primary transfer. Will you take forward legislation to cancel that exam in the autumn? The GCSE, A2 and AS have been cancelled now. Let us have fairness for those P7 pupils.

Mr Weir: I will respond to a couple of points that have been raised.

With regard to options, obviously, there are bespoke solutions to each of the four bits. There was a range of options for each of those. For example, some could have involved almost purely statistical data, and some would have involved looking purely at the teacher bit. From memory, I think that, in each of the four areas, there was a minimum of three options provided. Each of those was then assessed against the four criteria of fairness, reducing the burden on the overall system, limiting the impact on a future position and providing certainty. Effectively, there was a form of scoring mechanism and almost a sort of traffic light system for whether it was "Good", "Fair" or "Poor". The option in each case that came forward was then the recommendation from CCEA. I also had the full scoring mechanism of each of those, so I was able to go through each of those myself. In each case, I agreed with the preferred option that came from CCEA because, ultimately, it seemed to score best.

I do not intend to bring forward legislation on the post-primary transfer test. There are many things on which the House will agree and many on which it will not. I think that the post-primary transfer test might be the holy grail when it comes to seeking agreement, even with the best will in the world. As I am sure that the member is acutely aware, the post-primary examinations, which pupils can take or not, are offered by two private organisations, the Post Primary Transfer Consortium (PPTC) and the Association for Quality Education (AQE). From that point of view, the Department and I have no control over them. The extent to which I could prevent a private organisation doing a particular thing would be questionable anyway. Part of that would be based on an assessment of the timescale. The exams are normally scheduled for November. It is up to those organisations whether they would happen on the same timescale.

Part of the issue is the immediacy; the fact that students would have been going into exams in May and June. If, for example, we had had a situation in which the academic year followed the calendar year, I suspect that the decisions that are being made would not necessarily have happened on the same timescale and may not have happened at all, because there would have been time, if you like, for things to correct themselves. On 19 March, the decision was issued that there would not be examinations. It was important that, as soon as was practicable, arrangements were put in place. In particular, I felt that it was important that we did not have that uncertainty. If, for example, we had carried on hoping that exams would take place, and then, effectively, for want of a better term, pulled the rug from under people's feet at the end of April and said that, given the circumstances, they could not actually take place, that would have been wrong as well. At this stage, I do not see any particular correlation between that and the post-primary transfer test.

Mr Durkan: I thank the Minister for his statement. The statement and discussion have been on academic qualifications and achievement. We have to recognise that it is an extremely stressful time for many young students. There is a lot of anxiety and confusion, and, I know — I have my own son — a lot of regret as well. There is also new pressure on teachers. It is a challenging time for them. They are still dealing with the new challenge of remote learning. Now, they will have that huge responsibility put on them to virtually dictate the future choices of their students or pupils. Has the Department or the Education Authority considered what additional support can be given to those whose mental well-being has taken a bit of a battering at this time, and how that support can be accessed?

Mr Weir: I am very cognisant of the issue of mental well-being. As part of that, we are looking at what additional support can be provided in general; particularly for young people but also for teachers. Sometimes, the focus, very understandably, is on young people and we almost ignore the well-being of teachers. Moving forward, we need to look at what support can be provided next year against all the uncertainty that there is with regard to budgetary constraints.

Undoubtedly, in the current situation, we are looking at academic results. We have been able to bring in elements of data that can assist. If specific support is needed, as CCEA develops the process and works through it with schools, it will be given. In many cases, it is about actually using what is there at present. It will not be about finding any additional material but collating what is there. While that will create additional pressure on the teaching workforce, which I acknowledge entirely, it is not a unique situation. We are seeing it in other jurisdictions, where, perhaps, they do not have the data and can only, if you like, fall back on teachers' assessments. From that point of view, I appreciate that it is a very tough time for everybody.

Mr Beggs: I thank the Minister for his statement and for his attempts to resolve this conundrum: the difficulty that the educational establishment faces as a result of the imposition of social-distancing requirements to protect our young people and, indeed, the entire community.

Minister, you highlighted on a number of occasions today that teachers will play a vital role in this assessment. Can you advise when CCEA will give them detailed guidance so that they know what exactly is expected of them and when they will need to start to carry out their work to ensure that this vital work is done in an efficient manner?

Mr Weir: I am not saying that there will not be different layers of this at various times, but my understanding is that detailed guidance from CCEA to schools, which also relates to teachers, is going out today. I felt that it was important that, when a statement was being made in connection to this, everything had been brought into line so that it was not a question of my simply saying this in the Assembly. I appreciate that it is undoubtedly the case that my direct accountability is to the Assembly. Therefore, the Assembly had to hear this first. However, I also wanted to ensure that there was no gap between what I was saying and what CCEA was doing, so those two things have been aligned. As part of the detailed guidance, we will give a window of opportunity in which schools need to get information to CCEA. The detailed format of that will also be made clear to schools.

Miss Woods: Will the results that students receive, as outlined by the Minister, be capped in any way by the proportion of grades awarded to a school's students in previous years?

Mr Weir: Are they capped?

Miss Woods: Will the grades that were given to a school's cohort in the previous year create a cap? Does that mean that a school's grades cannot go up or down at all?

Mr Weir: I am not sure that there will be a specific cap, as such. What will be taken into account is the statistical modelling of a centre's performance. That has more to do with the fact that, as I said, although very clear guidance and instructions as to how this is to be done will be given to schools, we are talking, ultimately, about people making individual assessments. I am sure that anyone who has been on a panel and scored someone as part of an interview process will have found that, although the rankings created were similar, some people were more generous in their assessment than others. Therefore, this modelling takes account of that. CCEA will develop quite a sophisticated statistical model. Ultimately, what is important is that there is comparability across the whole system so that no student is advantaged or disadvantaged. That is not simply within Northern Ireland; it applies to all who are, for instance, competing for university places.

Mr Carroll: I thank the Minister for his statement. I join others in offering my condolences to the families of everybody who has died so far. During this meeting, I heard that today's death toll is the highest. I offer my sympathies to everybody.

My understanding, from what the Minister said, is that AS-level students will get a predicted grade that will not count towards their final A-level grade. Is that accurate? Can I get some clarity on that? Is the Minister confident that teachers will be protected from any accusations of unfairness or bias that might arise from this process? Is he confident that mechanisms are in place to seriously mitigate, if not stop, such accusations?

Mr Weir: I will pick up on the latter point. There are two aspects to that. There is a particular provision — a legal determination — to ensure that teachers' confidentiality is protected in the grading system. There are derogations that can and will be put in place. Across the UK, the wider context that will have to be considered is the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) and freedom of information, because that is UK-wide legislation. That is being looked at across the jurisdictions. It is critical for teachers that their judgement is protected and that there are no potential repercussions. Teachers are a key component in being able to put this in place, but the position is not theirs alone.

Will the member remind me of his first question?

Mr Carroll: AS-level students.

Mr Weir: The position is that there is effectively a form of decoupling for one year. It will stand alone and, therefore, somebody could simply leave with an AS level if they want. There is not that direct linkage for every student anyway but there is for the vast bulk of students in Northern Ireland, and that is where we differ. The point is that, if someone is carrying on to their A2 level, the AS level can then be effectively retrofitted, for want of a better word. There is the opportunity either to sit those particular parts of it in 2021 or have a retrospective side of things. However, it does not become an automatic component that will lead simply to an A level.

This process has actually shown the advantage of the linkage between the AS- and A-level grades that Northern Ireland and Wales have operated. That linkage has enabled data to be put in place that is helpful. It has given us options that have not been available in England. However, realistically, this year, we are left with no other choice than to do that decoupling on the award of the AS level.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): Thank you, Minister. I am mindful of the fact that we have about 17 minutes left.

Mr Weir: Do not tell me you are going to sing a song.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): No. As was the case in the previous session, if any member who has a pressing question that they wish to ask the Minister rises in their place, I will call them.

Ms Armstrong: Thank you very much, Minister; hopefully this is not too difficult. I asked about the 11-plus earlier. The reason why I brought it up is because I am very aware that we have key workers in society who are not at home with their children and are not able to hothouse them in the way that some others who have been furloughed or are working from home. My concern is that, while there are children who are being prepared for the 11-plus test later in the year, our key workers — the very people who are keeping us alive, protecting our society and delivering essential services — are at work at the moment and not at home with their children. That is why I am asking for consideration in the 2020 cohort for next year's P7s. We need to consider the children of those essential workers.

Mr Weir: I understand that. Obviously, the tests are external to government and the Department of Education. I am sure that AQE and PPTC will give that detailed consideration. I appreciate that this is not an area where there is consensus, but there is a strong desire among quite a lot of people to retain academic selection. Schools will have to make a choice come the summer of 2021. Something that has perhaps not been touched on as yet is that there is likely to be some difficulty or disruption in placements into post-primary schools this year. We want to minimise the time frame in relation to that.

Ultimately, AQE and PPTC have ownership of those tests. I do not believe that it is my place to try to abolish those tests or create some one-year difference in them. Unfortunately, in life — education reflects this — there will always be an advantage for those who have financial resources and are able to throw that the way of additional tutoring or whatever. One of the decisions that I made in a previous incarnation was to remove any particular memo or restriction on schools being able to prepare their own pupils, because that undoubtedly created a less of a level playing field. We will not be in a perfect position on this issue, but I do not intend to bring legislation to abolish academic selection, even on a temporary basis.

Mr Lyttle: The Minister cited cost complexity and the university application process deadlines as reasons for discounting a rescheduling of exams to, for example, August. Can the Minister go into a bit more detail as to why those issues could not be overcome?

Mr Weir: On rescheduling — sorry. I am talking about resits in the autumn. England is in a slightly different position from us because they are having to rely purely on teacher assessment with no data. It is likely that England will have some form of resits in the autumn. The point that I am making around that is that if universities, for instance, are making their admissions around about the same time, it could have an impact on autumn resits on a cohort entering in 2021. However, there will be the opportunity for pupils to take an examination again prior to the entries for 2021.

The issue is that because our data and our process, essentially, are more robust than elsewhere, we would have had to be able to provide resits for every pupil in every subject, driven by CCEA and others, which would have a cost element. Also, because students will have the opportunity to sit the exams in the summer of 2021, it would be a cost for something that would be of negligible benefit to pupils. That is on the basis of strong advice from CCEA and from discussing that with others.

I appreciate that some members have raised the issue of consultation. There has been, in contact from young people, no appetite for autumn resits or a postponement of exams to the autumn. It is an issue of the practical difficulties and the costs. Depending on how things go, because nobody can know the passage of the virus over the next period, we might find ourselves in a situation in the autumn, having set up exams in September or October time, with a second wave of the virus, meaning that we then have to come up with a further set of exams.

All these things can be kept under review, but I am not convinced of the merits of a separate resit in the autumn. I do not think that it would particularly benefit people but it would add cost and complexity to the situation.

Mr O'Toole: My question follows on from the Minister's remarks. While Ministers in the Executive have said in the past day or two, and I agree with them, that it is premature to start talking about when restrictions are lifted, it is also the case that, as he just mentioned, although we all hope and pray that the restrictions will be eased at some point, and sooner rather than later, there could be a second wave. Is his Department thinking about and planning how social distancing will be implemented inside schools and classrooms? It is unlikely that schools will return before the end of the academic year — the Minister has been clear about that, and I think that that is probably the right way to go — but, with his officials and the unions, is he thinking about how social-distancing measures can be implemented come September?

Mr Weir: That goes wider than the examination issue, but, as we move ahead, we will be looking to scope out how business can reopen in that broader sense. One of the issues that make that uncertain is — this is the view of those who have a much higher level of expertise than I have — that it may not necessarily be a linear move to a greater level of normality. It might involve some things that are geographically specific. It might mean that, to some extent, although restrictions will need to be kept tight in some areas of life, they might ease in other areas. It might also be the case, to some extent, that to be able to manage that in the best possible way, the tap will almost need to be turned on and off at various stages. All those things must be taken into account, and I will work with Executive colleagues, driven by health considerations in particular, to see how best they can be.

Thinking is ongoing, but I do not think that anybody wants to send out the signal that this is the time for a particular shift in opinion. As we have seen, and as the Executive have indicated, at a minimum, the lockdown will be in place for the next three weeks. I suspect that all of us anticipate that it will probably continue for a longer period. We are living in a very fluid situation where things can go, at times, in different directions. We have to be able to remain cognisant so that we can scope ahead and scenario plan to work out the best options at particular times.

Mr McNulty: I put on record my sincere condolences to the 18 families who have today lost loved ones to COVID-19.

Minister, you have put forward bold proposals around examinations. I know that it is uncharted territory and that there are no simple solutions. Maybe a more pressing matter is the issue of vulnerable and at-risk children. I have raised it on numerous occasions over the last number of weeks. What liaison has your Department had with Barnardo's, Childline or other statutory agencies to try to ensure that every child is safe in their own home?

Mr Weir: I appreciate that it may be straying a little outside the remit of the statement to deal specifically with that, but the member will be aware that there is ongoing work. As part of that, we are working, particularly with Health, to get full and detailed guidance. We are also working with outside agencies. As I have indicated, I have written directly to schools to encourage them to reach out to vulnerable children. This is not just a local problem; it occurs [Inaudible.] I hope to be able to raise it to see where there is best practice. The next four nations summit on education will be next Wednesday. We will have an interesting conversation about what is happening with regard to vulnerable children in other jurisdictions, so that we can all learn as best we can from each other's experiences.

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): No other members have indicated that they wish to ask a question. I thank the Minister for his statement and answers. Given the amount of concern that there was in the public about the matter, it is to the Minister's credit that he came to the House to make the statement rather than issuing a press release at 9.00 this morning that would have dominated the news headlines. He showed the House the courtesy to which it is entitled. I thank him for that.

Mr Weir: Are you saying that I could have dominated the news headlines?

The Deputy Chairperson (Mr Stalford): Uh-huh. As long as it is for the right reasons and not the wrong ones.

Agenda item 4 is the date, time and place of our next meeting. We have yet to receive confirmation from the Executive about when Ministers will next come to make a statement to the Ad Hoc Committee. As soon as that confirmation has been received, written notification of the time, date and place of the next meeting will be issued to members in the usual way. However, I remind members that a plenary session of the Assembly is scheduled to take place on 21 April and that Ministers may continue to make oral statements to the Assembly on sitting days.

That concludes the meeting of the Ad Hoc Committee. The meeting is adjourned. Stay safe, and God bless.

Budget 2020-21: UK Funding Available

Published at 12:30 pm on Monday 16 March 2020.

Mr Murphy (The Minister of Finance): The purpose of this Statement is to inform the Assembly of the UK funding made available for Budget 2020-21 as notified by the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on 14 March 2020.

In line with my legal obligation under Section 64 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 I am required to lay before the Assembly a Statement detailing the amount UK funding provided for 2020-21 at least 14 days before a laying a draft Budget for the financial year.

Our routine DEL allocations, taking account of the additional funding from recent Chancellor's Budget, are set out in the table below

Resource DEL	11,180.1
Ring Fenced Resource DEL	665.0
Financial Transactions Capital	194.6

In addition, the Secretary of State has confirmed the following funding will be available under the Fresh Start Agreement

£million	2020-21
Shared and integrated education	120.7
Fraud and error	25.0
Tackling paramilitary activity	9.3
Shared future	12.0

The availability of funding for New Decade, New Approach was confirmed by the Secretary of State as an additional £523 million for 2020-21. This comprises £483 million of resource funding and £40 million of capital.

We have not yet received any certainty on the provision of the remaining funding due under the Confidence and Supply Agreement.

The Secretary of State has also confirmed that £293 million will be made available for Farm Support Direct Payments for 2020. £278.6 million of this can be incorporated into the Executive's 2020-21 Budget immediately.

Exceptionally, the Secretary of State has advised that we can proceed on the basis that we will receive £120 million of resource funding in relation to the Covid-19 response.

This brings the total UK funding available to

Resource DEL	12,108.0
Ring Fenced Resource DEL	665.0
Financial Transactions Capital	194.6

It is my intention is the lay a draft Budget for 2020-21 in the Assembly on the 30th of March. At this stage, as required by legislation, I will demonstrate that the amount of UK funding required by the draft Budget does not exceed the amount notified by the Secretary of State as set out in this statement.

Transparency, Accountability and the Functioning of the Executive

Published on Monday 16 March 2020.

Mr Murphy (The Minister of Finance): The Executive is committed to greater transparency and improved governance arrangements, aimed at restoring and maintaining public confidence. This is set out in the New Decade, New Approach document.

We have taken a number of steps in recent days that we believe will make a real difference. These are issues which engage the whole Executive, and I am making this statement on behalf of the First Minister and deputy First Minister, and I.

RHI Inquiry Response

The Executive has agreed the establishment of a dedicated sub-committee which will consider the findings of the RHI Inquiry and propose further reforms, in addition to those in the Agreement, to deliver the changes necessary to rebuild public confidence.

The Executive sub-committee will consider the RHI Inquiry Report and its recommendations in light of work already completed and relevant reforms set out in the Agreement. It will then recommend to the Executive any further work to be commissioned to rebuild public confidence, in addition to that already identified in the Agreement.

I shall chair the sub-committee, which will include the Ministers for the Economy, Health, Justice, Infrastructure and the Junior Ministers in the Executive Office.

The sub-committee will publish an action plan for implementation of recommendations flowing out of the RHI Inquiry report. I will keep the Assembly updated regularly.

Ministerial Standards

We have strengthened the codes that set standards of behaviour for Ministers. A new Code of Conduct for Special Advisers was introduced on 20 January, and my Executive colleagues and I have now agreed a revised Code of Conduct for Ministers, supplemented by new Guidance for Ministers in the exercise of their official functions.

The guiding principle behind these new Codes is that the highest standards should be expected and upheld by those in public office in order to ensure public confidence in government.

There should be increased openness about the mechanics of government. And there must be no conflict between public roles and private interests.

The revised versions of the Ministerial Code of Conduct and Guidance for Ministers are to be read in conjunction with each other. The Code of Conduct sets out high-level principles, and the Guidance expands upon those principles to inform their practical outworking.

Together they set out in greater detail the accountability of Ministers to the Assembly and the need for Assembly committees to be provided with the information they require to discharge their role;

- they strengthen the requirements for the declaration of interests by Ministers and require the avoidance of conflicts of interest;
- they set out that Ministers are responsible for the management, conduct and discipline of their special advisers;
- they make clear the need to record ministerial meetings and decisions;
- they require the regular publication of declarations of relevant interests; details of meetings with external organisations; and gifts and hospitality received.

In order to ensure that the Ministerial Code of Conduct and the Guidance for Ministers are effective in guiding ministerial behaviour, a new mechanism for the Enforcement of Ministerial Standards is to be introduced.

Alleged breaches of the Ministerial Code, the Guidance for Ministers, or Conduct of Executive Business will be referred to a Panel for Ministerial Standards, one of whose members will be the Assembly Commissioner for Standards.

The Panel members will investigate and publish findings in respect of alleged breaches. They will complete their investigations quickly; within a recommended 15 working days of their receipt of a complaint. Their findings will include whether or not the Minister has been found to have breached the terms of the ministerial standards documents, and may make a judgement as to the relative seriousness of the breach.

The Panel will publish their findings and report to the Assembly and the Executive. In this way the published report of the Panel will provide the grounds upon which sanctions can be imposed by the Assembly or the nominating officer of the Minister's party.

We will start this appointment process within days.

The role of Assembly Private Secretaries has also been reviewed in light of this body of work, to ensure there is clarity around their role. This is reflected in a revised Protocol which sets out the obligations upon Ministers in respect of Assembly Private Secretaries.

The Executive has agreed to immediately adopt for ourselves the standards set out in the Ministerial Code of Conduct, pending the legislative process for the formal implementation of the revisions.

Civil Service Ethics

We will also be bringing forward proposed changes to the NICS Code of Ethics to ensure that the role of civil servants is explicitly clear, and that the values to which civil servants are committed are fully set out. The Code of Ethics applies to Special Advisers, except – as before – the requirements of impartiality and objectivity.

The Code has been revised to emphasise the responsibility of the Civil Service to serve the Executive as a whole.

It refers to the necessity of working collaboratively, keeping accurate official records, and handling information as transparently as possible and it refers to the development of a more comprehensive policy for addressing staff and public concerns going beyond the existing whistleblowing policy, including reference to how a civil servant might raise concerns about a Minister or special adviser.

The NICS Code of Ethics is made by the Department of Finance, and the Department will be consulting with the civil service trade unions and the Civil Service Commission prior to issuing the new Code.

Special Adviser Codes of Conduct and Appointment

Members will recall that the Executive has also revised the Codes of Conduct and Appointment for Special Advisers. Together this new suite of documents can provide the basis on which the accountability and transparency of the Executive and its institutions can be improved.

Response to Coronavirus

Published on Monday 16 March 2020.

Mrs Long (The Minister of Justice): I would like to explain to Members the arrangements that are being made within the Department of Justice to continue to deliver essential public services in the face of the challenges presented by Covid-19, and in particular the steps being taken in the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service and in the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

Contingency planning

At the outset I would like to reassure members that the wider justice family is working together to mitigate any risks and ensure the continued delivery of justice in Northern Ireland; not least on important matters pertaining to public safety and personal liberty.

Significant work has been undertaken across the Department's business areas, agencies and NDPBs, and contingency plans are in place, which will enable us to have the resilience to continue operating in the event of increased staff absence.

We have identified the highest priority public services that need to be maintained and will, if necessary, make resources available to maintain those services.

Alongside that we are taking proportionate steps, in line with PHA guidance, to safeguard staff wellbeing and have offered advice to consider the need for face-to-face meetings, reduce non-essential visits and take account of social distancing guidance.

Officials from the Department will later this week update the Justice Committee in more detail on the work that has been done to understand the risks across the Justice System, the Department, its Agencies, and other bodies, to ensure our readiness for the impact of Coronavirus.

Specific Risks

In Justice terms, one of the most significant risks relates to the Prison Service.

- The Prison Service take the threat presented by COVID19 extremely seriously and have undertaken significant work in preparation for the challenges an outbreak would bring.
- The Director General has put in place specific contingency planning structures and established a dedicated team to oversee planning arrangements and to support Governors.
- Preparations have included the purchase of additional protective clothing for staff and the preparation of areas within each prison where prisoners suspected and/or diagnosed with the virus can be accommodated.
- Both the Prison Service and their partners in the South Eastern Trust have been following guidance issued by the Public Health Agency which has also been provided to staff and prisoners.
- Notwithstanding the disruption and challenges ahead, which have the potential to impact the prison regime, mitigations are being planned to support staff and ensure that keeping safe those in our care remains our primary focus.

- While there has not to date been a confirmed coronavirus case in any of our prisons, the latest position is that on Saturday 14th March six prisoners - four at Maghaberry and two at Hydebank Wood - were placed in specially located accommodation away from the general population. This was a precautionary move and in line with preparations to mitigate the impact of the virus.
- I want to commend all the staff who dealt with, and continue to support those people and the plans which had been developed over the past month worked as envisaged.

Looking at the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals' Service:

- Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunal's Service [NICTS] will continue to follow Public Health Agency (PHA) guidance and members of the public and others who engage with the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunal's Service have been notified through various communications channels about the procedures to follow.
- NICTS has a graduated response which depending on the prevailing circumstances and available resources would entail working with the judiciary and partners to slow down lower priority business.
- Officials are working closely with the Lord Chief Justice on practical arrangements to reduce the need for attendance at court, including the adjournment of cases administratively; dispensing with the requirement of parties to attend save for certain specified circumstances and staggering business across the day to reduce footfall at any given time. Further detail on these arrangements will be published imminently by the Lord Chief Justice's Office.
- Areas considered to be critical would include cases impacting on liberty (bail / custody); individual and public safety (Non-Molestation Orders and Emergency Protection Orders) and other types of urgent business.
- Ongoing jury trials will be managed to a conclusion where possible. No new jury trials will be commenced.
- NICTS will also have the option to temporarily reduce the number of hearing rooms at a venue or relocate business to other court venues based on the level of available resource or support services or specific buildings being out of action at any time.

In conclusion:

This is a fast evolving picture and we will continue to follow PHA guidance. If that guidance changes, we will move quickly to adapt our approach accordingly.

Health and Social Care Planning for the Period Mid-March to Mid-April 2020 During The Delay Phase for Coronavirus

Published at 2.00 pm on Thursday 19 March 2020.

Mr Swann (The Minister of Health): I wish to make a statement to the Assembly, and through this statement to the wider public, of the actions we are taking across the Health and Social Care system to prepare for the impact of Novel Coronavirus COVID-19.

I would like to open by making two assertions that may seem contradictory, but which are in fact crucially important.

Firstly, I would like to provide some reassurance that, for the majority of people, COVID-19 will result in a mild illness from which they will quickly recover.

However, it is also the case that for some patients, potentially thousands, a diagnosis of COVID-19 will be a life-altering event, resulting in hospitalisation and, in some cases, loss of life. All of our efforts must be focused on protecting this part of our population.

My statement today is overshadowed by the sad news of a Coronavirus related death in a Northern Ireland hospital. My condolences are with the family and friends of the patient.

From the planning assumptions available to the HSC in a reasonable worst case scenario - if we fail as a community to take action to slow down the transmission of the virus in line with the recommended public health guidance - up to 80% of the Northern Ireland population will be infected during this epidemic. Up to half of these may occur in a period of three weeks centred around the peak. Simply put, no health service in the world is equipped to cope with the volume of cases that we will see if this scenario comes to pass.

However, we have the ability to reduce the potential impact of COVID-19 by protecting our families, friends, and all of the vulnerable people across Northern Ireland, by reducing social contact as much as possible and, if any of us have symptoms, to stay at home.

If social distancing and other measures are implemented by the population, with a combined effect they could reduce the peak by some 50% and reduce deaths by up to a third. Planning assumptions also indicate that 8% of infected people will require hospitalisation, 0.7% will require critical care, and 1% will die – although these figures will vary highly depending on age and other health factors.

There is no doubt that these measures come at a cost. They will be difficult for people to stick to. They will have significant social and economic impacts. But we must always remain mindful that they will save lives.

I am acutely aware of the anxiety felt by many older and vulnerable people who have been told that they are in one of the high risk groups. Many people live alone, already feel isolated from the community and are dependent upon social services to provide their day to day care and support. I want to reassure people that we will give priority to the continuation of essential services that allow people to remain independent in their own homes. My Department will be sending further detailed and targeted advice to those of all ages at very high risk (40,000 people) in the days ahead.

This plan summarises the key actions taken by Health and Social Care (HSC) NI that will apply from mid-March to mid-April 2020 to ensure that there is sufficient capacity within the system to meet the expected increase in demand from patients contracting COVID-19 during this period. This is a dynamic plan and will be constantly refined in light of emerging issues.

I would like every member of this Assembly to be in no doubt that this approach is absolutely vital. It will protect our population, and it will also protect our staff, who will face enormous challenges in the weeks, and months, to come.

Nevertheless, even with these measures, we are undoubtedly facing the biggest public health emergency in our lifetime. Before detailing the work currently underway I want to express my thanks to every single member of staff across primary, secondary and community care, as well as our emergency services, for their total and unfailing commitment to help manage the impact of this pandemic.

In the coming weeks and months they will continue to need all of our support as they play a critical role in our response to COVID-19.

Our staff are the greatest asset we have. They are the NHS. As an Assembly, we must make sure that we provide them with every support and protection that we can to allow them to carry out their jobs safely and to the best of their abilities.

In respect of personal protection equipment, or PPE as it is commonly known, I want to reassure HSC staff that my officials are working closely with Business Services Organisation and HSC Trusts as well as national colleagues to maintain a secure and continuous supply of appropriate PPE. This does not mean that supply is not under pressure, it is, and through my officials I have made available to HSC Trusts volumes of product out of centrally held stockpiles albeit this must be carefully managed both at Trust level and by my Department to prevent early depletion. Supply of PPE is a challenge for all COVID-19 affected countries and some of those countries have even taken steps to ban the export of such products. This is a step that the Government has not taken to date, but is certainly complicating the work of those staff engaged in sourcing and securing certain products.

Guidance on PPE to be worn by staff has changed over the duration of this pandemic and naturally this is causing some worry amongst staff. Changes in guidance on PPE have been informed by the emerging experiences both within the UK and other countries. Staff should be reassured that this advice has been advised on and developed by experts in Infection Prevention and Control. HSC Trusts are following the latest guidance regarding PPE and will continue to apply current guidance if and when it is updated. Staff are understandably concerned however I would counsel against being influenced by social media, we have the best people in the country working on this crucial issue.

We have heard a great deal recently about the importance of testing for COVID-19. At the start of this outbreak, HSC laboratory services were processing around 40 tests. They have increased their capacity by a factor of 5 and now are capable of processing more than 200 tests per day. As at 09:00 on 19th March, they had processed 1,646 tests. I want to pay particular tribute to the laboratory staff for their response in addition to their normal workload.

We expect the demands to increase in the days and weeks ahead, and we are preparing to meet this by expanding our testing capacity even further. This will shortly increase our capability fourfold to around 800 COVID-19 tests per day and enable us to extend the availability of testing to our frontline health and social care staff, ensuring that they can continue to deliver vital services.

I am also taking action to increase physical capacity in our hospitals. We have increased inpatient capacity in designated wards that can treat up to 280 adult inpatients with coronavirus. This is only the very first phase of this work. In anticipation of inpatient numbers increasing further, all Trusts are continuing to assess the steps that may be needed to convert additional wards currently used by medical and surgical specialties into areas to treat patients diagnosed with COVID-19.

We have already significantly increased adult critical care beds across the region. There are 88 routinely commissioned adult critical care beds across the region. During normal operation, 56 of these are intensive care (ICU) beds, available for patients who require support from a breathing machine (ventilator), and 32 are high dependency (HDU) beds, available for patients who are critically ill but do not require the use of a breathing machine. If required, we have taken steps to ensure that the normal capacity of 88 critical care beds can be rapidly increased by a further 38 beds.

There are currently 139 mechanical ventilators available across the Health and Social Care Trusts in Northern Ireland. Some 40 additional mechanical ventilators (30 adult units and 10 paediatric units) have been ordered bringing the total available in Northern Ireland to 179 by the end of March. There is urgent work underway to purchase critical care equipment to ensure that we can respond to the potential number of people who will need such specialised care. We are working closely with NHS partners on a four nation basis to ensure adequate supply of ventilators as required.

It should be noted that the numbers of beds described assume availability of a full complement of specialist staff. It is predicted that health and social care staff absence could be as high as 21% during the peak weeks of an unmitigated pandemic.

An absence level such as this will require staff to be flexible and to be prepared to work wherever they are needed the most. Training of staff who will be redeployed from other areas is ongoing and will increase further as staff are released from their elective duties. The redeployed staff will require supervision from trained critical care staff.

We are also exploring more radical ways to enhance our workforce capacity. Today, I am pleased to announce that third year nursing and midwifery students within the last six months of qualifying will be redeployed to clinical care. This will happen in the next 10-14 days and will provide support of up to 880 senior nursing and midwifery students. We will follow this up with guidance for 1st and 2nd year nursing and midwifery students and AHPs in the coming days.

We are also pleased that approximately 236 Final Year Medical Student at QUB Medical School will join the Medical Register 4 months earlier than originally envisaged and will accordingly become immediately available to assist medical teams across our hospitals.

In addition, the HSC Trusts are actively developing opportunities to utilise the skills of our other medical students, in particular 3rd and 4th Year students, in temporary medical support technician roles.

I know that our students will be concerned about this move but you will be supported and supervised in your practice. I am very grateful to students, Universities and health and social care staff for making this happen in a very short timeframe.

As with other countries, the preparations for a surge in demand have required the cancellation or postponement of non-urgent appointments, investigation and procedures across outpatients, day case, inpatient and diagnostic services. This action is necessary to allow us to redeploy key staff to support the care of people admitted to hospital because of COVID-19. Outpatient appointments, day case and elective inpatient services will be maintained for urgent cases. Similarly, surgery for the treatment of cancer and other urgent procedures will continue.

Unfortunately this action is likely to result in a further adverse impact upon our already excessive and unacceptable waiting times for outpatient and inpatient services. Critically, however, as the pandemic progresses we must prepare ourselves for difficult decisions such as these. As our system comes under increased pressure, we will need to make hard choices about what services we can and cannot provide.

Our health service will fast become unrecognisable. Changes that would have seemed unthinkable weeks ago will become the new norm. Decisions that would previously have taken months or even years will be taken in hours.

Looking ahead, there will be a long period of recovery. Transformation will be needed more than ever. This will require significant new investment and commitment from the Northern Ireland Executive to health and social care services. It is clear, however, that as a result of this pandemic, some of services will be irrevocably changed.

A huge amount of work has gone in to the actions set out in the four weeks summary plan published today covering the period mid-March to mid-April. However, I need to emphasise that, if social distancing does not have the impact we hope, much more radical action will be required to respond to potentially extreme demand for acute care, particularly critical care, from mid-April to the summer months.

My Department is actively developing plans for this period and I will provide further updates to the Assembly as soon as these plans are ready to be implemented.

Finally, once more I would pay tribute to the staff who work across all health and social care disciplines in Northern Ireland for their commitment to patients and for rising to this unprecedented challenge. I am proud of you and I commit to giving you my full support in the days and months ahead. The words 'thank you' seem woefully inadequate in the circumstances but they still need to be said – on behalf of everyone across our society.

I also want to make a general appeal to the community. We all have the most onerous responsibility to do what we can to reduce the spread of COVID-19.

We all must continue to rigidly follow the advice on hand-washing and 'catch it, bin it, kill it' when we cough or sneeze and use a tissue. I cannot emphasise this enough. This will help keep more of our family members, neighbours and friends well and by doing so reduce pressures on our health service. As I have already stated publicly, doing the right thing is essential if the health and social care system is to get through this.

This also includes following all the social distancing guidance to the letter, not just today, tomorrow and next week but throughout the months ahead, for as long as it takes.

I would appeal to all Members to underline these vital messages on hygiene and social distancing to their constituents and the wider public at every opportunity.

Small Business Grants

Published on Thursday 26 March 2020.

Mrs Dodds (The Minister for the Economy): In my oral statement in the Northern Ireland Assembly on Tuesday 24th March, I undertook to provide a written statement providing further details on the process the Department for the Economy and the Department of Finance is putting in place for the payment of the £370million in grants announced by the Executive for our small businesses and a companies in our beleaguered hospitality, tourism and retail sectors schemes.

These grants schemes will benefit some 27,000 small local businesses and a further 4,000 businesses in the tourism, hospitality and retail sectors.

Our aim has been to ensure that payments are made directly to businesses, for the benefit of businesses, as quickly as possible.

As outlined in my oral statement, the ratings system will be used as the mechanism to identify eligible businesses in Northern Ireland. Those businesses that are currently in receipt of Small Business Rates Relief (SBRR) will be eligible to receive a £10,000 cash grant payment.

Payment will be made directly into the bank accounts of those businesses which currently pay though direct debit. At present, LPS have now informed us that they hold bank details for approximately 7,000 small businesses who qualify for receipt of this grant. We will begin to process payments to these businesses today with first payment being received in bank accounts next week.

To enable payments to be made directly it will be necessary to collect the bank details from eligible businesses for whom we do not currently hold bank details. To facilitate this an online web portal has been developed and will go live today. The web page will be accessible on NI Business Info at:

BusinessSupportGrantScheme](https://www.nibusinessinfo.co.uk/BusinessSupportGrantScheme)

As soon as details are received, payment will be made directly into businesses' bank accounts.

We are also working hard to put in place processes for the £25,000 grant for our hospitality, tourism and retail sectors and I will announce further details on this as soon as possible.

Department for Infrastructure

Covid-19 Update

Published at 5.30 pm on Friday 27 March 2020.

Ms Mallon (The Minister for Infrastructure): This is not an easy time for any of us. We all need to play our part, right across society, by staying at home and following government advice strictly. This is about saving lives and protecting the health and well-being of everyone, particularly the most vulnerable in our society.

The advice is clear – all non-essential contact and non-essential travel must be avoided. In the context of that advice I want to set out for Assembly Members the steps that I and my Department are taking on three fronts: minimising the risks for our customers, staff and the wider public; securing connectivity for essential services and key workers; and supporting our health and social care system and our most vulnerable citizens.

Public Transport

The advice on public transport is very clear. It should not be used other than for essential journeys, and passengers should wherever possible avoid peak services. I have worked over the last two weeks to steer a careful course between maintaining public transport at a level needed to support and facilitate our essential workers while also dissuading other people from making unnecessary journeys.

I have agreed with Translink that it should move to operate a significantly reduced bus and train service. Buses are running on a holiday timetable and NI Railways on a Saturday timetable. Translink has also reduced its service timetable for Enterprise rail services.

These measures are in response to the clear public health advice to avoid all non-essential travel and also to the sharp downturn in passenger numbers as more and more people heed our advice to stay at home.

The service level that is continuing is designed to ensure that we can continue to provide public transport coverage across Northern Ireland while responding to the impact of reduced demand. The public should be assured - for those who need to travel, public transport will continue to operate and we will continue to ensure all those using public transport can do so safely in line with guidance on social distancing. I have also asked Translink to keep its service levels under close and constant review to ensure that those who absolutely need to travel can do so, that a strict social distancing policy of ensuring no more than 50% passenger capacity of a service is filled, and to have additional vehicles on stand-by if need arises. I will keep this situation under constant review and will update members and the public of any further changes to public transport.

Keeping our Water Infrastructure Working

Members know already about the pressures on our ageing water and wastewater infrastructure. NI Water has a well-tested major incident response regime in place to respond to operational emergencies and its priority continues to be ensuring the continued provision of water and wastewater services to customers while maintaining the safety and wellbeing of staff.

It is working tirelessly to make sure that supply interruptions are avoided or minimised, particularly at a time when we all need to be washing our hands regularly. It has also engaged in a public information campaign to remind people of the sorts of behaviours that could interrupt supplies, including through blockages caused by inappropriate flushing of items such as wipes. I would ask members to help NIW get this important message out to the public, especially at this critical time. I remain in close communication with NIW and am monitoring the situation closely.

Freight and Haulage

In recent weeks we all have had cause to recognise and acknowledge the vital job done by our freight and haulage industry. It is the drivers, operators and logistics teams in this sector on whom we all rely to keep our supply chains functioning, to ensure that medicines and medical equipment can get delivered on time to the right place and, of course, to keep our supermarket shelves well stocked.

I had previously informed the Assembly about changes I had made to the requirements relating to drivers' hours to secure deliveries to supermarkets. As a further step, I have now also relaxed drivers' hours' rules for home deliveries until 2 April, to ensure supplies can be delivered to the doors of those working remotely or self-isolating. These steps will help ensure that food, non-food such as personal care, household paper and cleaning products, over the counter pharmaceuticals and other essential items can be delivered directly to consumers' homes.

I will be keeping the situation under constant review and will ensure measures are taken to extend the relaxation further if required. I have also reminded the industry that these steps are to facilitate all of us but that the responsibility for ensuring the safety of drivers and other road users remains with the operators and they must use those flexibilities in a manner that ensures no compromising of safety.

Ports and Ferries

I am also very conscious of the crucial role of our ports and ferry operators in maintaining supply chains at this time. While my direct powers in relation to both are very limited, it is important that I hear from this sector about the challenges it is facing and important too that my officials work closely with those leading ports and ferry companies. To that end, I have this week had a series of tele conferences with all of our main ports and main ferry operators. I know they have many concerns linked to the impact of the Covid-19 emergency on their business and I will be reflecting those concerns to other Executive ministers and to the Secretary of State for Transport.

I also support the measures taken by the Rathlin Island Ferry company which has restricted movement to essential journeys only to protect the island community.

Community Transport

I have also taken action to protect the health and well-being of people that use and provide community transport services by asking operators funded by the Department to suspend all Disability Action Transport Services and to significantly restrict Dial-a-Lift services to essential journeys only.

Whilst recognising the very significant role community transport plays in bringing people together and addressing social isolation in particular, at this critical time I have to take every step I can to protect the public. This is not a decision which I have taken lightly. I want community transport operators to be able to contribute to wider efforts to support the most vulnerable so I will maintain their funding through this unparalleled period and my officials stand ready to enter into discussions with operators to establish what scope there is for them to support their members and wider society during these times.

Driver and Vehicle Testing

Keeping people safe at this concerning time will cause inconvenience to customers and businesses, but it is necessary.

That is why I have moved to suspend driving tests for three months until Monday 22 June 2020, but this will be kept under review. Where there are exceptional circumstances, for example, for emergency workers and essential service drivers needing a driving test, the DVA will make all reasonable efforts to accommodate these customers.

I have also suspended MOT tests with all vehicles eligible to be issued with a Temporary Exemption Certificate (TEC). The issuing of TECs has also been extended to include four-year-old cars due their first MOT to ensure they can remain on the road, if given the ongoing health advice, the journey to be made is essential. Four-year-old cars will be given a TEC for six months from the date that their MOT test should have been due. Issuing the certificates will take some time but the exemption will automatically apply from the due date. The PSNI has agreed to our request that given these exceptional circumstances, where PSNI detects a vehicle without a valid MOT certificate, it will in suitable cases, exercise its discretion under the law, in circumstances where there is no identified risk to public safety. It is important that drivers realise that they are responsible under the law for the roadworthiness of their vehicle at all times.

For taxis which require specific taxi licensing tests, new legislation would be needed to allow existing taxi licences to be renewed. Despite best efforts, this is proving challenging to resolve. However, I want to reassure taxi drivers that we are working urgently on options to help them at this difficult time. I recognise the taxi industry is being hard hit by this public health and economic crisis. I also am working with Executive colleagues and pushing hard for more support from the UK Government for the self-employed. While I only have responsibility for regulation, and financial support for the industry rests with other Executive colleagues, I have asked colleagues if we can work together to help the industry during this challenging time, including exploring possible options for redeployment of their services to support vulnerable people at home and our community during this crisis.

I am also ensuring those applicants that apply online to renew their driving licence are having their applications processed by staff working remotely. Unfortunately, those applications which cannot be processed online, will be prioritised and processed when it is safe to do so.

Planning

I have also written to councils to make it clear that they should not take unnecessary enforcement action against public houses, restaurants and cafes operating takeaway services during the coronavirus crisis. These measures will provide vital flexibility to public houses, restaurants and cafes to keep operating and will ensure people are able to safely stay at home while still supporting local businesses.

I have asked my planning officials to urgently bring forward legislation to amend the requirement for public events as part of the pre-application process for major planning applications, given that they cannot happen at this time. This change will help the planning system to support our economy and ensure developments can be taken forward more quickly after this crisis has passed.

It is essential that my officials and local government officials work together to ensure the planning system responds as effectively as possible to this crisis. My Chief Planner has therefore provided an update containing information and advice to all council Heads of Planning on the implications of the Covid-19 emergency for the planning system.

Driving

With the sharp reduction in traffic volumes, and given the advice on staying at home, I took the view that we could not consider traffic enforcement officers to be essential workers. I therefore took the decision to suspend on-street parking enforcement in those areas where my Department has responsibility for parking enforcement and also to suspend on-street parking charges. However, we will continue to take action where illegal parking is unsafe or blocking access to emergency or essential services.

Those who need to be on our roads may have noticed that the Department's variable messaging road signs are also being used to deliver key public health messaging in response to the crisis.

For those essential workers who need to be on our roads, I am also appealing for extra care to be taken as they drive. They need, now more than ever, to be driving safely, obeying the rules of the road and paying attention to other road users. Our health service should not be having to deal at this critical time with the consequences of serious collisions.

Supporting our people

I have the privilege of being Minister for a Department of around 3,000 civil servants who deliver a wide variety of public services on which we all rely – and a responsibility along with my senior officials to make sure they too are being supported to follow the public health advice.

Wherever it is possible, staff have been facilitated to work from home. Where possible, we have also closed offices to members of the public. This all presents its own social and technological challenges, including in maintaining service delivery, but it is the right thing to do.

Where the functions our people deliver are essential and cannot be done away from the workplace, my senior team with the support of the NICS central HR team, has been working hard to make sure those staff have the advice and support to keep themselves and others safe. This is often challenging and I know that, like the rest of us, staff have many concerns – but we take our responsibilities seriously and continue to work constructively with staff and their union representatives and to ensure that Public Health Agency advice is communicated and followed.

I would like to place on record my thanks and appreciation to the DfI teams who are working so hard and determined to play their full part in helping us respond to this public health emergency.

Supporting our health and social care staff

Finally, I have worked to identify ways in which my Department can support our dedicated and hardworking health and social care staff, particularly those on the front line in our hospitals and care homes, putting their lives on the line to save ours.

I am pleased to report that I have been able to take some key actions in this area. Yesterday, in partnership with Translink and with the support of the Minister for Health and his Department, I announced that our health and social care workers would, during this emergency period, have free travel on all Translink services and also on the Strangford ferry. I hope this step is helpful in supporting them in their journey to work.

As a smaller and very practical step, I have opened the car park at the Crumlin Road Gaol, which my Department owns, for free for health service workers.

My department will continue to work with the Health Trusts and the Department for Health to explore other ways in which we can support front line staff during this difficult time.

Conclusion

In the coming days and weeks there is a lot to do – we have some answers – but not them all. I am proud of my Department's effort and the tireless work of my staff to do all we can to add to the effort.

I want to place on the record my thanks to all the stakeholders who are working collaboratively, in partnership with me and my Department to find a way through issues. I will continue to hold stakeholder teleconferences so I can hear concerns from those across the North. I know time is short and that everyone is working to get the answers we so desperately need. I want to assure people my priority is swift decision making and clear, consistent communication.

I appeal to people to be patient, to act to keep yourself and others safe – and to support those on the frontline. I promise to do all that I can, as quickly as I can, as we face into these dark and trying days together.

Finally, I wish to thank elected representatives and members of the public who are showing their support across Northern Ireland as I work to find solutions to protect our communities during this crisis.

Most importantly, I call on everyone to follow the advice to stay at home to save lives.

Covid-19 – Temporary Release of Certain Types of Prisoners Who Have 3 Months or Less Remaining to Serve

Published at 12.00 noon on Monday 30 March 2020.

Mrs Long (The Minister of Justice): First of all I apologise to Members that it has not been possible to fully adhere to the timescales as set out in the Northern Ireland Assembly Plenary Procedures, Conventions, Rulings and Practice document but I trust you will appreciate the challenging circumstances that we are all operating in at present, the need to be responsive to a fast moving and ever changing situation and take timely decisions in our efforts to mitigate the impact of COVID19.

The developing public health emergency caused by the worldwide coronavirus (COVID19) pandemic is causing us to consider measures that only a few weeks ago would have been unthinkable. One such measure is the temporary early release of some sentenced prisoners.

Over the past few weeks the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) has been taking a series of incremental steps, including the suspension of visits, aimed at gradually closing down the prison estate to non-essential personnel and limiting movement within each prison. However, in anticipation of the time when we have a confirmed case among our prisoner population and our staffing levels, which are already under strain, come under further pressure, I now consider it necessary to release some prisoners early.

In doing so I recognise that to release a prisoner before he or she has completed their full sentence is a significant decision which should only be taken when there is no alternative. Such a move is contrary to the ethos of the justice system and will cause distress to victims and their families. However, in the context of the pandemic we are facing, and to ensure as far as possible the safety and wellbeing of staff and those in our care, it is I believe an appropriate and reasonable step.

Prisoner Population:

The Northern Ireland Prison Service today has 1,521 Individuals in our care, 1,050 of whom have been sentenced and 471 of whom are on remand. 1,367 are adult males, 75 are females and 79 are young men at Hydebank Wood. The overall figure represents an increase of 78 prisoners on this day last year.

If we are to manage the rapidly developing crisis we are facing, it is vital that we begin now to take steps to reduce our prisoner population. Pressure on staffing levels and the impact of confirmed cases within our prisons when that happens will have a detrimental impact on the level of regime we can deliver. This will present considerable risks for the Prison Service to manage and will have a significant impact on the people in our care.

In seeking to reduce the prisoner population I am mindful of the importance of ensuring the Prison Service is best placed to follow Public Health guidance in order to safeguard the health and wellbeing of both staff and prisoners. Reducing the prisoner population, in a proportionate way that ensures public safety, is I believe a reasonable step.

In reaching my decision I am also conscious that 32% of our current population have mental health issues, 50% have addiction issues, and 55% have a history of self-harm. The processes we put in place to reduce suicide and self-harm are based on a person centred approach and have over the past year delivered very impressive results. In the type of environment we are now describing NIPS and the South Eastern Trust staff will have limited one to one contact with individuals and a person centred approach will be very challenging to deliver. Consequently, having fewer prisoners will help us to focus limited resources on those most in need.

I am also mindful that a smaller prisoner population will allow us to reduce doubling up, that is the number of individuals who are sharing cells. Currently, because of the increase in our population, we have been required to make greater use of the doubling up facility. In the context of the developing pandemic it is contrary to best practice health advice. Reducing the level of doubling up is a practical step I believe we must take in the fight against the spread of the virus within the prison estate. We could of course open empty accommodation Blocks at Maghaberry, but we would need additional staff to operate them and with the staffing pressures we anticipate this is simply not an option for us.

Powers to Release Prisoners on a Temporary Basis:

Turning to the actions I plan to take, the Department of Justice has a discretionary power to release certain prisoners temporarily for any period or periods and subject to any conditions. This power is exercised by the Northern Ireland Prison Service on behalf of the Department. This rule applies to prisoners other than those remanded in custody by any court; those committed to custody for trial; or those committed to be sentenced or otherwise dealt with before or by the Crown Court.

It is my intention to give approval for the Prison Service to use this discretionary power to release, on a temporary basis, and after applying a number of offence related exclusions those prisoners who are due to be released automatically during the next three months, i.e. between now and 30 June.

While each individual will be assessed against the criteria outlined below, the Prison Service anticipate the release of fewer than 200 individuals. These individuals will be subject to a number of NIPS applied conditions including a curfew, a requirement to follow all Public Health Agency guidance during the current emergency period, a ban on victim contact, an alcohol ban and a ban on having any engagement with the media. It is important to note that prisoners released under Rule 27 may be recalled to prison at any time whether release conditions have been broken or not.

Detail of Temporary Release Scheme:

I am conscious that where possible we must ensure the general public has maximum confidence in actions undertaken by the Prison Service. Therefore I am limiting those who can be released temporarily for the purpose outlined above by excluding certain sentence types, certain offences and certain prisoners from being considered. I consider this to be a measured and proportionate response to the current unprecedented pandemic created by coronavirus (Covid-19).

On this basis the following will be excluded:

- (i) a prisoner serving an extended custodial sentence, an indeterminate custodial sentence or a life sentence;
- (ii) a prisoner serving a sentence under a hospital order or transfer direction within the meaning of the Mental Health (Northern Ireland) Order 1986 (NI 4);
- (iii) a sentence that engages the notification requirements of Part 2 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003;
- (iv) a prisoner who is liable to removal from the United Kingdom at sentence completion point;
- (v) a prisoner who has been recalled from licence during their current sentence;
- (vi) a prisoner on a restricted transfer from another jurisdiction;
- (vii) a prisoner subject to management under public protection arrangements or judged to present a Risk of Serious Harm (ROSH); and
- (viii) a prisoner serving a sentence for an offence:
  - involving homicide or manslaughter – (including any offence which has contributed to or led to the death of an individual or individuals);
  - connected or related to terrorism;
  - involving the use or possession of explosives;
  - involving the possession or use of a firearm or the use of an offensive weapon;
  - involving domestic violence or cruelty; or
  - perpetrated on the grounds of race, religion or sexual orientation.

Finally, and in order to ensure that a prisoner released temporarily has adequate support in the community and/or does not present a danger to themselves or others, a prisoner will only be released if NIPS is satisfied that:

- (i) they have immediate access to accommodation in the community; and
- (ii) they are not being managed under NIPS's Supporting People at Risk (SPAR) Evolution programme at the time they are temporarily released.

I do not believe the Prison Service should release a prisoner if there are reasonable grounds for believing they would, upon that release, be likely to present as homeless; or present a risk to their own wellbeing; or breach any other aspect of Public Health Agency guidance during their period of temporary release.

Where a qualifying prisoner has a victim who is registered with the Prisoner Release Victim Information Scheme the same details will be provided to them that they would expect at any other time of temporary release and at final discharge i.e. month of release and conditions of release. In these cases temporary release will be explained in the context of the ongoing public health emergency.

I plan to keep this scheme under constant review. It will be closed when the current public health emergency is declared at an end by the United Kingdom Government and the Northern Ireland Executive. However, if conditions dictate I will continue this scheme on a month-by-month basis from the end of April. This means that we will look at releasing temporarily those qualifying prisoners who are due to be released during the month of July at the beginning of May.

Conclusion:

The challenges over the coming days will be great and in closing it is right that I pay tribute to the staff of the Northern Ireland Prison Service who on our behalf are providing a vital public service in the most difficult of circumstances. The work of prison staff is seldom seen but it should never be underestimated.

Covid-19 Response: Funding Allocations

Published at 12.45 pm on Thursday 9 April 2020.

Mr Murphy (The Minister of Finance): The purpose of this Statement is to inform the Assembly of the funding allocations agreed by the Executive as part of its response to COVID-19.

In order to respond rapidly to the COVID-19 situation the Executive is handling funding for the crisis outside its normal financial processes of budget and in-year monitoring exercises.

The Executive has received additional funding through the application of the Barnett formula to allocations to Whitehall departments for England only measures. As this is an evolving situation the funding situation is being kept under review and the figures are being updated on a regular basis.

The Executive has received Barnett consequentials of £933 million in relation to measures announced prior to 6 April 2020. This includes funding relating to the £5 billion COVID-19 Response Fund. This statement deals with the allocation of this funding.

The Treasury has also advised of a further £101 million of consequentials from new measures. The majority of this relates to an allocation to the Department for Transport for Emergency Management Agreements. As there are ongoing discussions with the British Government in relation to a number of transport related matters the Executive has agreed to hold this funding for allocation following the outcome of these discussions.

In agreeing the allocations for the COVID-19 response the Executive's priorities have been ensuring our health service receives the funding it needs, maintaining key services and providing support for businesses and vulnerable people. This statement deals only with the allocation of the additional funding that has been provided. Departments will also be taking forward measures which will be funded from within existing budgets. The Executive may also decide to prioritise funding across departmental boundaries should it be required for a wider response. However, we are not yet at that stage.

You will be aware of a number of measures which have already been announced and the funding allocated to these is set out in the table below.

Dept	COVID-19 Response	£million
DfC	Discretionary Support	5.0
DfE	Small Business Grant (£10k for business eligible for Small Business Rate Relief) – benefiting 27,000 businesses.	270.0
DfE	Hospitality, Tourism and Retail Sectors Grant (£25k for business with a rateable value between £15k and £51k)	100.0

Dept	COVID-19 Response	£million
DE	Direct payment to families of 97,000 children who are entitled to free school meals.	18.9
DoF	Business Rates Holiday (3 months)	99.0
DoH	Includes but not restricted to: mobilising the health and social care response, including additional staffing, ramping up of testing, and securing essential personal protection and other equipment; and providing much needed support for primary and community care sectors and suspension of car parking charges for staff.	140.0
DoJ	Additional resources have been provided to the Prison Service to meet the challenges due to Covid-19.	1.9

Further to this, the Executive has agreed to set aside £150 million for the purchase of vital personal protective equipment (PPE). While this is primarily for the Department of Health there are potential costs in other departments and this level of funding is considered appropriate at this stage.

As set out in the table above, the Executive has already announced business support schemes targeted at small businesses, the leisure, hospitality and tourism sectors as well as support for all business through the rating system. This in addition to the support provided at a UK wide level.

However, I am aware that a number of business will fall through the gaps in this support. I am keen that vital support can be provided for these businesses as quickly as possible. Working is ongoing in the Department for the Economy, assisted by my own department, to develop further schemes which will target support where it is needed most.

In light of this the Executive has agreed that £40 million is held centrally pending further consideration of the further support required by businesses.

The Executive has also agreed a number of smaller allocations for specific purposes, these are:

- £1.5 million to DAERA for Support for the Fishing Industry
- £3.3 million to DfC for NIHE response to homelessness;
- £2.0 million to DfC for the Community Support Scheme;
- £10.0 million DfC for Shielding Package for Clinically High Risk;
- £12 million to DE towards Emergency Childcare provisions;
- £0.4 million to DE to enable the Youth Service to support DfC to provide food for vulnerable young people; and
- £4 million to DOJ to allow the PSNI to maintain critical services

In addition £10 million will be held centrally for further interventions to support vulnerable members of our society.

It has been agreed that the balance of funding, some £65 million, be provided to the Department of Health at this time. There are significant challenges in forecasting health costs in an evolving situation and my officials will be working closely with colleagues in the Department of Health to keep the position under review as the situation develops.

I would like to conclude by assuring members that this Executive will do everything possible to ensure our health service, businesses and vulnerable people are supported throughout this crisis.

Taxi Licensing Regulations

Published at 3.15 pm on Friday 10 April 2020.

Ms Mallon (The Minister for Infrastructure): The outbreak of covid-19 has caused significant challenges and changes in our daily lives. No sector or individual is untouched by the scale of the pandemic. I am grateful to members and to the public for their support and patience while my department has been working tirelessly to find solutions for our communities.

I have previously advised Members and the public of a range of measures which I have put in place to exempt various types of vehicles from needing an MOT test so that people can stay on the road when they need to make essential travel journeys during this current emergency. These exemptions were needed due to the closure of MOT centres in order to prevent the spread of COVID-19 for customers and staff.

However, finding a means to exempt taxis from PSV tests has been more difficult and has required a temporary change to regulations which has now been put in place. I can confirm that the Taxi Licensing (Amendment) (Coronavirus) Regulations (Northern Ireland) become operational today.

The Regulations deal with taxi vehicle licences which expire during the current emergency. They provide for the automatic renewal of these licences – without prior testing. This will ensure that these vehicles can remain on the road during this period.

Licences that are renewed in this way will last for a 6 month period, and will be issued free of charge. They will be subject to a number of conditions. These largely require owners and drivers to follow statutory requirements and keep their vehicles in a roadworthy condition – or risk revocation of their licence. However these are not new conditions, they have always been in place.

In order to minimise administration for everyone, taxi drivers and operators will not need to apply for their new licences. My Department will issue automatically a 6 month licence - free of charge - for all vehicles whose licence is due to expire between 10 March 2020 and 9 October 2020, unless appointments can be put back in place earlier. This is a temporary measure reflecting the exceptionally challenging times of this current pandemic.

We will prioritise those licences that have recently expired or are due to expire shortly. However I aim to have all the licences dispatched within the next few weeks. This will mean that the majority of licence holders will receive their 6 month licence well in advance of the expiry date of their current licence.

I am pleased to be able to report positive progress on this complex issue which I know has been of significant concern to the taxi industry. While my responsibility for taxis only extends to the regulation of the industry, I am very aware of the increasing financial hardship this crisis is creating; with my Executive colleagues I pushed hard to secure the self-employed financial package announced by the British Government recently. This will go some way to helping self-employed people, like those within the taxi industry, but in my view the package falls short in a number of respects and with Executive colleagues, I will continue to press for more assistance.

I also know that social distancing is a real concern and a challenge for those taxi drivers continuing to provide a service to the public. I have therefore been engaging with the Minister for Economy on this issue. The Department for Economy as the responsible Department on this issue has assured me that guidance on social distancing for taxi drivers is being prepared as quickly as possible. In my view this guidance is vital for drivers and customers to ensure health and safety is maintained as a priority at this time.

I wish to assure Members that I have been engaging with the taxi industry and recently wrote an open letter to taxi drivers to update them on my efforts to find a means of support for them.

With the numbers of taxi journeys greatly reducing, there is also now a real opportunity for taxi drivers to explore how they can play their part in taking the pressure off our vital services by helping the most vulnerable in our communities. To look at, for example, opportunities for delivering food, medicines and other vital supplies or to get patients to essential appointments. To help progress this, I have raised this with Executive colleagues to examine how taxis can be re-purposed to support the emergency efforts. The Department for Communities as the lead Department is working with my officials and local government to explore how this can be done.

Driving Licences – medicals

It has not been possible to resolve everything today. I am also very aware that a number of drivers are required to submit a medical report before a new taxi driver's licence can be granted, when applying for renewal of their taxi driver's licence. The COVID-19 situation means that it is increasingly difficult to gain access to a medical professional, given that healthcare resources are rightly being focussed on fighting the pandemic. Whilst some licences which require medical assessments are being processed, I am aware that this is not the case for everyone.

This issue is not restricted to taxi drivers – it also extends to bus and lorry drivers. A similar problem exists in Great Britain, and my staff are working urgently with colleagues in the Department for Transport to identify a possible way forward. I want to assure Members and the industry that my Department is focused on finding a solution to this issue and if it proves necessary to amend legislation locally, I will seek to do this and will provide an update as soon as possible.

Essential Travel

In all that I am doing, I am seeking to maintain connectivity and support key workers, such as our heroic nurses and doctors, to get to their work. I am mindful however that not all travel is essential and therefore solutions need to be put in place which focus on keeping vehicles on the road, safely and where it is essential to do so in the current emergency. I want to put on record my appreciation to my officials for all their hard work in responding to this crisis and finding solutions to the new challenges this crisis presents. I assure Members we will continue to play our part in working with others to fight back against COVID 19.

Failure of Lifts on DVA Test Centres: Publication of Audit Investigation Report

Published at 3.15 pm on Thursday 23 April 2020.

Ms Mallon (The Minister for Infrastructure): Members are aware that most vehicle testing services at MOT centres were suspended in late January, for safety reasons, given the faults identified in the scissor lifts across all of the MOT centres. At that time, I commissioned two independent reviews. The first was a short, review by independent engineers exploring the steps needed to return the MOT centres to full service operation; the second, a fuller investigation focusing on the timeline of events which led to the 55 lifts being taken out of operation.

I confirmed the outcome of the first review by the independent engineers to the Assembly in a Written Ministerial Statement on 27 February and have published the report on my Department's website. I also gave a commitment that the second independent report would be published to ensure full transparency on this issue. Unfortunately this process has been slightly delayed because of the COVID 19 pandemic and the focus on other urgent priorities. However, I am now in a position to publish this report and am, later today, placing a copy of it on my Department's website.

Key findings

This investigation was conducted by the NICS Group Audit Service, which is independent from my Department. It undertook a very thorough review to determine when the issue was first identified, what actions were taken to resolve the issue including the role of both DVA and the supplier and to understand how the operational management of the maintenance contract impacted on the issue.

As is the case with all audit reports, a copy of this investigation report has been provided to the Northern Ireland Audit Office.

The investigation has provided clarity on the timeline of events and the auditors concluded that it was reasonable for DVA to place reliance on the equipment manufacturer, supplier and maintenance contractor, MAHA, and the independent engineering insurance inspection reports.

As the Assembly will know, DVA was not alone in doing so and similar issues have arisen with similar lifts in test centres in the south and in other parts of Europe which other vehicle testing authorities have also had to deal with.

Nonetheless, the report does raise important questions around DVA's approach to some aspects of its lift maintenance and inspection regime, including in relation to setting target dates and timescales. They need careful attention so that lessons are learned and to prevent such disruption to the public from ever happening again.

It is also concerning that the report finds that the overall standard of record management observed within DVA was less than satisfactory. That is not acceptable, not least given the recent focus on the importance of good record keeping. I have already made clear that I expect to see clear improvement in this area within DVA but I also need to be satisfied that similar problems do not arise across the Department and be provided with regular updates to ensure this never recurs.

Members will be aware that DVA is planning to transition to a new supplier of test centre equipment, with installation expected from 2022 and the intention was therefore to only replace any lift which had reached its absolute life end. To inform this, MAHA carried out a survey of all existing vehicle testing equipment, including the lifts, in October 2018. This survey showed that the lifts, whilst showing signs of wear and tear, were generally in good condition. The audit report finds that DVA took assurance from the 2018 survey that a major refresh of lifts would not be necessary and did not anticipate the scenario where all the lifts would be taken out of service at the same time.

The report also identifies wider learning which must be captured and applied in DVA and indeed more widely. Those lessons include ensuring that clear target dates are set for reporting back by inspectors, better record keeping, particularly with regard to the making of key decisions and the need for repairs to be carried out with prior approval.

Key lessons

In line with the findings of the independent engineer's report, I remain clear that an inadequate inspection regime and metal fatigue led to this situation. As I have noted above, lessons must be learnt and every step taken to ensure this situation does not happen again.

Under my instruction new contractual arrangements are being taken forward in partnership with the Department of Finance's Construction and Procurement Delivery (CPD) team for DVA to procure the independent engineering inspectors directly. Their reports will be provided directly to DVA's Health and Safety team. The Health and Safety team will take ownership of these reports and ensure any necessary follow up actions are implemented by MAHA, through the DVA Contract Management team, and closely monitored. Where there is an immediate health and safety issue arising from these inspections, the MOT Centre Manager and the Health and Safety team will be informed immediately by the inspector.

DVA is also liaising with MAHA with regard to the expected lifetime of an inspection lift taking into account the load collective / load distribution; vehicle weight; and the number of lift cycles / vehicles inspections. Based on this assessment, a thorough review of the condition of each vehicle lift will be conducted at an appropriate point in the lifetime of each lift. This condition survey will be externally verified to provide some further assurance as to the quality of the assessment and the reasonableness of any assumptions or recommendations. This will then inform a proactive lift replacement programme.

Turning to that replacement programme, the new lifts are now ready for installation on a phased basis. Members will be aware that I have offered all of our MOT centres to the Minister for Health and our Health and Social Care Trusts for use as COVID-19 testing centres or indeed for any other purpose that might be helpful as we fight back against the coronavirus and its devastating impacts. This has meant that the replacement programme requires very careful management and new lifts will only be installed in those centres that the Department of Health and the Trusts have confirmed will not be required as part of our COVID-19 response. If, at some later point after lifts have been installed, those centres are needed I have assured the Health Minister and our health care workers that the offer still stands and that they will have priority use of our MOT centres for the duration of this crisis.

Next steps

I have asked my Permanent Secretary to ensure that the report's findings and learning are followed up robustly and at pace. The first step will be the development of an action plan with clear and specific actions and timescales and I am pleased to report that work to finalise this plan is well in hand. The plan will be signed off by me and only when I am satisfied that it is capable of addressing the issues and shortcomings that are identified in the report. I will also make this available to Members as soon as possible.

Progress in delivering the actions that the plan sets out will be monitored in the first instance by the DVA's Audit and Risk Assurance Committee which will provide a scrutiny and challenge function to ensure that actions are implemented in a timely manner. The Committee will also review the annual DVA Audit plan to ensure any control weaknesses highlighted in the report are reviewed during this financial year, with a particular focus on Contract Management.

Because of the seriousness of the issues in the report, and their wider application, the plan will also be directly and closely monitored by my Permanent Secretary in her role as Accounting Officer. I have made it clear that DVA will be required to provide regular monthly updates on progress in implementing the action plan and my Permanent Secretary and I will be scrutinising these carefully, with the assistance of the Department's own Audit and Risk Assurance Committee, to make sure that progress is not only made but sustained.

Additionally, my Permanent Secretary will be taking action to ensure that learning from the investigation, including in relation to contract management and record keeping, is applied more widely across the Department.

The fact that this situation arose is unacceptable and I want to assure Members and the public that I have taken all of the independent engineering, procurement and audit advice I requested, and steps and processes will continue to be put in place to ensure that this situation never arises again.

The Executive Office

Mr Butler asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what discussions they have had with the Minister of Education regarding repealing the exemption of teaching from the Fair Employment and Treatment Order (Northern Ireland) 1998.
(AQW 876/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): We have not yet held discussions with the Minister of Education on this matter. However, consideration of this issue in due course will include consultations and discussions with Minister of Education.

Ms Dolan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what progress has been made in relation to implementing the regulations which govern the publication of gender pay gap information.

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: TEO officials are currently working with officials from the Department for Communities to consider how best to implement the gender pay gap provisions contained in Section 19 of the Employment Act (Northern Ireland) 2016.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) what is the staffing compliment of the Commission for Victims and Survivors; and (ii) what is its annual budget.

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill:

Mr Lunn asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on their Department's Brexit preparations in line with the Northern Ireland protocol; and how many people are working on ensuring compliance with the protocol.
(AQW 1882/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: An Executive sub-committee on EU Exit issues has been established and will be a key structure in the co-ordination of our response to the out workings of the Withdrawal Agreement including the Northern Ireland Protocol.

We have written to the Prime Minister seeking a meeting regarding his Government's commitments in the New Decade, New Approach including those commitments associated with the Protocol and, in particular, the contradictory statements by the UK Government and the European Commission on the implications of the Protocol for the movement of goods from GB to NI.

To support the Executive sub-committee the Executive Office have set up a cross-departmental Trade and Protocol group to co-ordinate the work of officials across all the affected Departments. This group will help ensure that Ministers can provide strategic oversight and direction to meet key activities. The scope of this work includes understanding the implications and practical delivery of the Protocol and ensuring the Northern Ireland position is represented in the decision making structures in Whitehall.

We will engage closely, both at Ministerial and official level, with the Protocol workstream which we have asked the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to establish.

Five members of staff within the Executive Office have direct responsibilities for the work on the Protocol. Other departments have dedicated capacity for this work.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister in regard to the Written Ministerial Statement of 10 February 2020 on the Legislative Programme, are all Ministers committed to and required to support all the listed bills.

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: In accordance with Section (9) of the Pledge of Office, Ministers are required to support, and to act in accordance with, all decisions of the Executive Committee.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, in regard to their appointment of Special Advisers, in each case (i) whether they independently chose their special adviser or an allocation was made by their party; (ii) how it was made known, and to whom, that the Ministers were seeking to appoint special advisers; (iii) whether a pool of candidates was considered; (iv) if so, how many were within the pool; (v) how any pool of candidates was assembled; (vi) what were the essential and desirable criteria set for the job; (vii) by what process was the choice made; (viii) what notes and records were made and kept of the process; (ix) how fair employment obligations were met; (x) on what date(s) was the job offered and accepted; (xi) what was the contractual start date; and (xii) was the range of available salary discussed with the appointee, or was the job offered and accepted without knowledge of the likely salary.

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: The appointment of our special advisers followed the requirements set out in the Code for the Appointment of Special Advisers agreed by the Executive and published by the Department of Finance on 20 January 2020.

Salary details were confirmed by the Department of Finance on 14 February.

Stephen McGlade, Philip Weir and Emma Little Pengelly were appointed with effect from 11 January 2020, Dara O'Hagan was appointed with effect from 3 February 2020 and John Loughran was appointed with effect from 5 February 2020. Kim Ashton was appointed with effect from Monday 02 March.

Mr Beggs asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister why they have committed £28million over the next three years from the Executive Office budget to the Office of Identity and Cultural Expression and its associated Commissioners.

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: The £28 million figure is an estimate over 3 years as the development of these bodies is at an early stage.

Costs will depend on proposed work plans by the bodies, as agreed by Ministers.

The budgets will be set and agreed by Ministers in accordance with available funds.

Department of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail (i) the reason for the change in rules surrounding ammonia emissions from slurry tanks; and (ii) the legal basis for making the change.

Mr Poots (The Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs): The Department has not made any change to rules regarding ammonia emissions or to its advice to planning authorities on assessing the impacts of emissions from agricultural development. However, in light of recent case law and emerging evidence, my officials are currently undertaking a review of the operational protocol for such advice. I recognise the importance of clarity on this issue for the agriculture sector and planning authorities and will ensure that this work progresses in a timely manner. It is in everyone's interest to address environmental concerns while allowing sustainable agricultural development.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs what measures are being taken to prevent further deterioration of protected sites, as legally required under the Habitats Directive.

Mr Poots: The Department is taking action to avoid further deterioration of our protected sites through a range of programmes and measures designed to address key pressures and threats in order to restore to, or maintain at favourable condition.

We are developing conservation management plans for NI's Special Areas of Conservation (also designated as ASSIs) to inform the most appropriate management of these important habitats and species. These plans are well advanced and will enable us to target actions to improve condition on these sites.

We support actions on the ground by providing others who own and manage ASSIs with grant support and bespoke agreements through our Management of Sensitive Sites (MOSS) programme and the Environmental Farming Scheme, and through the INTERREG Va Habitats Programme.

Further protection of our sites is afforded through the Environment Order (NI) 2002 which provides a regulatory framework to reduce the risk of damaging operations, while planning applications and environmental permits and licences are subject to assessments to determine potential risks to site features.

The Department is also working to address wider pressures on protected sites, such as that posed by ammonia emissions through a review of the operational protocol on the assessment of air pollution impacts on sensitive habitats and the development of an Ammonia Action Plan.

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs why his Department continues to provide funding to private landowners for the planting of non-native tree species.

Mr Poots: The policy of my Department is to expand forest cover to increase the widest range of benefits they provide for the people of Northern Ireland. In promoting this policy grant aid is available to landowners for planting woodlands, which include native and non-native trees, in compliance with the UK Forestry Standard.

Mrs Barton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail (i) the number of farm businesses that receive income from the Basic Payment Scheme; (ii) the number of farm businesses which receive income from the Basic Payment Scheme which do not produce livestock or crops; and (iii) the cost for non-producing farm businesses, broken down by county.

Mr Poots:

- (i) In the 2019 scheme year 23,819 farm businesses received a Basic Payment.
- (ii) Of the farm businesses who received a Basic Payment 1,107 did not hold cattle or sheep and all land declared was grass. The amount of Direct Payments made to this group represents 1.38% of the total amount of Direct Payments made for the 2019 scheme year.
- (iii) All farm businesses in receipt of Basic Payments must be actively farming the land for which they claim. Payment is based on the agricultural activity on the land and this is not restricted to having cattle and/or sheep or producing crops. There are other eligible agricultural activities such as the production of grass silage, grazing horses and contract rearing of livestock. Therefore, no farm businesses receive payment which are not carrying out agricultural activity.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs when he will publish an implementation timetable to establish a Contaminated Land Regime, provided for within Part 3 of The Waste and Contaminated Land (Northern Ireland) Order 1997.

Mr Poots: I can advise that no decision has been taken on the introduction of a contaminated land regime in Northern Ireland.

I am currently considering the recommendations from a risk assessment conducted by the NIEA of the financial, environmental and health risks associated with not having a specific Contaminated Land regulatory regime in Northern Ireland.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs for his assessment of the (i) cost; and (ii) impact of his Department still having legal responsibility for the Reservoirs Act 2015.

Mr Poots:

- (i) The costs.

The costs to the Department of still having the legal responsibility for the Reservoirs Act (2015) have been minimal due to the Department for Infrastructure (DfI) acting, as far as possible, as if the relevant transfer of functions from the former DARD had taken place. DfI has the necessary expertise and the staff to regulate reservoirs and DAERA doesn't.

Some costs have been incurred in terms of joint working, including exploring the means of transferring legal responsibility from DAERA to DfI in the absence of a sitting Assembly and Executive. These costs relate to staff time, which was not recorded separately.

- (ii) The impact.

The impact on the Department of still having the legal responsibility for the Reservoirs Act (2015) has been minimal, again due to DfI acting, as far as possible, as if the relevant transfer of functions from the former DARD had taken place. Work undertaken between the departments to date has not been disruptive to DAERA.

Ms Mullan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail (i) the total amount spent in cleaning up the Mobuoy site; and (ii) the total amount paid by her Department in fines for failure to clean up the Mobuoy site, broken down each year since 2011.

Mr Poots:

- (i) The illegal disposal of waste at Mobuoy Road is the subject of an ongoing criminal prosecution and the question refers to matters that are in evidence. Accordingly, I am unable to provide the information requested at this time.
- (ii) There have been no fines levied on the Department in relation to the Mobuoy site.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, in regard to his appointment of a Special Adviser, (i) whether he independently chose his special adviser or an allocation was made by his party; (ii) how it was made known, and to whom, that he was seeking to appoint a special adviser; (iii) whether a pool of candidates was considered; (iv) if so, how many were within the pool; (v) how any pool of candidates was assembled; (vi) what were the essential and desirable criteria set for the job; (vii) by what process was the choice made; (viii) what notes and records were made and kept of the process; (ix) how fair employment obligations were met; (x) on what date(s) was the job offered and accepted; (xi) what was the contractual start date; and (xii) was the range of available salary discussed with the appointee, or was the job offered and accepted without knowledge of the likely salary.

Mr Poots: The appointment of my special adviser followed the requirements set out in the Code for the Appointment of Special Advisers agreed by the Executive and published by the Department of Finance on 20 January. Salary details were confirmed to me by the Department of Finance on 14 February. Mark Beattie was appointed on 10 March 2020.

Miss Woods asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs (i) for an update on (a) unauthorised access; and (b) dumping in aquaculture areas of Carlingford Lough; and (ii) to detail any investigations or enforcement measures undertaken by his Department with regard to breaches of Fishing Culture Licence conditions.

Mr Poots: The Department has been aware for some time of difficulties between neighbouring licensees producing shellfish at Mill Bay in Carlingford Lough and has received reports of unlawful dumping of shellfish waste and breaches of licence conditions from different parties. Investigations continue in these areas, which will inform any appropriate enforcement action.

The Department is very keen to help resolve disputes between differing parties at Mill Bay in Carlingford Lough. A recent development is an approach from the Shellfish Association of Great Britain to act as a facilitator in discussions. I have asked my officials to expedite this as a priority.

Miss Woods asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether he has plans to ban the sale of (i) household coal; and (ii) wet wood as part of the strategy to improve air quality.

Mr Poots: There are no current plans to introduce a ban on the sale of household coal and wet wood in Northern Ireland.

I can confirm that my department has been working on developing a draft Clean Air Strategy. Officials have been collaborating with other Departments and are moving towards finalising the draft discussion document on the Clean Air Strategy. Once complete, I will consider the options for issuing the draft Clean Air Strategy discussion document for public consultation to seek views on a wide range of matters.

Mrs Barton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail the direct payments paid to support each of the annual agricultural shows for the last three years.

Mr Poots: My Department currently provides sponsorship to a number of local shows. A total budget of £5000 is available each year. In addition to this my Department also participates at eight of the shows each year on a rotational basis and pays for the trade space and advertisements within the respective events catalogues. Tables 1-3 provide these details.

My Department also provides funding through the Northern Ireland Regional Food Programme (NIRFP) to support the promotion of high quality Northern Ireland produce. This is a competitive programme that some local agricultural shows have availed of over a number of years. The NIRFP funding provided over the last three years is summarised in Table 4.

DAERA is committed to supporting and contributing to the success of our local shows and will continue to work in partnership with them as we progress into the 2020 show season.

Mrs Barton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail the current policy for the maintenance and replacement of boundary fencing of areas of land under the control of Forestry Service.

Mr Poots: The current policy is that Forest Service maintain and repair boundary fencing where it is necessary to meet sustainable forest management obligations and protect the public forest asset. As such, boundary fencing works are undertaken where there is a need to protect forests at particularly vulnerable stages of their development. This tends primarily to be where trees are not sufficiently established or robust to withstand browsing pressures from wild animals or livestock straying in the forest.

Mrs Barton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail (i) the average time from diagnosis to removal off-farm for bovine TB reactor cattle; and (ii) the measures that can be introduced to reduce this time.

Mr Poots: For the last three months (1 November 2019- 31 January 2020), the average time from diagnosis to off-farm removal of bovine Tuberculosis reactor cattle was 15 calendar days. Herd keepers are required to isolate reactor animals from the rest of their herd from the time of notification by the testing veterinarian diagnosis until they are removed.

This average time is within the legislative requirement to slaughter within 30 days and the current internal Departmental target of 3 weeks. A reduction in the average time would require additional staff resources, in particular an increase in the number of valuation staff.

Mrs Barton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether his Department has any plans to improve and simplify the identification of animals for recording on APHIS.

Mr Poots: The Department recently sought the views of stakeholders on a new numbering format as part of the preparatory work for the potential introduction of bovine electronic identification (bovine EID).

However the format of animal identification numbers recorded on APHIS identifies the holding of origin for animals which is important for the traceability which underpins food safety and disease control systems. As this is driven by EU legislation it is therefore unlikely to change in the near future.

Livestock Keepers currently record animal identifications (i.e. register cattle births) either directly onto APHIS using APHIS-on-line, through paper submission to DAERA or via a telephony service provided by DAERA. DAERA has recently released a series of usability improvements to APHIS-on-line and further changes to enhance its operability on mobile phones and tablets are planned to be released to farmers by May 2020.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether he had any engagement with the Home Office to discuss the concerns of agriculture workers and producers about plans to introduce a points-based immigration system.

Mr Poots: The UK Government's policy statement, released in February 2020, detailing the introduction of a points-based immigration system, included the announcement of a programme of engagement by the Home Office to begin in March 2020. While the Home Office is yet to release information on the specific content and structure of this programme, the aim is to increase understanding of the new system amongst impacted stakeholders and to understand stakeholder views on the implementation of the points-based system.

My department will be represented in these engagement sessions by officials and it is expected that stakeholders from our agri-food industry will participate also. I would also highlight that officials in my department routinely engage with counterparts in both the Department for the Economy and the Home Office on migration issues as they relate to the NI agri-food sector.

My department has been in correspondence with Executive colleagues who will be taking forward engagement with the Home Office to outline concerns and implications of the new immigration system for NI.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether his Department has had any engagement with the UK Government regarding the UK Shared Prosperity Fund.

Mr Poots: The development and implementation of the UK Shared Prosperity Fund (SPF) is of direct interest and concern for DAERA stakeholders and rural communities in Northern Ireland. My Department, through the Department of Finance, has therefore taken every available opportunity to engage with the UK Government in an effort to put forward Northern Ireland's position in respect of the design, implementation and delivery of the SPF.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether he has requested that the UK Government funds a successor to the Priority 6 LEADER programme from the UK Shared Prosperity Fund.

Mr Poots: Work is ongoing within my Department, and across the NICS, to develop measures and mechanisms to support rural society and address the challenges facing rural communities given that we have now left the EU and the UK will not be part of the next Rural Development Programming period (2021-2027). My Department will continue to engage with Department of Finance in relation to securing the necessary EU replacement funding for future financial periods.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether his Department has assessed the impact on (i) agricultural workers; and (ii) the wider food and drink processing industry, of the Home Office's plans to introduce a points-based immigration system.

Mr Poots: In 2017 it is estimated that migrant employees accounted for 20 per cent of the paid agricultural labour force, with the substantial majority being employed on horticultural farms. As most of the demand for migrant labour in NI agriculture is low skilled in nature, the lack of a route for low skilled migration under the new system will mean that it will generally not be possible to recruit migrants to work on NI farms under the terms of the new system unless specific schemes, such as the current scheme for seasonal workers, are put in place.

The NI food and drinks processing industry has a greater reliance on lower skilled migrant labour relative to the NI economy as a whole and the wider UK agri-food industry. In 2017, an estimated 44 per cent of all employees in the NI food and drinks processing industry were migrant workers. The majority of migrant workers in this sector work in lower skilled roles, such as process, plant and machine operatives. Restrictions on low-skilled migration under the new system will negatively affect the supply of labour to the industry, which will likely increase costs to businesses.

Given the significant dependence on migrant labour within the agri-food industry and the continued free movement of goods between NI and the EU, there are concerns that restricted access to labour in NI could adversely affect the competitiveness of our agri-food businesses compared to those in EU countries that will continue to benefit from freedom of movement. This is particularly concerning for NI given the lower geographic barriers to trade with and similar sectoral structure to the Republic of Ireland.

Access to labour has been and remains important to ensuring that our businesses are able to continue to thrive in the both the near and long term future.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs what measures (i) are being taken; and (ii) will be taken by his Department to arrest the decline in the bee population.

Mr Poots: The Department provides guidance to landowners on the maintenance of habitats to support the bee and wider pollinator population. Official controls are implemented by the Department which includes monitoring honeybee apiaries and bee imports to detect the presence of harmful pests. An on-line database (Databees) has been introduced by the Department in 2018 to encourage voluntary registration of bee keepers to improve effectiveness of bee health and controls. The College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise (CAFRE) facilitates preliminary courses for new entrants to beekeeping.

The Department is currently contributing to the on-going work of a coalition of interest groups aimed at the development of a Pollinator plan covering the years 2021 to 2025. This will inform future policy considerations of this Department regarding its role in supporting a healthy bee population.

Miss Woods asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail (i) the location; and (ii) annual volumes of commercial peat extraction in Northern Ireland.

Mr Poots: My Department does not hold information on the location or volumes of commercial peat extraction activities in the wider countryside. The power to grant permission for large-scale peat extraction rests with the Planning Authorities.

In relation to Department owned lands, commercial peat extraction occurs at Newferry, near Portglenone, under a lease arrangement. Volumes of extraction are unavailable.

Miss Woods asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs (i) to detail the extent of unauthorised peat extraction in Northern Ireland; and (ii) to detail the enforcement action taken against unauthorised peat extraction in Northern Ireland in the last five years.

Mr Poots: My Department does not hold information on the extent of unauthorised peat extraction in the wider countryside. DAERA officials are aware of a number of incidents of unauthorised peat extraction on designated sites such as Areas of Special Scientific Interest (ASSI). However there are no records of prosecutions relating to unauthorised peat extraction in ASSIs during this period.

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs for a timescale for bringing forward the Departments (Transfer of Functions) Order (Northern Ireland) 2016 in respect of reservoirs.

Mr Poots: This process of transfer may take 3-6 months to complete.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail how many individuals purchased (i) an angling rod licence; (ii) a permit; or (iii) a day ticket, in each of the last five years.

Mr Poots:

(i) Angling Licences

2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018
26,980	25,667	25,779	26,264	26,190	24,198

(ii) Angling Permit

2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018
13,308	12,509	12,268	15,951	18,059	16,876

(iii) Day Ticket – River Bush

2013	2014	2015	2016	2017	2018
800	743	847	823	907	515

The figures for 2019 have not been compiled yet. Day tickets are issued for 3 separate stretches of the River Bush.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, pursuant to AQW 1163/17-22, how these levels compare to (i) Scotland; (ii) England; (iii) Wales; and (iv) Republic of Ireland.

Mr Poots: The National Atmospheric Emissions Inventory estimates that Northern Ireland's ammonia emissions were 33.9 kilotonnes (kt) in 2017. This inventory estimates that Scotland's ammonia emissions were 31.7kt, England's ammonia emissions were 193kt and Wales' ammonia emissions were 23.6kt. Ireland's Transboundary Gas Emissions report estimates that ammonia emissions in the Republic of Ireland in 2017 were 118.5kt.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, pursuant to AQW 784/17-22, to detail (i) the total envisaged number of staff; and (ii) the number of (a) departmental staff; and (b) other civil service staff, currently located at his Department's headquarters in Ballykelly.

Mr Poots:

- (i) The Department plans to have a total of 407 staff located in Ballykelly by 2021. This number includes 323 DAERA staff already working there, and a further 84 posts consisting of vacancies and a number of posts due to transfer from Dundonald House.
- (ii) (a) As of 1st January 2020 there were 323 DAERA staff located in Ballykelly.
- (b) There are a further 2 staff from other Civil Service departments located in Ballykelly.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs (i) for his assessment of the effectiveness of the Rural Needs Act; and (ii) whether he has plans to review the legislation.

Mr Poots: I consider the Rural Needs Act (NI) 2016 to be effective in supporting the delivery of positive and meaningful benefits for rural dwellers and considering it has only been in operation for a short period of time I have no plans to review it at present.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail (i) how many appeals to awards under the Basic Payment Scheme were lodged by farm businesses in the North Antrim constituency; and (ii) the final outcome of each, in the last five years.

Mr Poots: A total of 221 applications for a Review of Decision under the Basic Payment Scheme were lodged by farm businesses in the North Antrim constituency in the last five years. The final outcomes are broken down in the following table: -

Final outcome	Number of reviews
Allowed	61
Partially allowed	11
Disallowed	109
Withdrawn by farm business	28
Timebound*	3
Still being processed	9
Total	221

* Decision not reviewed as application was submitted after the deadline to request a review.

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, pursuant to AQW 2112/17-22, when will the review of the business case for the Environmental Farming Scheme be completed.

(AQW 2812/17-22)

Mr Poots: Following a review of uptake of the scheme so far, my Department has submitted an Addendum to the original Business Case for the Environmental Farming Scheme (EFS) to the Department of Finance (DoF).

My officials will be working closely with DoF officials to aim to achieve approval at the earliest opportunity.

Subject to the necessary approvals being in place, my Department plans to issue Tranche 3 agreements to successful applicants in mid-March.

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline (i) whether any costs incurred locally by measures in the new Environment Bill will be covered by either the Executive or Westminster; (ii) an estimation of the total (a) resource; and (b) capital costs associated with the Environment Bill; and (iii) a breakdown of who will pay for these.

Mr Poots: The Bill provides a framework for a number of measures. The financial implications will be assessed on an individual basis as measures are implemented. A number have no direct financial implications, others will be self-funding and, in the case of the Office of Environmental Protection, the Northern Ireland costs will fall to the Executive.

Department for Communities

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister for Communities whether she will support a ban on sponsorship by gambling companies in local sport.

(AQO 283/17-22)

Ms Hargey (The Minister for Communities): The current legislation in relation to gambling here dates back to 1985; I recognise that it is outdated and takes no account of the internet and other industry advances nor does it address the serious issue of problem gambling.

The Gambling Prevalence surveys carried out by my Department have demonstrated that there is a much higher rate of problem gambling here than in other jurisdictions.

My Department's consultation on the Regulation of Gambling closed on the 21 February. The purpose of the consultation was to seek views on the appropriateness of the current law and to identify areas of gambling activity which should be included in any future legislation.

My officials are analysing over 400 responses to the consultation and I expect to receive a report in a few weeks. Following engagement with the committee, I hope to be able to announce the way forward by the summer.

With regard to sponsorship by gambling companies of local sport, I recognise the great work sports clubs do, especially for young people and that many of them rely on advertising and sponsorship to raise funds. I am, however, also very concerned at the harm caused by problem gambling in our society.

I will want to consider the contents of the consultation report on this issue and take into account the health and economic impacts before coming to any conclusions on changes to the law.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Communities when she will bring forward legislation to reclassify housing associations.
(AQO 285/17-22)

Ms Hargey: In line with New Decade, New Approach I intend to bring forward legislation as soon as possible to facilitate reversal of the Office for National Statistics' classification of Housing Associations as Non-Financial Public Corporations. I am currently considering draft legislation.

This is a very urgent issue but finalisation of the draft legislation has only been possible since the return of the Executive. My officials and I are bringing this process to a close as quickly as possible so that I may seek agreement from the Executive to introduce the legislation into the Assembly.

My officials are also working with officials in the Department of Finance, in the meantime, to secure an extension from Treasury to the current derogation – due to end on 31 March, 2020. This derogation has so far deferred an effect of the decision by the Office for National Statistics – which otherwise would have required the borrowings of Registered Housing Associations to score against the Capital Budget of my Department.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister for Communities whether Post Office Card Account holders will be denied access to their accounts following the end of the contract in November 2021.

Ms Hargey: Payments of benefits and pension into mainstream accounts provides people with greater financial inclusion as these can provide access to services such as Direct Debit, ATMs and Chip & Pin. These services are not available through the Post Office card account.

The Post Office card account contract is due to end in November 2021, and following contract end, people will no longer be able to access or use their existing Post Office card accounts.

People are therefore encouraged to switch from their Post Office card account to a mainstream account. This is considered to be a safe and reliable method of payment, providing financial inclusion and giving people a greater choice about where and when they collect their money.

For those people unable to access or manage a mainstream account, my Department will offer a replacement payment exception service.

Support is available to help people choose a product that is right for their circumstances, which may be an alternative payment exception service.

A dedicated free telephone service has been set up within DWP which offers POca users the opportunity to ask questions and provides support in choosing an account that is right for their circumstances.

Contact details are provided in letters issued on to customers by DWP on behalf of the Department, and are also available on NI Direct.

Further support can be made available by contacting the Make the Call Service.

Ms Sheerin asked the Minister for Communities how she will ensure effective rural proofing for departmental strategies.
(AQO 291/17-22)

Ms Hargey: The "New Decade, New Approach" document has detailed support for a new Programme for Government underpinned by key supporting strategies.

The Rural Needs Act (NI) 2016 provides a statutory duty on all public authorities to have due regard to rural needs when developing, adopting, implementing or revising policies, strategies and plans, and when designing and delivering public services.

My officials have received training from the Rural Development Council on conducting a Rural Needs Impact Assessment and relevant information has been shared as appropriate so that all staff are aware of their statutory duties. I will of course ensure that all social strategies currently being developed by my Department are rural-proofed.

My Department also compiles information on the exercise of its duties in this regard and this is published in our Annual Report and Accounts and reported to DAERA for the purposes of their annual monitoring.

My officials will adopt a co-design, co-production approach when developing strategies for consideration by the Executive and in doing so will have due regard to the social and economic needs of persons in rural areas during both development and implementation.

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister for Communities for a timeframe for assessing the responses to the consultation on changes to gambling laws.

Ms Dolan asked the Minister for Communities whether she is considering alternative or additional methods of identifying and tackling poverty.

(AQO 290/17-22)

Ms Hargey: In line with New Decade, New Approach, I will be publishing a timescale for the delivery of a new Anti-Poverty Strategy in the coming weeks. The principles and practice of citizen and community engagement, co-design and co-production will be a key part of the development and delivery of this strategy.

Together with stakeholders and colleagues from other departments, steps will be taken to ensure that the Strategy targets and measures the things that will make a real difference in identifying and tackling poverty. I am committed to the delivery of an anti-poverty strategy that targets objective need and ensures that no one is penalised for being poor.

Currently the main source of data used to measure poverty here is the Family Resources Survey (FRS). The FRS collects information on the incomes and circumstances of around 2,000 private households. My department publishes Poverty Statistics annually using the FRS data. These statistics estimate the number and percentage of people living in low income households.

Ms Sheerin asked the Minister for Communities how she will ensure effective rural proofing for departmental strategies.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for Communities how she plans to reduce the waiting list for housing, particularly for people living in housing stress.

(AQO 292/17-22)

Ms Hargey: In line with New Decade New Approach, I intend to work with Executive colleagues to progress measures that aim to reduce the number of households in housing stress.

These measures will include:

- Enabling housing associations to continue building new social homes by bringing forward legislation to facilitate reversal of the Office for National Statistics' classification of registered Housing Associations as Non-Financial Public Corporations;
- Enhancing investment and agreeing a target for new social and affordable home starts. In fact, in 2019/20, £146 million has been allocated against a target to start building 1850 new social homes; and
- Tackling the maintenance backlog for Housing Executive properties.

In addition, housing will be an outcome for the Executive within the new Programme for Government, with a focus on ensuring every household has access to a good quality, affordable and sustainable home that is appropriate for its needs.

In support of this, I will bring forward as soon as possible my Housing Programme for the next two years.

Department of Education

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) how many applications for a statement of special educational needs exceeded the 26-week statutory time limit; (ii) how long these assessments took; (iii) and the reasons for the delay, for each year since 2016.

(AQW 2043/17-22)

Mr Weir (The Minister of Education):

- (i) The numbers of applications for a statement of special educational needs which exceeded the 26 week statutory time frame are as follows:

2018/19:	2229
2019 to date:	865*

* Cases opened in the 2019/20 financial year to 14 February 2020 which exceeded the 26 week time frame.

- (ii) The average time to complete the assessments outlined in (i) is as follows:

2016/17:	42 weeks
2017/18:	47 weeks
2018/19:	47 weeks
2019 to date:	34 weeks

** average time for statutory assessments which exceeded the 26 week time frame, opened and completed within the 2019/20 financial year to 14 February 2020.

- (iii) The reasons for the delay, for each year since 2016:

The EA does not have information regarding delays for reasons other than valid exceptions. Valid exceptions can be:

- a further advice needs to be sought by the EA to complete its assessment;
- b parents wish to provide advice to the EA more than 6 weeks after they were invited to do so;
- c advice from a school principal is delayed because of school closure;
- d advice sought from a Health Trust has not been provided within 6 weeks;
- e exceptional personal circumstances affect the child or parent;
- f the child or parent is away for at least 4 weeks during the 18 week period; or
- g an appointment for examination or test is not kept.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education does he anticipate any enrolment problems for year 8 enrolment in September 2020 across schools in North Down.

Mr Weir: My Department is planning for Transfer 2020 and it is the intention that additional places will be allocated to post-primary schools in North Down to address potential oversubscription for Year 8 admission. Schools will shortly be informed of the increases to be allocated.

These additional places reflect the fact that it is likely that schools in North Down will be oversubscribed in 2020. These places will address oversubscription and my Department may seek to provide further places if there is a requirement to increase numbers further in advance of September.

My priority is to ensure that there are sufficient places across Northern Ireland to meet demand so that the stress on families associated with transferring from primary to post-primary education is kept to an absolute minimum. As such, the best interests of children will take precedence over the interests of individual institutions.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education to provide details of the budget for each school in North Down.

Mr Weir: The table below details the budget allocated to schools in the North Down constituency, through the 2019-20 Common Funding Formula (CFF) only.

* Data source: CFF 2019-20, which included funding to mitigate the increase in Teachers' Employer's Superannuation costs effective from 1 April 2019.

This excludes special schools, as these schools are not funded through the CFF.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the number of primary school children who have presented with mental health issues in each of the last three years; and (ii) outline the referral pathway for dealing with such cases.

Mr Weir: The Education Authority has advised that it does not hold this information centrally, as the recording of these pupils is the responsibility of the school concerned.

If a school had a concern about a primary age child and their mental health, the parent would be contacted and asked to seek a GP appointment for referral to Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services (CAMHS).

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of employees in his Department who currently earn less than £25,600.

(AQW 2642/17-22)

Mr Weir: The number of employees in the Department of Education who currently earn less than £25,600 per annum is 201.

This includes some part-time staff whose full time rate of pay would be higher than this amount.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Education to outline what his Department is doing to promote gender equality and equality of opportunity within the selection processes of the Craigavon Dickson Plan system of education.

Mr Weir: Public authorities are subject to the equality duties arising from Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 and schools have a responsibility not to discriminate against pupils on the protected grounds of sex, sexual orientation, race and disability.

Any reform of the system of transfer within the Dickson Plan area that would be significant would be for the schools' managing authorities to consider in the first instance. A Development Proposal would be required and as Education Minister I would be the ultimate decision-maker on any proposal. I do however want to assure people locally of my continued support and assurance of the continuation of the Dickson Plan system.

The operation of the current selection processes are a matter for Boards of Governors and not one in which my Department can intervene.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Education what plans his Department has to reform the existing selection processes used for selection within the Craigavon Dickson Plan area at age 14.

Mr Weir: Public authorities are subject to the equality duties arising from Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 and schools have a responsibility not to discriminate against pupils on the protected grounds of sex, sexual orientation, race and disability.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 1738/17-22, (i) what is meant by statutory holiday periods; (ii) does this include summer holidays; and (iii) is the service available over the summer period for pupils and parents.

Mr Weir:

(i) Statutory/public holidays are closure days recognised by the Education Authority (EA). A list of statutory / public holidays for 2020/21 is due to be published by the EA to all support staff during March 2020.

For information, the 2019/20 statutory/public holidays were as follows:- Easter Mon/Tue, May Day, Late Spring Bank Holiday (May), July 12th & 13th, Late Summer Holiday (Aug), Christmas Eve, Christmas Day, Boxing Day, New Year's Day and St Patrick's Day.

(ii)/(iii) The Education Welfare Service is available to schools, pupils and parents during school holiday periods (including summer holidays), excluding weekends and EA statutory/public holidays.

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Education to detail how many children, per constituency, are in Education Other Than at School (EOTAS).

(AQW 2662/17-22)

Mr Weir: The table below details the number of pupils enrolled in EOTAS centres by constituency of the pupil's residence, as per the 2018-19 School Census.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister of Education how many primary and post-primary schools in North Belfast are paying for counselling support from their school budgets.

Mr Weir: Under the Local Management of Schools (LMS) arrangements, schools receive fully delegated budgets which enables resources to be used in accordance with their individual needs and priorities. My Department does not hold information relating to these delegated budgets and the provision of counselling support.

I can however confirm the position in relation to the funding provided for the Extended Schools (ES) programme - according to Action Plans submitted by schools for 2019/20, 15 primary and post primary schools and a further 4 cluster groups located in North Belfast are currently offering counselling with the aid of ES funding. In addition, the Belfast Boys' Model School and the Belfast Model School for Girls both provide counselling with funding allocated through the Full Service Extended Schools programme.

Ms Rogan asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of school infrastructure in South Down.

Mr Weir: My Department has invested in improvement and maintenance works to upgrade the schools estate and keep it in a safe and serviceable condition. This financial year, the budget for minor works improvements is in excess of £83 million. In addition to minor works, further capital investment is directed through the Major Works, School Enhancement and Fresh Start Programmes.

There are currently 3 Major Capital projects in the South Down constituency. These are Down High School, Downpatrick, Iveagh Primary School, Rathfriland and St Columban's Primary School, Kilkeel.

In May 2018, Knockevin Special School was included in the first tranche of projects announced to advance in design under the second call to the School Enhancement Programme (SEP2)

In March 2016 it was announced that Shimna Integrated College would be amongst the first tranche of projects funded under the Fresh Start Programme. The approved business case identified the preferred option for a new build on the existing site. Design is well advanced and construction is expected to be completed in spring 2024.

However, despite the increasing investment in capital projects, significant demand for further improvement remains. The implementation of further major works and SEP's over the next five years will therefore be an important element of improving the overall health of the estate in the medium and longer term.

My Department will continue to bid for additional capital budget and invest all of the funding allocated.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Education to outline what emergency preparations his Department is making with other Department's in respect of potential outbreaks and spreading of Coronavirus in Northern Ireland schools.
(AQW 2711/17-22)

Mr Weir: My Department has been working closely with colleagues in the Department of Health (DoH) and the Public Health Agency (PHA) on COVID – 19 (Coronavirus).

Although primarily a health issue, my Department is leading on the issue of relevant and appropriate advice and guidance to schools and education partners provided by DoH and PHA.

On 26 February I personally wrote to all school Principals and education sector partners enclosing the link to the PHA website which is being updated as the situation develops and have emphasised the importance of monitoring the website regularly. I have encouraged schools to follow the guidance; in particular, the need to practise good hand hygiene among staff and pupils; and reiterated that PHA are available to speak to individual schools which may have specific concerns in relation to COVID – 19 (Coronavirus).

Included in this email was the updated Chief Medical Officer (CMO) advice and link to GOV.UK latest guidance and advice.

The welfare, health and safety of pupils and staff is paramount and my Departmental officials, in collaboration with DoH and PHA, continue to monitor the evolving situation daily and will update schools where appropriate.

Mr McCann asked the Minister of Education for an update on the extended provision for youth groups, post 31 March 2020.

Mr Weir: The Education Authority launched its new funding scheme for Regional and Local Voluntary Youth Organisations on 3 March. This is based on identified needs and expected outcomes in line with existing policy and to support local and regional services to address strategic, development and project work in line with the Priorities for Youth policy.

The new funding scheme will ensure that essential youth work previously funded under the Extended Provision Scheme will continue to be supported from the 1 October – 31 March 2021 and up until March 2023; specifically through Local Area Funding and Local Project Funding.

Transitional funding arrangements, including a full 6 months allocation of 2019-2020 funding from April to September 2020, will ensure continued extended provision in the interim period. Full details of transitional arrangements are provided on the youth funding website.

Specifications detailing key outputs and outcomes required of the voluntary sector to meet the previous Extended Provision Scheme outcomes are available on the dedicated youth funding website in relation to the above funding streams (www.eanifunding.org.uk). The website also includes full details of transitional funding arrangements which will be in place up to March 2022.

Statutory youth services in receipt of Extended Provision funding will be embedding essential work within their core delivery plans.

Budgets for 2020-21 have not yet been confirmed and final decisions in relation to all funding applications will be dependent on the available budget.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Education whether he has seen a formal constitution of the Dickson plan system of academic selection; (i) will he make that constitution publicly available; and (ii) if there is no formal constitution can he begin the process of establishing one in consultation with stakeholders.
(AQW 2735/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Education Authority, Managing Authority for the Controlled schools included in the Dickson Plan has provided my Department with historical papers in relation to its establishment. These include the original Dickson Plan scheme dated 5 February 1965, a paper written by W.J. Dickson, Director of Education at that time and a copy of the former Ministry of Education's decision dated 15 February 1967, in relation to the reorganisation of secondary education in the Craigavon area.

I have arranged for the information requested to be placed in the Assembly Library.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education to detail the amount of money spent on (i) autism support units; and (ii) learning support centres in mainstream schools in each of the last five years.
(AQW 2742/17-22)

Mr Weir: It is not possible to disaggregate expenditure on Autism Support Units from Learning Support Centres (LSCs) as the Education Authority records all expenditure against the LSCs classification. The expenditure on LSCs in mainstream schools in the last 4 financial years is therefore reflected in the table below.

	2015-16 £m	2016-17 £m	2017-18 £m	2018-19 £m	2019-20 £m
LSCs	N/A*	13.1	15.1	15.34	16.77

Ms Kimmings asked the Minister of Education to outline his Department's plans to address the increased pressures on staff in special schools.

(AQW 2776/17-22)

Mr Weir: I fully recognise the pressures that staff within special schools are facing.

In 2019-20, my Department secured additional funding of £25.3m to address Special Educational Needs (SEN) related financial pressures during in-year monitoring exercises, of which the Education Authority (EA) allocated £4.4m to Special Schools.

It is the responsibility of each employing authority to monitor and manage their workforce. The EA, Special School Principals and the Board of Governors meet annually, on an individual school basis, to agree the teaching and non-teaching staff requirements, in line with increasing pupil enrolment figures.

Teachers' Health and Wellbeing is a matter of the utmost importance to me and it is important to address these additional pressures faced by teachers in our schools. My Department, the employing authorities and the teachers' unions are working together, through the Teachers' Negotiating Committee in order to ensure we retain a committed, motivated and healthy teaching workforce.

My Department continues to work with colleagues in EA to address accommodation pressures in Special Schools through the Major Works, School Enhancement and Minor Works Programmes. There are currently two major work programmes ongoing and I am pleased that there have been a further ten announced to advance in design under the School Enhancement Programme Second Call (SEP2).

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education what action his Department can take to help schools tackle bullying.

Mr Weir: My Department has provided a clear lead through the "Addressing Bullying In Schools Act (NI) 2016", which will ensure greater consistency on how bullying is addressed by schools. I hope to be in a position to announce the commencement of this legislation in the near future.

Guidance has been produced to support commencement; along with information for parents, carers and young people. This guidance will explain how complicated issues such as bullying between pupils from different schools can be addressed. It also includes case studies on how schools could tackle these situations.

My Department funds the Northern Ireland Anti-Bullying Forum (NIABF) which is available to provide advice to parents around bullying concerns. Protocols are in place for sharing, with parental consent, information with the Education Authority so that appropriate support is put in place.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Education what measures are being taken with regards educating teenagers about mental health in schools.

Mr Weir: Mental health and wellbeing is included within the statutory 'Learning for Life and Work' area of learning at post-primary level. This provides pupils with the opportunity to develop an understanding of how to maximise and sustain their health, self-esteem and wellbeing including managing emotions and reactions to on-going life experiences. The curriculum encourages innovative and customised approaches to ensuring that young people are well informed about all the issues they face in modern society. The Council for the Curriculum Examinations and Assessment provides curricular guidance and teaching support materials for use in schools and also signposts schools to a range of voluntary and community organisations should they need additional support.

My Department is working collaboratively with the Department of Health, the Public Health Agency, the Health and Social Care Board and the Education Authority to develop a Framework which will build on existing support structures and multi-disciplinary working to ensure that systems and pathways are in place to provide individualised support. The Framework will place an emphasis on promotion, prevention and early intervention with the aspiration that fewer children and young people will require specialist intervention from Mental Health Services.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education to detail the amount spent on school crossing patrols in each of the last four years.

Mr Weir: The Education Authority has advised that the total amount spent on school crossing patrols in the last four years is £10,690,672. This is broken down by financial year in the table below.

Financial Year	Amount
2015/2016	£2,613,255
2016/2017	£2,704,480
2018/2019	£2,733,316

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of instances of bullying in (i) primary; and (ii) post-primary schools, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 2827/17-22)

Mr Weir: This information is not held by the Department.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education whether he plans to legislate on school transfer tests.

(AQW 2828/17-22)

Mr Weir: I have no plans to bring forward legislation in relation to transfer tests. Opinions on academic selection vary and until agreement is reached, post-primary schools are permitted to set their own admissions criteria and to decide whether to use the results of transfer tests as part of this process.

My Department has had no engagement with schools concerning transfer tests but I understand that those schools that wish to use academic selection as part of their admissions criteria are currently working together to examine options for a single test. I will follow with interest the progress made in this area.

Mr Blair asked the Minister of Education what actions his Department has taken to encourage and facilitate the development of Crumlin Integrated College.

Mr Weir: My Department has a statutory duty to encourage and facilitate the development of integrated education. Responsibility for developing individual schools rests with the respective Board of Governors of that school in the first instance.

My Department also funds the Northern Ireland Council for Integrated Education to encourage and promote integrated education. This body works closely with all schools across the integrated sector.

In response to requests from Crumlin Integrated College for further support in enhancing local community confidence, my Department provided £8,000 to support the school in delivering this aim, recognising certain circumstances that the school was seeking to address.

At the same time, the Education Authority (EA) allocated a post-primary advisor from its School Development Service for a period of time to support the principal and Board of Governors effect improvement within the school.

Mr Blair asked the Minister of Education how many children leave the Crumlin area to attend post-primary schools in other areas; and what is the total annual cost of school transport for these children.

Mr Weir: The Education Authority has advised that they provide transport for 846 pupils with addresses in the Crumlin area to attend post primary education outside of Crumlin. For the 2019/20 academic year costs are estimated at £674,993.57

Mr Blair asked the Minister of Education whether his Department has any plans to expand nursery and playgroup provision at Crumlin Integrated Primary School.

Mr Weir: The Education Authority has responsibility for Early Years provision at Crumlin Integrated Primary School. The EA's Annual Action Plans contain details of the work programme of the planning and managing authorities to address specific issues at a local level. There are no proposed actions in the Strategic Area Plan for School Provision - Action Plan 2019-21 relating to this school.

Significant changes to statutory education provision, including the expansion or establishment of nursery schools and nursery units, are subject to a statutory process. This is mainly set out in Article 14 of the Education and Libraries (NI) Order 1986 (as amended) and requires the publication of a Development Proposal.

Voluntary and private pre-school providers are managed independently. Decisions about the establishment or expansion of these settings are a matter for the settings' management committees/owners: the Department has no role in these decisions, which are not subject to the Development Proposal process.

Mr Chambers asked the Minister of Education whether the final location for the rebuild of Bangor Central Integrated Primary School has been finalised.

Mr Weir: Departments must prepare business cases in line with the Department of Finance's NI Guide to Expenditure Appraisal and Evaluation (NIGEAE), Managing Public Money NI. Business cases set out the options and provide justification for the proposed expenditure to ensure the proposal is sound and represents value for money. They take account of the comparison of the costs, risks and benefits of all the options.

The Education Authority submitted a business case for Bangor Central Integrated Primary School to my Department for review on 2 March 2020. The preferred option for the project will be confirmed when the review is completed and the business case is approved.

Mr Chambers asked the Minister of Education whether the proposed location for the rebuild of Bangor Central Integrated Primary School has the full support of the school management team.

Mr Weir: The preferred option will be confirmed when the business case has been approved. Representatives from the school on the Project Steering Group have expressed some concerns about the possibility of the school being relocated. The business case takes account of the comparison of the costs, risks and benefits of all the options, and the scoring of the non-monetary benefits element of the business case was carried out by the school representatives themselves.

I have arranged to meet with representatives from the school management team to discuss the project on 18 March 2020.

Mr Chambers asked the Minister of Education whether any consultation has been conducted with the parents around the proposed new site for Bangor Central Integrated Primary School and, if so, what has been the outcome.

Mr Weir: The Department does not consult directly with parents on the proposed options considered within the business case for a capital investment project. The interests of the school stakeholders are represented throughout the project by school representatives on the Project Steering Group.

The school community has input to the selection of the preferred option in the business case through school representatives providing scores to the non-monetary benefits elements for each option considered. Ultimately, the best value option is identified following the ranking of the options on the basis of a balance between the cost of each option and the non-monetary benefit scores.

Mr Chambers asked the Minister of Education whether he has any concerns that the proposed new location for Bangor Central Integrated Primary School will have any adverse impact on the future enrolment of Bloomfield Primary School.

Mr Weir: The preferred option for Bangor Central Integrated Primary School will be confirmed when the business case is approved by my Department.

Where the Department determines that the relocation of a school will not materially change its pupil catchment area, as is the case with all options being considered for Bangor Central Integrated Primary School, a Development Proposal is not considered necessary.

There is no evidence of sustainability issues affecting Bloomfield Primary School and any impact on pupil numbers at this school is unlikely to be of a scale that would require any consequential planning action by the Education Authority, as managing authority for this school.

The future enrolment of both schools, and others in the area, will be determined by the expression of parental preference through the admissions processes.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Education what engagements his Department has had with the Education Authority over their proposal to consolidate Craigavon Senior High School on the Portadown site; (i) whether he can confirm that an economic appraisal was completed on this preferred option; and (ii) was there an economic appraisal conducted on the rejected options that was the preferred by stakeholders.

Mr Weir: The Education Authority (EA) are the planning authority for the Controlled sector. If the EA decides that a significant change to Controlled post-primary provision is required in the best educational interests of children, there is a statutory process which must be followed. This involves bringing forward a Development Proposal (DP) or Proposals requesting a change, having taken account of the wider area context.

My Department will only become formally engaged in the DP process after a DP is published by the EA. If, following consideration of the DP, I approve a change to provision in an area, only at that point would the economic appraisal for delivery of any revised accommodation needs be developed.

The EA has confirmed that no economic appraisals have yet been undertaken as there is currently no published DP for Craigavon Senior High School.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education to outline the schools his Department has assessed as unsustainable and outline plans for their future.

Mr Weir: It is the responsibility of the statutory planning authorities (the Education Authority and the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools), working in partnership with sectoral support bodies through the area planning structures, to identify sustainability issues at schools and determine actions to address them. These actions are published in the Education Authority's action plan, currently covering the period April 2019 to March 2021.

When these planning actions result in published Development Proposals, my Department becomes directly engaged. The advice I receive from Area Planning officials within the Department includes an assessment of sustainability drawing upon all available evidence, including the proposer's own assessment contained within the Case for Change that supports a Development Proposal.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education to detail the funding for the Critical Incident Response Team in each of the last three years.

Mr Weir: The Education Authority (EA) received the following funding from the Department of Education (DE) over the last three years for the Critical Incident Response Team (CIRT):

- 2017/18 – no funding provided
- 2018/19 – through a pressure bid £15,000 was provided by DE for CIRT staff induction training.
- 2019/20 – through a pressure bid £20,000 was provided by DE for CIRT staff induction training.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education whether the 25 instances the Critical Incident Response Team has been deployed were due to suicides in schools.

(AQW 2909/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Education Authority (EA) have advised that their Critical Incident Response Team (CIRT) do not use the term 'suicide' as it should not be used until it is determined by the Coroner's Office.

Instead a suspected suicide is referred to as a 'sudden death'. In some instances 'sudden death' is most appropriate as the details of the nature of a pupil's death are not always shared with school management or there may be some ambiguity in relation to this.

It is therefore not possible to confirm whether the 25 instances the Critical Incident Response Team has been deployed were due to suicides in schools.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of times the Critical Incident Response Team has been deployed in schools, in each of the last five years.

Mr Weir: The Education Authority (EA) has advised that their Critical Incident Response Team (CIRT) introduced a single regional management information system in September 2017. Prior to this date, information was recorded differently in each of the five legacy areas, therefore it is not possible to provide an EA response prior to September 2017.

The EA CIRT have been deployed in the academic years (September – August) as follows:

- 2017/2018 – The EA CIRT was deployed to respond to 44 critical incidents in Nursery, Primary, Post Primary and Special Schools.
- 2018/2019 – The EA CIRT was deployed to respond to 53 critical incidents in Nursery, Primary, Post Primary and Special Schools.
- 2019/2020 – The EA CIRT was deployed to respond to 37 critical incidents in Nursery, Primary, Post Primary and Special Schools (up to 03/03/2020).

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education to outline whether his Department has engaged with schools concerning transfer tests.

Mr Weir: I have no plans to bring forward legislation in relation to transfer tests. Opinions on academic selection vary and until agreement is reached, post-primary schools are permitted to set their own admissions criteria and to decide whether to use the results of transfer tests as part of this process.

My Department has had no engagement with schools concerning transfer tests but I understand that those schools that wish to use academic selection as part of their admissions criteria are currently working together to examine options for a single test. I will follow with interest the progress made in this area.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education to outline (i) how many full time staff are engaged by CCEA in the Irish language team; (ii) what audit has been conducted as to cost effectiveness and value for money; and (iii) what is the role of this team.

Mr Weir: I am advised that there are currently twelve full time permanent members of staff within CCEA's Irish Medium (IM) team as well as an education manager with responsibility for languages qualifications. All substantive IM programmes of work are subject to Post Project Evaluations (PPEs) and the IM team also contributes to wider CCEA project PPEs. The team supports my Department in fulfilling its statutory duty to encourage and facilitate the development of Irish Medium Education.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 2578/17-22, to breakdown these figures by (i) teacher vacancies; (ii) sickness absence; and (iii) substitution.

Mr Weir: The breakdown of substitution costs, including (i) teacher vacancies, (ii) sickness absence and (iii) other substitution reasons, are given in the table below.

Categories for substitution analysis	Cost Per Year (£)

Source: Teacher vacancies, sickness absence and substitution statistics in grant-aided schools in Northern Ireland, 2018/19.

Notes:

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 224/17-22, whether any bids have been received.

(AQW 2987/17-22)

Mr Weir: I am advised by the Education Authority that no bids have been received for the former Strabane Grammar School site.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQO 204/17-22, to detail the terms of reference and budget for this framework.

Mr Weir: The objectives of the Project are to develop a framework for children and young people's emotional health and wellbeing that will:

- Provide an agreed cross cutting model of promotion, prevention and early intervention to support the emotional health and wellbeing of children and young people;
- Clarify the agreed roles and responsibilities of each relevant government department and agency, including the Department of Education, the Department of Health, the Public Health Agency, the Education Authority and the Health and Social Care Board and Trusts.
- Provide clarity around agreed protocols and referral pathways for schools or other educational settings in respect of those children and young people presenting with a potential need for specialist support.
- Identify the key priorities areas required to further develop services and support.

I am unable to detail the budget for this Framework as budgets beyond this current financial year are not yet known, therefore no decisions have been taken in relation to future years.

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 2276/17-22, why the Education Authority, as the hiring body, does not hold this information.

Mr Weir: When a person applies for a classroom assistant position, they are asked to provide details for the pre-employment checks and experience necessary for that specific post.

As Qualified Teacher Status (QTS) would not be a requirement for a classroom assistant post, this status does not have to be provided on the application form. Therefore, information held by the Education Authority would not provide an accurate representation of individuals holding QTS who are employed as classroom assistants.

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Education to outline the basis in which post-primary schools can give preference to pupils from traditional feeder schools in admissions criteria, over children from geographically closer schools.

Mr Weir: Article 16 of the Education (NI) Order 1997 (as amended) requires Boards of Governors of grant-aided schools to draw up admissions criteria. These criteria are used to establish which children may be admitted in the event of a school being oversubscribed with applications. It is the sole responsibility of the Boards of Governors of schools to set the criteria they wish to prioritise to select children for admission.

My Department publishes guidance in respect of school admissions and Boards of Governors have a legal duty to 'have regard to' this guidance. Guidance to post-primary schools states that a 'feeder school' criterion may be used, however it should not be used to prioritise children from one primary school over those from another primary school of the same sector which is geographically closer. This is intended to ensure that the criterion is used to prioritise children attending a post-primary school's local primary schools.

The content of admissions criteria, however, including the use and content of a 'feeder school' criterion, is a matter for each school's Board of Governors.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education what is the current work stream and product of the Irish language team in CCEA and how much moderating is performed in respect of literacy and numeracy.

Mr Weir: In addition to translating and adapting CCEA's curricular resources for use in Irish Medium schools the IM team develops curricular resources. This includes support for statutory key stage assessment arrangements involving standard setting, moderation, school support and the development or translation of assessment materials. Key stage assessment arrangements, including moderation, have been significantly impacted by industrial action with no schools choosing to participate in 2019.

CCEA's translation and editorial team translates examination papers and related materials, including student scripts. This includes in excess of 150 question papers and associated resources and the translation of approximately 1,100 student scripts from Irish into English. Translation activity also covers controlled assessments, coursework and oral translations for the moderation of a number of vocational subjects.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education what is the comparative staff compliment in CCEA in respect of the Irish language sector and other sectors, both in terms of moderating functions and otherwise.

Mr Weir: I am advised that CCEA has 309 permanent staff 12 of whom work in the IM team. CCEA's staffing complement is not otherwise broken down by sectors. The IM team comprises four education managers, five translators, two editors and one translation and editorial lead. There is also an education manager who is responsible for languages qualifications, including Irish. CCEA has advised me that it is not possible to provide comparative staffing figures for the translation and editorial team, due to the specialised nature of this work.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education to quantify the submissions for moderating school work in literacy and numeracy which has been submitted to CCEA in the last year, in respect of each of the maintained, controlled, integrated and Irish language sectors.

Mr Weir: Statutory key stage assessment arrangements, including moderation, have been affected by action short of strike. I am advised that, in 2019, the breakdown for schools participating in moderation was as follows:

School Type	Communication	Using Mathematics	Using ICT
Controlled	2	6	9
Maintained	7	1	6
Integrated	0	0	1
Independent	1	0	1

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Education what progress has been made to establish an expert group to examine and propose an action plan to address links between persistent educational underachievement and socio-economic background, as outlined in New Decade, New Approach.

Mr Weir: My officials are progressing work regarding the establishment of an Expert Group to examine and propose an action plan to address links between persistent educational underachievement and socio-economic background, including the long-standing issues facing working-class, Protestant boys.

Tackling educational underachievement is critical to improving the life chances of children and young people and it is important that we progress this work swiftly. Proposals regarding how the Expert Group is to be established and the timescales involved will come before the Executive as soon as possible.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Education to provide an analysis of the use of the BMX facility at the Epicentre in Armagh city and to advise (i) the capital cost of the project; (ii) the usage figures per month since the facility opened; (iii) the opening hours of the facility to the general public; and (iv) the process for the public, youth and community groups accessing the facility.

Mr Weir:

(i) the capital cost of the project

The BMX track situated within the grounds of the Epicentre in Armagh was completed at a total cost of £499,495.

(ii) the usage figures per month since the facility opened

The Epicentre BMX track is an advanced track and, due to the associated risks with BMX biking, requires specialised qualified staff. The EA has advertised for specialist staff 3 times over the past 14 months but has been unable to successfully recruit to these posts. The centre therefore has not opened to date.

To address the inability to recruit suitably qualified staff going forward, and increase the capacity of the Outdoor Learning Service, the EA has developed a Pathways Programme with the Ulster University for young adults with a view to employment within the youth service. The programme provides training in both outdoor learning (including BMX biking) and youth work.

(iii) the opening hours of the facility to the general public

The track is not currently open to the public due to the lack of suitably qualified staff.

(iv) the process for the public, youth and community groups accessing the facility.

The EA is working with Cycle Ireland and Cycle Ulster to agree a partnership which will facilitate training for EA staff and volunteers and therefore site use. A final meeting regarding this is scheduled for Monday 9 March 2020. The partnership will provide access to the site for Cycle Ireland and Cycle Ulster at no cost (subject to verification of insurance and a Memorandum of Understanding being complete) and this is expected to be operational by 1 May 2020.

Cycle Ulster will be given access to the site during Saturdays and Sundays initially, with extended weekly usage in the summer when not used by the EA.

The EA Youth Service plan to use the site from 1 June 2020, when staff trained by Cycle Ireland and Cycle Ulster are in place. EA usage will extend to local schools from September 2020 and to youth service during the summer period from July 2020.

In addition, the BMX track will be open to registered EA youth groups who will be able to book the facility and EA will provide a qualified instructor to deliver a programme including bike basics; safe operation and risk awareness from 1 September 2020. This service will be provided to EA registered groups at no cost.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Education to outline (i) how many children in Northern Ireland are eligible for home to school transport in 2019/2020; and (ii) how much this costs the Department.

Mr Weir: The Education Authority has advised that the figures for the number of children in Northern Ireland in receipt of home to school transport and the cost of this transport for 2019/2020 are not yet available.

The number of pupils in receipt of home to school transport in the academic year 2018/2019 was 84,390 and the cost to the Education Authority was £86,102,581

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Education what steps his Department is undertaking to encourage after school sports at primary school level.

Mr Weir: The Extended Schools (ES) programme enables approximately 500 schools serving the most disadvantaged communities to provide a range of interventions and additional learning opportunities outside of the traditional school day. Of the overall budget of £9.1m in 2019/20 the programme distributed around £5.53m to its 331 eligible primary schools.

The aim of the programme is to reduce underachievement and improve the life chances of children and young people by enhancing their educational development and fostering their health, well-being and social inclusion through the integrated delivery of the support and services necessary to ensure every child has the best start in life.

Each individual school determines how to use ES resources in line with the assessed needs and circumstances of the learners in their school community. There is therefore a wide range of activities and services supported under the ES programme, each specific to the school/cluster. Typically, this may include additional literacy or numeracy support; physical or emotional health and well-being provision; activities to enhance personal development and skills such as arts, music, sport, or drama; parental or family support programmes; and facilitating community use of school premises, amongst many others.

The Extended Schools Annual Report 2018/19 compiled by the Education Authority shows the general pattern of activities offered under the programme, with sports remaining one of the more popular categories of provision. A total of 159 activities were offered in the "sport and sporting" skills category and another 268 in the "health and fitness" category.

Schools are asked to evaluate the impact of the programme within their Annual Report and 91% reported evidence that the programme helped to foster health, well-being and social inclusion in their school.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Education what progress has been made to publish and implement a childcare strategy, as outlined in New Decade, New Approach.

Mr Weir: The first phase of the Executive's Childcare Strategy, 'Bright Start – A Strategic Framework and Key First Actions' was launched in 2013. Following extensive engagement, the former OFMDFM consulted on a draft Childcare Strategy in 2015. Policy responsibility for childcare transferred to my Department in May 2016 and a detailed analysis of the consultation responses was undertaken and published.

The Strategy has been updated to reflect the current context for childcare, the analysis of responses to the 2015 consultation, the policy priorities aimed at supporting families reaffirmed in the 'New Decade, New Approach' agreement and developments in early education and care services for families in other jurisdictions.

There are significant policy and resourcing issues to be decided in order to finalise the Strategy, including how we can deliver extended, affordable, responsive and high quality early education and care for families with children aged 3 to 4.

The Childcare Strategy is an Executive Strategy and therefore requires Executive consideration and approval to publish in final form. I plan to bring an updated Childcare Strategy to my Executive colleagues for consideration in due course.

Publication of the Strategy requires the Executive's consideration of the budget and resources available to deliver all the actions, including an extended offer. Progressing to publication and implementation is predicated on securing the resources required.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the number of school buildings which have asbestos as part of the fabric of the school structure; and (ii) any planned works to remove asbestos from schools.

Mr Weir: There are currently 1036 properties within the Education Authority (EA) Estate which have some type of Asbestos Containing Materials (ACM). This number does not include schools within the Voluntary Grammar or Grant Maintained Integrated estates.

The EA is continually removing Asbestos from its Estate as part of its refurbishment and demolition programmes. ACM is also removed throughout the EA Estate when the risk assessment dictates that removal is required. The approximate cost of Asbestos removal is in the region of £3-5m annually.

Unfortunately it is not possible to be absolutely certain all ACM have been removed from a building until that building is demolished as ACM was used extensively in the structure of buildings constructed before the year 2000.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Education, in light of the outbreak of coronavirus across Europe, whether he will (i) issue guidance to principals of schools that have ski trips planned to Italy in the next 6 weeks; (ii) provide details of the number of pupils due to travel from Northern Ireland on school-organised ski trips to Italy during March and April; (iii) consider bringing forward a scheme to compensate schools that take a precautionary approach and cancel planned trips; and (iv) advise if his Department have carried out risk assessments on the potential risk to school and community life in allowing such planned ski trips to go ahead.

Mr Weir:

- (i) My Department has been working closely with colleagues in the Department of Health (DoH) and the Public Health Agency (PHA) on COVID – 19 (Coronavirus).

On 3 March and 9 March my Department wrote to all school principals providing guidance in relation to school trips and the Coronavirus (COVID – 19) outbreak.

This guidance reiterated that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) is responsible for providing Government advice to all parts of the United Kingdom on travel abroad and, consequently, any decision to proceed with or cancel any school trip should be taken by the school in line with the latest FCO advice (available at: <https://www.gov.uk/foreign-travel-advice>).

The guidance went on to say that schools should also contact the travel agency through which they booked their ski trips and seek their advice and guidance on this matter.

- (ii) Details of the number of pupils due to travel from Northern Ireland on school-organised ski trips to Italy during March and April are not readily available.

Any decision to proceed with or cancel any school trip should be taken by the school in line with the latest FCO advice which is available at: <https://www.gov.uk/foreign-travel-advice>:

- (iii) //www.gov.uk/foreign-travel-advice. Schools should also contact the travel agency through which they booked their ski trips and seek their advice and guidance on this matter. At present I have no plans to bring forward a scheme to compensate schools that take a precautionary approach and cancel planned trips.
- (iv) Risk assessments are central to the management of health and safety within a school. Within schools, line managers (principals, vice principals, heads of departments) have a responsibility to carry out risk assessments and ensure that they are suitable and sufficient. The Education Authority provides guidance and templates to schools in relation to both school and off-site risk assessments.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education how he is working with the Open University to ensure that school leavers are informed about Open University as an option for higher education.

Mr Weir: Careers Education is part of the statutory Curriculum in Northern Ireland. It is included in the Employability element of the Learning for Life and Work area of learning. It is the responsibility of schools to provide all learners with high quality careers education and guidance to help inform their decisions and ensure that they are fully aware of their potential options and pathways into further education, higher education, training and employment. This guidance should, where appropriate, include the various university options available.

Ms McLaughlin asked the Minister of Education whether he plans to increase the number of autism support units in mainstream schools west of the Bann.

Mr Weir: The Education Authority is responsible for the provision of autism support units.

Any significant change to a school such as the addition of an autism support unit would require the publication of a Development Proposal, which is a statutory process.

The EA's current proposals for change are listed in its Action Plan 2019-21 by Local Government District.

The Action Plan contains a number of actions in relation to autism specific provision in schools in Local Government Districts west of the Bann, namely Derry and Strabane, Mid-Ulster and Fermanagh and Omagh.

This includes the establishment of such provision in primary schools in the Omagh town and surrounding area as well as in Devenish College, St Kevin's College, Lisnaskea and for the Strule Campus. It also includes actions to change General Learning Support Centres to autism specific provision at Holy Trinity Primary School, Cookstown and Lisneal College.

These changes will form part of a regional approach to reconfiguring special schools and pupil support provision at mainstream schools.

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Education to outline his plans to improve sports facilities in the Controlled School sector.
(AQO 316/17-22)

Mr Weir: Sports facilities are funded through a variety of capital programmes – the Major Works Programme, the School Enhancement Programme (SEP) and the Minor Works Programme.

The Department is currently funding major works at a total of 19 Controlled schools. These projects are at various stages of design or construction and each will ultimately be delivered with sports facilities in line with the DE Handbook (assuming sufficient land is available for the full pitch complement).

Under the first call to the School Enhancement Programme only one controlled school applied for sports facilities. Following an investment of £1.5m, a new Sports Hall for Saintfield High School was opened by the then Education Minister, John O'Dowd, on 11th February 2016. Details of the projects to be delivered under the current SEP2 programme remain in development.

Applications from schools for minor capital works are prioritised in three categories:

- Priority 1 - statutory e.g. health & safety, fire protection, DDA
- Priority 2 - essential to ensure integrity of the estate e.g. boilers, roofs, windows etc.
- Priority 3 - supply of unmet curricular needs e.g. pitches, halls, ancillary space etc.

Unmet need in respect to sports provision falls into Priority 3. Unfortunately, given the current levels of demand for Priority 1 and 2 projects, Priority 3 projects are not currently being funded. This position will be reviewed when the Department's capital budget for future years becomes available.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Education for an update on the new build for St Ronan's College, Lurgan.

Mr Weir: The RIBA Stage 3 (Developed Design) for this project is approved and the procurement of the Develop & Build Integrated Supply Team commenced in February.

The current programme would indicate an award of contract in November 2020 and following completion of the RIBA Stage 4 (Technical Design & Pre-construction Services) moving on site for the main construction works in early summer of 2021.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Education whether he will engage with teacher training institutions to introduce autism-specific training for teachers.

Mr Weir: All BEd and PGCE programmes in NI, include compulsory modules covering Inclusion and the Special Educational Needs Framework (SEN), including autism.

Following the passing of the Assembly Motion on 3 February, I committed to consider how best to take this forward, to ensure that we have sufficient autism training for our teachers and educational workforce. My officials have commenced this work and should Initial Teacher Education (ITE) SEN modules need strengthened in the area of autism; my officials will engage with the various institutions to do so; in discussion with the Minister for the Economy, who is responsible for funding ITE.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Education what action he will take to address educational underachievement amongst children in the Dickson Plan area that do not attend selective post-primary education.

Mr Weir: Educational underachievement is a persistent and challenging issue, which as a society we must continue to address, particularly given its strong link to poverty. The factors that contribute to educational underachievement can affect pupils in any sector irrespective of the admissions criteria applied.

A range of interventions are currently in place to tackle underachievement across Northern Ireland and outcomes for children from socio-economically disadvantaged backgrounds continue to improve. For example, there was a significant improvement in the reading score of our most disadvantaged pupils between 2009 and 2018 in the PISA international study of the attainment of 15 year old pupils.

The commitment in "New Decade, New Approach" to establish an Expert Group to examine the link between persistent educational underachievement and socio-economic background will also provide a vital opportunity to further explore and address the long-standing issue of underachievement. I am currently considering options in respect of establishing the Expert Group. I want to move quickly on this work given its importance and I would wish to see the development of an action plan prioritised.

Mr O'Toole asked the Minister of Education to outline the number of times the Critical Incident Response Team have been deployed in schools since 2014.

Mr Weir: The Education Authority (EA) have advised that the EA Critical Incident Response Team (CIRT) introduced a single regional management information system in September 2017. Prior to this date, information was recorded differently in each of the five legacy areas. Therefore it is not possible to provide an EA response prior to September 2017.

However since September 2017 the EA CIRT have been deployed to 38 Primary Schools, 76 Post Primary Schools and 15 Special Schools. The CIRT also provided telephone advice and resources to 12 post primary schools during March 2019 in response to the critical incident in Cookstown.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education whether he plans to reduce nursery and pre-school hours for children in special schools.

Mr Weir: There are no plans at present to reduce nursery and pre-school hours for children in special schools. If there was an unprecedented demand for pre-school places in Special Schools, revisions would be made on an individual school basis, in agreement with the Special School Principal and through targeted engagement with parents who are likely to be impacted by the decision.

Ms Kimmings asked the Minister of Education how he intends to address the lack of Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) provision at key stage 2 in the Newry area.

Mr Weir: The need for additional primary specialist mainstream provision, including autism provision, within the Newry area will be reviewed and considered as part of the next tranche of strategic priorities. As part of the strategic approach, the Education Authority is committed to exploring all options and remains dedicated to working in partnership with stakeholders in relation to the out workings of its Strategic Area Plan for 2017-2020.

Department of Finance

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Finance (i) to detail the amount of public money allocated by Executive Departments to areas affected by the Primark fire in August 2018; (ii) who made the decision to provide the money; and (ii) for the rationale for providing that money.

(AQW 2434/17-22)

Mr Murphy (The Minister of Finance): The following allocations were made by Executive Departments to provide support in the wake of the Primark fire:

- £500k from Department for Infrastructure to Translink for subsidy fares during the Christmas period;
- £400k from Department for the Economy to Tourism NI for marketing; and
- £100k from Department for Communities to Belfast City Council for regeneration

In addition, in October 2018, the British Chancellor announced that £2 million would be made available to help towards the recovery of Belfast City Centre. The additional Treasury funding was allocated to Belfast City Council's Resilience Fund, channelled via the Department for Communities.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Finance why there are no minimum standards in Northern Ireland for daylighting in buildings. (AQW 2552/17-22)

Mr Murphy: Instead of directly requiring a minimum standard for daylighting, Part F (Conservation of fuel and power) of the Building Regulations considers the contribution of daylight when calculating the lighting and overall energy requirements of a new building.

In addition, technical guidance to Part F requires consideration of provision of adequate levels of daylight and points to assessment under BS8206-2 2008 Code of Practice for daylight, when designing a new dwelling.

Building Regulations only set minimum standards when building work occurs. Other requirements, such as government procurement policies, may also apply and designers are always free to consider other best practice standards.

Retrospective minimum fitness standards for existing buildings, where building work is not occurring, are a matter for other legislation.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Finance to detail the number of businesses that have confirmed to his Department their intention to cease trading as a direct result of the outcome of Reval2020, broken down by district council area.

Mr Murphy: None.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance how many businesses in each council area have (i) applied for Hardship Relief in respect of their rates; and (ii) been successful in their application, in each of the last 5 years.
(AQW 2754/17-22)

Mr Murphy:

- (i) Number of applications for Hardship Relief by council area in each of the last 5 years:

Council	2015/16	2016/17	2017/18	2018/19	2019/20

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister of Finance to provide a breakdown of how many people are not in training, further education or employment, for each constituency.

Mr Murphy: The Labour Force Survey can be used to provide estimates of the number of people not in education, employment or training (NEET). Statistics are typically produced for those aged 16-24.

Estimates of how many people are not in training, further education or employment for each constituency are not available. This is because the type of educational institution currently attended is not captured in the Labour Force Survey.

Table 1 below however provides Labour Force Survey based estimates of the number of people aged 16 and over in each constituency who are not in education, employment or training. The most recent data available are for the period January-December 2018.

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Finance whether his Department intends to ring-fence money generated through the Soft Drinks Industry Levy to spend on addressing obesity and type 2 diabetes.

Mr Murphy: Money generated through the soft drinks industry levy is paid to HM Customs and Revenue (HMRC).

The Executive receives Barnett allocations based on any additional spend in England financed by the soft drinks industry levy. Barnett consequentials are not ring-fenced for a specific purpose and it is for the Executive to allocate funding in line with local needs and priorities.

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Finance how much money has been generated locally by the Soft Drinks Industry Levy. (AQW 2835/17-22)

Mr Murphy: Money generated through the soft drinks industry levy is paid to HMRC and you may wish to contact HMRC for details of what money has been generated in the North.

Mr McGrath asked the Minister of Finance whether he intends to resume the Small Business Rate Relief scheme; and, if so, what plans he has made for its resumption.

(AQW 2836/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The Small Business Rate Relief scheme was extended annually by my Department from April 2017 on the basis that it retained the existing policy position that existed prior to the absence of a functioning Assembly.

I am considering the options for all rate relief provision for 2020-21 and beyond in the context of the recent Business Rate consultation, the wider budgetary issues that face us as an Executive and the decisions around the 2020/21 Regional Rates.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister of Finance how many people of working age in each constituency are not in employment, further education or training.

Mr Murphy: The Labour Force Survey can be used to provide estimates of the number of people not in education, employment or training (NEET). Statistics are typically produced for those aged 16 to 24.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Finance whether he plans to introduce a single person discount for rates bills.

(AQW 2889/17-22)

Mr Murphy: I have no plans to introduce a single person discount.

The introduction of a single person discount was considered as part of the 2007 review of the domestic rating system. At that time it was concluded that such a widespread discount would be difficult to justify in terms of cost, need and vulnerability to widespread fraud.

Anyone struggling with their rates can apply for help through the Rate Rebate Scheme or contact Land & Property Services to discuss a payment plan. The Lone Pensioner Allowance is also available.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Finance what properties or land are currently surplus to requirements within his Department.
(AQW 2947/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The Department of Finance (DoF) currently has 4 properties declared surplus which are in the process of disposal. The details of these are noted below.

- 9-11 Mount Crescent, Downpatrick, a former Social Security Office currently on the open market asking offers around £125,000.
- 4-6 Killane Road, Limavady, former offices the sale of which is progressing as a Community Asset Transfer to a local enterprise agency.
- 29 Hillhead Road, Ballyclare is an open market sale of former offices, currently sale agreed.
- Northland House, Frederick Street, Belfast is an open market sale of a substantial office building with car parking, currently sale agreed.

Land & Property Services (LPS) is managing these disposals in accordance with the LPS guidance on the Disposal of Surplus Public Sector Property in Northern Ireland October 2018, a link to which is included below.

<https://www.finance-ni.gov.uk/publications/disposal-surplus-land-and-property-publications>

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Finance what steps have been taken, and what steps remain to be taken, toward the development of a central translation hub aimed to provide language translation services for the Executive Departments, arm's-length bodies, local government and public bodies, as outlined in New Decade, New Approach.

Mr Murphy: I would refer you to the answer provided for AQQ 337/17-22.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance whether the functions of the Fiscal Council will be as set out in paragraph 4.1 of Fresh Start.

(AQW 3000/17-22)

Mr Murphy: My officials are currently examining the options for establishing a Fiscal Council that will deliver on the commitments as set out in New Decade New Approach and the Fresh Start Agreement.

Mr Muir asked the Minister of Finance what proportion of households currently pay domestic rates bills in instalments via Direct Debit.

Mr Murphy: As at 1st March 2020, 51.1% of domestic occupancies pay their rate bill via Direct Debit where an occupancy represents a liable ratepayer at a property at a given time. Housing Executive and Housing Association domestic properties are not included in this figure as the rates on these properties are paid through a different process.

Mr Muir asked the Minister of Finance what contingency plans are in place if rates bills cannot be issued for collection in April 2020.

Mr Murphy: Preparations for the issue of the 2020/21 rate bills are well advanced and on schedule.

A key component of the billing process is the availability of a Regional Rate to allow rate bills to be calculated. LPS has administered the delivery of rate bills in each of the last three years with a degree of uncertainty over when a Regional Rate would be struck and made available. As a consequence, LPS has well developed contingency plans in place to accommodate any potential delays. These include:

- billing delivery plans for a range of dates when a Regional Rate might be available;
- liaison with suppliers for a series of bill generation, printing and post delivery slots; and
- communication plans to keep ratepayers informed if delays are expected to be significant.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Finance how many staff are employed in the NI Direct call handling centre.
(AQW 3041/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The NI Direct call handling centre is operated by British Telecom (BT) as a service of the NI Direct Strategic Partnership contract. The staffing of the NI Direct Contact Centre is managed by BT and the staff requirement is based on their operating model. BT Full Time Equivalent (FTE) numbers in the contact centre are currently 145.5 which includes some temporary contact centre agents to cope with the current high demand (as at 09/03/2020).

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Finance what is the cost of staffing and infrastructure for the NI Direct advice service.
(AQW 3042/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The NI Direct call handling centre is operated by British Telecom (BT) as a service of the NI Direct Strategic Partnership contract. This contract was awarded in 2012, and will continue to operate until contract expiry in October 2022.

The staffing of the contact centre is managed by BT.

Infrastructure used for the provision of contact centre services is partially owned by NICS (software), and partially by BT (hardware). Following contract expiry, the NICS owned infrastructure will be available for use by other NICS business areas if required.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Finance whether a review has taken place around the efficiency of the NI Direct call handling centre.

Mr Murphy: The efficiency of the NI Direct call handling centre is, and has been reviewed throughout the term of the NI Direct Strategic Partnership contract. This is effected through the governance procedures which were put in place following contract award in 2012.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Finance for an update on the progress of the Civil Service pay claim.

Mr Murphy: I have been working closely with departmental officials to resolve the NIPSA dispute and progress the 2019/20 pay award for all civil service staff as a key priority.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance how much the Civil Service has paid Stonewall in each of the last five years; and to detail for what purpose the money was paid.

Mr Murphy: The NICS signed up to the Stonewall Diversity Champions Programme in July 2018. There is an annual cost for membership of the Stonewall Diversity Champions Programme. In addition, a number of NICS colleagues have attended the Stonewall LGBT Leadership Programme which takes place twice per year.

A breakdown of payments from DoF centrally to Stonewall is provided below:

Financial year 2018/19

Diversity Champions Membership 2018/19	£2,500
Stonewall LGBT Leadership Programme November 2018	£1,905

Financial Year 2019/20

Diversity Champions Membership 2019/20	£2,500
Stonewall LGBT Leadership Programme July 2019	£2,590
Total	£6,685

Ms McLaughlin asked the Minister of Finance to outline the rationale for the 10 per cent discount available to landlords owning multiple rental properties; and whether he intends to remove this discount.

(AQW 3123/17-22)

Mr Murphy: Under rates legislation all landlords of rented properties with a rateable capital value of £150,000 or less, and houses in multiple occupation, are directly liable for rates. The discount was introduced to compensate landlords for any costs associated with collecting rates from their tenants on behalf of LPS and for the risk of any default. It is intended to encourage prompt payment on a large number of rate accounts where there could otherwise be significant administrative overheads to LPS.

I am reviewing all reliefs and discounts.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance on how many occasions Civil Service employees have been issued with Stonewall workplace equality surveys.

(AQW 3172/17-22)

Mr Murphy: One Stonewall Workplace Equality Survey has issued to NICS employees.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Finance whether the move towards multi-year budget plans will filter down to the community and voluntary sector.

Mr Murphy: While I am keen to move to a position where the Executive will announce multi-year budgets for Departments, it should be noted that although a multi-year budget, the allocation will still be managed and controlled on an annual basis.

In responding to your question, it would not be for the Finance Minister to dictate how the budget allocation is managed at a Departmental level.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Finance when Civil Service staffing codes relating to (i) freedom of religion and belief; (ii) language or translation rights; (iii) LGBT rights; (iv) political activism or membership; and (v) association or membership of other external organisations, were last updated.

Mr Murphy: The NICS Staff Handbook, previously known as NICS Pay and Conditions of Service Code "The Code", was last updated as follows:

Category	Associated policy	Date Last Updated
(i) freedom of religion and belief	6.05 Equality, Diversity and Inclusion	June 2015
	6.09 Dignity at Work	November 2007 (currently under review)
(ii) language or translation rights	Not included in NICS Staff Handbook	-
(iii) LGBT rights	6.05 Equality, Diversity and Inclusion	June 2015
	6.09 Dignity at Work	November 2007 (currently under review)
	6.13 Trans Equality policy and Transitioning at work guide	April 2019 (first issued)
(iv) political activism or membership	Standards of Conduct Section 19 Political Activities	September 2011
(v) association or membership of other external organisations	Standards of Conduct Section 7 Membership of Organisations (Non-Political)	April 2014

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance how much the Executive is committing to Belfast Region City Deal projects; and whether there will be matched funding of Treasury contributions.

Mr Murphy: Please refer to AQQ 185/17-22 and AQQ 192/17-22.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Finance what procedure is in place to appoint staff to his Department's Private Office.

(AQW 3473/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The policy 1.05 Career Opportunities and Promotion in the NICS HR Handbook sets out the range of procedures available to appoint staff to the Department's Private Office. In addition, the recall of previous Private Office staff, internal departmental expressions of interests and redeployment of staff with the necessary skills and experience have all been utilised to fill posts on a temporary and substantive basis.

Mr Sheehan asked the Minister of Finance for the timeline for the establishment of the central translation hub as set out in New Decade, New Approach.

Mr Murphy: The New Decade New Approach (NDNA) document committed the Executive to establishing in the Department of Finance a central Translation Hub within three months of an agreement. My Department is currently examining options including looking at how others provide these services, for example in Wales, Scotland and Ireland as well as in local government here. I intend to have the hub established in accordance with the time commitment set out in NDNA.

Ms Mullan asked the Minister of Finance when the decision on funding for the Derry and Strabane City Deal will be made.

Mr Murphy: The decision to match fund the Derry and Strabane City Deal rests with the Executive and I will shortly be taking this matter to the Executive for consideration.

However, I would like to take this opportunity to express my support for the match funding of both the City Deal and the Inclusive Futures Fund for Derry and Strabane.

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Finance for an update on Civil Service pay negotiations.
(AQO 335/17-22)

Mr Murphy: While the NICS has not yet made any offer regarding 2019 pay, I met with officials from NIPSA, who represent non-industrial civil servants, on 22 January. Since that meeting, discussions between departmental officials and trades unions have continued.

I am working closely with departmental officials to progress and resolve the NICS 2019/20 pay award for all civil service staff as a key priority and have brought my proposals to Executive colleagues for consideration.

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister of Finance what action he intends to take in relation to revenue raising.
(AQO 334/17-22)

Mr Murphy: In the course of agreeing a Budget for 2020-21 the Executive will consider the options available to address budgetary pressures. This may include revenue raising, however it is for individual Ministers to examine the options for revenue raising within their policy areas as part of that process.

In addition, I am intending to establish a fiscal commission which will consider any additional revenue powers which may be available.

Ms Kimmings asked the Minister of Finance when funding from the Dormant Bank Account Fund will be available to the community sector.
(AQO 332/17-22)

Mr Murphy: In September 2019, the Department of Finance, directed the National Lottery Community Fund, to establish a Dormant Accounts Scheme to distribute funds to a range of organisations including community & voluntary groups and social enterprises, under the key themes of building capacity, resilience and sustainability.

The Lottery has consulted with stakeholders and published the outcome on 28 February. This will be used to inform a Strategic Plan which will be laid in the Assembly. It is intended that the fund will be open to application early in the new financial year.

Mr Robinson asked the Minister of Finance whether the Minister for Infrastructure will be given the funding required to deal with the backlog of street lighting repairs.

Mr Murphy: I appreciate that this is a very real concern for our citizens particularly in respect of safety concerns.

In view of this, the Executive allocated an additional £1.8 million in January Monitoring for the replacement of ageing street lighting columns. This was followed by a further £3 million in February for wider road maintenance activities which includes street light repairs.

Going forward, I have met with the Minister for Infrastructure, as part of the 2020-21 Budget setting process, to discuss the pressures facing her Department. This included the backlog of street lighting repairs.

It is for the Executive to agree the overall resource and capital budget allocations for each Department. It is for individual Ministers to prioritise capital investment within those allocations.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Finance what actions his Department has taken in response to the estimated £833.9m cost of division reported in the Ulster University Economic Policy Centre independent audit, 2016.

Mr Murphy: The Cost of Division report outlined the significant complexity in the cost of delivery of services in the North – costs that cannot be merely attributed to the context of a divided society.

The report found that, whilst the cost of public service provision is generally higher than in comparative regions, the costs typically fall within the range of costs identified in other regions, with the exception of policing.

In any Executive, all Ministers, including myself, will be focused on reducing the cost of public services, especially where there are significant budget pressures.

Ultimately, in my view the best way to deal with the cost of division across the island is to create a society which is united, and underpinned by rights and equality.

Department of Health

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Health what action has been taken in each Health and Social Care Trust to recruit domiciliary care workers; and how many posts are to be filled in each Trust.

Mr Swann (The Minister of Health): My Department is currently considering a number of recommendations from the Power to People report recognising the skills, values and attributes of people who work in adult social care as well as pay and conditions across the social care workforce.

Each Trust is individually responsible for managing their own recruitment and are continually seeking such recruitment through a range of approaches.

Currently vacancies for domiciliary care workers are as follows:-

- Belfast Trust has 88 vacancies;
- Northern Trust has 67 vacancies;
- Southern Trust operate a rolling recruitment process which fills vacancies as and when they occur. They are seeking to employ an additional 30 WTE domiciliary care workers during a planned recruitment drive in April 2020;
- South Eastern Trust has 30 vacancies; and
- Western Trust has 12 vacancies

Ms Dolan asked the Minister of Health to outline the range of services provided by the Health Service for premature babies and their families.

(AQW 2425/17-22)

Mr Swann: Care of premature babies and babies with complex surgical or medical needs at birth in Northern Ireland is delivered by a single tertiary Neonatal unit in Royal Maternity, alongside four units which also provide intensive care (Craigavon, Antrim, Ulster and Altnagelvin) and two special care units based in Daisy Hill & the South West Acute Hospital.

The tertiary service aims to look after the smallest and most vulnerable babies (those less than 27 weeks) in the tertiary unit before repatriating these patients to their home unit when clinically appropriate. This movement of babies is dependent on the NI Specialist Transport and Retrieval service to transfer babies between the different units and in and out of the regional unit.

Some units make provision for parents to be able to stay in the hospital with their babies prior to their discharge.

Babies and families will benefit from input from a range of professionals including allied health professionals, and neonatal nurses supported by Paediatric doctors. Psychology input for families and breastfeeding support for mothers is available in some units.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health to list the statutory and community organisations he has met since his appointment. (AQW 2451/17-22)

Mr Swann: Since my appointment as Health Minister on 11 January 2020 I have met with the following statutory and community organisations:

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister of Health whether he will consider introducing legislation to control where electronic cigarettes are sold, and how they are promoted in shops, to make them less attractive to children and teenagers.

Mr Swann: The European Union's Tobacco Product Directive (2014/40/EU) legislates for, amongst other matters, the regulation of nicotine containing electronic cigarettes. It has been transposed into United Kingdom law by the UK Tobacco and Related Products Regulations 2016. The legislation introduced measures to regulate e-cigarettes to reduce the risk of harm to children through rules on product safety, labelling and restrictions on most forms of advertising.

Draft regulations to prohibit the sale of nicotine inhaling products (e-cigarettes) to under eighteens were consulted on in 2017, but could not be progressed in the absence of the NI Assembly. Officials are currently revisiting the draft regulations and I expect those to be presented to me soon.

Current data indicates that regular use of e-cigarettes among young people remains low and concentrated among those who have already smoked. The Department recognises the importance of continued monitoring of the evidence and data on youth vaping.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Health to detail the current budget deficits of each Health and Social Care Trust.

Mr Swann: All of the Department's Health and Social Care Trusts are required to live within available resources, whilst also ensuring that services are delivered in a safe, sustainable and effective way.

The scale of budgetary pressures that the Health and Social Care Trusts faced in 2019/20 has been considerable, against a backdrop of rising service pressures and demand. My Department has sought to manage these pressures by working closely with all parts of the HSC system and by engaging with the Department of Finance to secure additional allocations from the in-year monitoring rounds.

Trusts are currently forecasting year end break even position, with the exception of the Western Health and Social Care Trust, for which the Department has authorised an overspend of £21.7m which is part of a multi-year financial recovery process to address the Trust's historic deficit.

As the financial year is not yet over, this position continues to be closely monitored.

Mr McGrath asked the Minister of Health to detail the pay scales, grades and number of domiciliary care workers in each Health and Social Care Trust.

Mr Swann: Information on the number of domiciliary care workers employed in each Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust at 31 December 2019, broken down by grade and 2018/19 Agenda for Change (AfC) pay scales (those in place at the time) is detailed in the table below.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health how many cases of mumps have been diagnosed in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust in each of the last eighteen months, broken down by (i) age; and (ii) patient outcome.

Mr Swann: Information on the outcome of patients diagnosed with mumps is not available. Information on the number of laboratory confirmed cases of mumps in the Northern Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust can be found in Table 1 below.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health for an update on the impact and operation of the new gynaecological unit at the Causeway Hospital.

Mr Swann: The Meadows is a purpose built, two-bedded treatment suite for gynaecological outpatient and day case treatments in Causeway Hospital.

The new treatment suite means a range of procedures usually given under general anaesthetic in a theatre, can now, when appropriate, be safely offered as outpatient procedures with the use of oral or local medication. This gives women a safer and more positive experience through avoiding the complications of having a general anaesthetic. It greatly modernises the services and facilities for women undergoing intimate and sometimes distressing assessment and procedures, providing comfortable facilities with immediate access to private changing and bathroom facilities.

The Meadows is part of the Northern Trust's work towards modernising and reforming the delivery of Gynaecology services into the future. The new facilities support the transfer of gynaecological treatment from other hospital sites, with cross-Trust working for medical staff. This new service model helps give direct access to hospital care as agreed between the GP and hospital specialists, which should avoid hospital admissions, Emergency Department attendances and give shorter lengths of stay in hospital. Overall there now exists a more responsive service for patients.

The Meadows offers a number of outpatient clinic services including:

- Bladder Botox;
- Hysteroscopy;
- Truclear;
- Recurrent Miscarriage;
- Colposcopy;
- Minor Ops;
- Vulval Skin;
- Mirena Coil; and
- Gynae Ward Attenders.

A number of Nurse Led Clinics have also been introduced:

- Early Pregnancy;
- Telephone Triage;

- Urodynamics;
- Smear;
- Pessary; and
- Intermittent Self Catheterisation.

During 2019, over 1600 women attended this facility and feedback from service users has been very positive about the services offered, the quality of care and the environment.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health to detail the level of funding and staffing provided by the Northern Health and Social Care Trust to Farm Families Health Checks Programme, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 2516/17-22)

Mr Swann: The Family Health Check Programme is jointly funded by the Public Health Agency and The Department of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs. The Northern Health and Social Care Trust (NHSCT) has received the following funding to deliver the programme:

2019/20	£181,255
2017/18	£172,625

The NHSCT employ a full time band 7 nurse coordinator, a part time band 6 nurse (30 hrs per week) and a 21 hr band 4 programme administer. In addition, the programme is supported by a pool of band 5 nurses across each Trust area, who support the coordinator to deliver the programme locally.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health to detail the level of capital and resource funding provided to Causeway Hospital in each of the last five years.

Mr Swann: The table below provides the capital spend on Causeway Hospital projects over the last five years.

Year	2014/15	2015/16	2016/17	2017/18	2018/19
Spend £000's	551	318	412	952	733

The Causeway Hospital may also have been in receipt of capital funding for Trust wide schemes for which figures are not separately available.

The table below provides the resource funding for the Causeway Hospital over the last five years.

Year	2014/15	2015/16	2016/17	2017/18	2018/19
Spend £m	50.67	51.37	54.44	55.46	56.78

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Health how much each Health and Social Care Trust spent on taxis for (i) patients; and (ii) staff, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 2525/17-22)

Mr Swann: The information requested could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Health how much each Health and Social Care Trust spent on public transport in each of the last five years.

Mr Swann: Health and Social Care Trusts do not capture costs on public transport separately, in view of this, information could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Miss Woods asked the Minister of Health whether he has any plans to ban conversion and reparative therapy.

(AQW 2530/17-22)

Mr Swann: The Department of Health does not fund any organisation to carry out reparative or conversion therapy. Statutory services within Health and Social Care do not prescribe reparative or conversion therapy.

On 3 July 2018, the UK Government published its LGBT Action Plan: Improving the Lives of Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender People to set out the steps that government will take to tackle discrimination in this area.

The Action Plan contained 75 actions to improve the lives of LGBT people, including a plan to end conversion / reparative therapy in the UK.

While it is a national Action Plan, it covers some policy areas that are devolved to Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales. My Department will be closely monitoring the Action Plan, including the action to ban reparative therapy.

Ms S Bradley asked the Minister of Health to detail the (i) number of social worker hours filled via agency staff; (ii) cost per year paid to agencies to fill these social worker vacancies; (iii) the total number of Health and Social Care (HSC) employed social workers; and (iv) total cost of HSC-employed social worker salaries, in each of the last five years, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust.

Mr Swann:

- (i) Information on number of social worker hours filled via agency staff is not recorded;
- (ii) The amount paid to agencies within the category social work in each of the last five financial years, by Health and Social Care Trust, is given below;

HSC Expenditure on Agency Social Workers

Ms S Bradley asked the Minister of Health what plans he has to ensure adequate training and guidance is provided to all relevant staff and professionals regarding the deprivation of liberty section of the Mental Capacity Act (NI) 2016.

Mr Swann: My Department commissioned the Clinical Education Centre to develop and co-ordinate multi-level classroom-based training modules in relation to the new Deprivation of Liberty Safeguards (DoLS) provisions under the Mental Capacity Act (NI) 2016. This training was provided free of charge and delivered regionally during the period September to December 2019. Attendees included HSC Trust staff, GPs and staff from the independent sector. During this time around 6,500 individuals attended training across 16,000 training instances. E-learning versions of three key modules were also developed to support staff who were unable to attend classroom-based training. There have been over 40,000 hits on the basic e-learning module.

Staff were seconded from the five HSC Trusts to deliver the regional DoLS training programme, ensuring that the expertise built up by the trainers during this period would remain within the Trusts after the regional training programme was completed.

Following the completion of the regional programme, the Department provided the training packages to each Trust for them to deliver their own DoLS training in future. These packages are also available to independent training providers on request to the Department.

The Department has produced a number of other resources to support staff in relation to DoLS, including a Code of Practice, forms manual, scenarios, information leaflet and process maps.

The Department also hosted a regional DoLS Conference on 27 January 2020 which brought expert speakers from NI and the rest of the UK together to increase awareness and understanding of deprivation of liberty issues.

Officials continue to liaise regularly with DoLS Lead Directors from the HSC Trusts and future training or support needs can be raised and considered at this forum.

Ms S Bradley asked the Minister of Health to outline the assessments and measurements used to aid his decision to proceed with the roll out of the Multi-disciplinary Teams (MDT's) model of primary care; and what future MDT's will look like, where they will be placed and when they are likely to be operational.

Mr Swann: The Department has recently completed the procurement process for evaluation of the MDT model across the five areas. The evaluation will last at least two years, with an action learning approach throughout this time to help bring benefits to patients at the earliest opportunity and shape the model of MDTs as it expands to new areas.

Under the terms of the New Decade New Approach Agreement, the Executive has committed to extending the MDT to cover a further 100,000 people. I will be working my colleagues across the Executive to ensure that sufficient resources are made available for this work.

Once the necessary resources are in place I will make a decision on the location for the further roll out. Subject to the availability of these resources, it is currently estimated that roll out across the remaining GP Federation areas will be completed around 2026.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Health to detail the level of sickness rates among Northern Ireland Ambulance Service staff in each month of the last three years.

Mr Swann: The following information has been provided by the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service -

2017	Sickness Absence	2018	Sickness Absence	2019	Sickness Absence

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, in regard to his appointment of a Special Adviser, (i) whether he independently chose his special adviser or an allocation was made by his party; (ii) how it was made known, and to whom, that he was seeking to appoint a special adviser; (iii) whether a pool of candidates was considered; (iv) if so, how many were within the pool; (v) how any pool of candidates was assembled; (vi) what were the essential and desirable criteria set for the job; (vii) by what process was the choice made; (viii) what notes and records were made and kept of the process; (ix) how fair employment obligations were met; (x) on what date(s) was the job offered and accepted; (xi) what was the contractual start date; and (xii) was the range of available salary discussed with the appointee, or was the job offered and accepted without knowledge of the likely salary.

Mr Swann: The appointment of my special adviser followed the requirements set out in the Code for the Appointment of Special Advisers agreed by the Executive and published by the Department of Finance on 20 January. Salary details were confirmed to me by the Department of Finance on 14 February. A formal offer of employment was made on 17 February, with a start date of 11 January. This was accepted by the SPAD on 19 February 2020.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health whether he will roll out the Farm Families Health Checks Programme to all Health and Social Care Trusts.

Mr Swann: The Farm Families Health Checks Programme is currently delivered in all Health and Social Care Trust areas by the Northern Health and Social Care Trust (NHSCT). The programme attends marts on a biannual basis, agri-food suppliers and rural community events. The programme is supported by Steering Group with representatives including rural support networks, Ulster Farmers Union and Young Farmers, who actively promote the programme.

To date this year, 32 events (with 493 clients seen) have been delivered in the NHSCT area, 42 events (746 clients) in the Southern Health and Social Care Trust area, 19 events (457 clients) in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust area, and 33 events (526 clients) delivered in the Western Health and Social Care Trust area.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health how the impact of the Towards Zero Suicide Patient Safety Collaborative will be assessed and recorded; and whether this will allow regional trends to be collected and analysed and local patient data, outcomes and observations to be recorded.

Mr Swann: A full Evaluation Framework for the Towards Zero Suicide Patient Safety Collaborative is scheduled for development. A Research and Information Workstream is also being established to develop methodology to track and measure improvement and change.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health how many registered nurses in nursing homes in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust have completed bespoke training via the REaCH service since its inception; and what this figure represents as a percentage of the overall staff nursing complement working in these environments.

Mr Swann: There is a high level of turnover in this nursing workforce group, so training delivery is frequent in order to meet the care home requirements. Currently across the 58 care homes in the Northern Trust area there are 203 active nurse champion participants with training provided to over 400 nurses across care homes in Antrim, Ballymena, Causeway, East Antrim, Carrickfergus and Newtownabbey localities since the inception of REaCH

The REaCH service in the Trust does not have the detail on what proportion this is of the total number of care home registered nurses.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health how many children were adopted by people resident in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust area in each of the last five years; and what this figure represents as a percentage of the Northern Ireland rate.

Mr Swann: It is assumed that this question relates to children adopted from care.

The number of children adopted from care by people resident in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust area in each of the last five years is set out in Table 1.

Over the period 2014/15 – 2018/19, 438 children have been adopted from care in Northern Ireland. Of this figure, 122 children, or 28%, have been adopted by people resident in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust.

Table 1: The number of children adopted from care by people resident in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust (2014/15 – 2018/19)

	Total number of children adopted in Northern Ireland	Number of children in the Northern HSCT adopted by people resident in the Northern HSCT	Number of children from other HSCTs adopted by people resident in the Northern HSCT

Total	438	122		28%

- 1 During 2014/15 – 2018/19, a total of 10 children from other HSC Trusts, were adopted by adopters resident in the Northern HSC Trust.

Mr Robinson asked the Minister of Health what plans he has to address the backlog of occupational therapy services cases in the Western Health and Social Care Trust.

Mr Swann: The Western HSC Trust has received non-recurrent funding in 2019/20 to undertake additional activity to reduce the backlog of patients waiting for occupational therapy. As a result of this investment, the number of patients waiting longer than 13 weeks from referral to commencement of occupational therapy has reduced from 1,776 at the end of March 2019 to 1,064 at the end of January 2020.

Addressing waiting times for occupational therapy services is challenging due to a regional and national shortage of Occupational Therapists. While the Trust has experienced difficulties it continues in its endeavours to recruit staff to improve waiting times for patients.

Ms Rogan asked the Minister of Health when a new permanent MRI scanner will be installed and functioning in the Downe Hospital.

Mr Swann: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has submitted a proposal for an MRI scanner for the Downe Hospital as part of a Departmental capital planning review exercise. I will consider this proposal alongside other capital investment priorities. My ability to take forward new capital projects will depend on additional capital resources being made available to me.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Health to detail (i) the target time; and (ii) current waiting time, to see a neurologist in each Health and Social Care Trust.

Mr Swann: The 2019/20 Draft Ministerial waiting time target, states that:

"By March 2020, 50% of patients should wait no longer than 9 weeks for a first outpatient appointment; with no patient waiting longer than 52 weeks." This target is the same for all outpatient specialties, including Neurology.

The current waiting times (at 31st December 2019) for a first consultant-led outpatient appointment with a neurologist are shown in the table below.

The number of patients waiting to be seen for a first consultant led outpatient appointment with a Neurologist at 31st December 2019 by HSC Trust and length of wait

Source: Departmental CH3 Return

I am committed to the immediate goal that no-one waiting over a year at 30 September 2019 for outpatient or inpatient assessment/treatment will still be waiting on a list by March 2021. The ability to deliver this commitment is heavily dependent on my Department securing the required level of additional funding, estimated to be £50m. That is why the outcome of the current budgetary discussions are of such utmost importance.

Miss Woods asked the Minister of Health for an update on the roll-out of the Human Papilloma Virus vaccine for boys and girls aged twelve to thirteen.

Mr Swann: The HPV vaccine has been offered to all boys aged 12-13 years of age, while they are in school year 9, since September 2019.

Data on vaccine uptake for boys will be published later this year.

Girls aged 12 to 13 have been offered the HPV vaccine since 2008 and the most recent data available (August 2019) shows that for the academic year 2018/19, 76.6% of girls in Year 9 had received the two doses, while 82.8% of girls in year 10 had received the two doses.

Ms Flynn asked the Minister of Health on which authority the Consent to Release practice is based, whereby lead clinicians can review patient files and stop information governance officers releasing those files without clinician approval.

Mr Swann: The management of Subject Access Requests for patient information is undertaken in accordance with General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) and the Data Protection Act 2018. Applications for access to deceased records are handled in accordance with the Access to Health Records (NI) Order 1993.

Medical records are reviewed to ensure that there is no 3rd party information contained within the record and to ensure that release of any part of the record would not cause any harm to the physical or mental health of the person seeking the data, or to another individual.

In all cases the Data Protection Officer of the organisation will take advice from appropriate professionals on any potential redactions.

Ms Flynn asked the Minister of Health why the Public Health Agency is yet to publish its report on vaginal mesh, following the issue of a draft report to MLAs in summer 2018.

Mr Swann: The report on vaginal mesh is currently being finalised by the Public Health Agency and will be sent to the Department of Health in mid-March 2020.

Ms Flynn asked the Minister of Health whether any steps have been taken to contact Dr Dionysios Veronikis to outline a business case for the viability of providing affected women with full and safe removal of vaginal mesh surgery.

Mr Swann: My Department remains focused on the development of local health and social care expertise to provide these services. The Department is however monitoring the findings of the work commissioned by the Health Minister in Scotland in relation to Dr Veronikis and will be keeping the position under review.

Ms Flynn asked the Minister of Health whether local clinicians who are performing full vaginal mesh removal surgery requiring groin dissection have had proper training, accreditation and validation.

Mr Swann: There is no formal accreditation process for surgical mesh removal requiring groin dissection in the UK or further afield. The expertise of surgeons here in this surgery is currently being acquired through professional collaborations with other surgeons in the UK to inform best practice and specialism in this field.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Health how many people employed by his Department and its arm's-length bodies earn less than £25,600.

Mr Swann: The Department of Health has 5 Administrative Assistants, 39 Administrative Officers and 43 Executive Officer IIs, totalling 87 staff, who earn less than £25,600. All other pay bands earn in excess of £25,600 (full-time).

In the HSC, as at 31st December 2019, there were 35,326 staff in post earning less than a full-time equivalent basic salary of £25,600 (i.e. not including extra pay from allowances, overtime etc). This count is on the basis of the pay values that were in place at the time (i.e. 2018/19 pay circular values).

It is important to note that some staff, both in the Department of Health and the HSC, may earn below this due to part-time working arrangements, however, the Department is only able to supply information by grade.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health what proposals he has to reduce waiting lists via waiting list validation.

Mr Swann: Trusts have been allocated non-recurrent funding this year to support waiting list validation to ensure that waiting lists are accurate and include only those patients who require assessment and/or treatment. This validation exercise is currently underway within each Trust. In parallel with and complementing the Trust led validation, a primary care led waiting list validation has been established whereby GP practices will carry out a clinical validation of their own patients currently on a waiting list for a first outpatient appointment across a range of specialties. Both exercises are funded until the end of March 2020.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health to detail his proposals to meet the April 2021 target established in New Decade, New Approach for waiting lists.

Mr Swann: Achievement of the New Decade, New Approach commitment on waiting times is dependent on additional investment. Once the amount of additional funding available in 2020/21 is confirmed, an action plan will be developed to ensure that available capacity is maximised to reduce waiting times.

The scale at which I will be able to tackle the unacceptable waiting times will be greatly influenced by the outcome of the current budgetary discussions.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health what discussions he has had with the Minister for Infrastructure to ensure that disabled people seeking to attend hospital or health centre appointments can book taxis on the same basis as anyone else.

Mr Swann: I have had no discussions on this matter with the Minister for Infrastructure as the Disability Discrimination (Transport Vehicles) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2009 place a duty on transport providers operating a taxi to ensure that disabled people are not treated less favourably than other people when using their services.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health to outline his plans to ensure that sufficient numbers of podiatrists are recruited over the period of the Transformation of Health and Social Services, as outlined in Delivering Together; and what resources exist for additional training which may be required.

Mr Swann: I expect to receive shortly the recommendations of the Podiatry Workforce Review currently being concluded by my Department. I anticipate that these will address the level of pre-registration and post-registration training commissioned by my Department.

I will be able to consider the affordability of these recommendations once the Department's budget for 2020/21 has been agreed.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health how many Continuing Healthcare awards were made (i) during the 2018/19 financial year; and (ii) between 6 April 2019 and 5 January 2020.

Mr Swann: There have been no continuing healthcare awards made during this time.

Miss Woods asked the Minister of Health (i) for an update on the Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV) Prevention pilot; (ii) the number of people accessing pre-exposure prophylaxis PrEP; and (iii) whether he has any plans to extend and enhance the pilot through community provision.

Mr Swann: I refer the member to the answer to AQW 2223/17-22. There are currently no plans to extend and enhance the pilot through community provision.

Ms Flynn asked the Minister of Health what was the process of accreditation for the mesh centre in Belfast; and what external system of approval of standards and quality of care is in place to monitor the work of this regional clinic.
(AQW 2701/17-22)

Mr Swann: The Belfast Mesh Centre was accredited by the British Society of Urogynaecology (the sub-specialist society on urogynaecology of the Royal College of Gynaecologists). Accreditation criteria included demonstrating the availability of the full complement of staff in the related specialties of urogynaecology, colorectal, urology and pain management together with a multi-professional team working structure.

There is no specific quality standard arrangements for a mesh centre however they follow the relevant NICE clinical guidelines and are monitored by the same clinical governance measures used across all HSC services and those put in place following the pause in mesh surgery.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health how much revenue was generated from car parking charges in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust, in the last financial year.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Health for an update on the provision of 3 funded cycles of IVF treatment, as outlined in New Decade, New Approach.

(AQW 2715/17-22)

Mr Swann: I am pleased that the New Decade, New Approach agreement committed to providing three funded IVF cycles for eligible women.

While I have previously highlighted capacity constraint with the Regional Fertility Centre, I am establishing a Project Board to take this project forward and consider what is needed to enable implementation of the three cycles for eligible women. I will provide further details when the Project Board reports back to me.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Health to detail the budget for the GP Out Of Hours Service for the Southern Health and Social Care Trust in each of the last three financial years.

Mr Swann: The table below gives the budget details for the GP Out Of Hours service for the Southern Health and Social Care Trust for the last three years.

	Financial Year 2019/20 (as at 28.02.20)	Financial Year 2018/19	Financial Year \2017/18

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health whether the (i) Northern Health and Social Care Trust; and (ii) Western Health and Social Care Trust have established panels to consider cases under The Mental Capacity (Deprivation of Liberty) Regulations (Northern Ireland 2019); and, if this is not the case, to outline the rationale for these decisions.

Mr Swann: Both the Northern Health and Social Care Trust and the Western Health and Social Care Trust have established trust panels to consider applications for deprivations of liberty in accordance with the Mental Capacity Act (Northern Ireland) 2016 and the Mental Capacity (Deprivation of Liberty) (No. 2) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2019.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health whether he has any plans to introduce NHS Continuing Healthcare, as provided in England and Wales; and to outline the rationale for this decision.

Mr Swann: A public consultation on continuing healthcare was launched on 19 June 2017 and ran for a period of 13 weeks. A total of 43 consultation responses were received and analysed. I am considering the consultation responses and will announce next steps in due course.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health whether people are asked to state their sexual orientation before giving blood.

Mr Swann: Potential donors are not asked to state their sexual orientation when giving blood.

A link to the “can I donate section” on the NIBTS website is below. This replicates much of the content of the Donor Healthcheck Questionnaire.

<https://nibts.hscni.net/donating-blood/can-i-donate/>

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health to outline the timescale for implementation of the recommendations in the Physiotherapy Workforce Review, completed in 2019.
(AQW 2751/17-22)

Mr Swann: I expect to receive shortly the recommendations of the Physiotherapy Workforce Review currently being concluded by my Department. I anticipate that these will address the level of pre-registration and post-registration training commissioned by my Department.

I will be able to consider the affordability of these recommendations once the Department's budget for 2020/21 has been agreed.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health how many consultant surgeons are in each of the surgical specialties in each Health and Social Care Trust.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health how many permanent or temporary staff were employed by Lifeline, in each of the last five financial years.

Mr Swann: The Lifeline Crisis Response service was provided by a third party provider, Contact NI, between April 2008 and March 2018. Details on staffing levels during this period are provided in the table below:

Financial Year	Staff Numbers
2014-2015	Information not available
2015-2016	As of 15 December 2015 92 Permanent Staff 0 Temporary Staff

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister of Health how each Health and Social Care Trust decides upon the rate that will be charged for car parking on hospital grounds.

Mr Swann: The Department's policy on car parking aims to ensure the effective provision of car parking across all of the Health Estate for patients, visitors and staff. It is for each Health and Social Care Trust to determine the way that the policy is applied to enable them to recover the costs of car parking at each of their sites.

Car parking rates are set by each Trust at a level to recover costs by weighing up local environmental considerations such as the price of any adjacent car parks, the demand for space, the availability of alternative forms of transport and the rural or urban nature of the site.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister of Health whether he can provide the waiting times for people with a disability to receive dental treatment.

Mr Swann: Waiting list figures for dental treatment are not broken down in relation to disability.

Ms Kimmings asked the Minister of Health for an update on progress of the roll-out of the new multi-disciplinary teams in Primary Care in the Southern Health and Social Care Trust.

Mr Swann: The Primary Care Multi-disciplinary Teams (MDTs) model reflects a partnership approach, with the local GP federation employing mental health professionals, and the relevant HSC Trust employing the physiotherapists, social workers, social work assistants, and additional nursing staff who fulfil the remainder of the new roles.

In October 2018, it was announced that the MDT model would be extended beyond the Down, Londonderry and West Belfast GP Federation areas, into Causeway and Newry & District.

Since that time, the Southern HSC Trust has appointed the following staff:

Role	Allocation for 2019/20 (whole time equivalent)	Appointed
Physiotherapy manager	1	1
Physiotherapists	2.5	3.5*
Social work manager	1	1*
Social workers	5	5*
Social work assistants	2.5	2.5*
Health visiting staff	14.9	3.9*
District nursing staff	11	4*

* not yet in post as at 29 February 2020

Departmental officials will continue to engage with the SHSCT regarding recruitment of the remaining staff allocation for the 2019/20 year.

Ms Kimmings asked the Minister of Health whether any of the additional £32m, identified by his Department in the Power to People report as being required for reform of adult social care, has been set aside for the provision of extra domiciliary care packages.

Mr Swann: The expert panels report Power to People which was published in 2017 identifies the pressures and challenges in meeting demand within the current system but does not identify any specific expenditure or costs for additional domiciliary care packages.

At this time, a budget has not yet been allocated for the Reform of Adult Social Care.

Ms Flynn asked the Minister of Health to list the community and voluntary groups in Belfast that receive funding for the provision of counselling services.

Ms Flynn asked the Minister of Health to detail the counselling services funded by the Health Service in the greater Shankill area for each of the last three years, including the amount of funding provided to each group.

(AQW 2780/17-22)

Mr Swann: Due to data confidentiality and commercial sensitivity, it is not possible to provide financial breakdowns for each service.

Belfast Health and Social Care Trust and the Public Health Agency provide funding for the following groups and services in the Greater Shankill area to assist suicide prevention counselling:

Group	Programme/Area of Work
Ashton Community Trust	Complementary Therapies
Aware Defeat Depression	Training – Mental Health First Aid and Mood Matters

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health how many calls for ambulances were unable to be answered over the last two year period.

Mr Swann: 999 calls for ambulances are answered by the Public Emergency Call Service operated by British Telecommunications plc (BT). The BT Emergency Call Operator then connects the call to the NIAS Emergency Ambulance Control.

If NIAS are unable to answer calls, for instance when an unplanned volume of calls or other disruption occurs, the calls are redirected to the Scottish Ambulance Service. Calls received by the Scottish Ambulance Service are then passed electronically to NIAS Emergency Ambulance Control for ambulance dispatch.

In the last two year period 656 calls were answered by the Scottish Ambulance Service and then passed to the NIAS Emergency Ambulance Control.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Health how many home care packages are currently in place in each Health and Social Care Trust.

Mr Swann: The Department collects and publishes information on Domiciliary Care Services for Adults in Northern Ireland annually. The number of domiciliary home care packages and percentage delivered by the (i) Trust; and (ii) independent sector can be found in Table 1 below.

Table 1. The number of domiciliary care packages delivered 8th - 14th September 2019.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Health to detail the percentage of home care packages in each Health and Social Care Trust that are delivered by the (i) Trust; and (ii) independent sector.

Mr Swann: The Department collects and publishes information on Domiciliary Care Services for Adults in Northern Ireland annually. The number of domiciliary home care packages and percentage delivered by the (i) Trust; and (ii) independent sector can be found in Table 1 below.

Table 1. The number of domiciliary care packages delivered 8th - 14th September 2019.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Health, pursuant to AQQ 214/17-22, whether his Department has any plans to invest in the development and expansion of Carrickmore health centre.

Mr Swann: The Western Health and Social Care Trust have submitted a proposal for Carrickmore Health Centre as part of a Departmental capital planning review exercise. I will consider this proposal alongside other capital investment priorities. My ability to take forward new capital projects will depend on additional capital resources being made available to me.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Health to list the suicide crisis centres in Northern Ireland; and whether there are plans for more centres.

Mr Swann: There is a crisis de-escalation pilot in Belfast Health and Social Care Trust operating until 31 March 2020. There is a Derry and Strabane District Council led Crisis Intervention Service operating in Londonderry until 31 March 2020. A multi-agency meeting is planned to establish if funding can be secured to extend the Londonderry pilot.

The Protect Life 2 Strategy for Preventing Suicide and Self harm, includes a new action to provide timely, accessible de-escalation services for those in emotional crisis or despair. A crisis de-escalation service workstream will shortly be established under the Protect Life 2 Strategy to consider the evaluations from current projects and determine options for future provision.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health to detail the (i) target; and (ii) actual waiting times for urgently referred colonoscopy procedures at each (a) Health and Social Care Trust; and (b) hospital.

Mr Swann: The current ministerial target for all diagnostic tests states that 'by March 2020, 75% of patients should wait no longer than 9 weeks for a diagnostic test and no patient waits longer than 26 weeks'.

The latest provisional average completed waits, relating to quarter ending September 2019, for colonoscopy procedures in each trust and hospital are given in the table below. These completed waits provide the time waited from the decision to admit to the procedure taking place. The times presented do not take account of any suspensions from the waiting list. It should also be noted that patients who are admitted non-electively do not have a date waiting. The department cannot currently disaggregate this information by routine and urgent referrals for completed waits.

Average number of weeks waited for colonoscopies taking place in HSC hospitals during quarter ending September 2019 (Provisional).

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Health what progress has been made on cross-departmental proposals to improve dental health and on addressing obesity and type 2 diabetes.

Mr Swann: The current cross-government obesity prevention framework, A Fitter Future for All 2012-2022, was launched in 2012. It incorporates action on food & nutrition and physical activity to tackle the issue of overweight and obesity.

The multi-sectoral Obesity Prevention Steering Group, which leads the development of the framework and oversees its progress, agreed short term new outcomes for implementation during the final stage of the framework from June 2019 - June 2022 in October 2019: <https://www.health-ni.gov.uk/sites/default/files/publications/health/fitter-future-sto.pdf>

A Diabetes Prevention Programme was launched in April 2019 and has been rolled out across all Health and Social Care Trust areas. The programme is aimed at people who have been identified as pre-diabetic and helps participants reduce their risk of developing type 2 diabetes through weight reduction, healthy food choices and increased physical activity. At January 2020, almost 2,000 patients had been referred to and engaged in 100 programmes being delivered across Northern Ireland.

The HSC sector continues to collaborate with the Department of Education to promote good dental health in children. Happy Smiles is a preventative programme which was delivered to almost 17,000 pre-school children in 2018/19. Delivery is targeted to the most vulnerable sections of our population and aims to instil good habits early rather than change behaviours at a later stage. We also collaborate to collect oral health data which provides important background information that helps inform policy development and benchmarking with other UK nations for the prevalence of dental caries.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health to outline the timetable under which legislation to ban smoking in cars when children are present will be brought forward for approval by the Assembly.

Mr Swann: Draft regulations to prohibit smoking in private vehicles carrying children were consulted on in 2017 but were unable to be progressed in the absence of an Executive and Assembly. Officials are currently revisiting the regulations and I expect those to be presented to me soon.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health whether a commitment to a smoke-free Northern Ireland by 2035 will appear in any forthcoming strategies.

Mr Swann: My Department's 10-year Tobacco Control Strategy for Northern Ireland was published in 2012. While it does not have a smoke-free target date, it has the overall aim of a tobacco-free society.

The Department will, however, consider the appropriateness of a smoke-free target date for Northern Ireland in the development of any future tobacco control strategy.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health to outline his proposals for enhanced mental health services for young people.

Mr Swann: I refer the member to the answer given to AQO 85/17-22 on 10 February 2020.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health for an update on minimum unit pricing on alcohol.

(AQW 2841/17-22)

Mr Swann: The harms caused by the misuse of alcohol are a major public health issue in Northern Ireland. Minimum Unit Pricing for Alcohol has the potential to be a key population-level health measure to reduce these harms and I will give this consideration as part of the development of a new substance misuse strategy for Northern Ireland.

I am also keen to learn from the evidence generated in Scotland, where early evaluation results are now being published on the real world impact of Minimum Unit Pricing for Alcohol legislation since its introduction in 2018, and in due course from Wales also where the measure became law on 02 March 2020.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health whether he will bring forward proposals for an opt-out organ donation system, as in the rest of the UK and Ireland.

Mr Swann: In 2016, the then Northern Ireland Assembly voted not to proceed with legislation to introduce an opt out system for organ donation.

However, in December 2018, my Department launched a Policy Statement, "Promoting Human Organ Donation and Transplantation in Northern Ireland", which has the two primary objectives of encouraging positive actions and behaviours in relation to organ donation and developing appropriate training for healthcare professionals to increase levels of consent.

Work on implementing the Policy Statement got underway last year with the establishment of an Organ Donation Steering Group to oversee its implementation. Arrangements are also being finalised to appoint a Regional Organ Donation Promotion Manager/Co-Ordinator, whose role will involve encouraging positive behaviours in relation to organ donation, including working with local councils, and to establish a sub-group for charities to further help to implement the Policy Statement.

I am also keen to keep the issue of a soft opt out system for organ donation under close review.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health what (i) volume; and (ii) value of dispensing of branded medicines is carried out at a loss of revenue by community pharmacies, after clawback discount has been applied by his Department.
(AQW 2851/17-22)

Mr Swann: An ongoing survey provides an estimate of the annual percentage profit margins for branded and generic medicines dispensed by community pharmacies. Results for the last three years are as follows:

	Branded medicines	Generic medicines
2016/17	-0.4%	37.9%
2018/19	-1.8%	23.3%

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister of Health to provide detail on each project his Department plans to develop using Financial Capital Transactions Funds.

(AQW 2866/17-22)

Mr Swann: My Department has funded one project using Financial Transactions Capital in 2019/20. The funding of £43k was allocated through the GP Loan Scheme to part fund the extension of a GP practice premises to allow for the inclusion of multi-disciplinary teams as well as the expansion of GP training facilities.

Miss Woods asked the Minister of Health for an update on the number of people on waiting lists for the (i) adult gender identity service; and (ii) Knowing Our Identity - Gender Identity Development Service.

Mr Swann: The number of patients on waiting lists for (i) the adult gender identity service, and (ii) the Knowing Our Identity - Gender Identity Development Service on the 31st January 2020 is outlined in the table below.

Belfast HSC Trust	Weeks Waiting				Total Waiting
	0-3 weeks (0-21 days)	>3-6 weeks (22-42 days)	>6-9 weeks (43-63 days)	>9 weeks (64+ days)
i) Adult Gender Identity Service	3	4	5	416	428
(ii) Knowing Our Identity – Gender Identity Development Service	0	1	1	12	14

Mr Allen asked the Minister of Health how many patients are waiting to receive Dexcom Glucose monitors; and what is the average waiting time in each Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 2931/17-22)

Mr Swann: There is one patient waiting for a Dexcom Glucose monitor and is expected to receive it imminently. Where this treatment option is deemed clinically appropriate, it would be funded subject to available resources. There are no patients approved for this treatment who are awaiting a monitor.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Health how many ventilators are available to treat COVID-19 patients with Acute Respiratory Distress Syndrome; and how many of those ventilators are currently in use for other patients.

Mr Swann: Equipment, such as ventilators, is utilised as required and is not held for patients with particular conditions, for example COVID-19.

The number of patients requiring ventilation changes very frequently, as new patients are admitted and others' clinical condition changes; it is therefore not possible to provide specific numbers at any given time.

Sufficient equipment, such as ventilators, is held by the Trusts and critical care units for routine as well as for increased levels of demand, but Trusts have been asked to confirm any requirement for additional equipment, including ventilators, to support an increase in demand from COVID-19. This action is in progress.

Ms Flynn asked the Minister of Health, pursuant to AQW 1453/17-22, whether the revised business case for a perinatal mental health inpatient unit and community services has concluded, including an assessment of additional funding.

Mr Swann: The revised business case for enhanced community perinatal mental health services for the region has recently been received by the Department and my officials are currently considering the detail of the business case.

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Health whether he will visit Ravenhill Nursing Home in Carrickfergus.
(AQW 3130/17-22)

Mr Swann: Should an invitation be extended to visit any nursing or residential care home in Northern Ireland, I'll give it suitable consideration.

Department for Infrastructure

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Infrastructure for an update on (i) what budget remains available for 2019/20 street light maintenance; and (ii) whether additional resources are required to continue normal street light maintenance within the Eastern Division for the remainder of 2019/20.

Ms Mallon (The Minister for Infrastructure): The 2019/20 Street Lighting repair budget of just under £1m was largely spent out at the end of September 2019 due to budget shortages, with remaining funding directed to safety only repairs.

I welcome the additional allocation of £3m for Winter Service protecting gritting services up to the end March and for urgent Street Lighting (outage) Repairs and Road Maintenance following a Treasury redistribution of funding in February.

I have allocated £1.2m of this £3m specifically to street lighting repairs, and £0.3m of this will be for Eastern Division. This will address the current backlog, together with providing a normal street light maintenance service between now and 31 March 2020. I have raised the need for sustainable funding for these services with the Department of Finance in advance of the new budget being set.

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister for Infrastructure what plans she has to fund street light repairs in the Western Division.

Ms Mallon: I understand and share the concerns of the public affected by street light outages and am working with my Departmental officials to address this issue as quickly as possible.

I am pleased to inform the Member that I have recently allocated £1.2m to address the current outage backlog and future outages up to 31 March 2020 across all divisions. Western Division has been allocated £300,000. My Department's internal and external contractors have commenced work on outage repairs in all Divisions.

I have been raising the need for additional investment with the Finance Minister, as part of the 2020/21 budget discussions, in order to maintain our roads to a better standard and deal with other growing pressures facing my Department.

Mr Lynch asked the Minister for Infrastructure for an update on the legal advice given to her regarding biennial vehicle testing.

Ms Mallon: I can confirm that I sought general legal advice on a range of options in respect of vehicle testing so as to inform my decisions on how to address the current difficulties and mindful of the need to improve the MOT system and network. That advice confirmed that testing at two year intervals is consistent with European Directive requirements on testing frequency and could be achieved by amending existing primary road traffic legislation – specifically, Article 63 of the Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1995. I will be carefully considering all options before taking policy decisions in this area.

Mr Buckley asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline what plans her Department has to restructure the junction at the Park and Ride at the Lough Road, Lurgan.

Ms Mallon: I can confirm that a number of options for providing additional park and ride spaces in the vicinity of the existing Park and Ride site are being considered.

My officials are working with colleagues in Translink to consider different alternatives and bring forward a preferred option. Therefore there are no plans to alter the junction until this exercise has been completed and any potential impacts have been fully assessed.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister for Infrastructure what is the average waiting time to repair a faulty streetlight, from the date of which it is reported to when it is repaired.

Ms Mallon: I understand and share the concerns of the public affected by street light outages and am working with my Departmental officials to address this issue as quickly as possible.

Due to budgetary constraints, my Department was operating a limited street lighting maintenance service since 1 October 2019. As a result outages were taking an average of 8-10 weeks to repair from the date of initial reporting.

I am pleased to inform the Member that I have recently allocated £1.2m to clear the current outage backlog and future outages up to 31 March 2020. My Department's internal and external contractors have now commenced work on outage repairs in all Divisions.

I have been raising the need for additional investment with the Minister for Finance as part of the 2020/21 budget discussions, in order to better maintain our roads and deal with other growing pressures facing my Department.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether there are plans to resurface, either part or in full, Loughanmore Road between Antrim and Parkgate.

Ms Mallon: I am pleased to advise that carriageway resurfacing on Loughanmore Road, from Greystone Road to Burnside commenced on 2 March 2020. The scheme is expected to take 8 weeks to complete.

The most recent inspection was carried out in January 2020, and identified that the rest of the road is in an acceptable condition. My officials will continue to inspect this road on a 3 month cycle and any actionable defects will be programmed for repair in accordance with current maintenance standards.

Ms Anderson asked the Minister for Infrastructure for her assessment on how Mobuoy Dump will impact the delivery of the A6 road upgrades.

Ms Mallon: The Mobuoy waste site has not affected the construction of any of the current works on the A6, which are progressing well. There are plans for phase 2 of the A6 Dungiven to Derry scheme to continue the dual carriageway from Drumahoe to Caw roundabout on the A2. Part of these works would encroach on the Mobuoy waste site, and this will need to be taken into account in the final design of the engineering works. I will be considering all factors as soon as practically possible.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure (i) whether the Just Park app data breach has been fully resolved; and (ii) how she will ensure that it will not be repeated.

Ms Mallon: The data breach did not relate to the JustPark app, On 7 February 2020, a data incident occurred with JustPark where, due to human error, one corporate client (a cleaning business in Belfast) was given elevated permissions to the JustPark's back office system, which allowed them to see parking sessions and a limited amount of data relating to other corporate clients. This was resolved on the same day by JustPark, who revoked the customer's elevated permission levels.

JustPark have assured my Department they have implemented a number of measures to prevent this incident from recurring. These measures include: removing the ability to set up elevated permission levels; revising standard operating procedures; introducing additional quality assurance steps to ensure corporate client customer account set ups are rigorously tested before going live; and retraining JustPark staff involved in setting up corporate client customer accounts and permission levels.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Infrastructure for an update on plans to improve the park and ride facilities in North Down.

Ms Mallon: I am supportive of the provision of Park and Ride facilities to encourage a move towards more sustainable modes of travel.

Within the North Down area, officials are considering options for Park and Ride facilities at Newtownards, Comber and Tillysburn. The way forward is likely to involve the purchase of sites and it is not possible at this stage to provide any further detail until more clarity is received on the extent of the allocation made available to me in the forthcoming budget.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister for Infrastructure to detail her plans for additional funding for streetlight repairs in the Western Division.

Ms Mallon: I understand and share the concerns of the public affected by street light outages and am working with my Departmental officials to address this issue as quickly as possible.

There are currently 12,085 street lighting outages reported on the street lighting management system. However, I am pleased to inform the Member that I have recently allocated £1.2m to address the current outage backlog and future outages up to 31 March 2020. My Department's internal and external contractors have commenced work on outage repairs in all Divisions.

I have been raising the need for additional investment with the Minister for Finance as part of the 2020/21 budget discussions, in order to better maintain our roads and deal with other growing pressures facing my Department.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure for an update on the review of Class C taxi classification.

Ms Mallon: I recognise the important role that the taxi industry plays, both to transport networks and also to commuters by providing a valuable service every day to people and businesses in our cities, towns and rural communities.

I recognise that there are a range of issues relating to taxis and the taxi industry that need discussion. I will be exploring these in coming weeks and have arranged to meet with representatives from the taxi industry and other stakeholders.

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister for Infrastructure when she plans to implement Directive (EU) 2018/645.

Ms Mallon: The Department for Transport is consulting on amendments required by Directive (EU) 2018/645, and is planning to publish the consultation on this matter in March 2020, with relevant regulations in place by the transposition deadline of 23 May 2020.

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline what changes her Department will make to the guidance on driving minibuses, issued in April 2018, following the introduction of Directive (EU) 2018/645.

Ms Mallon: The Department for Transport is consulting on amendments required by Directive (EU) 2018/645. My Department will analyse the responses to the consultation and any potential impact on public guidance to ensure that it is consistent with current legislation and I will then consider the way forward.

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether her Department will consider reducing the speed limit to 20mph outside Abbey Primary School, Newtownards.

Ms Mallon: Speed limits are currently considered and assessed using the guidelines set out in my Department's publication 'Setting Local Speed Limits in Northern Ireland'. This document can be viewed at www.infrastructure-ni.gov.uk/publications/setting-local-speed-limits-northern-ireland-rsppg-e051

My officials carried out a review of the speed limit on Movilla Road, in the vicinity of Abbey Primary School in Newtownards, in conjunction with PSNI. Having taken account of the nature of the road, the amount of development and collision history, they concluded it did not warrant a reduction to a 20mph speed limit. I have asked officials to keep the situation under review and to advise me of any changes in circumstances that might point to the need for a different approach.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AQW 1961/17-22, whether the allocations across the Rural Community Transport Partnerships will be allocated on need in each area for 2020/21, rather than data from 2015.

Ms Mallon: I recognise the key role of community transport in supporting our Programme for Government ambitions and I can assure you of my determination to protect this important service, particularly for those most in need. However, severe constraints in my Department's budgets over recent years has resulted in significant pressures across my Department. I will therefore be considering the way forward for community transport alongside the full range of pressures across my Department reflecting on my priorities, the commitments in "New Decade: New Approach" and the budget made available for the period ahead.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister for Infrastructure for her assessment of expanding rail services west of the Bann.

Ms Mallon: I am committed to improving connectivity for the benefit of our economy and communities across Northern Ireland. In that regard, I am clear that our rail network, presents a unique opportunity to improve the sustainability of our transport operations.

I will be assessing the pressures across my Department reflecting my priorities, the commitments in the "New Decade: New Approach" and the budget made available for the period ahead. My Department is also developing proposals for a new Regional Strategic Transport Network Transport Plan which will inform priorities for future development of the main road and rail networks. Tackling regional imbalance and connecting communities are priorities for me.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AQW 625/17-22, whether records are kept of (i) unregistered; and (ii) unadopted land that requires maintenance.

Ms Mallon: My Department does not keep records of land or property that it does not own, or of land and property that it has no responsibility for maintaining.

Ms Anderson asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she will review the quality of the risk assessments carried out for reservoirs.

Ms Mallon: My Department has produced reservoir inundation mapping, and more detailed reservoir flood risk mapping, that takes into account potential flood water depths and velocities, in the event of an uncontrolled release of water from a reservoir. These risk maps are used to inform our responses to Planning Authorities, in relation to proposed development in the potential inundation zones of reservoirs, particularly at this time, as the full regulatory framework envisaged by the Reservoirs Act (Northern Ireland) 2015, is not yet in place.

The standard methodology used to produce this mapping is a recognised way of measuring flood risk to people and my officials will consider, as necessary, any valid information that would inform any modification of this approach.

Mr Chambers asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether there are any plans to increase the Glider fleet.

Ms Mallon: Phase 1 of the Belfast Rapid Transit (BRT) system was successfully completed and the new Glider system was introduced to service in September 2018, connecting communities in East and West Belfast. The new service has proved to be a huge success. It has achieved over 13.6 million passenger journeys to date. This has been an increase in over 45,000 passenger journeys per week in comparison to the previous Metro services.

Consequently Translink has identified the need for two additional vehicles. The Department approved a Business Case for the two Gliders in January 2020 and Translink will now begin the process of ordering and purchasing them. Subject to future funding, I will be exploring all options to deliver cleaner, greener, sustainable transport.

Phase 2 of BRT, which will connect North and South Belfast, is at the early stages of planning.

Although too early to be definitive on the number of vehicles which would be required for Phase 2, I can confirm that the implementation of BRT 2 will lead to an increase in the Glider fleet.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure (i) how she intends to use the extra £3m funding for winter conditions; and (ii) whether the winter gritting schedule can now be expanded for times of adverse weather.

Ms Mallon:

- (i) The Finance Minister announced an additional £3million of funding in February to fund winter gritting services, urgent street lighting repairs and road maintenance. I have allocated £1m to winter gritting services, which will protect the existing winter gritting schedule up to 31 March 2020; £1.2m to street lighting (outage) repairs; and £0.8m to road maintenance.
- (ii) In general, my Department salts main through routes carrying more than 1,500 vehicles per day. In exceptional circumstances, roads with difficult topography carrying between 1,000 and 1,500 vehicles per day will also be salted. The application of this policy ensures that 28% of the total road network, which carries around 80% of traffic, is salted at an average cost of around £6.7 million each year. Any extension of the schedule to cover 90% or 100% of traffic volumes would double or quadruple the annual cost respectively.

I would like to be able to expand our gritting service to many other routes, but it is simply not feasible to do this at present due to the severe budget constraints and many other pressures faced by my Department. I have been raising the need for additional investment with the Finance Minister, in advance of the 2020/21 budget.

Mrs Barton asked the Minister for Infrastructure to detail the number of gullies in the Fermanagh area; and the number of these gullies that are cleaned (i) once; and (ii) twice per year.

Ms Mallon: There are approximately 15,100 gullies in Fermanagh.

In the past, my Department aimed to inspect and clean, where necessary, all gullies in urban areas twice each year and gullies in rural areas once each year. This sought to ensure that a reasonable level of maintenance was being carried out to drainage systems, taking account of the Department's finite funding and staff resource levels. In addition, inspection and cleaning of gullies was undertaken at locations where fallen leaves presented ongoing problems at certain times of year, or where there was a history of gullies becoming blocked for other reasons. However, due to ongoing severe funding pressures, my Department has had to restrict this service and is currently only able to deliver a limited service across a range of functions, including gully emptying. As a result, my Department currently aims to inspect and clean, where necessary, all gullies once annually.

As you will be aware, I have been raising the need for additional funding with the Finance Minister in advance of the 2020/21 budget, as I am cognisant that proactive rather than reactive maintenance is much more cost effective and represents better value for money in the longer term.

Ms Rogan asked the Minister for Infrastructure when she will engage additional teams and resources to address the backlog of faulty streetlights.

Ms Mallon: I understand and share the concerns of the public affected by street light outages and am working with my Departmental officials to address this issue as quickly as possible.

I am pleased to inform the Member that I have recently allocated £1.2m to address the current outage backlog and future outages up to 31 March 2020. My Department's internal and external contractors have commenced work on outage repairs in all Divisions.

I have been raising the need for additional investment with the Minister for Finance as part of the 2020/21 budget discussions in order to better maintain our roads and deal with other growing pressures facing my Department.

Ms Rogan asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether there are any plans to carry out a review of potentially unsafe trees along main arterial routes, given the risk posed to the public as a result of falling trees during recent storms.

Ms Mallon: My Department does not have a statutory duty regarding the condition of trees that are on land beside the adopted road network. However, it does have a statutory duty to maintain the public road network, which includes ensuring that boundary trees or hedges do not overgrow the roadway and footway, thereby impeding road users and pedestrians.

My officials usually identify overgrown trees and hedges that endanger or obstruct road users, during our routine maintenance inspections. If a tree is suspected of being a hazard or if a tree-related accident has occurred, owners / occupiers are identified and are requested to co-operate in removing or cutting the trees or hedges, to address any concerns in relation to public safety. If they do not do so, my Department has powers under Article 50 of the Roads (Northern Ireland) Order 1993 to serve a notice on the owner/occupier requiring them to remove or cut back the tree or hedge, so as to remove the danger or obstruction. Where an owner / occupier does not comply with the requirements of the notice, my Department may carry out the necessary works and seek to recover costs.

In view of the procedures already in place, there are currently no plans to carry out a review of potentially unsafe trees along arterial routes.

Mr McHugh asked the Minister for Infrastructure for her assessment of the effectiveness of flood mitigation measures carried out along the River Finn to protect properties in Clady village, Co.Tyrone, and adjoining areas.

Ms Mallon: The flood defences at the Finn River, which are predominantly earthen flood banks, were constructed around 60 years ago and provide some degree of protection to properties in Clady village and the surrounding area. My Department has carried out a flood study to assess the level of risk to properties in this area, to determine if a viable flood alleviation scheme to enhance the level of flood protection to properties could be taken forward.

Unfortunately, an overall flood alleviation scheme, to reduce flood risk to properties in Clady Village and outlying areas along the Urney Road from the River Finn, is not economically viable. However a smaller, more localised flood alleviation project, on the Donnygown Burn, where it joins the River Finn, is economically viable and is due to commence in 2020. This project, which is estimated to cost £300,000, involves the construction of floodwalls and will, to some extent, reduce the risk of flooding to six properties in the immediate vicinity of Clady Bridge.

Ms Anderson asked the Minister for Infrastructure how her Department will proceed with the development of a new community and youth facility in the Greater Glen Area, which has been delayed due to its proximity to a reservoir.

Ms Mallon: Planning permission for this application was refused by the Planning Committee of Derry city and Strabane District Council on 12 August 2018. The application was refused because it did not satisfy the requirements of 'Planning Policy Statement 15 Planning and Flood Risk'.

The proposed community and youth facility lies in the inundation area of Creggan upper and Creggan lower reservoirs. At this stage, the developer has been unable to demonstrate that the condition, management and maintenance regime of either of these reservoirs is appropriate to provide sufficient assurances regarding reservoir safety. I am advised discussions with the Reservoir Manager will continue to encourage them to voluntarily comply with all of the legislative provisions foreseen in the Reservoirs Act.

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister for Infrastructure when will legislative provisions for the Review of Old Mineral Permissions will be commenced.

Ms Mallon: The commencement of these legislative provisions contained within the Planning Act (NI) 2011 is currently under consideration. This will require an up to date assessment of the operational effectiveness of the legislation, as well as further engagement with stakeholders to consider the practical impacts of ROMPs, including the resourcing implications for planning authorities and operators.

The commencement of ROMPs notwithstanding, there is currently a range of enforcement powers available to councils in their role as local planning authorities to deal with any operator who operates beyond the scope of an existing planning permission. In addition, there are powers introduced under the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act (NI) 2011 which councils can exercise to deal with a range of nuisance issues which could give rise to complaints relating to the operation of older permissions.

Ms Dolan asked the Minister for Infrastructure, in relation to the annual LTS programme for 2020-2021, will her Department provide a pedestrian crossing on Brownhill Link Road, Irvinestown,

Ms Mallon: I would refer the Member to my answer to her question AQW 2337/17-22.

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Infrastructure how much Translink spent on new buses, between 2015 and 2019.

(AQW 2665/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Between 2015 and 2019, Translink purchased 266 new buses costing just over £70m. The new buses included Goldline coaches, Glider vehicles and single and double deck vehicles for both Metro and Ulsterbus as per the table below:

BRT Glider Vehicles	32 Buses
BRT Feeder Minibuses	18 Buses
High Capacity Goldline Coaches	24 Buses
Goldline Coaches	30 Buses
Double Deck Buses	97 Buses
Single Deck Buses	27 Buses
Minibuses	38 Buses
Total	266

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Infrastructure (i) when the consultant's report of the review of renewable energy planning policy will be published; and (ii) whether a copy will be placed in the Assembly Library.

Ms Mallon: My Department commissioned external consultants to undertake research to inform the future direction of strategic planning policy for renewable energy development. I will be considering this issue in the coming weeks and will reflect on all relevant matters, including the consultant's report in considering the best way forward. I will then ensure that a copy of the independent research report is made public and is placed in the Assembly Library in due course.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Infrastructure, in relation to the announcement of a review of renewable energy planning policy by the Minister of the Environment on 16 June 2015, why are renewable applications still being determined on the strength of policy drafted when applications such as large scale solar farms and battery storage facilities were not in anticipation.

Ms Mallon: In my response to the member's previous Assembly Question (2055/17-22), I indicated that current regional planning policy for assessing development proposals as set out in the Strategic Planning Policy Statement (SPPS) which was published September 2015, as well as supporting supplementary planning guidance, provides a robust policy framework against which to assess planning applications of all types, including proposals of the nature to which your question refers, through the planning process.

I appreciate, however, that renewable energy development is a complex and technical policy area and there are key factors at play in terms of the pace of technological change; the dynamics of the energy market and wider economic factors. You are aware that my Department commissioned independent external consultants to undertake research to inform the future direction of strategic planning policy for renewable energy development. I will be considering this issue in the coming weeks and will reflect on all relevant matters, including the consultant's report in considering the best way forward.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Infrastructure how are (i) the Strategic Planning Policy Statement; and (ii) the Planning Policy Statement 18 still considered adequate to decide on planning applications, such as large scale solar farm proposals.

Ms Mallon: In my response to the member's previous Assembly Question (2055/17-22), I indicated that current regional planning policy for assessing development proposals as set out in the Strategic Planning Policy Statement (SPPS) and supporting supplementary planning guidance, provides a robust policy framework against which to assess planning applications of all types, including those for renewable energy.

The SPPS, Planning Policy Statement 18: 'Renewable Energy' and its Best Practice Guidance provide policy and guidance for the assessment of a range of renewable energy technologies, including solar energy. Existing policy and guidance also provides general planning principles in relation to the assessment of noise, residential and visual amenity, cumulative impact and health and safety, which are material considerations associated with such developments, and are assessed on a case by case basis.

Ms Kimmens asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline (i) the challenges identified for possible necessary expansion for checks and inspections at Warrenpoint Port in the post-transition period; and (ii) how she intends to address this issue.

Ms Mallon: My department has no responsibility for checks and inspections at ports. From the International Agreement, the protocol is clear that the Departments with key responsibility for checking goods, either in NI or in GB will be:

- a DAERA in NI or Defra in GB for SPS checks;
- b HMRC for customs checks.

If checks are required at NI ports as a result of the deal protocol in the post-transition period, this could require additional space/facilities to be made available at ports including at Warrenpoint.

As part of EU exit preparation last Autumn, my Department ran a grant funding scheme to assist ports in preparing for no deal /deal scenarios and to allow them to enhance port resilience to maximize post EU exit opportunities. Warrenpoint Port was successful and was awarded funds to undertake works to clear space and improve traffic management in anticipation of checks. This work is reaching completion.

At this stage it is unclear how checks on good will be managed, but my Department will continue to work with Warrenpoint Harbour to provide assistance when required.

Ms Kimmens asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline plans for the installation of ramps through Park View, Cloughogue, Newry.

Ms Mallon: My Department recognises the importance of traffic calming and road safety measures and is committed to exploring solutions that deliver better for communities and improve lives across Northern Ireland. I can confirm my officials have previously assessed Park View, Cloughogue for traffic calming measures, and it remains under consideration for potential inclusion in a future works programme.

While I would like to do more in relation to improving safety within our communities, the severe budget constraints that I have inherited, limit my capacity to do so. I have raised this issue with the Department of Finance and Executive colleagues, in advance of the new budget being set.

Ms Kimmens asked the Minister for Infrastructure in relation to the Continuous Household Survey in 2018/19, whether she will consider the implementation of 20mph zones outside schools.

Ms Mallon: As Minister responsible for promoting and improving road safety, I want to work actively with partners to reduce death and serious injuries on our roads. I believe that reducing the maximum speed traffic can travel at on some of our roads, particularly those near schools, can help. This is a view shared by the majority of respondents in the recently published 'Road Safety Issues in Northern Ireland 2018/19' report.

My Department is committed to introducing measures that reduce the speed of traffic on our roads. We are currently trialling an arrangement of signs that is intended to allow the introduction of more part-time 20mph speed limits at schools. We are also trialling the effectiveness of 'signed only' 20mph limits. These would be more economical and could be used more widely in appropriate environments, such as residential areas with schools, than would be possible with the current approach of providing 20mph limits along with traffic calming features. I am expecting receipt of the findings of the trial in the next month or so, and I fully intend to see what potential there is to build on the work already undertaken.

Ms Armstrong asked the Minister for Infrastructure how she will ensure planning regulations will be updated to achieve zero emissions by 2030 for (i) businesses; (ii) homes; and (iii) government venues.

Ms Mallon: There are no planning regulations to update in relation to the energy and environmental performance of new buildings, including businesses, homes and government venues. Such matters are governed by building regulations for which the Department of Finance (DoF) has primary responsibility.

DoF has advised that target carbon dioxide rates for new buildings are dealt with in Building Regulations and the need is recognised for these rates to continue to be reduced as part of the work to achieve the net zero carbon target.

DoF officials are fully aware of relevant consultations on proposals for amendments to Building Regulations in England, of similar proposals for Wales, and of recent uplifts in the Republic of Ireland and are progressing proposals here with these in mind.

Whilst there are no planning regulations to update, I am nevertheless strongly committed, within the areas of my responsibility, to working to ensure that the planning system and my Department plays its part in achieving the net zero carbon target. Regarding my Department's responsibilities under the two tier planning system, regional guidance in the Regional Development Strategy 2035 (RDS) and regional planning policy contained in the Strategic Planning Policy Statement (SPPS), already emphasises how planning authorities should mitigate and adapt to climate change. This includes, encouraging increased use of micro-generation in new buildings and requiring the siting, design and layout of all new development to limit likely greenhouse gas emissions and minimise resource and energy requirements.

Mr McCann asked the Minister for Infrastructure what plans she has to deal with parking saturation in many parts of West Belfast.

Ms Mallon: I understand that a number of requests for residents' parking within the Belfast area have already been received by my Department. I can assure the Member that my officials are assessing these in the context of developing a new approach to residents' parking schemes that incorporates the learning from the first scheme.

The first residents' parking scheme in Rugby Road / College Park Avenue, Belfast came into operation during April 2018. A review of the scheme, which reflects the needs, experiences and feedback of residents, is currently underway. I will want to make sure that any lessons learnt from this scheme inform wider policy on implementing residents' parking schemes for the benefit of communities.

Mr McCann asked the Minister for Infrastructure when there will be restrictions on non-residential parking implemented in Stockmans Lane, including the extension of double yellow lines.

Ms Mallon: I am keen to see action to address the concerns of residents about parking issues and pleased to note that work is already in hand.

You will be aware the first residents' parking scheme in Rugby Road / College Park Avenue, Belfast came into operation during April 2018. A review of the scheme, which reflects the needs, experiences and feedback of residents, is currently underway. I will want to make sure that any lessons learnt from this scheme inform wider policy on implementing residents' parking schemes.

I understand that a number of requests for residents' parking within the Belfast area have already been received by my Department. I can assure the Member that my officials are assessing these in the context of developing a new approach to residents' parking schemes that incorporates the learning from the first scheme.

As I think you are already aware from discussions with my officials in Roads Eastern Division, progress has already been made in implementing a number of corner restrictions in Stockmans Lane but action to implement other waiting restrictions does require a legislative process.

The proposed Parking and Waiting Restrictions (Belfast) (Amendment) Order, which includes the proposed waiting restrictions in Stockmans Lane, is currently going through the legislative process which will include a consultation period in due course.

Mr McCann asked the Minister for Infrastructure how much was spent by her Department on grass and weed removal from streets in West Belfast, in each of the last three years.

Ms Mallon: Costs associated with the treatment of grass and weeds is not recorded by constituency areas and therefore the information requested is not available. I can, however, confirm that my Department's local road maintenance office which covers the north and west areas of Belfast City Council has spent £87k in 2017/18, £90k in 2018/19 and in 2019/20 £95k (forecasted) on treating weeds. This was supplemented with some manual removal of weeds which was carried out by our in-house Operation and Maintenance team. The costs of these operations are not recorded separately from other road maintenance activities. Grass cutting, which does not include removal of cuttings, is carried out by the in-house Operation and Maintenance team and the costs are not separated out from other road maintenance activities.

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AQO 105/17-22, whether (i) she intends to bring the issue of wider developer contributions to regional infrastructure beyond site-specific mitigation to the Executive; and (ii) a community infrastructure levy, similar to that in operation in England, might be considered.

Ms Mallon: This is a broader matter for consideration by the Executive. I intend to write to the Finance Minister asking him for his views and my Department may have a role in contributing to taking this forward. The way forward could include consideration of the models already in place in other jurisdictions such as the Community Infrastructure Levy.

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister for Infrastructure to detail the outcome of discussions her Department has had with the manufacturer of the faulty lifts installed at the MOT Centres.

Ms Mallon: I announced on 27 February an order for 52 new vehicles lifts following receipt and detailed consideration of expert engineering, procurement, audit and legal advice. These lifts have been purchased under an accelerated production programme. They will begin to be operational from late April with all lifts in place by July which will return our MOT centres to full capacity.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she plans to introduce penalties to e-carNI vehicle users who park their car at e-car charging points longer than the required time to fully charge.

Ms Mallon: The following legislation provides for the on street and off street use of a parking place for electric vehicles respectively:

- 1 The Parking Places on Roads (Electric Vehicles) Order (Northern Ireland) 2012; and
- 2 2000 No. 384 ROAD TRAFFIC AND VEHICLES Off-Street Parking Order (Northern Ireland) 2000.

These Orders set out the authorisation, use of parking places and parking bays and the maximum period of waiting for electric vehicles. When the driver of an electric vehicle uses a parking bay reserved for an electric vehicle, the electric vehicle must be connected to an electric vehicle charging post and the driver must adhere to the specified time restrictions in relation to that parking place. It is a parking offence if time limits are contravened, enforceable by means of issuing a Penalty Charge Notice. The amount of the Penalty Charge is currently £90 which can be reduced to £45 if paid within 14 days.

I have no plans, at present, to introduce penalties for electric vehicle users who leave their electric vehicles at e-car charging points longer than the required time to fully charge their vehicle.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Infrastructure when she plans to introduce purchase charges at e-carNI charge points.

Ms Mallon: The e-car public charge point network in the North is owned by the Electricity Supply Board (ESB). At present, ESB does not charge e-car drivers for charging an electric vehicle at a public charge point. To date, the Utility Regulator has set a Maximum Resale Price (MRP) on the electricity cost of charge points, whereby any commercial operator cannot charge above cost price of electricity supply. Over the next few months, the Utility Regulator will be publishing its findings from the recent consultation on whether to remove the Maximum Resale Price (MRP) of Electricity as it applies to electric vehicles.

I look forward to the outcome of the consultation exercise which will give clarity for operators wishing to provide commercial services in the North. I fully recognise the importance of having modern, reliable public electric vehicle charging infrastructure in providing confidence for users of ultra-low emission vehicles and in respect of the connectivity improvements this would bring. In recognition of this, I recently made a joint commitment with the DAERA Minister to work collaboratively to promote the use of electric vehicles and improve the charge point network across the North.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Infrastructure (i) whether e-carNI charge points are classed as parking spaces; (ii) whether they are subject to parking charges introduced by local councils; and (iii) in relation to the limited network and mileage restrictions, for her assessment of the impact of parking charges at e-carNI charge points on e-car vehicle users.

Ms Mallon: Parking spaces or bays are situated within the parking place and are defined in legislation as "a space which is marked out in a parking place for the leaving of a vehicle" (Road Traffic and Vehicles Off-Street Parking Order (Northern Ireland) 2000 & The Parking Places on Roads (Electric Vehicles) Order (Northern Ireland) 2012). As such, e-carNI charge points are not classed as parking spaces.

Electric vehicle (EV) drivers are subject to the same parking charges in council car parks as drivers of internal combustion engine vehicles. They can avail of EV charge points located within the car park, at no extra cost, having paid for their allocated time to use the council car park.

At present, the Department does not charge EV drivers for parking their vehicle on-street in a parking place for electric vehicles. The impact of parking charges for EV drivers using council car park facilities are no different to other users of these car parks given that, at present, ESB does not charge e-car drivers for using their network of charge points in the North. There is no evidence to suggest that parking charges at e-carNI charge points has any impact on e-car vehicle users.

There are currently just under 3,000 EVs registered in the North and 337 public charge points. The number of EVs coming to the market is increasing year on year with significant increases in vehicle range. I fully recognise the importance of having a modern, reliable public electric vehicle charging infrastructure which provides confidence for users of ultra-low emission vehicles.

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline the overall cost to Translink of the new Milewater service centre.

Ms Mallon: The new Milewater Service Centre was built in advance of the introduction of the Glider service in September 2018. The total cost of the construction of the new facility was £26.6m.

Part funding of just less than £14m for the project was received from the European Regional Development Fund – Investment for Growth and Jobs Programme for Northern Ireland 2014-2020.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Infrastructure for an update of the review of renewable energy planning policy, announced by the Minister of the Environment on 16 June 2015.

Ms Mallon: The Department issued a 'Call for Evidence' in March 2016 and subsequently commissioned independent consultants to undertake research to inform the future direction of strategic planning policy for renewable energy development. I will be considering this issue in the coming weeks and will reflect on all relevant matters, including the consultant's report in considering the best way forward.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AQW 1600/17-22, (i) what the criteria is for Townscape Character; and (ii) what will happen to the kerbstones that have been lifted by contractors.
(AQW 2765/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Areas of Townscape Character (ATC's) are referred to in the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan - Plan Strategy & framework - Volume 1, Part 3, – Urban Environment and states that Regional planning policy in relation to our built heritage is contained in Planning Policy Statement (PPS) 6: Planning, Archaeology and the Built Heritage, and the Addendum to PPS 6:

(i) Areas of Townscape Character.

The addendum to PPS 6 - Areas of Townscape Character provides additional planning policies relating to ATC's for a) demolition of buildings, b) new development and c) the control of advertisements.

General issues to be taken into account when considering development within an ATC include: developments should be in harmony with, or complementary to, its neighbours having regard to the adjoining architectural styles. The use of materials generally matching those which are historically dominant in the area is important, as is the need for the development not to have a visually disruptive impact on the existing townscape.

(ii) Any re-useable granite kerbs are brought into the Department's storage yard for re-use, where required, on the public road network, primarily on main roads and in conservation areas.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for Infrastructure what discussions she has had with the Minister for Communities to ensure there are no impediments to the delivery of social housing.

Ms Mallon: Although the lead role on housing policy and consequently the provision of affordable housing (social and intermediate), rests with the Department for Communities (DfC), as Minister for Infrastructure I am committed to improving social housing provision by ensuring that my Department plays its part in supporting the delivery of social housing on the ground.

I have written to the Minister for Communities to arrange a meeting to discuss the need for more social and affordable homes to be built across the North and the essential infrastructure required to facilitate and enable this to happen. I believe there are very real opportunities for our departments to work together to deliver on this ambition.

Ms Kimmins asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline plans to implement a pedestrian crossing on Chapel Road, Meigh, for access to St. Joseph's Primary School.

Ms Mallon: A traffic survey for the purposes of considering the need for provision of a controlled pedestrian crossing on Chapel Road, Meigh, at St. Joseph's Primary School, was completed in June 2018.

When assessed against the current policies that I have inherited from previous Ministers, the analysis of need indicated that it fell well below the minimum criteria required to warrant further development for provision of a pedestrian crossing.

As my Department is unaware of any significant changes to alter this assessment, there are no immediate plans for a pedestrian crossing, but I have asked officials to keep this situation under review for any change in circumstances.

While I would like to do more in relation to improving safety within our communities, the severe budget constraints that I have inherited limit my capacity to do so. I have raised this issue with the Department of Finance and Executive colleagues, in advance of the new budget being set.

Mr Irwin asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline a timescale for the repair of the subsidence damage to Mullalelsh Road, Richhill.

Ms Mallon: I can confirm that my Department is currently working on the design of a suitable repair for the collapsed verge and road edge at this location.

A timeframe for the repair cannot be determined until this design work has been completed, but is likely to take several months, depending on whether land needs to be acquired and if technical approvals are necessary.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure how regular the new independent inspections will be for vehicle lifts at MOT centres.

Ms Mallon: The current disruption to the vehicle testing services at the Driver and Vehicle Agency's (DVA's) test centres is not acceptable and I have worked to minimise the disruption and to return to a safe and fully operational testing service as quickly as possible. This has included the immediate issuing of Temporary Exemption Certificates, extending the opening hours at DVA test centres and commissioning two independent reviews to provide me with expert advice on the next steps.

Based on expert engineering, audit, procurement and legal advice, on 27 February I announced that an order for 52 new lifts had been placed with an accelerated production programme. The new lifts will begin to be installed from April, with all lifts to be in place by July. Once the new lifts are installed, this will return the MOT centres to full capacity. I have asked my officials to prepare an implementation plan for the new lifts which will be installed on a phased basis from April and the plans for each centre will be confirmed as soon as possible.

The timing of the new independent inspections on all vehicle lifts is currently being considered in conjunction with Department of Finance's Construction and Procurement Delivery (CPD) and the contractor and they will be in place from 1 April 2020. These new arrangements will provide a robust assurance on the maintenance and condition of vehicle lifts to ensure this situation does not occur again. The safety of staff and customers remains my top priority.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure to detail the new inspection measures for vehicle lifts at MOT centres.

Ms Mallon: The current disruption to the vehicle testing services at the Driver and Vehicle Agency's (DVA's) test centres is not acceptable and I have worked to minimise the disruption and to return to a safe and fully operational testing service as quickly as possible. This has included the immediate issuing of Temporary Exemption Certificates, extending the opening hours at DVA test centres and commissioning two independent reviews to provide me with expert advice on the next steps.

I have asked my officials to prepare an implementation plan for the new lifts which will be installed on a phased basis from April and the plans for each centre will be confirmed as soon as possible.

The details of the new independent inspections on all vehicle lifts are currently being developed in conjunction with Department of Finance's Construction and Procurement Delivery (CPD) and the contractor and they will be in place from 1 April 2020. New measures will include the introduction of an improved equipment replacement cycle and a review of the contract management regime to be deployed by DVA with MAHA. Improvements will also be made to the maintenance and inspection regime and reporting by MAHA.

Additional regular independent robust inspections and assurances will be arranged by DVA, adding an additional layer of protection. These new steps are being put in place to ensure this type of incident does not occur again.

Ms Armstrong asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether (i) she intends to review the qualifying age for a Senior SmartPass; and (ii) she has any plans to restrict the times of the day that a SmartPass can be used.

Ms Mallon: I recognise the multiple benefits delivered by the Concessionary Fares Scheme and I am determined to preserve the travel discounts offered on public transport to the most vulnerable groups in society despite the severe constraints in my Department's budget.

I have met with the Smart Pass Equality Campaign to better understand how travel concessions can impact on vulnerable groups, however the Concessionary Fares Scheme, as with many areas across my Department, is already under significant pressure, reflecting the severe and challenging budget constraints under which my Department has operated over recent years. Therefore, in advance of taking decisions, I will be assessing the full range of pressures, reflecting on my priorities, the commitments in "New Decade: New Approach" and the budget made available for the period ahead.

I am continuing to engage with my Executive colleagues to ensure sustained levels of recurrent funding going forward to maintain high quality public transport including support for concessionary travel. This is essential to maintain the economic, social and environmental wellbeing of the region.

Ms Armstrong asked the Minister for Infrastructure to detail what plans she has to review the SmartPass system to enable people (i) with visual impairments; (ii) who are registered blind; and (iii) who are unable to drive to be able to access free travel.

Ms Mallon: People who are registered blind currently enjoy access to free travel on public transport through the Concessionary Fares Scheme.

I recognise the multiple benefits delivered by the Concessionary Fares Scheme and I am determined to preserve the travel discounts offered on public transport to the most vulnerable groups in society despite the severe constraints in my Department's budget.

I have met with the Smart Pass Equality Campaign to better understand the impact of half fare travel concessions, however the Concessionary Fares Scheme, as with many areas across my Department, is already under significant pressure, reflecting the severe and challenging budget constraints under which my Department has operated over recent years. Therefore, in advance of taking decisions, I will be assessing the full range of pressures, reflecting on my priorities, the commitments in "New Decade: New Approach" and the budget made available for the period ahead.

I have raised the need for additional investment in infrastructure with the Finance Minister and Executive colleagues, and as this is an Executive scheme I will be having discussions with Executive colleagues to address budgetary pressures in my budget.

Ms Armstrong asked the Minister for Infrastructure (i) when she will publish the report on the 20mph project outside rural schools; and (ii) whether the Schools (Part-Time 20mph Speed Limit) Order (Northern Ireland) 2018 will be extended to all schools.

Ms Mallon: As Minister responsible for promoting and improving road safety, I want to work actively with partners to reduce death and serious injuries on our roads. I believe that reducing the maximum speed at which traffic can travel on some of our roads, particularly those near schools, can help.

My Department is committed to introducing measures that reduce the speed of traffic on our roads. We are currently trialling an arrangement of signs that is intended to allow the introduction of more part-time 20mph speed limits at schools. I am expecting receipt of the findings of the trial in the next month or so, and plan to make them publicly available after I have given them due consideration.

Further changes to legislation will be considered in due course.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister for Infrastructure what her Department is doing to improve the bus service from Newry to Portadown.

Ms Mallon: My Department is currently developing proposals for a new Regional Strategic Transport Network Transport Plan which will help inform my priorities for future development of the main road and rail networks, including the potential for new bus services. I expect to consider draft proposals and options in the coming weeks.

While I am committed to addressing regional imbalance and better connecting communities across Northern Ireland through our public transport network, given the severe budget constraints under which my Department has operated over recent years many of our existing services are already under considerable pressure, including our existing public transport network. I, therefore, will be assessing the full range of pressures across my Department reflecting my priorities, the commitments in "New Decade: New Approach" and the budget made available for the period ahead before taking decisions on new or additional bus services on the public transport network

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister for Infrastructure, regarding 20mph residential areas, how many are (i) advisory; and (ii) mandatory.

Ms Mallon: As Minister responsible for promoting and improving road safety, I want to work actively with partners to reduce death and serious injuries on our roads. I believe that reducing the maximum speed traffic can travel at on some of our roads can help.

Most 20mph limits here are mandatory and there are 717 locations where a mandatory speed limit of 20mph has been applied, most of these are in residential areas. There are also 21 mandatory part-time 20mph speed limits at schools, most of which are on rural roads where the national speed limit applies. Current records would indicate there are 33 locations where an advisory 20mph speed limit is in place, which are mostly in the Greater Belfast area.

Mr Allen asked the Minister for Infrastructure to detail the number of compensation claims in respect of (i) faulty street lighting; and (ii) roads and footpaths in a state of disrepair, in each of the last five years.

Ms Mallon: The table below details the total number of public liability claims received in each of the last five full financial years, where personal injury or vehicle damage is alleged to have occurred as a result of street lighting issues/defects, and carriageway or footway issues/defects.

Alleged Cause	Year
	2014/2015	2015/ 2016	2016/ 2017	2017/ 2018	2018/ 2019
Street lighting issues/defects	18	17	12	6	7
Carriageway or footway issues/defects.	1,830	2,816	2,194	4,703	3,514

Mr Allen asked the Minister for Infrastructure, in relation to third party contractors with permits to work on footpaths and roads, how many have been deemed to be unsatisfactorily repaired, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 2860/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Utility companies, with statutory authority under their operating licences, and contractors, working on their behalf, do not require a permit from my Department to undertake installation or repair of their apparatus in roads or footpaths. However, they are required to provide notification of their intention to carry out works and to provide subsequent notifications of completed reinstatements.

The following table sets out details of numbers of works reinstatement notifications that have been recorded for utilities in each of the last five years, together with the number of reinstatements that failed to meet the required standard at inspection:

2016/17	56452	9785	670
2017/18	52258	9859	1062
2018/19	47166	9463	920
2019/20 (to end Feb)	47548	9169	991

My officials will follow-up each failed inspection to ensure the relevant utility company carries out any necessary repairs to the required standard.

Mr Allen asked the Minister for Infrastructure how many permits have been issued to third party contractors to work on footpaths and roads, in each of the last five years.

Ms Mallon: Utility companies with statutory authority under their operating licences and contractors working on their behalf do not require a permit from my Department to undertake installation or repair of their apparatus in roads or footpaths. They are however required to provide notification of their intention to carry out works and to provide subsequent notifications of completed reinstatements.

The following table sets out the numbers of works notifications that have been recorded for utilities in each of the last five years.

2015/16	46175
2016/17	56452
2017/18	52258
2019/20 (to end Feb)	47548

Ms Bunting asked the Minister for Infrastructure, given individuals have still not received their Temporary Exemption Certificate and their tax is now up for renewal, whether these certificates will be provided immediately.
(AQW 2868/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I have put in place arrangements to make sure that those vehicles whose MOT certificates have expired or will expire are granted an automatic Temporary Exemption Certificate (TEC) from the date of expiry. This will give a temporary exemption from the legal requirement to hold an MOT certificate up to the new date on the TEC and allows the vehicle to be taxed and used on the road.

The exemption will be automatically recorded in the DVA system and the paper copy of the certificate, with the new expiry date, will be sent to the registered keeper's address which could take up to 10 days. Customers can still drive their car before the TEC is received, as DVA records will be automatically updated to enable vehicle tax to be paid, if necessary. Customers can check the status of their vehicle on <https://www.gov.uk/check-mot-status>.

However, a TEC can only be granted for tests already booked by customers and cancelled by the DVA. It is therefore very important that people contact the DVA to book an MOT appointment when they receive a reminder letter in the first instance. It also remains the responsibility of the vehicle owner to make sure their car is in a roadworthy condition to be used on a public road.

Miss Woods asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline the current status of enforcement notice EN/2016/0048.

Ms Mallon: This notice is one of 7 in effect at the Mobuoy Road site. The time periods for compliance, with the remediation steps is 22 September 2021 and therein have not yet expired.

Miss Woods asked the Minister for Infrastructure how her Department has resolved the environmental concerns raised in Planning Appeals Commission reports (i) 2015/E0050; and (ii) 2015/E0052.
(AQW 2879/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My Department is aware of the concerns raised in the PAC reports as they relate to the implementation of remedial steps in the enforcement notice. A person responsible for complying with an enforcement notice is required to comply with applicable national laws, when implementing those steps and carrying out operations.

My Department has also been working closely with DAERA (NIEA) on the remediation strategy for the entire site.

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline what criteria is applied when a decision is made to allow a driver with 12 penalty points to continue to drive.

Ms Mallon: My Department has no role in determining the criteria which is applied when a decision is taken to allow a driver with 12 penalty points to continue to drive. Article 40 of the Road Traffic Offenders (Northern Ireland) Order 1996 provides that a court may determine upon conviction not to disqualify an offender if it is satisfied that there are mitigating circumstances. A court may consider grounds of exceptional hardship, in making its determination. Exceptional hardship is not defined in road traffic legislation, and is therefore a matter for the court.

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Infrastructure to detail the process for allowing an exemption from disqualification for a driver who has received 12 penalty points.

Ms Mallon: My Department has no role in the process for allowing an exemption from disqualification for a driver who has received 12 or more penalty points. Whether or not a driver can continue to drive following such a conviction is at the discretion of the judiciary, in accordance with the provisions of the Road Traffic Offenders (Northern Ireland) Order 1996.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Infrastructure for an update on the commitment in the Northern Ireland Road Safety Strategy to 2020 to develop a programme of part-time 20mph speed limits at rural schools.

Ms Mallon: As Minister responsible for promoting and improving road safety, I want to work actively with partners to reduce death and serious injuries on our roads. I believe that reducing the maximum speed traffic can travel at on some of our roads, particularly those near schools, can help.

My Department is committed to introducing measures that reduce the speed of traffic on our roads. We are currently trialling an arrangement of signs that is intended to allow the introduction of more part-time 20mph speed limits at schools. I am expecting receipt of the findings of the trial in the next month or so, and I fully intend to see what potential there is to build on the work already undertaken.

Miss Woods asked the Minister for Infrastructure (i) for her assessment of the UKCP18 climate projections noting sea levels in Belfast Lough in 2100 could rise by up to 94cms; and (ii) to outline the work of her Department in relation to sea defences and other measures to mitigate against rising sea levels in coastal areas.

Ms Mallon:

- (i) Allowances for climate change, in relation to flood risk in Northern Ireland, are currently based on research findings from the UK Climate Impacts Programme, known as UKCP09. My Department is currently assessing the latest UKCP18 projections, to determine the most appropriate allowances that should be made for future sea level rise and for river flooding. While UKCP18 projections indicate that sea levels in Belfast Lough could rise by up to 94cms by 2100, this value represents the upper end of the potential 'high emissions' scenario and a lesser extent of sea level rise may be more likely.
- (ii) My Department is currently responsible for the inspection and maintenance of approximately 26 kilometres of sea defences in Northern Ireland. In addition the Northern Ireland Flood Risk Assessment (NIFRA) 2018 identified Belfast, Derry and to a lesser extent, Newry and Larne as areas that will require further studies to be undertaken to determine if additional sea defences are necessary.

In relation to Belfast, a tidal flood alleviation scheme is currently being developed to provide a long term approach to tidal flood risk management for Belfast City Centre, from Belfast Lough to Stranmillis Weir. It is estimated that the scheme will provide flood protection for up to 1,500 properties, will extend to over 8.5km and is estimated to cost in the region of £18million.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure for her assessment of the draft Belfast Bicycle Network plan.

Ms Mallon: As an important part of my focus on improving the lives of people here, I want to increase the proportion of everyday journeys made by walking and cycling right across the North. I also want to see what I can do to remove the barriers for people who want to walk and cycle more as they go about their everyday lives.

My predecessor announced a public consultation on a draft Belfast Bicycle Network in January 2017. My Department has since done further work on developing an active travel feasibility study for north and west Belfast. Over coming weeks I want to consider carefully how the provision and enhancement of dedicated cycle routes can assist as part of my vision to enable infrastructure that provides safer, sustainable transport that connects communities and improves lives. Once the Budget process provides clarity on the resources available, I will be able to firm up my objectives for cycling.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure how many sites fall under the Review of Old Mineral Permissions and have not submitted updated conditions surrounding their compliance of environmental standards.

Ms Mallon: The legislative provisions for the review of old mineral permissions were brought forward in 2006 as an amendment to the then Planning (NI) Order 1991 and were subsequently included within the Planning Act (NI) 2011. The proposed introduction was delayed following the consideration of concerns expressed by the quarrying industry in relation to the potential economic impact on that sector and on the construction sector at a time of economic downturn. The issue of commencing these provisions remains under consideration and I can assure you that I am committed to protecting the environment.

The commencement of ROMPs notwithstanding, there is currently a range of enforcement powers available to councils in their role as local planning authorities to deal with any operator who operates beyond the scope of an existing planning permission. In addition, there are powers introduced under the Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act (NI) 2011 which councils can exercise to deal with a range of nuisance issues which could give rise to complaints relating to the operation of older permissions.

Mr Wells asked the Minister for Infrastructure how many vehicle owners have been prosecuted for having bull bars on their (i) cars; and (ii) vans, in each of the last five years.

Ms Mallon: There is no specific criminal offence concerning the fitment of bull bars on a vehicle. While an offence could potentially arise where bull bars expose sharp edges or are deemed insecure, and the vehicle may therefore be considered unroadworthy, there have been no such prosecutions initiated by the Department in the last five years.

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she will install warning signage in tourist areas alerting drivers to drive on the left lane, similar to those found in the Republic of Ireland.

Ms Mallon: As Minister responsible for promoting and improving road safety, I want to work actively with partners to reduce death and serious injuries on our roads. I believe that the careful and considered provision of traffic signs can help.

The PSNI has confirmed that driving on the wrong side of the road is thankfully fairly rare and I am therefore not sure whether the provision of such traffic signing is warranted. It is also questionable whether such signing, while extremely well intentioned, would actually be effective in preventing such occurrences.

My Department is, however, mindful of the needs of visitors. We have provided advice through NI Direct for visitors driving in Northern Ireland, including the requirement to drive on the left. While there are no current plans to provide warning signing in tourist areas, my Department will keep the issue under consideration.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline the current legal status of the use of e-scooters.

Ms Mallon: You will be aware of my recent announcement to bring forward, as soon as possible, the necessary legislation which will remove Electrically Assisted Pedal Cycles (EAPCs) from legislative scope. In relation to electric scooters, it is illegal to use these vehicles on public roads in Northern Ireland, and at present they have not been licensed in any part of Great Britain for use on public roads. I have no plans to change this.

I am, however, aware of the ongoing debate in many countries, in particular about the significant increase in the use of electric scooters, mainly in large towns and cities. It is important to consider the potential environmental and health benefits that these type of vehicles can deliver. I am also very mindful of the safety implications their use may have for both the rider and the wider public, given there has been a number of fatalities and serious injuries occur of both riders and members of the public. I understand that in GB the Department for Transport, as part of a wider transport review, is considering consulting on the use of electric scooters on public roads.

I have asked my officials to keep a watching brief on any developments.

Mr Middleton asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline the amount of compensation paid by her Department as a result of damage to vehicles by potholes, in the last three years, broken down by constituency.

Ms Mallon: My Department does not record claims according to constituency areas but instead records claims by Section Office area, which broadly align with Council areas.

The NICS accounting system does not differentiate between the causes of incidents which result in vehicle damage claims. Therefore, the following table provides details of the total compensation amount paid for all Vehicle Damage claims, regardless of defect type, that have been settled since 1st April 2016, up to and including 31st March 2019.

Please note that claims received in a financial year are not always concluded in the same financial year. Therefore the figures will include compensation paid for claims received in prior financial years:

Mr Muir asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline any plans for a wider roll out of eCar charging points.

Ms Mallon: There are currently 320 22kWh (Fast) charge points at 160 locations and a further 17 50kWh DC rapid charge point in the North. The e-car public charge point network is owned, operated and maintained by the Electricity Supply Board (ESB) and the market is also open to other commercial operators who would wish to provide charging infrastructure. Over the next few months, the Utility Regulator will be publishing its findings from the recent consultation on the Maximum Resale Price (MRP) of Electricity as it applies to electric vehicles. This should give clarity for operators wishing to provide commercial services in the North. I look forward to the outcome of the consultation exercise and, ultimately, to a solution that will strengthen network provision and contribute to the Northern Ireland Executive's commitment to reducing carbon emissions.

I am committed to seeing this infrastructure increased as part of my Department's climate change action and I have met with the DAERA Minister to begin working collaboratively to promote the use of electric vehicles and specifically to improve the charge point network across the North. I fully recognise the importance of having modern, reliable public electric vehicle charging infrastructure in providing confidence for users of ultra-low emission vehicles and in respect of the connectivity improvements this would bring. My Department closely monitors funding opportunities for the installation of additional infrastructure and is liaising with commercial providers and the Office for Low Emission Vehicles (OLEV) to ensure the charging infrastructure continues to remain fit for purpose, commensurate with growth.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Infrastructure how many potholes have been reported, broken down by constituency, over the last three years.

Ms Mallon: My Department does not maintain records by constituency. However, the following table provides details of the number of carriageway, hard shoulder and layby surface defects (which includes potholes, cracking, depressions etc.) recorded and listed for repair, in each of the last three years (1st January 2017 to 31st December 2019), by council area:

Surface Defects Recorded for Repair

Councils	2017	2018	2019
Antrim and Newtownabbey	3211	7113	4973
Ards and North Down	2014	3631	4116

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline the measures in place to notify customers of how to receive an MOT vehicle exemption.

Ms Mallon: I have put in place arrangements to make sure that, where possible, those vehicles whose MOT certificates have expired or will expire soon, are granted an automatic Temporary Exemption Certificate (TEC). I have also ensured that measures are in place to communicate this clearly and effectively to customers.

These measures include a dedicated page on the NIDirect website (www.nidirect.gov.uk/articles/ongoing-issues-mot-centres), as the primary source where the public can access information about the ongoing situation with vehicle testing, including specifically on the temporary exemptions. The measures also include the regular use of the departmental and NIDirect social media channels to issue updates and signpost customers to the relevant information, and a call handling system put in place to address customer queries regarding vehicle testing. I and the Chief Executive of DVA have also given a number of media interviews and have issued a number of statements outlining the process. I remain committed to updating the public regularly to ensure that disruption to customers is minimised and information is widely and readily available.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Infrastructure, in relation to her statement on 27 February, whether she will contemplate action against the contractors who supplied and maintained the vehicle lifts over the past number of years.

Ms Mallon: I have taken QC legal advice which confirmed that legal proceedings against the contractor who supplied and maintained the vehicle lifts could be protracted, costly and would not guarantee a resolution for the public. Independent advice from Construction & Procurement Delivery (CPD) in the Department of Finance confirmed that the quickest way to install new lifts was to use the existing contract. To use another supplier would significantly delay the installation of new lifts. I have placed an order for 52 lifts through an accelerated production programme, which will ensure new lifts will be installed from late April, with all lifts to be in place by July. A revised maintenance and inspection contract will be put in place from 1 April 2020 which will provide the necessary arrangements to ensure this type of incident does not occur again.

Mr Middleton asked the Minister for Infrastructure how much funding has been provided by her Department towards road safety campaigns, in each of the last five years.

Ms Mallon: The road safety campaign spend for the last five financial years is as follows:

Year	Spend
2019/2020	£988k

Mr Stalford asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline the criteria used by her Department for selecting Belfast City Council representatives to serve on the board of Belfast Harbour Commissioners.

(AQW 3112/17-22)

Ms Mallon: The 2002 Harbour Orders sets out provision for a number of persons appointed to the Board of the three Ports to be members of the respective Council. For Belfast Harbour Commissioners (BHC) this allows up to four Councillors to be appointed.

For this recent appointment process, Belfast City Council nominated seven Councillors. All nominees were asked to complete a short application before being interviewed. The Independent Selection Panel explored with each nominee their understanding and any experience of corporate governance and the responsibilities of being a member of a Board, probity and conflicts of interest and the time commitment involved in the appointment.

The Independent Selection Panel assessed applicants on the basis of this criteria. On conclusion of the interview process I was provided with an alphabetical list of applicant summaries and invited to make my selection.

I selected four Belfast City Councillors for appointment based on the Independent Panel's assessment.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline, if a car dealer buys into stock a vehicle for which the previous keeper has been issued with a Temporary Exemption Certificate (TEC), whether (i) the TEC carries over to the new keeper; or (ii) they need to get a new MOT certificate before selling the vehicle.

Ms Mallon: The Motor Vehicle Testing Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2003 provide for the issuing of a Temporary Exemption Certificate (TEC). These certificates relate specifically to the motor vehicle and may be passed to the new owner or registered keeper. Therefore car dealerships may legitimately sell a vehicle with a valid TEC.

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Infrastructure for a breakdown of her Department's staffing structure by (i) division; and (ii) roles, including the number employed in (a) management; and (b) manual roles.

Ms Mallon: Staff within the Department for Infrastructure are structured under three Groups: Transport and Resources; Planning, Water and the Driver & Vehicle Agency; and Roads and Rivers. As of the 3 February 2020, the full time equivalent (FTE) staffing for these Groups was 302.3, 832.7 and 1738.1 respectively. For the purposes of this question, staff in 'management roles' are defined as permanent staff at grades analogous to Executive Officer II and above and staff in 'manual roles' are defined as permanent staff working in industrial grades. These two classifications do not cover all staff. At this date, 1425.4 FTE were in management roles and 561.9 FTE were in manual roles. All of the Department's industrial staff are within the Roads and Rivers Group.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AQW 2245/17-22, how much was spent on repairing potholes, for each year from 2016-17.

Ms Mallon: The table below provides details of the expenditure incurred by my Department on repairing carriageway surface defects (which includes potholes, cracking, depressions etc.), for each year from 2016-17:

Year	Carriageway Patching £m
1 Apr 2016 – 31 Mar 2017	11.2
1 Apr 2017 – 31 Mar 2018	11.2
1 Apr 2019 – 31 Mar 2020 (forecast)	14.8

Mr Buckley asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether the recommendations have been followed from the publication of the Alan Strong Report into the Review of Winter Flooding in 2015/16.

Ms Mallon: As a result of the exceptionally heavy rainfall that occurred during the 2015-16 winter period a number of areas were significantly impacted by flooding. In addition to a number of properties that were impacted, some agricultural land and roads adjacent to Lough Erne and Lough Neagh where flooded for a prolonged period of time. An independent review was carried out by Professor Alan Strong and was published in December 2016. The report made 10 headline recommendations which covered a number of areas that would help to further improve Government and society's ability to manage and respond to flooding.

Recommendations included a review of the management of water levels in Lough Neagh, which concluded that any alternative operation of flood gates other than the procedure carried out by the Department would not have reduced water levels on Lough Neagh significantly. The review also recommended the further development of community resilience approaches that have been developed by the Department and the benefits of natural flood risk management techniques. Improvements in communications, education and emergency planning were also identified. All recommendations have now been addressed and many positive benefits have already been realised as a result, in the management of flood risk.

Mr Buckley asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline (i) the current operational condition of the sluice gates into the River Bann at Toome; (ii) the length of time they have been out of operation due to breakdowns in the past four years; and (iii) details of broken flood control gates on Lough Neagh.

Ms Mallon: All five of the sluice gates that control the outlet of Lough Neagh to the Lower Bann river at Toome have been fully functional since February 2019. During the past four years, all the gates have been fully functional except for a period from October 2017 to January 2019 when one of the gates was damaged, and again in February 2019 when one gate was closed for a week, due to minor damage.

The loss of ability to operate a gate due to mechanical failure, or during routine maintenance when individual gates are being serviced, has had no overall impact on my Department's ability to control the water level of the Lough during the past four years. During periods when water levels on the Lough are high, in addition to water discharging through the sluice gates, flows can spill over fixed concrete weirs at either site of the sluice gates.

Department of Justice

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice to outline (i) what aftercare and support is provided to those leaving her Department and the Northern Ireland Prison Service, who are suffering from Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder; and (ii) how many people are currently receiving such aftercare support.

(AQW 2561/17-22)

Mrs Long (The Minister of Justice): Medical conditions that may cause of a member of staff to leave the Department, including the Prison Service, are confidential. However any former member of staff who leaves early on medical retirement is signposted to three areas:

- Welfare Services.
- Inspire Counselling Services up until their last day of service.
- The Charity for Civil Servants.

In addition, the Prison Service Central Benevolent Fund and the Prison Service Trust provide additional support services for their members.

Neither the Department or the Prison Service hold information, other than employment history information on former members of staff.

I greatly value the contribution made by prison officers - past and present – and believe it is important that there is equivalence with police colleagues in terms of support, especially with regards to issues such as Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder. Therefore I have commissioned an urgent review into support services available to former prison officers which will report to me by the end of June. The review will examine the current provision of services available to former prison officers. It will identify if additional service provision would be appropriate and, if so, propose a costed approach for delivery.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice, in regard to her appointment of a special adviser, (i) whether she independently chose her special adviser or an allocation was made by her party; (ii) how it was made known, and to whom, that she was seeking to appoint a special adviser; (iii) whether a pool of candidates was considered; (iv) if so, how many were within the pool; (v) how any pool of candidates was assembled; (vi) what were the essential and desirable criteria set for the job; (vii) by what process was the choice made; (viii) what notes and records were made and kept of the process; (ix) how fair employment obligations were met; (x) on what date(s) was the job offered and accepted; (xi) what was the contractual start date; and (xii) was the range of available salary discussed with the appointee, or was the job offered and accepted without knowledge of the likely salary.

Mrs Long: The appointment of my special adviser followed the requirements set out in the Code for the Appointment of Special Advisers agreed by the Executive and published by the Department of Finance on 20 January.

The responsibility for choosing a Special Advisor lies solely with me as Minister. The appointment was made independently by me. In choosing a Special Adviser, I considered the range of skills and experience which I deemed necessary for the role and appointed Claire Johnson, who fulfilled those requirements, on 19 February 2020. I had no role in setting the salary, did not make any representations in that regard nor have I been formally notified of her salary.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice what action her Department has taken to address antisocial behaviour in city centres.

Mrs Long: My Department recognises the negative impact which anti-social behaviour (ASB) can have on our communities and the importance of partnership working to deliver swift and co-ordinated responses by the relevant agencies.

Therefore, addressing ASB is a strategic priority for Policing and Community Safety Partnerships (PCSPs) who have a pivotal role in developing partnership working at a local level, and in supporting communities in developing solutions to issues of local concern, such as city centre ASB.

PCSPs support a number of initiatives in Armagh, Belfast, Derry~Londonderry, Lisburn and Newry city centres aimed at addressing ASB and promoting wider safety issues. They include provision of Safer Neighbourhood Officers or Community Safety Wardens services which act as a deterrent to ASB, support night-time economy patrons and assist retail security and police in prevention / detection of crime. Derry and Strabane PCSP also manage the CCTV cameras contract for Derry city centre which is funded by Council, PSNI and The Executive Office.

Lisburn PCSP have also established a pilot scheme with Exodus, based in Lisburn City Centre, to provide a safe environment to 13 – 16 year olds after school on Fridays and on Saturday evenings.

These core activities sit alongside the wider activities undertaken by PCSPs to address ASB which is of concern in their local area and complement the work which is being taken forward by a range of local partners such as councils, the Police Service of Northern Ireland, homeless support / drug outreach groups and businesses to make the city centres a safer and more welcoming environment.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice (i) whether the report by Dr Jacqui Bates-Gaston into the Prison Officers Association (POA) work-related stress and well-being survey has been made available through the Assembly Library; and (ii) if not, when will it be made available.

Mrs Long: As this report was not accepted by Prison Service Management Board it was not made available through the Assembly Library. I have no plans to place the report in the Assembly Library at this time.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice to outline (i) whether the Northern Ireland Prison Service has received the report by Dr Jacqui Bates-Gaston into the Prison Officers Association (POA) work-related stress and well-being survey; (ii) what date the report was received; (iii) their response to the report; and (iv) her assessment on the report.

Mrs Long: This Report was received by the Prison Service Management Board on 31 October 2013 and following discussion the report was not accepted by the Board.

My assessment is that the work undertaken by the Northern Ireland Prison Service in developing and implementing the Prisons 2020 programme is addressing the recommendations contained in this Report.

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister of Justice what support is provided to individuals serving custodial sentences who are suffering from gambling addiction.

(AQW 2818/17-22)

Mrs Long: The Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) has engaged with Gamblers Anonymous to provide support to people in their care who have indicated that gambling is an area of concern. This service has been provided on a voluntary basis by Gamblers Anonymous in Maghaberry Prison. At present, due to a change in personnel at Gamblers Anonymous, no volunteers are currently available to deliver the service. However, Gamblers Anonymous have recently appointed new volunteers and these individuals are currently going through security clearance to work within a prison establishment. We expect that support for those within our care will recommence once clearance has been achieved.

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister of Justice what support is provided to individuals suffering gambling addiction who have served custodial sentences and are being supervised by probation.

Mrs Long: Decisions relating to the support provided to individuals suffering gambling addiction who have served custodial sentences and are being supervised by probation is an operational matter for the Probation Board for Northern Ireland (PBNI). I am committed to respecting the operational independence of the PBNI.

You may, therefore, wish to direct your question to the PBNI.

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister of Justice (i) whether her Department has conducted any assessment of the connection between gambling addiction and criminal activity; and (ii) if not, whether she would be willing to commission research in to this.

(AQW 2820/17-22)

Mrs Long: My Department has not, to date, conducted any assessment of the connection between gambling addiction and criminal activity.

The Northern Ireland Prison Service complete a Prisoner Needs Profile interview with individuals following their committal into custody. As part of this interview, individuals are currently asked if they have addictions they are concerned about.

Over the last five years, between 4% and 5% of respondents have stated they are concerned about a gambling addiction.

Following a recent review of the Prisoner Needs Profile, additional questions relating specifically to gambling addiction, including how often the respondent gambles and if they feel gambling contributed to their offending, will be added to the interview from mid-2020.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Justice to outline the attrition rate for individuals making formal allegations of serious sexual assault in each of the last five years.

Mrs Long: From information available, it is not possible to directly answer the question asked. There is no specific definition of what constitutes a 'serious' sexual offence. Therefore, the information provided is in relation to all sexual offences. Additionally, figures across different Criminal Justice Organisations are recorded on differing bases, some at incident level, and some at file or case level, appropriate to the needs of their particular business functions. However, figures compiled by the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI), the Public Prosecution Service (PPS) and by the Department of Justice, in relation to prosecutions and convictions at courts, may give some indication of outcomes in relation to sexual offence cases at individual stages of the criminal justice process.

Recorded Crime figures published by the Police Service of Northern Ireland show the following numbers of sexual offences for the period 2014/15 to 2018/19.

Sexual offences recorded by police, 2014/15 – 2018/19

2015/16	3,030

Similarly, outcomes for sexual offences recorded by the PSNI during the period 2015/16 – 2018/19 have been provided in the following table.

Outcomes (%) that have since been assigned to sexual offences recorded 2015/16 to 2018/19 by outcome group

Outcome (%)	2015/16	2016/17	2017/18	2018/19
Charged / summonsed	13.1	11.9	10.8	8.9
Taken into consideration (TICs)	-	-	-	-
Out-of-court (formal)	0.6	0.7	0.5	0.4
Out-of-court (informal)	0.2	0.3	0.2	0.1
Prosecution prevented or not in the public interest	3.9	4.5	2.8	1.5
Evidential difficulties (suspect identified; victim supports action)	20.1	19.7	20.1	16.9
Evidential difficulties (victim does not support action)	37.7	34.9	35.2	29.8
Investigation complete - no suspect identified	14.9	14.7	12.2	13.3
Action undertaken by another body / agency	5.1	6.9	5.0	5.2
Offences not yet assigned an outcome	4.3	6.3	13.3	23.9

Notes:

- 1 Outcomes show the action taken in relation to each crime recorded. This is regardless of the number of suspects identified in relation to each crime. Therefore the figures cannot be used to comment on suspects or offenders.
- 2 Figures relate to all recorded sexual offences reported to police during the period specified.
- 3 Equivalent figures for 2014/15 are not available.
- 4 While every crime should eventually be assigned an outcome, this may take some time due to ongoing investigations. Therefore, these figures are subject to revision, as investigations are completed and as outcomes continue to be assigned. This is particularly applicable to the most recent period, 2018/19, and to sexual offences, as they show the highest proportion of crimes for which an outcome has yet to be assigned (ie still under investigation).

Figures published by PPS, in relation to prosecutorial decisions for cases involving sexual offences have been provided in the following table.

Prosecutorial Decisions Issued by Decision Type for cases involving sexual offences, 2015/16 - 2018/19

2015/16	375	772	31.2
2017/18	327	1,152	21.3
2018/19	412	1,249	23.9

Note:

- 1 Equivalent figures for 2014/15 are not available.

The Department holds information on prosecutions and convictions at courts as part of its datasets and therefore has provided information on cases dealt with at courts, where there was a prosecution or conviction for a sexual offence. The most recent year for which information is available is 2018.

Prosecutions and convictions for cases involving sexual offences at all courts, 2014 - 2018

2014	362	192	53.0
2016	317	185	58.4
2018	356	194	54.5

Notes:

- 1 Figures relate to initial disposal at court. Results of appeals are not included.
- 2 Figures relate to cases dealt with at court which included at least one sexual offence.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Justice to confirm how many custodial prisoners were granted temporary leave to attend family funerals or other events, in each of the past five years, and to specify the legislation governing this process.
(AQW 2856/17-22)

Mrs Long: Temporary release from Northern Ireland Prison Service is governed by Rule 27 of the Prisons and Young Offenders Centre Rules (Northern Ireland) 1995. The table below details the number of prisoners who have been released under this rule in each of the last 5 years:

Year	Total
2018	516

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice how many front line Prison Officers attended the Department of Justice wellbeing week on each of the days it ran.
(AQW 2903/17-22)

Mrs Long: The Department of Justice Wellbeing week took place from 24th - 28th February 2020 and was open to staff across DOJ, including its agencies. In total 384 staff registered to attend the events however they were not required to indicate which business area they worked in and therefore it is not possible to say how many front line Prison Officers attended the events.

In addition to DOJ initiatives, NIPS launched their own bespoke employee wellbeing programme, Prisons WELL, in March 2019. To date over 20 events and initiatives have been provided for NIPS staff as part of the programme and a series of events to mark the one year anniversary will take place throughout March 2020.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice whether physiological injuries suffered by prison officers, which result in absence, are viewed differently from physical injuries which result in absence; and (i) would she expect those returning to work following a diagnosis of post-traumatic stress disorder to receive a written warning due to absence.

Mrs Long: Prison Officers are civil servants, therefore sickness absence in the Northern Ireland Prison Service is managed in line with the NICS Sickness Absence Policy. That policy requires every case to be considered on its own merit.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to detail progress on a parental alienation policy for Northern Ireland in relation to family court proceedings.

Mrs Long: Where alienation is suspected in family proceedings, it is for social workers to advise the court which will consider evidence of alienation alongside all other evidence when deciding what is in the best interests of the paramount consideration of the welfare of the child. I understand the Department of Health proposes to build on existing practice and will consider guidelines for social services on parental alienation as part of the new cross-departmental Family and Parenting Support Strategy. The Strategy will also provide us with an opportunity to collectively consider how to better support relations between parents and parents and children more generally. Key to that work will be early intervention and my Department is already working with the Department of Health to consider actions which might be introduced to reduce acrimony and negative behaviours to improve outcomes for families and children.

I also expect the Domestic Abuse Bill I will shortly bring forward will assist where alienation is evident. The Bill will make behaviour that is coercive or controlling or which amounts to psychological or emotional abuse a criminal offence. Abusive behaviour can be indirect and where the victim is under 18, a child sees, hears or is present during an incident of abusive behaviour or is used to abuse a victim, the Bill will provide for the offences to be treated as aggravated and increased sentencing may apply.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to outline the number of medical retirements in the Prison Service in each year since 2016.

Mrs Long: The table below sets out the number of medical retirements since 2016.

Year	Number

Year	Number
2019	33

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of days lost due to sick absence; (i) in each year since 2016; and (ii) in each Prison Service establishment.

(AQW 2954/17-22)

Mrs Long: The Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency publishes sickness absence statistics for the Northern Ireland Civil Service. These are available at:

<https://www.nisra.gov.uk/statistics/ni-civil-service-human-resource-statistics/sickness-absence-statistics>

These figures are held at an overall level and are not broken down by business area. Any further statistical breakdown would have to be provided by NISRA through the Department of Finance.

Year	Average Working Days Lost due to sickness absence
2018/19	19.3

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice what method exists in the Prison Service for reporting absence due to ill health as a result of post-traumatic stress disorder.

(AQW 2976/17-22)

Mrs Long: Prison Officers are civil servants, therefore sickness absence is managed in line with the NICS Sickness Absence policy.

If staff are unable through illness to attend work they must speak to their line manager, or a more senior officer, as early as possible on the first day of absence stating the nature of their illness. For periods of sickness absence lasting 7 calendar days or less, staff must complete a self-certification form with the reason for absence. Once the sickness absence exceeds 7 calendar days, staff must produce medical evidence in the form of a Statement of Fitness for Work completed by a registered medical practitioner.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice (i) how many domestic violence reports were made in 2019; (ii) how many of those reported resulted in a criminal conviction; and (iii) how many of those convictions resulted in a prison sentence.

Mrs Long: Latest figures published by the Police Service of Northern Ireland record that there were 31,705 domestic abuse incidents reported to the police in 2019. Of these, there were 15,110 incidents where one or more crimes were recorded. Equivalent figures for 2018 record there were 31,306 domestic abuse incidents reported to the police in that year. Of these, there were 13,796 incidents where one or more crimes were recorded.

Outcomes for offences with a domestic abuse motivation, recorded by the PSNI during the period 2017/18 – 2018/19 have been provided in the following table

Outcomes that have since been assigned to crimes with a domestic abuse motivation recorded in 2017/18 to 2018/19

Outcome group	Percentages
	2017/18	2018/19
Charge/summons	24.5	23.6
Taken into consideration	0.0	0.0
Out-of-court (formal)	2.0	1.6
Out-of-court (informal)	1.6	1.3
Prosecution prevented or not in the public interest	1.4	0.5
Evidential difficulties (suspect identified; victim supports action)	16.1	18.2
Evidential difficulties (victim does not support action)	44.4	41.1

Outcome group	Percentages
	2017/18	2018/19
Investigation complete - no suspect identified	1.4	1.5
Action undertaken by another body/agency	2.6	2.9
Total offences that have since been assigned an outcome	94.0	90.7
Offences not yet assigned an outcome	6.0	9.3
Total offences %	100.0	100.0

Notes:

- 1 Outcomes show the action taken in relation to each crime recorded. This is regardless of the number of suspects identified in relation to each crime. Therefore the figures cannot be used to comment on suspects or offenders.
- 2 While every crime should eventually be assigned an outcome, this may take some time due to ongoing investigations. Therefore, these figures are subject to revision, as investigations are completed and as outcomes continue to be assigned. This is particularly applicable to the most recent period, 2018/19, as they show the highest proportion of crimes for which an outcome has yet to be assigned (ie still under investigation).

From information held by the Department, it is not possible to say how many of the crimes recorded by police resulted in a criminal conviction. However, for cases dealt with at courts in 2018, the most recent year for which information is available, 1,778 cases where there was a domestic violence motivational factor, as recorded by either the PSNI or the Public Prosecution Service, resulted in a conviction. Of those, a custodial sentence was handed down in 368 cases.

Mr Middleton asked the Minister of Justice to outline what support her Department is providing to victims of domestic abuse within the Foyle constituency.

Mrs Long: I can advise that the support services provided to victims of domestic violence and abuse by my Department are available to all across Northern Ireland, including those in the Foyle region. The support services that my Department funds, or part funds, include the provision of a 24 hour domestic and sexual abuse telephone helpline and funding towards the Multi Agency Risk Assessment Conference (MARAC) process. My Department also provides funding to Victim Support NI for the provision of services for three core areas, that is emotional and practical support; witness support services at court; and assisting with criminal injuries compensation applications. NPSCC are also funded to provide a witness support services for young people. Services from both organisations are available regardless of the crime type.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice what are the proposed financial limits of an unexplained wealth order.

Mrs Long: One of the requirements for the making of an unexplained wealth order in respect of any 'property' is that the value of the property in question is greater than £50,000. There is no upper limit. The qualifying threshold was reduced to £50,000 during the passage of the Criminal Finances Bill in the House of Lords. At the point of introduction of the Bill the qualifying threshold was originally £100,000.

Property is defined under the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 as all property wherever situated and includes money; all forms of property, real or personal, heritable or moveable; things in action and other intangible or incorporeal property.

Where an unexplained wealth order is made in respect of property comprising more than one item of property, the respondent's interest in the property is calculated to be the total value of those items.

Mr Lynch asked the Minister of Justice to provide an update on the custody suite at Enniskillen Police Station.

(AQW 3069/17-22)

Mrs Long: Decisions relating to the custody suite at Enniskillen Police Station are an operational matter for the Chief Constable, who is accountable to the Northern Ireland Policing Board. I am committed to respecting the operational independence of the Chief Constable and the role of the Northern Ireland Policing Board. You may, therefore, wish to direct your question to the PSNI.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Justice to confirm whether she will introduce stalking legislation in Northern Ireland and, if so, indicate a timeline.

Mrs Long: I can confirm that I will be introducing stalking legislation in Northern Ireland.

This is a priority for me as Justice Minister. My Department is currently developing a draft Stalking Bill that will create a specific offence of stalking and provision for the introduction of Stalking Protection Orders in Northern Ireland. I intend to introduce this Bill to the Assembly in the autumn.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Justice to outline an indicative timeline for the introduction of the Domestic Homicide Review (DHR) model in Northern Ireland.

Mrs Long: I intend to bring forward a Commencement Order, under Section 9 of the Domestic Violence, Crimes and Victims Act 2004, to introduce Domestic Homicide Reviews locally by the autumn. A recruitment exercise to identify suitable individuals to Chair the Domestic Homicide Reviews will be finalised in the coming weeks. Once appointed we will ensure that the Chairs, alongside a multi-agency panel, have access to a period of appropriate training before commencing reviews.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 714/17-22, what remedial action will the Department take to assist victims of trafficking in obtaining compensation.

Mrs Long: The Department of Justice contracted support providers will signpost potential adult victims of human trafficking to Compensation Services. Information leaflets are available in different languages to assist applicants in making a claim for compensation. I can also advise that additional training and awareness is planned to be delivered to Compensation Services' decision-makers as part of the Department's strategic training for statutory partners on modern slavery and human trafficking.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Justice, since January 2017, (i) how many cases have been prosecuted in which human trafficking was an original element, but was later dropped or amended; and (ii) in each instance, state the nature of the accompanying or other offences which were successfully prosecuted.

Mrs Long: The information requested is outlined below. The most recent year for which finalised information is available is 2018.

During the period 2017 – 2018, there were 7 cases dealt with at courts where there was a prosecution, but a not guilty finding, for any human trafficking offences. A conviction was secured for other offences in 2 of these cases, for controlling prostitution for gain offences.

Notes:

- 1 Figures relate to initial disposals at court. Appeals are not included.
- 2 Human trafficking offences considered include offences prosecuted under the Human Trafficking and Exploitation (Criminal Justice and Support for Victims) Act (Northern Ireland) 2015 and other offences where the offence description related to human trafficking.
- 3 Figures for convictions relate to cases in which there was no conviction for a human trafficking offence.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of convictions since the introduction of the Human Trafficking and Exploitation (Criminal Justice and Support for Victims) Act (Northern Ireland) 2015.

Mrs Long: In the period to the end of 2018, the most recent year for which finalised information is available, there were three convictions at courts for offences under the Human Trafficking and Exploitation (Criminal Justice and Support for Victims) Act (Northern Ireland) 2015. All occurred in 2018.

Notes:

- 1 Figures relate to initial disposals at court. Appeals are not included.
- 2 The figure provided relates to cases where there was a conviction for at least one of the offences specified.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of attacks carried out on prison officers inside Northern Ireland prisons in each of the last three years.

Mrs Long: There have been a total of 166 assaults on prison staff by prisoners in the last three years. In 2017 there were 66 assaults, in 2018 there were 58 assaults and in 2019 there were 42 assaults.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice how many people have been (i) prosecuted; and (ii) convicted for animal cruelty in the last two years.

Mrs Long: The information requested is outlined below. The most recent year for which finalised information is available is 2018.

Prosecutions and Convictions at courts for animal cruelty offences, 2017 – 2018

Year	Prosecutions	Convictions
2017	76	51
2018	97	68

Notes:

- 1 Figures relate to cases prosecuted by PPS on behalf of PSNI or other bodies.
- 2 Figures relate to initial disposal at court only. Results of appeals are not included.
- 3 Figures relate to cases with a prosecution or conviction for at least one animal cruelty related offence.
- 4 Animal cruelty offences included are relevant offences under Welfare of animals Act 1972, Wildlife Act 1985, Welfare of Animals (Transport) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2006, Wildlife and Natural Environment Act (NI) 2011, Welfare of Animals Act 2011, Welfare of Livestock Regulations (NI) 1995, Welfare of Farmed Animals Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012, Welfare of Farmed Animals Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2000 and Welfare of Animals (Slaughter or Killing) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1996.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice what has been the change in the cost to the public purse of a prisoner place in the last five years.

Mrs Long: The average annual cost for each prisoner place for the last five years is set out in the table below.

Financial Year	£
2015/16	57,643
2016/17	53,408
2017/18	52,814

It is anticipated that the cost per prisoner place in Northern Ireland in 2019/20 will be £44,112.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Justice whether she will review the Access NI application process to investigate whether it would be possible to allow a single application and certificate to demonstrate an individual's suitability for multiple roles, rather than requiring several separate applications for each organisation that the individual is involved in.

Mrs Long: Addressing the issue of regular / repeat disclosure checks is something that AccessNI has been considering for some time. An effective NI standalone technical solution is complex to develop, and likely to be expensive. This could impact on the AccessNI charges to the public as they are based on a costs recovery model. AccessNI is currently exploring other options to deliver greater 'portability' for disclosure checks – this includes discussions with the Disclosure & Barring Service (DBS) in England and Wales to join with their Update Service, however a viable technical solution is likely to be some way off.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to outline the implementation period of the recommendations made by Jackie Bates-Gaston regarding prison officer welfare.

Mrs Long: The Report completed by Jackie Bates-Gaston was received by the Prison Service Management Board on 31 October 2013 and, following discussion, it was not accepted by the Board.

My assessment is that the work undertaken by the Northern Ireland Prison Service in developing and implementing the Prisons 2020 programme is addressing the recommendations contained in the Report.

Department for the Economy

Mr Allister asked the Minister for the Economy whether her first day brief included explanation of the circumstances whereby 788 biomass boilers were admitted into the DETI non-domestic Renewable Heat Incentive (RHI) Scheme during 2015, when the Department did not have the required financial authority to do so.

Mrs Dodds (The Minister for the Economy): The circumstances relating to the admission of these 788 installations were not specifically addressed in the first day brief.

Ms C Kelly asked the Minister for the Economy to detail (i) what plans her Department has to review the use of non-disclosure agreements in higher education institutions; (ii) the cost of non-disclosure agreements for the past 5 years; (iii) the number of students subject to these arrangements; and (iv) the prevalence of these arrangements relating to issues such as sexual harassment, misconduct or alleged sexual crime.

Mrs Dodds: Universities are institutionally autonomous. This means my Department does not have access to, or hold, any information on the use, or cost, of settlements containing non-disclosure agreements for review. The Universities generally utilise Non-Disclosure Agreements (NDAs) to ensure confidentiality between parties and the costs associated with them relates mainly to severance packages. This is designed to prevent employees from sharing commercial or sensitive technical information if they changed roles, notably in research, which is legitimate in areas such as protecting intellectual property. I have sought and received assurances from the Universities that NDAs are not used in relation to students, or for issues such as sexual harassment, misconduct or alleged sexual crime. It should be noted that signing any agreement including a non-disclosure clause does not prevent staff or students from reporting criminal acts to the police or regulatory bodies, or from making a public interest disclosure (whistle-blowing). My Department will review legislative changes currently being considered in England in the wider context of employment rights and I will announce any plans in due course.

Mr O'Dowd asked the Minister for the Economy whether Invest NI was aware charitable donations were being made from Wright Bus to Green-Pastures Church, before it approved a £2.5m loan to the company in June 2019.

Mrs Dodds: Invest NI knew that Wrights Group Ltd paid dividends to its parent company, Cornerstone Group Ltd. The decision to make charitable donations to Green Pastures Church was taken by the Directors of Cornerstone Group. The £2.5m Rescue Aid secured loan to Wrights Group Ltd was jointly approved by Invest NI and the Permanent Secretaries of the Department for the Economy and the Department of Finance. Invest NI and the Departments were aware of the charitable donations made by the Cornerstone Group to Green Pastures Church before the £2.5m loan was approved.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for the Economy how her Department is adopting a trauma-informed approach when developing policy and legislation.

Mrs Dodds: My Department follows Central Government guidance on policy development. This is built around a 'policy cycle' framework focused on 'Rationale, Objectives, Appraisal, Monitoring, Evaluation and Feedback'.

At present there are no plans to adopt a trauma-informed approach when developing policy and legislation in respect of economic development.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister for the Economy to confirm whether the funding for Project Stratum is secured.

(AQW 2192/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: I am aware of recent commentary on the withdrawal of the Confidence and Supply funding following the New Decade New Approach Agreement. However, I can confirm that broadband remains a key priority for the Executive.

It is important that we remove any doubt in relation to the funding and I have, therefore, written to my Executive colleagues, asking that the funding be confirmed for the next four years.

There is nothing to suggest that the funding will not be made available to implement the project as planned.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister for the Economy what her plans are to implement the previous Executive's Economic Inactivity Strategy.

Mrs Dodds: 'Enabling Success' was the previous Executive's strategy for addressing the high level of economic inactivity rate in Northern Ireland. This was a joint strategy between the former Department for Enterprise, Trade and Investment and the former Department for Employment and Learning (DEL).

Following Departmental restructuring in 2016, responsibility for the Enabling Success Strategy transferred to the Department for Communities. Although the Strategy is no longer active, the broad principles remain relevant given the current level of economic inactivity across Northern Ireland. Key components of the Strategy are being progressed by the Department for Communities within the 'Employability NI' Programme and my officials are members of the Programme Board.

Through the development of a new Northern Ireland Skills Strategy, to cover the period 2021-2030, my Department will continue to work closely with the Department for Communities on measures to reduce economic inactivity, providing support and opportunities so that everyone can contribute to and benefit from our growing economic prosperity.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister for the Economy what representation she is making to the Executive for Apprenticeship Levy Funds, generated in Northern Ireland, to be re-invested in apprenticeships or other forms of upskilling.

Mrs Dodds: The Apprenticeship Levy, a fiscal policy and reserved matter for the UK Parliament, was introduced by the UK Government in April 2017. Whilst Northern Ireland receives the Barnett Consequential from the levy this had no significant impact on the block grant.

Although the collection of the levy is a reserved matter, with no scope for derogation for Northern Ireland, the delivery of Apprenticeships is a devolved matter.

In Northern Ireland Apprenticeships are delivered through my Department's ApprenticeshipsNI and Higher Level Apprenticeship programmes. My Department provides funding to support the cost of apprenticeship training for private sector employers regardless of whether they pay levy contributions. These are demand led programmes, and I encourage all employers to avail of these Programmes to drive forward business growth.

I am also focused on ensuring the apprenticeships system best meets the needs of employers and participants in Northern Ireland. The Strategic Advisory Forum and Sectoral Partnerships are working on an ongoing basis to ensure employers play a central role in policy development and curriculum design.

I have met with a number of employers and representative bodies to understand the impact of the levy and opportunities to enhance our apprenticeships system. I am committed to consider the issues raised by NI employers that I have engaged with and during the consultation on the impact of the levy in NI, including policy changes around the current age related criteria, potential public sector apprenticeships, and how to improve transparency for employers on the level of funding support they are currently availing of through participation in our apprenticeship programmes. I intend to engage with the Executive in due course to outline plans to further enhance our Apprenticeship system.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for the Economy (i) how much money was loaned to the Presbyterian Mutual Society; (ii) what is the outstanding amount of the loan; and (iii) whether any other mutual societies, banks or credit unions have been given loans by the Department of Finance.

Mrs Dodds:

- (i) Under the Scheme of Arrangement, loan funds of £226 million were received by PMS on 1 August 2011. This was made up of a £175 million secured loan from the Northern Ireland Executive, £25 million from HM Treasury, £25 million from the former Department for Enterprise, Trade and Investment, and £1million from the Presbyterian Church Ireland.
- (ii) Of the £175 million loan facility, £77.25 million remains outstanding.
- (iii) I have been advised by my Ministerial colleague with responsibility for Finance that there are currently no loans issued from the NI Consolidated Fund to mutual societies, banks, or credit unions. The Department of Finance currently has no record of any loans issued in the past.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister for the Economy what action her Department will take to support the hospitality sector to overcome the impact of the Corvid 19 (Coronavirus), which has resulted in 3,000 hotel room cancellations from January to March 2020.

Mrs Dodds: I am very aware of concerns among Northern Ireland tourism businesses, and the tourism and hospitality industry in general, in relation to the potential impact of the spread of the Coronavirus, COVID-19.

My officials are closely monitoring what is a fluid and developing situation, and in particular how the spread of the virus might affect visitor confidence and forward travel bookings.

I have asked to be kept informed of developments in respect of the tourism and hospitality industry (and also the wider economy) and will consider, where possible, what actions might be appropriate to help offset any negative economic impact arising from the COVID-19 outbreak.

Mr Stalford asked the Minister for the Economy what discussions her Department has had with Northern Ireland ports and airports about making bids for freeport status.

Mrs Dodds: My officials are working on a cross departmental basis to engage with the UK Government's Freeport policy proposals. The UK Government has only recently added momentum to this policy area and therefore my officials have had only limited and general discussions with ports and airports.

Ms Ennis asked the Minister for the Economy what is the current legislation in relation to the maximum span length (in metres) between 33kV overhead electricity lines; and on what date did this legislation come into effect.

Mrs Dodds: There is no legislation in place regarding the maximum span length between 33kv overhead electricity lines. Matters pertaining to 33kv power lines are governed by technical specifications and are the responsibility of NIE Networks.

Mr M Bradley asked the Minister for the Economy what plans her Department has to promote the Atlantic Link Enterprise Campus, Coleraine, to potential investors.

Mrs Dodds: Causeway Coast & Glens Borough Council (the Council) lead on the promotion of the Atlantic Link Enterprise Campus in Coleraine.

The Department's role is to ensure that the Campus is developed by the Council with the clear aim of attracting capital intensive companies. The Department has an agreed framework in place for monitoring and evaluating the development of the Campus.

Invest NI is represented on the Council's Steering Group, set up to assist with promoting the Campus. Invest NI has assisted with promotional events to potential investors.

I have also asked Ulster University how they could collaborate more with the Enterprise Zone.

Mr O'Dowd asked the Minister for the Economy whether her Department received the 2018/19 Financial Statement from the Ulster University.

Mrs Dodds: My Department received the 2018/19 draft Financial Statements from Ulster University on 2 December 2019.

The university has advised its signed Financial Statements will be provided to the Department in March.

Mr O'Dowd asked the Minister for the Economy whether the European Investment Bank (EIB) or the Ulster University withdrew from the borrowing agreement with the EIB to provide £50m for the university's Greater Belfast project.

Mrs Dodds: The University's agreement with the European Investment Bank was for up to £150 million towards the Greater Belfast Development project. The terms of the agreement expired as the University had not drawn down any of that funding against the project by February 2017.

Mr O'Dowd asked the Minister for the Economy whether she is satisfied that the alleged latent defects, which were discovered during the maintenance period of the Ulster University basement contract, will not further delay or jeopardise the university's Greater Belfast Project or lead to increase costs for the project.

Mrs Dodds: Ulster University has advised and the Department's advisors have confirmed that the University has secured a resolution to the defects in the advanced sub-structure contract as part of an overall agreement with the above ground works contractor to complete the Greater Belfast Development Project. The Department's advisors' view is that the risk of such defects causing further delay or increases in costs beyond this agreement is low.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for the Economy what measures her Department is taking to address the skills deficit.

Mrs Dodds: My Department works closely with employers, education providers and the local community to ensure that Northern Ireland has a Skills System that is dynamic and flexible enough to meet the needs of the rapidly changing economy. By helping students, workers and those not currently engaged with the workplace move further up the skills ladder, we support individuals' earning potential, health and wellbeing.

Since taking up my role I have engaged with a wide range of employers, business groups and InvestNI to ensure that skills are aligned to the correct and future needs of the Northern Ireland economy.

Over the last ten years, through the implementation of the Northern Ireland Skills Strategy "Success through Skills – Transforming Futures", we have ensured that technical skills are firmly on the agenda, with increases against all population goals, including those with a level 3 qualification, which is up from 55% in 2011, to 67% now, and those with a level 4 qualification, up from 33% to 44% now.

This has been achieved through a number of Departmental initiatives, outlined below, and in partnership with the Department of Education and Department for Communities.

This collaboration continues, as my Department leads on the development of a new Skills Strategy, which will set the skills agenda for the period 2021-30. This has brought together key stakeholders from industry, local government and education institutions to consider the key challenges around lifelong learning, skills imbalances and the skills required for the modern workplace.

Implementation of the new Skills Strategy will be supported by short, medium and long term implementation plans, which will align provision to the achievement of the objectives set out in the Industrial Strategy and the Programme for Government, with a specific focus in addressing Outcome 6 of the draft Programme for Government – ‘We have more people working in better jobs’.

Skills Initiatives

During 2019/20, my Department has up-skilled 227 people through the Assured Skills programme, in areas such as financial services, cyber security, business skills, corporate travel and a number of IT academies, through which 190 people have secured employment. Unfortunately, Bridge to Employment has seen a reduction in the number of applications to the programme. Currently, the Department is working with the Department for Communities to promote Bridge within the Jobs & Benefits Office network. As at 31 December 2019, 2,409 employees have been up-skilled or re-skilled through Skills Focus, a programme which increases the work skills of existing employees. In addition, through the InnovateUS programme, my Department has undertaken 249 new projects, increasing the skills of small businesses in products, processes or services.

Further Education

The six Further Education (FE) Colleges in Northern Ireland have established strong and effective relationships with businesses, industry and employers, through seven Curriculum Hubs. These Hubs ensure that the curriculum provision and the programmes delivered are fully aligned to the priority and growth sectors’ current and future skills needs.

Apprenticeships, Careers and Vocational Education

The Department currently supports skills development through the ApprenticeshipsNI (Levels 2 & 3) and Higher Level Apprenticeship (HLA) (Level 4+) programmes. ApprenticeshipsNI and HLA are demand led, work-based programmes, designed around the needs of employers, which offer recognised training and qualifications to new employees and existing employees who are taking on new roles that require significant training and development.

As of October 2019, 9,514 individuals were enrolled on a DfE funded Apprenticeships.

The Department has also sought to put employers at the centre of future provision development by establishing employer-led Sectoral Partnerships across key sectors to inform apprenticeship pathways, content and curriculum. Through Sectoral Partnerships, employers work with FE Colleges and Universities to design and agree curriculum and content for apprenticeships in each occupational area, ensuring that provision and content meet employers’ needs and the needs of the wider economy.

Through its Training for Success (TfS) programme, the Department provides a training opportunity for 16 to 17 year olds who are not in education or full time employment, with extended eligibility for those with a disability, or from an “in care” background. Training is available from Levels 0 to Levels 3, with most undertaking programmes at Level 2. Training is provided by FE Colleges and private training organisations. Between August and October 2019, there were 4,301 participants on the programme.

On a phased basis, from September 2020, the Department plans to introduce a series of reforms to the Youth Training system, as outlined in ‘Generating Our Success - the Youth Training Strategy for Northern Ireland’. It proposes a new, full-time Level 2 vocational education programme, the NI Traineeship. The proposed new programme will provide high quality, vocational education and training at Level 2, combined with structured work-based learning and numeracy & literacy qualifications to young people who are not yet in employment, but who are ready and able to engage and achieve on a challenging programme in their preferred occupational area.

The Department is also developing a new vocational training programme (Skills for Life and Work) aimed at those not yet ready to commence a Traineeship, or Level 2 Apprenticeship.

The Department’s careers advisers use the Skills Barometer data as part of the guidance process to inform young people and adults about skills and demand

InvestNI

Skills development remains an area of critical focus for Invest NI, in terms of ensuring that the region continues to benefit from new economic opportunities.

Invest NI is committed to ongoing partnership working with relevant Government Departments, Councils, industry and the academic sector, to ensure continued curriculum alignment and ‘joined-up’ thinking in relation to the development of a future skills pipeline.

Invest NI also provides a portfolio of tailored skills solutions, targeted at both indigenous and FDI companies, and which allows for the upskilling of existing and new staff.

Over the past five years, Invest NI has offered support to 1,300 skills based projects, with £51 million of support contributing towards total investment of £200 million.

Higher Education

The Northern Ireland Skills Barometer indicates that HE skills are, in general, only marginally undersupplied. However, there is an imbalance across individual subject areas, with some of the largest undersupply predicted in STEM subjects.

Northern Ireland’s Universities are aware of this undersupply, and have taken measures to rebalance provision, with the result that enrolments and qualifications in STEM subjects have been increasing over the past number of years.

In 2012/13, 22% of students at Northern Ireland's Higher Education institutions were studying a Narrow STEM related subject and 45% a Broad STEM related subject. In 2018/19, these figures had risen to 25.9% and 50.5% respectively.

My Department will continue to work with the local Universities to examine how best to ensure that the supply of graduates is aligned with the needs of the local economy.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for the Economy what measures her Department are taking to ensure good practice and cooperation between business and further/higher education sectors.

Mrs Dodds: My Department is committed to ensuring good practice and cooperation between business and the further and higher education sectors through a variety of initiatives.

The Further Education (FE) sector directly engages with businesses and industry across Northern Ireland to drive improvement in productivity, innovation and creativity, supporting a more competitive local economy. The six FE Colleges currently provide a range of bespoke business services and support approximately 10,000 local businesses annually. The FE Colleges have established strong and effective relationships with businesses, industry and employers specifically in priority growth and employment sectors, through seven College Curriculum Hubs. These Hubs ensure that the curriculum provision and programmes delivered are fully aligned to the sectors' current and future requirements. Dedicated Business Support Teams support collaboration with industry and the Colleges also host sectoral focus groups and clusters to seek employer insight into current and future skills requirements.

The FE Colleges also collaborate through an economic engagement working group to share employer insights and best practice across Northern Ireland to ensure the FE sector provides a relevant offering which serve the needs of industry. The group also looks for new opportunities and new ways to support the business community and is tasked with raising the profile of the FE sector amongst the business community and key economic stakeholders.

In addition, the Colleges are a springboard for providing the skilled workforce for the future through the offer of Foundation Degrees, Apprenticeships, Higher Level Apprenticeships, Assured Skills Academies and quality work placements. All developed and delivered in cooperation with business.

In regards to the Higher Education sector, my Department continues to address the challenges facing the economy by directly supporting the innovation agenda in Northern Ireland's universities. Through the Higher Education Innovation Fund, my Department provides funding in the region of £4 million per annum to assist universities in translating their high quality research base into benefits for the business sector and wider society through Knowledge Exchange.

In addition, the Connected programme enables local companies to access world-class expertise, technology and research from within the Higher and Further Education sectors, assisting them to boost their competitiveness, develop new products and increase market opportunities. Connected is unique to Northern Ireland and funded at £1.1 million per annum. 83% of the 700 projects undertaken during the scheme's last round of funding was undertaken with companies with no previous university or college engagement. Going forward, the scheme will place an increasing focus on re-engaging companies to embed innovation in their business models.

Ms C Kelly asked the Minister for the Economy whether her Department will consider adopting measures similar to those implemented in Scotland, whereby higher education institutions offer automatic places to care experienced students whose grades have met minimum entry requirements.

Mrs Dodds: I recognise the very challenging context in which care experienced Higher Education (HE) applicants have made their achievements. A key priority for my Department is to ensure that those most able but least likely to participate in HE are given every opportunity to do so, regardless of their background.

During my time in office, I am keen to work with officials, the HE sector and other relevant stakeholders to review the current strategy for widening participation in HE to review what more can be done for under-represented and disadvantaged groups, including care experienced individuals.

Admissions criteria is a matter for individual HE providers. However, I will ensure that my Department considers best practice from other jurisdictions, including measures implemented in Scotland, in developing a strategic vision and action plan for the future.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister for the Economy to provide a comparison on how legislation governing mining practices differs in Northern Ireland to other regions on these islands and in Europe.

Mrs Dodds: In Northern Ireland, the Mineral Development Act (Northern Ireland) 1969 vests most minerals in the Department. There are three main exceptions, gold and silver, as they are vested in the Crown; minerals which were being worked at the time of the 1969 Act; and construction materials (aggregates, sand and gravel), clay and soil. The Department may grant prospecting licences for exploration and mining licences for commercial extraction of those vested minerals.

Planning permission from the Department for Infrastructure/Local Council is required before an application for a mining licence for extraction can be made.

Before granting a mining licence, the Department, in accordance with the provisions of the 1969 Act, conducts due diligence checks, investigates the technical and financial resources of the applicant and consults with relevant statutory bodies and the public. Advice is also taken from consultants who have expertise in mining to ensure that the proposed mine design is based on adequate geological data and that potentially hazardous conditions have been located and defined. The Department consults the Health and Safety Executive for Northern Ireland about the safety aspects of the proposed mine, and the Valuation and Lands Agency on the question of land ownership to ascertain entitlement to royalties. Every application for a mining licence or lease is treated on its own merits and in accordance with the provisions of the 1969 Act.

In addition, an environmental impact assessment and a feasibility study to determine the viability of extraction is required and, depending on the mining process, further environmental permissions including pollution control will also be required from Department of Agriculture, Environment & Rural Affairs (DAERA).

In GB the legislative position is different. With the exception of oil, gas, coal, gold and silver, all other minerals are held in private ownership. Mineral and mine development is regulated through the planning process – there is no separate mineral licensing legislation such as exists in NI. The Coal Authority has ownership of almost all coal and may grant licences for coal exploration and extraction. All mining proposals are also subject to environmental assessment and permissions depending on the nature of the extraction process.

Across the whole of the UK, the Crown holds the rights to gold and silver. The mines of these metals are known as 'Mines Royal'. In Scotland, Crown Estate rights were devolved to Crown Estate Scotland. The Crown Estate, including the Crown Estate Scotland, grant exclusive options to take a lease of 'Mines Royal' for a specific area. This would equate to a mining licence.

In Ireland, the Department of Communications, Climate Action and Environment is responsible for regulating mineral development (including mining). Similar to the position in Northern Ireland, most mineral rights, with the exception of stone, gravel, sand and clay, are vested in the state. The Minister may issue mining licences provided they are satisfied that the proposed mining plan is feasible and that the nominee company has the financial resources, technical ability and insurances to carry out the plan, and planning permission has been granted in respect of the development comprised in the application. An Integrated Pollution Control Licence is also required for all but small developments on non-metallic minerals to prevent or reduce emissions to air, water and land, reduce waste and use energy or resources efficiently.

My Department is currently undertaking a review of our mineral and petroleum licensing regimes to help inform our future policy on exploration and extraction of our natural resources. This review will include an assessment of legislative regimes across, not only these islands and Europe, but across other appropriate jurisdictions across the world. Information on the legislation governing mining practices in Europe has not yet been gathered, as initial benchmarking has concentrated on the position in GB and Ireland.

I have recently given approval for my Department to commission independent research in this area. The aim of this research is to develop our understanding of the potential economic, environmental and societal impacts of petroleum and mineral activities, and to consider what might be required in terms of a policy, and licensing regime taking account of the climate action and environmental commitments outlined in the New Decade, New Approach.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister for the Economy to detail the number of homes in Fermanagh that will benefit from Project Stratum.

Mrs Dodds: There are 8,839 premises in County Fermanagh within the Project Stratum target intervention area.

While the actual number and location of premises that will benefit will not be known until the procurement is complete and a contract has been awarded, expected in September 2020, my Department's objective is to maximise the number of premises to benefit from the funding available.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister for the Economy whether Project Stratum funds will be used solely for rural homes.

Mrs Dodds: Following the receipt of updated broadband coverage data received from suppliers during the procurement process, the number of premises in the Project Stratum target intervention area has been reduced to just under 79,000.

Over 95% of the revised target intervention area is rural, defined using NISRA guidelines as Band H – villages with a population of less than 1,000, and premises in open countryside.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister for the Economy when question AQW 1167/17-22 will be answered.

Mrs Dodds: I am considering all aspects of Youth Training reform and will respond in due course.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for the Economy, pursuant to AQW 1426/17-22, for an explanation why it would not be appropriate to provide the requested breakdown since other Departments have provided such information.

Mrs Dodds: The response to AQW 1426/17-22 was based on legal advice. The nature of the Department for the Economy's participation in the RHI Inquiry is different to that of other participants which may explain why other Departments may take a different approach.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for the Economy to provide a breakdown of all Invest NI property/leases across each of the 18 constituencies.

Mrs Dodds: Invest NI owns property, by way of both industrial estates offering serviced industrial land and a small number of buildings, for the purpose of supporting business development across Northern Ireland. The organisation will only intervene in the commercial property market where there is clear evidence of market failure.

Invest NI also leases space in a number of properties to house its regional office team in 6 locations across Northern Ireland.

A breakdown of Invest NI's property assets by parliamentary constituency is provided within the following tables (figures correct to 31st December 2019).

Ms Rogan asked the Minister for the Economy how many properties in South Down do not have access to high speed or superfast broadband.

(AQW 2688/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: There is no official definition of high speed broadband. In its latest Connected Nations Report, Ofcom indicates that 4,500 premises in South Down cannot access speeds of 10 Megabits per second or greater. Ofcom defines superfast broadband as 30 Megabits per second or greater. From analysis of data received through the Project Stratum Open Market Review and subsequent public consultation, my Department has identified 9,211 premises within the South Down constituency that do not have access to speeds of 30 Megabits per second or greater.

Ms Kimmings asked the Minister for the Economy how the roll-out of Project Stratum prioritises improvements to internet connectivity in rural areas with the least access to superfast broadband, particularly in relation to the South Armagh area.

Mrs Dodds: Project Stratum aims to improve internet connectivity for those premises currently unable to access superfast broadband speeds of 30 Megabits per second or greater.

Following the receipt of updated broadband coverage data received from suppliers during the procurement process, the number of premises in the target intervention area has been reduced to just under 79,000.

Over 95% of the revised target intervention area is rural, defined using NISRA guidelines as Band H – villages with a population of less than 1,000, and premises in open countryside.

Analysis undertaken by my Department and advice from independent advisors indicates that it is not possible to prioritise specific geographical areas without potentially sacrificing overall coverage, increasing costs and slowing delivery.

There are 8,327 premises within the Newry and Armagh Parliamentary Constituency included in the Project Stratum target intervention area. While the precise number and location of premises that will directly benefit will not be known until after contract award, the aspirations of my Department continue to be to maximise broadband coverage from the funding available.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for the Economy what regulations govern the design, construction and operation of milk tanker meters.

Mrs Dodds: Milk tanker meter measuring instruments are not currently prescribed by Regulations in Northern Ireland or the rest of the UK. There are therefore no prescribed error limits, no specific technical requirements governing their design, construction and operation, and they do not require testing or stamping before being legally used for trade. Consequently, neither Trading Standards nor the Department for Business, Energy & Industrial Strategy's Office of Product Safety and Standards (OPSS), have the capability to test milk measuring systems at present.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for the Economy to outline the reasons why Trading Standards do not calibrate and monitor milk tanker meters, and will she address this gap in consumer protection, particularly in the interests of dairy farmers.

Mrs Dodds: Milk tanker meter measuring instruments are not prescribed equipment in Northern Ireland or the rest of the UK. Therefore such systems do not require testing. However, all measuring equipment (including milk tank meters) used for trade are covered by Article 15 of the Weights and Measures (Northern Ireland) Order 1981. Under this Article it is an offence to use any such equipment in a fraudulent manner.

In 2015, the UK legal metrology expert panel raised the issue of milk measurement from farms to dairies with the National Measurement and Regulation Office, which is now part of the Department for Business, Energy & Industrial Strategy's Office of Product Safety and Standards (OPSS). A project was initiated to establish if there was a problem that was sufficient to warrant government intervention, new regulation or further testing work to be carried out in the milk measurement process. Part of the review was intended to establish if such measurement capability needed to be developed by government or could the industry effectively regulate itself. The project concluded that the dairy industry can effectively regulate itself and that regulatory bodies, such as Trading Standards and OPSS, will work with them to enable this.

Although milk tanker meters are not prescribed equipment, there are statutory protections in place for consumers and businesses under The Weights and Measures (Packaged Goods) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2011 (PGRs). The PGRs provide for the 'average weight system'. This system applies to most goods which are pre-packed in pre-determined quantities by weight or volume, including most foodstuffs, such as milk, and non-foodstuffs. This creates a system where the purchaser may buy with the confidence that he is protected against short weight or measure, while businesses are protected against unfair competition. It is the duty of my Department's Trading Standards Service (TSS) to enforce these Regulations.

TSS ensures compliance with the PGRs by carrying out average weight visits at both retailers and packers' premises. Trading Standards Officers will conduct screening tests and carry out reference tests on milk products in order to check levels of compliance. In serious cases, a breach of the PGRs may result in formal enforcement action being taken by TSS, including prosecutions.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister for the Economy whether she can confirm that the £165m for Project Stratum is still in place. (AQW 2770/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: I am aware of recent commentary on the withdrawal of the Confidence and Supply funding following the New Decade New Approach Agreement. However, I can confirm that broadband remains a key priority for the Executive.

It is important that we remove any doubt in relation to the funding and I have, therefore, written to my Executive colleagues, asking that the funding be confirmed for the next four years.

I am aware that the Department of Finance is engaging with HM Treasury on this matter.

There is nothing to suggest that the funding will not be made available to implement the project as planned.

Ms Ennis asked the Minister for the Economy to detail (i) how much it cost to establish the Newry Invest NI office; (ii) the annual running costs of that office; and (iii) her assessment of the benefit of having that office in Newry for the local economy. (AQW 2798/17-22)

Mrs Dodds:

- (i) In February 2005 Invest NI paid £180,824.27 (inclusive of VAT) to the Landlord for fit-out of the new Invest NI Newry office. A further payment of £26,304.97 (inclusive of VAT) was subsequently made for furniture, other equipment, removals, etc.
- (ii) The running costs of the office for the year-ended March 2019 were £183,728.66 (excluding staffing costs).
- (iii) Invest NI's Southern Regional Office, which covers the Ards & North Down Borough Council, Lisburn & Castlereagh City Council and Newry, Mourne & Down District Council areas and is based in Newry, is a focal hub for all of the organisation's activities in the area. Over the past 5 years, Invest NI has made 4,281 offers of support to businesses in the Southern Regional Office area. These offers aim to support over 5,000 jobs and bring total planned investment commitments of £529 million to the area.

Staff based in the office work directly with local businesses to help them to start up and grow their businesses in external markets providing opportunities for the local workforce and entrepreneurs.

In addition, staff work closely with local economic stakeholders to strategically plan and implement strategies to grow prosperity in the area. The local knowledge, networks and expertise of the staff based in that office has been a key contributor to the many successful outcomes delivered by Invest NI in the area.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister for the Economy what progress has been made toward banning zero hours contracts as outlined in New Decade, New Approach.

Mrs Dodds: I have asked my officials to develop policy proposals in relation to the New Decade New Approach statements on zero hours contracts. In developing these proposals I will wish to take account of the views of stakeholders. Any proposals to ban or limit the use of zero hours contracts would be subject to public consultation prior to the introduction of new legislation in the Assembly.

Mr Storey asked the Minister for the Economy how many projects, in each district council area, applied to the European Social Fund Programme 2014-2020 and its predecessor schemes.

Mrs Dodds: The European Social Fund Programme 2014-2020 and 2007-2013 invited applications for funding over 2 funding calls. Applications across these calls are listed in the tables below.

Council Area	European Social Fund Programme 2014-2020 Call 1	European Social Fund Programme 2014-2020 Call 2

Mr Storey asked the Minister for the Economy how many projects successful in applying to the European Social Fund Programme 2014-2020 subsequently exited the scheme of their own volition in comparison with its predecessor schemes, broken down by (i) stated reason for exit; and (ii) district council area.

Mrs Dodds: To date in the European Social Fund Programme 2014-2020, 5 projects have chosen to leave the Programme. The reasons for exit and the district council area are as follows:

Project	Reason for exit	District Council Area
1	Change in organisational priorities	Belfast/Derry & Strabane/Antrim & Newtownabbey
2	Change in organisational priorities	Belfast
3	Merger with another project	Causeway Coast & Glens
4	Change in organisational priorities	Derry & Strabane
5	Unable to secure match funding	Belfast

Under the European Social Fund Programme 2007-13, 4 projects chose to leave the programme. The reasons for exit and the district council area are as follows:

Project	Reason for exit	District Council Area
1	Operational decision	Belfast
2	Operational decision	Belfast
3	Operational decision	Derry & Strabane
4	Operational decision	Derry & Strabane

Mr M Bradley asked the Minister for the Economy, in relation to the high-profile events that have been cancelled or have received reduced funding within the Causeway Coast and Glens Boraugh Council area, whether she would offer any financial assistance to these events.

(AQW 2857/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Through Tourism NI, financial support is provided to tourism events that can generate economic benefit for Northern Ireland through increased visitor and participant numbers, spend and bed nights.

Tourism NI's Tourism Event Funding Programme consists of two schemes offering financial assistance, the International Tourism Events Fund and the National Tourism Events Sponsorship Scheme. This programme operates annually and is on an open call competitive basis.

For events taking place between 1 April 2020 and 31 March 2021 the call for applications to the International Tourism Events Funding Programme closed on 13 January 2020, and the National Tourism Event Sponsorship Scheme closed on 10 February 2020. Tourism NI is in the process of considering all applications to the Tourism Event Funding Programme 2020/21.

Tourism NI received one application from Causeway Coast and Glens Borough Council to the National Tourism Event Sponsorship Scheme 2020/21 for Air Waves Portrush. Officials from Causeway Coast and Glens Borough Council formally withdrew the application to the scheme on 26 February 2020.

Officials in Tourism NI understand that the decision taken by the Council not to proceed with the Air Waves Event was taken on value for money grounds as the event delivered limited additional economic benefit within the Borough.

The event is not only funded by the Council, it is also dependent upon significant manpower and technical expertise from council officials to allow the event to take place. Without both the financial and "in kind" support being available from Causeway Coast and Glens Council there is little which the Department for the Economy can do to ensure the event takes place in the future.

Miss Woods asked the Minister for the Economy, pursuant to AQO 163/17-22, (i) whether she has any plans to review legislation for (a) mineral; and (b) petroleum licensing; and (ii) for a timescale of any such review.

Mrs Dodds:

- (i) I can confirm that a strategic review of both petroleum and mineral licensing policy is underway. The review will be informed by the outcome of planned independent research. The results of this research will inform the development of a policy position on mineral activities and a policy position on petroleum activities. When a policy position is developed, my Department will review the relevant licensing legislation in line with that position.
- (ii) The strategic review will be an iterative process dependent on consideration of the results of the independent research and so it is not possible, at this early stage, to estimate the timescale for completing the review process. However, my Department is committed to the timely delivery of the strategic review.

Ms Dolan asked the Minister for the Economy what oversight her Department has taken to ensure that all jobs created and assisted by Invest NI comply with the Executive's good jobs index.

Mrs Dodds: The Department for the Economy is developing a Better Jobs index, which would assess employment opportunities against a series of measureable data. This has not yet been finalised.

In its absence, Invest NI presently targets and monitors the salary associated with the jobs that it supports against the NI Private Sector Median (NI PSM) basic wage, as calculated through the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings. Over the period 1 April 2017 to 31 March 2019, c70% of all the jobs supported by Invest NI aim to pay salaries above the NI PSM. Invest NI will liaise closely with the Department to ensure that its future approach is aligned to the finalised Better Jobs index.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for the Economy for her assessment of the impact on job creation prospects, particularly in North Antrim, if the project to deliver the third runway at Heathrow Airport does not proceed and the Heathrow Logistics Hub opportunities are lost.

Mrs Dodds: I am watching the situation with interest. The lead for this project will be those at Heathrow. They will be diligent in assessing the landscape and deciding next steps. As this is a live legal process it would be inappropriate for me to make any uninformed comment.

In relation to the potential impact on jobs, unless and until there is a decision on the next steps and on the location of the hubs, any job impacts remains hypothetical.

I am, and remain positive about the role Northern Ireland can play in this expansion of Heathrow and have instructed that my officials continue to explore and promote the opportunities for all of Northern Ireland through this process in innovative partnership with local stakeholders.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for the Economy, pursuant to AQW 2597/17-22, has the System Operator for Northern Ireland (SONI) responded to the Utility Regulator's formal request for information under the SONI transmission license in full, answering all questions asked in the request.

Mrs Dodds: The System Operator for Northern Ireland responded to the information request on 27 February 2020 and provided a response to each question asked. The Utility Regulator will be seeking further clarification on a number of points.

Ms Rogan asked the Minister for the Economy to detail (i) all of Invest NI's land holdings in South Down; (ii) how long they've been in ownership of this land; and (iii) what discussions Invest NI have had in the last 12 months about maximising the economic output of this land.

Mrs Dodds: Invest NI holds approximately 275 acres of land in the South Down constituency in support of its business development role. A breakdown of these landholdings, including availability and year of acquisition, is as set out in the following table.

Invest NI Estates/Industrial Area	Town	Landholding (acres)	Land Availability (acres)	Year of Acquisition
Carnbane Business Park	Newry	138.24	41.70	1996, 1997 and 2010
Carnbane East Industrial Estate	Newry	24.54	0	1992
Milltown Industrial Estate	Newry	3.96	0	1976
Armagh Road	Newry	0.55	0	1962
Down Business Park	Downpatrick	81.87	20.09	1998
Killough Road Industrial Estate	Downpatrick	23.56	11.34	1974
Hilltown	Hilltown	0.95	0	1975
Newcastle	Newcastle	0.85	0	1950, 1964 and 1971
The Harbour	Kilkeel	0.64	0	1972 and 1980
Total		275.16	73.13

Invest NI works closely with businesses to support their growth plans and, where companies have an identified requirement for new land, the agency can provide support to meet this need.

In the last 12 months the organisation has met with 16 businesses that have expressed an interest in acquiring land within its business parks in the South Down constituency and will continue a process of engagement as the companies continue to develop their plans.

In the same 12 month period three companies have entered into an agreement to acquire approximately 10.7 acres of land within Invest NI's Carnbane Business Park for the purpose of developing new purpose built facilities.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for the Economy what reasons were given by the System Operator for Northern Ireland (SONI) or Eirgrid in missing the deadline set by the Utility Regulator on their formal information request on SONI governance.

Mrs Dodds: In responding the day after the deadline SONI apologised for the delay, stating only that it was important for SONI to get the additional details requested.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for the Economy, pursuant to AQW2597/17-22, (i) who did she consult with in the Department; and (ii) which outside bodies did she consult with.

(AQW 3174/17-22)

Mrs Dodds:

- (i) I referred AQW 2597/17-22 to Energy Group officials within my department, who liaised with the Utility Regulator to provide the published answer.
- (ii) I did not consult with any outside bodies.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister for the Economy to outline (i) the total size of the local green economy, including details of employment figures and GDP in gross terms and as a percentage of total employment and total GDP; and (ii) to provide a definition about what is classified as the green economy.

Mrs Dodds: The Northern Ireland Executive does not have an agreed definition of the green economy. However the green economy is widely regarded as being low carbon, resource efficient and socially inclusive.

While there is presently no dedicated measurement for Northern Ireland that captures the entirety of the green economy, my Department co-funds a UK-wide survey entitled the 'Low Carbon and Renewable Energy Economy survey' which is conducted by the Office for National Statistics (ONS).

The latest published results from this survey relate to 2018 and show that private sector businesses, active in the low carbon and renewable energy sector in Northern Ireland, employed 5,400 full-time equivalents and had turnover of £1.1bn.

For an approximate comparison to the whole economy in Northern Ireland, this sector provides 0.95% of the full-time private sector jobs and 1.61% of total turnover.

Ms McLaughlin asked the Minister for the Economy whether she is aware of the massive sub-regional disparity in qualifications and skills across Northern Ireland, as laid out in the Assembly's Research and Information Service briefing paper (NIAR-47-2020); and what action her Department intends to take to correct this imbalance.

Mrs Dodds: I am aware that there is some regional disparity in the qualifications and skills held by individuals in Northern Ireland. The data provided in the briefing paper highlights some trends across both urban and rural constituencies, with areas as diverse as Belfast North and Fermanagh and South Tyrone having similar skills and employment profiles.

This is something that we see from a young age, with the proportion of school leavers attaining five GCSEs at grades A* to C (including English and Maths) ranging from a high of 81% in East Antrim, to a low of 60% in Belfast West.

To address these gaps for our young people, my Department offers a range of interventions, including Training for Success and ApprenticeshipsNI, through a network of training providers across Northern Ireland. Our Further Education colleges also offer a range of academic, vocational and leisure courses to school leavers, as well as adult learners.

My Department is leading on the development of a new, all-of-government Skills Strategy for Northern Ireland, which will set the skills agenda for the period 2021-30. Since taking up my role, I have engaged with key stakeholders from industry, local government and education institutions to consider the major challenges around lifelong learning, skills imbalances and the skills required for the modern workplace.

Lifelong learning, in particular, aligned with the work taken forward in partnership with the Department of Education and Department for Communities, will be key in addressing some of the skills and qualifications imbalances. We recognise the importance for citizens to upskill and continue learning throughout life for their own individual benefit, as well as addressing the needs of the local economy.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for the Economy (i) has she seen the Buglass and Cornwall reports in respect of RHI issues; (ii) can she confirm these reports are as originally presented without alteration at the behest of the Department; and (iii) can she confirm that these reports are being reviewed by staff other than those who signed off regulatory impact assessments determining that there would be no adverse economic, rural or hardship impacts arising from their recommendations to the Secretary of State that she bring forward the 2019 legislation.

Mrs Dodds:

- (i) I have received a copy of the Cornwall Insight Tariff Review Report. I have not yet received Andrew Buglass' report on hardship.
- (ii) When Cornwall Insight and Andrew Buglass shared draft versions of their respective reports with the Department, officials considered the content and provided feedback on points of factual accuracy and clarity. The Department has not requested alterations to the conclusions of either piece of work.
- (iii) Yes.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) whether they anticipate that the Irish Language Commissioner and his staff will all be Irish speakers; and (ii) if so, how will fair employment provisions be honoured.

(AQW 972/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: Consideration is currently being given to the detail of the arrangements to bring forward the language proposals in the New Decade New Approach Agreement. Any recruitment processes will adhere to the requirements in employment legislation.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) what is the staffing compliment of the Equality Commission; and (ii) what is its annual budget.

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: The Equality Commission staffing complement is 69.9 full-time equivalent staff. The 2019/20 opening budget for the Commission was £5,042,000.

Mr Humphrey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the proposed role of the Office of Identity and Cultural Expression.

(AQO 8/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: The New Decade, New Approach agreement sets out the strategic aims of the new Office of Identity and Cultural Expression.

These include the promotion of:-

- cultural pluralism and respect for diversity, including Northern Ireland's ethnic, national, linguistic and faith communities;
- building social cohesion and reconciliation so that everyone has a sense of belonging;
- building capacity and resilience on how we address our unresolved cultural identity issues; and
- celebrate and support all aspects of Northern Ireland's rich cultural and linguistic heritage, recognising the equal validity and importance of all identities and traditions.

Consideration is currently being given to the arrangements to bring forward the Rights, Language and Identity proposals in the 'New Decade, New Approach' agreement, including the creation of the Office of Identity and Cultural Expression.

Further details will be made available to Members in due course.

Mr Givan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the protocol for the Equality Commission when choosing to support a client through with legal action.

(AQW 2480/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: The Commissions Policy on the Provision of Legal Advice and Assistance is available on their website.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 975/17-22, (i) for their assessment of the status of the English language; and (ii) where is same specified.

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: Clause 78F (3) of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 (Amendment No. 2) Bill states that the status of the English language is not affected by the provision made in the Bill.

Department of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, following the Mills Review in 2013, to detail what actions ahve been carried out to address (i) criminality; and (ii) organised crime, in the waste industry.

Mr Poots (The Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs): A range of actions have been carried out to address criminality and organised crime in the waste industry, which include:

- Restructuring to create a single Directorate, Resource Efficiency Division, bringing together regulatory and enforcement functions in waste and water management. This provides a more coordinated and streamlined approach in addressing non- compliance in the waste sector.
- Changes to the Environmental Crime Unit (ECU), now Enforcement Branch (EB), included restructuring into separate, dedicated sections with oversight against small scale, low risk waste crime incidents and larger scale, higher risk organised waste criminality respectively. An Assessment Section was also created, which was enhanced with the recruitment of a dedicated waste crime analyst.
- Improved, targeted recruitment and training, ensuring the necessary aptitude, skill set and experience, supplemented by in-depth induction and accredited training courses. EB now has an additional 5 criminal investigators with specialist skills in conducting criminal investigations, financial investigations and investigative practices.
- Introduction of a 'risk based matrix' inspections model for all waste management sites, focusing resources on sites which are non-compliant or at risk of becoming non-compliant.
- Changes to the 'Fit & Proper Person' test. Waste licence holders now have to meet more stringent rules to demonstrate their fitness to manage waste facilities including Criminal Record (CRO) checks and obtaining up-to-date technical certification every 24 months.
- The implementation of the Regulatory Transformation Programme (RTP). RTP is reforming the existing water, waste and industrial permitting regimes into a single streamlined framework which will deliver enhanced transparency in environmental governance by providing more data on the sites we regulate. This will enable the Agency to identify and differentiate between non-compliance and potential criminality thus ensuring maximum use of resource.
- Enhanced partnership working with other law enforcement authorities, in particular the Police Service of Northern Ireland and Her Majesties Revenue. NIEA has developed Memoranda of Understanding (MOU) with both organisations which address both operational and information sharing arrangements.
- NIEA has joined the Organised Crime Task Force Strategy Group, chaired by the Department for Justice. This group brings together a number of law enforcement agencies including the NIEA, Police, NCA, HMRC to tackle organised crime in Northern Ireland.

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail (i) how many fines have been issued in relation to environmental crime; (ii) the average value of fines in each year; (iii) the average value of fines in Britain for comparable environmental crime, for each year since 2008.

Mr Poots: The table below sets out the information requested. The Department do not hold any information in relation to fines issued for environmental crime in Britain. Such information would be in the domain of Environment Agency (England), the Scottish Environmental Protection Agency, and Natural Resources Wales.

Year	No. of fines issued	Average value of fines (£)

2019	10	£7,024.23

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs how many incidence of notifiable disease among livestock was recorded, broken down by (i) disease; and (ii) local council area, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 2763/17-22)

Mr Poots: The incidence of recorded notifiable disease in each of the last five years is provided in the tables below. Tables 1 and 2 provide the incidence for each disease by Divisional Veterinary Office (DVO) area, where available, rather than local council area as this is how the data is collated. Table 3 provides detail of those diseases where occurrence is held on a Northern Ireland basis only.

There have been no reported incidences in Northern Ireland for 52 of the 64 notifiable diseases in the last five years.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether his Department plans to have milk tanker meters calibrated and monitored by Trading Standards.

(AQW 2922/17-22)

Mr Poots: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether his Department plans to have milk tanker meters calibrated and monitored by Trading Standards

The Northern Ireland Trading Standards Service, which has responsibility for promoting and maintaining fair trading, is part of the Department for the Economy. I have no plans to request the Northern Ireland Trading Standards Service to either calibrate or monitor milk tanker meters.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline the plans for the proposed planting of two million trees.

Mr Poots: I delivered a Ministerial Statement in the Assembly recently announcing a Programme of Afforestation to plant 18 million trees, creating 9,000 hectares of new woodland, by 2030.

I understand that the proposed planting of two million trees includes community-led initiatives and primarily involves the planting of native tree species. This initiative will make a valuable contribution to the Programme of Afforestation, as it recognises opportunities for planting native trees, particularly in smaller woodlands or where recreation or biodiversity is an important consideration.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs for his assessment of the challenges in securing a fair funding level for direct payments to farmers.

Mr Poots: The Northern Ireland Trading Standards Service, which has responsibility for promoting and maintaining fair trading, is part of the Department for the Economy. I have no plans to request the Northern Ireland Trading Standards Service to either calibrate or monitor milk tanker meters.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether he will commit to the long-term utilisation of direct payments to farmers beyond 2021.

Mr Poots: The Agriculture Bill will give us the ability to continue to make payments to farmers under CAP Pillar 1, continue to deliver schemes under Pillar 2, and to keep pace with appropriate changes elsewhere in the UK.

I am considering carefully what future payments can do to support sustainable farming, both productively and environmentally, so that we can move to something new which better addresses the needs of Northern Ireland agriculture.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs for his assessment on whether current funding levels for direct payments to farmers will be maintained by the UK Government for a period beyond the transition period.

Mr Poots: I recently confirmed that the arrangements for £293 million in Direct Payments for the 2020 scheme year are now in place.

In relation to future years, the Conservative Party manifesto stated that funding for farm support would be maintained at existing levels until the end of this Parliament. While the schemes themselves may change across the UK, I anticipate that funding levels will be maintained up until 2024.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether provisions contained within Schedule 6 of the Agriculture Bill 2019-21 present any particular challenges with meeting the state aid requirements as set out in (i) Article 10; and (ii) Annexes 5 and 6 of the Ireland / Northern Ireland Protocol.

Mr Poots: The provisions within Schedule 6 of the Agriculture Bill give DAERA powers relating to intervention in agricultural markets and allow for financial assistance to agricultural producers in Northern Ireland whose incomes are being, or likely to be, adversely affected by disturbance in agricultural markets. The Bill also gives DAERA powers to continue or to modify the arrangements for Direct Payments to farmers and those currently made under the Rural Development Programme.

Schedule 6 of the Agriculture Bill does not present any particular challenges with meeting state aid requirements as set out in Article 10 and Annexes 5 and 6 of the Ireland/ Northern Ireland Protocol but the powers will need to be exercised, and payments made in a way, that meets those state aid requirements.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs what assurances his Department has sought from Defra in relation to the availability of funding for direct payments to farmers in the post-transition period.

Mr Poots: I have already raised the issue of future support arrangements with the Prime Minister and with former Defra Secretary of State Theresa Villiers.

I am seeking to ensure that our future share of the UK agricultural budget will reflect Northern Ireland's current combined CAP Pillar 1 and Pillar 2 share.

My department is liaising closely with the Department of Finance to ensure that future needs of the Department are clearly identified and that future funding is maximised.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail what (i) properties; and (ii) land are currently surplus to requirements within his Department.

(AQW 3038/17-22)

Mr Poots: My Department has one piece of land which has been determined as surplus to the Department's requirements. This relates to 1.6 hectares at Longpoint Wood, Bellaghy, which is being disposed of in line with Land and Property Services Central Advisory Unit (CAU) Guidance. No other land or property has formally been deemed as surplus at this stage however the Department continues to review its estate to carefully consider estate assets that may be suitable for disposal.

Ms Armstrong asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail (i) how he will enforce Tree Preservation Orders by preventing any removal of older trees by developers; (ii) what actions he will take to ensure appropriate action is taken against developers who cut down trees against Tree Preservation Orders.

Mr Poots: Tree Preservation Orders are made on a statutory basis to provide protection for selected trees under the Planning Act (Northern Ireland) 2011. Local Councils are the authority that make and enforce Tree Preservation Orders under this legislation, to protect selected trees, groups of trees or woodlands.

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, pursuant to AQW 767/17-22 and AQW 1004/17-22, whether the Forest Service has given permission for snares to be used on any land it owns or controls in County Antrim, in the last five years.

Mr Poots: Forest Service has not received any requests, or given permission, for the use of snares on land owned or controlled by Forest Service in County Antrim in the past 5 years.

Mr McGrath asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, pursuant to AQW 2507/17-22, (i) what delivery options are being considered; and (ii) whether it is intended to bring these into operation from 1 April 2020.

(AQW 3083/17-22)

Mr Poots:

The options which my Department are currently considering include:

- (i) delivery by DAERA; delivery through the Aquaculture Representative Group; and delivery through an alternative supplier with an aquaculture remit.

- (ii) While it will be challenging to have this in place by 1 April 2020, my officials are confident that an interim arrangement for supporting the Aquaculture Sector will be in place from 1 April 2020, if required.

Mr McHugh asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline (i) what measures have been implemented to date to protect and enhance salmon stock in the River Derg, Co.Tyrone; and (ii) what measures are planned to address this same issue.

Mr Poots: Under the Foyle Fisheries Acts (1952), as amended, the Loughs Agency is responsible for conserving, protecting, developing, improving and managing the salmon and inland fisheries of the Foyle and Carlingford Areas, including the River Derg and its tributaries.

- (i) Loughs Agency Fishery Officers undertake patrols on the River Derg, particularly during the angling season, to ensure that anglers are licensed and that conservation measures, such as the use of carcass tags and the compliance with Regulations, including the preservation of undersized fish and protection of gravid fish are adhered to. Any breaches of Regulations identified are considered for enforcement action.

The Loughs Agency has also worked in partnership with angling clubs on the Derg system, and in particular the local Derg Valley Angling club. This has included training the angling Private River Watchers in enforcement measures and in the detection of water pollution related incidents.

The Agency continues to work in partnership with the Northern Ireland Environment Agency in relation to water pollution issues affecting the River. Proactive advice has been provided to the farming community where pollution may be impacting on fish stocks and regular patrols are carried out to identify pollution sources.

The Loughs Agency also carry out habitat improvements to protect and enhance salmon populations. Significant in-channel and riparian improvement projects have been developed and implemented across the Foyle and Carlingford Areas, such as: riparian fencing; native riparian tree planting; and soft and hard bank protection.

- (ii) A programme of patrols to protect salmon stocks in the River Derg is planned for this year. The Agency also plans to carry out capital improvement works in selected areas of the River Derg catchment.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail (i) invasive plant species in Northern Ireland; and (ii) the plans his Department has to remove them.

Mr Poots:

- (i) Details of terrestrial, marine and aquatic invasive plant species recorded in Northern Ireland can be accessed under the Invasive Species tab at: <https://northernireland-species.bnbnatlas.org/>
- (ii) DAERA is taking action to deal with the spread and impact of invasive alien species. The Invasive Alien Species Strategy for Northern Ireland details a range of interventions – targeted eradication, awareness programs, local action groups, and research and development.

The Department introduced new domestic legislation, The Invasive Alien Species (Enforcement and Permitting) Order (Northern Ireland) 2019, to fulfil its obligations under the European Union Regulation No. 1143/2014 on the prevention and management of the introduction and spread of invasive alien species.

Eight plant species of Union Concern are identified as being 'Widely Spread Species' (WSS) in Northern Ireland, and requires effective management measures be put in place for these species, so that their impact on biodiversity, related ecosystem services and, where applicable, human health or the economy are minimised:

Nuttall's waterweed (Elodea nuttallii), Chilean rhubarb (Gunnera tinctoria), Giant hogweed (Heracleum mantegazzianum), Himalayan balsam (Impatiens glandulifera), Curly waterweed (Lagarosiphon major), American skunk cabbage (Lysichiton americanus), Floating pennywort (Hydrocotyle ranunculoides) and Parrot's feather (Myriophyllum aquaticum).

The Department works with a range of stakeholders - community groups, non – government organisations, farmers and landowners - to carry out management and removal of invasive plant species from their land.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs for an update on the future of farm payments, post-2020.

Mr Poots: The Agriculture Bill will give us the ability post-2020, to continue to make payments to farmers under CAP Pillar 1, continue to deliver schemes under Pillar 2, and to keep pace with appropriate changes elsewhere in the UK.

I am considering carefully what future payments can do to support sustainable farming, both productively and environmentally, so that we can move to something new which better addresses the needs of Northern Ireland agriculture.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline (i) the purpose of the data capture exercise for east-west trade in which local councils have been asked to assist; and (ii) whether this exercise plays any part in preparing to establish an east-west regulatory and customs border and infrastructure.

Mr Poots: A data capture exercise is being conducted which aims to measure G.B. to Northern Ireland agri-food trade. This is to inform me and my Departmental officials on existing trade and therefore assess opportunities as to how frictionless trade may best be supported. I have previously stated clearly that I have no intention of facilitating infrastructure at Northern Ireland ports. Consequently, this work is not preparatory to that.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs what assessment has been carried out on the impact a regulatory and customs border in the Irish Sea would have on the agri-food industry.

Mr Poots: I recognise that many farmers and agri-food stakeholders are concerned about the impact that the Ireland / Northern Ireland Protocol could have on them.

The detailed arrangements for the implementation of the Protocol have still to be determined and will be subject to discussion between the EU and UKG through the Specialised and Joint Committee structures. This detail will very much depend on the precise nature of the future trading relationship between the UK and the EU.

The negotiation on the future trading relationship between the UK and the EU has just started. It will be some time yet before we have a complete picture of what arrangements may be required for the movement of live animals or goods across the Irish Sea.

However, to be clear, I want an outcome at the end of the transition period that removes the requirement for any additional regulatory or customs checks on goods or live animals moving between GB and NI.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline what efforts his Department is undertaking to help combat the spread of Ash Dieback.

Mr Poots: Chalara Ash Dieback has become prevalent across these islands since the first finding in a GB plant nursery and its subsequent spread to Northern Ireland. The disease is widespread, affecting ash throughout Europe.

Since the first findings here on recently planted ash in 2012, Ash Dieback has spread extensively on ash throughout the wider environment in Northern Ireland. Over the intervening period and up until 2016 the Department has undertaken a significant programme of removing infected trees in recently planted sites as a precautionary approach to slow down the spread of the disease to ash in the natural environment. Despite the efforts taken across this island we found that the situation in Northern Ireland was the same as that in GB with the disease spreading to infect native ash in the wider environment.

The Department are now focused on working with stakeholders to manage disease spread and to minimise Ash Dieback impacts in the wider environment.

Forest Service has published guidance and provides grant aid under a Forest Protection Scheme to support and encourage sustainable management of woodlands that may be affected by Ash Dieback now or in the future. Against the likelihood of more trees becoming infected, the guidance focuses on tree safety and operational planning guidance for those with infected ash trees to manage the health and safety risks from dead and dying trees.

Currently we are continuing to monitor the progression of the disease with a view to being able to identify any evidence of ash trees displaying resistance to infection. The Department is providing funding for a Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute research project to identify genetic markers in native ash trees that will be indicative of resistance to Ash Dieback. Similar work to identify resistance is ongoing elsewhere across the UK with a view that screening work on resistant ash trees in infected areas will, in the longer term support efforts to repopulate the wider environment across the UK with resilient, sustainable healthy trees including ash.

Whilst in Northern Ireland we are dealing with the progression of Chalara disease in the wider environment, we also continue to prohibit further importation of ash for planting from outside the EU that could harbour new strains of the disease. The Department does permit the entry of ash plants from Europe provided that these are notified to the Department and are accompanied by a plant passport. Since the introduction of the new Plant Health Regulation in December 2019, restrictions on the internal movement within NI of all ash wood are removed. This recognises that the main risk of further spread will come from infected ash trees in the wider environment rather than from the movement of infected wood.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline the effect a regulatory border in the Irish Sea could have on the movement of animals following the end of the transition period.

Mr Poots: I recognise that many farmers and agri-food stakeholders are concerned about the impact that the Ireland / Northern Ireland Protocol could have on them.

The detailed arrangements for the implementation of the Protocol have still to be determined and will be subject to discussion between the EU and UKG through the Specialised and Joint Committee structures. This detail will very much depend on the precise nature of the future trading relationship between the UK and the EU.

The negotiation on the future trading relationship between the UK and the EU has just started. It will be some time yet before we have a complete picture of what arrangements may be required for the movement of live animals or goods across the Irish Sea.

However, to be clear, I want an outcome at the end of the transition period that removes the requirement for any additional regulatory or customs checks on goods or live animals moving between GB and NI.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, in relation to the proposed Points-Based System and Salary Thresholds for Immigration, for his assessment of the impact it may have on the supply of seasonal workers in the agri-food industry.

(AQO 275/17-22)

Mr Poots: The UK's Points Based System will come into effect on the 1st January 2021 to coincide with the end of the transition period and hence freedom of movement with the EU. This system will not feature a route for low skilled migrants to come to the UK to work.

Migrants must have an offer of employment in a role considered sufficiently skilled to be eligible to apply to enter the UK. This will make it difficult for the NI agri-food industry to source seasonal labour as the roles are primarily low skilled in terms of academic qualifications and there is a significant reliance on migrant labour.

Mr Gildernew asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, given the prevalence of social isolation and mental ill health in rural communities, how he will protect the budget for the Tackling Rural Poverty and Social Isolation Framework.

Mr Poots: The Tackling Rural Poverty and Social Isolation (TRPSI) Programme resource allocation came from the Confidence and Supply agreement funding in each of the last two years which maintained the opening budget at £1.8m per annum. This was supported by an opening capital budget of £2.2m in each year.

The TRPSI programme supports a range of initiatives, working in partnership across the public sector and community sector, that tackle social isolation and projects such as: the Rural Support charity; Farm Family Health checks; Social Farming; and Social Prescribing, directly support and address mental health issues.

You will appreciate that my department is facing a range of financial pressures and challenges going forward but I am very keen to continue to support this good work and I have sought funding from the Department of Finance to allow this to be continued in 2020/21.

I am also working with Ministerial Colleagues on the Executive Working Group on Mental Well-Being and Resilience and through this I wish to ensure that the needs of rural communities are considered and that we work in partnership across government to effectively tackle social isolation and mental ill health.

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs for an update on the number of cases of Avian Influenza that have been detected in 2020.

Mr Poots: In 2020 there have been nine confirmed cases of non notifiable avian influenza type H6N1.

Mr Irwin asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs when people can apply to join the Environmental Farming Scheme.

(AQO 278/17-22)

Mr Poots: Following a review of uptake of the scheme so far, my Department has submitted an Addendum to the original Business Case for the Environmental Farming Scheme (EFS) to the Department of Finance.

Subject to the necessary approvals being in place, my Department plans to open a fourth tranche 4 of EFS, with Higher Level applications in Spring 2020 and Wider Level applications in Summer 2020.

Ms Armstrong asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline the rational for extending the recent consultation on the application for a Marine Licence for Islandmagee Gas Storage Project.

(AQO 279/17-22)

Mr Poots: The Department received a letter alleging shortcomings with the public notice advertising the consultation on the updated application, Environmental Statement and Marine Environmental Conditions Update Report for the proposed Islandmagee Gas Storage project.

Following a review of the notice, the Department decided to re-advertise and extend the consultation using an amended notice.

DAERA has contacted all respondents informing them of the revised consultation closing date of 27 March 2020. Respondents have also been advised that while they do not have to make a further response, they can use this period to add any additional comments in support of their views.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether he will introduce a land management strategy that rewards public goods, in line with new proposals from the Welsh Government.

Mr Poots: I am looking at what future payments can do to support sustainable farming and our cultural landscape. In doing this, I will be giving consideration to all types of support which could be available.

We need to have an agriculture industry that is environmentally sustainable in terms of impact on air and water quality, soil health, carbon footprint, and bio diversity. Like the Welsh Government, I am supportive of paying farmers to deliver public goods such as improving air and water quality, storing carbon etc, but this must be in tandem with increased productivity, improved resilience, an agriculture industry that is environmentally sustainable and an industry which operates within an integrated, efficient, sustainable, competitive and responsive supply chain. These are the four pillars of the future agricultural policy framework my Department engaged with stakeholders on in 2018.

I look forward to continued engagement with industry and stakeholders on this.

Ms S Bradley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs for an update on the establishment of an independent Environmental Protection Agency.

(AQO 281/17-22)

Mr Poots: Good environmental governance is about much more than the degree of independence of an agency.

I will consider the implications of the proposals in the New Decade, New Approach agreement for the establishment of an independent environment agency to form part of the possible outline of a future Programme for Government. It would be necessary to scope all of the potential impacts, which are likely to include significant legislative, financial and human resource issues, before making decisions.

In the meantime I am considering the establishment of an independent environmental oversight body for Northern Ireland. Subject to obtaining the relevant consent of the Assembly, I will be seeking to extend to Northern Ireland the provisions of the Environment Bill giving effect to an Office for Environmental Protection (OEP) and plan to issue a discussion document to gauge stakeholder views on this subject shortly.

Department for Communities

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for Communities for an update on budget allocations for Neighbourhood Renewal Projects for the 2020/21 financial year.

(AQW 1505/17-22)

Ms Hargey (The Minister for Communities): I am pleased to confirm that the programme budget for the Neighbourhood Renewal strategy will be maintained at current levels for the 2020/21 and 2021/22 financial years. I have written to Neighbourhood Renewal Partnership chairs and Areas at Risk representatives to inform them of this decision.

Mr Allen asked the Minister for Communities (i) how much public funding is required to deliver the Casement Park project; and (ii) how much funding her Department has requested from the Department of Finance to deliver the Casement Park project.

Ms Hargey: As you know, all parties agreed to "investing for the future" as part of the New Decade New Approach and as part of this priority, we agreed to advance plans to complete the Casement Park project.

In March 2011 the Executive allocated my Department a budget of £110 million, grant funding, to deliver the three projects within the Regional Stadia Programme. This included £62.5 million towards the redevelopment of Casement Park. UCGAA committed £15 million of Partnership funding bringing the total current, approved project budget for Casement to £77.5 million.

The current, project cost estimate is circa £110 million for Casement Park.

Cost Estimates may be subject to change and when all matters associated with the Planning Permission are concluded, project costs will need to be finalised. Then I will be in a position to consider approval of the final UCGAA Full Business Case (FBC).

When the FBC has been approved, I will, as appropriate, submit a request to increase the Casement Park Project budget to the Executive for approval.

Currently no request has been made to increase funding for the Casement Park Project.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Communities how her Department is adopting a trauma-informed approach when developing policy and legislation.

(AQW 2120/17-22)

Ms Hargey: Many of the public services provided by my Department require colleagues to recognise the signs and symptoms of trauma in people accessing support.

I am committed to protecting the most vulnerable in society, embedding a right-based approach and meeting objective need.

As outlined in New Decade, New Approach, the Department is committed to citizen and community engagement and a co-design, co-production approach to policy development.

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister for Communities to detail the total amount of funding allocated from her Department to (i) Gaelic Athletic Association; (ii) Irish Football Association; and (iii) Ulster Rugby, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 2133/17-22)

Ms Hargey: The table below provides a summary of funding provided to the Governing Bodies through a range of programmes including capital allocations under the Regional Stadia Programme. Given the period covered by the question, these figures include funding from the former Departments of Culture, Arts and Leisure and Social Development and rely on historical records and accounting procedures.

The figures do not include funding provided by arms-length bodies of the Department.

	Gaelic Athletic Association	Irish Football Association	Ulster Rugby
2014/15	£2,506,157	£17,962,695	£3,382,353
2015/16	£1,645,990	£8,756,857	£169,712
2016/17	£3,351,094	£243,495	£447,694
2017/18	£1,243,261	£43,759	£38,512
2018/19	£465,223	£44,154	£39,697

Ms Mullan asked the Minister for Communities whether her Department plans to build new bungalows in Foyle; and whether she will review the House Sales Scheme to include bungalows with 2 bedrooms or less.

(AQW 2159/17-22)

Ms Hargey: Bungalows are only included in new social housing schemes in exceptional circumstances, generally in cases where an alternative design solution would not be appropriate to meet the client's needs, or where specific Planning restrictions are applicable. Whilst there are a significant number of new social housing units planned for the Foyle area the agreed housing mix for a majority of these are yet to be finalised. A number of these schemes may include bungalow provision.

By way of example, I can advise in the past three years (2017/18 – 2019/20), there have been nine new social housing bungalows completed. A further five new social housing bungalows are currently under construction. The details of which are set out below.

Social Housing Bungalows Completed 2017/18 – 2019/20 (9 units)

Housing Association	Scheme Name	Location	Type	Nr Bungalows	Onsite Year	Completed Year
Choice	Nelson Drive Phase 2	Derry	New Build	4	2015/16	2017/18
Choice	Nelson Drive Phase 3	Derry	New Build	2	2017/18	2019/20
Apex	Coolnafinney	Eglinton	New Build	1	2017/18	2019/20
Apex	Trench Road	Derry	New Build	2	2016/17	2019/20

Social Housing Bungalows Under Construction (5 units)

Housing Association	Scheme Name	Location	Type	Nr Bungalows	Onsite Year	Completion Year
Apex	Galliagh Phase 2	Derry	New Build	3	2017/18	2020/21
Choice	Bishop Street	Derry	New Build	2	2018/19	2020/21

Programmed schemes can be lost or slip to future programme years for a variety of reasons e.g. relating to delays in acquiring sites and/or failure to secure planning permission.

In terms of a review of the House Sales Scheme and in line with New Decade, New Approach I intend to bring forward legislation as soon as possible to facilitate reversal of the Office for National Statistics' classification of Housing Associations as Non-Financial Public Corporations.

In producing this draft legislation, my department conducted two public consultations, one of which was concerned with the future of the House Sales Scheme. Options were proposed and these included abolition on the grounds that this may be necessary in order to achieve reclassification.

I am currently considering draft legislation and will update members on the way forward as soon as possible.

Ms Mullan asked the Minister for Communities how she plans to engage with Neighbourhood Renewal Partnerships in the design and implementation of an anti-poverty strategy.

(AQW 2160/17-22)

Ms Hargey: The experience and expertise of Neighbourhood Renewal Partnerships will be instrumental in the development of an anti-poverty strategy. My officials have been running a programme of engagement workshops with Partnerships, and I am attending the next event on 18th March 2020. I look forward to hearing directly from the Partnerships and Areas at Risk representatives on the design and implementation of an anti-poverty strategy.

Ms Mullan asked the Minister for Communities for an update on funding for the Neighbourhood Renewal strategy for 2020/21.

Ms Hargey: I am pleased to advise that the programme budget for the Neighbourhood Renewal strategy will be maintained at current levels for the 2020/21 and 2021/22 financial years. I have written to Neighbourhood Renewal Partnership chairs and Areas at Risk representatives to inform them of this decision.

Ms Anderson asked the Minister for Communities how she plans to bridge the gap that has developed in salaries for many community workers, including those funded under the Neighbourhood Renewal strategy.

Ms Hargey: The rights of workers employed in the voluntary and community sector are an important issue for me. I am keen to examine how my Department's activities can support a fair deal for workers in the sector including those funded under the Neighbourhood Renewal Strategy, and I have asked my officials to develop options for me to consider.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Communities what is the current size of the (i) Polish; (ii) Chinese; (iii) Slovakian; (iv) Portuguese; (v) other Eastern European; and (vi) Irish Gaelic communities whose first language is not English.

Ms Hargey: The Department for Communities does not hold the information required to answer the Member's question.

I would refer the Member to the 2011 Census, which provides detailed characteristics on ethnicity, country of birth and language.

Mr Allen asked the Minister for Communities to outline the anticipated demolition commencement date of (i) Monkscoole House; and (ii) Abbotscoole House; and what plans there are to build new social housing on the site.

Ms Hargey: A consultant has been appointed to prepare and tender a demolition scheme for Monkscoole House. At present it is intended that it will be demolished in early 2021.

The Housing Executive intends to have a business case submitted for the demolition of Abbotscoole House to the Department by the end of 2020. The residents will be further consulted as part of the preparation of the business case. It is currently estimated that it will take around two years to vacate Abbotscoole House, which suggests an indicative timescale for demolition of 2023 at the earliest. However, it is acknowledged that there is considerable opposition by the residents to its demolition and therefore the anticipated timescale may, by necessity, be longer.

As set out in the Tower Blocks Action Plan, following the demolition of Abbotscoole House, it is the Housing Executive's intention to develop the combined cleared sites of the two blocks for new social housing. An initial feasibility study indicates a put back of approximately 53 new dwellings.

Mr Allen asked the Minister for Communities to detail the correspondence between the Housing Executive and her Department concerning Monkscoole House and Abbotscoole House.

(AQW 2218/17-22)

Ms Hargey: In May 2014 the then-DSD Minister wrote to the Housing Executive requesting that they develop a maintenance and investment strategy for Tower Blocks. This Strategy recommended that each tower block, including Monkscoole House and Abbotscoole House, be subject to an individual options appraisal. The Tower Block Strategy was approved by the then-Minister in February 2016.

After extensive consultation in 2018 the Housing Executive prepared, as required, a Strategic Outline Case (SOC) document, based on its Tower Block Action Plan and submitted it to the Department for Communities in April 2019 for its consideration. The Department wrote to the Housing Executive in August 2019 confirming approval of the SOC.

The correspondence for Monkscoole House is as follows:

- In June 2019 the Housing Executive notified the Department that it intended to close Monkscoole House on health and safety grounds (a paper recommending its closure was subsequently approved by the Board of the Housing Executive at its meeting on 24th June 2019).
- On 4th December 2019 the Housing Executive submitted a business case to the Department recommending the demolition of Monkscoole House.
- On 9th December 2019 the Department wrote to the Housing Executive confirming receipt of the business case.
- On 10th January 2020 the Department wrote to the Housing Executive with its approval for the business case.

There has been no subsequent correspondence since the approval of the SOC regarding Abbotscoole House.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister for Communities (i) how many complaints have been made in respect of the viewing of pornography on library computers, in the last two years; (ii) what controls are in place to ensure illicit or pornographic material is not viewed on computers in libraries; and (iii) what measures she will take to ensure software is in place to prevent or monitor said material being brought into libraries via portable devices to be viewed on library computers.

Ms Hargey:

(i) Libraries NI has informed me that in the last two years it has received two official complaints in respect of the viewing of pornography on library computers. In addition, in a small number of cases, concerns were raised by library users relating to computer use and these were addressed by library staff, at the time, in the library. Both my Department and Libraries NI take such incidents, and the need to safeguard library users, very seriously.

(ii) The provision of public access terminals (computers) and Wi-Fi is an important and well used service provided by Libraries NI. There are typically over 950,000 sessions delivered annually across the library network and Libraries NI strive to provide the service in a safe and effective way. Computer terminals in libraries are designed and intended for general public use. To use the computers in a library it is necessary to register as a library member.

Libraries NI has put in place a range of policies and procedures including application controls (e.g. web monitoring), physical controls (e.g. configuring computer suites to facilitate ease of monitoring - computer screens facing into rooms) and ensuring staff in libraries are vigilant for any signs of breaches of computer use. This is done to create an environment that is welcoming, safe and secure.

Despite these controls, incidents of computer misuse do occur from time to time. Libraries NI takes all incidents concerning misuse of computer systems, breaches of conditions of use and safeguarding very seriously. Where an incident does take place Libraries NI submits a safeguarding report to my Department as well as carrying out a full investigation including informing the PSNI if appropriate.

(iii) Unfortunately information contained on portable devices, such as a USB pen, cannot be currently monitored and tracked in the same way that accessing websites can be tracked. However, Libraries NI is working with its IT specialists to ascertain what additional software measures and controls can be found to prevent, monitor or reduce the risk of inappropriate material of the nature referred to being viewed via portable devices brought into libraries.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister for Communities whether there are plans to redevelop the vacant Northern Ireland Housing Executive lands in Legahory, Craigavon.

Ms Hargey: There are no plans at present to redevelop the vacant Housing Executive lands in Legahory, Craigavon. There is an unmet housing need of 5 units for the wider Central Craigavon local housing area and Housing Executive land at Drumellan has been identified to help meet this need.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister for Communities what youth services are funded by her Department in the Upper Bann area.

Ms Hargey: My Department supports a range of youth activity in Upper Bann under the Neighbourhood Renewal and Areas at Risk programmes. The Housing Executive also provides support to a number of youth projects across Upper Bann.

These projects include individual tailored youth programmes which complement existing youth provision, focusing on disengaged youth and outreach work, health and well-being and making informed life choices. The projects are:

Neighbourhood Renewal Programme		19/20 Allocation
ACB&CBC Craigavon Building Sustainable Communities		£105,418.91
ACB&CBC Craigavon Sport in the Community		£81,687.71
Education Authority Youth Engagement PLUS Programme		£92,124.87
Areas At Risk
ACB&CBC – Gilford AaR Project		£21,500.00

Under the Supporting People Programme there are currently two youth programmes funded in the Upper Bann area. These services are delivered by the Simon Community and Southern Health and Social Care Trust (SHSCT). Details of each service are contained in the table below.

Service	Units funded by SP	Unit Rate (Amount per unit per week) (£)	Maximum Annual Funding Agreement Value (£)
Simon Floating Supporting Service	30	42.66	66,548
SHSCT STAY Project	5	92.71	24,105

The Housing Executive does not fund youth services directly through its Community Safety and Cohesion work; however, it supports a number of community-based programmes, some of which have a focus on engaging with younger people. A summary of the programmes currently supported in the Upper Bann Area has been outlined in the table below.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Communities for her assessment of the Belfast Citywide Tribunal Service; and whether she will provide support to enable the continuation of this service in the 2020/21 financial year.

Ms Hargey: My Department provides significant funding for the delivery of independent community based advice services, including appeals advice and representation, as follows:

- £1.8m annually, through the Community Support Programme. This is match funded by Councils who take responsibility for commissioning and distribution of funding in their local communities.
- £1.5m annually, through Fresh Start Agreement welfare mitigations funding. This supports a Freephone Helpline, additional face to face advice services and legal support.
- £122,000 annually, to the Law Centre NI, through Fresh Start Agreement welfare mitigations funding for advice and specialist appeal representation.

I am aware of the very valuable work being done on the ground by a wide range of advice organisations, including Belfast Citywide Tribunal Service, and I know much how the assistance with benefit appeals is improving people's financial and wider wellbeing.

In 2019/20, in recognition of increasing workloads being experienced by the advice sector, directly related to benefit appeals; additional funding of £320,000 was made available from Fresh Start Agreement welfare mitigations funding. Belfast City Council's additional allocation was £66,000.

I am committed to protecting those most in need across our society. Access to community based, independent advice services, including help with making an appeal, is critical to meeting that commitment.

My Department is therefore working at pace to ensure that, in line with commitments set out in 'New Decade, New Approach', the extension of welfare mitigations, including continuation of additional funding for advice services (including appeals), takes place from 31st March.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Communities whether she is aware of the challenges facing a range of arts organisations that are losing their studio space in Belfast city centre; and what plans she has to help them to find new studio hub space.

Ms Hargey: I am aware there has been press coverage regarding a recent presentation to Belfast City Council (BCC) regarding the difficulties Arts Organisations are having in obtaining secure tenancies for studio space in Belfast City Centre. Funding for the Arts by my Department is primarily delivered through the Arts Council. Arts Council in conjunction with BCC, has regular dialogue with studio groups and individual artists through the Belfast Visual Arts Forum and are aware of the issues they face when seeking creative workspace.

Arts Council have funding programmes, which Arts organisations can avail of, covering a broad range of needs of the sector. There is, however, no specific funding programme to secure studio space. Arts Councils Annual Funding programme currently provides funding of £100,185 to four studios in Belfast. Arts organisations can also apply to their Small Grants programme for funding of venue hire for workshops, training, rehearsals and performance.

BCC are implementing a new cultural strategy from April 2020. As part of the implementation of this strategy, they will be considering how best they support the Visual Arts sector in the City. Arts Council remain open to dialogue with the sector and BCC to assess the potential to support artists through sustainable studio provision.

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Communities, pursuant to AQW 346/17-22, why the Scott Review is not relevant to the current issues and circumstances.

Ms Hargey: A “regular internal governance review” of the Charity Commission was announced by the then Minister in August 2016. The review focussed on the approach taken at that time by the Department and the Charity Commission to good governance and regulation. While this review was not finalised in the absence of Ministers, the Department’s and Commission’s approaches have since been updated, taking account of up to date sectoral knowledge and best practice as it emerged here and in other jurisdictions.

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Communities, pursuant to AQW 346/17-22, what the new governance arrangements are for the Charity Commission; and how this has been taken forward.

Ms Hargey: New Partnership Agreements are being introduced with Arm's Length Bodies (ALBs) following the Department of Finance (DoF) led Departmental Sponsorship of Arm's Length Bodies Lab - Insight Report February 2018. These will replace the current Management Statement and Financial Memoranda for each ALB. My Department and the Charity Commission are currently collaborating on the new agreement which it is hoped will be finalised and agreed by DoF over the coming months. The Partnership Agreement will explain the overall governance framework within which Charity Commission operates, including the structure through which necessary assurances are provided to stakeholders, and the roles and responsibilities of partners.

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Communities to outline the costs associated with the Scott Review into the Charity Commission.

Ms Hargey: An internal governance review of the Charity Commission was taken forward by Departmental officials in 2016 to provide assurance. The Review was undertaken by two existing civil servants, in addition to their standard duties, over a period of three months. A sectoral expert provided external consultancy support at a cost of £1,232.64.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Communities what measures her Department is taking to address problem gambling.

Ms Hargey: I recognise that the current legislation on gambling is outdated; it has not kept pace with industry and technological changes and does not contain adequate protections for vulnerable people.

A consultation on the “Regulation of Gambling in NI” was launched on 16 December 2019 and closed on 21 February 2020. The purpose of the consultation is to seek views on the appropriateness of the current law and to identify areas of gambling activity which should be included in any future legislation. My officials will analyse the responses received and I hope to announce the way forward by the summer.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister for Communities how many Personal Independence Payment appeal tribunal hearings have been deferred due to problems with medical evidence since the beginning of 2019.

Ms Hargey: The current issue regarding the production of medical evidence to the tribunal arose in April 2019. When an appeal is lodged with the Appeals Service, following due process, in accordance with the regulations and established practice, the appeal is listed before a tribunal panel.

It is a matter for the panel to adjudicate on the appeal; the panel may request medical evidence from the appellant to support their appeal. This is a judicial decision. The tribunal panel, between April 2019 and December 2019, has adjourned 3,376 hearings, as a result of requests for medical evidence.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister for Communities how many Personal Independence Payment decisions have been changed or overturned as part of the mandatory consideration process, since the introduction of Welfare Reform.

Ms Hargey: The most recent Personal Independence Payment statistics were published on 26 February 2020 and covered the period up to 30 November 2019. Since the introduction of PIP on 20 June 2016 to that date, 55,870 mandatory reconsideration decisions had been made with 11,230 decisions changed.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister for Communities to outline the initiatives her Department is taking to support food banks.

Ms Hargey: Access to adequate food is vital in a rights-based society. My stated ambition is that Executive partners should work together to tackle poverty, on the basis of objective need, thereby eradicating the need for food banks in our society.

My Department has no funding relationship with food banks and Jobs & Benefits offices and Make the Call Wraparound support do not formally refer people to them. However, the Make the Call Wraparound Service supplies leaflets to food banks on request, and these are then included in food packs which are distributed by the food bank to their users. If a person subsequently contacts Make the Call, a full Needs Assessment is completed and advice on benefits, supports and services is provided.

As a response to exploring new ways of addressing food poverty, as part of the Welfare Reform Mitigations package, a Social Supermarket Pilot Programme has been running since October 2017. A Social Supermarket operates a membership system and for a small weekly fee, provides both food and wraparound services to include access to advice across a range of areas including financial capability, debt management, training, skills and volunteering opportunities, all of which aim to provide a holistic approach to helping people to become more financially secure.

Five pilots are currently being supported and I am currently considering how the Social Supermarket Programme should be developed beyond this financial year.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister for Communities whether her Department has plans to fund upgrades to play parks in the Omagh area.
(AQW 2351/17-22)

Ms Hargey: My department has no plans to fund upgrades to play parks in the Omagh area.

While responsibility for the maintenance, upgrading and accessibility of play parks rests with the owners, my Department has partnered with a number of local councils and supported some projects to provide or renovate play parks, through its Neighbourhood Renewal programme.

Records indicate that there is no current application or correspondence relating to any such proposals in the Omagh area. A project to upgrade a playpark could apply for funding from one of my department's capital funding programmes where it would be formally appraised.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Communities for an update on social housing maintenance schemes in Upper Bann over the next three years.

(AQW 2353/17-22)

Ms Hargey: The 3 tables below set out the Housing Executive's maintenance schemes for the Upper Bann constituency over the next three years.

It should be noted that:

- These schemes are subject to the availability of finance, the necessary scheme approvals being obtained and the appropriate Contractor capacity being available to carry out the works.
- Some of the schemes will include dwellings that are not in the Upper Bann constituency.

Mr Allen asked the Minister for Communities (i) to detail any underspend in the Cost of Work Allowance budget, including the total amount; (ii) what happened to the unspent money; and (iii) what steps her Department has taken to avoid future underspends.

Ms Hargey: My Department was allocated £37m for Cost of Work Allowance including administrative costs in 2019-20. Cost of Work Allowance was not progressed in 2019-20 and the full £37m of ring-fenced underspend was surrendered to Department of Finance. Underspends arising in ring-fenced budget allocations cannot be used by the Department for any other purpose.

The Department has not bid for funding for Cost of Work Allowance in 2020-21, therefore no future Cost of Work Allowance underspends will arise.

Mr Allen asked the Minister for Communities what measures her Department intends to implement to ensure extended or new mitigation underspends are avoided and the mitigations are claimed by those who require them.

(AQW 2373/17-22)

Ms Hargey: The Department for Communities review into the welfare mitigation schemes, published in March 2019, explained the reasons for the underspend in the allocated budget for the welfare mitigation schemes. This was largely attributable to the later than expected introduction of some welfare reforms and the Cost of Work Allowance scheme not being introduced.

People are not required to make a claim to receive any of the current mitigation schemes and officials remain confident that payments have been made to those who are eligible and who have been affected by the applicable welfare reforms.

Going forward it is anticipated that the availability of evidence on the delivery of the welfare mitigation schemes since 2016 will assist in forecasting future expenditure. My Department will also continue to closely monitor expenditure on all mitigation measures.

Mr Allen asked the Minister for Communities what discussion she or her departmental officials have had with the Minister of Finance or his departmental officials to ring-fence any mitigation underspends to help address poverty.

Ms Hargey: My Department's funding for Fresh Start Welfare Mitigation is ring-fenced. Underspends arising in ring-fenced budget allocations cannot be used by the Department for any other purpose and must be surrendered to Department of Finance.

Departmental officials continue to liaise with Department of Finance officials as we seek to secure funding for 2020-21 to continue to provide financial support for claimants who have been impacted by welfare reforms.

Mr Allen asked the Minister for Communities how she intends to involve the Committee for Communities and stakeholders in further developing new or extended mitigations to welfare reform.

(AQW 2375/17-22)

Ms Hargey: I am fully committed to delivering the review of the welfare mitigation measures as set out in the New Decade, New Approach Deal. I have instructed officials to develop proposals for the format of the review and I will make an announcement on this in due course after consultation with Executive colleagues and the Committee for Communities.

Since becoming Minister for Communities one of my priorities has been to engage with key stakeholders, including the Human Rights Commission and representatives of the Cliff Edge Coalition, on the future of the welfare mitigations. This programme of engagement has been invaluable in helping to identify many of the possible elements of a new package of mitigation measures.

While details of the review of the welfare mitigation measures has not yet been finalised I am committed to continued engagement with a wide range of stakeholders with an interest in social security matters. I will, of course, continue to engage fully with the Committee for Communities as the review progresses.

Mr Allen asked the Minister for Communities what discussions she or her departmental officials have had with the Minister for Finance, his departmental officials or HM Treasury regarding a resolution to the income tax liability in relation to the cost of work allowance.

Ms Hargey: As set out in the Review of the Welfare Mitigation Schemes, published in March 2019, HMRC notified the Department for Communities that payments made under the proposed Cost of Work Allowance scheme would be treated as taxable income.

As the Cost of Work Allowance is not one of the existing welfare mitigation schemes it will not be extended after 31 March 2020. On this basis my officials have not held any discussions on the taxable status of the Cost of Work Allowance scheme with DoF or Treasury.

As part of the review of the future provision of welfare mitigation measures the introduction of a scheme to provide financial support for people in working poverty may be considered. If such a scheme is proposed my officials will engage with the Department of Finance and, as appropriate, HMRC to clarify the taxable status of any payments at the earliest opportunity.

Mr Muir asked the Minister for Communities whether she will explore the possibility of increasing the availability of the Lost Lives book in local libraries.

Ms Hargey: My Department has allocated Libraries NI additional in year funding of £3.472m to buy additional book stock. This brings Libraries NI's total spend on book stock in 2019/20 to £4.372m.

Libraries NI has informed me that it has 21 copies of the Lost Lives book in stock and is keen to purchase additional copies as the book is in high demand. However, the book is currently out of print so this has not been possible. Libraries NI checks this regularly with its suppliers and will continue to do so.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Communities how many people are in receipt of a Personal Independence Payment.

Ms Hargey: The most recent Personal Independence Payment statistics were published on 26 February 2020 and covered the period up to 30 November 2019. At that date, 141,990 people were in receipt of Personal Independence Payment.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister for Communities what plans she has to develop legislation to enforce responsible gambling, including the timescale, with particular regard to restricting the use of fixed odds betting terminals.

Ms Hargey: The current legislation on gambling is outdated; it has not kept pace with industry and technological changes and does not contain adequate protections for vulnerable people, such as social responsibility requirements for gambling operators.

A consultation on the "Regulation of Gambling in NI" was launched on 16 December 2019 and closed on 21 February 2020. The purpose of the consultation is to seek views on the appropriateness of the current law and to identify areas of gambling activity which should be included in any future legislation. The operation of gaming machines, including fixed odds betting terminals, was part of the consultation. My officials will analyse the responses received and I hope to announce the way forward by the summer.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister for Communities what discussions she has had with the Minister of Health concerning support for people suffering with gambling addiction.

Ms Hargey: I have not discussed this issue with the Minister of Health but I would refer the Member for South Belfast to my answer to AQW 458/17-22

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Communities whether consultation will take place with local clubs about their needs in respect of a Sub-Regional Stadia Programme for Soccer; and will provision of modern training facilities be included as an important element of the revised programme.

(AQW 2443/17-22)

Ms Hargey: I am fully committed to delivering the Sub Regional Stadia Programme and ensuring that it meets the current and future needs of football.

Engagement has begun with key stakeholders. When this initial phase of engagement has completed, I will consider how further engagement should be taken forward including how we will seek the views of the wider football family including local clubs.

In terms of whether the provision of modern training facilities will be included in the Sub Regional Stadia Programme, decisions have not yet been made on financial allocations within the programme. However, the process for allocating funding must be fair, open and transparent and take an evidenced-based approach to the demonstration of need for investment.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Communities (i) what was the total staffing compliment of the former 26 local councils in their last full year of operation; and (ii) what is the total staffing compliment of the current 11 local councils.

Ms Hargey: The total staffing complement is taken as meaning the average number of full-time equivalent (FTE) employees as disclosed in the annual accounts for councils.

(i) The total average number of employees (FTE) for 26 councils in 2014-15 was 9,790.

(ii) The total average number of employees (FTE) in 2018-19 was 10,136.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister for Communities what funding is available for music, arts, food and cultural festivals from her Department and its arm's-length bodies; and to itemise the funding by festival that has been made available through these streams in the last five years.

(AQW 2466/17-22)

Ms Hargey: My Department makes available the Belfast City Centre Events Grant, which is used to promote footfall in Belfast City Centre. Details of itemised festivals are at Annex A.

My Department also provides funding to the 11 councils for the Community Festivals Fund. Councils provide match funding to this and administer the scheme on our behalf. Approximately 400-500 festivals are funded during each financial year; details of these can be found on the Government Funding Database <https://govfundingpublic.nics.gov.uk/>

The Arts Council has provided funding to festivals through the following programmes - Annual Funding Programme, Arts Development Fund, Arts & Older People, City of Culture Legacy, Equipment, Intercultural Arts Programme, Lottery Project Funding and the Small Grants Programme. The Small Grants Programme is the only programme currently open. Details of itemised festivals are at Annex B.

NI Screen provides funding to festivals as part of their film and exhibition funding. Details of itemised festivals are at Annex C.

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Communities whether she plans to provide mitigations for households that are affected by the Universal Credit two child limit.

(AQW 2504/17-22)

Ms Hargey: As Minister for Communities one of my priorities is to review the welfare mitigation measures committed to in the New Decade, New Approach deal. The purpose of this review is to identify and make recommendations on the provision of future welfare mitigations and I would expect that consideration will be given to the impact of the two child limit on social security benefits and tax credits.

I have instructed officials to develop proposals for the format of the review and I will make an announcement on this in due course after consultation with Executive colleagues and the Committee for Communities. Any proposals for further mitigations will be assessed in terms of affordability considered against my Department's equality and human rights responsibilities.

Mr Allen asked the Minister for Communities to detail the policy intent behind social housing multi-offers.

Ms Hargey: Multiple offers can be used by social landlords to speed up the letting process for difficult-to-let properties and to minimise the time they remain vacant, thus making best use of available stock.

Social housing is allocated by direct lettings in line with the rules of the Housing Selection Scheme. This means that, as a general rule, when a home becomes available, it is normally offered to the highest pointed relevant applicant who is on the waiting list for that Common Landlord Area. Homes can sometimes be left empty for longer than needed when that applicant refuses the offer, and the property must be offered to the next highest-pointed relevant applicant in turn, until an offer is accepted.

Currently, social landlords can decide to let properties by multiple offers if a property is difficult to let. Difficult-to-let properties are those that are void for at least four weeks: this could be due to, for example, the property's condition, its size, its history or its location. Landlords can offer a property to a maximum of ten applicants at the same time. The property is then offered to the applicant with the most points who expresses an interest.

Mr Allen asked the Minister for Communities how she will respond to social housing need in Rathcoole.

Ms Hargey: Within the Rathcoole area, 28 social housing units have been completed to date in 2019/20, 24 units are currently under construction and a further 25 units are programmed to start in 2021/22. (Details attached)

In addition to these schemes already included in the published SHDP, Apex Housing has been nominated to take forward a scheme at the former Newtownabbey High School site to include 80 new social housing units. South Ulster Housing Association is also programmed to start a 67 unit social housing scheme in 2020/21 at Knockenagh Avenue, Rathfern. These schemes will help address social housing need in the wider Rathcoole area.

Programmed schemes can be lost or slip to future programme years for a variety of reasons for example relating to delays in acquiring sites and/or failure to secure Planning Permission. Additional schemes can also be added to the SHDP in-year through the purchase of Existing Satisfactory / Off-the-shelf properties.

New Decade, New Approach commits the NI Executive to "enhanced investment in new social home starts".

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Communities to outline the total cost incurred by the Local Government Commissioner for Standards to manage complaints made since 2015.

(AQW 2541/17-22)

Ms Hargey: The Local Government Commissioner for Standards (the Commissioner) operates independently of my Department. My Department does not hold all the details of how much expenditure the Commissioner incurs.

However, the Commissioner publishes an Annual Report each year that contains funding and expenditure information, and this is available on the Commissioner's website at:

<https://nipso.org.uk/site/wp-content/uploads/2019/01/NILGCS-Annual-Report-2017-18.pdf>

The amounts of council funding that were notified to my Department by the Commissioner in each year since 2015 are set out below:

2015/2016	2016/2017	2017/2018	2018/2019	(£)
227,795	271,000	273,000	441,000

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Communities to outline the average cost to the Local Government Commissioner for Standards of investigating a complaint.

Ms Hargey: I propose to answer AQWs 2542/17-22, 2543/17-22, 2544/17-22 and 2545/17-22 together.

The Local Government Act 2014, which makes provisions for the ethical standards framework for district councillors, gives the Local Government Commissioner for Standards (the Commissioner) authority to investigate and adjudicate on allegations that councillors have breached the Local Government Code of Conduct for Councillors. All complaints regarding alleged breaches of the Code must be sent to the Commissioner's Office for consideration.

As the Commissioner operates independently, the Department does not hold information on the costs to investigate a complaint or the staffing of the Commissioner's Office. For the same reason the Department does not hold information on the time taken for investigations or the number of ethical standards complaints that have been received by the Commissioner's Office.

However, the Commissioner publishes a Report each year that contains information relevant to most of your questions, and this is available on the Commissioner's website.

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Communities how many staff are employed in the office of the Local Government Commissioner for Standards.

Ms Hargey: I propose to answer AQWs 2542/17-22, 2543/17-22, 2544/17-22 and 2545/17-22 together.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister for Communities to outline her plans to increase public housing to meet the growing need.
(AQW 2553/17-22)

Ms Hargey: I am currently considering the detailed plans for the 2020/21-2022/23 Social Housing Development Programme that have been submitted to me by the Housing Executive. Delivery of these plans will be significantly determined by future decisions on budget.

New Decade, New Approach, committed the Executive to "enhance investment in new social and affordable home starts". In 19/20, £146m has been invested against a target of 1850 starts.

Mr McGrath asked the Minister for Communities, pursuant to AQW 1108/17-22, to detail the terms of reference of the Transportation Study for Newcastle.
(AQW 2588/17-22)

Ms Hargey: The Newcastle Transportation Study covers the area at Gyratory, Donard St, Bryansford Ave, Shimna Rd, Main Street and to investigate the increase use of Donard Street. Survey records already exist for the B180 Bryansford Road, Main street Newcastle and U60207 Donard Street and the roundabout at A2 Dundrum Road/Castlewellan Road/Dunwellan Park Access. The study involves:

- 1 Construction and validation of a weekday peak and Saturday peak new Base Model;
- 2 Modelling and testing of proposed design options (2 x options) for traffic forecast scenarios;
- 3 Preliminary design layouts of proposals; and
- 4 Reporting and presentation of study area and comparing the design options / network performance.

This additional survey will therefore provide a comprehensive and detailed transport assessment for the Town Centre.

Mr Butler asked the Minister for Communities for her assessment of the impact of mental health issues on unemployment levels; and what action is being taken to provide evidence-based psychological support to people who experience mental health difficulties to successfully return to work.

(AQW 2589/17-22)

Ms Hargey: I am fully aware of the prevalence of poor mental health in our community and accept that this condition poses a barrier to work for a significant number of our people. Whilst my Department does not have a remit for providing psychological therapy, we are fully committed to supporting people with poor mental health to progress towards, move into and stay in work.

Through our employability programmes my Department provides a range of supports for people with poor mental health. Our Steps 2 Success programme offers mindfulness training, stress management and mood matters training among other interventions in partnership with Action Mental Health, Aware NI and Inspire Wellbeing. The Department also works in collaboration with the Department of Health to deliver the Condition Management Programme, (CMP). CMP is a voluntary programme facilitated by healthcare professionals including Occupational Therapists and Mental Health Nurses using evidence based principles of practice. The aim of the programme is to help participants manage their health to enable them to progress towards, move into and stay in work.

My Department has attached Work Psychologists to each of our Jobs and Benefits Offices to develop the capability and confidence of our Work Coaches to support our people with mental ill-health and other health related support needs.

Miss Woods asked the Minister for Communities (i) for an update on the timescale to bring forward the sexual orientation strategy; (ii) whether she has any plans to bring forward legislation as part the strategy; and (iii) what financial resources she will allocate to the strategy.

Ms Hargey: I am committed to developing a Sexual Orientation Strategy to address any barriers or inequalities related to Sexual Orientation and to fulfil the commitments in New Decade, New Approach and the Executive's Programme for Government. My officials will soon commence work with representatives from the LGBT sector and other key stakeholders, including officials from other Departments, to develop a Strategy. As stated in New Decade, New Approach, the Executive is committed to publishing within three months of restoration a comprehensive timetable for the development and delivery of the Strategies necessary to achieve outcomes in a Programme for Government. A draft timetable for development and delivery of the Sexual Orientation Strategy will be put to the Executive in advance of the three-month deadline.

The principles and practice of citizen and community engagement, co-design and co-production will be a key part of the development and delivery of a Sexual Orientation Strategy. I am keen to ensure the people who will be most affected by the Strategy are able to make a meaningful contribution to this work. In taking account of the evidence gathered from this engagement, full consideration will be given to legislative reform, if it is identified as a priority.

Due to the cross-cutting nature of the Strategy, responsibility for any such legislation will be determined by Ministerial remits, not restricted to my own portfolio, and will require Executive support.

The costs associated with stakeholder engagement and development of the Strategy will be met from my Department's budget. Financial resources needed to implement the Strategy cannot be anticipated at this time, and will require financial commitments from other Ministers in relation to their remits.

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister for Communities, pursuant to AQW 1565/17-22, whether her Department will be establishing a new scheme to assist local councils with dilapidated properties similar to the previous Dereliction Intervention Programme.

Ms Hargey: The Dereliction Intervention Programme was a Department of the Environment scheme launched in 2012 to address dilapidation and in pursuance of its policy objectives in relation to the environment. Responsibility for this function transferred to the Department for Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs in 2016. I do not have any plans to replicate this scheme.

Protecting and enhancing our environment is an objective shared across Central & Local Government and my previous response detailed my Department's contribution.

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Communities how many households, in each constituency, have been impacted by the Universal Credit two child limit in the last financial year; and how much worse off these families are as a consequence.

(AQW 2661/17-22)

Ms Hargey: The information requested regarding the number of households impacted by the Universal Credit two child limit and its financial consequences is not currently available.

As with other social security benefits, a single system, developed and managed by the Department for Work and Pensions, is used to collect and store Universal Credit data. My Department is working closely with the Department for Work and Pensions to improve the range of data available to us.

The latest official statistics for Universal Credit here were published on 26 February 2020 providing detail up to November 2019. That report along with previous reports, is available at www.communities-ni.gov.uk/articles/universal-credit-statistics

Miss Woods asked the Minister for Communities (i) for an update on the Syrian Vulnerable Persons Resettlement Scheme; (ii) when the last cohort of people will be welcomed under the scheme; and (iii) to outline any future plans for refugee settlement in Northern Ireland.

Ms Hargey:

- (i) The first group of 51 refugees arrived in Belfast under Syrian Vulnerable Persons Relocation Scheme (SVPRS) in December 2015. Since then, 25 groups have arrived approximately every 2 months. The most recent group arrived on 6 February 2020. A total of 1,815 Syrian refugees have been resettled here under the scheme to date.
- (ii) The last arrival under Syrian Vulnerable Persons Relocation Scheme was on 6 February 2020.
- (iii) On 17 June 2019 the British Government confirmed its ongoing commitment to refugee resettlement and announced plans for a new Resettlement Scheme which will see more refugees provided with a route to protection from April 2020. The new Resettlement Scheme will bring together the SVPRS and two other organised refugee resettlement programmes.

In August 2019 the Home Office wrote to all local authorities and the devolved administrations requesting ongoing support for refugee resettlement under the new scheme.

In the absence of Ministers, the Head of the Civil Service decided under the provisions of the Executive Formation and Exercise of Functions Act 2018 that we would continue to welcome refugees for a further year. The first group of refugees to arrive here under this arrangement will be welcomed in April 2020.

During this coming year, the SVPRS will be evaluated and the outcome will inform a decision by the Executive on whether we should continue to participate in the British programme beyond April 2021.

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Communities to outline the financial contribution each Council has paid towards the Office of the Local Government Commissioner for Standards in each year since 2015.

(AQW 2708/17-22)

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Communities whether there is a legal obligation for Post Office card account customers to switch to a mainstream account; and what will happen to these accounts once the contract ends in November 2021.

(AQW 2748/17-22)

Ms Hargey: There is no legal obligation for Post Office card account customers to switch to a mainstream account. The Post Office contract is coming to an end and ahead of contract end, customers who are able to switch to a mainstream account are being encouraged to do so. Those customers unable to manage a mainstream account will be offered an alternative payment exception service.

Following the end of the Post Office card account contract, people who have not switched to an alternative mainstream account will be migrated onto the new payment exception service and their Post Office card account will be closed.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Communities how many complaints her Department has received about Universal Credit in the last two year period.

Ms Hargey: The Department has received a total of 76 complaints since the introduction of Universal Credit on 27 September 2017. This equates to 0.12% of the current Universal Credit caseload.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Communities what consideration he has given to providing financial support to Belfast City Council to assist in the development of Belfast Zoo.

(AQW 2843/17-22)

Ms Hargey: Belfast Zoo is operated by and is the responsibility of Belfast City Council (BCC) and therefore I have not considered the provision of any financial support.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for Communities how many new claims for Universal Credit have been made in (i) 2018; and (ii) 2019; and how many of these claimants made an application to the Contingency Fund.

(AQW 2864/17-22)

Ms Hargey: Between January 2018 and November 2019 there were a total of 81,180 eligible claims to Universal Credit. This may include repeat claims. Further information on these official statistics is available here

<https://www.communities-ni.gov.uk/articles/universal-credit-statistics>

The Universal Credit Contingency Fund is a unique service provided by my Department offering an up-front payment, not a loan, to those experiencing financial hardship. From November 2017 to January 2020 there were a total of 10,367 applications to the Fund, of which 8,100 were successful.

We have recently made changes to make it easier for people to avail of the Contingency Fund by removing the need to claim an advance payment before making an application. I am continuing to review the Fund and will make sure we consider our options to further promote it.

Ms Dolan asked the Minister for Communities whether she is considering alternative or additional methods of identifying and tackling poverty.

(AQO 290/17-22)

Ms Hargey: In line with New Decade, New Approach, I will be publishing a timescale for the delivery of a new Anti-Poverty Strategy in the coming weeks. The principles and practice of citizen and community engagement, co-design and co-production will be a key part of the development and delivery of this strategy.

Together with stakeholders and colleagues from other departments, steps will be taken to ensure that the Strategy targets and measures the things that will make a real difference in identifying and tackling poverty. I am committed to the delivery of an anti-poverty strategy that targets objective need and ensures that no one is penalised for being poor.

Currently the main source of data used to measure poverty here is the Family Resources Survey (FRS). The FRS collects information on the incomes and circumstances of around 2,000 private households. My department publishes Poverty Statistics annually using the FRS data. These statistics estimate the number and percentage of people living in low income households.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for Communities how she plans to reduce the waiting list for housing, particularly for people living in housing stress.

(AQO 292/17-22)

Ms Hargey: In line with New Decade New Approach, I intend to work with Executive colleagues to progress measures that aim to reduce the number of households in housing stress.

These measures will include:

- Enabling housing associations to continue building new social homes by bringing forward legislation to facilitate reversal of the Office for National Statistics' classification of registered Housing Associations as Non-Financial Public Corporations;
- Enhancing investment and agreeing a target for new social and affordable home starts. In fact, in 2019/20, £146 million has been allocated against a target to start building 1850 new social homes; and
- Tackling the maintenance backlog for Housing Executive properties.

In addition, housing will be an outcome for the Executive within the new Programme for Government, with a focus on ensuring every household has access to a good quality, affordable and sustainable home that is appropriate for its needs.

In support of this, I will bring forward as soon as possible my Housing Programme for the next two years.

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister for Communities for a timeframe for assessing the responses to the consultation on changes to gambling laws.

(AQO 293/17-22)

Ms Hargey: The current legislation in relation to gambling here dates back to 1985; I recognise that it is outdated and takes no account of the internet and other industry advances nor does it address the serious issue of problem gambling.

The Gambling Prevalence surveys carried out by my Department have demonstrated that there is a much higher rate of problem gambling here than in other jurisdictions.

My Department's consultation on the Regulation of Gambling closed on the 21 February. The purpose of the consultation was to seek views on the appropriateness of the current law and to identify areas of gambling activity which should be included in any future legislation.

My officials are analysing over 400 responses to the consultation and I expect to receive a report in a few weeks. Following engagement with the committee, I hope to be able to announce the way forward by the summer.

With regard to sponsorship by gambling companies of local sport, I recognise the great work sports clubs do, especially for young people and that many of them rely on advertising and sponsorship to raise funds. I am, however, also very concerned at the harm caused by problem gambling in our society.

I will want to consider the contents of the consultation report on this issue and take into account the health and economic impacts before coming to any conclusions on changes to the law.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Communities when she will bring forward legislation to reclassify housing associations.

(AQO 285/17-22)

Ms Hargey: In line with New Decade, New Approach I intend to bring forward legislation as soon as possible to facilitate reversal of the Office for National Statistics' classification of Housing Associations as Non-Financial Public Corporations. I am currently considering draft legislation.

This is a very urgent issue but finalisation of the draft legislation has only been possible since the return of the Executive. My officials and I are bringing this process to a close as quickly as possible so that I may seek agreement from the Executive to introduce the legislation into the Assembly.

My officials are also working with officials in the Department of Finance, in the meantime, to secure an extension from Treasury to the current derogation – due to end on 31 March, 2020. This derogation has so far deferred an effect of the decision by the Office for National Statistics – which otherwise would have required the borrowings of Registered Housing Associations to score against the Capital Budget of my Department.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister for Communities whether Post Office Card Account holders will be denied access to their accounts following the end of the contract in November 2021.

(AQO 289/17-22)

Ms Hargey: Payments of benefits and pension into mainstream accounts provides people with greater financial inclusion as these can provide access to services such as Direct Debit, ATMs and Chip & Pin. These services are not available through the Post Office card account.

The Post Office card account contract is due to end in November 2021, and following contract end, people will no longer be able to access or use their existing Post Office card accounts.

People are therefore encouraged to switch from their Post Office card account to a mainstream account. This is considered to be a safe and reliable method of payment, providing financial inclusion and giving people a greater choice about where and when they collect their money.

For those people unable to access or manage a mainstream account, my Department will offer a replacement payment exception service.

Support is available to help people choose a product that is right for their circumstances, which may be an alternative payment exception service.

A dedicated free telephone service has been set up within DWP which offers POca users the opportunity to ask questions and provides support in choosing an account that is right for their circumstances.

Contact details are provided in letters issued on to customers by DWP on behalf of the Department, and are also available on NI Direct.

Further support can be made available by contacting the Make the Call Service.

Department of Education

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Education what plans his Department has to enable schools to participate in commemorating the centenary of Northern Ireland.

(AQW 1062/17-22)

Mr Weir (The Minister of Education): The UK Government has made a commitment in the New Decade, New Approach Deal to work with the Executive to mark the centenary of Northern Ireland in 2021; and to make available funding for related projects. I intend to participate in discussions the Executive may have with the Secretary of State about the implementation of this commitment.

Ms Mullan asked the Minister of Education whether there are any young people in Derry city excluded from school and at home without any education provision; and, if so, how many.

(AQW 3027/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Education Authority has advised that is aware of 6 pupils who have been expelled from school in Derry City who have no current educational provision. The EA's Education Welfare and Behaviour Support Services are presently supporting these pupils to secure suitable provision.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Education what progress has been made to develop an enhanced approach to careers advice, curriculum, training and apprenticeships to enhance employability and support growth, as outlined in the New Decade, New Approach.

Mr Weir: These commitments within the New Decade New Approach Agreement fall within the responsibilities of my Department and that of the Minister for the Economy. Together we will be working with Executive colleagues ensure these commitments can be progressed.

In addition the Transition of Young People into Careers (14-19) Project is a collaborative Project jointly funded and led by my department and the Department for the Economy. The Project aims to implement a more strategic and joined up approach to 14-19 education and training provision. In developing a joint 14-19 strategy, the Transition of Young People into Careers (14-19) Project is considering a range of issues including careers, curriculum delivery, progression and pathways, post-16 and funding, which will help inform how we progress some of the New Decade/ New Approach commitments.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Education to outline (i) how many children in the Upper Bann constituency were suspended or expelled from school, in each of the last five years, broken down by primary and post-primary school; and (ii) the reasons for these suspensions and expulsions.

Mr Weir:

- (i) I have arranged for a table containing the numbers of pupils suspended in the Upper Bann constituency for the most recent five years for which data are available, 2013/14 to 2017/18 to be placed in the Assembly Library.
It is not possible to disaggregate the number of pupils expelled by school type and constituency.
- (ii) I have arranged for a table containing the reasons for each suspension occasion in the Upper Bann constituency for the most recent five years for which data are available, 2013/14 to 2017/18, to be placed in the Assembly Library.
It is not possible to disaggregate the reasons for pupils' expulsions by school type and constituency.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 2199/17-22, to detail the spend on (i) school uniform grants; (ii) free school transport; and (ii) free school meals in each of the last three years.

(AQW 3075/17-22)

Mr Weir: My Department's spend in these areas is as follows:

(i) school uniform grants:

Year	School Uniform Grants
2016/2017	£4,915,000
2017/2018	£5,230,000
2018/2019	£5,174,000

(ii) free school transport:

Year	Transport Costs
2016/2017	£76,920,081
2017/2018	£80,932,056
2018/2019	£86,102,581

(iii) free schools meals:

Year	Free School Meals
2016/2017	£44,929,898
2017/2018	£46,972,740
2018/2019	£49,863,337

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of reported events of racism in our school system, broken down by school, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 3076/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Education Authority (EA) has confirmed it does not hold a central register to record reported events of racism in schools.

The EA has only received one recent report of racist bullying in 2020.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education to outline (i) the guidance concerning racism provided to schools; and (ii) what checks and balances are conducted to ensure schools investigate racism properly.

(AQW 3077/17-22)

Mr Weir:

- (i) The Education Authority (EA) Intercultural Education Service provides general advice and guidance to schools to help them welcome children and young people of different races and ethnicities.
- (ii) The EA can provide anti-racist advice to schools when requested however the EA has no investigatory role or powers.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education to confirm whether he will introduce an equivalent system to England's Operation Encompass in Northern Ireland, to promote information sharing between the PSNI and schools in relation to children who witness domestic abuse incidents.

(AQW 3098/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Department is working collaboratively with the Safeguarding Board for NI, the Police Service for NI and the Departments of Health and Justice through the "Stopping Domestic and Sexual Violence and Abuse Strategy" to consider the introduction of a pilot scheme to notify schools of domestic abuse incidents, based on the principles of Operation Encompass'. However, at this stage no conclusions have been reached.

In terms of current initiatives to combat domestic abuse, the Department supports the Women's Aid Helping Hands programme which offers training to teachers to teach sensitive subjects, in this case domestic abuse, and respond appropriately to issues and concerns raised by pupils.

The Department has also published 'Safeguarding and Child Protection in Schools, a Guide for Schools" which includes, at section 8.2, advice regarding their responsibilities in this area.

The Guide can be accessed via the following link:

<https://www.education-ni.gov.uk/sites/default/files/publications/education/safeguarding-and-child-protection-in-schools-guide-pdf-for-website-%28september-2019%29.pdf>

Ms McLaughlin asked the Minister of Education to outline the number of surplus places in Northern Ireland schools and the estimated annual cost of maintaining these surplus places.

(AQW 3119/17-22)

Mr Weir: In the 2018-19 academic year, which is the most recent year for which data are available there were 41,606 available places in Primary schools, 19,362 in Post Primary schools and 194 in Nursery schools and units. The methodology for calculating available places can be accessed through the Department's website at the link provided (Available Places documents).

<https://www.education-ni.gov.uk/node/37331>

In terms of calculating the cost of available places, under the extant Common Funding Scheme grant-aided schools do not receive funding for available places or spare capacity. They are funded based on actual pupil numbers and the characteristics of those pupils. There are certain fixed costs which will always be inescapable irrespective of school size and the number of available places a school may have.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Education to outline any measures his Department is taking to support schools who may wish to mark the centenary of Northern Ireland in 2021.

(AQW 3135/17-22)

Mr Weir: The UK Government has made a commitment in the New Decade, New Approach document to work with the Executive to mark the centenary of Northern Ireland in 2021; and to make available funding for related projects. I intend to participate in Executive discussions with the Secretary of State about the implementation of the UK Government's commitment to support and fund projects. The quantum and method of allocation of these funds have not yet been determined.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Education (i) whether he will consider including emotional and physical wellbeing into the curriculum in primary schools; and (ii) in considering the move, will he take into consideration best practice from the Republic of Ireland who have already introduced such a measure.

Mr Weir: Emotional and physical wellbeing are already an integral part of the Northern Ireland curriculum. At Key Stage 1, as a minimum, pupils have opportunities to learn about keeping themselves healthy and safe as well as developing a knowledge and understanding of self-esteem, self-confidence and their own feelings and emotions. At Key Stage 2 pupils are given the opportunity to further their knowledge in sustaining health and in developing effective strategies to manage their feelings and emotions and the feelings and emotions of others.

In physical education (PE) young people are provided with opportunities to develop their knowledge, understanding and skill in a range of activities. Young people should experience a sense of fun, enjoyment and achievement through progressively challenging and innovative activities and appreciate the benefits of physical activity and its relationship with good health.

I acknowledge the positive impact on mental health and emotional wellbeing that physical exercise can have and through investing in the Sports Programme, am ensuring that pupils are learning about mental health, resilience and emotional wellbeing.

There is no evidence that prescribing detailed lists of compulsory subject content produces better outcomes for young people. Schools have the flexibility to adapt their approach and use a variety of circular resources which best suit the needs of their pupils and to use customised approaches to ensure that children and young people are both safe and well informed about the range of issues that they face in a modern society.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the rationale behind asking schools to carry out a stocktake each year; (ii) how this is recorded in their annual budget; and (iii) whether he will review the effectiveness of the practice.
(AQW 3144/17-22)

Mr Weir:

- (i) School stocktakes were introduced in 2017-18 with the key aim of enhancing financial management in schools.
- (ii) Recognising the value of stock held by schools ensures that only items which are used in the financial year are recorded as expenditure for that year. The value of any unused items at the stocktake date is deducted from the school's expenditure and then included in future periods when the items are actually used.
- (iii) The Education Authority is committed to continuous review and improved efficiency in financial processes, including the school stocktake process, and has made several improvements in the process since its inception. The effectiveness of this practice will continue to be reviewed.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Education to detail the outcome of the home to school transport review, carried out in December 2018.

(AQW 3147/17-22)

Mr Weir: The review of the home to school transport policy was launched in December 2018 and as the review is still ongoing, no decisions have yet been taken with regard to any future policy changes.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Education to detail the proportion of teachers currently job sharing in the Upper Bann constituency.

(AQW 3149/17-22)

Mr Weir: The number of teachers currently job sharing in Upper Bann is 33 out of a total of 1,229 teachers in the constituency.

Source: The information above was extracted from the teachers' payroll system.

Notes:

- 1 The figures supplied are for permanent teachers taken as at 6 March 2020 based on information supplied by employers.
- 2 The figures supplied do not include voluntary grammar schools. These schools run their own payrolls and the Department of Education does not have access to this data.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Education how many teachers have taken early retirement and then subsequently taken up temporary teaching positions, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 3150/17-22)

Mr Weir: The number of teachers who have taken early retirement and then subsequently taken up temporary teaching positions in each of the last three complete financial years are set out in the table below:-

Financial Year	Number of teachers
2016-17	56
2017-18	60
2018-19	40

Source: Information extracted from the Teachers' pension & payroll systems.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the number of times children with special needs were unable to be brought to school due to the unavailability of regular school transport buses in the 2016-17 and 2018-19 academic years; and (ii) whether compensation was paid to parents to cover the alternative transport arrangements they had to make.

(AQW 3151/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Education Authority has advised that it does not hold the data requested. It has confirmed that while it is unusual for a travel arrangement not to operate for a sustained period, in such circumstances it will liaise with parents to explore alternative arrangements and if necessary provide financial assistance.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education to outline the plans for additional teaching and non-teaching staff in light of a potential coronavirus outbreak.

(AQW 3160/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Department of Education (DE) is not the employer of teachers, and is not responsible for the appointment of teachers. Teachers are employed by the Board of Governors (BoG) for each school setting, with the recruitment, selection and appointment of teachers carried out in conjunction with the relevant employing authority; such as the Education Authority (EA) in respect of controlled schools and the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS) in respect of maintained schools.

I have asked the EA and CCMS to outline their plans for additional teaching and non-teaching staff in light of a potential coronavirus outbreak.

EA continues to provide advice, based on PHA guidance, to all schools and an EA cross directorate business continuity planning group has been established and will assist with coordination of services and communication to schools as the situation progresses.

Schools in Northern Ireland already rely on a contingent workforce to meet demands for short term emergency cover and all schools have access to the Northern Ireland Substitute Teacher Register (NISTR) to arrange temporary cover. There are 9,989 active teachers on this register who have all gone through the necessary pre-employment checks. The booking system is available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

All schools have a knowledge of non-teaching staff within their local area that they regularly call upon to cover absences in the school. Procedures are in place to ensure the safeguarding of pupils in these circumstances and to ensure that these staff can be engaged at short notice and receive the appropriate payment.

At this stage CCMS is following PHA advice and keeping close contact with colleagues in DE and EA. The impact of an outbreak in a school will be challenging, however, CCMS is working with statutory agencies and following their guidance and advice. CCMS will continue to engage with DE and EA colleagues on a daily basis and will follow government guidance and advice.

Mr O'Dowd asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 2258/17-22, how this timeframe is quality controlled.

Mr Weir: The Education Authority (EA) aims to respond to all correspondence and enquiries within 10 working days. This timeframe is quality controlled through a Performance Improvement Report which is reviewed and approved by the Corporate Leadership Team at their quarterly planning and performance meetings. 'Processing of Correspondence (COR) cases' is the metric used by the EA in measuring its performance against the target of responding within 10 working days.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education whether the membership of the committee that conducted the Education Authority's internal report into Special Educational Needs had no conflict of interest.

Mr Weir: I am informed that the team was selected by the Chief Executive of the Education Authority on the basis of their skills and experience in the key areas identified for examination by the Audit of Practice. I am also advised by the Chief Executive that no member of the team had a conflict of interest.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 2587/17-22, is there a timetable for the various stages of the ongoing consultation period.

Mr Weir: The formative part of the statutory Development Proposal (DP) process is not subject to defined timeframes, involving as it does exploratory discussions and the consideration of options, however, once this activity is complete, as described in my previous answer, it may result in the publication of a DP.

At this point in the process greater definition can be provided, as publication triggers a two month period of consultation during which expressions of support or opposition may be submitted to the Department. All pertinent evidence will then be collated by my officials and I will receive advice to inform a decision.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the schools that are involved in the North Belfast Principals Group; (ii) the details of all funding awarded to this group; (iii) the criteria used to award funding; and (iv) what steps his Department is taking to ensure that schools based in areas of multiple deprivation are supported.

Mr Weir: The North Belfast Principals Group consists of the following 22 schools.

- |  |  |
|--|--|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>■ Ballysillan Primary School</li> <li>■ Bunscoil Bheann Mhadagain</li> <li>■ Carr's Glen Primary School</li> <li>■ Cavehill Primary School</li> </ul> | <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>■ Cliftonville Integrated Primary School</li> <li>■ Currie Primary School</li> <li>■ Hazelwood Integrated</li> <li>■ Holy Cross Boys Primary</li> </ul> |
|--|--|

- Holy Cross Girls' Primary
- Holy Family Primary
- Ligoniel Primary School
- Lowwood Primary School
- Mercy Primary School
- Our Lady Of Lourdes
- Our Lady's Girls' Primary Sch.
- Sacred Heart Primary School
- Seaview Primary School
- St Mary's Star of the Sea
- St Patrick's Primary School
- St Vincent de Paul Primary School
- St. Therese Of Lisieux P.S.
- Wheatfield Primary School

Funding is awarded to these schools on an individual basis via the following:

- Common funding formula (CFF) budget share
- Targeting Social Need (TSN) funding
- Extended Schools Allocation

A total of £23.3 million has been made available to these schools as part of core school budgets in 2019/20 including £3.7 million in respect of Targeting Social Need to support pupils from socio-economically deprived backgrounds. A further £414,000 has been allocated through the Extended Schools (ES) programme this year which includes monies made available to support the operation of local ES Clusters.

In addition, and separately to this group is the North Belfast Primary Principals Support Programme (NBPPSP). It presently consists of all of the above listed schools with the exception of Holy Cross Boys' Primary School.

This group is a non-constituted body and the decision as to which schools to include regarding this intervention lies with the 21 school principals involved.

The NBPPSP received £250,000 in 2019/20 to cover a range of initiatives aimed at addressing educational underachievement linked to socio-economic disadvantage.

My Department has a wide range of policies and programmes in place to ensure that schools based in areas of multiple deprivation are supported. These include but are not limited to Targeting Social Need funding (circa £77 million p.a.), Sure Start (circa £25 million p.a.), Extended Schools programme (circa £9 million p.a.), Full Service Programmes in North and West Belfast (£770,000 p.a.), Sharing the Learning Programme (West Belfast) (£200,000 p.a.) and West Belfast Community Project (Shankill) (£80,000 p.a.).

Ms Mullan asked the Minister of Education how many Looked After Children under the age of 16 in Derry city are not in education and are not receiving education support.

Mr Weir: Currently the Education Authority (EA) is aware that less than 5 children in Derry City Schools who are defined as Looked after Children are not in education and not receiving education support.

This information needs to be treated with caution as the EA is not always notified regarding children who are defined as Looked after Children.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Education to outline his Department's plans to facilitate the expansion and development of Dean Maguire College, Carrickmore.

(AQW 3351/17-22)

Mr Weir: Any significant change to education provision such as an increase in a school's enrolment number requires the publication of a development proposal. As managing authority for schools in the Maintained sector, any significant change proposed at Dean Maguire College would be a matter for the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools in the first instance.

The Education Authority's extended Annual Action Plan April 2019 to March 2020 (the Action Plan) sets out the work programme of the planning and managing authorities to address specific issues at a local level. As Dean Maguire College, which is located in the Fermanagh and Omagh Local Government District, does not feature in the Action Plan, there are currently no plans for any significant changes at this school.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education for an update on the tendering process for the C2K contract for schools.

Mr Weir: The Education Authority has ensured that the existing C2k Education Network service continues to deliver a high quality, sustainable ICT infrastructure, connectivity and resources to schools in support of school management, teacher professional development and the delivery of the Northern Ireland curriculum.

In order to maintain the stability and integrity of the existing C2k service, EA sought and secured approval from DE and DoF for the modification of the current contract using Public Contracts Regulations. This extension has ensured continuity of existing education technology services across the entire school estate initially through to 31st March 2021. This extension also identifies an additional period of time to accommodate a transition from the C2k Education Network to future ICT services known as ETS (Education Technology Services). This migration is anticipated to be completed during the 2022/23 financial year.

In parallel with these extension arrangements, the Education Authority has established an ETS Programme team to take forward the specification and tendering of new ICT services for schools. The ETS Programme has progressed through its initiation and start-up phases and is currently pursuing approval of an outline business case to enable tendering to begin later in 2020. The ETS Programme not only seeks to deliver replacement services currently delivered by C2K but also avail of synergies, to deliver a more holistic education technology service to schools.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the reliability of the AQE Common Entrance Assessment (CEA) and PPTC Entrance Assessment (GL) tests as assessments of literacy, numeracy and ability.

Mr Weir: My Department does not regulate or administer the transfer tests used by selective post-primary schools. It does not endorse either test and makes no assessment about their robustness or reliability as assessments of literacy and numeracy skills. Language and Literacy and Mathematics and Numeracy are core Areas of Learning of the statutory curriculum in primary schools and across Key Stages 1 and 2, teachers enable pupils to develop knowledge, understanding and skills in topics such as reading and writing and in a range of mathematical processes including number and number notation, measures and handling data.

My Department issued guidance in 2016 setting out how primary schools may supply support materials, carry out preparations for tests during core teaching hours, coach in exam technique and familiarise pupils with the test environment. However, that guidance was not prescriptive and it is a matter for individual schools to judge how much core teaching time they devote to preparing pupils for the tests.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of core primary teaching hours are spent preparing pupils for AQE Common Entrance Assessment (CEA) and PPTC Entrance Assessment (GL) tests.
(AQW 3365/17-22)

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Education for an update on progress since New Decade, New Approach to establish an expert group to examine the links between persistent educational underachievement and socio-economic background, particularly due to the identified underachievement amongst working class Protestant boys.
(AQW 3379/17-22)

Mr Weir: I am currently considering options in respect of establishing the Expert Group to examine and propose an action plan to address links between persistent educational underachievement and socio-economic background, including the long-standing issues facing working-class, Protestant boys.

Tackling educational underachievement is critical to improving the life chances of children and young people and it is important that we progress this work swiftly. Proposals regarding how the Expert Group is to be established and the timescales involved will come before the Executive as soon as possible.

Ms Rogan asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) how many pupils in the South Down constituency are waiting longer than the 26 week timeframe for a special educational needs statement; and (ii) what steps the Education Authority is taking to address this situation.
(AQW 3400/17-22)

Mr Weir:

- (i) This has been interpreted as the number of referrals to the Education Authority (EA) for a statutory assessment (a statutory assessment may result in a statement or a note in lieu of a statement).

As of 11 March 2020, the number of pupils in the South Down constituency waiting longer than 26 weeks for completion of the statutory assessment process was 38. Of these 38 pupils, 16 had valid exceptions.

In recognition that circumstances may arise where it is impractical for the EA to meet the time limit prescribed in statute, certain detailed exceptions (known as valid exceptions) apply.

- (ii) Following a recent audit of practice, the EA has been focusing on those statutory assessments falling outside the 26-week framework, but not to the detriment of those now entering the statutory assessment process.

The Authority has also provided additional resources to support front line staff to meet the level of demand.

The Authority is also actively considering how digitalisation of some current manual tasks could further streamline processes and enhance efficiency.

Ms McLaughlin asked the Minister of Education (i) to publish the GCSE examination results and A-level examination results for St Joseph's Boys School, Derry, for each of the last five years; and (ii) for comparison, the average examination results for Northern Ireland's non-selective post-primary schools over the same period.

Mr Weir: Headline GCSE and A-level examination results from 2014/15 to 2017/18 for St Joseph's Boys' School (School ID: 223-0131), and average examination results for Northern Ireland's non-grammar post-primary schools, are accessible on the Examinations Achievements tab within the Statistical Information section on Schools+ (<https://www.education-ni.gov.uk/services/schools-plus>). These figures include equivalent qualifications.

Information for 2018/19 will be accessible through Schools+ later this month.

For ease of access, data for the last five years are detailed below in Tables 1 and 2.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many year 8 places does St Columbanus' College, Bangor, currently have; and how many will it have for the 2020-21 term.

(AQW 3406/17-22)

Mr Weir: The admissions numbers for the listed schools are depicted in the table below. The 'Approved Admissions Number' column denotes each school's usual admissions number. A school may at any time request a Temporary Variation to its admissions number to increase its intake, therefore the numbers for 2019/20 and 2020/21 are correct at this point in time but may be varied in response to future requests from schools.

(AQW 3408/17-22)

Mr Weir: The admissions numbers for the listed schools are depicted in the table below. The 'Approved Admissions Number' column denotes each school's usual admissions number. A school may at any time request a Temporary Variation to its admissions number to increase its intake, therefore the numbers for 2019/20 and 2020/21 are correct at this point in time but may be varied in response to future requests from schools.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education to detail the cost of commissioning Peter Tymms to make recommendations on post-primary transfer tests.

(AQW 3447/17-22)

Mr Weir: The total cost to my Department of commissioning Professor Peter Tymms to make recommendations on post-primary transfer tests was £26,675.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education for an update on his Department's policy on GCE examination resits.

(AQW 3518/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Department's policy regarding GCE re-sits is that there is one re-sit opportunity for AS and /or A2 courses in June of each year.

Ms Sheerin asked the Minister of Education whether he will give a direction to schools to start teaching menstrual wellness as part of reproductive education.

(AQW 3551/17-22)

Mr Weir: The current curriculum already provides our schools with the flexibility across the Key Stages to educate young people about menstrual wellbeing. For example, at Key Stage 3 young people are provided with opportunities to explore self-awareness and their personal health and to develop an understanding about, and strategies to manage, the effects of change on their body and mind and to explore the implications of sexual maturation. To support teaching, the Council for the Curriculum Examinations and Assessment has produced a range of guidance and resources around personal development including menstrual well-being. As in all areas of the curriculum, the teaching of these topics will be age appropriate.

It is important to note that, unlike other jurisdictions, the curriculum here is not made up of a mandatory list of subjects or subject content that every school must teach. Instead, subject to meeting minimum requirements in Areas of Learning across all Key Stages, it is designed to give schools flexibility to use a variety of approaches and curricular resources that reflect, and are responsive to, the needs of pupils.

Ms Rogan asked the Minister of Education for an update on the review of procurement in schools.

(AQO 319/17-22)

Mr Weir: As the managing authority for controlled schools and the funding authority for all grant funded schools, the Education Authority (EA) is responsible for ensuring that effective procurement practice is embedded across the education sector to provide best value for money. These schools are therefore required to comply with the EA's purchasing and contracting procedures for the procurement of any works, equipment, goods or services, using EA contracts where they exist.

All grant funded schools are also required to operate within the procurement legal framework and to adhere to Northern Ireland Public Procurement Policy and the relevant Northern Ireland Procurement Guidance Notes.

Controlled schools have the autonomy to procure any non-contracted items via the EA's i-Procurement system for goods or services not exceeding £5,000. For these procurements, two quotations are required to be provided by schools to demonstrate value-for-money has been achieved. Petty cash may also be used by schools to purchase low value or incidental items that cannot be procured through the i-Procurement system.

For contracted procurements the EA work to ensure best value for money by conducting competitive tender exercises (in compliance with legislation and the Northern Ireland Public Procurement Policy) and awarding to the bidder(s) that provide the best value for money with respect to both quality and cost (lowest cost alone does not necessarily represent best value for money). Controlled and maintained schools significantly benefit from operating within the EA procurement boundary in terms of economies of scale, having the administration of procurement handled by the EA and being assured that they are fully compliant with all procurement legislation.

These schools have access to over 700 competitively tendered compliant contracts. This provides schools with improved supplier risk management, provides increased buying power that supports maintenance of supply in difficult market conditions, supports more effective contract management that ensures supplier accountability and reduces the risk of supplier non-compliance with contractual and legal obligations for example, Health and Safety and Insurance requirements.

In 2018, the EA introduced new Procurement Governance structures and published its Procurement Strategy 2018-2021. A number of initiatives taken forward as part of the Strategy to progress the transformation of the EA's procurement service are nearing completion, including a review of Minor Works, Education Technology Services and the establishment of a Procurement Transformation Board, all of which include representation or oversight by the Department.

I am aware that this has been raised by schools and I am keen to examine this in greater detail.

Department of Finance

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance, whereas the published cost of special advisers salaries is £876,498, what is the gross cost, including employer National Insurance and pension contributions.

(AQW 2845/17-22)

Mr Murphy (The Minister of Finance): The annual salary costs of special advisers in the current Administration is £878,498 with additional employer National Insurance costs of £104,562.48. The annual salary cost of special advisers at the end of the previous Administration was £1,162,894 with additional employer National Insurance costs of £142,568.

Opting in or out of the government pension scheme is a personal matter for individual special advisers.

Ms Bailey asked the Minister of Finance whether the Northern Ireland Building Regulations Advisory Committee has met to review current building regulations and, in particular Article 43 B, which deals with nearly zero-energy requirements for new buildings by the 31 December 2020.

(AQW 3023/17-22)

Mr Murphy: Our statutory building regulations advisory committee, NIBRAC, has met to review proposed legislative amendments to the building regulations. Regulation 43B (nearly zero-energy requirements for new buildings) has been included in committee discussions.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Finance to detail how much each Executive Department spent on private sector security in each of the past five years.

(AQW 3099/17-22)

Mr Murphy: Although Construction & Procurement Delivery (CPD) arrange contracts for private sector security, each Executive Department may avail of those contracts and are therefore responsible for their own expenditure. On that basis I can only provide expenditure on private sector security that is specific to the Department of Finance. The expenditure incurred for the past five years is as follows:

2015-16	850,770
2016-17	964,737
2017-18	1,017,226

2018-19	1,130,385
2019-20 (10 months unaudited)	1,028,346

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance whether he intends to legislate to remove discrimination from public service schemes made under the Public Service Pensions Act (Northern Ireland) 2014 from April 2015, further to the McCloud Judgement.

(AQW 3155/17-22)

Mr Murphy: To fully remove discrimination from the devolved public service pension schemes whilst also ensuring that scheme members can keep benefits that they have earned to date, is expected to require changes to the Public Service Pensions Act (Northern Ireland) 2014.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance (i) for his assessment of the McCloud Judgement; (ii) how the McCloud Judgement impacts members of public service pension schemes in Northern Ireland; and (iii) to detail the estimated costs to his Department to address discrimination found in the McCloud Judgement.

Mr Murphy: There is a clear need to address age discrimination in devolved public service pension schemes as a consequence of the McCloud ruling. This is supported by legal advice.

This is a complex issue, as some members of the devolved public service pension schemes will have been better off in the old schemes, and some better off in the new schemes. The solution must ensure members can keep their accrued rights, whilst also removing discrimination for the future.

The quantum of any costs associated with addressing age discrimination in the devolved public service pension schemes is not yet available. Any increased expenditure on public service pensions, as a result of decisions to be taken in relation to the McCloud ruling, would be expected to be paid out over future decades as current public sector workers retire and their pensions start to be paid.

Pensions in payment are paid through AME (Annually Managed Expenditure) while the level of contributions required from employers is set in actuarial valuations of the schemes. The next valuations will set employer contribution rates from 2023. A number of factors could affect the valuations between now and then and it is too early to say whether employer contribution rates will increase from 2023.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Finance for an estimate of the cost of undertaking the next census.

Mr Murphy: The additional cost of the 2021 Census programme which runs from 2015 to 2025 is projected to be £35 million.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Finance when he will announce the date of a new census.

(AQW 3258/17-22)

Mr Murphy: Subject to legislative approval the next census will take place on 21st March 2021.

Ms Armstrong asked the Minister of Finance whether he has any plans to increase transparency by putting Land and Property Service maps online with a function for the public to be able to view onscreen for free and to pay to print or download portfolios.

(AQW 3265/17-22)

Mr Murphy: Land Registry map and Folio searches are currently provided online through the LandWeb system. Under the LandWeb PFI contract, a fee must be paid to the system supplier for the provision of this information. Making maps and searches free online would require this fee to be cross-subsidised from the fees paid by customers for other Land Registry services.

The current LandWeb contract is due to expire in July 2021. Land & Property Services has started pre-procurement work to define the specification for a new digital solution to replace the LandWeb system. The new solution will be based on a 'digital first' approach with improved data quality and structure. This will enable a modern, more accessible and efficient service which is designed around the needs of the customers and users of the service. A full review of the process for carrying out searches and the charges that are levied will be undertaken as part of the procurement of the new system.

My department has started a programme to identify and map land and property assets held by government bodies. As the programme progresses, details of all land owned by departments and public bodies will become available through a free public web portal, thereby increasing the transparency around the ownership of public assets.

Mr McGrath asked the Minister of Finance whether he will provide specific financial assistance in the forthcoming budget to deal with a coronavirus outbreak.

Mr Murphy: The Executive has announced a substantial package of measures to help local business cope with the economic impact of the coronavirus outbreak.

This includes £100 million of support through the rating system and grants for small business and those in retail, hospitality and tourism.

Further funding from Treasury has now been made available and the Executive will do all in its power to ensure that appropriate financial assistance is given to support people and businesses.

Mr Catney asked the Minister of Finance what advice his Department has provided to the Northern Ireland Civil Service on coronavirus.

(AQW 3397/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The Department of Finance (DoF) has provided the following advice to the Northern Ireland Civil Service on COVID-19:

Specific guidance for managers and staff covering key matters for COVID-19 (coronavirus) including:

- How absence relating to COVID-19 (both symptomatic and confirmed) will be handled.
- What to do if a staff member has or thinks they have COVID-19 infection or has been exposed to the virus.
- What to do if a member of staff falls within a high risk category.
- What to do if a staff member experiences symptoms of COVID-19 whilst at work.
- What to do to try to ensure social distancing.
- How special leave considerations will apply for example in the case of caring responsibilities or a school closure.
- Frequently asked questions.
- How to record absences / special leave relating to COVID-19 on HRConnect.

The guidance provided is based on Public Health Agency (PHA) advice. Given that the situation is fluid and rapidly changing, guidance will be updated on a regular basis as circumstances regarding COVID-19 develops.

The guidance is readily available on the NICS intranet/Employee Services Portal (ESP) (most recent update 18th March 2020); an e mail was sent on the 5th March 2020, to all NICS members of staff who have access to Outlook, with a direct link to the ESP. Where a staff member does not have access to Outlook / the NICS intranet managers are required to bring this information to their attention.

NICS HR have advised our trade unions colleagues of the approach being taken by the NICS in the handling of COVID-19 absences.

Mr O'Toole asked the Minister of Finance what assessment his Department has made of the impact of a coronavirus outbreak on the Northern Ireland Civil Service; and what plans his Department has in place to manage the impact.

(AQW 3405/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The Department of Health is the lead department for the COVID-19 health response and the Executive Office (TEO) are supporting the co-ordination of the wider non-health preparedness. My department is providing input to TEO together with other NICS Departments. I can confirm that all business areas in my department have business continuity plans in place to provide for the continuation of priority services in the event of a reasonable worst case scenario outbreak across DoF staff.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance whether he will consider suspending business rates for a minimum of two months as an Executive response to COVID-19.

Mr Murphy: As part of the Executive's response to COVID-19, I have announced an initial three months rates holiday.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Finance (i) what measures he will put in place to help small to medium-sized businesses impacted by coronavirus; (ii) what are the Barnett consequentials following the UK Treasury's plans to cancel business rates for small to medium-sized businesses; (iii) how much he anticipates a similar proposal to cancel business rates in Northern Ireland would cost the Executive; and (iv) how much additional monies he expects the Executive to initially receive under the Barnett consequentials for the Health Service to help with additional pressures in dealing with COVID-19.

Mr Murphy: You will be aware that the Chancellor in his Budget on Wednesday 11 March 2020 announced a series of measures to provide support through the economic disruption caused by COVID-19.

We have subsequently been allocated £900m of funding in relation to Covid-19 measures, including for those that will be directed to the health service and businesses.

In respect of business rates specifically, I have now announced emergency measures to reduce the cost of rates on businesses at this unprecedented time. As part of this package, all businesses will pay zero rates for the next three months, effectively a reduction of 25% applied to the billable amount – this step will save businesses £100m. I am also deferring the issuing of rates bill from April until June to help businesses with short-term cash flow and am bringing proposals to Ministerial colleagues for a reduction in the regional business rate.

We have also announced two new grant schemes.

- COVID Small Business Grant - An immediate grant of £10,000 will be provided to all small businesses who are eligible for the Small Business Rate Relief Scheme. This matches the scheme announced in England.
- Hospitality, Tourism and Retail Sectors Grant Scheme - An immediate grant of £25,000 will be provided to companies in these sectors with a rateable value up to £51,000. This matches the amounts provided to these sectors by the scheme in England.

Together these two schemes will provide some £370m of assistance to some of our most vulnerable businesses.

We will be considering further measures in the coming days.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Finance whether he will introduce a business rate holiday for business affected by COVID-19.

(AQW 3704/17-22)

Mr Murphy: I have now announced emergency measures to reduce the cost of rates on businesses at this unprecedented time. As part of this package, all businesses will pay zero rates in April, May and June, effectively a reduction of 25% to the billable amount after all other reliefs have been applied. This will save businesses some £100m. I am also deferring the issuing of all rate bills from April until June to help businesses with short-term cash flow and I will deliver a reduction in the Regional Rate for businesses.

Mr Muir asked the Minister of Finance what measures he plans to take in relation to non-domestic rates, in light of challenges being experienced by businesses due to COVID-19.

Mr Murphy: I have now announced emergency measures to reduce the cost of rates on businesses at this unprecedented time. ## Department of Health

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health what consideration he is giving to developing an oral health strategy, in line with the recommendation from the Northern Ireland Affairs Committee at Westminster.

(AQW 1113/17-22)

Mr Swann (The Minister of Health): The development of a new Oral Health Strategy would carry a significant resource cost and, in the context of the range of financial pressures facing Health and Social Care, it has not been possible in past years to identify funding for that. A dedicated Dental Public Health expert, or group thereof, which would come at a significant cost due to the complex and extended nature of both developing a new Oral Health Strategy and pre-requisite Oral Health Needs Assessment. The only dental professionals already within the Department or Board that have the appropriate additional knowledge, skills, and qualifications, do not have the workload capacity to even support on such matters. Business planning would also be necessary for the other professional and administrative support that would be required from within the Department and HSC organisations.

That said, my Chief Dental Officer's professional view is that, within that context, most of the 2007 Oral Health Strategy remains fit for purpose, given the current evidence-base and cost-effectiveness of available interventions, and available funding.

We are though making excellent progress in some key oral health outcomes. For example, recently emerging data for 5 year-old children provides evidence of further significant improvement in respect of the relevant Oral Health Strategy targets. One target was to improve the then 39% of 5 year-old children who were decay free, to a level of at least 50% within ten years. In 2013 the data indicated we had achieved a figure of 60%, and the emerging 2018/19 data indicates that around 70% of our 5 year-old children are decay free. There have also been very significant additional improvements in terms of the severity of dental disease in this age group of children. Another Oral Health Strategy target for 5 year-olds aimed to improve upon the relevant technical metric by a threshold of 24% and 2013 data highlighted a 44% improvement. The latest data appears to indicate that a further 18% improvement has been achieved, again in around half the original time period, since then. As these younger children grow up, notable further improvements in the oral health outcomes of 12 and 15 year-old cohorts are consequently expected

These are notable successes within the extant strategic direction, especially given the many regional differences we face at a UK level that enable England to generally achieve better child oral health outcomes.

And the work continues. My Chief Dental Officer has established Oral Health Options Groups to allow for the consideration and development of further oral health policy options for the two most urgent groups at present, namely children and the elderly. In parallel with this, I will continue to pursue additional funding for this important area.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Health to detail the number of contracted GPs who are employed specifically for the GP Out Of Hours service in the Southern Health and Social Care Trust.

Mr Swann: There are 18 GPs with contracted hours. There are 130 GPs who hold a Bank Contract, which means they can work as and when they choose. In a typical month, approximately 40 out of the 130 GPs will actively participate in the GP Out Of Hours service.

Ms Flynn asked the Minister of Health to detail the waiting lists for counselling services in Belfast, broken down by district.

(AQW 2779/17-22)

Mr Swann: Please find information detailed below.

Table 1. Waiting times for talking therapies (psychological therapies) as at 31 January 2020

HSC Trust	0-13 Wks (0-91 days)	>13 wks (92+ days)	Total Waiting
Belfast	582	890	1,472

Source: Health and Social Care Board

Belfast Trust have advised that the breakdown of these figures by district is not held centrally.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Health what is the current waiting time, in each Health and Social Care Trust, from request or referral for a home care package until the package is in place.

(AQW 2804/17-22)

Mr Swann: The Department does not hold this information centrally and cannot provide within the timeframe.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health what the current annual salary is for a full time pharmacist in (i) primary care; and (ii) secondary care.

(AQW 2849/17-22)

Mr Swann: Annual salaries for pharmacists working within GP Federations are as follows:

- General Practice Pharmacist: £34,330 - £36,410
- Lead General Practice Pharmacist: £44,733 - £46,814

Within secondary care, salaries for pharmacists fall under Agenda for Change Pay Bands and Pay Points for Health and Social Care (HSC) staff. A post qualifying pharmacist normally enters at Band 6. The current starting salary is £30,401 which reflects the recent refresh of Agenda for Change pay structures. Staff can progress through the Agenda for Change bands and further details on the associated salary levels is available from:

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health (i) when the professional allowance for community pharmacists was introduced; (ii) at what annual rate; and (iii) what is the current rate.

(AQW 2850/17-22)

Mr Swann: The professional allowance for community pharmacists was introduced in 1987 at an annual rate of £18,000 per community pharmacy. The current allowance is £20,900 per community pharmacy per annum.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Health what progress has been made toward the development of a successor strategy and action plan to the Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs Phase 2, as outlined in New Decade, New Approach.

(AQW 2893/17-22)

Mr Swann: As reflected in "New Decade, New Approach", my Department has begun the development of a new substance misuse strategy. Building on the pre-consultation process that was undertaken in late 2019, a group has been brought together to co-produce the development of this new strategy and I plan to ensure it is designed with input from all key stakeholders, including service users, to ensure that we improve services, and take innovative and effective action to reduce alcohol and drug related harm. A formal consultation will be brought forward in due course.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Health what moves have been made to improve stroke and breast assessments, as indicated in New Decade, New Approach.

(AQW 2894/17-22)

Mr Swann: My Department has completed public consultations on 'Reshaping Breast Assessment Services' and 'Reshaping Stroke Care' to inform the identification of improvements to both services. In total 4,630 written responses were received in relation to breast assessment services, with 19,510 responses received in relation to stroke services.

I intend to carefully consider the evidence available, the consultation analyses and the views of all those who responded before deciding on the way forward to deliver improvements in both services. I will, of course, update the House in due course.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Health what moves have been made to improve emergency care and day case elective care, as indicated in New Decade, New Approach.

Mr Swann: Prototype daycare elective care centres were established in December 2018 for the treatment of cataracts and varicose veins. My Department is working on the development of a regional model for daycare elective care centres, taking learning from the prototypes. I hope to be in a position to consult on these proposals shortly.

My Department is also currently undertaking a clinically led Review of Urgent and Emergency Care which aims to establish a sustainable regional care model for the future. I expect to receive the team's initial report in the coming months.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Health what progress has been made to provide support funding to the Derry addiction centre, as outlined in New Decade, New Approach.

(AQW 2896/17-22)

Mr Swann: Under the heading "Addressing Northern Ireland's unique circumstances" within "New Decade, New Approach", the UK Government commits to making funding available for a number of areas, which could include additional funding to support the Derry/Londonderry addiction centre. Discussions are ongoing with the UK Government about the delivery of this funding but no specific progress has been made in respect of potential support for a Derry/Londonderry addiction centre.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Health how much has been spent on domiciliary care packages by each Health and Social Care Trust in each of the last three financial years.

(AQW 2897/17-22)

Mr Swann: The total cost by each of the Health and Social Care Trusts in relation to domiciliary care packages both in house and independent sector is set out at Table 1.

Table 1.	2018/19 £m	2017/18 £m	2016/17 £m
BHSCT	43.1	40.8	41.5
NHSCT	56.9	49.9	49.9
SEHSCT	56.9	52.1	49.5
SHSCT	45.5	41.5	38.3
WHSCT	47.2	42.2	36.1

Note – In regard to NHSCT, the increase in 18/19 reflects the rebanding of in house home care workers including arrears.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Health to detail the number of (i) elective orthopaedic procedures; and (ii) emergency orthopaedic procedures that have taken place at Craigavon Area Hospital in each month of the last three years.

(AQW 2898/17-22)

Mr Swann: The number of emergency and elective procedures carried out under the Trauma and Orthopaedic speciality in Craigavon Area Hospital over the past three years are detailed below.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Health how much revenue each hospital site has generated from car parking charges, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 2899/17-22)

Mr Swann: The table provides the level of revenue generated from car parking charges in each hospital site in the last three years.

Trust	Hospital Site	Revenue Generated 2016/17 (£'m)	Revenue Generated 2017/18 (£'m)	Revenue Generated 2018/19 (£'m)

*The levels of revenue stated relates to staff car parking across the Belfast hospital sites and are not separately identifiable.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Health how much revenue has been generated from parking fines at hospital sites in each of the last three years.

(AQW 2900/17-22)

Mr Swann: The table below provides the level of revenue generated from car parking fines at each hospital site in the last three years.

Trust	Hospital Site	Revenue Generated (£'000) 2016/17	Revenue Generated (£'000) 2017/18	Revenue Generated (£'000) 2018/19
Western	Altnagelvin	25	26	28
	South West Acute	5	13	14
	Omagh	-	4	6

The Belfast, Northern, South Eastern and Southern Health and Social Care Trusts do not generate any revenue from parking fines as any revenue generated is retained by the licensed contractor.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Health has he any plans to create a Chief Psychological Officer role, to expedite the transformation of the psychological workforce and to ensure equitable access to evidence-based psychological interventions across all areas of physical and mental health.

(AQW 2914/17-22)

Mr Swann: There are no current plans to create a Chief Psychological Officer role within the Department. However, my Department will continue to work closely with psychologists working in the HSC and with relevant representative bodies as we take forward important work such as reviewing the Psychological Therapies Strategy.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Health why the psychology profession is not currently represented at a strategic level, similar to other professions, in the Public Health Agency; and why there is no appropriate professional advice informing the joint Public Health Agency and Health and Social Care Board commissioning plan in relation to accessing evidence-based psychological interventions across health and social care services.

Mr Swann: The Public Health Agency does not currently employ a dedicated psychology position specifically in relation to mental health or psychological interventions.

The Health and Social Care Board and Public Health Agency regularly takes clinical advice from Trust professional leads and professional bodies as appropriate when commissioning services. This includes advice from psychologists and experts in psychological services.

The absence of an employed dedicated psychology position does not mean lack of psychological input or limitation to accessing evidence-based psychological interventions across health and social care services.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Health (i) to outline the membership of the working group on mental well-being; (ii) how it is envisaged that this group will operate; and (iii) whether there will be opportunities for input from the psychology profession into its work.

(AQW 2917/17-22)

Mr Swann: Membership of the Executive Working Group on Mental Wellbeing, Resilience and Suicide Prevention is at a strategic level and includes the Northern Ireland Executive Committee and senior representatives from the Department of Health, other Departments and the Public Health Agency.

The following Terms of Reference were agreed at the 4th March meeting of the Group:

- To monitor and report on progress of relevant departmental actions.
- To determine additional actions in support of suicide prevention and mental wellbeing.
- To examine wider progress in relation to the implementation of the Protect Life 2 Strategy.
- To review existing cross-departmental co-ordination on suicide prevention.
- To consider cross-departmental actions to improve psychological resilience of hard to reach groups.
- To consider actions for reducing risk factors for suicide and for enhancing protective factors.
- To ensure inclusion of emotional wellbeing and resilience building within the new Mental Health Strategy.

It is expected that there will be regular presentations to this group and that may provide an opportunity for the psychological profession to contribute in future. There will also be opportunities to provide input through Protect Life 2 implementation groups.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health what funding and support groups exist to assist people with combat stress and post-traumatic stress disorder.

(AQW 2925/17-22)

Mr Swann: Psychological Therapy and other Mental Health Services within each Health and Social Care Trust provide individual and group interventions for people with post-traumatic stress symptoms. These are funded from the health service budget and it would not be feasible to disaggregate costs.

A number of voluntary organisations provide services for people that have experienced combat stress or post-traumatic stress symptoms.

Miss Woods asked the Minister of Health for an update on the timescale for the rollout of the three cycles of In Vitro Fertilisation provision, including how LGBTQ women will be able to access these services, as outlined in New Decade, New Approach.

(AQW 2940/17-22)

Mr Swann: I am pleased that the New Decade, New Approach agreement committed to providing three funded IVF cycles for eligible women.

While I have previously highlighted capacity constraint with the Regional Fertility Centre, I am establishing a Project Board to take this project forward and consider what is needed to enable implementation of the three cycles for eligible women. I will be able to provide further details, including an implementation date when the Project Board reports back to me.

The referral pathway for all eligible patients, regardless of their sexual orientation, is through their GP.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Health what steps he has taken to implement the recommendations of the Bengoa report since taking office; and when he will provide a full report on the progress of implementation.

(AQW 2961/17-22)

Mr Swann: Since taking office I have committed to supporting the Transformation agenda, with work ongoing across my Department and the wider HSC on a range of key Transformation projects, including the introduction of Multidisciplinary Teams in Primary Care, and the establishment of prototype Elective Care Centres. I am also currently considering the findings of recent public consultations on Stroke and Breast Assessment Services.

A Year 1, and a Year 2 Transformation progress report has been published. These reports can be found at: <https://www.health-ni.gov.uk/articles/progressreportintroduction>. It is expected that a further progress report will be published later this year.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Health to detail the number of calls to the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service, in each of the last three years, that were deemed to be false alarm calls, broken down by station.

(AQW 2962/17-22)

Mr Swann: The table below shows the total number of calls, mobilised and non-mobilised, received by Northern Ireland Fire & Rescue Service (NIFRS) Regional Control Centre (RCC) for the financial years 2016/17, 2017/18 and 2018/19 that were deemed to be false alarm calls, broken down by Station.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Health to detail the cost to each Health and Social Care Trust of parking enforcement services, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 2964/17-22)

Mr Swann: The table below provides the level of cost attributed to Health and Social Care Trusts for parking enforcement services in the last three years.

Trust	Parking Enforcement Services Costs (£'000) 2016/17	Parking Enforcement Services Costs (£'000) 2017/18	Parking Enforcement Services Costs (£'000) 2018/19

No costs have been incurred by the Belfast, Northern, South Eastern and Southern Health and Social Care Trusts in relation to parking enforcement services. Any revenue generated is retained by the licensed contractor.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Health to detail the hourly rate paid to domiciliary care workers by each Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 2984/17-22)

Mr Swann: Information on the annual salary of domiciliary care workers employed in each Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust at 31 December 2019, broken down by grade and using the 2018/19 Agenda for Change (AfC) pay scales (those in place at the time) is detailed in the table below:

Pay parity with England for all staff on Agenda for Change was restored in January 2020, with effect from 1 April 2019. The 2019/20 pay award is being implemented with a view to paying this in March 2020 salaries. Band 2 will be paid at £17,652 - £19,020 and Band 3 at £18,813 - £20,795. The 2020/21 pay award will then be implemented as soon as possible, maintaining parity with England. In 2020/21, Band 2 will be paid at £18,005 - £19,337 and Band 3 at £19,737 – £21,142.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Health whether General Practitioner contracts include the requirement to work out of hours.

(AQW 2985/17-22)

Mr Swann: The General Medical Services (GMS) Contract came into effect on 1st April 2004. Under the Contract arrangements, responsibility for provision of Out of Hours Services passed initially to the Health and Social Service Boards with effect from 1st January 2005 and latterly to the Health and Social Care Board in 2009. Since the 2004 arrangements took effect, GPs are not contracted to provide Out of Hours Services.

It is important to note that, alongside those GPs who provide Out of Hours Services, a range of other health care professionals including nurses, advanced nurse practitioners, Marie Curie nurses and pharmacists play a key role in delivering out of hours services across Northern Ireland.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health to outline the role of the Health and Social Care Board Business Services Organisation in the recruitment of staff, staff payroll and procurement for the Health Service.

Mr Swann: The information requested is available online via the following link: <http://www.hscbusiness.hscni.net/pdf/BSO%20service%20catalogue%2019-20%2019.09.19.pdf>

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health what steps he will take to ensure pay parity between social workers in Northern Ireland and those elsewhere in the UK.

(AQW 2994/17-22)

Mr Swann: As outlined in my statement to the Assembly on 14 January, pay parity with England is restored for all health and social care staff on Agenda for Change terms and conditions with effect from 1st April 2019. This will include social workers.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health, in light of the UK Supreme Court judgement on the Deprivation of Liberty Safeguards, whether he has any plans to update these safeguards; and to outline any planned timescale.

(AQW 2995/17-22)

Mr Swann: The 2014 UK Supreme Court judgement in relation to deprivation of liberty (commonly referred to as the 'Cheshire West' case) provided an acid test for deprivation of liberty as being a person who lacks capacity, is under continuous control and supervision and is not free to leave. The Supreme Court also noted that all deprivations of liberty must be authorised.

In March 2019, my Department, along with the Department of Justice, took the decision to commence the Mental Capacity Act (Northern Ireland) 2016 in phases, most notably to introduce a new statutory process for deprivation of liberty in the first phase. This came into operation on 2 December 2019.

The new statutory Deprivation of Liberty Safeguards meet the standards required following the Supreme Court judgement on Cheshire West.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health how much was paid to agencies to fill social work vacancies during the financial year 2018-19.

(AQW 2996/17-22)

Mr Swann: The amount paid to agencies within the category social work during the financial year 2018-19 is detailed below;

HSC Expenditure on Agency Social Workers

Year	HSC Trust
	Belfast	Northern	South Eastern	Southern	Western
2018/19	£3,467,033	£1,178,000	£1,664,049	£323,735	£3,581,657

Source: HSC Trust

* May include some expenditure on Band 5 agency staff working in social care.

Agency expenditure may not solely relate to filling vacancies, and may be used for other reasons, for example covering sickness absence.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health what provisions are being made to ensure that older people, and other people who may not have access to the internet, are fully informed about how to prevent the contraction or spread of COVID-19, including with regard to the distribution of potentially necessary provisions and protection to people who are being advised not to visit GPs.

Mr Swann: The two key public health messages in relation to COVID-19 are about (1) the importance of good hand hygiene and how to wash hands effectively, and (2) the 'catch it, bin it, kill it' message about coughs and sneezes.

A national TV and press campaign is providing advice on good hand hygiene to help prevent further spread of viruses. In addition, Northern Ireland now has full access to the NHS 111 helpline service on Covid-19.

Coverage of the public health messages has been intensive and persistent across all media.

Public health information is being displayed prominently in healthcare settings, social care settings and many other public spaces.

Anyone who needs prescription-only medication should contact their GP surgery.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health to outline the changes made after the regional bureaucracy action plan, emerging from the 2012 Social Work strategy; and what evidence exists that this has reduced bureaucracy for social workers.

(AQW 2998/17-22)

Mr Swann: A number of initiatives have been progressed including: a new approach to carers' assessments; the introduction of an electronic version of the Northern Ireland Single Assessment tool; use of digital dictation and mobile devices. There is evidence of some of these reducing bureaucracy, but it has been difficult to quantify this in others. A range of opportunities have recently been identified with stakeholders to reduce bureaucracy and are currently being considered by my Department.

Ms Flynn asked the Minister of Health, pursuant to AQW 1453/17-22, what assurances he can give that a perinatal mental health inpatient unit and community service is high on his Department's budgetary priorities.

Mr Swann: The Department is currently considering a business case for enhanced community perinatal mental health services for the region. The business case for a dedicated mother and baby unit is still being developed. Any investment in this area will have to be balanced against other service priorities and in the context of the Department's financial settlement.

Mr O'Dowd asked the Minister of Health, pursuant to AQW 937/17-22, whether it is in line with the Department of Health's Guidance in Relation to the Health and Social Care Complaints Procedure - April 2019 - for the person complained against to investigate the complaint.

(AQW 3062/17-22)

Mr Swann: The Health & Social Care Complaints Procedure encourages front line staff to attempt to resolve informal complaints/concerns 'on the spot' where possible. If such direct resolution is not possible and the complaint is then taken forward as a formal complaint by the HSC organisation, the investigation of the complaint would be undertaken by a suitable person appointed by the HSC organisation with the appropriate skills, expertise and seniority and excluding persons involved in the substance of the complaint as the investigating officer.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Health to outline the policy areas he (i) is currently reviewing; and (ii) has instructed for a review to take place.

Mr Swann: The information requested is provided in the tables below:

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Health, pursuant to AQW 1964/17-22, to break these figures down per hospital.

(AQW 3079/17-22)

Mr Swann: Information on the number of available overnight beds across all hospital facilities in HSC Trusts in Northern Ireland is collected on a quarterly basis. The year-on-year change in the average daily number of beds available for overnight stays for 2013/14 to 2018/19 (the latest full year of data available at present) have been provided for in the tables below.

The number of available beds is the number of beds on each ward opened overnight that were actually available for patients, measured at midnight. Beds reserved solely for day case admissions or regular day admissions are not included in these figures.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, pursuant to AQW 1596/17-22, whether the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust stopped using Essure 18 months before the manufacturer didn't renew the CE mark; and to outline the rationale for this decision.

(AQW 3089/17-22)

Mr Swann: In July 2016 the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust made the decision to suspend/stop performing the procedure for female sterilisation utilising the Essure device. This was a clinical decision based on information that was available from Health Canada (amongst others) about long-term systemic side effects a significant number of patients had been suffering following the placement of the Essure devices.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health whether he will put a specialist consultant in place for Essure patients.

(AQW 3090/17-22)

Mr Swann: Essure patients experiencing complications are seen by consultant gynaecologists for assessment and if they require further surgery they are placed on an inpatient waiting list. There are currently no plans for a specialist consultant post for Essure patients in Northern Ireland.

Ms Mullan asked the Minister of Health why the Western Health and Social Care Trust hold no waiting lists for short-term breaks or respite for under 18 year olds in the Derry city area when a number of families have had their respite stopped over 6 months ago.

(AQW 3114/17-22)

Mr Swann: Londonderry's short break facility, Rosebud Cottage, has recently been relocated to Racecourse Road with an anticipated opening date of 30 April 2020. The Western Health and Social Care Trust is aware of the impact on families over recent months due to the unavailability of services. In lieu of the availability of short break facilities in Rosebud, families have been offered alternatives such as access to services in Avalon (a short break service in Omagh) or Self Directed Support. This again is based on on-going assessed need.

Once the service in Rosebud Cottage is operational, a waiting list will be re-established in order to assist managers to prioritise services for those most in need.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Health what plans he has to communicate the health impacts of air pollution to the public.

(AQW 3139/17-22)

Mr Swann: The collective effect of actions by members of the public, local councils and government departments and agencies, can make a significant difference to reducing air pollution and the impact it has on population health. At a strategic policy level, the importance of air quality is reflected in the draft Programme for Government and the public health strategic framework 'Making Life Better'. My Department publishes information on air pollution and health on NI Direct and, in conjunction with DAERA, supports 'Air Aware', a free subscription service that delivers SMS alerts when air pollution levels are high. For those interested in the research and the science, the Department's web site has link to the Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants (COMEAP), which provides independent advice to government departments and agencies on how air pollution impacts on health.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Health what steps he will take to improve Tier 2 and Tier 3 Child and Adolescent Mental Health services to ensure that patients are treated effectively by appropriately trained mental health professionals.

Mr Swann: My Department leads on a draft Inter-Departmental Action Plan in response to the Children's Commissioner's 'Still Waiting' report. The Action Plan outlines a range of actions to improve CAMHS. Both the draft Action Plan and a Progress Update Report are available on my Department's website.

Responding to the Commissioner's recommendations, and strengthening CAMHS, will require additional investment which will have to be considered against other priorities and in the context of my Department's budget settlement.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health how he intends to ensure, through appropriate commissioning and funding, that access to evidence-based psychological interventions are available to meet the mental health needs at each stage of a person's life.

(AQW 3167/17-22)

Mr Swann: The Mental Health Action Plan, which I intend to publish very soon, and the Mental Health Strategy, which will be co-produced and published in December, will address access to evidence-based psychological interventions.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health to detail his Department's spend on gender identity services in each of the last five years, broken down by (i) staffing; (ii) administration; (iii) marketing or advertising; and (iv) patient treatment.

(AQW 3178/17-22)

Mr Swann: The gender identity service is not recorded separately on the Belfast HSC Trust's system and is not separately costed. Therefore, it is not possible to provide the information requested without incurring disproportionate costs.

Ms Kimmings asked the Minister of Health whether the Mental Capacity (NI) Act 2016 has been implemented in all Health and Social Care Trusts.

(AQW 3189/17-22)

Mr Swann: The first phase of the Mental Capacity Act (Northern Ireland) 2016 was commenced on 1 October and 2 December 2019 for the purposes of deprivation of liberty, research and money and valuables.

All Trusts have implemented these provisions and my officials have continued to work with Trusts to support the implementation.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health how many care packages are currently in place in each Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 3194/17-22)

Mr Swann: The number of residential and nursing care packages in effect as at 31st December 2019, and the number of home care packages delivered 8th - 14th September 2019, by HSC Trust, are outlined below in Table 1 and Table 2, respectively.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health whether his Department is seeking to recruit nursing staff from abroad.

(AQW 3197/17-22)

Mr Swann: The current International Nursing Recruitment project commenced in January 2016 as one approach to address the escalating Registered Nurse (Adult) vacancies across the five Health and Social Care Trusts. The project aim is to recruit 622 nurses to the HSC by March 2020.

As at 13th February 2020, the HSC had 448 arrivals from EU and non-EU countries. Of these 402 remain in post. Recent numbers have been increasing, and current trends indicate that the target of 622 will be reached – and perhaps exceeded – within the coming months.

My officials are currently developing options for my consideration for future international recruitment exercises, which could complement the increase in pre-registration nursing and midwifery places outlined in New Decade, New Approach, as a further means of filling nursing vacancies. There is also a need to promote Health and Social Care as an employer of choice, and a number of actions are being progressed under the health and social care Workforce Strategy.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health whether he has any plans to stop Health and Social Care Trusts charging for car parking.

Mr Swann: I refer the member to my response for written AQW 1590/17-22.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health (i) when the roll out of Mental Health Regional Trauma Network is due to start; (ii) what will be its first focus; and (iii) what specific provision will be made for veterans.
(AQW 3232/17-22)

Mr Swann: The Regional Trauma Network is in the process of being developed and I am hopeful that it will be launched in the coming months. The recent Health and Social Care Board public consultation on the Regional Trauma Network (<http://www.hscboard.hscni.net/get-involved/previous-consultations>) sets out the proposed initial focus for the service. Provision for veterans will be considered as part of the development of the Regional Trauma Network.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health how many children and young people in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust are registered with a Health Service dentist; and what this figure represents as a percentage of all children and young people.
(AQW 3235/17-22)

Mr Swann: The number of under 18s in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust who are registered with a Health Service dentist, and what this figure represents as a percentage of all children and young people in the Trust, are shown in the following table.

Number of under 18s in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust (HSCT) who are registered with a Health Service dentist; and the percentage of all under 18s this represents in the Trust.

1 Latest official dental registration figures published are for December 2019.

Dental registrations are based on registrations paid in December 2019, with age calculated at 1st of the month.

Patient numbers are based on patient's residency, regardless of where the dentist location is.

2 NISRA mid-year population estimates have been used to calculate registration rate. (2019 NISRA Population Projections are based on 2016 estimates).

Mr Gildernew asked the Minister of Health what commitment he can give that the funding to provide a True Cost of Care, based on financial models, will be reinstated to progress reform of Adult Social Care.

(AQW 3304/17-22)

Mr Swann: Work has already been undertaken to understand the costs of delivering home-based care and support cost, as well as the projected costs of delivering social care in line with the projected levels of demographic demand over the next 10 years.

Notwithstanding the importance of the reform of adult social care, and my commitment to this work as set out in the New Decade New Approach document, I will give consideration to this in the context of the resources available to my Department, along with all other planned and emerging Departmental priorities for funding our Health and Social Care system.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Health whether his Department has any plans to involve paediatricians in raising awareness of the impact of air pollution on children and young people.

(AQW 3327/17-22)

Mr Swann: While the Department has no specific plans to formally involve paediatricians to carry out this role, the Royal College of Paediatrics and Child Health, in its position statement on air quality in the UK, points to the responsibility of paediatricians to inform patients and their families of the health impacts of air pollution, and to support and encourage them to make positive changes to improve air quality and reduce their exposure to air pollution. It also advises that paediatricians should be aware of local and national initiatives to improve air quality and signpost families to relevant resources.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Health whether his Department has assessed its carbon emissions; and whether a plan exists to reduce these emissions.

(AQW 3328/17-22)

Mr Swann: The Department has not assessed its overall carbon emissions however we and the Health and Social Care Trusts have assessed our carbon emissions arising from energy use. The Northern Ireland Civil Service Energy Management Strategy, launched in May 2019, aims to lower net energy consumption by 30 per cent by 2030 across Government, from a 2016/17 baseline year. The Department will therefore continue to work with HSC Trusts to ensure that effective energy management processes are in place and energy efficiency projects are identified and implemented.

HSC organisations also continue to drive carbon emission reduction through increased energy efficiency of the existing estate; the use of electric and hybrid vehicles and encouraging greater use of public transport and cycling; the sustainable procurement of goods and services including food and effective waste management, including increased recycling and reduction of waste to landfill.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Health to detail the number of pregnant women living with (i) type 1; (ii) type 2; and (iii) gestational diabetes in the last year.

Mr Swann: The number of individuals admitted to hospital with a recorded diagnosis of Type-1, Type-2 and gestational diabetes mellitus in pregnancy in the last financial year 2018/19, are shown in the table below.

Number of Individuals Admitted to HSCT Hospitals in Northern Ireland where there was a recorded diagnosis of Diabetes mellitus in pregnancy, childbirth and puerperium, 2018/19

O24.2	Pre-existing malnutrition-related diabetes mellitus in pregnancy	*

Total		2,213

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Health how many women in the last year have developed type 2 diabetes following a diagnosis of gestational diabetes in pregnancy.

(AQW 3381/17-22)

Mr Swann: This information is not available.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Health (i) what measures are being taken to ensure maintenance of safe staffing levels within the family and childcare section of social services; and how many staff posts in family and childcare services are currently unfilled.

(AQW 3382/17-22)

Mr Swann:

- (i) Health and Social Care Trusts have put in place a range of measures to ensure safe staffing levels within family and child care. These include initiatives to improve staff support, and thereby staff retention, and to recruit social workers to family and childcare.

The Social Work Strategy has supported a number of initiatives across Health and Social Care Trusts to strengthen workplace supports for social workers, including within family and childcare.

A working group has been established to explore the regional recruitment of newly qualified social workers into the workforce as a means of reducing the use of agency workers and turnover of staff.

A social work workforce review is underway to determine the number of social workers needed to meet future needs which will inform recommendations about the number of student places required for the future. Any recommendations about safe staffing levels will be factored into the modelling for future need. It is anticipated the review will report by the end of the year.

- ii) The number of vacant posts in family and child care in each Health and Social Care Trust is recorded in the table below. Trusts have advised that some vacant posts are currently occupied by staff recruited through Recruitment Agencies.

South Eastern HSC Trust	40
Southern HSC Trust	32

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health why there is a disparity in salary between dental core trainees in Northern Ireland and those in the rest of the UK.

(AQW 3385/17-22)

Mr Swann: Further to my answer to AQW 1112/17-22, pay for medical and dental post-graduate trainees is a devolved matter.

The Department of Health (England) imposed a new contract for hospital trainees in England in 2016. The English contract reduced the number of pay points on the medical and dental trainee pay scales, and in so doing revalued those points. Trainees in Northern Ireland have remained on the 2002 contract and corresponding pay framework. Any change to the NI medical contract would be a matter for negotiation between the Department and the BMA.

Ms McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health what advice his Department has provided to employers to help contain the spread of coronavirus.

Mr Swann: General information on how to help contain the spread of COVID-19 is available on the Public Health Agency's website.

Guidance for Employers and Businesses, developed by Public Health England, will be made available on my Department's internet site. This guidance assists employers and businesses in providing advice to staff on what to do if someone who is suspected or is confirmed to have coronavirus has been in a workplace setting, or has travelled from listed areas.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health for an update on Health and Social Care training on parental alienation; and whether this training has been offered to social workers.

(AQW 3462/17-22)

Mr Swann: Training for social workers on parental alienation is being actively sought by the HSC Trusts. I understand that the Trusts hope to introduce a regional training program in the next financial year.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health whether the cancer drug Panitumumab is available for prescription in Health and Social Care Trusts; and to outline the rationale for this decision.

(AQW 3516/17-22)

Mr Swann: Panitumumab is recommended by the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence (NICE) as an option for previously untreated RAS wild-type metastatic colorectal cancer in adults (TA439). Therefore it is available for suitable patients in Northern Ireland.

Medicines are commissioned for use in Northern Ireland where there is substantive evidence of clinical and cost effectiveness, as determined by NICE.

There are two other licensed indications for the use of panitumumab, neither are recommended by NICE and therefore not routinely commissioned for patients in Northern Ireland.

In circumstances where NICE has not recommended a particular drug, it can be requested by an individual patient's clinician via the Individual Funding Request process which provides a mechanism to consider requests from clinical consultants for treatments for individual patients that fall outside the range of services routinely commissioned.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health how many children are awaiting assessment for autism, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust.

Mr Swann: The number of children waiting for an autism assessment as at 31 December 2019, and broken down by Health and Social Care Trust is shown in Table 1.

Table 1: The number of children waiting for an autism assessment by Health & Social Care Trust at 31 December 2019.

Ms Rogan asked the Minister of Health to outline progress in reducing bureaucracy for social workers, as outlined in the 2012 Strategy for Social Work, entitled Improving and Safeguarding Social Wellbeing.

(AQO 364/17-22)

Mr Swann: A number of initiatives have been introduced, for example an alternative approach to carer's assessments has been developed which reduced paperwork and increased social work time in direct practice and is being rolled out across Trusts. A pilot involving the use of electronic devices to record information was positively evaluated. The introduction of an electronic version in 2017 of the Northern Ireland Single Assessment tool replaced the paper version. While there have been some improvements it has however, been difficult, to date, to quantify. A range of opportunities have recently been identified with stakeholders to reduce bureaucracy and are currently being considered by my Department.

Mr Catney asked the Minister of Health whether he will provide funding to independent counselling services to help address mental health waiting lists.

Mr Swann: The Public Health Agency allocates approximately £1.4m per year to 15 organisations to carry out a range of counselling services, including crisis intervention, family support services, bereavement support, suicide prevention, self-harm and early intervention programmes. The Public Health Agency monitor these services closely and will react to pressures in the system as they materialise. Already this year service enhancements have been provided to organisations who have been oversubscribed.

In addition the Health and Social Care Trusts commission counselling through Mental Health Hubs which operate across Northern Ireland and improve access to earlier mental health support. This reduces the requirement for people with common mental health needs to use secondary care mental health services. Referrals to the Hubs are made by GP's – with counselling and other services are provided by the independent and community and voluntary sector. The Hubs not only create a single gateway for psychological and well-being services but also offer a real alternative to drug therapies.

Counselling is also available in some GP practices through a Local Enhanced Service, where GPs choose to offer this service.

I am currently considering the draft Mental Health Action Plan, with a view to publishing it very soon in line with the commitment made in New Decade, New Approach. This will include an action to further roll out and develop Mental Health Hubs – as way to strengthen counselling provision across Northern Ireland.

I have also committed to publishing a new, ten year Mental Health Strategy by the end of 2020. The Strategy will take a lifespan, person centred approach and will consider the role of the independent and community and voluntary sector in supporting people who suffer from mental ill health, including through counselling. The Strategy will be co-produced – and the community and voluntary sector will be part of this co-production.

However, it is important to note that any investment in mental health services and counselling will have to be balanced against other service priorities and be considered in the context of the Department's financial settlements.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Health what support or guidance is being given to Community Care Assistants in dealing with vulnerable clients susceptible to COVID-19; and whether their employers must ensure protective materials is provided to their staff.

(AQW 3740/17-22)

Mr Swann: Guidance for Domiciliary Care Providers was published on the 17th March. This guidance includes what to do if the individual being cared for has symptoms of COVID-19 and the supply of PPE and other resources for the care provision.

Guidance will be subject to further update as necessary.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health to detail the number of abortions carried out in each Health and Social Care Trust in each of the last five years, broken down by the reason for abortion.

(AQW 3745/17-22)

Mr Swann: Figures for the number of terminations of pregnancy carried out in each Health and Social Care Trust for the last 5 years are outlined in table 1 below.

We are unable to provide a definitive analysis of the reasons for terminations of pregnancies as the systems available for reporting do not hold such information. All terminations detailed below were for indications that are legally acceptable and medically approved in Northern Ireland.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Health what advice and direction has been circulated to people who provide care services to elderly people in their homes to prevent the spread of COVID-19.

(AQW 3755/17-22)

Mr Swann: Guidance for Domiciliary Care Providers was published on the 17th March. This guidance is aimed at Trusts and providers of care who support people in their own homes, including supported living arrangements.

The guidance includes what to do if the individual being cared for has symptoms of COVID-19 and what to do if a care worker is concerned they have COVID -19.

Ms Flynn asked the Minister of Health whether local clinicians, performing full vaginal mesh removal requiring groin dissection, are fully trained and hold the required accreditation and validation.

(AQO 357/17-22)

Mr Swann: There is no formal accreditation process for mesh removal from the groin in the UK and expertise here is currently being acquired through professional collaborations with other surgeons across the UK.

In this field of practice, consultant urogynaecologists, will generally have completed relevant Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecology accredited subspecialty training in urogynaecology. This includes training in complex pelvic floor surgery. At the Belfast mesh centre the two consultants in this field have completed this accreditation and other specialists are experts in pelvic floor dysfunction specifically relating to bladder and bowel and pelvic floor reconstruction.

These surgeons have extensive experience and highly specialised expertise in pelvic surgery including management of surgical complications.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health whether he plans to reintroduce prescription charges.

(AQO 358/17-22)

Mr Swann: Charges for prescriptions were abolished in Northern Ireland in April 2010 with the aim of removing the financial barrier to people requiring medicines, to improve health outcomes and to avoid unnecessary hospital admissions.

I have no current plans to re-introduce prescription charges. Any proposals for the re-introduction of prescription charges would require public consultation and approval by the Executive as it is a cross-cutting issue.

In the meantime, it is important that patients only order repeat prescriptions for medicines that they need to minimise any potential waste.

Mr Robinson asked the Minister of Health to outline how he will work with the Minister for Communities to ensure that recommended home adaptions for people with a disability are actioned without delay.

(AQO 360/17-22)

Mr Swann: The Department of Health and Department of Communities work collaboratively on all housing adaptions issues and I understand the value of such adaptations in delivering on the strategic aim of ensuring people with disabilities can continue to live and be cared for at home.

The inter-departmental Review of Housing Adaptions Services 2016 is an example of joint working between the two departments. The review also included significant input from the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in conjunction with appropriate health and social care and housing association organisations

The review considered ways in which government can work together in a better way and included the development of an Adaptations toolkit to agree standards and to improve the communication processes between health and housing in order to avoid unnecessary delays in adaptation provision.

It also examined issues such as current and likely future demands for housing adaptions.

In the absence of a functioning Executive strands of the reviews recommendations have been taken forward by the Joint Housing Adaptions Steering Group which has representation from my department and Department for Communities

Health Trusts through their Occupational Therapy Services are also working collaboratively with their housing partners to ensure people with a disability are being provided with their adaptations in as timely a way possible.

I will continue to receive updates from my officials as this work progresses and will be available to meet with the Minister for Communities as required.

Ms Kimmings asked the Minister of Health whether his Department's Core Grant Funding to the community and voluntary sector will continue until 2022.

(AQO 361/17-22)

Mr Swann: I recognise the important role the voluntary and community sector plays in supporting the work of the health and social care system, and I can confirm that, subject to final budget allocations, my Department's Core Grant Scheme will continue to run.

The Department currently invests £3.615million per year in the scheme, to support 67 organisations operating across a range of policy areas including: family support; mental health services; physical and learning disability support; elderly care; sexual health services; and support for victims of domestic violence.

My officials have already invited those organisations in receipt of core funding to submit applications for funding in 2020/21.

I also want to take this opportunity to address the issue of the equity of the current arrangements. The opportunity to apply for Core Grant funding is currently limited to those organisations who have been availing of the scheme during the previous year. In order to provide a more equitable and transparent funding mechanism to support partnership working with the sector going forward, I am today announcing that from April 2021 the opportunity to apply for Core Grant funding will be open to any organisation which meets application criteria, including those currently in receipt of core grant.

Mr Buckley asked the Minister of Health how his Department is addressing hospital waiting lists.

Mr Swann: I fully appreciate that every patient should be able to avail of the best treatment that the health service can provide, and in a timely manner. It is regrettable that any patient has to wait longer than they should for assessment, diagnosis or treatment and I fully understand the distress and anxiety that long waiting times cause, particularly when patients are suffering pain and discomfort.

Tackling the current unacceptable waiting lists is a priority for me. Whilst transformation and organising our services more effectively is key, in parallel significant investment is also required to address the backlog of those patients that have been waiting the longest.

The New Decade, New Approach document published in January 2020 includes reducing hospital waiting times and delivering the reforms on health and social care as key priorities for the Executive in Northern Ireland. Delivery of these priorities is however dependent on new investment to implement the actions which underpin transformation and reform to sustainably reduce hospital waiting times.

The scale at which I will be able to tackle the unacceptable waiting times will be greatly influenced by the outcome of the current budgetary discussions.

Ms C Kelly asked the Minister of Health how his Department is addressing the high rate of hospital admissions in children for tooth extraction.

(AQO 363/17-22)

Mr Swann: The extraction of teeth under general anaesthetic should be the last option for a child who needs to have a tooth removed. Dental decay levels in Northern Ireland have reduced significantly over the last 16 years and there has been a similar reduction in children requiring a general anaesthetic for dental extractions. However, further reductions are needed.

Children's registration figures with General Dental Practitioners are at their highest ever level in Northern Ireland. While decay levels have fallen overall, children who come from an area of deprivation have higher levels than the population average.

Preventative interventions by general dental practitioners are important, as is the work of the Community Dental Service in targeting the most vulnerable sections of the population. Early diagnosis and intervention can slow the progression of decay and reduce the probability of a child needing a general anaesthetic.

The Health and Social Care system alone cannot solve this problem; there needs to be continued collaboration with the Department of Education in relation to school meals, school snack policies, school-based tooth brushing programmes and dental health messages. The introduction of campaigns addressing high levels of sugar consumption will have a positive impact on dental health, as will the recent dental workforce review in looking at the increased role in prevention by all members of the dental team, not just dentists.

Finally, in recent weeks the Chief Dental Officer has established Oral Health Options Groups to allow for the consideration and development of further interventions for the two most urgent groups at present, namely children and the elderly. These groups will help identify important service improvements and I will then be able to consider any options developed alongside any financial implications that may arise.

Ms S Bradley asked the Minister of Health for his assessment of the Royal College of Paediatrics and Child Health's State of Child Health 2020 Report, particularly the high levels of suicide among children.

(AQO 365/17-22)

Mr Swann: The Department will consider the report's recommendations in line with existing policy priorities and ongoing work.

Promoting and improving the physical and mental health of children and young people is a priority not only for my Department but across the Executive as evidenced in the New Decade, New Approach agreement.

The Royal College of Paediatrics and Child Health's State of Child Health 2020 report draws out a number of key themes from its findings. My Department is already investing in a number of programmes and strategies which seek to address child health inequalities and improve the wellbeing of our children.

The Protect life 2 Strategy for Preventing Suicide and Self Harm was published on 10 September 2019 and sets out a clear action plan for addressing suicide. The strategy makes specific reference to children, the fact that some of the risk factors are specific to them, and that children experiencing suicidal ideation/behaviour require specific intervention as do children bereaved by suicide

A number of actions within the Protect Life 2 Strategy are targeted at younger age groups including: suicide prevention training for teachers, youth workers and sports coaches; emotional resilience building and responding to critical incidents in schools; the schools counselling service; and child focused bereavement services.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Health to outline the data is collected on gambling addiction across all Health and Social Care Trusts.

Mr Swann: Where problem gambling causes mental health issues, such as anxiety and depression, appropriate help and support is provided in line with clinical need and in line current service provision for mental health. This includes support from general Community Addictions teams within each Trust area who provide general assistance for those who suffer from any form of addiction. Further support is also available in the community and voluntary sector.

Given this, data on gambling addiction is not generally collected by Health and Social Care Trusts. Some information on referral rates is, however, collected by the Southern Health and Social Care Trust.

The Department for Communities recently consulted on the regulation of gambling and asked for views on whether the gambling industry should help fund research, education and treatment of problem gamblers – and whether a statutory levy should be imposed.

Officials in my Department will work with officials in the Department for Communities to consider the outworkings of that consultation and what this may mean for how services are provided and funded – including what data should be collected going forward.

Ms Flynn asked the Minister of Health whether local clinicians, performing full vaginal mesh removal requiring groin dissection, are fully trained and hold the required accreditation and validation.

(AQO 357/17-22)

Department for Infrastructure

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Infrastructure what additional funding is being allocated to Eastern Division to improve maintenance to street lighting.

(AQW 639/17-22)

Ms Mallon (The Minister for Infrastructure): I understand and share the concerns of the public affected by street light outages and am working with my Departmental officials to address this issue as quickly as possible.

I am pleased to inform the Member that I have recently allocated £1.2m to address the current outage backlog and future outages up to 31 March 2020. £300k of this funding has been allocated for outage repairs in Eastern Division.

My Department's internal and external contractors are actively progressing outage repairs in all Divisions.

I have been raising the need for additional investment with the Minister for Finance as part of the 2020/21 budget discussions, in order to better maintain our roads and deal with other growing pressures facing my Department.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Infrastructure to detail (i) the total number of street lights currently reported as not working; and (ii) when Roads Service will have the funds to fully address the faults.

(AQW 830/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I understand and share the concerns of the public affected by street light outages. There are 12,085 street lighting outages reported on the street lighting management system.

I am pleased to inform the Member that after representations to the finance Minister, I have just recently allocated £1.2m to repair the current Street Lighting outage backlog and to repair future outages up to the end of this financial year.

My Department's internal and external contractors have already commenced work on repairing these broken street lights across all Divisions.

I am also currently engaged in the 2020/21 budget discussions and I have raised this issue with the Finance Minister to ensure future year budgets are properly funded to maintain this essential service.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Infrastructure what budget is available for (i) maintenance; and (ii) resurfacing schemes for rural roads.

(AQW 958/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My Department does not hold budget information on a rural/urban roads basis and therefore, it is not possible to provide details of budget on maintenance or resurfacing schemes for rural roads.

Structural Maintenance includes the activities of resurfacing and reconstruction of carriageways and footways, surface dressing, patching, structural stability and structural drainage.

The total capital and resource budget available for structural maintenance in 2019/20 is £107million. Of that, almost £68 million has been allocated to resurfacing schemes.

I can advise that the Department committed some £10 million of its opening £75 million Capital budget in the current year for structural maintenance of the road network to a 'Road Recovery Fund' (RRF) which has targeted roads adversely impacted by recent under-funding and roads which had deteriorated over the previous winter periods. A significant proportion of this RRF has been targeted to the rural road network.

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister for Infrastructure how many street lights are currently in disrepair in the (i) Causeway Coast and Glens; and (ii) Mid and East Antrim Borough Council areas.

(AQW 1392/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Unfortunately as a result of severe budget constraints my Department had to restrict the street lighting maintenance service across Northern Ireland. As a result, priority was given to hazardous and group outages and individual outages were taking longer than usual to be repaired.

I understand and share the concerns of the public affected by street light outages and I am pleased to inform the Member that I have recently allocated £1.2m to address the current outage backlog and future outages up to 31 March 2020.

There are currently approximately 2800 reported outages in Northern Division, which includes the Causeway Coast and Glens and Mid and East Antrim Borough Council areas.

I can advise that my Department's internal and external contractors are working to repair outages across the North.

I have been raising the need for additional investment with the Minister for Finance as part of the 2020/21 budget discussions, in order to provide a more sustainable and street lighting repair service, better maintain our roads and deal with other growing pressures facing my Department.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she will bring provisions in respect of MOT exemptions for vehicles over forty years old, in line with Great Britain.

(AQW 1680/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I am aware that this exemption was introduced in Great Britain in 2018 which has led to a disparity as to how Vehicles of Historic Interest (VHIs) are treated in GB and NI.

I am also aware that following lobbying from both elected representatives and members of the public that my Department ran a public consultation exercise in 2019 seeking views as to whether this exemption should be introduced here.

This is an issue that I wish to examine carefully, and I will consider the consultation responses before I decide how best to proceed.

Mr Robinson asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she plans to align legislation for electric bicycles with that in the rest of the United Kingdom.

(AQW 2068/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I announced on the 4 February that I will bring forward as soon as possible the necessary legislation which will remove the requirement for EAPCs to be registered and licensed. This will align with the position in Britain and Ireland. I have since written to the Infrastructure Committee setting out my intentions. The Committee considered this issue at its meeting of Wednesday 4 March 2020 where they confirmed that they are supportive of my proposals.

This will remove the need to register, license and insure EAPCs before use on public roads and the rider will no longer be required to wear a motorcycle helmet or hold a valid or full driving licence. In the case of insurance EAPC owners/riders should consider the need for insurance that covers areas such as damage, theft, personal injury and liability when the proposed legislative changes come into force.

I believe getting more people to walk, cycle or use public transport for every day journeys will have huge benefits for all of us, cutting down on traffic congestion, and reducing air pollution as well as the added benefits to our health and wellbeing.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure for an update on the Roads Recovery Fund.

(AQW 2476/17-22)

Ms Mallon: In the last two years my Department has allocated some £25m to a Roads Recovery Fund (RRF) to help direct funding to those roads in most need following years of underfunding and severe winters. A significant proportion of this RRF has been targeted to the rural road network for resurfacing and repairs.

The funding is targeting many short lengths of road in particularly poor condition, together with a number of longer resurfacing schemes. It is estimated that by the end of this financial year over 1,800 locations on the road network will be improved by the initiative.

Recognising the importance of investment in the roads network to improve connectivity and help communities and tackle regional imbalance, I have been raising the need for additional investment with the Finance Minister, in advance of the 2020/21 budget. The availability of future funding for road maintenance will be determined when there is more certainty around future budgets.

Mr Chambers asked the Minister for Infrastructure for her assessment on being able to enhance street lighting repairs as a result of the new budget currently being worked on by the Executive.

Ms Mallon: The annual funding required to provide a full street lighting repair service is £3.2million. During 2019-20, due to severe budgets constraints, street lighting repairs were seriously curtailed until additional funding was secured from the Minister of Finance in February 2020, so that my Department could urgently start repairing street lights again.

I have engaged with the Finance Minister setting out my Department's funding needs for the next budget period ahead having inherited significant budget challenges. I will work collaboratively with the Finance Minister on the 2020/21 budget and I hope to secure the necessary funding to deliver essential services including street lighting repairs in order to keep citizens safe.

Mr Wells asked the Minister for Infrastructure what is the total cost to Translink incurred through the practice of engine idling by drivers of its (i) buses; and (ii) trains.

Ms Mallon: Idling occurs when buses or trains are stationary and is part of the normal operation of Diesel Buses and Trains. Idling is kept to a minimum by the use of technology designed to reduce cost and vehicle emissions. However, Translink does not separate the cost of idling on its train or bus fleets from its running cost information and therefore, it is not able to provide specific information in relation to the cost of idling on trains and buses.

My Department is working closely with Translink to develop opportunities to introduce zero and ultra-low emission public transport vehicle solutions to assist in tackling the climate emergency.

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she will consider adding all or part of (i) Glenshesk Road, Armoy, at St. Olcan's Primary School; and (ii) Shelton Road, Loughgiel, at St. Paticks's Primary School, to the gritting schedule.

(AQW 2822/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My Department receives many requests each year for additions to the winter gritting schedules. For this reason the Department has a Winter Service policy that ensures all decisions are made using objective assessments. This process ensures a consistent approach to winter maintenance is adopted across the entire road network, allowing my Department to grit approximately 28% of the public road network, which carries 80% of our traffic.

Under the current policy neither Shelton Road nor Glenshesk Road satisfy the requirements for primary gritting nor do the schools qualify for secondary gritting. However I can advise that my Department has provided salt boxes adjacent to both schools together with a number of grit piles along the length of these roads. These salt boxes and grit piles have been provided for use by the general public, on a self-help basis, to assist traffic movement during periods of wintery weather.

While I would like to be able to expand our gritting service to many other routes, it is simply not feasible to do this at present, due to the severe budget constraints and many other pressures faced by my Department. This is an issue I hope to address with Executive Colleagues.

Mr Allen asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AQW 421/17-22, (i) to detail the current remaining budget for streetlight repair; and (ii) whether the budget is sufficient to repair current and future outages.

Ms Mallon: I understand and share the concerns of the public affected by street light outages and am working with my Departmental officials to address this issue as quickly as possible.

I am pleased to inform the Member that, after representations to the Finance Minister, I have recently allocated £1.2m to address the current outage backlog and to repair future outages up to the end of this financial year.

My Department's internal and external contractors are actively progressing outage repairs across Northern Ireland.

I have been raising the need for additional investment with the Minister for Finance as part of the 2020/21 budget discussions, in order to better maintain our roads, street lighting network and deal with other growing pressures facing my Department.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she intends to amend the Roads (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act (Northern Ireland) 2010 to provide an exemption to running clubs in respect of providing a traffic management plan for the closure of roads, in the same manner in which public processions and cycling events are exempt.

Ms Mallon: The Roads (Miscellaneous Provision) Act (Northern Ireland) 2010 provides a power, which allows a road to be closed for the holding of a special event. Prior to the Act being commenced, roads had been closed by police using general policing powers, which were never wholly appropriate for the function.

Public processions and cycling events are governed by different legislation, and unlike special events, traffic on the day is still largely controlled by the presence of police officers. Responsibility for traffic control at a special event now lies with the event organiser. While the legislation was welcomed by many, I am aware that it does present challenges for some events. I have therefore asked my officials to bring forward proposals for a review of this legislation which the public will be consulted on.

Mr Stalford asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether her Department will undertake the ongoing maintenance of the unadopted alleyway between Olympia Drive and the National Stadium.

(AQW 2934/17-22)

Ms Mallon: The alleyway between Olympia Drive and Windsor Park Stadium is not owned or maintained by the Department. Adoption of this alleyway has previously been raised and considered by my Department on a number of occasions. The primary purpose of this rear alleyway is to serve private property on Olympia Drive. Furthermore, as there are existing alternative adopted footways serving the area it would not be appropriate to adopt this alleyway into the public road network.

Mr Stalford asked the Minister for Infrastructure, with specific reference to ease of access to the North Stand for emergency services, whether her Department will undertake a safety assessment of the alleyway between Olympia Drive and the National Stadium.

Ms Mallon: It is my understanding that the planning application for the recent redevelopment of the National Stadium, which was subsequently granted planning permission, was considered by the Safety Action Group and Safety Technical Group, which includes representation from all of the emergency services. This alleyway was not proposed as an access for emergency services as part of this planning application.

As part of my Department's consideration of this planning application, in its consultee role as statutory roads authority, my officials deemed that emergency services would have suitable access to the stadium from the public road network.

Given this, the narrowness of the alleyway and that it is gated, my Department has no current plans to undertake a safety assessment of the alleyway between Olympia Drive and the National Stadium.

Ms Anderson asked the Minister for Infrastructure for her assessment of the Derry to Coleraine Phase 3 rail improvements in addressing regional imbalance.

(AQW 2942/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Enhancing connectivity to and from the North West is a priority for me. This is not an end in itself. It is about addressing regional imbalance and playing our part in unlocking the economic potential of the North West to transform lives and improve health and well-being. The Derry to Coleraine / Belfast rail line will be increasingly important to the realisation of that ambition. In that regard, I recognise the significant interest in the future delivery of Phase 3 upgrade of the Derry –Coleraine railway line. The completion of Phases 1 and 2 paved the way for the introduction of hourly services between Coleraine and Derry resulting in significant increases in passenger numbers on the line.

I am committed to addressing regional imbalance and better connecting communities across the North with a clear focus on public transport including rail. However, given the severe constraints to my Department's budget over recent years, I have inherited significant pressures across all areas. I am currently assessing those pressures reflecting on my priorities, the commitments in "New Decade: New Approach" and the budget made available for the period ahead before making a decision on progressing this project.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Infrastructure to detail how many claims against her Department have been made for damage caused to vehicles that have hit potholes, in the last three years.

Ms Mallon: Details of the number of public liability compensation claims received, in each of the last full three financial years, where the alleged cause of the vehicle damage was a pothole are shown in table below:

Year	Vehicle Damage
2016/2017	1,025
2017/2018	3,093
2018/2019	2,454

Mr Wells asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AQW 838/17-22, what is the cost to her Department associated with the lighting of park and ride sites when they are not being used by vehicles.

(AQW 2969/17-22)

Ms Mallon: As explained previously in my response to AQW 838/17-22, the provision of lighting in Park and Ride/Share sites consistent with the adjacent road lighting is important in enhancing the public perception of their safety and attractiveness.

The energy cost to provide lighting throughout the night in my Department's Park and Share sites is currently estimated at £15,800. However my Department's ongoing programme to change all of the lighting at Park and Ride/Share sites to energy efficient LED units, will significantly reduce these costs. The pace at which this ongoing programme of work is taken forward will depend on the necessary funding being available.

Figures are not available for Park and Ride sites which are managed by Translink.

Mr Wells asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AQW 838/17-22, how much carbon is released into the atmosphere as a result of her Department's decision to light all park and ride sites when they are not being used by vehicles.

(AQW 2970/17-22)

Ms Mallon: As explained previously in my response to AQW 838/17-22, the provision of lighting in Park and Ride/Share sites consistent with the adjacent road lighting is important in enhancing the public perception of their safety and attractiveness.

It is estimated that currently 33 Tonnes of CO<sub>2</sub> are produced in providing lighting throughout the night in my Department's Park and Share sites. However my Department's ongoing programme to change all of the lighting at Park and Ride/Share sites to energy efficient LED units, will significantly reduce this figure. The pace at which this programme of work is taken forward will depend on the necessary funding being available.

Figures are not available for Park and Ride sites which are managed by Translink.

Mr Middleton asked the Minister for Infrastructure what plans her Department has to address the ongoing traffic concerns at Caw Roundabout, Londonderry.

(AQW 3018/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Caw Roundabout is a major junction, which carries around 50,000 vehicles each day. Around 5,000 of those vehicles use the roundabout during the peak hour. At present, the roundabout is considered to have sufficient capacity to accommodate the volume of traffic using it. However, my officials are aware of significant proposed private developments planned for this area that will, if they proceed, increase traffic volumes.

My officials are in discussions with developers to consider mitigation measures to facilitate the introduction of traffic signals at the roundabout and left turn slip lanes, similar to those previously provided at the Culmore junction on the city side of the Foyle Bridge.

I am committed to working to find solutions that deliver better results for our communities and improves lives across Northern Ireland. However, due to uncertainty about the timing of the private developments and ongoing budgetary constraints in my Department, it is not possible at present, to indicate if, or when, these improvements might be undertaken.

Mr Muir asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether her Department has any plans to fund construction of Strathfoyle Greenway, Derry/Londonderry.

(AQW 3028/17-22)

Ms Mallon: As outlined in my answer to AQW 1170/17-22, I am keen to work with other Ministers and with all stakeholders to deliver on projects that have the potential to improve the lives of people and connect communities. However, before I take decisions in relation to funding, I will need to consider carefully the budget position after the 2020/21 budget is made known.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Infrastructure to detail what (i) properties; and (ii) land are currently surplus to requirements within her Department.

Ms Mallon: The table below provides details of all DfI property and land currently declared surplus to requirements. This list is subject to regular change as new sites are declared surplus and sites are disposed of in line with the Government Disposal Procedures:

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Infrastructure, in relation to her statement on 27 February, whether she has had any discussions with the insurance industry regarding MOT certificates being treated as evidence of roadworthiness.
(AQW 3085/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Following the suspension of using scissor lifts in Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) test centres on 27 January 2020, the Association of British Insurers (ABI) wrote to me to confirm that a motor insurance policy requires that the vehicle is kept in roadworthy condition and it is the responsibility of the driver to make sure their vehicle is safe to drive and complies with all applicable laws. They advised that an insurer would not penalise a policyholder for something that is entirely out of their control, such as the suspension of MOT test facilities, and would approach any claims on a pragmatic case-by-case basis provided that the policyholder had booked a test.

I also met with Mr Alistair Ross of ABI on 10 March 2020 to discuss the motor insurance position as a result of the disruption to MOT services and welcomed his support in sharing with ABI members the information we provided on the disruption, particularly in relation to the issue of Temporary Exemption Certificates (TEC) for vehicles five years old and over, and the prioritisation of four-year-old vehicles, which had not previously had an MOT, taxis and car dealerships. We agreed to liaise further when the implementation plans for the 52 new lifts have been agreed.

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Infrastructure how many existing traffic calming schemes have been (i) upgraded; and (ii) repaired, broken down by local council area, in each of the last five years.

Ms Mallon: The initial review of all requests considers various factors including: the likely speed and volume of traffic; the most recent 3 year personal injury collision statistics; and environmental factors such as the presence of schools, playgrounds, hospitals, clinics, shops, public buildings and if the road is used as a through route.

- (i) Details of existing traffic calming schemes that have been upgraded, broken down by council area, in each of the last five years are shown in the table below:

Existing Traffic Calming Schemes - upgraded

- (ii) While repairs to traffic calming features are identified and programmed for repair in accordance with our established maintenance standards, my Department's road maintenance system does not identify these repairs separately and therefore the information requested in relation to repairs on traffic calming schemes is not available.

I would like to be able to do more in terms of improving the road network, but it is simply not feasible to this at present due to severe budget constraints and many other pressures faced by my Department. I have been raising the need for additional investment with the Finance Minister, in advance of the 2020/21 budget.

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Infrastructure how many new traffic calming schemes or measures have been completed, broken down by local council area, in each of the past five years.

Ms Mallon: Details of the number of new traffic calming schemes completed, broken down by council area, in each of the last five years are shown in the table below.

New Traffic Calming Schemes

My Department is committed to introducing measures that reduce the speed of traffic on our roads. We are currently trialling the effectiveness of 'signed only' 20mph limits, which could be used more widely in appropriate environments, such as residential areas with schools, than would be possible with the current approach of providing 20mph limits along with traffic calming features. I am expecting receipt of the findings of the trial in the next month or so, and I fully intend to see what potential there is, to build on the work already underway.

Ms Kimmins asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline her Department's plans for resurfacing John F Kennedy Park, Bessbrook.

Ms Mallon: My Department currently has no plans to carry out resurfacing at John F Kennedy Park. As with all public roads, the condition of John F Kennedy Park will be monitored during periodic maintenance inspections and it may be included in future works programmes. In the meantime, defects recorded during the most recent inspection on 2 February 2020 have been noted and will be actioned for repair in line with my Department's current maintenance guidelines.

I have been raising the need for additional investment with the Minister for Finance in order to better maintain our roads and deal with other growing pressures facing my Department. I welcome the additional allocation made to my Department for roads repairs. This money will help to begin to address the backlog. The extent of resurfacing plans amongst other competing priorities and pressures within my Department, will be determined by the forthcoming budget.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline what infrastructure projects her Department will seek EU funding for.

(AQW 3200/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My department will seek EU funding for all projects for which it is possible to do so. The latest Treasury advice indicates that it is possible to continue to bid for new grant funding until the end of the transition period. Should any suitable calls for applications be published during this time, these will be utilised.

Looking beyond 2020 I have asked my officials to explore all future options for accessing alternative EU funding streams, including those relating to PEACE+ and Horizon Europe.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure for her assessment of the impact that waste water capacity issues are having in terms of preventing developments.

(AQW 3202/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Based on the NI Water PC21 Business Plan analysis, there are 116 areas served by wastewater systems experiencing capacity issues across the North that are potentially affecting development. I am concerned that this is having an impact on the environment and on planning decisions in respect of housing and business developments seeking connection to the sewerage network and therefore it is having a significant impact on people's lives.

I have raised this issue and the critical need for investment in our waste water and sustainable drainage infrastructure with Executive colleagues so we can build more homes and grow our economy.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether there are plans to introduce a rail stop at Holywood Exchange.

Ms Mallon: I am committed to improving connectivity for the benefit of our economy and communities across Northern Ireland. In that regard, I am clear that our rail network, whilst relatively small, presents a unique opportunity to improve the sustainability of our transport operations. However given the severe and challenging budget constraints I have inherited, there are significant challenges across my Department.

I will be assessing the pressures across my Department reflecting my priorities, the commitments in the "New Decade: New Approach" and the budget made available for the period ahead. In line with this, my Department is developing proposals for a new Regional Strategic Transport Network Transport Plan and a new Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan. These plans will inform priorities for future development of the main road and rail networks and will consider the addition of rail halts, such as Holywood Exchange.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister for Infrastructure when funding will be made available to extend the Gransha Greenway out to Strathfoyle.

(AQW 3206/17-22)

Ms Mallon: As outlined in response to previous Assembly Questions about Derry City and Strabane District Council's proposed Strathfoyle Greenway project (AQW 3028/17-22 and AQW 1170/17-22), I am keen to work with other Ministers and with all stakeholders to deliver on projects that have the potential to improve the lives of people and connect communities. However, before I take decisions in relation to funding, I will need to consider carefully the budget position after the 2020/21 budget is allocated.

Mr Buckley asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether her Department plans to make James Street, Portadown, a one-way system.

(AQW 3209/17-22)

Ms Mallon: James Street is a residential area made up of terrace housing and with on-street parking permitted on both sides. Although traffic progression can be an issue at times as the street is reduced to one lane, I am advised this is consistent with the congestion in the Edenderry area during peak times.

Whilst a one way system may ease congestion, it could have significant safety disadvantages due to increased traffic volumes and speed on what is a residential street. Therefore at present, there are no plans to introduce a one way system.

Mr Buckley asked the Minister for Infrastructure what engagement her Department has had with Armagh City, Banbridge and Craigavon Borough Council regarding the upkeep and visual cleanliness of the M12 gateway to Craigavon.

Ms Mallon: I can confirm that my officials have been engaging with Armagh, Banbridge and Craigavon Borough Council in relation to gateway proposals on the M12. I understand a Council proposal to create a gateway feature on the roundabout is currently at a preliminary stage and my officials will liaise again with Council officials when their proposal is sufficiently developed.

The M12 continues to be subject to monitoring during periodic inspections, and any routine work including removal of litter is carried out in parallel with other maintenance activities on this stretch of the motorway.

Mr O'Dowd asked the Minister for Infrastructure what plans her Department has for improving safety on the Brankinstown Road, Aghalee.

(AQW 3213/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I can confirm that my officials are aware of a collision on the Brankinstown Road in 2019 and another collision in recent weeks.

I can advise that my officials will be reviewing all information once it is made available by the PSNI, after it has completed its investigation into the collision. This, along with consideration of general collision data for the location, will inform the overall assessment of safety on this road and whether further engineering measures may be necessary.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she will consider plans to establish a rail halt to serve Ballymartin Park and Ride, Templepatrick.

Ms Mallon: I am committed to improving connectivity for the benefit of our economy and communities across Northern Ireland. In that regard, I am clear that our rail network, whilst relatively small, presents a unique opportunity to improve the sustainability of our transport operations. However given the severe budget constraints I have inherited, there are significant challenges across my Department.

I will be assessing the pressures across my Department reflecting my priorities, the commitments in the "New Decade: New Approach" and the budget made available for the period ahead. In line with this, my Department is developing proposals for a new Regional Strategic Transport Network Transport Plan and a new Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan. These plans will inform priorities for future development of the main road and rail networks and will consider the addition of rail halts, such as Ballymartin Park and Ride.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she has any short-term or long-term plans for Donegall Square to be pedestrianised.

(AQW 3222/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Over the coming weeks, and working with the Department for Communities and Belfast City Council, I want to carefully consider how my Department can contribute to a more joined-up approach across planning, transport and regeneration in developing Belfast city centre – including Donegall Square – as an attractive, accessible, safe and vibrant space.

Not just for Belfast but for Northern Ireland as a whole, I have a clear vision to increase sustainable travel options that connect communities, reduce greenhouse gas emissions and deliver benefits for people. I also recognise that bold change is needed to deliver that vision so that we can prioritise space for those who walk and cycle as well as for those who use public transport.

In particular, I will be considering the interesting ideas coming out of the Belfast City Centre Connectivity Study and its 2035 vision of a city centre transformed with a rebalanced street network, providing quality space promoting walking and cycling and ensuring access to high quality, reliable, public transport.

I also plan to continue to engage with civic and other stakeholders in shaping a draft shared vision for central Belfast and with Executive colleagues to help realize that vision.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister for Infrastructure for an update on flood remedial works planned to take place during the calendar year of 2020 in the Finaghy area of South Belfast.

(AQW 3224/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I have been advised by NI Water that following flooding incidents in this area, it is undertaking a localised appraisal study of the drainage systems in the Orchardville and Ardmore areas of Finaghy Road North. Once complete, the results of this study will be used to identify any possible works that may be taken forward. Progression to detailed design and delivery of any medium-term solution will be subject to the availability of funding and is not currently planned within the 2020 calendar year.

My Department is also currently preparing a pre-feasibility report for various options to mitigate the flood risk in the Ashton Park area. It is anticipated that this report will be completed by May 2020 and if a financially viable scheme is identified, my officials will take forward a more detailed feasibility report and economic appraisal.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for Infrastructure how local Government will ensure that local councillors will be part of the decisions made on how developers' contributions are made and spent under section 76 duties.

(AQW 3242/17-22)

Ms Mallon: In January 2017 the Department issued Development Management Practice Note 21 on the use of Section 76 Planning Agreements to assist those involved in this aspect of the planning process.

Planning Agreements are considered as part of the planning application process and therefore would, in the case of council planning authorities, normally be considered by local councillors on the planning committee as part of the determination of the subject application.

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister for Infrastructure for an update on the proposed park and ride at William Street, Newtownards.

(AQW 3272/17-22)

Ms Mallon: The provision of a potential Park and Ride facility in Newtownards is currently under consideration and a number of sites have been appraised, including the former Ards Leisure Centre site on Hardford Link / William Street in Newtownards, which I understand is now surplus to requirements following the construction of a new Leisure Centre. My Department has already expressed an early interest in acquiring this land.

However, I have inherited severe and challenging budget constraints. I am committed to working to find solutions that deliver better for our communities and improve lives across Northern Ireland, to address regional imbalance and facilitate sustainable transport solutions. I am currently assessing the pressures across my Department reflecting on my priorities and the commitments in New Decade: New Approach. It is, therefore, too early to give commitments on specific schemes until more clarity is received on the budget allocation available to me in the years ahead.

Mrs Barton asked the Minister for Infrastructure to detail (i) how many defibrillators have been installed in departmental premises since January 2015; and (ii) the locations of the defibrillators.

(AQW 3273/17-22)

Ms Mallon:

- (i) Three defibrillators have been installed in Department for Infrastructure premises since January 2015.
- (ii) Two of the defibrillators are located in my headquarters building, Clarence Court in Adelaide Street, Belfast. The third defibrillator is located in Castle Buildings in the Stormont Estate, Belfast.

Mrs Barton asked the Minister for Infrastructure what policy her Department has in place for providing defibrillators in departmental premises.

(AQW 3274/17-22)

Ms Mallon: The Northern Ireland Civil Service does not have a central policy on the provision of defibrillators.

However I have two defibrillators located in my Department's headquarters in Adelaide Street, Belfast and one in Roads Eastern Division at Castle Buildings, in the Stormont Estate.

All three of these devices are registered with The Circuit, the national defibrillator network, and are connected to the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service. This enables callers to the Emergency services to be directed to the closest defibrillator including those sited in my Department's premises.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Infrastructure how much has been spent on the A5 dual carriageway project, including legal fees, up to March 2020.

Ms Mallon: At the end of January 2020 £81.1 million has been expended on the A5 dual carriageway project. It is anticipated that this total will rise to £81.5m by the end of March 2020.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether (i) the A5 inquiry will consider (a) different routes; or (b) a rail upgrade as an alternative to the proposed dual carriageway route between Newbuildings and Ballygawley; (ii) its exclusive focus will be on the environmental impact of the proposed route.

Ms Mallon: As a result of the quashing of the decision to proceed with the A5 Western Transport Corridor (A5WTC) scheme in November 2018, my Department has been working to enable a fresh decision to be made. This included the publication of an addendum to the existing Environmental Statement in March 2019 and a subsequent public consultation process. Following this the Department concluded that a further Public Inquiry was needed and agreed to the Inquiry considering strategic matters beyond those directly relating to the Environmental Statement Addendum.

The Public Inquiry for the A5WTC project took place in the Strule Arts Centre, Omagh in two stages. Stage 1, between 18 and 21 February 2020, considered 'environmental matters' ,while Stage 2 considered 'non-environmental' matters over a 3 day period from 11 March 2020. During the second day of the Stage 2 hearings alternatives, including a new railway and alternative off-line routes and alignments, were considered by the Inquiry.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether the alignment of the A5 between Newbuildings and Ballygawley is the settled policy of her Department.

(AQW 3287/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My Department's current position on the proposed alignment for the A5 between New Buildings and Ballygawley is as set out in the Statutory Orders that were published in November 2017 and subsequently quashed in November 2018, following a legal challenge.

My Department is currently carrying out the necessary work to enable a fresh decision on the A5 Western Transport Corridor scheme to be taken and a Public Inquiry into the scheme concluded on 13 March 2020. I await the Inspector's report before deciding how best to proceed.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for Infrastructure for an update on residents' parking schemes in (i) the Carrickhill; (ii) Great Georges Street; and (iii) Newington areas of North Belfast.

Ms Mallon: The first residents' parking scheme in Rugby Road / College Park Avenue, Belfast, came into operation during April 2018. A review of the scheme, which will reflect the needs, experiences and feedback of residents, is currently underway. I will want to make sure that any lessons learnt from this scheme inform wider policy on implementing residents' parking schemes to the benefit of communities.

At this stage, I am not in a position to advise on a timescale for completing the review, but I can confirm that any findings will be made publically available. I will consider any new schemes in light of these findings.

Ms Kimmens asked the Minister for Infrastructure how are the costs of concessionary fares approximated.

Ms Mallon: The costs of reimbursing concessionary travel are determined by the amount claimed by those transport operators who participate in the Concessionary Fares Scheme. These claims are based on actual concessionary ticket sales and are comprehensively and independently audited annually. An independent annual audit has been completed each year since the introduction of free travel for senior citizens in 2001. It is also subject to scrutiny each year by NIAO and forms part of their audit of my Department's accounts.

My Department forecasts concessionary travel costs based on a review of actual expenditure on a claim by claim basis by operator in the previous complete financial year. The cost of each claim is then recalculated by multiplying the cost by a percentage factor, usually 3%. The factor is intended to cover inflated costs that may be due to fares increases; increased passenger usage and the increase in the numbers of people who are eligible for concessionary travel.

Mr Chambers asked the Minister for Infrastructure what length of sight lines would normally need to be satisfied for a private roadway joining a rural road that is subject to the national speed limit.

Ms Mallon: The specific length of sight lines required for any new private roadway joining a rural road that is subject to the national speed limit of 60 mph will be dependent on the estimated actual speed of vehicles using the public road in the vicinity of the entrance, the use of the access, and the traffic volumes on the public road. A single dwelling accessing a rural road where vehicles are estimated to be travelling at the national speed limit of 60mph will typically be 2.4 metres x 215 metres. The full range of sight line requirements for new accesses is given in Tables A and B of the guidance document Development Control Advice Note 15 which can be accessed using the link below

https://www.planningni.gov.uk/index/policy/planning\_statements\_and\_supplementary\_planning\_guidance/dcans/dcan\_15\_-\_vehicular\_access\_standards-5.pdf

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure (i) how many homes have availed of the Home Flood Protection Grant Scheme; and (ii) how much funding is available for this scheme.

(AQW 3320/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My Department has received 218 applications to the Homeowner Flood Protection Grant Scheme so far, of which 136 have been approved under the scheme eligibility criteria. Of those approved, 92 homeowners have opted to progress with works and installations are now complete at 80 homes. In addition, a further 16 homeowners applications are being considered or progressed by my Department. The initial overall budget for the scheme was approximately £960,000 and the grant element of the scheme, if an application is approved, will cover 90%, up to a maximum of £10,000, of the total survey and estimated installation costs.

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline her plans to increase safety measures at railways crossings and bridges.

Ms Mallon: Translink continually seeks to increase safety at crossings and bridges. Its staff participate in UK wide initiatives such as the Bridge Strike Prevention Group, which aim to improve safety for members of the public at the road and rail interface. Locally, Translink works in collaboration with my Department to jointly manage the safety risk at railway crossings and bridges. Measures implemented include the installation and annual maintenance of warning signs, provision of low bridge information to the haulage industry, signage of alternative routes and the installation of additional bridge protection beams. Translink also regularly inspects bridges both in the immediate aftermath of a reported bridge strike and during annual inspection cycles to monitor asset condition.

In relation to suicide prevention on the rail network, I believe a more innovative and collaborative approach is required and I can assure you that I will continue to work closely with Executive colleagues, local communities, experts, stakeholders and staff to ensure that my Department contributes fully to actions that can be taken to reduce the number of suicide attempts associated with our transport network and bridges in particular. I look forward to building on this engagement through the Minister for Health's new Executive Working Group on Mental Well-being, Resilience and Suicide Prevention.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister for Infrastructure for an update on the resurfacing scheme for Strabane bypass.

Ms Mallon: All preparation work on this scheme has been completed and the carriageway is ready to receive the final surface layer, which unfortunately has had to be postponed on a number of occasions due to the extremely poor weather in February. Favourable weather conditions are required when applying the final surfacing course to ensure its longevity and this work is currently planned for the weekend of 21st and 22nd March 2020.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AQW 2144/17-22, following (i) the Ofgem and government joint statement on the position in England and Wales entitled Upgrading our Energy System 2017, that stated that defining electricity storage as a subset of generation in the Electricity Act 1989 will confirm the Government's current position that storage facilities should be treated as a form of electricity generating station for planning purposes; and (ii) the statement issued in December 2017 by the Chief Planner in England, that stated that local Planning Authorities should, as applicable, take the Government's position into account when considering proposed or existing development involving the construction, extension or operation of electricity storage facilities (such as battery storage systems), why her Department has not updated its approach.

Ms Mallon: I understand that the Department for the Economy and the Utility Regulator will be examining the need to consider energy storage as generating facilities in discussions around implementation of the Clean Energy Package. My officials are engaging with DfE officials on this and to ensure that any planning implications of this work are properly considered.

In the interim any application for planning permission will be considered by the relevant planning authority on a case-by-case basis, considering the type and scale of development proposed against the requirements of extant planning policy and legislation.

Mr Muir asked the Minister for Infrastructure to detail (i) the average; (ii) the shortest; and (iii) the longest time taken by her Department to determine a planning application within its remit, in each of the last five years.

Ms Mallon: Details of the time taken to determine planning applications within my Department are set out in the attached tables.

Time taken to determine<sup>1</sup> Departmental planning applications, 2015/16 to Q2 2019/20

	Shortest time (weeks)	Average time (weeks)<sup>2</sup>	Longest time (weeks)
2015/16	2.6	137.2	382.4
2016/17	11.0	125.9	560.2
2017/18	16.8	64.6	403.8
2018/19	86.2	260.9	556.8
2019/20 (up to end of Q2) <sup>3</sup>	16.2	56.4	177.4

Notes

- 1 The time to take to determine (or process) an application is calculated from the date on which an application is deemed valid to the date on which the decision is issued or the application is withdrawn. The only exception is for called in applications, i.e. those initially made to councils where the Minister/Department directs that these should fall to the Department for determination. For called in applications, the time taken to determine (or process) an application is calculated from the date on which the application is called in by the Department to the date on which the decision is issued or the application is withdrawn.
- 2 The median is used for the average processing time as any extreme values have the potential to inflate the mean, leading to a result that may not be considered as "typical".
- 3 Figures are provided up to the end of Q2 2019/20 (i.e. end of September 2019) in line with the most recently published Official Statistics. Quarterly estimates for 2019/20 are provisional and will be subject to revision ahead of finalised annual figures, to be published in June / July 2020.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Infrastructure when funding will be made available to advance the extension of the Waterside Greenway in Londonderry to the village of Strathfoyle.

(AQW 3513/17-22)

Ms Mallon: As outlined in response to previous Assembly Questions about Derry City and Strabane District Council's proposed Strathfoyle Greenway project (AQW 1170/17-22, AQW 3028/17-22 and AQW 3206/17-22), I am keen to work with other Ministers and with all stakeholders to deliver on projects that have the potential to improve the lives of people and connect communities. However, before I take decisions in relation to funding, I will need to consider carefully the budget position after the 2020/21 Budget is allocated to my Department.

Mr Muir asked the Minister for Infrastructure, in relation to COVID-19, whether she plans to assist the logistics industry by (i) the temporary relaxation of drivers' hours rules; and (ii) the lifting of night-time delivery restrictions.[R]

(AQW 3558/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I will quickly consider any requests for temporary relaxation of drivers' hours in urgent cases where the emergency exemption does not apply. An emergency exemption can already be used, in limited circumstances, to prevent, amongst other things, danger to life or health. It can be used by operators if the Coronavirus outbreak leads to a chronic shortage of drivers, and there is an immediate need on health grounds to deliver essential supplies. This does not require prior authorisation from my Department.

In addition, a temporary relaxation of the enforcement of the rules can be considered in urgent cases where the emergency exemption would not apply. My Department's prior agreement is required before any relaxation can take effect. Operators who are seeking a relaxation are required to provide a "Statement of Case", justifying the relaxation request and I would ask that they contact my Department if they need to do so. I am determined that my Department will do all that it can to support communities and help alleviate, where we may, any short term consequences of the coronavirus.

In relation to the lifting of the night-time delivery restrictions, I have written to all local councils making it clear that they should temporarily withhold any planning enforcement action which could result in unnecessarily restricting deliveries of food and other essential supplies, in order to support the response to Covid-19.

Ms Dillon asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline how her Department will address the disparity in the condition of rural roads and the trunk road network.

(AQO 341/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I would like to deliver better for our communities and to do more maintenance on rural roads. I have, however, inherited severe and challenging budget constraints that continue to make it difficult to offer the level of repair and resurfacing that our roads need, and that the public deserves.

The independent report on Structural Maintenance established an annual requirement of £143m, at today's prices, to maintain the structural integrity of the entire road network in the north. The average annual shortfall over the last five years has been £55m.

As a result of budget constraints, my Department has had to manage priorities adopting a sub-optimal budget strategy. The current strategy aims to keep the trunk road network at defined levels of condition, in view of its strategic importance and the traffic volumes it carries. We then target as much of the remaining budget as possible, to all other roads. It has been recognised over recent years that this has resulted in a long-term deterioration of the non-trunk network and officials have undertaken to review current practice in this area.

I have been raising the need for additional investment with the Finance Minister, in order to allow better maintenance of our roads and to deal with other growing pressures facing my Department. I welcome the additional allocation following representation recently made by my Department, towards winter service, urgent street lights and roads repairs. This money will help to address the backlog. Future service levels will depend upon future budget availability. I will continue to work with the Finance Minister and other Executive colleagues to find a way forward that delivers at the very least these basic services that our society and our economy desperately requires.

In relation to your specific requests, ahead of any further budget allocations, my officials will continue to inspect and repair any actionable defects, in line with current maintenance guidelines.

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she will deliver a capital grants scheme for greenways.
(AQO 348/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Since taking up post as Minister for Infrastructure, several Members have asked me about the development of greenways and funding for greenway schemes, in particular, you have asked me about my plans to progress the Strategic Plan for Greenways.

In the Adjournment Debate about the Comber Greenway in this Assembly on Tuesday 3rd March, I underlined the many benefits associated with developing greenways: environmental, social and economic, in addition to the huge benefits they bring to physical and mental health and wellbeing. I also explained that I wanted to consider carefully how the development of greenways generally can deliver projects that have the potential to improve people's lives and connect communities. That work to consider options is currently underway.

I know that most Councils have already undertaken work – some of it funded by my Department – to develop feasibility studies and designs for greenway schemes that they want to deliver in their local areas. I am very willing to work collaboratively with Councils to provide them with whatever help I can to deliver their projects. Once the Budget process provides clarity on the resources available to me, I will be able to firm up my objectives for greenways and active travel more generally.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister for Infrastructure, given that she has indicated that she has no plans to increase parking facilities at Dundonald Park and Ride, what action will she take to mitigate problems caused by commuter parking in the area.
(AQO 352/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I am aware that the demand for parking in Dundonald has increased in recent years as a result of both commuter traffic and the development within the Ulster Hospital site.

Unfortunately there is no adjacent land available to extend the Dundonald Park & Ride, but we are currently looking at additional sites in Newtownards and Comber. These sites would provide an attractive alternative for commuters who currently travel to Dundonald to make use of the Glider services.

However, it is not possible at this stage to confirm precise timescales, or even if these projects will be possible, until more clarity is received on the Budget allocation available to me in the years ahead.

Ms Bailey asked the Minister for Infrastructure when she plans to proceed with the project to extend the Belfast stormwater tunnel.
(AQO 346/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I am advised by NI Water that it has requested funding to extend the Belfast Stormwater Tunnel as part of its Business Plan submission for the PC21 Price Control period. This was submitted to the Northern Ireland Utility Regulator in January 2020.

NI Water's PC 21 Business Plan sets out the company's total funding requirement for the 6 year period from April 2021 to March 2027. This includes the funding for all of NI Water's elements of the Belfast Strategic Drainage Infrastructure Plan which is currently being developed through my Department's Living With Water Programme.

The Utility Regulator's Draft Determination on NI Water's Business Plan will be published for consultation on 1 July 2020. If funded, it is anticipated that construction of the tunnel could commence in 2023. Subject to the necessary approvals and funding this is a major infrastructure project that I would like to see delivered at the earliest opportunity. For that to happen, the Executive will need to provide additional funding to my Department for water and wastewater infrastructure.

Miss Woods asked the Minister for Infrastructure, in light of the Court of Appeal's Ruling on 27 February 2020 regarding the Heathrow Airport expansion, for her assessment of any Regionally Significant Developments that are not consistent with our obligations under the Paris Agreement.
(AQO 351/17-22)

Ms Mallon: The England and Wales Court of Appeal's decision to quash the decision to approve the third runway at Heathrow has been of great interest to many of us given the climate emergency we face.

As I understand it the Court's decision revolved around a particular legal point. In England, when the Government creates policy statements, section 5 of the Planning Act 2008 requires it to "include an explanation of how the policy set out in the statement takes account of Government policy relating to the mitigation of, and adaptation to, climate change" which did not happen in this case.

In terms of how the judgement may affect Northern Ireland I can advise that the Planning Act (NI) 2011 does not contain a provision equivalent to section 5(8) of the Planning Act 2008.

My officials however are liaising with the UK Government to understand any wider implications of the Court of Appeal's Ruling on 27 February 2020.

Ms C Kelly asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she will consider constructing two phases of the A5 simultaneously, in order to rapidly progress this project.

(AQO 345/17-22)

Ms Mallon: The current phasing for the A5 project is: Phase 1A from New Buildings to north of Strabane; Phase 1B south of Omagh to Ballygawley; Phase 2 from Strabane North to Omagh South and Phase 3 from Ballygawley to the border at Aughnacloy.

The previous Executive agreed an indicative funding package for the A5 up to 2020/21, as a Flagship Project and the Fresh Start Agreement affirmed the Irish Government's commitment of £75 million to allow the construction of the Phase 1A, from New Buildings to north of Strabane.

In New Decade: New Approach the UK Government committed to infrastructure funding for investment in capital projects such as the A5 and the Irish Government re-affirmed its £75 million commitment to Phase 1A. I very much welcome these commitments and I want to see this project progress.

Whilst I had been hopeful that Phase 1A could commence in early 2021, this is now likely to be spring 2021, subject to the satisfactory conclusion of all statutory procedures, as the Inspector has indicated that his findings, following the Public Inquiry, will not be presented to the Department until the end of September 2020. The progression of each phase will depend on the availability of future funding, in Budgets and subsequent Spending Rounds.

I have stated clearly that I am committed to tackling regional imbalance, connecting communities, promoting economic growth, improving road safety and delivering radical change. As such, I look forward to working with the Finance Minister and to further engagement with Executive colleagues and the Irish Government to secure the necessary funding to take this project forward as rapidly as possible.

Mr Allen asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline the steps her Department is taking to reduce the number of fatalities on our roads.

Ms Mallon: As Minister for Infrastructure, I am responsible for promoting and improving road safety, a responsibility I take very seriously. Regrettably, so far this year 13 people have lost their lives in road traffic collisions, compared to 8 at the same time last year and 2018.

It is worth noting, that more than nine out of ten road traffic collisions on our roads are because of human error. The Department and our road safety partners can educate, engineer and enforce, but each of us as individuals has to take personal responsibility for our attitudes and behaviours as road users. There are three key elements to help improve road safety. These are Engineering, Enforcement and Education and my Department has a key role these.

My Department will continue to undertake comprehensive inspection and maintenance activities and will continue to monitor collisions and be proactive in our identification of engineering works to further improve road safety. I have recently announced that I intend to increase the fine and penalty points for using a handheld mobile phone while driving. This is a first step, and I will consider what else can be done. I will also be looking at the issue of drink driving and have sought a meeting with the Chief Constable to discuss road traffic issues.

Many road user groups are particularly vulnerable on our roads – notably, the young and the elderly, pedestrians, cyclists and motorcyclists; and the 17-24 year old age group. I also intend to bring forward proposals later this year to introduce Graduated Driver Licensing (GDL). This will establish a revised training, testing and post-testing regime for new drivers (and riders) to reduce the over representation of mainly young drivers in fatal and serious injuries.

My Department through its road safety campaigns focuses on problem areas, such as drink driving, speeding, and careless and inattention; and on groups, which are, over-represented in the casualty figures. These campaigns challenge road user behaviours and encourage all those using the roads to take personal responsibility for their own safety and the safety of others. Actions undertaken to achieve a reduction in the number of people killed and seriously injured on our roads are carried out within the context of the NI Road Safety Strategy 2020.

I want to take the time, and work with partners to ensure my decision on the way we proceed following the expiry of the current Strategy, is as well informed as possible. Reducing death and serious injuries is an important aspect of improving wellbeing for all. I expect to be in a position to make a decision on the current Road Safety Strategy's successor later in the year.

I remain committed to continuing to work towards reducing deaths and serious injuries on our roads.

I recognise the continuing challenges of preventing road deaths and serious injuries and as such, it is key that my Department, in collaboration with partners continue to address the issues using all practicable methods.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Infrastructure for her assessment of the suitability of vehicle test centre equipment for the testing of Vehicles of Historical Interest.

(AQO 344/17-22)

Ms Mallon: The Driver and Vehicle Agency conducts mandatory vehicle tests on vehicles registered after 1960, and voluntary vehicle tests on vehicles registered before this date. Therefore vehicles that may be categorised as Vehicles of Historical Interest are already being tested using the equipment in vehicle test centres.

The vehicle testing process, and the use of vehicle testing equipment, is dependent on the vehicle's age and construction. In GB an MOT test exemption for Vehicles of Historical Interest, which are more than 40 years old, was introduced in May 2018.

A public consultation exercise was launched here last June seeking views on whether we should introduce the same exemption. My officials are preparing an analysis of responses received, which will help inform my decision how best to progress this policy.

Ms Sheerin asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether the entirety of the B47 Glenelly Road, Cranagh to The Six Towns will be included on the winter gritting schedule.

(AQO 347/17-22)

Ms Mallon: In accordance with the current Winter Service policy inherited from previous Ministers, my Department generally salts roads that carry more than 1,500 vehicles per day. The B47 between Cranagh and Draperstown currently carries around 600 vehicles per day, which is less than half of the established threshold.

Under our current policy small settlements of more than 100 dwellings in rural areas, are also connected to the Primary Gritted Network, by means of a gritted route. The B47 between Plumbridge and Cranagh is on the gritting schedule to provide such a gritted route to the village of Cranagh, during periods of icy conditions and winter weather.

The application of this policy ensures that 28% of the total road network, which carries around 80% of traffic, is salted, at an annual cost of approximately £6 million. My Department also deploys grit piles and salt bins on unsalted roads and undertakes secondary gritting of such roads after the primary salted network has been gritted or cleared of snow.

I fully understand and appreciate the concerns of those who use the more lightly trafficked roads and I would like to be able to expand our gritting service to many other routes, but it is simply not feasible to do this at this time due to the severe budget constraints faced by my Department.

Ms Mullan asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline her Department's role in working with the Education Authority in relation to pedestrian safety outside schools.

Ms Mallon: As Minister responsible for promoting and improving road safety, I want to work actively with partners to reduce death and serious injuries on our roads. I believe the targeted provision of infrastructure at and near schools can go a long way to making our roads and communities safer.

My Department does not however deal with the Education Authority when providing such infrastructure as it deals directly with the school. To promote and instil good road user behaviours in children, my Department has developed and provides free of charge, a range of road safety teaching resources to schools. These resources are designed to be used by teachers to highlight and embed good road safety behaviours, including pedestrian safety.

My Department has worked with the Education Authority to ensure teachers have access to these resources through its C2K system, the teachers ICT network. My officials have access to C2K and frequently update or upload new resources. My Department has also worked with the Education Authority to produce a road safety lesson on the Green Cross Code, which was broadcast to schools on the Education Authority's TV broadcast system.

Department of Justice

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Justice to provide a comparison of the prison population numbers for each of Northern Ireland's prisons, in each of the past five years, and to breakdown these figures by (i) age of prisoner; (ii) nature of offence; and (iii) length of sentence.

(AQW 2855/17-22)

Mrs Long (The Minister of Justice): Information on the average daily Northern Ireland prison population is available in the format requested from 2015/16.

The average daily Northern Ireland prison population presented by (i) age of prisoner; (ii) nature of offence; and (iii) sentence length, within each establishment is presented below for the period 2015/16 to 2018/19.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice what mechanism is in place to allow grievances to be made by Prison Service staff and to be managed effectively.

(AQW 2888/17-22)

Mrs Long: Prison staff are civil servants and are therefore subject to the NICS Grievance Policy (Staff Handbook Para 6.04 refers). If an issue arises an attempt will be made to resolve through informal contact at a local level in the first instance. If that is not possible, Prison Staff can then raise the issue through the formal NI Civil Service Grievance Policy.

Line Managers and/or the local HR department will refer staff to the grievance policy to ensure the member of staff fully understands the different roles in the process.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Justice what work, if any, the UK Independent Anti-Slavery Commissioner has engaged in with regard to Northern Ireland since 2017; and whether the Department is aware of any future plans on the part of the Commissioner on the impact of modern slavery in this jurisdiction.

(AQW 3010/17-22)

Mrs Long: There has been very positive engagement with the UK Independent Anti-Slavery Commissioner (IASC) in relation to Northern Ireland since 2017. This has included direct engagement with me and my Department, as well as with civil society, contracted support providers, local government, the judiciary and the Department of Health.

Dame Sara and I had a constructive meeting during her second visit to Northern Ireland on 18 and 19 February. My officials facilitated the IASC and her team to engage with partners which has helped to highlight best practice in raising public awareness; informed development of policy and strategy; and reinforced cross-border and cross-jurisdictional co-operation.

The IASC's Advisory Panel, which provides guidance, challenge and support to her office includes representation from Northern Ireland. This helps ensure the interests of this jurisdiction are considered by IASC at a strategic level.

I am committed to further engagement on an ongoing basis with the IASC, as we work together to take forward our strategic priorities to combat modern slavery and human trafficking in Northern Ireland and to support victims in their recovery.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Justice to outline the (i) shortest recorded; (ii) longest recorded; (iii) average time it takes for an individual who enters the National Referral Mechanism (NRM) in Northern Ireland to obtain a reasonable grounds decision or a conclusive grounds decision.

(AQW 3011/17-22)

Mrs Long: The Single Competent Authority (SCA) in the Home Office is responsible for the publication of NRM statistics. Information on the time taken to reach decisions does not currently form part of the published statistics.

The Home Office has advised that it is gathering views and opinions on how the publication of future NRM statistics could be improved and adapted to best meet user needs. Interested parties can register their interest in this consultation by emailing: NRMStatistics@homeoffice.gov.uk.

NRM statistics are produced in line with the Code of Practice for Statistics and are published online at the following link: – <https://www.gov.uk/government/collections/national-referral-mechanism-statistics>.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Justice whether her Department believes any legislative change is required on the 45-day recovery period for victims of human trafficking in response to the case of The Queen on the Application of NN and LP v Secretary of State for the Home Department decided in June 2019.

(AQW 3012/17-22)

Mrs Long: I am satisfied that no further legislative change is required in response to the case of The Queen on the Application of NN and LP v Secretary of State for the Home Department. This case related specifically to 'move-on' support provided by the Home Office to victims of modern slavery and human trafficking in England and Wales.

Support for potential victims of modern slavery in Northern Ireland is provided on a statutory basis, under section 18 of the Human Trafficking and Exploitation (Criminal Justice and Support for Victims) Act (Northern Ireland) 2015 ["the NI HT Act"]. Whilst 45 days is the minimum period that potential victims are entitled to under section 18, many potential victims receive much longer periods of support, subject to the amount of time taken by the NRM Single Competent Authority to reach a conclusive determination. DoJ support under section 18 continues to be made available throughout this period until a determination is reached. Section 18(9) of the NI HT Act also provides for the Department to ensure that assistance and support can continue to be provided to a person for such further period as the Department thinks necessary.

In the current annual Modern Slavery Strategy, my Department has undertaken to explore the potential for support available to adult potential victims of modern slavery under the DoJ support contract to be provided for an extended recovery and reflection period, subject to available resources. My Department will also consider the Home Office's Recovery Needs Assessment which was introduced in England and Wales in response to the case of NN and LP but which is at an early stage and is being kept under review.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Justice whether an appeal mechanism should be introduced in the National Referral Mechanism (NRM) process against a (i) preliminary; (ii) final decision indicating an individual is not a victim of human trafficking.

(AQW 3013/17-22)

Mrs Long: NRM decision-making is undertaken by the Single Competent Authority (SCA) in the Home Office. A reconsideration process is in place where a decision can be challenged if there are concerns a decision is not in line with published guidance or if there is new evidence that would impact on the decision. This reconsideration process was recently broadened to allow victims and their legal representatives to make reconsideration requests directly to the SCA and there is no time limit on when reconsiderations can be brought on new evidence grounds.

In addition, where an individual considered that the SCA had made a decision incorrectly, it would be also open to them to challenge that decision through the courts, by way of Judicial Review.

My response to AQW 888/17-22 also advised of the establishment of Multi-Agency Assurance Panels (MAAPs), in early 2019, to improve the quality of decisions and stakeholder confidence in the decision-making process. MAAPs were introduced to quality assure all negative conclusive grounds decisions made by the SCA before the individuals concerned are notified. Whilst the panels are not decision-making bodies and they do not have the ability to overturn decisions, they are in place to review the cases and provide the SCA with their review, which will either state that the panel agrees with the reasons for the negative decision or whether further consideration of the case by the SCA is suggested.

MAAPs consist of independent experts across the UK drawn from NGOs, local authorities and police. In summer 2019, additional recruitment of further panel members took place, to increase the pool of available members, in particular the representation from local authorities, and training of these new panel members took place in late 2019. Quarterly meetings of panel chairs, the SCA and the Home Office Modern Slavery Unit have been taking place to discuss and feedback on MAAPs, share lessons learned and best practice, highlight any issues, trends and themes that may have arisen during the process and ensure an ongoing consistent approach across MAAPs.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice to detail what (i) properties; and (ii) land are currently surplus to requirements within her Department.

(AQW 3039/17-22)

Mrs Long:

- (i) The following properties (buildings) have been declared surplus:
  - NI Regional War Room, 48 Mount Eden Park, BELFAST
  - Bangor Courthouse, 18-20 Quay Street, Bangor, BT20 5ED
  - Larne Courthouse, Victoria Road, Larne, BT40 1RN
- (ii) There is currently no land surplus to requirement within the Department.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice for her assessment of the use of CCTV as a way to reduce crime in town centres.

(AQW 3040/17-22)

Mrs Long: The Department has made no assessment of the use of CCTV as a way to reduce crime in town centres.

The Department of Justice does however fund Policing and Community Safety Partnerships (PCSPs), in partnership with the Northern Ireland Policing Board. PCSPs are statutory stand-alone bodies responsible for addressing local community safety concerns, which may include the management of CCTV as a deterrent to crime and antisocial behaviour, and to assist police in detecting crime. As such, CCTV can be a valuable tool that makes a contribution to community safety where it is deployed.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Justice to detail how much funding her Department will provide to the establishment of a new RUC George Cross museum and a timeline for work undertaken in this area.

(AQW 3101/17-22)

Mrs Long: The Police Service of Northern Ireland took over responsibility for the project to deliver a policing museum from the RUC George Cross Foundation in November 2016. HM Treasury committed £5.5m funding for the project, and a further £383k has been committed by my Department.

The timeframe is an operational matter for the Chief Constable.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Justice whether victims of human trafficking are entitled to access legal aid for the purposes of seeking a compensation claim against their trafficker; and, if so, how many individual victims over the last 5 years have applied for legal aid for this purpose.

(AQW 3108/17-22)

Mrs Long: Yes. Provided that a person is financially eligible for legal aid, and their claim has sufficient merit, they can be granted legal aid for this purpose.

Regrettably, data on legal aid applications is not sufficiently detailed to identify claims brought by victims of trafficking against their traffickers.

It is possible to identify requests for advice and assistance that relate to human trafficking. Numbers of such requests in the last five years are given below.

Year	2015	2016	2017	2018	2019
No. of requests	12	20	9	5	38

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Justice whether (i) there is any evidence of modern slavery being recorded in car washes in Northern Ireland; (ii) if so, what action is taken against it; (iii) and what advice does her Department provide to individuals concerned about the possibility of modern slavery at a car wash.

(AQW 3110/17-22)

Mrs Long: The Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) has advised that its Modern Slavery and Human Trafficking Unit (MSHTU) conducts regular safeguarding visits to car wash businesses across Northern Ireland. The MSHTU has led over 50 operations at hand car washes in Northern Ireland and has interviewed over 250 workers. The vast majority of these workers stated that they were not working under duress, with many indicating that they were content with pay and conditions. As a result of this operational activity, six potential victims of trafficking were referred to the National Referral Mechanism between February 2016 and August 2018.

PSNI has advised that its entire approach to modern slavery is victim-centred, with its focus to identify, locate and recover any potential victims of modern slavery and to offer the potential victims police help and support in line with current legislation.

Modern slavery is often described as being 'hidden in plain sight'. The Department of Justice and PSNI jointly advise members of the public of the importance of being aware of the indicators that someone may be a victim of modern slavery and to report their concerns to police.

Some of the signs and indicators of potential exploitation in car washes include:

- workers not being appropriately dressed or provided with protective equipment;
- electricity being bypassed at a car wash from a public electrical post;
- workers living on-site at the car wash;
- someone working who appears to be under the strict control of others;
- someone who cannot produce their passport or personal documents;
- workers living in houses of multiple occupancy, that is, 15-20 people living in a three bedroom house.

Ms McLaughlin asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) all organisations in the Foyle constituency that have received funding through the Assets Recovery Community Scheme from 2018; and (ii) the total funding awarded to each project.

(AQW 3120/17-22)

Mrs Long: Five organisations located in the Foyle constituency have received funding through the Asset Recovery Community Scheme (ARCS) since 2018. An open call for applications was launched in August 2018 and funding was allocated across three financial year periods, up to 31 March 2021.

The five organisations that were allocated funding are:

- The Top Ten Women's Drama Group's "Outside In" project was funded of allocated £20,828 over a three year period (2018/19 to 2020/21);
- The Off the Streets Community Youth Initiative's "City Centre Street Work Provision" project was allocated funding of £57,627 over a three year period (2018/19 to 2020/21);
- The North West Play Resource Centre's "Listen to Us" film-making project was allocated funding of £66,770 over a three year period (2018/19 to 2020/21);
- The Leafair Community Association's "Safer Communities" project was allocated funding of £20,000 over a two year period (2018/19 to 2019/20); and
- Hillcrest Trust's "Law and Order Programme" was allocated funding of £2,666 over a two year period (2018/19 to 2019/20).

In addition there are a number of projects that were allocated funding under the current Scheme that operate on a Northern Ireland-wide basis that are helping to prevent crime and reduce the fear of crime and that are having a positive impact on the lives of people across many constituency areas.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Justice what steps her Department is taking to address violent crime, including knife crime.

Mrs Long: I consider violence against the person in all its forms unacceptable and I am conscious of the impact crime of this nature has on victims and our community as whole.

In tackling this particular area, my Department remains committed to carrying forward a significant and wide ranging body of work, in collaboration with criminal justice partners, and continues to monitor developments of our neighbouring jurisdictions. Recognising the varied and complex factors that underpin violent crime, this work includes the establishment of a number of key strategies, prevention measures and targeted delivery programmes.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Justice (i) to give her assessment of the McCloud Judgement; (ii) how the McCloud Judgement impacts members of Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI), (iii) to detail estimated costs to her Department to address discrimination found in the McCloud Judgement for members of the PSNI.

Mrs Long: The impact of the McCloud judgment on all public service pension schemes is under active consideration. The employment tribunal cases relating to the Police Service of Northern Ireland have been stayed pending the final remedy of the McCloud judgment and, therefore, it is not appropriate for me to comment.

Department for the Economy

Miss Woods asked the Minister for the Economy (i) whether she has any plans to introduce an age, goods and facilities and services bill as mentioned in New Decade, New Approach; and (ii) what measures she is considering to ensure that young people are not disadvantaged in remuneration, when employed in the same role as older colleagues.

(AQW 1613/17-22)

Mrs Dodds (The Minister for the Economy): We will consider the development of an Age, Goods and Facilities and Services Bill in due course. At present responsibility for setting the National Minimum wage is within the remit of the UK Department for Business, Energy and Industrial Strategy.

Mr Buckley asked the Minister for the Economy what discussions Armagh, Banbridge and Craigavon Borough Council have had with Invest NI regarding the Denny's site, Portadown.

Mrs Dodds: Invest NI's Regional Manager meets monthly with Armagh City, Banbridge and Craigavon Borough Council's Director, Place Directorate (Economic Development and Regeneration) to discuss economic development matters which has included general discussion on the Council's plans for the regeneration of the Denny's site Portadown.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for the Economy, pursuant to AQW 704/17-22, what has been expended in respect of training in apprenticeships in Northern Ireland since the Apprenticeship Levy was introduced in the United Kingdom.

Mrs Dodds: My Department's gross expenditure in respect of apprenticeship training in Northern Ireland from the introduction of the Apprenticeship Levy in April 2017 to January 2020 was £66,270,000.

The Apprenticeship levy is collected directly by Her Majesty's Revenue & Customs (HMRC) through the Pay As You Earn (PAYE) system and although not responsible for collection my Department estimated in 2018 that Northern Ireland employers contribute between £46 - £50 million per year to the Levy. Between £28 - £30 million of this figure is estimated to be paid by Northern Ireland public sector employers and between £18 - £21 million is estimated to be paid by Northern Ireland private sector.

It should however be noted that in Northern Ireland there is no direct link between Levy contribution and eligibility for support. My Department provides funding to support the cost of apprenticeship training for private sector employers regardless of whether they pay levy contributions. The Apprenticeship Programmes are demand led by employers, and I encourage all employers to avail of these Programmes to drive forward business growth.

I will continue to consider the issues raised by NI employers during the consultation on the impact of the levy in NI, including widening access, increasing participation, and how to improve transparency for employers on the level of funding support they are currently availing of through participation in our apprenticeship programmes. I have also met a number of businesses and I am aware of the concerns they have expressed.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for the Economy to list all investment in North Belfast since 2016, including funding provided to the community and voluntary sector.

(AQW 2302/17-22)

Mrs Dodds:

European Fund Management

Total funding offered to projects covering North Belfast under the NI ESF Programme (2014-2020) totals £190.967m, split across two distinct funding calls.

It should be noted that many of these projects operate in other constituencies throughout Northern Ireland and as such not all of this funding relates solely to North Belfast.

A list of organisations funded under the first tranche can be viewed at European Social Fund - 2014-2020 Projects Awarded Call 1 (<https://www.economy-ni.gov.uk/publications/european-social-fund-2014-2020-projects-awarded-call-1>). It should be noted that the total cost of £67.935m indicated is split across the 3 year period 1 April 2015 – 31 March 2018.

A list of organisations funded under the second tranche can be viewed at European Social Fund - 2014-2020 Projects Awarded Call 2 (<https://www.economy-ni.gov.uk/publications/66-european-social-fund-call-2-projects-by-constituency-and-council-area>). It should be noted that the total cost of £123.032m indicated is split across the 4 year period 1 April 2018 to 31 March 2022.

Total eligible project costs across the NI ESF 2014-20 programme are supported by an EU contribution of 50%, automatically matched by 15% national resources, with the remaining 35% match funding provided largely by DfE and DfC.

Further Education

Northern Regional College and Belfast Metropolitan College both provide further education in the North Belfast area through the Newtownabbey campus and Girdwood Community Hub respectively. My Department also provides funding for delivery costs, further education grants, home to college transport, free school meals and clothing allowance and for capital works and building maintenance.

As funding is provided to each college to address need across all their campuses I cannot provide a detailed breakdown of allocations per campus or specifically for students and campuses in the North Belfast area.

Apprenticeships, Careers and Vocational Education

The Department's Apprenticeship funding is not allocated on a geographical basis. The Apprenticeship programmes are demand-led linked to the number of Apprentices that a business employs, with funding paid directly to Further Education Colleges, universities and contracted non-statutory training providers operating across Northern Ireland.

The following organisations delivering Apprenticeship programmes are located in North Belfast:

- Loughview Training Services
- Northern Regional College (Newtownabbey Campus)
- Workforce Training Services

As is the case with Apprenticeship funding, the Department's Training for Success (TfS) Programme funding is not allocated on a geographical basis. The TfS Programme is demand-led, with funding paid directly to Further Education Colleges and contracted non-statutory training providers operating across Northern Ireland.

The following organisations delivering the TfS Programme are located in North Belfast:

- Loughview Training Services
- Northern Regional College (Newtownabbey Campus)
- Workforce Training Services

It should be noted that the services provided by the Department's Apprenticeship and TfS delivery partners are not geographically limited to North Belfast, and participants residing outside North Belfast may also attend provision in this area. Equally, other organisations located outside North Belfast may provide services to participants living in North Belfast. The Department does not publish individual supplier level Apprenticeship and TfS funding data as it is considered "commercial in confidence".

In addition to the provision outlined above, the following North Belfast based community organisations have been awarded funding as lead partners under the SEUPB managed cross-border Peace4Youth programme:

- Ashton Community Trust: €3,406,837.15 (Funding period: 1/8/17-31/12/21)
- Springboard Opportunities Trust: €5,074,283.26 (Funding period: 1/8/17-31/12/21)

The following organisations based in North Belfast will receive funding as a partner in another Peace4Youth project up to the end of December 2021:

- TIDES Training
- Northern Ireland Alternatives
- Start360

The Department is the NI Accountable Department and is responsible for funding the Peace4Youth programme in Northern Ireland

Mr Allister asked the Minister for the Economy has any civil servant in the Energy Division of her Department declared an interest in respect of a company engaged by the Department to audit non-domestic RHI boilers.

(AQW 2366/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: No civil servant in Energy Group has declared an interest in respect of a company engaged by the Department to audit non-domestic RHI boilers.

The Head of Energy Group, who is seconded into the Department, declared a potential conflict of interest in respect to a contractor on the Framework Agreement relating to the inspections of non-domestic RHI boilers. This individual was not involved in the procurement or selection of the contractors onto the Framework and has had no role in any decision-making in, or management of the contract.

This information has already been released in response to a FOI request, received in November 2019.

Mr Storey asked the Minister for the Economy to outline any discussions she has had with representatives of Causeway Coast and Glens Borough Council in respect of funding for Air Waves Portrush; and to detail what actions her Department will take to support the future of the event moving forward.

(AQW 2513/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: I have had no discussions with Causeway Coast and Glens Borough Council regarding Air Waves Portrush. The event is not only funded by the Council, it is also dependent upon significant manpower and technical expertise from council officials to allow the event to take place.

Officials in Tourism NI understand that the decision taken by the Council not to proceed with the Air Waves Event was taken on value for money grounds as the event delivered limited additional economic benefit within the Borough.

In the past Tourism NI has provided funding for the event as per the table below. The Council is the primary funder.

Funding Year	Value
2019/20	£12,000
2018/19	£20,000
2017/18	£19,000
2016/17	£25,000
2015/16	£25,000
Total:	£101,000

Ms Ennis asked the Minister for the Economy to outline what engagement Invest NI have had with mining and mineral exploration firms (i) internationally; and (ii) nationally, in the last 24 months.

(AQW 2796/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Invest NI has had the following engagement with mining and mineral exploitation firms in the last 24 months:

(i) Internationally

Invest NI, through its ongoing liaison with Geological Surveys Northern Ireland, continue to promote Northern Ireland's expertise in material handling, global mining and geoscience value supply chains. This occurs at events such as the annual Prospectors & Developers Association of Canada (PDAC) convention in Toronto which takes place in March each year.

As part of this, Invest NI met with a mining company headquartered in Canada, and with a subsidiary in Northern Ireland, at the PDAC in Toronto in March 2018.

Invest NI also supports Northern Ireland manufacturers of crushing and screening equipment which can be used by companies involved in mining activity to process minerals and materials. The agency actively promotes these companies at international events attended by mining companies. These include Bauma - Germany, Conexpo – Latin America, The Mining Show – Dubai and ConExpo – Las Vegas.

(ii) Nationally

Invest NI has had a number of engagements with key stakeholders and trade associations such as the Mineral Product Association (NI) and Geological Surveys Northern Ireland in order to assist their company members and the wider business base remain competitive. These engagements have been around energy savings and utilisation of water as a natural resource and are ongoing.

The agency has also been approached by two companies involved in gold mining for advice on the companies' business plans. I cannot comment further as these plans are commercially sensitive.

Mr McGrath asked the Minister for the Economy to outline (i) why there have been no Invest NI investors visits in South Down in 2018/19; (ii) why Belfast got 278 such visits; (iii) who makes the decision where these visits take place; and (iv) what accountability there is for a regionally balanced approach to such visits.

Mrs Dodds: Invest NI promotes the whole of Northern Ireland as an attractive and viable location for inward investment opportunities to new investors, and to existing investors considering expansion.

I appreciate that the lack of visits to some areas across Northern Ireland is disappointing but the reality is that the investor makes the decision as to where they visit and locate based on their specific business needs and having considered all the options available to them. Whilst Invest NI promotes all areas, steering an investor to locate in any one area that does not meet their requirements would be both counterproductive and damaging to Northern Ireland's investment reputation.

It is important to note that the majority of inward visits begin with a meeting at Invest NI's HQ in Belfast as most investors arrive in Belfast via plane or train. A company often has only a short number of hours in Northern Ireland and, in most cases, the agency will invite key stakeholders, such as representatives from councils and colleges, to meet with the company in Belfast. While the company might be considering a location outside Belfast, the visit itself is logged under 'Belfast visits'. For this reason, the number of visits to Belfast might seem disproportionately high. What is more relevant is that in the last 5 years over 40% of investors have chosen to locate outside Belfast.

Finally, it is important to remember that Inward investment is only one element of Invest NI's support in any area. Over the past 5 years, in the Newry, Mourne and Down District Council area, Invest NI has made 1,640 offers of support to businesses. These offers aim to support 2,350 jobs and bring total planned investment commitments of over £260m to the area. For example, in recent times, Invest NI has supported local companies to grow in the area such as the 237 jobs being created by STATSports in Newry and the 125 jobs being created by Finnebrogue in Downpatrick.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister for the Economy what consultation has taken place with the (i) co-operative; and (ii) credit union sectors during her Department's review of mutual society legislation.

(AQW 2870/17-22)

Mrs Dodds:

- (1) It has been a long standing commitment of my Department to reform the mutuals legislative framework. To do this well we must involve the sector and over the years my Department has built strong working relationships with representatives of the mutuals sector and has consulted with them at every step of legislative change.

In 2014 officials began consulting on what culminated in the Credit Unions and Co-operatives and Community Benefit Societies (Northern Ireland) Act 2016. In 2018, two further provisions were commenced when the registration of societies was transferred to the Financial Conduct Authority and throughout the process the sector was kept fully informed of progress.

My officials met with sectoral representatives at the start of March as part of the final stage of the reform plan. They will shortly be issuing a 'Call for Evidence' to the sector so that a root and branch review of the mutual framework can be completed. This call for evidence will give the sector an opportunity to have a say on how they would like the legislation to look. This will then inform an official consultation which should take place in the Autumn.

- (2) My Department does not hold this information. The Financial Conduct Authority is the registering authority for co-operatives (as well as community benefit societies and credit unions). They maintain a public register of co-operatives and can advise of the number operating at any given time.

The register can be found at <https://mutuals.fca.org.uk/> or they can be called on 0800 111 678. The address is 12 Endeavour Square, London, E20 1JN.

- (3) The Credit Unions and Co-operative and Community Benefit Societies Act (Northern Ireland) 2016 stipulated that a review of the operation of corporate membership of credit unions, specifically as it relates to unincorporated associations, be carried out.

Departmental officials have completed the review and the report is being finalised. All credit unions in NI, along with their trade associations, were consulted.

The Act stipulates that the report be laid before the Assembly and officials will ensure this happens in the coming weeks.

My officials can brief the Committee on the review if appropriate.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister for the Economy whether Invest NI will commit financial resources to support the growth and creation of employee-owned enterprises.

(AQW 2871/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Invest NI works with individuals, companies and organisations which show the ambition and commitment to grow by being more innovative, more entrepreneurial and more internationally focused. The ownership model is not a determining factor on whether the agency is able to support a business/entrepreneur.

More information on the criteria for receiving support from Invest NI can be found at the following link <https://www.investni.com/about-us/how-we-support-business>. Where a business does not meet these thresholds, Invest NI will work in partnership with partners such as local councils and Enterprise NI to both signpost and make introductions for appropriate support.

Ms Rogan asked the Minister for the Economy to outline (i) why Invest NI hosted no potential investors in South Down in each of the last three years; (ii) her assessment of this; and (iii) what she will do to address this imbalance compared to all other constituencies.

Mrs Dodds: Invest NI promotes the whole of Northern Ireland as an attractive and viable location for inward investment opportunities to new investors, and to existing investors considering expansion.

I appreciate that the lack of visits to South Down is disappointing but the reality is that the investor will make the decision as to where they visit and locate based on their specific business needs and having considered the options available to them. Indeed steering an investor to locate in an area that does not meet their requirements would be both counterproductive and ultimately damage Northern Ireland's investment reputation.

It is important to note that the majority of inward visits begin with a meeting at Invest NI's HQ in Belfast as most investors arrive in Belfast via plane or train. A company often has only a short number of hours in Northern Ireland and, in most cases, the agency will invite key stakeholders, such as representatives from councils and colleges, to meet with the company often in Belfast. While the company might be considering a location outside Belfast, the visit itself is logged under 'Belfast visits'. For this reason, the number of visits against Belfast is disproportionately high. What is more relevant is that in the last 5 years over 40% of investors have chosen to locate outside Belfast.

Finally, it is important to remember that Inward investment is only one element of Invest NI's support in any area. Over the past 5 years, in the Newry, Mourne and Down District Council area, Invest NI has made 1,640 offers of support to businesses. These offers aim to support 2,350 jobs and bring total planned investment commitments of over £260m to the area. For example, in recent times, Invest NI has supported local companies to grow in the area such as the 237 jobs being created by STATSports in Newry and the 125 jobs being created by Finnebrogue in Downpatrick.

Ms Rogan asked the Minister for the Economy to detail (i) what Invest NI have done to help attract investment into the South Down constituency in the last 5 years; (ii) what impact Invest NI have had on the development of economic opportunities in South Down in the last 5 years; and (iii) what plans Invest NI have to develop economic opportunities in South Down in 2020/21.

Mrs Dodds:

(i) & (ii) Invest NI has worked closely with local economic stakeholders to plan, develop and implement strategies to increase prosperity within South Down. This work has included active engagement with Newry Mourne and Down District Council (NM&D) on the development of both its Economic Strategy and Community Plan.

Over the past 5 years Invest NI has made 958 offers of support to local and externally owned businesses in South Down which will bring total planned investment of £131m to the local economy. For example, Invest NI has supported the 237 jobs being created by STATSports in Newry and the 125 jobs being created by Finnebrogue in Downpatrick.

The agency's support is also helping businesses in the area develop in external markets and invest in innovation to remain competitive.

Invest NI has part funded a number of business start-up and development projects in partnership with Councils and the European Regional Development Fund (ERDF). For example, £1m of Invest NI and ERDF support was provided towards 4 Business Start and Growth programmes to help grow the economy in the Newry Mourne and Down District Council (NM&D) area.

(iii) Invest NI will continue to provide advice, guidance and financial assistance to those new and established businesses seeking its support. Close links and collaborations will also be maintained with key economic development stakeholder partners in order to foster increased levels of entrepreneurship and economic prosperity within the area.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for the Economy what properties or land are currently surplus to requirements within her Department.

(AQW 2945/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: While my core Department does not hold any property or lands that are currently surplus the following Arm's Length Bodies have identified a number as follows:

Further Education Estate:

Table A attached outlines the land and property assets that are current surplus to the requirement of the Further Education Estate.

There are a number of additional assets across the Further Education ((FE) Estate which will become surplus to requirements over the next few years following my Department's major capital investment to provide six new, state of the art campuses.

The FE Capital Projects Team regularly review, in consultation with the relevant College and the Department's Financial Management Branch, the surplus assets and proposed disposal timelines to ensure a structured and consistent approach is maintained.

Invest NI:

In line with Department of Finance guidelines Invest NI regularly reviews its assets to ensure it retains a sustainable estate meeting its identified future property needs.

In the current financial year the agency has declared two properties to be surplus to its requirements, namely an industrial estate of some 75 acres in Antrim as well as a 1.6 acre site at Hightown Industrial Estate in Mallusk.

The organisation is currently progressing the sale of a property at Lissue Road Industrial Estate and has completed the sale of a 1.44 acre site at Hightown. These properties had been declared to be surplus in previous years.

Table A. – Further Education Estate

College	Asset	Current Status	Estimated Disposal Date

Ms Dolan asked the Minister for the Economy to outline how many agency jobs Invest NI has assisted since 2014.
(AQW 2971/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Invest NI assists businesses to create jobs by providing support via Selective Financial Assistance (SFA). In certain circumstances, Invest NI will allow a business to recruit a proportion of its workforce via employment agencies. Since 2014, approximately 1,700 agency jobs were assisted under SFA, representing less than 7% of the total jobs assisted.

As with all jobs assisted under the SFA scheme, agency jobs must be maintained for at least five years in the case of large companies and three years in the case of Small and Medium sized Enterprises.

Ms Dolan asked the Minister for the Economy to outline how many jobs Invest NI has assisted which pay below the real living wage since 2014.
(AQW 2973/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Between 1st April 2014 and 31st March 2019 Invest NI assisted 27,978 new jobs with recorded salary data. 24,028 of these jobs, 86%, will pay a salary above the real living wage, with 3,950, 14%, planning to pay a salary below the real living wage.

It is important to note that such jobs play a vital role in the NI economy to ensure that suitable opportunities are available at all levels, for example, the unemployed and the economically inactive to transition in to the world of work.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for the Economy what date did the System Operator for Northern Ireland (SONI) respond in full to the Utility Regulator's formal request for information under the SONI transmission license.
(AQW 3005/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: As per the response already provided to Priority AQW 3008/17-22 which noted:

SONI responded to the information request on 27 February 2020 and provided a response to each question asked. The Utility Regulator will be seeking further clarification on a number of points.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for the Economy, pursuant to AQW 2597/17-22, has the System Operator for Northern Ireland (SONI) responded to the Utility Regulator's formal request for information under the SONI transmission license by the deadline date that was extended to 5:00pm on 26 February 2020; and, if not, what further action is being taken by the Utility Regulator and Department for the Economy to protect consumers.
(AQW 3007/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: SONI responded to the information request on 27 February 2020 and provided a response to each question asked. The UR will be seeking further clarification on a number of points.

Mr Middleton asked the Minister for the Economy to outline the number of jobs created with the support of Invest NI in each of the last 5 years, broken down by constituency.

(AQW 3019/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Invest NI moved to Outcome Based Reporting (OBA) in 2017, in line with the draft Programme for Government. As a result of this change the agency now measures the impact of its support based on key performance indicators (KPIs) gathered from a cohort of businesses which it works most intensely with. The agency now tracks the number of additional jobs these companies create each calendar year.

The table below shows the number of additional jobs created in 2017 and 2018 by businesses supported by Invest NI.

Additional Jobs created by companies by Parliamentary Constituency (2017 and 2018)

- 2 Totals may not add due to rounding.

Prior to this change in reporting, Invest NI measured jobs created each financial year based on employment related financial support. This information for 2014-15 to 2016-17 is contained in the table below.

Jobs Created through direct financial support by Parliamentary Constituency (2014-15 to 2016-17)

Note: 'Jobs created is based on those jobs for which Invest NI customers received a direct offer of employment related support.'

These two tables are not directly comparable as different reporting methods, and time periods, have been applied.

It should be noted that over the past 5 years, three quarters of offers of support and two thirds of investment commitments secured by Invest NI were through businesses located outside Belfast. In addition, two thirds of the additional jobs created with the support of Invest NI were in businesses located outside Belfast.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister for the Economy to outline what progress has been made to deliver on commitments made to expand Ulster University Magee Campus, as outlined in the New Decade, New Approach.

Mrs Dodds: Policy in respect of the proposed Graduate Entry Medical School at the Magee Campus of Ulster University belongs to the Department of Health (DoH). They have the expertise and knowledge in this area to decide in the best interest of Northern Ireland. My Department awaits any strategic imperative from DoH which may necessitate a capital development which could require DfE involvement. Ulster University has submitted a business case to the Department of Health and the UK Government has committed a ring-fenced allocation of £60 million of Capital Grant and Resource DEL towards that proposal. The Minister for Health has asked to meet and I am happy to do so.

As regards broader expansion at Magee, following a request by the Department for the Economy Permanent Secretary for an update on the university's proposals for Magee the University confirmed in correspondence to my Department in September 2019, that it remained committed to securing expansion of its Magee campus, and at the same time confirmed that the business case required updating prior to any consideration by the Department or Executive.

I recognise that considerable work needs to be done prior to any proposal being submitted for Executive consideration, however I am also committed to working with the University around the consideration of any expansion proposals that it develops.

Mr Wells asked the Minister for the Economy, pursuant to AQW 2559/17-22, what proportion of the total amount owed to creditors by the Presbyterian Mutual Society is made up of loan repayments due to his Department.

Mrs Dodds: As per the most recent published Presbyterian Mutual Society Accounts as at 31 March 2019 and as outlined in AQW 2559/17-22, total creditors due in one year totalled £100,033,480. Of this amount £97,750,000 related to loan repayments due to the Department. A breakdown of the total creditors balance can be found on note 14 of the accounts which are published on the Presbyterian Mutual Society website.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for the Economy whether Northern Ireland will be included in the next round of the Contracts for Difference (CfD) scheme, which opens in 2021; and, if not, what are the reasons for exclusion.

(AQW 3094/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: The Contracts for Difference (CfD) scheme has not been implemented in Northern Ireland for a number of reasons. In particular, joining the scheme, which was introduced in GB in 2014, would have placed a guaranteed additional cost burden on Northern Ireland consumers, on top of existing support that consumers already pay for the Renewables Obligations.

This is against the background that CfD contracts are allocated through competitive UK-wide auctions and there would be no guarantee that projects in Northern Ireland would be successful. The previous exclusion of onshore wind, which makes up approximately 85% of local renewable electricity generation, increased this likelihood.

As things stand, Northern Ireland will therefore not be able to participate in Round 4 in 2021. However, I am pleased to note that primary legislation was put in place at the outset for Northern Ireland to join at a later date if conditions were right.

I am aware that the Department for Business, Energy and Industrial Strategy is currently consulting on changes to the CfD scheme structure, including the inclusion of onshore wind (in excess of 5MW capacity) in the eligible technologies for Pot 1 (established technologies). This potential move would offer significantly greater opportunities for Northern Ireland.

My Department will be actively considering options on potential routes to market for renewable electricity projects, including CfDs, as it acts on the input gathered through the Energy Strategy Call for Evidence.

Ms McLaughlin asked the Minister for the Economy to detail (i) what programmes Invest NI operates to support and sustain family-owned businesses, including when they are at risk of closure because of lack of family succession; and (ii) whether these programmes include supporting the conversion of the businesses into employee ownership or co-operatives.
(AQW 3121/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Family owned businesses/SMEs form a significant proportion of Invest NI's existing client base, and while the organisation does not currently run a standalone programme for these businesses the vast majority of interventions offered by the organisation are available to them, subject to normal application criteria.

These interventions are designed to support companies to grow and become sustainable, and focus on areas including (but not limited to) growing exports and external sales; investing in research and development and innovation; investing in skills/ upskilling of staff and providing access to finance to support business growth.

The agency's Leader Programme and Leadership Team Programmes provide business mentoring, leadership coaching; peer networking and assistance in developing a business growth plan which can help a family business consider succession planning, or options such as converting to employee ownerships or a co-operative.

The Non-Executive Director Programme, provides support to engage an experienced Non Executive Director which can be of particular benefit to those businesses who have not previously had an appropriate Board in place, or require specialist input.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister for the Economy for her assessment of the green economy locally, in comparison to the British sector, the Irish sector and the European sector.

(AQW 3182/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: The Northern Ireland Executive does not have a single agreed definition for the green economy therefore it is not possible to provide a 'like for like' assessment of the local green economy in comparison to other economies.

The green economy is widely regarded as being low carbon, resource efficient and socially inclusive and covers a wide range of areas including the circular economy, renewable energies and energy efficiency.

The 'Low Carbon and Renewable Energy Economy survey', which is conducted by the Office for National Statistics (ONS) and co-funded by my Department, does not capture the entirety of the green economy but it provides a starting point for an assessment in comparison to the UK.

The latest published results from this survey relate to 2018 and show that private sector businesses active in the low carbon and renewable energy sector in the UK had 224,800 full-time equivalents and a turnover of £46.7bn.

Northern Ireland has a turnover of £1.1bn with 5,400 full-time equivalents employed in this sector which equates to a 2.3% share of UK turnover and 2.4% of UK full-time equivalents. This is roughly equivalent to NI's share of total UK Gross Domestic Product (GDP) which is 2.3%.

My Department is unaware of any directly comparable Irish or European low carbon and renewable energy economy sources.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister for the Economy whether she has considered introducing renewable subsidies or support schemes, in the absence of Northern Ireland Renewables Obligation (NIRO) and other supports, to improve the route to market for large scale renewable energy projects.

(AQW 3184/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: The future for renewable energy of all capacities, including any potential future targets and the need for new support schemes, will be considered as part of the development of a new Energy Strategy.

A Call for Evidence to inform the development of a new Energy Strategy was published on 17 December 2019 and runs to 20 March 2020.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister for the Economy to outline (i) the total energy consumption in the economy in 2019 (or the latest year for which data is available), broken down by sector; and (ii) to detail projected energy demands across the economy in 2030, 2040 and 2050 (or the latest year for which projections are available), also broken down by sector, and expressed in tabular form.

Notes to table:

- (1) The datasets exclude some sectors and fuels. It was recognised that it would not be meaningful to allocate energy consumption locally or regionally for some energy uses, in particular aviation (air transport) and shipping (national navigation).

Includes coal consumed in all the following sectors:

- (2) Heat Generation, Energy Industry use, Industry, Public administration, Commercial, Agriculture and Miscellaneous. Excludes coal used for electricity generation (or other transformation purposes).

- (3) Includes only manufactured solid fuels and not derived gases.

Includes petroleum products (e.g. petrol, diesel, home heating oil etc.) consumed in all the following sectors:

- (4) Heat Generation, Energy Industry use, Industry, Public administration, Commercial, Agriculture and Miscellaneous.
  - (5) Excludes gas used for electricity generation (or other transformation purposes).
  - (6) The Medium and Large Industrial/Commercial sector relates to any customers with annual gas consumption that is greater than or equal to 73,200 kWh per annum.
  - (7) The Domestic and Small Industrial/Commercial sector relates to any gas customers using less than 73,200 kWh per annum. The consumption information for domestic credit and small Industrial/Commercial are combined as this information is not available separately.
- (ii) My Department does not produce forecast energy demand data.

In relation to electricity generation, the System Operator for Northern Ireland and EirGrid publish annually updated forecasts of electricity demand within their All Island Generation Capacity Statement. The most recent publication covering the period 2019-2028 can be found at: <http://www.soni.ltd.uk/media/documents/EirGrid-Group-All-Island-Generation-Capacity-Statement-2019-2028.pdf>.

The Northern Ireland Gas Transmission System Operators publish annually updated forecasts of gas demand within their Northern Ireland Gas Capacity Statement. The most recent publication covering the period 2019/20-2028/29 can be found at:

Ms McLaughlin asked the Minister for the Economy how much her Department has provided to employers for apprenticeships as a result of the apprenticeship levy; and how much Northern Ireland employers have contributed towards apprenticeships through their payment of the apprenticeship levy.

Mrs Dodds: The Department for the Economy's gross expenditure in respect of apprenticeship training in Northern Ireland from the introduction of the Apprenticeship Levy in April 2017 to January 2020 was £66,270,000.

The levy is collected directly by Her Majesty's Revenue & Customs (HMRC) through the Pay As You Earn (PAYE) system and although not responsible for collection my Department estimated in 2018 that Northern Ireland employers contribute between £46 - £50 million per year to the Levy. Between £28 - £30 million is estimated to come from the public sector with between £18 - £21 million coming from the private sector. Gross apprenticeships expenditure by my Department was £23,056,000 in 2018/19, this is forecast to rise to £26,451,000 during 2019/20. Increasing transparency in the system is a key objective of mine and I have tasked officials with improving our ability to report accurately on the contribution being made by employers here, and the value of Apprenticeship training.

It should however be noted that in Northern Ireland there is no direct link between Levy contribution and eligibility for support. My Department provides funding to support the cost of apprenticeship training for private sector employers regardless of whether they pay levy contributions. The Apprenticeship Programmes are demand led by employers, and I encourage all employers to avail of these Programmes to drive forward business growth.

My Department continues to consider the issues raised by NI employers during the consultation on the impact of the levy in NI, including widening access, increasing participation, and how to improve transparency for employers on the level of funding support they are currently availing of through participation in our apprenticeship programmes. I have also met a number of businesses and I am aware of the concerns they have expressed.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for the Economy how she will ensure that an outcomes based approach in the new Programme for Government will ensure that her Department and InvestNI will have better outcomes for areas of deprivation.

(AQW 3240/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: By adopting an outcomes based approach, the Executive is able to develop policies, actions and interventions which aim to improve outcomes for people, centred on a collaborative and partnership based approach and informed by sound evidence base.

My Department leads on delivering the three economic-focused outcomes; outcome one: 'We prosper through a strong, competitive, regionally balanced economy'; five – 'We are an innovative, creative society, where people can fulfil their potential'; and six – 'We have more people working in better jobs'; as well as contributing to a number of other outcomes.

The Outcomes based approach is fully embedded within my Department. The strategic objectives set out in the Business Plan, alongside the work of our Arm's Length Bodies and key delivery partners, will collectively progress the PfG outcomes.

At a strategic level, the suite of strategies and policies my Department is developing, will align with the overall outcomes approach. Actions and activities set out within these will be cognisant of ensuring people are better off as a result.

With specific reference to ensuring better outcomes for areas of deprivation, I recognise that there is considerable variation between the statistically most and least deprived areas of deprivation, as measured by NISRA's Multiple Deprivations Measure, and it although is difficult to limit this completely, it remains a key challenge for the whole Executive. However I remain committed, through the work of my Department, and Invest NI, to improve economic conditions across the whole of Northern Ireland, for the benefit of everyone.

I will be developing a new Economic Strategy to set out the Executive's economic priorities and support the Programme for Government. This Strategy, alongside other supporting strategies including the Social Strategy, will seek to continue to improve our employment rate and make a marked change to wage levels and wider economic conditions for the benefit of everyone in Northern Ireland.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister for the Economy to detail (i) the total funding raised for the Northern Ireland Sustainable Energy Programme (NISEP) schemes in each year since the schemes began, broken down by (a) source of funding; (b) year; and (ii) how this funding has been used, expressed in tabular form.
(AQW 3245/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: The Northern Ireland Sustainable Energy Programme (NISEP) is an energy efficiency scheme managed by the Northern Ireland Utility Regulator. It is funded by all electricity consumers through a flat rate per kilowatt hour charge added to the Northern Ireland Electricity Public Service Obligation (PSO).

Table 1 below details expenditure on energy efficiency measures funded through the scheme since 2010/11.

	10/11	11/12	12/13	13/14	14/15	15/16	16/17	Total
£m	£6.2m	£7.9m	£7.8m	£7.9m	£7.1m	£8.1m	£9.2m	£54.3m

The majority of funding, 80%, is prioritised for energy efficiency measures in the homes of vulnerable people. The remainder of funding is used to support measures in non-priority domestic properties, and commercial and business premises.

Table 2 below summarises the measures installed over this period.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister for the Economy to detail the number of workplace accidents that occurred in each constituency during the period 2014-2019.

(AQW 3246/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: HSENI do not hold information on workplace accidents by constituency. While we record a postcode of where all incidents occur, there are other factors such as work activity type which is more critical. Incidents are recorded against the location of the activity rather than the headquarters of the employing business.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister for the Economy to detail the number of staff located in the Health and Safety Executive Northern Ireland (HSENI) office in Omagh, compared to its office in Belfast.

(AQW 3247/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: HSENI has seven members of staff in the office in Omagh and ninety five members of staff in the office in Belfast.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister for the Economy to detail all active renewable energy projects and sites, broken down by (i) type; (ii) power output in gross terms; (iii) power output as a share of total renewable power; and (iv) power output as a share of overall power generated.

(AQW 3249/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: The vast majority of renewable electricity generating stations are accredited to the Northern Ireland Renewables Obligation (NIRO). Ofgem, as administrator of the scheme, has confirmed that at the end of the 2018/19 year, 23,682 generating stations had accredited to the NIRO. In terms of technology, 22,196 of the accredited stations are solar photovoltaic (PV) installations; 1,272 are onshore wind; 118 are fuelled i.e. biomass or biogas; 86 are hydro and 8 are landfill gas.

NISRA published the latest figures on electricity consumption in NI for the year ending December 2019, on 5 March 2020. This states that some 7,713 Gigawatt hours (GWh) of electricity was consumed in NI of which 3,368 GWh i.e. 43.7% was generated from renewable sources. A breakdown of the contribution from each technology in terms of electricity consumption (GWh), percentage share of the total renewables contribution and percentage share of total electricity consumed is set out in the table below.

Technology	Electricity consumed (GWh)	% of total renewables	% of total electricity consumed
Onshore Wind	2846.0	84.5	36.9
Biogas	188.6	5.6	2.5
Biomass	131.3	3.9	1.7
Solar PV	117.9	3.5	1.5
Landfill Gas	60.6	1.8	0.8
Other e.g. hydro	23.6	0.7	0.3
Total	3368.0	100	43.7

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for the Economy how many industrial tribunal cases have proceeded to final hearing with written decision since 2010, broken down per calendar year.

(AQW 3282/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: There have been 3486 cases since 2010. Please see breakdown below.

Calendar Year	Number of decisions issued
2010	508
2011	502
2012	581
2013	455
2014	304
2015	298
2016	193
2017	204
2018	212
2019	229

Mr Frew asked the Minister for the Economy (i) whether she has had sight of the Cornwall Insight's tariff review; (ii) when it will be published; and (iii) whether her Department requested or suggested any changes, amendments, omissions or additions to the review.

(AQW 3294/17-22)

Mrs Dodds:

- (i) I have received a copy of the Cornwall Insight Tariff Review Report.
- (ii) My officials are in the process of reviewing the findings and preparing documents for the Executive for review. The outcome of this piece of work will be considered by the Executive and will be made publicly available in due course.
- (iii) When Cornwall Insight shared draft versions of the report with the Department, officials considered the content and provided feedback on points of factual accuracy and clarity. The Department has not requested alterations to the conclusions of the report.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister for the Economy to provide (i) a detailed breakdown on the potential of tidal energy, including locations where this potential is most abundant and details of any quantifiable measurement of this energy potential; and (ii) whether she will give her assessment of the future role of tidal energy in the transition to a net zero carbon society.

Mrs Dodds:

- (i) The Strategic Environmental Assessment (SEA) for my Department's Offshore Renewable Energy Strategic Action Plan (ORESAP) identified two sites of commercial value in Northern Ireland for tidal development. Tidal Zone 1 (North Coast) and Tidal Zone 2 (Rathlin Island and Torr Head). Potential generating capacity for these sites was identified as 100MW and 200MW respectively.
- (ii) A diverse energy mix will be important going forward both in terms of decarbonisation and security of supply. All electricity generation technologies will therefore be considered as my Department develops the new Northern Ireland Energy Strategy. The Call for Evidence, which is currently open for comment, includes a specific question on offshore energy development and the feedback will be carefully considered before any conclusions are drawn.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister for the Economy to detail the number of local businesses that trade with Great Britain.

(AQW 3301/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: The latest estimates of the number of businesses purchasing from and selling to Great Britain are available from the Broad Economy Sales and Exports Statistics 2017 and are presented in the tables below.

Number of purchasers of goods and services by business size, 2017

Dr Archibald asked the Minister for the Economy to detail (i) how many members of staff are assigned to her Department's Brexit unit; (ii) what priorities she has set the Brexit unit; and (iii) what issues the Brexit unit are currently looking at.
(AQW 3302/17-22)

Mrs Dodds:

- (i) There are currently 118 members of staff assigned to my Department's Brexit unit, with 20 current vacancies.
- (ii) I want to see a future where we have a thriving economy that benefits everyone in our society. Where we not only maintain our place in the UK internal market, but also grow our exports to the EU and to countries around the world.
- (iii) The Group's work is centred around five strategic work strands:
  - 1) Negotiations on the implementation the Northern Ireland / Ireland Protocol, and operationalising these arrangements.
  - 2) Negotiations on the Future Economic Partnership covering the totality of UK-EU economic activity.
  - 3) Development of the UK's Independent Trade Policy with third countries.
  - 4) Supporting business to prepare, adjust and transition to the post-Brexit economic conditions.
  - 5) The readiness of the Department for January 2021.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for the Economy what affect the collapse of Flybe will have on the Northern Ireland economy.
(AQW 3312/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Flybe operated 14 routes from Belfast City Airport, had 190 employees in NI and carried 1.6m passengers to and from NI in 2019.

I am delighted that the Chief Executive Officer of Belfast City Airport has been able to reach agreement with Loganair who will take up two of the routes, and Eastern Airways who will take up another of the routes, all starting in the next two weeks. I am encouraged to note that the Airport have stated that they have had interest in all of their route network and are confident of announcing backfill in the near future. We will continue to work closely with Belfast City Airport in the forthcoming days and weeks, as maintaining air connectivity to mainland GB is vital to Northern Ireland.

Staff from the Redundancy Payments Service in the Department for the Economy, along with colleagues from the Department for Communities, have already attended clinics with the former Flybe employees and will continue to engage with them in the coming days and weeks to ensure that they receive guidance, support and payments to which they are entitled.

The Department's Careers Service is also attending the redundancy clinics to provide professional and impartial careers information, advice and guidance tailored to the individual needs of the Flybe employees. The Service will also keep in contact with those who request ongoing support.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for the Economy what action her Department is taking to help attract other airlines to take over routes formally operated by Flybe.

(AQW 3313/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Civil aviation in the UK is a reserved matter for the UK Department of Transport, and they are working with industry to identify opportunities to re-establish key routes, and engaging with Airlines UK and airlines directly to emphasise and accelerate this. Alongside this, I, and my Department, will continue to work closely with the Belfast City Airport in the forthcoming days and weeks, as maintaining air connectivity to GB is vital to Northern Ireland.

Belfast City Airport have stated that negotiations with a number of carriers to take up air routes formerly operated by Flybe are underway, and I am delighted that the Chief Executive Officer of the Airport has already been able to reach agreement with Loganair who will take up two of the routes, and Eastern Airways who will take up another of the routes, all starting in the next two weeks.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for the Economy to detail (i) Invest NI's land holdings in the Upper Bann constituency; (ii) what discussions Invest NI have had in the last 12 months about maximising this land; and (iii) how long they have been in ownership of this land.

Mrs Dodds: Invest NI holds approximately 334 acres of land in the Upper Bann constituency in support of its business development role. A breakdown of these landholdings, including availability and year in which land was initially acquired where records are available, is as set out in the following table.

Invest NI Estates/Industrial Area	Town	Landholding (acres) as at 31st Dec 2019	Land Availability (acres) as at 31st Dec 2019	Year of Acquisition
Mandeville Industrial Estate	Craigavon	99	95	1996*
Charlestown Road Industrial Estate	Portadown	60.16	12.87	Information not held
Craigavon Food Park	Portadown	43.36	1.75	1978
Halfpenny Valley Industrial Estate	Lurgan	60.37	28.17	Information not held
Silverwood	Lurgan	44.12	0	1966
Portadown Road	Lurgan	0.06	0	1966
Shaerf	Lurgan	1.79	0	Information not held
Scarva Road Industrial Estate	Banbridge	25.13	0	1978
Total		333.99	137.79

* Year in which land was transferred from Department of the Environment to Department for Economic Development

Invest NI works closely with businesses to support their growth plans and, where companies have an identified requirement for new land, the agency can provide support to meet this need.

In the last 12 months the organisation has met with seven businesses that have expressed an interest in acquiring land within its business parks in the Upper Bann constituency and will continue a process of engagement as the companies continue to develop their plans.

In the same 12 month period two companies have entered into an agreement to acquire approximately 5.5 acres of land within Invest NI's Craigavon Food Park for the purpose of developing new purpose built facilities.

Mr Muir asked the Minister for the Economy to detail assistance being provided to George Best Belfast City Airport as a result of the collapse of Flybe.

(AQW 3487/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Civil aviation in the UK is a reserved matter for the UK Department of Transport, and they are working with industry to identify opportunities to re-establish key routes, and engaging with Airlines UK and airlines directly to emphasise and accelerate this. Alongside this, I, and my Department, will continue to work closely with the Belfast City Airport in the forthcoming days and weeks, as maintaining air connectivity to GB is vital to Northern Ireland.

Belfast City Airport have recently stated that negotiations with a number of carriers to take up air routes formerly operated by Flybe are underway, and I am delighted that the Chief Executive Officer of the airport has already been able to reach agreement with Loganair who will take up two of the routes, and Eastern Airways who will take up another of the routes, all starting in the next two weeks.

Written Answers

The Executive Office

Mr Beattie asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, given the Armed Forces Covenant was instigated UK-wide in 2011, to outline what elements of the Armed Forces Covenant are not being delivered in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 1472/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): The Executive Office does not hold this information.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister (i) what is the annual cost of the Strategic Investment Board; and (ii) when last was it assessed as to value for money.
(AQW 2444/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: The Annual Review and Financial Statements of the Strategic Investment Board Limited for the financial years up to 2018/19 are available in the Assembly Library, and detail expenditure for those years. In line with guidance set out in the Department of Finance document 'Public Bodies: A Guide for NI Departments', a review of the Strategic Investment Board was carried out in 2017 by Business Consultancy Services, reporting in 2018.

Mr Givan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what criteria is applied when members of the Equality Commission are appointed.

(AQW 2478/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: The criteria to appoint members of the Equality Commission are determined by the Northern Ireland Act 1998 and are for the consideration of the Secretary of State. The appointment process is overseen by the Northern Ireland Office.

Mr Givan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how many cases that the Equality Commission have taken have been heard in court, in the last five years.

(AQW 2479/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: The Equality Commission for Northern Ireland is a Non Departmental Public Body and as such this is a matter for it to answer. We have therefore asked the Chief Executive of the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland to respond to you directly on this matter.

Mr Givan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline (i) the salary; and (ii) relevant allowances paid to (a) the Chief Commissioner; (b) the Deputy Commissioner; and (c) Commissioners, in the Equality Commission.

(AQW 2481/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: The salaries and relevant allowances paid to the Chief Commissioner, Deputy Commissioner and Commissioners are reported each year in the Equality Commission's Annual Report. The most recent version can be found on their website:

Mr Givan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what assessment has been carried out regarding the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe Resolution 2318 (2020).

(AQW 2707/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: Resolution 2318 (2020) on the matter of the protection of freedom of religion or belief in the workplace was debated by the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe on 29 January 2020. The Resolution and its impact are currently being considered.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they will deposit in the Assembly Library, or otherwise publish, a copy of the Guidance to Ministers on the Exercise of their Functions document as referred to in New Decade, New Approach.

(AQW 2923/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: The Guidance will be published shortly on the Executive Office website.

Mr Carroll asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what progress has been made by her Department to bring forward an age goods, facilities and services bill to help ensure that no one is discriminated against because of their age.

(AQW 2959/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: Appendix 1 to the "New Decade, New Approach" document supports the possible outline of a Programme for Government including the bringing forward of an Age, Goods and Facilities and Services Bill. This will be subject to the Executive agreeing a final Programme for Government.

Mr Muir asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the provision of the Minority Ethnic Development Fund for 2020/21.

(AQW 3188/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: The Minority Ethnic Development Fund (MEDF) continues to be a key element of our policy for racial equality and good race relations in our society. It is intended to be aligned with and support our Racial Equality Strategy 2015 - 2025 and provides support for voluntary and community organisations working with minority ethnic people and groups.

The application process to the 20/21 Minority Ethnic Development Fund has commenced and closes on 2nd April 2020. It is intended that applicants will be told the outcome of that process before the end of April 2020.

In parallel, a review of the MEDF is underway and the findings will inform the operation of the fund beyond 20/21.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether the tackling paramilitaries team in the Executive Office will provide support to those communities trying to improve the quality of lives of residents who have experienced unwanted bonfires within their communities.

(AQW 3243/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: The Communities in Transition Project aims to support transition in eight areas of focus by creating communities where citizens can feel safe and confident. Project delivery will aim to improve the quality of people's lives through a range of activities designed to help the community to address wide ranging issues such as community safety awareness, community capacity, health and wellbeing, culture, area regeneration, community safety awareness, restorative practices and targeted support for young people.

A team of local co-ordinators will be working with local communities to support effective delivery of projects, coordinate activities, and make links between projects and programmes that will meet the outcomes of the tackling paramilitarism programme.

Ms Armstrong asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline (i) the criteria that will be used to review and assess arm's-length bodies; (ii) whether that criteria will be a standard approach taken by each department; and (iii) whether all subsequent reports will be required to be produced using a standardised format.

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: The "New Decade, New Approach" document contains a number of commitments aimed at rationalising public services and making them more effective, including through a review of arm's-length bodies. This will require discussion at Executive level and we will update Members in due course.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they will lobby for the proclamation of an additional public holiday to mark the centenary of Northern Ireland.

(AQW 3393/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: We have not established a joint position on this matter.

Ms Rogan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what discussions they have had with Executive colleagues on developing a strategy for ending sectarianism.

(AQO 231/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: The Executive is committed to ending sectarianism. Through strategies and programmes such as the Together: Building a Untied Community Strategy, Racial Equality Strategy and Tackling Paramilitarism and Organised Crime, we have developed a range of actions to tackle sectarianism, prejudice and hate.

We are committed to having a society in which everyone can live, learn, work and socialise together, free from prejudice, hate and intolerance.

New Decade, New Approach, reaffirms the commitment of parties to end sectarianism. It commits to having a strategic focus within the Programme for Government on ending sectarianism and putting in place supporting strategies and actions.

Department of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs

Ms Armstrong asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline what he is doing to protect Tullynagardy Wood, Newtownards.

(AQW 3055/17-22)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs): I am advised that Tullynagardy Wood, Newtownards, is subject to a Tree Preservation Order made under the Planning Act (Northern Ireland) 2011. Local Councils are the authority that make and enforce Tree Preservation Orders under this legislation, to protect selected trees, groups of trees or woodlands.

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, pursuant to AQW 769/17-22, whether his Department's advice on applications for peat extraction to planning authorities includes information on the importance of this habitat for carbon sequestration.

(AQW 3058/17-22)

Mr Poots: The advice provided by the Department in relation to planning applications for peat extraction is cognisant of extant Planning Policy. This means that the Department provides advice in relation to the protection of boglands valuable to nature conservation interests, and with the protection of landscape quality in Areas of Outstanding Natural Beauty.

The responsibility for the development of Planning Policy resides with Local Planning Authorities and the Department for Infrastructure.

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether he intends to release the scientific information he received which led to the recent policy change on the impact of ammonia on (i) Special Protection Areas; and (ii) Special Areas of Conservation.

(AQW 3059/17-22)

Mr Poots: To date the Department has not made any change to rules regarding ammonia emissions or to its advice to planning authorities on assessing the impacts of emissions from agricultural development on Special Areas of Protection, Special Areas of Conservation and other designated sites. However, in light of recent case law and emerging evidence, my officials are currently undertaking a review of the operational protocol for such advice. All scientific information and reports used to inform the ongoing review is publicly available, likewise any research commissioned by the Department will be publicly available on completion.

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, pursuant to AQW 769/17-22, regarding the importance of peatlands as a carbon pool, whether he will instruct his staff to recommend to planning authorities that all future applications to extract peat should be refused.

Mr Poots: Planning officers frequently need to obtain specialist advice to enable them to consider the potential impacts of a development proposal. The Department provides such specialist advice.

It is the responsibility of planning authorities and their officials to make recommendations and decisions regarding the subsequent granting or refusal of an application. When decision-taking, these planning authorities must consider expert advice received, and balance and integrate a variety of complex environmental, social, economic and other matters that are in the long term public interest. This is fundamental to the achievement of sustainable development.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, with regards to provisions within the Agriculture Bill, what consideration has been given to the potential impacts of regulatory divergence between GB and the EU.

Mr Poots: As agricultural policy is a devolved matter, I am very aware of the potential impacts should there be regulatory divergence between GB and the EU. This is not an issue unique to the UKG Agriculture Bill and its provisions.

I am determined to ensure, in line with the JMC (EN) principles, that the UK's internal market functions effectively and that Northern Ireland's ability to have continued and unfettered access to the GB market is maintained.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether the proposed provisions within the Agriculture Bill which are (i) UK wide; (ii) specific to here, have been tested for compliance with the Ireland/Northern Ireland protocol.

(AQW 3071/17-22)

Mr Poots: The impact of the Protocol is still being assessed and further clarification on many of the details is needed.

The detailed arrangements will be subject to discussion between the EU and UKG through the Specialised and Joint Committee structures outlined in Article 165 of the Agreement. This detail will very much depend on the precise nature of the future trading relationship between the UK and the EU.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs for his assessment on whether the potential challenges to the agriculture sector from the Ireland/Northern Ireland protocol makes a local agriculture bill more likely.
(AQW 3072/17-22)

Mr Poots: The detailed arrangements for implementation of the Ireland/Northern Ireland Protocol have still to be determined and will be subject to discussion between the EU and UKG.

My priority is to introduce new policies and systems to ensure that we have a sustainable agricultural industry and that all farmers are supported on an equitable basis. It is this objective which will make a Northern Ireland Agriculture Bill more likely.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, if he brings forward an agriculture bill, whether he will introduce a 'sunset clause' to the existing bill.
(AQW 3073/17-22)

Mr Poots: I am focussed on ensuring agricultural policies are in place that will be good for farmers and provide the basis for an environmentally sustainable future. This is likely to require primary legislation in the Northern Ireland Assembly, which I will introduce at the appropriate time, subject to the Executive's agreement.

In the meantime, I have no plans to introduce a 'sunset clause' with respect to the Northern Ireland provisions in the UKG Agriculture Bill, which is making its passage through Parliament currently. Introducing such a clause could leave me with no legal authority to make agricultural support payments moving forward.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, in relation to the approaches taken in Scotland and Wales, whether he will bring forward an agriculture bill within the current mandate of the Assembly.
(AQW 3074/17-22)

Mr Poots: I am focussed on ensuring agricultural policies are in place that will be good for farmers and provide the basis for an environmentally sustainable future. This is likely to require primary legislation in the Northern Ireland Assembly, which I will introduce at the appropriate time, subject to the Executive's agreement.

Mr McHugh asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline (i) what measures have been implemented to date to protect and enhance salmon stock in the Mournebeg River, Co. Tyrone; and (ii) what measures are planned to address this same issue.

Mr Poots: Under the Foyle Fisheries Acts (1952), as amended, the Loughs Agency is responsible for conserving, protecting, developing, improving and managing the salmon and inland fisheries of the Foyle and Carlingford Areas, including the Mournebeg River, a sub-tributary of the River Derg.

- (i) Loughs Agency Fishery Officers undertake patrols on the Mournebeg River, particularly during the angling season, to ensure that anglers are licensed and that conservation measures, such as the use of carcass tags and the compliance with Regulations, including the preservation of undersized fish and protection of gravid fish are adhered to. Any breaches of Regulations identified are considered for enforcement action.

The Loughs Agency has also worked in partnership with angling clubs on the Derg system, and in particular the local Derg Valley Angling club. This has included training the angling Private River Watchers in enforcement measures and in the detection of water pollution related incidents.

The Agency continues to work in partnership with the Northern Ireland Environment Agency in relation to water pollution issues affecting the River. Proactive advice has been provided to the farming community where pollution may be impacting on fish stocks and regular patrols are carried out to identify pollution sources.

The Loughs Agency also carry out habitat improvements to protect and enhance salmon populations. Significant in-channel and riparian improvement projects have been developed and implemented across the Foyle and Carlingford Areas, such as: riparian fencing; native riparian tree planting; and soft and hard bank protection.

- (ii) A programme of patrols to protect salmon stocks in the Mournebeg River is planned for this year. The Agency also plans to carry out capital improvement works in selected areas of the Derg catchment.

Mr McHugh asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs what measures have been put in place to (i) preserve; and (ii) prevent the erosion of river banking on the upper reaches of the River Derg, Co Tyrone.
(AQW 3118/17-22)

Mr Poots: The River Derg is designated as part of the River Foyle and Tributaries Special Area of Conservation and is thus afforded special protection for its river habitats and salmon. Whilst erosion and deposition processes reflect a naturally functioning river, the conservation objectives for the site do indicate the need to consider river bank stability e.g. maintenance of marginal woodland and creation of marginal buffers to prevent bank damage through animal grazing. The Environmental Farming Scheme has options, applicable to this river, for the creation of buffers along the river bank including planting of native trees and fencing. In addition, part of the INTERREG Va Source to Tap project, includes the River Derg Agricultural Land Incentive Scheme which has bank stabilisation options to reduce erosion risks.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs what his Department is doing to (i) protect; and (ii) increase the numbers of red squirrels in (a) Northern Ireland; and (b) North Down.

Mr Poots: Two of my Department's Executive Agencies; Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) and Forest Service sit on the Northern Ireland Squirrel Forum, a collective of government, environmental non-governmental agencies, landowners and red squirrel group volunteers. This group has developed standard operating procedures that ensure the control of grey squirrels, to preserve red squirrels, is safe, legal and humane. While grey control is carried out ad hoc across Northern Ireland by the hunting community, strategic control around red squirrel hotspots has been carried out by the 13 red squirrel groups to protect their local red squirrels. Much of this work being carried out on DAERA's estate. In addition, red squirrel groups have carried out supplementary feeding of red squirrels to boost survival rates over the winter months.

My Department has played an active supporting role in Belfast Zoo's red squirrel breeding programme which has led to the enhancement of red squirrel populations at several sites in Counties Down and Antrim.

Two volunteer groups working in North Down and the Ards Peninsula continue to encourage the survival of red squirrels in North Down, through grey squirrel control and supplementary feeding of red squirrels. My Department has been directly involved with this work.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs what his Department is doing to (i) protect; and (ii) increase the numbers of pine martens in (a) Northern Ireland; and (b) North Down.

Mr Poots: Records of pine marten indicate an expansion of the animal's range and numbers over the last 10 years across Northern Ireland. While the greatest risk to pine martens in Northern Ireland is probably from road traffic accidents as the young animals spread out to new areas, it is not considered that the pine marten requires any assistance in aiding its spread. The pine marten is listed as a Schedule 5 animal under the terms of the Wildlife (NI) Order 1985 extending legal protection to the animals and their place of rest.

Last year my Department produced Northern Ireland specific guidance documents aimed at helping home owners and landowners to live with pine martens in their vicinity:- <https://www.daera-ni.gov.uk/articles/pine-marten-martes-martes>.

Pine martens are present in North Down, but there is no accurate estimate of numbers due to their secretive nature.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail plans his Department has to reintroduce (i) animals; and (ii) birds that have become extinct in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 3126/17-22)

Mr Poots: My Department currently has no plans to reintroduce any animals or birds that have become extinct in Northern Ireland.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline plans his Department has to reintroduce beavers to rivers.

(AQW 3127/17-22)

Mr Poots: My Department has no plans to introduce beavers to rivers. There is currently no evidence that they ever occurred in Northern Ireland.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline any plans within the Forests for our Future programme to plant trees in North Down.

(AQW 3132/17-22)

Mr Poots: I made a statement in the Assembly recently announcing a new Programme of Afforestation: Forest for our Future programme, which will plant 18 million trees by 2030 throughout Northern Ireland to contribute to the UK's net zero carbon target.

I have written to Ministerial colleagues and Council Chief Executives, including Ards and North Down Borough Council Chief Executive, requesting their support for an Afforestation Forum which will develop plans for woodland creation on suitable public land under their control.

The Afforestation Programme, as outlined in my statement, will need also to further encourage rural landowners and other businesses to plant more woodland. Support for this through forestry grant schemes is currently under review, including the development of a specific small woodland grant scheme designed to help landowners to integrate woodlands into their farm or other businesses.

These measures will apply to the planting of new woodlands in North Down as elsewhere in Northern Ireland.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail plans for the replacement of trees at (i) Cairn Wood; and (ii) the wider Craigtantlet area, following felling in 2014.

(AQW 3133/17-22)

Mr Poots: The trees were felled at Cairn Wood and the wider Ballysallagh Forest, in the Craigtantlet area, by the Department in response to the presence of tree disease and to meet its statutory obligations for plant health.

Plans are in place to re-establish trees on the harvested areas and to create woodlands of primarily native tree species that integrate and enhance the surrounding landscape and biodiversity. Native broadleaved trees will be naturally regenerated in the areas around the water bodies to further support the natural biodiversity of these areas. Some small conifer woodlands will be planted in the wider forest area to add to the overall diversity and in particular to support the habitat favoured by the resident red squirrel population.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline (i) why there is an ongoing data capture exercise being carried out by his Department through local councils in respect of trade into Northern Ireland; and (ii) whether it is in preparation for providing border checks and infrastructure at ports.

Mr Poots: A data capture exercise is being conducted which aims to measure G.B. to Northern Ireland agri-food trade. This is to inform me and my Departmental officials on existing trade. I have previously stated clearly that I have no intention of facilitating infrastructure at Northern Ireland ports. Consequently, this work is not preparatory to that.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail by what percentage greenhouse gas emissions must be reduced here by 2030 versus 1990 levels to (i) contribute to the fifth carbon budget; and (ii) to contribute to reaching net zero carbon by 2030.

Mr Poots:

- (i) Following a request from my department the Committee on Climate Change (CCC) published its "Reducing Emissions in Northern Ireland" report". The report sets out the CCC's recommendations on possible actions or policies that NI can take to reduce our greenhouse gas emissions. The report recommends a reduction in GHG emissions of at least 35% by 2030 as NI's contribution to the fifth carbon budget.
- (ii) I have recently wrote to the CCC asking them to determine Northern Ireland's equitable contribution to the UK's Net Zero Target by 2050. On receipt of their response I will consider their recommendations before bringing forward a cross departmental pathway on climate change to the Executive for their agreement.

Mr Blair asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs for his assessment of spreading digestate from anaerobic digesters and the impact this has on the levels of nitrates and phosphorous in the environment.

Mr Poots: Anaerobic digestate is a biofertiliser which provides crops and grass with readily available nutrients, and can be used as a substitute for chemical fertilisers.

The application of anaerobic digestate to land is regulated through the Nutrients Action Programme (NAP) 2019 – 2022 Regulations. The NAP applies to all farms in Northern Ireland and aims to protect water from pollution caused by nutrients from the spreading of animal manures, chemical fertilisers and other nutrient-containing materials onto land.

In the NAP for 2019 - 2022, new measures have been introduced specifically for anaerobic digestate. These include the mandatory use of Low Emission Slurry Spreading Equipment (LESSE) from 1 February 2020 for the spreading of anaerobic digestate and compulsory storage requirements on anaerobic digestate fibre. From 1 January 2020 all farms importing anaerobic digestate must soil test, prepare a fertilisation plan and have a nutrient content analysis of the digestate.

The purpose of these controls is to ensure digestate is applied to meet crop requirements and minimise the risks of losses to the environment through nutrient run-off to waterways or ammonia emissions to air.

If manure or slurry is mixed with other waste feedstocks, then the resultant anaerobic digestate will be waste and subject to waste regulatory controls, unless it complies with the Anaerobic Digestate Quality Protocol in addition to the NAP. A waste exemption is required and applicants must provide a nutrient management plan which documents applications to specific land banks according to crop requirement.

Mr Blair asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether his Department has worked collaboratively with the Department for Infrastructure to update the Bateman Formula.

Mr Poots: It is now widely recognised that the existing policy on coastal protection in Northern Ireland, the Bateman formula dating from 1967, is no longer fit for purpose. Consequently, previous Ministers my Department and the Department for Infrastructure set up the Coastal Forum, a body comprising Government and Council Officials, and the National Trust. The Forum has initiated a working group to undertake a work programme geared towards improving our coastal change evidence base and devising policy and strategy recommendations. To date, the focus been on addressing the evidence gaps and this will inform the development of policy options for updating the Bateman Formula.

In addition to collaboration between Departments, the Coastal Forum and its associated working group has provided an opportunity for collaboration with local councils and organisations such as the National Trust, Ulster University, the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute, and Geological Survey of Northern Ireland. This collective expertise and desire to collaborate on the challenging issue of coastal erosion risk management is becoming very constructive.

Mr Blair asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs what action he will take to include voluntary and conservation groups in the proposed Forests for our Future programme.

(AQW 3252/17-22)

Mr Poots: My recent statement in the Assembly announced a new Programme of Afforestation: Forest for our Future programme, which will plant 18 million trees creating 9,000 hectares of new woodland by 2030 to contribute to the UK's net zero carbon target.

There will be opportunities for voluntary and conservation groups to take part in planting on public land identified through a cross Governmental and local Council Afforestation Forum which will develop plans for woodland creation on suitable public land under their control.

The Afforestation Programme, as outlined in my statement, will need also to further encourage voluntary and conservation groups to plant new woodland on land which they own. Support for this through the forestry grant schemes is currently under review, including the development of a specific small woodland grant scheme designed to help these groups to integrate woodlands into their holdings.

Mr Blair asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs what actions are being considered to protect and restore carbon sinks, such as native bogland and wetland.

Mr Poots: We have a range of carbon-rich habitats in Northern Ireland which will play a key role in meeting our climate change commitments. These include wetland areas, such as blanket bog, lowland raised bog, fens and salt marshes, as well as native woodlands and semi-grasslands. We also need to consider our blue carbon, such as kelp and sea grasses. Putting in place the necessary protection and management ensures that these areas continue to act as carbon sinks, rather than become carbon sources.

My Department has been working to restore these habitats through a number of conservation programmes. The Environmental Farming Scheme supports farmers to manage these priority habitats to enhance biodiversity, carbon storage and flood alleviation potential. Conservation Management Plans are being developed for our Special Areas of Conservation which contain many of these carbon-rich habitats. Wetland habitats are being actively restored as part of the INTERREG Va programme. My Department's afforestation strategy will make provision for the planting of native woodland which can help to restore our wooded areas.

Furthermore, officials are gathering evidence to inform future actions and potential policy interventions to safeguard and enhance natural carbon sinks in land and sea.

Mr Blair asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs what action has been taken to hire the additional veterinarians required to implement the Ireland/Northern Ireland Protocol.

(AQW 3254/17-22)

Mr Poots: My Department is not currently undertaking any recruitment competitions for additional veterinarians, however veterinarians were recruited in 2019 as part of normal business. There remains a list of successful candidates from these recruitment campaigns and any further recruitment will be initiated if needed.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline (i) what assistance; and (ii) what funding his Department can give to local councils to help to reintroduce red squirrels.

(AQW 3259/17-22)

Mr Poots:

- (i) My Department has played an active supporting role in red squirrel re-introductions through the Northern Ireland Squirrel Forum, and in Belfast Zoo's red squirrel breeding programme, which has led to the enhancement of red squirrel populations at several sites in Counties Down and Antrim, including a council-owned country park.
- (ii) Funding for strategic biodiversity and conservation initiatives is administered by DAERA through the Environment and Challenge Funds, although it should be noted that the Environment Fund allocation has already been made. Councils should actively engage in grey squirrel management if they wish to consider future red squirrel enhancements within their local authority area.

Mrs Barton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether compensation is payable to farmers whose flock have been affected by avian influenza.

(AQW 3275/17-22)

Mr Poots: Avian Influenza strains can be distinguished as being either notifiable or non-notifiable. A notifiable disease is any disease that is required by law to be reported (ie "notified") to government authorities.

In cases where a notifiable strain of avian influenza is confirmed, the Department is required to depopulate and dispose of affected poultry to prevent further disease spread. Compensation is payable in these circumstances.

The Department has no legal powers to compel culling, and no compensation is payable in non-notifiable cases of avian influenza.

As per my response to AQW 3276, there have been no confirmed cases of notifiable strains of avian influenza in Northern Ireland in recent times.

Mrs Barton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to detail (i) how many farms have been affected by avian influenza since 01 December 2019; and (ii) the total number of birds that have been affected by avian influenza since 01 December 2019.

(AQW 3276/17-22)

Mr Poots: Since 01 December 2019, 12 farms and approximately 646,000 birds have been affected by a non-notifiable strain of avian influenza. There have been no confirmed cases of notifiable strains of avian influenza in Northern Ireland in recent times.

Ms Anderson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs (i) whether his Department has implemented any of the findings of the Task & Finish Group established following the Mills Review; and (ii) if so, to detail (a) what the reforms were; (b) when each was implemented; and (c) for his assessment on the success or otherwise of these changes.

Mr Poots: My Department has implemented the majority of the findings of the Task and Finish Group established following the Mills Review. Appendix A details the reforms implemented.

The changes made improved operating practices within my Department and strengthened the legislative requirements around waste licensing exemptions, duty of care, and the assessment of a fit and proper person. This has had a positive impact in terms of the regulation of the waste sector and the prevention of waste crime.

The decision to seek referral to the Appeal Court is a matter for the Public Prosecution Service in consultation with the NIEA.	April 2016

NIEA to use Fixed Penalty Notices for more minor infringements.	The power to issue Fixed Penalty Notices (FPN's) for minor waste offences has been available to the Department since March 2013 and these powers are regularly used. Specific guidance and procedures were issued to relevant staff in 2016 (revised 2020) regarding the application of FPN's.	March 2013

Subsequent amendments were made to Schedule 2 of the Waste Management Licensing Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2003 through the Waste Management Licensing (Amendment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2016, including the removal of some of the exemptions.	The amending Regulations came into force in September 2016.

A Protocol on the recovery of costs under the Environmental Liability (Prevention and Remediation) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2009 has also been published on the Department's website which includes information on the application of the polluter pays principle under these Regulations.	Updated guidance published in February 2020.  Cost Protocol published in November 2019.

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs (i) how many staff car parking spaces his Department and its agencies have in Belfast city centre; and (ii) whether he is taking any action to reduce this number.
(AQW 3336/17-22)

Mr Poots: My Department has a total of 157 car parking spaces in Belfast City Centre for use by staff. These spaces are provided in line with business need for essential car users, on call staff and for the provision of accessible parking spaces. I have asked my officials to keep the number of parking spaces available to staff under review.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs for his assessment of the (i) economic; and (ii) environmental impact for local farmers of government proposals to remove the Agriculture Property Relief.
(AQW 3350/17-22)

Mr Poots: While I am aware of speculation surrounding the future of Agricultural Property Relief as regards Inheritance Tax, I am not aware of any government proposals to remove this relief.

I would be concerned if there were changes to the current application of Agricultural Property Relief as it does allow land to be passed from generation to generation without disrupting farming businesses and agricultural activity.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs (i) for his assessment of the impact on farming and food production of proposals contained in the Westminster budget to reduce fuel duty on red diesel; and (ii) to outline his Department's engagement with the Chancellor of the Exchequer regarding proposals to reduce fuel duty on red diesel.

Mr Poots:

- i.) In the recent budget it was announced that entitlement to use red diesel will be removed from April 2022, except for Agriculture and a number of other sectors. Fuel duty on red diesel also remains unchanged and given this there will be no direct impact on farming and food production. The fishing sector will remain entitled to the Marine Voyages Relief so will not have to pay more for their fuel.
- ii.) Prior to the budget there was media speculation that an end to the freeze on fuel duties would be signalled. As a first stage it was suggested that the red diesel subsidy for users of agricultural and construction vehicles would be scrapped. My officials estimated that this would create an additional cost to Northern Ireland farmers of around £50 million. Consequently, I wrote to the Chancellor outlining my concerns about introducing these fuel duty changes at this time given the financial pressures that the industry is already facing. I am pleased to hear that there has been no change in duty rates for diesel used by agricultural vehicles.

Mr Catney asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs (i) for an update on current animal boarding legislation; and (ii) whether he has plans to change legislation to allow animals from different households to mix.
(AQW 3396/17-22)

Mr Poots: My Department licenses animal boarding under the Welfare of Animals Act (Northern Ireland) 1972 and the Animal Boarding Establishments Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1974.

I am aware of the demands from the public for a wider range of regulated animal boarding facilities and, in particular, increasing expectations around the socialisation of dogs. I am exploring how to reform the regulation of animal boarding establishments whilst maintaining high welfare standards and protecting the well-being of pets.

As a first step, I have asked my Chief Veterinary Officer to liaise with key stakeholders and veterinary experts to set up an independent working group which will examine evidence on the socialisation of dogs and make recommendations on a way forward. The Group is to report to the Department by May 2020.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether he plans to look at using wearable technology to assess individuals' exposure to air pollution.

Mr Poots: Air pollution can have a serious effect on people's health and has negative impacts on our environment.

My department has no current plans to look at using wearable technology to assess individuals' exposure to air pollution. However, my Department has been working on developing a draft Clean Air Strategy discussion document involving close collaboration with other Departments. Once complete, I will consider the options for issuing the draft Clean Air Strategy discussion for public consultation later in the year. This consultation will invite views on a range of matters and will be an opportunity to put ideas and suggestions to the Department. I welcome full engagement in this process.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs (i) whether he has planned a role for community and volunteer groups in his afforestation strategy; and (ii) if so, to provide details of this envisaged role.
(AQW 3500/17-22)

Mr Poots: I made a statement in the Assembly recently announcing a new Programme of Afforestation which will plant 18 million trees creating 9,000 hectares of new woodland by 2030 to contribute to the UK's net zero carbon target. There will be opportunities for community and voluntary groups to take part in planting on public land identified through a cross Governmental and local Council Afforestation Forum which will develop plans for woodland creation on suitable public land under their control.

The Afforestation Programme, as outlined in my statement, will need also to further encourage community and voluntary groups to plant new woodland on land which they own. Support for this through the forestry grant schemes is currently under review, including the development of a specific small woodland grant scheme designed to help landowners to integrate woodlands into their holdings.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs how much his Department has spent on producing materials in Irish, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 3509/17-22)

Mr Poots: The information which is currently available shows that the Department has spent a total of £6,520.92 on translation costs between the financial years beginning on 01 April 2014 and ending on 31 Mar 2019.

Below details the breakdown to the following financial years –

- 2014 – 2015 – £2,189.40
- 2015 – 2016 – Nil
- 2016 – 2017 – £1,715.52
- 2017 – 2018 – £2,616.00
- 2018 – 2019 – Nil

Miss Woods asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, pursuant to AQW 2529/17-22, for his assessment of how a ban on the sale of (i) household coal; and (ii) wet wood, would affect air quality.
(AQW 3552/17-22)

Mr Poots: There are no current plans to introduce a ban on the sale of household coal and wet wood in Northern Ireland. As such, an assessment of the impact of banning the sale of household coal or wet wood on air quality has not been carried out.

Miss Woods asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, pursuant to AQW 2882/17-22, for his assessment on whether the lawful requirements of the seven enforcement notices that have legally taken effect in respect of Mobuoy illegal dump compromise his Department's emerging remediation strategy.
(AQW 3626/17-22)

Mr Poots: Final Remediation Strategy for the Mobuoy Road waste site has not yet been agreed, however, my officials are working closely with officials from DFI Planning, Roads and NI Water through an Integrated Strategy to ensure an aligned government approach.

Miss Woods asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, pursuant to AQW 2882/17-22, whether his Department (i) was consulted with; and (ii) agreed the remedies stipulated in the seven planning enforcement notices for the Mobuoy illegal dump before they were served.
(AQW 3627/17-22)

Mr Poots: The Enforcement Branch within the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) was engaged with Department for Infrastructure (DfI) Planning in the early stages of the planning enforcement process and NIEA provided evidence on the presence of controlled wastes in support of the enforcement notices.

The planning enforcement notices were separate instruments and have been running in parallel with the NIEA criminal case. While NIEA did not stipulate the remedies in the planning enforcement notices, DfI Planning has kept NIEA informed on their progress and NIEA is currently working together with DfI Planning, Roads and NI Water to ensure delivery of an integrated remediation strategy that achieves the best environmental outcomes.

Mr Catney asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether he plans to introduce mandatory CCTV recording in abattoirs to monitor animal welfare.

(AQO 397/17-22)

Mr Poots: I currently have no plans to make the installation of CCTV recording in abattoirs mandatory as the systems currently in place provide assurance that welfare standards are being met. At present over 99% of animals and birds processed in Northern Ireland are slaughtered under CCTV coverage.

Official Veterinarians from my Department maintain a permanent presence in approved Northern Ireland slaughterhouses during the hours of slaughter. They are responsible for monitoring animal welfare at slaughter and verifying that operators fulfil their obligations under both meat hygiene and animal welfare legislation.

Ms Armstrong asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, in light of the 2019 Partnership for Action Against Wildlife Crime Northern Ireland report, whether his Department has any plans to address raptor persecution.

(AQO 398/17-22)

Mr Poots: Several DAERA business units are actively involved in the Partnership for Action Against Wildlife Crime Northern Ireland (PAW NI). The forum is co-chaired by NIEA and PSNI. It takes the lead in highlighting issues associated with wildlife crime across Northern Ireland, using its large potential audience to communicate the anti-wildlife crime message.

The Raptor Persecution report highlights the impacts of illegal activity on birds of prey – such activities include shooting, poisoning and nest disturbance or destruction. It is likely that the extent of this is under-recorded as there is a low probability of carcasses being found.

The PSNI are the lead enforcement body. DAERA staff have joined the PSNI on operations aimed at disrupting wildlife criminals, and are examining new approaches to educate the public and to make it easier to secure evidence for certain offences. They also work closely with the Northern Ireland Raptor Study Group, through NIEA-administered Environment Fund monies, to monitor bird of prey populations, and the nests of the most vulnerable species.

Ms Dillon asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs for his assessment of the alignment between the Animal and Public Health Information System and the United Kingdom Livestock Information System.

(AQO 399/17-22)

Mr Poots: APHIS has been supporting livestock traceability and animal and public health in Northern Ireland since 1998, while the Livestock Information System (LIS) is a completely new system that is being developed for a similar purpose in Great Britain, as one of a number of initiatives in England, Scotland and Wales, to replace and enhance the British Cattle Movements Service's Cattle Tracing System (CTS) and improve traceability for all species. The first phase of the LIS, cattle movements, is anticipated to go fully live sometime in 2021.

In the meantime, APHIS continues to interface with the CTS, as it has done for many years, to display a joined up whole-life view of the movements and keepers of cattle from birth, as they move from Great Britain into Northern Ireland, and vice versa. It is anticipated that APHIS will continue to interface with the new LIS as and when it goes live, as will its intended successor, NIFAIS, in due course, via a "UK view" facility that will ensure the same joined up traceability, health assurance and disease control is available to farmers, the Department and the agri-food industry here in Northern Ireland, and all across the UK, into the future.

Dr Aiken asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs whether his Department will support attempts to subsidise waste for the projected Hightown Incinerator.

(AQO 400/17-22)

Mr Poots: A decision on the planning application to develop a waste to energy plant to treat Refuse Derived Fuel generated in an associated Mechanical Biological Treatment plant at Hightown rests with the Department of Infrastructure. Consequently conjecture about any future support my department may provide is entirely hypothetical at this stage. However, if the planning application is successful, any requests received by my Department for grant support or other financial mechanisms associated with the proposed residual waste treatment facility, would be considered in line with departmental priorities and the strategic and long-term needs for waste management and the circular economy in Northern Ireland.

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline how his Department is improving air quality in urban areas.

(AQO 401/17-22)

Mr Poots: Air quality in Northern Ireland has improved in respect of some air pollutants, for example, airborne lead and sulphur dioxide.

Recognising that more can be done, my Department supports District Councils with funding for air quality monitoring and the development of action plans to address local air quality issues across Northern Ireland.

My Department approves clean-burning appliances and low-smoke fuels for use in Smoke Control Areas, to reduce pollution from domestic chimneys.

Since 2016, my Department has been developing a draft Clean Air Strategy. This has involved close collaboration with other Departments and officials continue to work together to finalise the draft discussion document on the Clean Air Strategy. Once the draft discussion document is complete, I will consider the options for issuing the draft Clean Air Strategy for public consultation later in the year.

Behavioural change is also at the forefront of my Departments work. DAERA supports Sustrans, an active travel charity, which works to change attitudes and promote active travel such as walking and cycling. My Department also ran a MyNI environmental education campaign on social media in late 2019 to encourage positive behavioural change.

Ms Rogan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline the action his Department is taking to protect, and codify, the Voisinage Agreement on fishing.

(AQO 402/17-22)

Mr Poots: The Voisinage Agreement is a longstanding agreement between the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland that provides for reciprocal fisheries access within 0 to 6 nautical miles of each other's coasts. I know that retention of this reciprocal access is especially valued by inshore fishermen operating in east Down and Londonderry and by those engaged in blue mussel aquaculture. The Fisheries Bill that is currently making its passage through Westminster will provide us with the means to provide reciprocal access to vessels from the Republic of Ireland, upon EU exit, if similar reciprocal access continues to be afforded to vessels from Northern Ireland. In 2019 Ireland amended its Sea Fisheries and Maritime Jurisdiction Act 2006 to make access by NI vessels under the Voisinage Agreement legal in Irish law. Longer term, I would also like to formalise the Agreement, which was simply based on an exchange of letters between officials in 1965. This would provide clarity for both Administrations about the types of vessels and fisheries that come under this special access arrangement, and the rules that should be complied with when operating in each other's inshore areas.

Mr Harvey asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs what discussions his Department has had with stakeholders likely to be impacted by the introduction of the Deposit Return Scheme in the Environment Bill.

Mr Poots: There has been ongoing discussions with stakeholders in relation to DRS for some considerable time. DAERA, alongside the UK Government and Welsh Assembly Government published a 12 week consultation on proposals for the introduction of a Deposit Return Scheme in England, Wales and Northern Ireland in February last year. Scotland is further ahead in its introduction of DRS with its regulations to introduce the scheme being laid this week.

Since the conclusion of this consultation, engagement with stakeholders including retailers, manufacturers, district councils, waste management companies has been ongoing and will continue through planned workshops and stakeholder events. The specific details of a DRS are currently being developed using evidence gathered and through ongoing engagement with stakeholders. This will then be subject to further consultation later this year.

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs for his assessment of the All-Ireland Pollinator Plan.

(AQO 405/17-22)

Mr Poots: DAERA's Northern Ireland Environment Agency leads in supporting the development and delivery of the All-Ireland Pollinator Plan 2015-2020 in Northern Ireland through working in partnership with many organisations and conservation bodies.

The Plan contains 81 actions, including published plans for Farmland, Councils, Communities, Gardens, Transport Corridors, Golf Courses and recently published actions for Group Water Scheme Sites. A review of the current plan is to be published by the All Ireland Pollinator Plan Steering Group.

I am pleased that DAERA is involved with this comprehensive plan to safeguard our vital pollinator species. It encompasses a wide range of measures and has been warmly received and has certainly helped to raise the profile of pollinators and the ecosystems services they provide to society. This has been done through the successful engagement of a wide range of partners in Northern Ireland including organisations such as local councils, NI Water, Translink, Ulster in Bloom, Keep NI Beautiful, the Best Kept Awards, the Ulster Bee Keepers Association, the National Trust, the Ulster Farmers' Union, Butterfly Conservation and Buglife. All these organisations have helped promote more sustainable land management for pollinators.

My Department has played its own part through its responsibility for policy and legislation on managed honey bees which play an essential role in crop production, through managing its own estate to be more pollinator friendly including wildflower planting at the Department's headquarters at Ballykelly, and by providing grant-aid through the Environment Fund for organisations promoting the conservation of pollinators and providing incentives to farmers through the Environmental Farming Scheme to provide and restore pollinator friendly habitats.

The UK Pollinator Monitoring Scheme was due to be launched in Northern Ireland next month, with Flower-Insect Timed Counts being promoted as a citizen science programme, with further more structured surveys to gather robust information on the status of pollinators in Northern Ireland to help enhance our data on pollinators and inform further policies and actions. This will be impacted by the COVID-19 outbreak.

Ms S Bradley asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline any discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs to advocate a soft Brexit to protect the local farming sector.
(AQO 408/17-22)

Mr Poots: I recognise that many farmers and agri-food stakeholders are concerned about the impact that the Exit from the EU could have on them.

I have met George Eustice MP, Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs at the recent Inter-Ministerial Group meeting and have discussed a number of issues by telephone with him since taking up my role.

The detailed arrangements for the implementation of the Protocol have also still to be determined and will be subject to discussion between the EU and UKG through the Specialised and Joint Committee structures. This detail will very much depend on the precise nature of the future trading relationship between the UK and the EU.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs for his assessment of the effectiveness of the High Hedges Act (Northern Ireland) 2011 in addressing problem hedges.

(AQO 409/17-22)

Mr Poots: The High Hedges Act is intended to provide a mechanism by which a complainant can resolve a high hedge problem if they are unable to resolve the problem with their neighbour before approaching their local council.

In 2016, an exercise conducted with Councils on the functioning of the Act revealed that between 2012 and 2016 of the 2,130 initial enquiries to councils, 122 (5.7%) progressed to complaints and of these 76 (3.5%) became formal complaints. Based on these findings, it was concluded there was no evidence to show that a review of the High Hedges legislation was needed at that time.

I can advise that the number of formal complaints submitted each year remains low.

My Department will continue to work with Councils to encourage the sharing of best practices and consistent application of the Act.

Department for Communities

Ms Bailey asked the Minister for Communities how affordable rent is defined within her Department's definition of affordable housing.

(AQO 411/17-22)

Ms Hargey (The Minister for Communities): Building more social housing remains a priority for my Department with the majority of the capital budget being invested in this area. However while this is crucial, making additional types of affordable and intermediate housing available to help a broader range of households will also have a key role in reducing housing stress. The definition of 'Affordable Housing' sits within the Strategic Planning Policy Statement. 'Affordable Rent' is not currently defined within this document.

The Strategic Planning Policy Statement defines affordable housing as social rented and intermediate (or shared ownership) housing. The Statement allows for a broadening of that definition.

This was the context for my Department's consultation on proposals to revise the current definition of 'Affordable Housing'. This proposes broadening the range of affordable intermediate housing offerings. One of these suggested offerings is affordable rent products.

Research has begun into developing affordable rent products which sit between the social rented and private rented sectors.

This work is at an early stage with initial research commissioned on the viability of affordable intermediate rental products here.

Mr Chambers asked the Minister for Communities how many Personal Independence Payment appeals have been lodged in each of the last five years.

(AQO 412/17-22)

Ms Hargey: During the last five years there have been 25,326 appeals lodged in relation to Personal Independence Payments (PIP) claims. The number of PIP appeals lodged in each year is set out in the table below.

	Personal Independence Payment Appeals received
2015/16	0
2016/17	4,874
2017/18	7,329
2018/19	8,752
April 2019 - December 2019	4,371
Total	25,326

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Communities to what extent new social housing development is being curtailed by the sewerage infrastructure limitations recently highlighted by NI Water.

(AQO 414/17-22)

Ms Hargey: NI Water has publicly stated that major investment is required to address water/sewage infrastructure. This is an issue that affects all aspects of development. We were aware that the water infrastructure capacity issues would potentially impact on housing development more generally and the social housing new build programme in particular.

The potential implications for the development of social housing schemes because of the current issues affecting the water/sewage infrastructure is a concern for me, particularly given the increasing levels of housing stress;

The developing housing associations have raised their concerns with regard to the potential impact with the Housing Executive and my Departmental officials;

I understand that presently there are around nine schemes, totalling more than a thousand units, programmed over a number of years, at risk. I have asked the Housing Executive to carry out a detailed analysis of the areas of housing need that may be impacted by the water infrastructure issues;

I have committed to discussing the issues regarding the new build programme with Minister Mallon, who is also concerned about this issue. We will work together to understand the full extent of the issues and explore potential solutions to what is a growing problem.

My officials have and will continue to engage with the Department for Infrastructure and Housing Executive colleagues to establish what action can be taken to minimise the risks.

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Communities whether Post Office card account holders will be able to access their accounts after November 2021.

(AQO 416/17-22)

Ms Hargey: Payments of benefit and pension into a mainstream account is considered to be a safe and reliable method of payment, providing greater financial inclusion and giving people a greater choice about where and when they collect their money. The Post Office card account contract is coming to an end in November 2021 and following contract end, people who have not already switched to an alternative mainstream account will be migrated onto the new payment exception service and their Post Office card account will be closed.

Ahead of contract end, account users are being given advance written notice encouraging them to switch to a mainstream account, so that those who are able to make that change have time to do so. For those unable to access or manage a mainstream account my Department will offer a replacement payment exception service.

Support is available to help people choose a product that is right for their circumstances, which may include a payment exception service.

Mr Lynch asked the Minister for Communities for an update on the release of publicly owned land for social housing development.

(AQO 418/17-22)

Ms Hargey: My Department is working to increase the release of public sector land for housing. The Department's Public Land for Housing Project seeks to identify unused or under-utilised public sector land that has the potential to be reused for housing. This has, to date, identified six additional public sector sites which will be used for housing. These have the potential to deliver at least one hundred and forty five social housing units.

Work is ongoing to identify and release further sites to meet the Programme for Government target to release ten sites for housing by March 2021.

One of the key barriers to social housing supply is land availability. Social house building has long used NIHE owned land and land released by other Departments through the 'D1' process. However most public sector land is currently being used, or has a use planned for it. Public Sector organisations are not permitted to bank land.

The Department continues to work in conjunction with the NIHE to find further sites for housing.

The NIHE's annual publication of the Commissioning Prospectus details the local housing requirements. It directs Housing Associations site-search activity to help address under-provision, in specific locations.

I will consider if further steps could be taken to release more land for social homes in areas of objective housing need.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Communities whether the extension of welfare mitigations will be introduced before 31 March 2020.

(AQO 419/17-22)

Ms Hargey: In The New Decade, New Approach Deal that accompanied the return of the Assembly there is a commitment that the Executive will extend the existing welfare mitigation measures beyond 31 March 2020 when they are due to expire.

These schemes provide essential financial support and I am fully committed to their continuation beyond the current end date of 31 March 2020. If we fail to deliver on this commitment an estimated 38,000 people will be affected by the bedroom tax. This is simply unacceptable.

I fully understand the frustration of many members that this important legislation has not yet been brought to the House for consideration. I can assure you that this is a priority for me personally and for my officials. They have been taking all necessary steps to ensure that the necessary legislation to extend the existing welfare mitigation schemes will be in place by 31 March 2020.

A Bill to allow for the extension of mitigation payments for the bedroom tax has been drafted and shared with Executive colleagues. I am pleased that they have agreed to accelerated passage for the Bill. My officials have also drafted subordinate legislation to extend the other welfare mitigation schemes beyond 31 March 2020.

I will reiterate that this issue is a priority for me and I am committed to bringing the draft legislation to the Assembly for consideration at the earliest opportunity. However, the reality is that it is now unlikely that the legislation will come into operation before 1 April 2020.

It is critical that no-one receiving welfare mitigation payments loses out. The political parties have provided an assurance in New Decade, New Approach that the existing welfare mitigation schemes will continue and this simply must be delivered. I can therefore confirm that if the legislation to extend the welfare mitigation schemes is not approved by 31 March 2020 then payments will be made under the sole authority of the Budget Act. I am grateful for my colleague the Minister of Finance for confirming this in his opening statement on the Budget Bill on 25 February 2020.

What this means for individuals is that no one will experience a break in their mitigation payment following 31 March 2020. My Department will continue to make payments to eligible people until such times as the necessary legislation to extend the schemes has been passed.

Mr Muir asked the Minister for Communities whether regulation 25 of the Universal Credit, Personal Independence Payment, Job Seeker's Allowance and Employment Support Allowance (Claims and Payments) Regulations (NI) 2016 is being applied by her Department.

(AQO 421/17-22)

Ms Hargey: Regulation 25 of the Universal Credit, Personal Independence Payment, Jobseeker's Allowance and Employment and Support Allowance (Claims and Payment) Regulations (NI) 2016 allows the Department to backdate a claim for Universal Credit for up to one month in a limited number of circumstances. This is to protect the most vulnerable who may be delayed in claiming through no fault of their own.

Once an application is made and it is accepted that the provisions of this Regulation apply, backdating is always granted. Accordingly, my Department is fully aware of this provision, already applies it and will continue to do so as appropriate.

Mr O'Dowd asked the Minister for Communities what steps her Department is taking to ensure that the risk of COVID-19 is minimised in the context of ongoing sporting events.

(AQO 422/17-22)

Ms Hargey: Sporting events are part of the fabric of our society and play a major role in how we interact with each other. I want to recognise the role that sport and sporting events play in bringing communities together by providing opportunities for social and cultural interaction.

It is therefore regrettable that, in light of the serious concerns about COVID-19 and how it spreads, sporting events have now been cancelled across the island of Ireland.

Decisions taken by the various Sports Governing Bodies to temporarily suspend competitions, training and collective activities across their sports were not taken lightly and will impact sport at every level from grassroots and club level through to those competing on the international stage.

At times like this it is important that we all work together to protect life and those who are most vulnerable in society and that means continuing to take the right decisions in terms of public health regardless of how that impacts sport and sporting events.

My officials have been and will continue to engage with the Chief Medical Officer and officials from the Department of Health, with Government officials from other jurisdictions, officials from Sports Governing Bodies and representative groups including the NI Sports Forum, the Sports Grounds Safety Authority and SportNI to ensure that whatever decisions are necessary are appropriate, measured and effective. I can confirm that my officials and SportNI met with representatives from a range of Sports Governing Bodies as recently as 16 March.

A key action to date has been the dissemination of timely and up to date public health advice, through Sport NI and the NI Sports Forum, to local sporting bodies and organisations to inform decisions about holding games and sporting events. That will continue and I would assure the member that I am monitoring the situation and the impact COVID-19 is having on sport at every level.

I would finish by commending the community spirit that is being shown by clubs and their members who are providing support to older people and the most vulnerable.

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister for Communities what steps her Department is taking to encourage more residential development in Belfast city centre.

(AQO 423/17-22)

Ms Hargey: My Department's and Belfast City Council's shared City Centre Regeneration and Investment Strategy recognises that a significant residential population is highly important for the successful functioning of a city centre.

In August 2018, the Council commissioned a multi-disciplinary team of consultants to undertake a Strategic Sites Assessment which reviewed the Council's fifteen publicly operated city centre car parks and adjoining Council assets, as well as adjacent land owned by my Department to identify opportunities on priority sites for comprehensive development, including residential development, involving wider land assembly or joint development opportunities. The priority sites are grouped into four clusters: Inner North West Northern Cluster, Inner North West Southern Cluster, Clarendon Cluster and Ormeau.

The Inner North West northern cluster contains three sites: Kent Street, Library Street, both owned by my Department, and Little Donegall Street, owned by Belfast City Council which have the potential to deliver a residential-led mixed use development. This cluster of sites represents a significant opportunity for DfC and Council to maximise the use of their assets and officers are currently exploring the potential for a housing-led mixed use regeneration scheme at this location. Such a scheme would provide a mix of private, social and affordable housing.

My Department is considering how the public sector and other lands can be brought forward in a strategic way to deliver on a range of housing tenures across the city and unlock barriers to city centre living to increase the city centre population. This work will also be key to bridging the divide between the centre and its adjoining communities.

Mr McHugh asked the Minister for Communities what assurances she can give that any proposed changes to liquor licensing will take account of the impact on tourism.

(AQO 424/17-22)

Ms Hargey: Members will be aware that my Department consulted on the general principles of liquor licensing laws late last year. The consultation also sought views on what should be changed to make the system a more modern and flexible one.

In the region of 1,500 responses were received to that consultation with representation from a number of trade and tourism bodies.

I am currently developing my policy proposals and hope to bring them to the Committee, followed by the Executive, in the coming months.

As part of the policy development process any policy which has not yet been subject to one, will undergo the relevant impact screening. This will of course include a Regulatory Impact Assessment which will consider the potential economic impact.

Those screening documents and any subsequent impact assessments carried out will be made available once I have finalised my policies.

Furthermore, at Committee Stage of the Bill, stakeholders will be given the opportunity to present their views on my policies, and what impact they will have, to the Committee.

Department of Education

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Education to outline the process for schools to provide counselling services.
(AQW 1130/17-22)

Mr Weir (The Minister of Education): The Independent Counselling Service for Schools (ICSS) is accessible to all post primary aged pupils attending grant-aided post primary schools and special schools.

At any time pupils may need additional emotional support, beyond the normal pastoral care offered by teachers. They are able to self-refer or may be referred by school staff or a parent.

The ICSS is responsive to pupils' needs, independent from and yet appropriately supportive of schools' established pastoral care provision. Delivering an effective counselling service requires a collaborative and co-operative partnership. In the case of the ICSS, the key parties to this partnership are the School's Senior Management Team, the counselling provider, the primary point of contact within the school staff (Key Contact for Counselling) and the counsellor.

ICSS is not available for primary school pupils. Schools can however independently select their own counselling provider, arrange for counselling and use their existing delegated budget to absorb any associated costs. They can also use funding from other sources, such as, the Extended Schools Initiative, the Big Lottery or Neighbourhood Renewal to purchase counselling support.

Ms Mullan asked the Minister of Education whether he intends to reintroduce the tri-lingual approach to corporate branded departmental material.
(AQW 2224/17-22)

Mr Weir: I have no plans to reintroduce the tri-lingual approach to corporate branded departmental material.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many children across Northern Ireland are currently educated at home.
(AQW 3260/17-22)

Mr Weir: As of 29 February 2020, there were 444 children and young people known to the Education Authority (EA) as being electively home educated. Please note that this figure is not the total number of home educated children in Northern Ireland, rather it is only those that the EA has been informed about through the de-registration process or because the EA has been asked for advice or support.

The actual number may be higher as parents are only required to notify the EA if their child has previously attended school or has a statement of special educational needs.

Parents may choose what they consider to be the most appropriate educational setting for their child and that can include being home schooled.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister of Education to detail how many Education Welfare Officers there are working with (i) Irish-medium primary schools; and (ii) the post-primary Irish-medium school, in Belfast
(AQW 3296/17-22)

Mr Weir:

- (i) The Education Authority (EA) has six Education Welfare Staff as link Education Welfare Officers to primary Irish-medium schools in Belfast.
- (ii) The EA has one Education Welfare Service Officer as link Education Welfare Officer to post-primary Irish-medium school in Belfast.

Ms Mullan asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) how many young people in Derry city are waiting on an Education Other Than at School (EOTAS) place; and (ii) how many travel to Strabane EOTAS.
(AQW 3305/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Education Authority has reported that:

- (i) Less than five pupils are awaiting EOTAS placements.
- (ii) Less than five pupils travel to Strabane EOTAS from Derry City.

In order to protect the identity of children, where this number is less than five the exact number is not specified. In situations where there are challenging circumstances that relate to young people it is sometimes deemed beneficial to locate the young person in another geographical location.

Ms Mullan asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the quality of education provision provided to young people who access Education Other Than at School (EOTAS) and to outline why there is no formal links with their previous school.
(AQW 3307/17-22)

Mr Weir: The assessment of the quality of education provision provided to young people who access Education Otherwise Than at School is formally completed through inspections carried out by the Education and Training Inspectorate who publish all their reports on <https://www.etini.gov.uk/>.

Internal processes are in place within EA to ensure that provision is planned, of a high standard and continuously reviewed.

Formal links with schools are encouraged and supported through a Partnership approach where a pupil remains enrolled at a mainstream school. For expelled pupils, there is no formal link with a school.

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister of Education (i) how many staff car parking spaces his Department and its agencies have in Belfast city centre; and (ii) whether he is taking any action to reduce this number.

(AQW 3340/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Department of Education does not have any car parking spaces for staff located in the Belfast City Centre.

The Department's Arm's Length Bodies that are located in Belfast city centre have a total of 319 car park spaces allocated to staff.

At present I am not taking any action to reduce this number.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education to detail the annual fees payable, voluntary or otherwise, for attendance at each post-primary school in Northern Ireland.

(AQW 3364/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Education Reform (NI) Order 1989 Article 128 (1) and (2) enshrines the right to a free education for pupils registered in grant-aided schools, with certain specific exceptions in relation to grammar schools.

Further information on the fees and charges that can and cannot be levied by boards of governors in respect of registered pupils at grant-aided schools and requests for voluntary contributions, is detailed in Chapter 19 of the Department's Governor Guide, which can be accessed via the link below:

<https://www.education-ni.gov.uk/publications/guide-governor-roles-and-responsibilities>

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Education what plans his Department has to utilise the C2K network to deliver remote learning in the case of a significant coronavirus outbreak.

(AQW 3399/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Education Authority is monitoring the situation in relation to COVID 19 very closely with the aim of mitigating day-to-day impact on schools and ensuring continuity of education delivery as much as possible.

In the event that school closures become necessary as part of a wider containment or delay phase, substantial capacity and provision exists via the EA Education Network service to facilitate teaching and learning outside of the classroom environment through digital and online platforms. Significant aspects of the current Education Network technologies operate online, whereby learners can access personal work areas, collaborate with their peers and teaching staff, and utilise curriculum resources based on an anytime, anywhere philosophy.

Besides the continuity of teaching and learning, schools also have a rich portfolio of communication tools at their disposal, to ensure the dissemination of critical notifications and alerts to parents, staff and other education related bodies should school closure be necessary.

Ms Armstrong asked the Minister of Education for her assessment of the number of teachers that will need to be trained for the education sector in (i) 2020-21; and (ii) for 2021-23.

(AQW 3427/17-22)

Mr Weir: Following consultation with the Department for the Economy (DfE), I have decided to retain intakes to Initial Teacher Education (ITE) courses at the current level for the 2020/21 academic year, as set out below.

Setting the level of ITE intakes for 2021/22 and 2022/23 will be taken following consideration of a number of factors, including DfE's budget allocation for these years, statistical information provided from my Department's Teacher Demand Model and wider policy considerations.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education to outline the Education Authority's plan for the former Lisnaskea High School site and to detail how the Education Authority initially acquired the site.

(AQW 3441/17-22)

Mr Weir: The former Lisnaskea High School closed on (date) and the buildings on the site are currently being demolished. Part of the site has been identified for the proposed relocation of Bunscoil an Traonaigh. No future educational need has been identified for the remainder of the site, therefore the EA will formally dispose of this asset in line with Land and Property Services' Central Advisory Unit's publication entitled "Disposal of Surplus Public Sector Property in Northern Ireland". Through this process, the land will initially be offered to other Departments and public sector bodies.

The EA inherited this site from the former Western Education and Library Board, who had been the long term owner of the site while it was occupied by Lisnaskea High School.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) what assessment his Department has made of the impact of a coronavirus outbreak on teaching staff; and (ii) what plans his Department has in place to manage an outbreak of the coronavirus in schools.

(AQW 3442/17-22)

Mr Weir: The impact of an outbreak in a school on teaching staff will be challenging.

Teachers' health and wellbeing is a matter of the utmost importance. The responsibility for the health and wellbeing of teachers rests with their employers, their Board of Governors, in conjunction with the employing authority where relevant, as the Department of Education (DE) does not employ teachers.

The Council for Catholic Maintained Schools and Education Authority (EA), who are the main employers, are following Public Health Agency (PHA) advice and keeping close contact with colleagues in DE and with each other. They will continue to engage with the PHA, DE colleagues and each other on a daily basis and follow government guidance and advice.

DE has put in place arrangements for working closely with all its education partners on emergency planning issues associated with the Coronavirus outbreak, including the EA on service delivery issues and the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment on examinations issues. This will ensure that appropriate contingency plans are in place and that schools are regularly updated with appropriate advice as the situation evolves.

DE convened a COVID-19 Education Planning Group on 13 March which will co-ordinate efforts across the education sector. This group will continue to meet on a regular basis to consider and respond to issues arising. Specific guidance for educational settings also issued on 16 March and this will continue to be updated as the situation evolves.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education to detail the costs to grammar schools of administrating post-primary transfer tests and from what budget this cost is met.

(AQW 3448/17-22)

Mr Weir: My Department has no role in the operation or administration of the transfer tests used by selective post-primary schools nor does it provide specific funding to schools to administer these tests.

In 2016, my Department issued guidance using powers available to it under Article 16B of the Education (Northern Ireland) Order 1997. This provided that primary schools could supply support materials, carry out preparations for tests during core teaching hours, coach in exam technique and familiarise pupils with the test environment.

It is a matter for individual schools to decide whether and how to use the available guidance in line with the wishes of parents and the needs of pupils.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many primary one places does Kilcooley Primary School currently have; and how many will it have for the 2020-21 academic year.

(AQW 3495/17-22)

Mr Weir: The information you have requested is provided in the table below. A school may at any time request a Temporary Variation to its admissions number to increase its intake. None of the four schools have, to date, received a Temporary Variation in either year.

School number	School name	2019/20 Admissions Number	2020/21 Admissions Number
401-6002	Kilcooley PS	29	29
405-1680	Bangor Central PS	88	88
401-6111	Towerview PS	58	58
401-1645	Crawfordsburn PS	30	30

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many primary one places does Bangor Central Primary School currently have; and how many will it have for the 2020-21 academic year.

(AQW 3496/17-22)

Mr Weir: The information you have requested is provided in the table below. A school may at any time request a Temporary Variation to its admissions number to increase its intake. None of the four schools have, to date, received a Temporary Variation in either year.

School number	School name	2019/20 Admissions Number	2020/21 Admissions Number

401-6111	Towerview PS	58	58
401-1645	Crawfordsburn PS	30	30

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many primary one places does Towerview Primary School currently have; and how many will it have for the 2020-21 academic year.

(AQW 3497/17-22)

Mr Weir: The information you have requested is provided in the table below. A school may at any time request a Temporary Variation to its admissions number to increase its intake. None of the four schools have, to date, received a Temporary Variation in either year.

School number	School name	2019/20 Admissions Number	2020/21 Admissions Number
401-6002	Kilcooley PS	29	29
405-1680	Bangor Central PS	88	88
401-6111	Towerview PS	58	58
401-1645	Crawfordsburn PS	30	30

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many primary one places does Crawfordsburn Primary School currently have; and how many will it have for the 2020-21 academic year.

(AQW 3498/17-22)

Mr Weir: The information you have requested is provided in the table below. A school may at any time request a Temporary Variation to its admissions number to increase its intake. None of the four schools have, to date, received a Temporary Variation in either year.

School number	School name	2019/20 Admissions Number	2020/21 Admissions Number
401-6002	Kilcooley PS	29	29
405-1680	Bangor Central PS	88	88

School number	School name	2019/20 Admissions Number	2020/21 Admissions Number

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 2406/17-22, (i) whether he agrees there is an element of discrimination against the controlled sector in that the capita per child is lower in both primary and post-primary than in any of the other sectors; and (ii) what proposals his Department has to address this, so that all schools are treated on a fair and adequate basis.

Mr Weir: My response to AQW 2406/17-22 detailed the per pupil funding allocated to schools through the Common Funding Formula (CFF) for 2019-20. This was calculated using the total CFF allocation divided by the Full Time Equivalent pupil numbers for schools in the sectors requested.

The CFF is the Department's mechanism for allocating budgets to schools funded through Local Management of Schools arrangements. A school's CFF allocation will be determined by a combination of its overall enrolment, the differentiated needs of its pupils and the school's characteristics. Therefore, schools with higher numbers of newcomer pupils or pupils with free school meal entitlement will attract additional funding regardless of sector. Similarly, smaller schools receive small schools support funding which increases the per capita funding of these schools, irrespective of sector.

Schools budgets, calculated through the CFF, are reflective of the individual circumstances of each school, and all schools are treated in a fair and adequate basis, regardless of sector.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 2735/17-22; (i) whether he will make available the subsequent pages of the Minister's response to the original Dickson Plan scheme dated 5 February 1965 in a format that is readable; (ii) whether he can confirm that this agreement to the Dickson Plan has not been updated officially since the former Minister agreed it in his decision dated 15 February 1967; and (ii) whether he will undertake to begin a process that ensures the Dickson Plan (a) survives; and (b) is brought up to date.

(AQW 3511/17-22)

Mr Weir:

- (i) There are no subsequent pages available to the former Ministry of Education decision dated 15 February 1967.
- (ii) The EA is the managing authority for Controlled sector provision including those schools in the Dickson Plan. If the EA decides it wishes to make a significant change in any reform of the Dickson Plan system, there is a statutory process which must be followed and this involves the publication of a Development Proposal, having taken account of the wider area context.
- (iii) I have previously made my views known on the Dickson Plan system and reiterate my support and assurance of its continuation.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Education what extra budget provision is being made for soap, anti-bacterial and other cleansing materials in schools.

(AQW 3524/17-22)

Mr Weir: I appreciate that this unprecedented situation is an extremely challenging time for schools and all our partners in the education sector. In conjunction with the Education Authority, my Departmental Officials are currently assessing the impact on schools budgets and what additional resources can be made available to assist schools at this time.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Education what plans his Department has to increase the enrolment numbers in Parkhall Integrated College.

(AQW 3549/17-22)

Mr Weir: The planning of education provision for Controlled schools is a matter for the Education Authority rather than the Department.

The Education Authority's extended Annual Action Plan April 2019-March 2021 (the Action Plan) sets out the work programme of the planning and managing authorities to address specific issues at a local level. There is no proposed activity in the Action Plan relating to Parkhall Integrated College.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education what plans his Department has to sell or demolish the old Cotton Primary School.

(AQW 3563/17-22)

Mr Weir: The former Cotton Primary School site is currently being retained by the Education Authority for potential future educational use.

Should this change, the EA will dispose of this asset in line with Land and Property Services' Central Advisory Unit's publication entitled "Disposal of Surplus Public Sector Property in Northern Ireland". This process includes a public sector trawl to ascertain if there is any public sector body that has a requirement for the site. If no interest is expressed, the EA would then move to dispose of the site on the open market.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Education to detail the schools where suspected coronavirus has been reported.
(AQW 3586/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Department does not intend to monitor schools where coronavirus has been detected. It is monitoring the current situation in terms of schools which requested an exceptional closure week commencing 16 March 2020 and will continue to gather information on which schools are open to key workers week commencing 23 March 2020.

On 18 March the First Minister and deputy First Minister announced a radical package of measures that the Executive is taking to deal with the unprecedented challenges facing our society as a result of the COVID-19 outbreak. This included confirmation that schools will close to pupils at the end of the school day on Friday 20 March.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education whether any existing shared and integrated education funding can be allocated to progress integrated education nursery provision.
(AQW 3590/17-22)

Mr Weir: Fresh Start funding has been made available to my Department specifically to increase the provision of shared and integrated education. 23 integrated schools will benefit from major capital investment projects through this funding. Additionally, executive funding is being used to progress a number of major capital investment projects at some integrated schools not included in the Fresh Start Programme.

Generally where a school currently includes nursery provision the nursery provision will be included in the major capital project. Since the announcement of the Fresh Start Programme in March 2016, capital funding has been identified for nursery schools on the following projects:

- Millennium IPS
- Mill Strand IPS
- Phoenix IPS
- Braidside IPS
- Forge IPS
- Portadown IPS
- Omagh IPS
- Corran IPS

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education why a COVID-19 education working group has not been established in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 3663/17-22)

Mr Weir: I have ensured my Department has arrangements in place to work closely with all its education partners on a range of very complex issues arising from the Coronavirus outbreak, including the Education Authority on service delivery issues and the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment on examinations issues.

My Department convened a COVID-19 Education Planning Group on 13 March to co-ordinate efforts across the education sector. This group will meet on a regular basis to consider and respond to issues arising.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education what provisions are in place to facilitate online learning in the event of school closures.

(AQW 3664/17-22)

Mr Weir: With the announcement of school closures from Monday 23rd March by the First Minister and Deputy First Minister, the Education Authority can confirm that substantial capacity and provision exists via the EA Education Network service to facilitate teaching and learning outside of the classroom environment through digital and online platforms.

The use of online tools to help improve teaching and learning experiences has seen a significant increase, not only within the classroom but also extending beyond the classroom so that learners can access personal work areas, collaborate with their peers and teaching staff, and utilise curriculum resources based on an anytime, anywhere philosophy.

The MySchool portal acts as a focal point for online Education Network services and this is available to all learners and teachers through an Internet enabled device from home via www.c2kschools.net.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education many primary one places does Bloomfield Primary School currently have; and how many will it have for the 2020-21 academic year.

(AQW 3700/17-22)

Mr Weir: The information you have requested is provided in the table below. A school may at any time request a Temporary Variation to its admissions number to increase its intake. The school has, to date, not received a Temporary Variation in either year.

School number	School name	2019/20 Admissions Number	2020/21 Admissions Number
401-3023	Bloomfield Primary School	58	58

Mr McGrath asked the Minister of Education, given the current health concerns, whether consideration will be given to updating groups that have applied for pathway funding sooner, so they can prepare for the impact of receiving or not receiving grants.

(AQW 3742/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Department has appointed a Pathway Fund administrator (Early Years – the Organisation for Young Children (EYO)) for 2020/21. The Department is working closely with EYO during the current circumstances and contingency arrangements are in place in light of the COVID-19 pandemic so that, where possible, the Fund assessment and allocation process will progress as planned.

Budgets beyond the current financial year are undetermined, therefore no decisions have been taken in relation to future years. DE will notify EYO as soon as possible after the Pathway budget is confirmed. EYO currently anticipates that all applicants will be advised of the outcome of their application during the first week of April 2020, including indicative notification of award where applicable.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many primary one places does Ballymaghee Primary School currently have; and how many will it have for the 2020-21 academic year.

Mr Weir: The information you have requested is provided in the table below. A school may at any time request a Temporary Variation to its admissions number to increase its intake. Neither of the schools have, to date, received a Temporary Variation in either year.

School number	School name	2019/20 Admissions Number	2020/21 Admissions Number
401-6192	Kilmaine PS	90	90
401-6430	Ballymaghee PS	60	60

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Education, with current Government guidelines directing people to self-isolate when in contact with someone with a suspected case of COVID-19, why are schools with suspected cases not being granted closure for 14 days to protect pupils and staff.

(AQW 3812/17-22)

Mr Weir: On 18 March the First Minister and deputy First Minister announced a radical package of measures that the Executive is taking to deal with the unprecedented challenges facing our society as a result of the COVID-19 outbreak. This included confirmation that schools will close to pupils at the end of the school day on Friday 20 March.

The welfare, health and safety of pupils and staff is paramount. The Department will continue to follow the expert medical and scientific advice from the Chief Medical Officer, Public Health Agency and the UK Government and Scientific Advisory Group for Emergencies (SAGE).

Mr O'Toole asked the Minister of Education whether the exemptions on school attendance for key workers apply to families with one key worker parent, and which specific parts of the retail sector are included.

Mr Weir: School attendance exemptions for key worker families apply where one or both parents are key workers.

A list setting out the broad categories of key workers is contained in Frequently Asked Questions provided to schools and pre-school education settings on 24 March and placed on the Departmental website:

<https://www.education-ni.gov.uk/faqs-schools-opening-children-key-workers-24-march-2020>

On 24 March the Executive published a list of essential businesses that are permitted to remain open. The list provides clarity on what retail services may remain open and which should close immediately.

Department of Finance

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance, whereas the Code of Appointment for Special Advisers asserts that the legal framework governing employment applies to the appointment of Special Advisers, including anti-discrimination laws, how is such demonstrated and transparent in circumstances where the Ministerial selection of the Special Adviser is outside the ambit of the Code.

(AQW 3290/17-22)

Mr Murphy (The Minister of Finance): The selection of a special adviser is a matter personal to the Minister. It would be for each Minister to confirm that the appointment complied with the necessary requirements. I have already done this for the DoF Special Adviser.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Finance for his assessment of the service provided via the NI Direct website, reporting system and call centre.

Mr Murphy: The NI Direct website and call centre provide the citizen with a central point for key government information and services. Processes are in place to measure the effectiveness of these services, for example, performance against contractual Key Performance Indicators, Customer Satisfaction Surveys and regular quality checks are undertaken on Call Centre services. The average annual customer satisfaction rate is 97.5% and complaints are less than 0.01% of the overall number of calls answered (circa 2.2 million calls per annum).

In 2019, the nidirect website attracted almost 50.7 million page views and over 20.7 million users. User testing is conducted regularly with citizens to find out how informative, comprehensive and easy to use they find the nidirect website. Results suggest how that people are aware of the nidirect website, view it as a trustworthy source of unbiased information, like the clear layout and the level of information available. The website has not received any complaints.

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister of Finance how much (i) bingo; (ii) gambling; (iii) Lottery; and (iv) machine games duty has been paid by companies in the last five years.

(AQW 3346/17-22)

Mr Murphy: This is an Excepted Matter for HMRC who are responsible for collecting gambling duties and who hold the information in this regard.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Finance what measures his Department has planned to recognise the centenary of Northern Ireland.

(AQW 3415/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The British Government made a commitment in the New Decade, New Approach document to work with the Executive to mark the centenary in 2021 in a spirit of mutual respect, inclusiveness and reconciliation in line with the principles for remembering; and to make available funding for related projects.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Finance whether he plans to establish special funding streams for research on SARS-CoV-2/COVID-19.

(AQW 3418/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The Executive will consider the appropriate response to COVID-19 which will be informed by views from individual Ministers on areas within their responsibility. The Health Minister will consider the need for special funding streams for research and development on SARS-CoV-2/COVID-19, taking account of work taking place at a UK-wide level.

We are working closely with the Westminster Government on this issue. The Executive will receive a share of any additional funding for support in devolved areas through the Barnett Formula. In addition, as set out in the Statement of Funding Policy, we can also access the Reserve where we are unable to manage any disproportionate costs from our own resources.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Finance to detail the number of complaints brought by staff that have been upheld in the last five years.

(AQW 3471/17-22)

Mr Murphy: In the answer, I have provided information on those formal complaints received by NICS staff under the NICS HR Handbook Employee Relations arrangements for Grievance, Dignity at Work, Uniform Appeals, which allow for complaints to be upheld or not.

The number of complaints 'upheld' in these categories in the last five years is set out in the Table 1, attached at Annex A.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Finance how many temporary posts exist in each branch of his Department; and how long each post has been operational.

(AQW 3472/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The table below provides details of the number of temporary/fixed term staff and recruitment agency workers in the Department of Finance and how long they have been in post. The information is provided for each Deputy Secretary Group at 2 March 2020.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Finance to detail the number of complaints by departmental staff that were (i) reviewed and dismissed prior to investigation; and (ii) investigated and then dismissed, in the last five years.
(AQW 3474/17-22)

Mr Murphy: In the answer, I have provided information on those formal complaints received by NICS staff under the NICS HR Handbook Employee Relations arrangements for Grievance, Dignity at Work, and Uniform Appeals, where complaints can be investigated and/or dismissed.

The information is set out in Table 1 and Table 2 at Annex A.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Finance to outline the criteria that determines if a property is uninhabitable for the purposes of rates.

(AQW 3525/17-22)

Mr Murphy: A domestic property is uninhabitable for the purposes of rates when it ceases to be a hereditament, at which point it will be removed from the Valuation List and no rates are payable. A hereditament is defined in the legislation as a property that is liable to a rate.

If the property could be made capable of occupation by undertaking a reasonable amount of repair works, the property remains in the Valuation List and liable for rates. If a property is truly derelict and incapable of being repaired for its intended purpose, LPS will remove it from the Valuation List. This is referred to as the hereditament test. It is a physical test rather than an economic test and neither the cost of the repairs nor the ability of the owner or occupier to fund the repairs can be taken into account.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance to detail (i) how many staff are employed within his Department's information service; (ii) of these, how many are classed as press officers; and (iii) the annual cost of this service.

(AQW 3537/17-22)

Mr Murphy: There are four staff in the department's press office, three of which are press officers. The annual cost of this service is £160,644 (excludes employee pension and national insurance contributions).

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Finance how much funding has been spent on consultants in the last five years, broken down by contract; and for the date on which each contract was awarded.

(AQW 3540/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The following amounts have been spent on consultants over the past five years:

Year	Amount £'000
2015-16	632
2016-17	181
2017-18	706
2018-19	837
2019-20*	394

* Please note 2019-20 figures are provisional

I am unable to currently provide these figures broken down by project level as projects and related consultancy spend can span a number of years. However, my finance team is developing systems that will enable such information to be more easily extracted going forward. In addition, in order to provide greater transparency, consultancy costs will be published on a regular basis on the Open Data NI portal.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Finance how many staff are employed in his Department's press office.

(AQW 3541/17-22)

Mr Murphy: There are four staff in the department's press office, three of whom are press officers.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Finance to detail (i) the number of human resources and personnel court cases the Northern Ireland Civil Service (NICS) has defended in each of the last five years, broken down by cases (a) won; and (b) lost by the NICS; and (ii) the costs and damages paid out.

(AQW 3542/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The number of human resources and personnel court cases the Northern Ireland Civil Service (NICS) has defended in each of the last five years, broken down by cases (a) won; and (b) lost by the NICS; and (ii) the costs and damages paid out is attached in Annex A.

These detail the numbers of court cases the Northern Ireland Civil Service defended in each of the last five years, i.e. those which proceeded to a full hearing and then broken down as requested, to specify those in which the case was decided in favour of the applicant, those dismissed by the court and the costs involved in each.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Finance, further to his Department's decision to close the Civil Service EO1 list with effect from 18 April 2020, whether this means no further names will be added to the list from that date, or whether the list will cease to exist from that date.

Mr Murphy: No decision has been made whether to close or extend the EO1 list. My officials are considering a range of options to fill current and future vacancies in the NICS at this grade and will consult with Trade Union Side on this matter.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Finance to outline the rationale behind the decision to close the Civil Service EO1 reserve list on 18 April 2020 whilst vacancies are due to be created by the ongoing Staff Officer Assessment Centres which are running up to the end of April 2020.

Mr Murphy: No decision has been made whether to close or extend the EO1 list. My officials are considering a range of options to fill current and future vacancies in the NICS at this grade and will consult with Trade Union Side on this matter.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Finance whether he will ensure that the funding for Changing Places, announced in the Budget, will be drawn down and used appropriately to implement the scheme speedily.

(AQW 3576/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The Executive did not receive any additional Barnett Consequentialists for 2020-21 in relation to Changing Places funding as part of the Chancellor's Budget on Wednesday 11 March 2020

While Barnett consequentialists may be received later in 2020-21 these will be unanticipated and it will be for the Executive to allocate in line with local needs and priorities. It will be for the Communities Minister to take forward any policy in this area.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Finance where the additional £210 million for Northern Ireland, announced in the UK Budget, will be spent.

Mr Murphy: The £210 million of additional funding will form part of the funding for the Executive's deliberations on the Budget which will be announced on 30 March 2020.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Finance whether small businesses will receive rates relief in Northern Ireland following the Chancellor's Budget.

(AQW 3587/17-22)

Mr Murphy: I have announced emergency measures to reduce the cost of rates on all businesses at this unprecedented time. All businesses will pay zero rates in April, May and June, effectively a reduction of 25% applied to the billable amount, after all other reliefs are applied. This will save businesses £100m. I am also deferring the issuing of all rate bills from April until June to help businesses with short-term cash flow and I will deliver a reduction in the Regional Rate for businesses. Further, I will review the position on reliefs as part of the Budget.

Mr Allen asked the Minister of Finance whether he will ring-fence any Barnet consequentialists emanating from the £30 million Changing Places toilet fund announced in the Chancellor's budget for a dedicated Northern Ireland Changing Places toilet fund.

(AQW 3608/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The Executive did not receive any additional Barnett consequentialists in relation to Changing Places funding as part of the Chancellor's Budget on Wednesday 11 March 2020.

While Barnett consequentialists may be received later in 2020-21, these will be unanticipated and it will be for the Executive to allocate in line with local needs and priorities. It will be for the Communities Minister to take forward any policy in this area.

Mr Allen asked the Minister of Finance, in light of Her Majesty's Government announcing £5.2 billion for flood defences in England together with £200 million funding to trial innovations to improve flood resilience, whether he is expecting Barnet consequential finances to assist the citizens of Northern Ireland similarly with improved flood defences and the trialing of innovations to improve flood resilience in similarly impacted areas.

Mr Murphy: As part of the Chancellor's Budget 2020-21, the Executive received £6.5 million of Barnett Consequentialists in relation to Flood defences funding in England.

These funds are unanticipated, meaning they do not have to be used for the purposes for which they were issued. Barnett consequentialists will form part of the overall funding available will be allocated by the Executive in line with local needs and priorities.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Finance whether he has any plans to abandon the pilot for hot desking in Goodwood House, given recent concerns about COVID-19.

Mr Murphy: I have no plans to abandon agile working in Goodwood House. This environment allows staff the flexibility to work in different locations, including remotely and at home, which at the current time is being taken up by significant numbers of people.

This trial is not about hot-desking, rather it seeks to facilitate and support agile and smarter working practices. This requires appropriate technology and equipment to allow people to work in different spaces, depending on the task being carried out, and not be restricted to a desk in a traditional office environment. Connectivity enhancements allow staff to keep in touch with their teams and to make voice and video calls using their laptops. Video and tele-conferencing facilities are also available for meetings.

We are also considering how we can set up agile drop-in areas which would provide opportunities for staff to work closer to home. This has the potential to reduce the amount of travelling required and contribute to our fight to reduce carbon emissions.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Finance what help his Department can give to small businesses affected by the COVID-19 outbreak.

(AQW 3701/17-22)

Mr Murphy: My response to AQW 3704/17-22 already refers to the support measures which I have announced for all businesses.

Mr Chambers asked the Minister of Finance what plans he has to support businesses that will suffer negative financial effects from the COVID-19 outbreak through either a downturn in their trade or by total closure of their business.

(AQW 3706/17-22)

Mr Murphy: I announced emergency measures to reduce the cost of rates on businesses at this unprecedented time. As part of this package, all businesses will pay zero rates in April, May and June, effectively a reduction of 25% applied to the billable amount after all other reliefs are applied. This will save businesses £100m. I am also deferring the issuing of all rate bills from April until June to help businesses with short-term cash flow, and I will deliver a reduction in the Regional Rate for businesses as part of the Budget.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Finance, in light of the Coronavirus outbreak, what contact he has had with the Treasury or the Bank of England to consider future options to reduce mortgage payments for homeowners or loans to businesses.

(AQW 3739/17-22)

Mr Murphy: I pressed the Chief Secretary to the Treasury, Stephen Barclay, to investigate the broad range of support available to people and households impacted by COVID-19 during a conference call with the Finance Ministers from Scotland and Wales on 18th March.

The 3 month mortgage holiday for households in financial difficulty that was agreed between the Treasury and lenders is to be welcomed in that regard. Our local banks are actively promoting this. But clearly more action is needed to help those worst affected.

My officials have also been engaging with the Bank of England, and directly with the financial industry here to discuss how they will work with people through this crisis, and in particular, the flexibility that needs to be shown to hard pressed families here.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance for a breakdown of the community background of staff employed by the North South Ministerial Council.

(AQW 3744/17-22)

Mr Murphy: Community background information is held on the 9 members of the Northern Ireland Civil Service working in the North South Ministerial Council. Information on the community background of individual members of staff is protected by the Fair Employment and Treatment (NI) Order 1998. In order to comply with the Order and to protect the confidentiality of this information it is our policy not to release community background data where the number of staff in any category (ie Protestant, Roman Catholic or Not Determined) is less than 10. It is therefore not possible to provide the information requested.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister of Finance to detail the Executive Budget from 2010 to 2020, broken down by Resource DEL, ring-fenced Resource DEL, Capital DEL and Financial Transactions Capital, broken down by year and displayed in tabular form.

(AQW 3757/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The table below details the Treasury control totals on which the Executive's Budgets, as published, from 2010 to 2020 were based.

Financial Year	Resource DEL		Capital DEL		£million
	Non Ring-fenced	Ring Fenced	Capital	FT Capital
2019-20	10,771.1	587.2	1,660.3	244.9

2011-12	9,485.7	351.0	903.4	-
2010-11	8,309.2	314.7	1,142.6	-

Mr Muir asked the Minister of Finance, in light of downturn experienced as a result of COVID-19, whether planned Reval 2020 non-domestic rates revaluation process can be suspended for sectors facing significant rises.

(AQW 3765/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The new non domestic Valuation List will come into force on 1 April.

It is not possible, within the terms of the legislation, to suspend changes in Net Annual Value for some, but not all, of the entries in the List at a general revaluation.

Mr Muir asked the Minister of Finance whether he intends to offer (i) payment holidays; and (ii) ability to defer payments for non-domestic ratepayers until the economy recovers after COVID-19.

(AQW 3766/17-22)

Mr Murphy: I refer the Member to AQW 3767/17-22.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Finance, in light of the COVID-19 pandemic, whether his Department will provide (i) 100% rates relief for businesses for a year; (ii) a new rates calendar from June to March; (iii) time to pay measures for all rates bills; and (iv) loans for small businesses.

(AQW 3804/17-22)

Mr Murphy:

- (i) I have announced emergency measures to reduce the cost of rates on businesses at this unprecedented time. As part of this package, all businesses will pay zero rates in April, May and June, effectively a reduction of 25% to the billable amount after all other reliefs have been applied. This will save businesses some £100m. As part of the Budget I will also deliver a reduction in the Regional Rate for businesses.
- (ii) I am deferring the issuing of all rate bills from April until June to help businesses with short-term cash flow.
- (iii) Furthermore Land & Property Services will discuss and agree extended payment arrangements with ratepayers where needed, to spread payments over a longer period of time. (iv) Loans for small businesses are not the responsibility of this Department.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Finance whether time to pay schemes will be announced for VAT, PAYE and corporation tax. (AQW 3805/17-22)

Mr Murphy: This is a matter for HMRC which has an existing time-to-pay service in place, and where the Chancellor announced that this would be scaled up in response to COVID-19.

While this is welcome, clearly it is vital that HMRC are flexible in allowing businesses and the self-employed to defer tax payments during this crisis. I will continue to press Treasury Ministers to ensure that adequate support is provided for those that need it.

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Finance whether hand sanitisers will be made available within Civil Service buildings; and what measures are being taken to protect Civil Service staff and service users during the COVID-19 outbreak.

(AQW 3809/17-22)

Mr Murphy: DoF does not have premises responsibility for all Civil Service buildings. That responsibility falls to the Department with the most staff located in that building. Within those premises for which my Department does have premises responsibility, there are supplies of hand sanitisers and soap and we are working with suppliers to increase the current supply. I understand that is also the case in other NICS buildings. As per my response to AQW 3405, my Department is providing input to The Executive Office on wider non-health preparedness for COVID-19. That input includes guidance to NICS staff and broadly follows, and points to, the advice given by the Public Health Agency, for example to demonstrate social distancing and maintain the highest possible personal hygiene, including washing hands thoroughly and frequently (with soap and water).

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Finance, in light of the coronavirus outbreak and in the interests of staff welfare, what health and disability audit has been undertaken of staff in the Civil Service in order that people with particular health vulnerabilities may work from home.

Mr Murphy: Guidance covering COVID-19 (coronavirus), including Frequently Asked Questions, has been issued to all staff and managers. This is being updated on a regular basis.

This guidance strongly advises staff classified as vulnerable people by the Public Health Authority (PHA) website to follow the social distancing measures which include working from home, where possible. For staff in this category who are unable to work from home, paid leave arrangements apply.

Mr Robinson asked the Minister of Finance, in light of the successful challenge by firefighters to Government reform of public sector pensions, for an update to the situation in Northern Ireland.

Mr Murphy: There is a clear need to address age discrimination in devolved public service pension schemes as a consequence of the McCloud ruling. This is supported by legal advice.

The solution will need to remove the discrimination identified in the reformed public service schemes from April 2015 and ensure equal treatment for the future, whilst also ensuring that members keep their accrued rights. This is a complex issue. Given that some members will be better off in the old schemes, and some better off in the new schemes, it is not as simple as putting everyone back in the old schemes. The way this is implemented could need to vary across schemes to some extent, because of existing differences in scheme design.

Proposals to accomplish this are currently being considered at the Collective Consultation Working Group, which is co-ordinated by the Department of Finance and which is the recognised forum for employer/employee consultation on public service pension policy.

A joint statement agreed between employer and employee representatives is available on the Department of Finance website at: <https://www.finance-ni.gov.uk/publications/statement-mccloud-judgement>.

Further updates will issue as and when there are more developments to report.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance, in light of the current crisis, what steps he has taken to identify non-priority resource spend across Departments so as to maximise spending on health and the economy.

(AQW 3847/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The Chief Secretary to the Treasury has assured me that funding will not be a constraint in providing comparable levels of COVID-19 support irrespective of where people and businesses are based.

There is ongoing close co-operation between all four administrations at Ministerial and official level.

To date we have received £904 million from Treasury to allocate to local measures to mitigate the effects of the Covid-19.

The Executive will take measures to reallocate funding to priority areas as required.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance to provide details of the process that will be followed in deciding whether civil servants will be disciplined in light of the findings of the RHI Inquiry.

(AQW 3848/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The exceptional nature and circumstances of the RHI Inquiry are such that any potential disciplinary matters relating to NI civil servants will be managed through an adapted process in line with NICS policies. This is to ensure that matters are dealt with in a timely way, ensuring the highest possible standards of fairness and consistency.

An external independent panel will consider the RHI Inquiry Report to identify any individuals who have reached the threshold of breaching 6.01 Standards of Conduct and 6.03 Discipline Policy as set out in the NICS HR Handbook.

The independent panel will consider all individuals at all grades in the NICS.

Formal disciplinary charges will be considered in relation to any NI civil servant who has been identified as having potentially undertaken an act/acts of misconduct and having breached relevant NICS policies.

The independent panel will submit a report to a NICS panel in respect of staff up to and including Grade 3. The independent external panel will separately submit its conclusions to the Cabinet Secretary for those at Grade 2 and above.

The NICS panel will comprise three NICS Permanent Secretaries who have not been involved in the RHI Inquiry or the RHI Scheme. The NICS panel will decide whether or not there should be any further action, undertake any disciplinary hearing and take decisions on appropriate disciplinary outcome.

Any appeals will be heard by a panel of two NICS Permanent Secretaries who are unconnected with RHI and who are not part of the NICS panel.

Mr O'Toole asked the Minister of Finance whether any areas of current 2020-21 allocations can be reprioritised urgently to deal with either the COVID-19 crisis or its economic effects.

(AQW 3853/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The Chief Secretary to the Treasury has assured me that funding will not be a constraint in providing comparable levels of COVID-19 support irrespective of where people and businesses are based.

There is ongoing close co-operation between all four administrations at Ministerial and official level.

To date we have received £904 million from Treasury to allocate to local measures to mitigate the effects of the Covid-19.

The Executive will take measures to reallocate funding to priority areas as required.

Department of Health

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Health (i) what was the cost of the XStrahl 150 unit at Altnagelvin Hospital; (ii) for how long the machine has gone unused; (ii) the rationale as to why it has not been used; and (vi) how many Western Health and Social Care Trust patients have been sent elsewhere to receive treatment as the machine was not in use.

(AQW 2580/17-22)

Mr Swann (The Minister of Health): In answer to your question:

- i) The x-ray machine purchase cost was £167,255, including operator applications training.
- ii) The machine was installed in 2017 and has not yet been used to treat patients.
- iii) The machine was purchased and installed as part of a wider capital investment programme to fully equip the North West Cancer Centre with the best available technology in the most cost effective way. In line with the service implementation plan it was always intended that the superficial x-ray machine would only be commissioned after the other major equipment was available to treat patients. A consultant oncologist has been appointed and it is expected that the first patient will be treated in May 2020.
- iv) Western Health and Social Care patients continue to receive appropriate treatment for their skin cancer as surgery and topical treatments are provided locally. Where necessary patients have been referred for radiotherapy to Belfast or Galway. Since 2016, sixteen patients have been referred from the Western Health and Social Care Trust to Belfast for treatment.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister of Health what services his Department is sharing on an All-Island basis to ensure that patients with medical conditions have access to their nearest service.

(AQW 2680/17-22)

Mr Swann: The following health services are currently provided on an all-island basis:

- i The Paediatric Congenital Cardiac services in Our Lady's Children's Hospital Crumlin;
- ii. The Milk Bank in the South West Acute Hospital (SWAH);
- iii. Hyperbaric Chamber provided on Craigavon Hospital site;
- iv. Sentinel Lymph Node Biopsy for Melanoma provided by Black Rock Clinic, Dublin; and
- v Provision of specialist blood components in a time sensitive emergency or catastrophic incident from the Irish Blood Transfusion Service (IBTS).

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health why databases from national societies are not used to compare surgical procedure outcomes; and whether he is considering any change to the legislation around data transfer in Northern Ireland so that Health and Social Care Trusts can participate fully in valuable UK datasets, enabling the comparison of important outcome data such as morbidity and mortality.

(AQW 2753/17-22)

Mr Swann: The current legislative and information governance environment in Northern Ireland does not preclude healthcare organisations from sharing non-identifiable information for secondary uses. Therefore I am not considering any change to the legislation around data transfer in Northern Ireland at this time. However the Department and HSC organisations are working to engage with the service to seek to remove perceived barriers to information sharing and clarify any potential confusion about how the current legal and legislative framework should be applied.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Health whether there are any geographical areas where there are difficulties in recruiting staff to provide home care packages.

(AQW 2806/17-22)

Mr Swann: All Health and Social Care Trusts are finding the recruitment of domiciliary care staff challenging. This can be more acute in rural areas and along the boundaries between Trusts.

In addition to current Trust recruitment initiatives, my Department is currently looking at those recommendations from the Power to People Report which will impact on future domiciliary care provision.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Health what progress has been made toward the publication of a mental health action plan, as outlined in New Decade, New Approach.

(AQW 2892/17-22)

Mr Swann: My intention is to publish the Mental Health Action Plan as soon as possible. Timing will need to take account of the current pressures facing the system.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Health how he intends to advance a prevention and early intervention strategy for mental health and ensure, through appropriate commissioning and funding, that access to evidence-based psychological approaches are available to meet mental health needs at all stages of a person's life.

(AQW 2916/17-22)

Mr Swann: I have committed to developing a new, ten year Mental Health Strategy, which I will publish by the end of 2020. The Strategy will take a lifespan approach and will consider prevention and early intervention, as well as the future configuration of specialist mental health services, including psychological therapies. The Strategy will be co-produced and psychologists will be included in the co-production.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health when he will decide on, and implement, a preferred option from the review of the application of Continuing Health Care in Northern Ireland.

Mr Swann: A public consultation on continuing healthcare was launched on 19 June 2017 and ran for a period of 13 weeks. A total of 43 consultation responses were received and analysed. I am considering the consultation responses and will announce next steps in due course.

Mr Middleton asked the Minister of Health what additional support his Department is providing to the Western Health and Social Care Trust to address the challenges it has in the recruitment and retention of staff.

Mr Swann: My Department is working in partnership with all Trusts, including the Western Trust, to promote the HSC as a great place to work and as an employer of choice, through careers events and the development of the HSC jobs website (www.jobs.hscni.net), to make it easier to navigate and be more attractive for users, while using it as a platform to promote career choices within the Trust, and fill "hard- to- fill" posts.

The International Medical Recruitment Programme within the Western Trust was established in 2015 and has to date successfully appointed 127 doctors to the Trust. 36 of these doctors have been appointed since March 2019. Doctors have been appointed across a range of specialties, including areas which have been notoriously difficult to fill. This includes Emergency Medicine, Radiology, Oncology, Gastroenterology, Neurology and Ophthalmology.

There is also regional investment by the Department to facilitate the recruitment of international nurses. This project was first set up in 2016 and the HSC are committed to recruiting 622 nurses by March 2020, although this may be delayed by some months. The Western Trust have so far welcomed 64 new nurses and have 41 live offers undergoing pre-employment checks.

In terms of retaining staff, the Department is overseeing implementation of the health and social care Workforce Strategy, which includes a number of actions to improve staff health and wellbeing. All HSC employers, including the Western HSC Trust, are involved in this work.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health (i) what is the average waiting time for Essure patients; (ii) what are the arrangements for Essure patients to travel to Great Britain or the Republic of Ireland; and (iii) whether the current arrangements are likely to change.

Mr Swann:

- (i) Patients who require surgery as a consequence of having had an Essure coil fitted would normally have surgery in any of the Trusts in Northern Ireland, within the gynaecology specialty. We are unable to identify specific cases where such remedial surgery has taken place. However, the average (median) completed waiting time for elective surgery within the Gynaecology specialty as a whole for Northern Ireland in 2018/19 was 8.3 weeks.
- (ii) There are no separate contractual arrangements for Essure patients to travel to Great Britain or the Republic of Ireland and no requests have been submitted in the past three years relating to Essure. The EU Directive application route for patients ordinarily resident in Northern Ireland and legally entitled to Health and Social Care services may be considered. Reimbursements are granted for eligible treatment costs only (i.e. not travel / accommodation). Patients are advised to contact the HSCB in advance of travelling to discuss whether prior authorisation is required and levels of reimbursement. Further information on the application process can be found on the HSCB website at:
<http://www.hscboard.hscni.net/travelfortreatment/the-directive-201124eu-on-cross-border-healthcare/>
- (iii) There are no plans in place to change the current arrangements.

Mr Gildernew asked the Minister of Health what efforts he is making to mitigate the incentive of doctors and other healthcare workers to work less hours due to issues with pension contributions.

(AQW 3113/17-22)

Mr Swann: I fully recognise the many difficulties that HMRC taxation rules on pensions are causing, in particular, the Annual Allowance when combined with changes to the tapering mechanism. The Minister of Finance and I jointly wrote to the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 28 February to urge action on this issue.

On 11 March the Chancellor announced in the Budget that, following an urgent review by HMRC, there will be changes to the tapered Allowance thresholds, increasing both thresholds by £90,000. Raising the tapered annual allowance thresholds means that no one with net income before tax below £200,000 will be caught by the tapered annual allowance.

However, to ensure that the very highest earners pay their fair share of pension tax, the minimum level to which the Annual Allowance can be tapered down is reduced from £10,000 to £4,000, affecting only those with total income (including pension accrual) above £300,000.

I believe that the increase to the Annual Allowance thresholds will allow doctors and other healthcare workers to spend as much time as possible treating patients and address the workforce pressures caused by some doctors reducing HSC workloads for fear of higher tax bills.

Ms Mullan asked the Minister of Health to detail the range of short break overnight respite services for under 18 years, over and above family based short breaks; and how many allocated slots are available in each Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 3115/17-22)

Mr Swann: The number of respite beds available per Health and Social Care Trust for children are as follows:

	Beds
Northern Health and Social Care Trust	10
South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust	13
Western Health and Social Care Trust	17
Southern Health and Social Care Trust	12
Belfast Health and Social Care Trust	10*

* Belfast Trust has access to an additional 4 beds in a facility managed by the South Eastern Trust.

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister of Health to detail the number of GPs on Out of Hours duty at (i) Altnagelvin Hospital; (ii) Omagh Hospital and Primary Care Complex; (iii) Strabane Health Centre; (iv) Limavady Health Centre; and (v) the South West Hospital, between the hours of (a) 6pm to 12am; and (b) 12am to 8am, over the last four weeks.

(AQW 3131/17-22)

Mr Swann: The number of GPs on Out of Hours duty at (i) Altnagelvin Hospital; (ii) Omagh Hospital and Primary Care Complex; (iii) Strabane Health Centre; (iv) Limavady Health Centre; and (v) the South West Hospital, between the hours of (a) 6pm to midnight; and (b) midnight to 8.30am, over the last four weeks, are shown in the table overleaf.

The number of GPs working in each out of hour base requested, between the hours of (i) 6pm to midnight; and (ii) midnight to 8:30am, over the last 4 weeks<sup>1</sup>

Source: Health and Social Care Board

- 1 Western Urgent Care will have GPs or ANPs who could work a shift that covers all or part of these time periods. Given that they have worked at some point during the time period, they have been included in the data. The data does not include GP Trainees, because depending upon their grade, they may see patients alongside their Supervisor or independently.
- 2 Limavady and Strabane Health Centres only provide Out of hours services between 6pm and midnight. All other bases provide services between 6pm and 8.30 am.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Health how many Ambulance Service staff are on zero hours contracts.

(AQW 3138/17-22)

Mr Swann: NIAS does not employ any staff on zero hour contracts.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Health whether he has considered establishing the role of clinical associate psychologists, using a graduate workforce, similar to developments in England where developments are being evaluated in pilot sites projects.

(AQW 3163/17-22)

Mr Swann: The assessment, development and integration of new roles is an important element of the HSC Workforce Strategy. I anticipate that the potential contribution of clinical associate psychologists will be addressed as the mental health workforce requirements for the future are reviewed.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health for an update on the taskforce following British Association of Social Workers NI's Insult and Injury Report.

(AQW 3165/17-22)

Mr Swann: The publication of a research report carried out by BASW (NI), 'Insult and Injury: Exploring the impacts of intimidation, threats and violence against social workers' highlighted the issue of threats, violence and intimidation towards HSC social work and social care staff.

My Department established a taskforce to develop a professional governance framework setting out good practice examples of employer support for social work and social care staff affected by work related violence. The draft framework aims to bring together existing good practice in this area in order that staff feel supported, safe, and know what support and assistance they can expect from employers.

This work is almost complete but it has been delayed due to other Departmental priorities.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health whether he intends to ensure that the profession of psychology, in line with other health professional groupings, is directly represented at a strategic level in the design and commissioning of evidence-based psychological services.

(AQW 3166/17-22)

Mr Swann: I refer to the answer provided to AQW 2914/17-22.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health to detail the number of people who have accessed gender identity services in each of the last five years, broken down by (i) age; (ii) local council area; (iii) gender; and (iv) treatment outcome.

(AQW 3177/17-22)

Mr Swann: Due to changes in IT systems, data can only be provided for three of the last five years. It is not possible to break down the number of people who have accessed gender identity services by age, local council area, gender or treatment outcome, without a manual review of the patient's files. The total number of face to face attendances (new and review) at gender identity services are detailed in the table below.

Year	Number of Attendances
2017	1874
2018	1355
2019	990

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health (i) whether food testing by the Food Standards Agency is undertaken through a tendered contract; (ii) where the work is carried out; (iii) when the current contract is due to expire; (iv) if this work is carried out in Great Britain, what impact the Brexit Protocol arrangements will have; and (v) whether any instructions have been issued in this regard.

(AQW 3229/17-22)

Mr Swann: A broad range of food testing (microbiological examination and chemical analysis) is carried out by and on behalf of the Food Standards Agency (FSA). The table below outlines the detail of these arrangements.

(i) Test	(ii) Performed by and where	(iii) Memorandum of Understanding (MoU)
Official control testing of shellfish for marine biotoxins	Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute (AFBI) (Stormont)	Overarching MoU with AFBI. The current agreement is due to expire on 31 March 2022
Official control testing of shellfish for chemical contaminants	AFBI (Stormont)	Overarching MoU with AFBI. The current agreement is due to expire on 31 March 2022
Official control microbiological testing of shellfish	Carried out by the Northern Ireland Public Health Laboratory at Belfast City Hospital	NI Public Health Laboratory (NIPHLs), Belfast City hospital – non contractual and ongoing
Official control testing of milk	AFBI (Newforge, Belfast)	Overarching MoU with AFBI. The current agreement is due to expire on 31 March 2022
Official control testing of raw drinking milk	AFBI (Newforge, Belfast)	Overarching MoU with AFBI. The current agreement is due to expire on 31 March 2022
Official control testing of water samples (including at raw drinking milk suppliers, liquid milk processors and milk product plants where there are milk tanker wash facilities)	AFBI (Newforge, Belfast)	Overarching MoU with AFBI. The current agreement is due to expire on 31 March 2022
Official control testing of pig meat for Trichinella	AFBI (Stormont)	Overarching MoU with AFBI. The current agreement is due to expire on 31 March 2022
Official control testing of cattle and sheep for lead and copper	AFBI (Stormont)	Overarching MoU with AFBI. The current agreement is due to expire on 31 March 2022
Milk and canteen meals for radioactive contamination	Centre for Environment, Fisheries and Aquaculture Science (CEFAS) (Lowestoft, England)	Overarching MoU between FSA and CEFAS with specific schedule on monitoring for radioactivity. The current schedule on monitoring for radioactivity commenced on 1 January 2018 and is due to expire on 31 December 2020 with an optional 2-year extension until 31 December 2022

On an ad hoc basis, the FSA completes research and participates in surveys that could involve food testing. In these cases, contractors may be appointed relevant to the research or survey subject matter.

Food testing in Northern Ireland will also be carried out by the district councils and the Department of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs (DAERA).

iv) Occasionally testing takes place in GB laboratories. This is usually due to the specifications of the survey or research that the FSA is participating in and/or the lack of availability of an accredited laboratory in Northern Ireland to undertake the analysis. The FSA awaits guidance and information following negotiations between the UK and the EU regarding implications that the Ireland/Northern Ireland Protocol may have on food testing following the implementation period.

v) To date, no instructions have been given to or from the FSA in this regard.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health what specific provision his Department has planned for the specific needs of veterans.

(AQW 3231/17-22)

Mr Swann: In Northern Ireland (NI), healthcare services are provided on an equal basis across the general populace, irrespective of any demarcation. The Department's 2009 protocol, "Delivering Healthcare to the Armed Forces - A Protocol for Ensuring Equitable Access to Health and Social Care Services", sets out Departmental policy which ensures members of the armed forces, veterans and their families are not disadvantaged in terms of access to healthcare, when compared to any other person resident in NI. The Protocol provides for the equitable provision of healthcare to all those living in NI, irrespective of their occupation.

There is a commitment in the New Decade, New Approach agreement about the Armed Forces Covenant but it is currently not adopted in Northern Ireland. The Department of Health will consider specific service provision with regards to the needs of veterans when UK-wide legislation is introduced to further incorporate the Armed Forces Covenant into law.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health how many inpatient beds exist in psychiatric intensive care in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust; and how many times demand has exceeded capacity in each of the last five years.

(AQW 3234/17-22)

Mr Swann: Information on the number of inpatient psychiatric intensive care beds available in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust (HSCT) in each of the last five years is presented in the table overleaf.

The Northern HSCT indicated that at no time in 2019 had demand exceeded capacity for psychiatric intensive care beds. They could not provide this information for previous years, as it would involve a manual trawl through patient records and would incur disproportionate cost.

Number of psychiatric intensive care beds in the Northern HSCT (2015 to 2019)

Year	No. of psychiatric intensive care beds as at 31 Dec.
2015	13
2016	13

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health whether his Department captures centralised, regional patient population data relating to (i) eating disorders; (ii) alcohol and drug-related brain injury; (iii) early years; (iv) intensive care; and (v) post-partum depression.

(AQW 3236/17-22)

Mr Swann: The Department of Health does not capture centralised, regional patient population data relating to any of the above per se, but has systems available to it to provide certain information with respect to hospital admissions for a full range of clinically coded health morbidities and has systems available to derive certain health-related early years information.

The Department's Hospital Inpatient System (HIS) can provide the number of hospital admissions/ individuals hospitalised where an alcohol and drug-related brain injury was recorded. However, such information will not represent 'population data', as many individuals living with such a condition will be managed in a primary care setting and may not have been hospitalised within any given time frame examined. Diagnoses information in the primary care setting is largely unavailable. Additionally, hospitalisation data where an eating disorder or post-partum depression has been recorded will be more incomplete as the HIS does not cover hospitalisations within the Mental Health programme of care. Further information on such conditions may be available from individual Health & Social Care Trusts which will involve a trawl of their specific information systems.

Intensive care hospital episodes are not included in the Department's HIS. However, information on Intensive Care, in terms of demand and capacity, may be available via systems available to the HSCB or from each of the Health & Social Care Trusts individually.

Health-related early years information for the whole child population is captured on the Child Health System by each individual Health & Social Care Trust. This information is submitted to a regional database, held within the Business Services Organisation's data warehouse.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Health to outline his future plans for Altnagelvin Hospital.

(AQW 3278/17-22)

Mr Swann: The Western Health and Social Trust have submitted a proposal for the phased development of Altnagelvin Hospital as part of a Departmental capital planning review exercise. I will consider this proposal alongside other capital investment priorities put forward by our Health organisations. My ability to take forward new capital projects is subject to future budget availability.

In the interim, in order to alleviate ongoing service pressures, there are plans for the provision of a modular build extension to the existing emergency department facilities. It is anticipated these will be in place by Autumn 2020.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Health to detail the number of children reported to social services as suffering abuse in each of the last five years.

Mr Swann: When Social Services are notified of concerns that a child may be suffering abuse, it is recorded as a child protection referral. Abuse is categorised as neglect, physical abuse, sexual abuse, and emotional abuse. The number of child protection referrals is set out in Table 1.

Child protection figures are published both quarterly and annually on the DoH website <https://www.health-ni.gov.uk/articles/child-protection-register>.

Table 1: The number of Child Protection Referrals in Northern Ireland (2014/15 - 2019/20)

	Number of Child Protection Referrals

2018/19	3139
2017/18	3407
2016/17	4021

* The figure for 2019/20 covers only data for the first three quarters of the financial year.

** New protocols for recording child protection referrals were introduced during 2017 in line with “Regional Agreement on the use of Electronic Recording for Referrals into Children's Social Work Services – Northern Ireland Health and Social Care Trust – September 2017”. These may have contributed to a decrease in the number of recorded referrals.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, pursuant to AQW 705/17-22, whether Northern Ireland gets a financial benefit from any money recovered for services to residents of the Irish Republic under EHIC, S1 and S2 schemes; and how much is spent on the provision of such services.

(AQW 3288/17-22)

Mr Swann: Thank you for your Assembly Written Question.

Following the Speaker's letter to all MLAs (18 March) you will be aware of the significant pressure that my Department is currently under in dealing with the biggest public health emergency that this country has ever faced.

To that end, I have had to re-prioritise the work of the Department to best tackle the risks to public health and social care in Northern Ireland caused by the COVID 19 Virus. My approach means that I have had to significantly redeploy Departmental resources which, in turn, has created unavoidable pressures in carrying out normal ‘business as usual’.

I am conscious that the Assembly not only has a desire, but also a duty to request the latest information relating to this unprecedented and rapidly changing situation, and I am therefore committed to providing Members with regular updates as developments occur. I trust that you will agree that it is in the public interest that my officials and I remain primarily focused on the task in hand over the coming period in relation to COVID-19 and I will therefore not be in a position to answer your written question at this time.

I appreciate your understanding.

Robin Swann, MLA

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister of Health how many children and young people are waiting for speech and language appointments in each constituency.

(AQW 3297/17-22)

Mr Swann: Such appointments are not recorded on a constituency basis therefore the information requested could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. However, the number of children and young people waiting for an initial speech and language appointment in each Health and Social Care Trust is provided in the table below:

HSC Trust	Children and young people waiting for an initial SLT appointment
Belfast	410
Northern	348
South Eastern	266
Southern	846
Western	519
Total	2389

Mr Swann: Thank you for your Assembly Written Question.

Following the Speaker's letter to all MLAs (18 March) you will be aware of the significant pressure that my Department is currently under in dealing with the biggest public health emergency that this country has ever faced.

To that end, I have had to re-prioritise the work of the Department to best tackle the risks to public health and social care in Northern Ireland caused by the COVID 19 Virus. My approach means that I have had to significantly redeploy Departmental resources which, in turn, has created unavoidable pressures in carrying out normal 'business as usual'.

I am conscious that the Assembly not only has a desire, but also a duty to request the latest information relating to this unprecedented and rapidly changing situation, and I am therefore committed to providing Members with regular updates as developments occur. I trust that you will agree that it is in the public interest that my officials and I remain primarily focused on the task in hand over the coming period in relation to COVID-19 and I will therefore not be in a position to answer your written question at this time.

I appreciate your understanding.

Robin Swann, MLA

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health for an update on approval for patients requiring urgent life-saving or life-extending care to travel to other jurisdictions where necessary.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Health to detail (i) the number of people waiting for assessment for domiciliary care packages; and (ii) the length of time on the waiting list, broken down by each directorate in (a) Lurgan; (b) Banbridge; and (c) Portadown.

(AQW 3443/17-22)

Mr Swann: The Department does not hold this information centrally and cannot provide within the timeframe.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health for an update on his Department's input to the creation of dementia-friendly communities.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health what role social workers had in the development of the draft Family Parenting and Support Strategy.

(AQW 3463/17-22)

Mr Swann: The pre-consultation process for the draft cross-departmental Family and Parenting Support Strategy has involved significant engagement through focus groups, surveys, interviews and consultation workshops with a wide range of key stakeholders from across the statutory, voluntary and community sectors, including social workers.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health for an update on the Family Parenting and Support Strategy, including when the consultation will take place.

(AQW 3464/17-22)

Mr Swann: The draft Strategy is currently being considered by other departments for their final views and input. It is intended to publicly consult on the draft strategy in the near future.

Mr Blair asked the Minister of Health for his assessment of the number of domestic electrical fires in rural areas.
(AQW 3481/17-22)

Mr Swann: The table below details the number of primary (major) fires in domestic premises in rural areas* started by electrical appliances over the last three financial years:

2016/17	2017/18	2018/19

* Rural areas defined as settlements with a population of <5,000 and all areas outside settlement boundaries

Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) provide a range of information and advice to the community on fire safety including advice on how to prevent electrical fires in the home. NIFRS provide free Home Fire Safety Checks to members of the community who are deemed at risk. NIFRS completed 13,116 of these visits between 1 April 2016 and 31 March 2019.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Health what initiatives he is considering to support GP services' response to high demand, especially in rural areas.

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Health what plans his Department has to reduce the waiting times for occupational therapy referrals.
(AQW 3521/17-22)

Mr Swann: The HSCB has provided non-recurrent funding in 2019/20 across the Trusts to undertake additional activity to reduce the backlog of patients waiting for occupational therapy. As a result of this investment, the number of patients waiting longer than 13 weeks from referral to commencement of occupational therapy has reduced from 4,152 at the end of March 2019 to 3,379 at the end of January 2020.

Addressing waiting times for occupational therapy services is challenging due to a regional and national shortage of Occupational Therapists. While Trusts have experienced difficulties they continue in their endeavours to recruit staff to improve waiting times for patients.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health whether he plans to speed up the process of testing for ovarian cancer by combining the CA125 blood test with the ultrasound, as is the case in Scotland, or by another method.

(AQW 3530/17-22)

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health for his assessment of domestic fires caused by electricity, and the resources allocated to the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service to tackle them.

(AQW 3531/17-22)

Mr Swann: The table below details the number of domestic electric fires in Northern Ireland caused by electricity for the last three years:

Year	2016/17	2017/18	2018/19
Number of domestic fires caused by electricity	492	556	481

Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) provide a range of information and advice to the community on fire safety including advice on how to prevent electrical fires in the home. NIFRS provide free Home Fire Safety Checks to members of the community who are deemed at risk. NIFRS completed 13,116 of these visits between 1 April 2016 and 31 March 2019. The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service are appropriately resourced to respond to these incidents.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health what action he is taking to help prevent fires in domestic properties caused by electricity.

(AQW 3532/17-22)

Mr Swann: I am committed to reducing the number of accidental injuries and deaths in the home. Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) provides a range of information and advice to the community on fire safety including advice on how to prevent electrical fires in the home. NIFRS provides free Home Fire Safety Checks to members of the community who are deemed at risk. NIFRS completed 13,116 of these visits between 1 April 2016 and 31 March 2019.

In February 2015, my Department launched the Home Accident Prevention Strategy 2015-2025. As part of this strategy the Public Health Agency work in partnership with stakeholders to deliver advice on common hazards within the home. This includes advice on electrical safety and fire prevention.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health whether same-sex couples will be eligible for the three cycles of In Vitro Fertilisation (IVF), outlined in New Decade, New Approach.

(AQW 3534/17-22)

Mr Swann: Please see AQW 542/17-22 which covers the answer to this question.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Health (i) to detail the number of critical care beds available in each Health and Social Care Trust to deal with coronavirus; (ii) whether additional beds and contingency workforce and space capacity have been put in place to deal with coronavirus; and (iii) how many medical ventilators are available in Health and Social Care Trusts to deal with respiratory conditions that would be affected by coronavirus.

Mr Swann: The Department published the 'Health and Social Care (NI) Summary Covid-19 Plan for the Period Mid-March to Mid-April 2020' on the 19 March 2020 providing information on the above questions. Further updates will be published in due course.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health (i) what plans are in place for the delivery of social care during the Covid-19 pandemic; (ii) what plans are in place to support independent and voluntary social care providers and families to respond to day centre closures; (iii) whether Public Health Agency guidance on staff pay applies to independent and voluntary social care providers and will constitute full rather than statutory sick pay; and (iv) what plans are in place for access to, and continuity of, payment for independent and voluntary social care providers in the event of disruption to financial services.

Mr Swann:

- (i) The HSC Board, HSC Trusts and social care providers are working together to ensure continuity of care during the COVID-19 situation as per their contingency plans;
- (ii) HSC Trusts and Day Centre providers are working through their contingency plans to ensure that families and service users are kept informed of developments in the event that Day Centres need to close;
- (iii) PHA guidance for HSC staff does not apply to non-HSC staff. However, separate guidance for employers and businesses is available online from the PHA website; and
- (iv) The HSC has contingency plans in place related to ensuring the financial stability of independent providers.

Guidance for care homes and on domiciliary care was published on 17 March.

Mr McGrath asked the Minister of Health what support his Department is providing, at a regional level, to independent sector care providers with regard to contingency planning and possible hospital admissions from care homes as a result of COVID-19; and whether Health and Social Care Trusts will be providing resources.

(AQW 3596/17-22)

Mr Swann: Guidance for Nursing and Residential Care Homes and Domiciliary Care Providers was published on the 17th March. This includes admission and discharge arrangements to and from nursing and residential care homes and how Trusts should work in partnership with nursing and residential care home providers throughout the period of the COVID-19 delay phase and in the event of widespread transmission.

Mr Blair asked the Minister of Health for his assessment of the number of domestic electrical fires in rural areas.

(AQW 3624/17-22)

Mr Swann: I refer the member to my response to AQW 3481/17-22.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health how many adults are awaiting assessment for autism, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 3675/17-22)

Mr Swann: The number of adults waiting for an autism assessment as at 31 December 2019, and broken down by Health and Social Care Trust is shown in Table 1.

Table 1: The number of adults waiting for an autism assessment by Health & Social Care Trust at 31 December 2019.

HSC Trust	Number of adults awaiting an autism assessment
Belfast	371
Northern	140
South Eastern	162
Southern	155
Western	132

Sources: Health and Social Care Board Return.

Ms McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health (i) to detail (a) the number; and (b) location of sets of Personal Protection Equipment in each Health Service body; (ii) how long supplies are expected to last; (iii) what the policy is for allocation of Personal Protection Equipment across the Health Service; and (iv) how demand from Health Service staff for the use of Personal Protection Equipment is being managed.

Mr Swann: The Department published the 'Health and Social Care (NI) Summary Covid-19 Plan for the Period Mid-March to Mid-April 2020' on the 19 March 2020 providing information on the above questions. Further updates will be published in due course.

Department for Infrastructure

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Infrastructure what are her Department's plans to upgrade the sewerage network to allow further housing development to continue.

(AQW 985/17-22)

Ms Mallon (The Minister for Infrastructure): Northern Ireland Water has developed its Business Plan for the period 2021-27 which sets out its capital requirements for water and wastewater and it will be considered by the Utility Regulator. The prioritisation of works during any Price Control period is led by the Utility Regulator, in consultation with NI Water and its other statutory regulators. It is also subject to adequate funding being made available.

As Minister I have inherited a range of capital pressures. I recognise the importance of prioritising investment in both water and wastewater infrastructure, not least to build homes and grow our economy. I am therefore working with Executive colleagues to help address this issue.

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline (i) whether staff in MOT centres will be forced to work on Sundays, or will this be optional; and (ii) if they refuse to work on Sundays, whether this will affect their employment contract. (AQW 1148/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Currently the Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) has suspended all MOT tests for three months, until 22 June 2020. This decision was taken to protect the Health and Safety of both our staff and customers as a result of COVID 19; staff will continue to receive full pay.

Sunday overtime was being offered to staff to prioritise testing for taxis and four year old car customers, for private customers and car dealerships, but has now ceased for the foreseeable future. Sunday overtime is offered on a strictly voluntary basis and refusal to work will not affect their employment contract.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline plans to resurface Tower Road, Conlig. (AQW 1355/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My Department has earmarked Tower Road for possible inclusion on the programme of resurfacing works for the 2020/21 financial year. The road will, however, continue to be subject to monitoring during periodic inspections and in the meantime, any actionable safety defects at this location will be noted for repair, in line with my Department's current maintenance guidelines.

I have been raising the need for additional investment with the Minister for Finance in order to better maintain our roads and deal with other growing pressures facing my Department. I welcome the additional allocation made to my Department for winter service, urgent street lights and roads repairs. This money will help to begin to address the backlog. The extent of resurfacing plans among other pressures in my Department, will be determined by the forthcoming budget.

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AQW 642/17-22, to provide a breakdown of the maintenance allocation for each section office within Eastern Division.

(AQW 1859/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Eastern Division has three section offices which deliver a number of roads related services. However, funding allocations are made at Division level, rather than at section office level. Consequently, maintenance allocations are not available by individual section offices.

As advised in my response to AQW 642/17-22, allocations are made to the four DfI Roads Divisions on the basis of need, using a range of weighted indicators tailored to each maintenance activity. The Divisions also use these indicators when apportioning budget across District Council areas to ensure, as far as possible, an equitable distribution of funds.

Mr Stewart asked the Minister for Infrastructure what legislation is in place for private and public port authorities in Northern Ireland with regards to security.

Ms Mallon: Security regulation in the UK is a reserved matter and is covered by The Ship and Port Facility (Security) Regulations (2004). Under these regulations, port authorities are required to designate appropriate security officers and personnel in each port facility.

The Port Security Regulations (2009) were brought in to implement European Directive 2005/65/EC on enhancing port security at individual ports in the UK. In Northern Ireland, they were enacted in Belfast and Londonderry ports under The Port Security (Port of Belfast) Designation Order 2013 and The Port Security (Port of Londonderry) Designation Order 2014. The regulations designate The Belfast Port Security Authority and The Londonderry Port Security Authority as the port security authorities at these ports.

The Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act 1847 provides for the appointment of Harbour Dock and Police.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister for Infrastructure when her Department intends to fix the e-charge point in Cromac Street carpark, Belfast.

(AQW 3164/17-22)

Ms Mallon: The e-car public charge point network in the North is owned, operated and maintained by the Electricity Supply Board (ESB). Most of the public charge points were installed in 2011/12 and ESB has advised that there are reliability issues with some of the charge points. ESB recently identified charge points for replacement and has advised that it hopes to roll out a replacement programme commencing mid-2020. You may wish to contact ESB at ecars@esb.ie for assistance. Now that you have bought the issue of this e-charge point to my attention, I have also asked my officials to contact ESB to enquire as to when it will be fixed.

I fully recognise the importance of having modern, reliable public electric vehicle charging infrastructure in providing confidence for users of ultra-low emission vehicles and in respect of the connectivity improvements this would bring. I have met with the DAERA Minister to begin working collaboratively to promote the use of electric vehicles and specifically to improve the charge point network across Northern Ireland.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she intends to reform the taxi forum, as previously set up by the former Minister for Infrastructure.

Ms Mallon: I am advised the Taxi Forum has met twice since its establishment. At its first meeting members agreed that, where detailed work was required, the forum would form sub-groups which would then report back to the main forum as appropriate. Consequently two sub-groups were set up to look at driver licensing / operator licensing & accessibility issues; and vehicle licensing & tourism / hospitality issues. To date there have been over 30 meetings with stakeholders to gather information / data in relation to these issues.

I intend to consider these issues, including the Taxi Forum, in greater detail and am engaging with representatives from the industry to help inform my decisions.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether consideration has been given to adapting the A24 Saintfield Road from Cairnshill to Carryduff to a 'left-turn only' configuration with roundabouts, similar to the recently constructed A2 route from Jordanstown through Greenisland.

(AQW 3223/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My Department receives many requests for improvement works which unfortunately is not matched by available budgets. I have inherited severe and challenging budget constraints but I am committed to working to find solutions that deliver better for our communities and improve lives across Northern Ireland.

Given the constraints on funding, proposals for improvement works are assessed and prioritised to enable those schemes providing greatest benefit and value for money to go forward to compete for inclusion in a works programme. Adapting a 'left-turn only' configuration on the Saintfield Road between Cairnshill and Carryduff would require reconfiguration of many junctions and prohibition of turning movements which, if not complied with, would require enforcement by the PSNI. As such, there are currently no plans at this time to introduce a 'left turn only' arrangement.

An alternative arrangement to assist traffic movements on busy roads such as the Saintfield Road is the provision of right turn lanes and you will be aware that my Department has recently provided a road improvement scheme on the A24 Saintfield Road at Myrtledene. This included separate right turn lanes into Myrtledene Road and Glenhugh Park, and this will benefit road users in this area.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister for Infrastructure (i) for an update on the upgrade to the Sydenham Bypass to remove the traffic lights at Dee Street; and (ii) whether this will be connected to the upgrade of the York Street Interchange.

Ms Mallon: The 2015 Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan proposed the widening of the A2 Sydenham Bypass. The preferred route was published in 2010, which included removal of Dee Street traffic signals and provision of alternative access to Belfast Harbour Estate. However, the development of the scheme has not been progressed any further. This scheme is not connected to, or dependent on, the York Street Interchange proposals.

I am committed to developing new integrated plans which deliver support for public transport, encourages more walking and cycling, better manages car commuting and promotes sustainable development all in an effort to improve the environment and people's lives. To this end, my officials are currently preparing, for my consideration, a new Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan.

Ms Kimmings asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline her plans to allow people who are unable to drive due to medical conditions to avail of full concessionary public transport fares.

(AQW 3255/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I recognise the concerns that have been raised about the concession available to people who are unable to drive due to medical conditions. However the Concessionary Fares Scheme, as with many areas across my Department, is already under significant pressure, reflecting the severe and challenging budget constraints under which my Department has operated over recent years. Therefore, in advance of taking decisions, I will be assessing the full range of pressures, reflecting on my priorities, the commitments in "New Decade: New Approach" and the budget made available for the period ahead.

I am continuing to engage with my Executive colleagues to ensure sustained levels of recurrent funding going forward to maintain high quality public transport including support for concessionary travel. This is essential to maintain the economic, social and environmental wellbeing of the region.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Infrastructure what assessment has been made of the new thermal patching process of repairing road defects.

(AQW 3264/17-22)

Ms Mallon: In carrying out repairs to road surface defects, my Department's internal contractor, currently uses three recognised industry-standard repair methods:

- Cut out patching: this traditional repair method involves excavating an appropriate section of material surrounding the pothole and re-laying with a hot bituminous material in compacted layers. As well as repairing the surface layer it can also be used to repair underlying structural weaknesses.
- Velocity patching: my Department has been using this approach for approximately 15 years, to carry out repairs mainly on lesser trafficked rural roads. This innovative technique uses a cold bituminous material which is controlled and applied by the operative using a pressurised spray. In most cases these repairs can be completed more quickly, reducing the amount of excavated material and waste, and improving health & safety for operatives.
- Cold lay material: this involves use of a special cold lay bituminous repair material, for dealing with high priority pothole repairs. The quality of cold lay material has improved over the years and there are now versions that can be used to repair even highly trafficked roads in all weathers.

A number of vehicle mounted and portable thermal patchers were purchased around 15 years ago. At that stage the technology was not as advanced as it is now and they were removed from service due to operational difficulties with the machines and health and safety concerns.

My Department is always on the lookout for new methods that will enhance efficiency while improving the safety of staff and the public. I have asked my officials to look again at the concept, to see if it is something that would enhance our current capabilities.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she would consider introducing 20mph speed limits and other traffic calming measures outside (i) Foley Primary School, Ballymacnab Road, Armagh; and (ii) St. John's Primary School, Eglish Road, Craigavon.

Ms Mallon: As Minister responsible for promoting and improving road safety, I want to work actively with partners to reduce death and serious injuries on our roads. I believe that reducing the maximum speed traffic can travel at on some of our roads, particularly those near schools, can help.

My Department is committed to introducing measures that reduce the speed of traffic on our roads. We are currently trialling an arrangement of signs that is intended to allow the introduction of more part-time 20mph speed limits at schools. I am expecting receipt of the findings of the trial in the next month or so and I fully intend to see what potential there is to build on the work already undertaken.

The locations of both schools' have been previously assessed and traffic calming measures have been introduced. I have asked my officials to keep both locations under review for any change in circumstances.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure how the additional £3m allocated for (i) winter gritting services; (ii) street lighting repairs; and (iii) roads maintenance has been allocated to each Roads Division.

(AQW 3319/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I have allocated the £3m of additional funding to essential departmental services as follows: £1.2m for urgent Street Lighting repairs, £1.0m for Winter Gritting services and £0.8m for routine maintenance of the road network, including pothole repairs.

Allocations are made to the four DfI Roads Divisions on the basis of need, using a range of weighted indicators tailored to each activity.

The table below details the allocation to each Roads Division; East, North, South and West:

Function / Activity	East £k	North £k	South £k	West £k	Total £m
Routine maintenance activities	110	160	235	295	0.800
Winter Service	160	200	195	220	0.775
Street Lighting Operations / Outages	300	375	225	300	1.200
Total	570	735	655	815	2.775

Following the allocation of £2.775m to Roads Divisions, the remaining balance of £0.225m has been allocated internally to fund Gritter vehicle fuel, fleet maintenance and payroll costs for Gritter lorry drivers delivering the Winter Service programme across Northern Ireland.

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister for Infrastructure (i) how many staff car parking spaces her Department and its agencies have in Belfast city centre; and (ii) whether she is taking any action to reduce this number.

(AQW 3337/17-22)

Ms Mallon:

- (i) My Department has use of 296 car parking spaces in the city centre, 199 of these are in the headquarters building at Clarence Court and 97 are at the Driver Vehicle Agency (DVA) premises at Corporation Street. The DVA office will be vacated prior to construction work on the planned York Street Exchange and the 97 car parking spaces at these premises will no longer be in use.
- (ii) Measures to reduce the need for staff car parking spaces and to support my commitments to tackle the impact of climate change have already been implemented in Clarence Court. My staff regularly hold teleconference meetings to reduce the need for travel by car to meetings and to the headquarters office. To encourage more active travel improved facilities for walkers and cyclists have been installed that includes storage racks for 80 bikes and shower and changing amenities. The department has a number of bicycles that staff can borrow to attend meetings during the day or simply to exercise. These include folding bikes which can be taken on public transport and help encourage multi modal commuting. In addition the department work with Sustrans to provide cycle training for staff.

There are 5 electric vehicle charging points available to facilitate the use of plug-in ultra-low emission vehicles and there is a car share scheme in operation to reduce the number of cars travelling into the city centre.

I am focussed on addressing the climate emergency and I am committed to developing greener infrastructure and more sustainable modes of transport. Under Outcome 2 of the current NICS Outcomes Delivery Plan (We live and work sustainably - protecting the environment) my Department is already progressing a range of initiatives to reduce carbon emissions. Proposed new actions in the draft PfG 2020/21 would further strengthen the Department's contribution to decarbonising transport by facilitating and promoting the use of low and ultra-low emission vehicles.

While I am relatively new in post, I have already asked officials to look at what options exist to increase infrastructure to support alternative modes of greener, cleaner transport such as cycling. I am committed to making changes within my department and externally. I'll be looking closely at the use of car parking spaces as part of my commitment to achieving a modal shift.

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline what her Department has planned to recognise the centenary of Northern Ireland.

(AQW 3414/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My Department does not have any plans in place to recognise the centenary of Northern Ireland.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister for Infrastructure how much her Department has spent on producing materials in Irish, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 3432/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My Department supports the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages (ECRML) commitments which protect and promote regional and minority languages including Irish.

Officials promote the Irish Language by helping customers conduct their business in Irish, and also offer an Irish translation of Departmental documents on request.

My Department's Irish Language Policy provides officials with guidance on how to translate documents and handle verbal and written communications in Irish.

The following table represents expenditure on producing materials in Irish since the establishment of my Department in May 2016:

	2016	2017	2018	2019
Translations	£628.74	£135.00	£479.73	£3,225.45

Total Figures for 2020 are not as yet available.

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister for Infrastructure to detail how the £3m capital budget for cycling and walking lanes was spent.

(AQW 3434/17-22)

Ms Mallon: As noted in response to your question AQW 1480/17-22, £3.4 million was spent on capital infrastructure schemes for walking and cycling in 2018/19.

This money was spent as follows:

- £430,000 on 0.5km of dedicated cycle provision on Middlepath Street, Belfast;
- £1.5 million on 12km of shared walking and cycling tracks;

- £460,000 on 2km of new or improved footway;
- £140,000 on seven new or upgraded controlled pedestrian and/or cycle crossings;
- £205,000 to Lisburn City and Castlereagh Council for the Dundonald Ice Bowl Walking and Cycling Bridge;
- £500,000 on 3km of improvements to the Comber Greenway; and
- £180,000 on other measures such as cycle parking and wayfinding.

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister for Infrastructure to detail how much (i) public money; and (ii) private funding, has been spent on bike-sharing schemes.

(AQW 3435/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Under the Active Travel Demonstration Projects competition in 2014, my Department provided capital funding of £1.14 million to Belfast City Council to deliver a public bike share scheme in Belfast. The Council launched the scheme in April 2015 and has since extended it with additional bike docking stations and additional bikes. Funding of the extensions to the scheme is a matter for Belfast City Council.

My Department does not maintain a register of bike-sharing schemes and has no detail of any other bike-sharing schemes in Northern Ireland.

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline what active travel infrastructure projects have had detailed designs carried out.

(AQW 3436/17-22)

Ms Mallon: All active travel infrastructure projects built by my Department go through a detailed design stage following consultation on the outline design and a decision to proceed to construction. Currently there are 18 projects at the detailed design stage:

- |   |   |

In addition, under Stage 3 of the Small Grants for Greenways programme, my Department made grant funding available to Councils to deliver a detailed design for the following eleven greenway proposals (the Ballymoney to Ballycastle proposal did not proceed):

Council	Greenway Route
Ards and North Down	Comber to Newtownards
Mid and East Antrim	Monkstown to Greenisland
Lisburn and Castlereagh	Carryduff to Cairnshill Park and Ride
Newry, Mourne and Down	Downpatrick to Newcastle
	Downpatrick to Comber
Causeway Coast and Glens	Ballymoney to Ballycastle
Antrim and Newtownabbey	Doagh to Larne
Armagh, Banbridge and Craigavon	Craigavon to Aghalee
	Portadown to Caledon
	Portadown to Moy
	Banbridge to Scarva

Mr Lynch asked the Minister for Infrastructure when she will make a decision regarding MOT exemptions for Vehicles of Historical Interest.

(AQW 3437/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I am aware that this exemption was introduced in Great Britain in 2018 which has led to a difference as to how Vehicles of Historic Interest (VHIs) are treated in GB and NI.

I am also aware that following requests to align Northern Ireland legislation with that in GB, from both elected representatives and members of the public my Department ran a public consultation exercise in 2019 seeking views as to whether this exemption should be introduced here. Officials have prepared an analysis of responses for my consideration. As soon as I have fully considered all the details I will decide on the way forward.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister for Infrastructure for her assessment of the need for speed-reducing measures on Derry Road, Strabane.

Ms Mallon: There are a number of measures in place to alert motorists in relation to compliance with the 30mph speed limit on the Derry Road in Strabane. The central hatching and the traffic islands provide good visual impact to calm traffic as the motorist enters the 30mph zone on the northern suburbs of the town.

In addition to the 30mph speed limit signs on back boards, and "Please drive carefully" signs that are clearly visible on the northern approach, a central hatched area has been provided, continuing for approximately 1km towards the town centre. There are also four traffic islands located along this stretch of the Derry Road to further highlight the suburban character of the road, and the need to reduce speed. I have asked my officials to carry out a new speed survey on this section of the road network to ascertain if there have been any changes to driver behaviour over recent years.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline her Department's policy in relation to granting access off main protected routes, such as the A5.

(AQW 3439/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My policy in relation to the granting of accesses off main protected routes is contained in the Strategic Planning Policy Statement for Northern Ireland (the SPPS). Regional policy is to restrict the number of new accesses and control the level of use of existing accesses onto such roads (subject to some exceptions such as in the case of motorways and high standard dual carriageways, where an exception may be considered for motorway service areas, where there is demonstrable need).

This is a long established policy approach designed to maximise the efficient movement of goods and people over long distances in the North and also maintain road safety. Where a planning application proposes an access onto a Protected Route, the relevant planning authority will consider this policy in consultation with my Department, before taking a decision.

The A5 forms part of the Western Key Transport Corridor which links Derry and the north west to the border just south of Aughnacloy and due to its significance it has protected route status as reflected in regional planning policy.

It is one of five Key Transport Corridors in Northern Ireland, which are the top tier long distance routes connecting the cities and main towns to the major regional gateways. These routes contribute significantly to economic prosperity and it is important they are protected for this function.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline the extent of the active travel provision planned for the Belfast Transport Hub.

(AQW 3446/17-22)

Ms Mallon: The current designs for the new station incorporate cycling links to the Belfast cycle network and the project has partnered with Belfast Bikes for the provision of two cycle stations at the new hub. The Belfast Transport Hub will also provide 200 cycle parking stands and Translink is working with Sustrans to provide a fully operational Active Travel Centre.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Infrastructure what planning permissions for hotel developments have been issued by Causeway Coast and Glens Borough Council, in the last five years.[R]

(AQW 3465/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I would advise the member to seek this information from Causeway Coast and Glens Borough Council, as the responsible planning authority.

Ms Bailey asked the Minister for Infrastructure, in relation to the contracts awarded for the A6 Randalstown to Castledawson scheme, to detail (i) the contractors names; (ii) the dates awarded; (iii) the contract amounts; (iv) the commencement dates; and (v) the completion dates.

(AQW 3476/17-22)

Ms Mallon: The contracts for the development and construction of the A6 Randalstown to Castledawson Dualling scheme were awarded to Graham Farrans Joint Venture on 1 May 2015. Advance works began in early October 2016, with full construction of the scheme commencing on 17 June 2017. Construction is expected to be completed in Spring 2021.

The costs are as follows: Professional Services contract - £3.0 million; Ground Investigation contract - £3.1 million; Construction contract - currently estimated at £145 million.

Ms Bailey asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline (i) the objectives; and (ii) results of the Habitat Assessment used by her Department to inform the A6 Randalstown to Castledawson scheme.

(AQW 3477/17-22)

Ms Mallon: The A6 Randalstown to Castledawson Dualling scheme is an Executive Flagship roads infrastructure scheme currently under construction. A section of the route of the new road passes close to an environmentally designated Special Protection Area and a Habitats Regulations Assessment was carried out for the scheme.

In relation to the objectives and results of this assessment, extensive documentation associated is publically available on the Department's website at:

<https://www.infrastructure-ni.gov.uk/articles/a6-randalstown-castledawson-dualling-habitats-regulations-assessment-hra>

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Infrastructure to list all proposed new bus shelters in Bangor.

(AQW 3494/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Translink is considering requests for eight additional bus shelters in the Bangor area. The need and viability for them is currently being assessed by Translink's operational and installation teams. A decision on the installation of any new bus shelters will depend on the outcome of this assessment and the approval of the Business Case and funding for them.

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister for Infrastructure what consideration she has given to increase the Roads Recovery Fund in the next financial year.

(AQW 3503/17-22)

Ms Mallon: In the last two years the Department has allocated some £25m to a Roads Recovery Fund to help direct funding to those roads in most need following years of underfunding and severe winters.

Recognising the importance of investment in the roads network to improve connectivity, help communities and tackle regional imbalance, I have been raising the need for additional investment with the Finance Minister, in advance of the 2020/21 budget. I will decide the future funding for road maintenance once I know my overall budget

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Infrastructure (i) why Translink processes two single-journey tickets instead of a return journey ticket for passengers holding a Smart Pass; and (ii) whether there is additional cost to her Department by processing two single-journey fares for Smart Pass holders instead of a return ticket.

Ms Mallon: Since the inception of free travel under the Northern Ireland Concessionary Fares Scheme in 2002 it has been the case that SmartPass holders must obtain a single ticket for each leg of their journey by bus or train. This requirement is based on audit advice received by the Department and aims to minimise the risk of fraud or waste due to the return portion of a subsidised journey either being used by an ineligible passenger, or not used at all.

Return journey tickets offered by Translink are a discounted product to passengers as a commercial incentive. This is intended to encourage, and increase patronage. These discounted fares are not offered in conjunction with any other discounts – which includes the discounts offered to SmartPass holders.

Whilst reimbursing Translink on return tickets would reduce costs on the Concessionary Fares Budget, this must be balanced against the risk of fraud of offering this ticket type through the Scheme. To that end, my Department ensures that reimbursement to Translink for single journey concessionary travel is based on a "no better and no worse off" principle. That is Translink is no better or worse off for providing the journey undertaken through the Scheme.

Miss Woods asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AQW 2879/17-22, whether (i) the legal requirement of enforcement notices 2015/E0050 and 2015/E0052 now require the removal of 94,000 tonnes of illegal waste; (ii) if so, by what date; and (iii) this is in line with the Department of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs' remediation strategy for this part of the Mobuoy site.

Ms Mallon: The notices contains amongst others, a requirement for waste to be removed from the land. The time period for this requirement is 22 September 2021. My Department is working closely with DAERA (NIEA) on the remediation strategy for the entire site which is still under development and any non-compliance with the notices will be considered in collaboration with other stakeholders and in the context of that strategy.

Mr Muir asked the Minister for Infrastructure when she expects to announce the outcome of the Concessionary Fares Scheme survey undertaken in 2019.[R]
(AQW 3557/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My Department worked with a range of voluntary and community sector organisations to develop and promote the Concessionary Fares Scheme survey which was undertaken to seek views on how the Scheme improves access to public transport and to demonstrate the contribution of the Scheme towards Outcome 8 of the Outcomes Delivery Plan – “we care for others and help those in need”.

Analysis of the survey is ongoing and I will publish a survey report when I receive it in coming months.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Infrastructure for her assessment on what the speed limit should be in rural areas.
(AQW 3560/17-22)

Ms Mallon: As Minister responsible for promoting and improving road safety, I want to work actively with partners to reduce death and serious injuries on our roads. I believe that looking to reduce the maximum speed that traffic can travel at on some of our roads can help. Rural roads must be part of that consideration and our work to reduce speed and improve safety.

My Department is committed to introducing measures that reduce the speed of traffic on our roads. Speed limits can be assessed on a site-by-site basis in line with current policy and in response to incidents and public requests. We are also currently trialling an arrangement of signs on some rural roads that is intended to allow the introduction of more part-time 20mph limits at schools. We are also trialling the effectiveness of ‘signed only’ 20mph limits. These would be more economical and could be used more widely in appropriate environments, such as residential areas with schools, than would be possible with the current approach of providing 20mph limits along with traffic calming features. I am expecting receipt of the findings of the trials in the next month or so, and I fully intend to see what potential there is to build on the work already undertaken in terms of these 20mph limits and other limits.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister for Infrastructure to detail (i) all proposed new bus shelters; and (ii) any proposed improvements on existing shelters, in the South Antrim constituency.
(AQW 3593/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Translink is considering requests for eleven additional bus shelters in the South Antrim constituency. The need and viability for them is currently being assessed by Translink’s operational and installation teams. A decision on the installation of any new bus shelters will depend on the outcome of this assessment and the approval of the Business Case and funding for them. Translink are also exploring possible upgrades & improvements to existing bus shelters but this is at any early stage and will be also subject to approvals and funding.

Miss Woods asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AQW 2882/17-22, whether her Department took account of the likely effects on the environment, including the River Faughan and Tributaries Special Area of Conservation, as a result of the remedies required to comply with the seven enforcement notices served in respect of the Mobuoy illegal dump.
(AQW 3628/17-22)

Ms Mallon: The 7 enforcement notices issued in respect of the Mobuoy Road site were issued by the Department of the Environment Northern Ireland. The notices were issued in accordance with the applicable provisions of the relevant Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) in force at the time of each notice.

Miss Woods asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AQW 2882/17-22, (i) whether compliance with her Department’s seven enforcement notices served at Mobuoy requires the removal of illegal waste; (ii) for an estimate of the volumes of illegal waste to be removed; and (iii) where this illegal waste will be re-disposed.
(AQW 3629/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Of the 7 seven enforcement notices referred to in AQW 2882/17-22, 4 require the removal of waste material. The individual requirements are detailed in each notice. Due to sensitivities surrounding the ongoing prosecution of companies and individuals in relation to offences under the Waste and Contaminated Land (NI) Order I am unable to respond to the second part of your question.

Identification of a suitable facility for the re-disposal of waste is a matter for the person responsible for compliance with the enforcement notice.

Mr Muir asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she will consider amending the online portal to allow customers to report (i) pavement parking that blocks access for pedestrians; and (ii) vehicles blocking cycle lanes.
(AQW 3631/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I fully appreciate the difficulties presented by cars parked inconsiderately on footways and cycleways and the impact this can have on many people.

I can advise that My Department's on-line reporting platform already allows for the reporting of problems associated with obstruction of the public road, footway and cycleway however it should be noted that in the majority of cases, enforcement will lie with the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI).

My officials will continue to liaise with the PSNI which has an extremely important role to play in resolving the issues you raise.

Mr Muir asked the Minister for Infrastructure what are the enforcement mechanisms to prevent vehicles from parking in cycle lanes.

(AQW 3632/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My Department is committed to increasing the level of sustainable travel in Northern Ireland and cycling infrastructure has an important role to play in facilitating this. I want to encourage people to cycle and support people to make more sustainable choices. Cars parked inconsiderately on cycle lanes present real challenges to this.

There are two different types of on carriageway cycle lane. Mandatory cycle lanes are bounded by a solid white line, prohibiting all other vehicles from entering them. A Penalty Charge Notice can be issued if a vehicle is found parked in a mandatory cycle lane. Advisory cycle lanes are bounded by a broken white line, signifying that other vehicles should not enter unless it is safe to do so. Advisory cycle lanes are provided without the need for an Order, so there is no legal basis for carrying out enforcement. Drivers are, however, asked not to park in advisory cycle lanes in the Highway Code for Northern Ireland and a Penalty Charge Notice can be issued if there are parking restrictions, such as clearways, or waiting restrictions, on the same stretch of road. My Department's Road Safety and Sustainable Travel social media channels also posts reminders of the relevant rules to road users, on a regular basis.

Mr Muir asked the Minister for Infrastructure when are vehicles allowed to park on designated cycle lanes.

Ms Mallon: My Department is committed to increasing the level of sustainable travel in Northern Ireland and cycling infrastructure has an important role to play in facilitating this. I want to encourage people to cycle and support people to make more sustainable choices. Cars parked inconsiderately on cycle lanes present real challenges to this.

Advisory cycle lanes are provided without the need for an Order, so there is no legal basis to prevent parking. Drivers are, however, asked not to park in advisory cycle lanes in the Highway Code for Northern Ireland. Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Infrastructure when funding will be made available to extend the Waterside Greenway out to the villages of Strathfoyle and Maydown in Londonderry.

Ms Mallon: As outlined in response to previous Assembly Questions about Derry City and Strabane District Council's proposed Strathfoyle Greenway project (AQW 1170/17-22, AQW 3028/17-22, AQW 3206/17-22 and AQW 3513/17-22), I am keen to work with other Ministers and with all stakeholders to deliver on projects that have the potential to improve the lives of people and connect communities. However, before I take decisions in relation to funding, I will need to consider carefully the budget position after the 2020/21 budget is allocated.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AQW 2213/17-22, (i) why in her response she did not refer to the UK Government and Ofgem joint statement of 2017 entitled Upgrading our Energy System 2017, in which it is stated that defining electricity storage as a subset of generation in the Electricity Act 1989 will confirm the Government's current position that storage facilities should be treated as a form of electricity generating station for planning purposes; (ii) whether she will review the current planning policies in light of this information.

Ms Mallon: I understand that the Department for the Economy and the Utility Regulator will be examining the need to consider energy storage as generating facilities in discussions around implementation of the Clean Energy Package. My officials will be engaging with them to consider what accompanying planning changes may be necessary.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Infrastructure why her Department can send a text message as a reminder to attend an MOT test, but not to inform of a postponement.

Ms Mallon: I have identified 3 categories of vehicles that should be tested as a priority. These are: four year old cars due a first MOT, taxis and car dealership vehicles. The text messages the DVA have been issuing have focused on the owners of four year old cars, as these vehicles cannot avail of a Temporary Exemption Certificate. These text messages have been issued where a mobile phone number is available.

In relation to all other categories of vehicle, clear guidance already exists, that those vehicles do not need to present for a test as a Temporary Exemption Certificate will be issued, and has been widely publicised through NI Direct and social media channels.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AQW 2214/17-22, given the growth of battery storage of electricity applications and the materials used in the equipment, whether she will review the provisions of the Planning (Hazardous Substance) (No.2) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2015, to ensure that Health and Safety Executive Northern Ireland and the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service would be consulted with every application.

Ms Mallon: Where a battery storage facility or any development is subject to an application for hazardous substance consent, the Planning (Hazardous Substance) (No.2) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2015 currently require the council to consult with both the Health and Safety Executive Northern Ireland (HSE(NI)) and the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service. A council is also required to notify HSE(NI) and any other consultees who made representations on the application as to their decision on the application.

Mr McCann asked the Minister for Infrastructure what plans her Department has in rolling out residents' parking schemes for impacted communities.

Ms Mallon: The first residents' parking scheme in Rugby Road / College Park Avenue, Belfast, came into operation during April 2018. A review of the scheme, which will reflect the needs, experiences and feedback of residents, is currently underway. I will want to make sure that any lessons learnt from this scheme inform wider policy on implementing residents' parking schemes to the benefit of communities.

At this stage, I am not in a position to advise on a timescale for completing the review, but I can confirm that any findings will be made publically available. I will consider any new schemes in light of these findings.

Mr Chambers asked the Minister for Infrastructure what steps she is taking to protect staff and passengers travelling on public transport from the transmission of COVID-19.

Ms Mallon: I am acutely aware of the concerns that many communities and people have regarding the COVID-19 virus and how best to tackle the outbreak. My Department is working with all Departments, agencies, operators and the Public Health Agency to respond to and plan for this evolving situation. No effort will be spared in our work to tackle the outbreak.

As of Monday 23 March Translink have been operating a reduced bus and train service. I approved this decision based on the clear advice from government to avoid all non-essential travel, contact and to practise social distancing. A social distancing policy is in place on all buses and trains with limits on the number of passengers per vehicle, and where flexibility in terms of additional service is required, especially for key workers at peak times, Translink will work to accommodate this.

My Department has received advice on the coronavirus epidemic from the Chief Medical Officer and this has been shared with Translink who have implemented a range of measures in the light of that advice. They include enhanced weekly cleaning of buses and enhanced twice-weekly cleaning of trains. This is in addition to the regular daily cleaning that is undertaken on the public transport fleet. Stations are being cleaned more frequently, and, when cleaners are on site, an enhanced cleaning of stations will take place. To ensure the safety of everyone involved, Translink is amending its procedures for staff on contact with customers, minimising contact between staff and the public for ticket checks. Posters are displayed across the public transport network to remind people of the latest advice to prevent the spread of infection. Hand sanitisers have been distributed to frontline bus and rail colleagues and stations are equipped with hand washing facilities in toilets. Translink is working closely with its supply chain to ensure continuity of supply of cleaning materials.

Department of Justice

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the total value of illegal, criminal assets seized by law enforcement agencies in each of the last five years; and (ii) for a breakdown of the distribution of the Asset Recovery Community Scheme (ARCS).

(AQW 3148/17-22)

Mrs Long (The Minister of Justice): The Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (POCA) provides for the recovery of criminal assets by a number of means including confiscation, cash seizure and forfeiture, and civil and tax recovery. Along with supporting investigation powers these tools are designed to stop offenders from benefitting from the proceeds of their criminal conduct.

This answer provides information about criminal confiscation in Northern Ireland. Confiscation is the power that the Crown Court has to make orders depriving convicted offenders of their assets if they benefited from their criminal conduct.

Agencies with powers to conduct confiscation investigations in Northern Ireland include among others, the Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI), the National Crime Agency (NCA), HMRC, the Northern Ireland Environment Agency, and the Department for Communities.

Figures for confiscation by PSNI only are listed below for each of the last five financial years and for 2019/2020 to date: This does not include figures for confiscation orders made in Northern Ireland by other agencies or UK-wide bodies, which are recorded separately.

PSNI Confiscation Orders

Years	Number of confiscation orders made ^	Total value of NI confiscation orders made ^ (ie value the orders were made in)
2014/15	24	£924,905.74
2015/16	17	£1,236,725.19
2016/17	13	£1,721,533.83
2017/18	20	£462,594
2018/19	15	£601,868
2019/20* To 18/3/20	12	£1,343,642

All figures provided from PSNI data source on 18 March 2020.

Once confiscation orders are made, the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service (NICTS) is responsible for collecting payments and my Department is responsible for the administration and redistribution of these funds under the Assets Recovery Incentivisation Scheme (ARIS). The Home Office is responsible for the administration of proceeds from Northern Ireland cash seizures and civil recovery receipts.

The payment of confiscation orders is not always immediate once an order has been made. Orders can be challenged, revisited and varied and therefore it is not possible to link the values of confiscation orders made to the amounts paid. My Department keeps records of all payments of confiscation orders and these are listed below for the last five years:

Confiscations order payments through the courts – cases from all agencies

Years	Total value of NI confiscation orders paid
2014/15	£1,619,000
2015/16	£1,672,000
2016/17	£1,894,000
2017/18	£1,437,000
2018/19	£1,437,000
2019/20* To 18/3/20	£2,163,000

Half of all confiscation order receipts are distributed on an agreed-percentage basis across the agencies responsible for the confiscation cases and to the Public Prosecution Service and the NICTS. This ARIS funding is used by the agencies (for example, PSNI, HMRC, NIEA, PPS, NICTS) to support work to further the recovery of criminal assets and proceeds of crime. Further detail on this can be found in the Organised Crime Task Force (OCTF) Annual Report and Threat Assessments - <https://www.octf.gov.uk/Publications/OCTF-Annual-Report-And-Threat-Assessment>.

The other half of all confiscation order receipts provides the funding for the Assets Recovery Community Scheme (ARCS), which is also administered by my Department and which supports projects aimed at preventing crime or reducing the fear of crime. The breakdown of the allocation of ARCS funding is provided in the tables below for the years 2016/2017; 2017/2018 and 2018/2019 to 2020/2021:

Mrs Long: The most recent official statistics published by the Department of Finance indicate the number of permanent staff in prison grades employed by the Northern Ireland Prison Service at 01 October 2019 was 1,268. The most recent management information available to the Northern Ireland Prison Service indicate the number of prisoners across all establishments at 15 March 2019 was 1,617.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 3068 17-22, what actions can be taken when the property is in joint ownership with someone not subject to an Unexplained Wealth Order.

(AQW 3342/17-22)

Mrs Long: An Unexplained Wealth Order (UWO) requires a respondent who is suspected of involvement in or association with serious criminality, or a Politically Exposed Person, to explain the origin of any property held by them that appears to be disproportionate to their known income.

If a person is issued with a UWO, they, the respondent, must provide a statement:

- setting out the nature and extent of their interest in the property or assets that is the subject of the order;
- explaining how they obtained the property (including, in particular, how any costs incurred in obtaining it were met);
- where the property is held by the trustees of a settlement, setting out such details of the settlement as may be specified in the order; and
- setting out such other information in connection with the property as may be so specified.

UWOs are made by the High Court on application by an enforcement agency. There are a number of requirements set out in the legislation under Section 362B of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002, as inserted by Section 1 of the Criminal Finances Act 2017, including that the Court must be satisfied that there is reasonable cause to believe that the respondent holds the property. It does not matter whether or not there are other persons who hold the property.

Unexplained wealth orders are an early-stage investigation tool intended to precede a potential civil recovery application. Civil recovery investigations and recovery proceedings target property which is, or includes, recoverable property. This acknowledges the reality that a property may be only part recoverable. The part or interest in the property which is not recoverable is called "associated property" and that interest is protected under a variety of provisions within POCA.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 3068 17-22, to detail what items or possessions would not meet the description of property.

(AQW 3343/17-22)

Mrs Long: In my response to AQW 3068 17-22, I provided the legal definition of property for the purposes of the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (POCA). The definition is widely encompassing and includes all property, wherever situated, and includes money, all forms of property, real or personal, heritable or moveable, things in action and other intangible property. It also includes any interest held in the property. An interest is defined as any legal estate or equitable interest or power. For the purposes of unexplained wealth orders, in cases where a person is to be taken to hold property, this includes where a person has effective control over the property, where they are a trustee of a settlement or actual or potential beneficiary in relation to such a settlement. The definition, therefore, addresses circumstances where property is held in trust or owned in a complex corporate structure arrangement.

The definition of property under POCA is augmented under the Criminal Finances Act (CFA) 2017 to enable the seizure and recovery of specific assets of personal or moveable property ("listed assets"). A listed asset means an item of property that falls within one of the following descriptions of property:

- (a) precious metals (gold, silver or platinum (whether in an unmanufactured or a manufactured state));
- (b) precious stones;
- (c) watches;
- (d) artistic works (a piece of work falling within section 4(1)(a) of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988);
- (e) face-value vouchers (a voucher in physical form that represents a right to receive goods or services to the value of an amount stated on it); and
- (f) postage stamps.

The CFA also extends the definition of cash available for seizure under POCA to allow for the forfeiture of cash in bank and building society accounts and the forfeiture of betting slips, gaming vouchers and fixed value casino tokens. While Northern Ireland does not have any legal casinos, this will not prevent the seizure of such an item.

Enforcement authorities can recover property which they can prove on a balance of probabilities has been acquired through unlawful conduct or, where applicable, is to be used in criminal conduct. Property is available for consideration, unless already subject to certain kinds of forfeiture and deprivation orders.

The definition therefore is broad. However it is not possible to provide a comprehensive list of examples of items or possessions that fall outside this definition.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 3068 17-22, to clarify (i) the national; (ii) international; and (iii) Republic of Ireland, reach of pursuant wealth orders when being enforced.

(AQW 3344/17-22)

Mrs Long: Unexplained wealth order (UWO) provisions are inserted in the Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (POCA) by Sections 1 to 3 of the Criminal Finances Act 2017 ("CFA"). A UWO is an investigative tool which can be used by specified enforcement agencies in connection with civil recovery investigations; a UWO is not a standalone power to recover assets. A UWO, when served, requires the respondent to provide information on certain matters, including the extent of their interest in specified property and the means by which it was obtained.

UWOs have international reach; a respondent does not need to be a UK resident, and property can be located outside the UK. There is no distinction to be made under POCA between the Republic of Ireland and other international jurisdictions.

External assistance for enforcement of UWOs abroad can be sought provided that:

- the High Court makes a UWO in respect of any property, in other words that all the legal requirements for making an order are met;
- there is a risk of any recovery order that might subsequently be obtained being frustrated; and
- the enforcement authority believes that the property is in a country outside the UK.

If a UK enforcement authority believes that property which is the subject of a UWO is in a country outside the UK, that authority can make a request to the Secretary of State (the Home Secretary) for assistance in relation to property with a view to the request being forwarded to the government of the receiving country. The request is to seek to secure that any person is prohibited from dealing with the property and to seek assistance in connection with the management of the property, including with securing its detention, custody or preservation.

In a similar fashion, if an interim freezing order is in place in relation to property and a receiver has been appointed, the receiver may send a request for assistance in relation to the property to the Secretary of State with a view to it being forwarded. The Secretary of State must send the request for assistance to the government of the receiving country, again, to seek assistance in connection with the management of the property, including with securing its detention, custody or preservation.

It is not an offence to fail to comply with an UWO. However, if a respondent fails to comply with the requirements imposed within the time stipulated by the court, the property which is the subject of the UWO is presumed to be recoverable property for the purposes of any future civil recovery proceedings but only in so far as it relates to the respondent's interest in the property.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Justice what measures are being taken by the Northern Ireland Prison Service to protect staff and prisoners against coronavirus.

Mrs Long: The Northern Ireland Prison Service take the threat presented by COVID19 extremely seriously and have undertaken significant work in preparation for the challenges an outbreak would bring in a custodial environment.

Preparations have included the purchase of additional protective clothing for staff and the preparation of areas within each prison where prisoners suspected and or diagnosed with the virus can be accommodated. Both the Prison Service and our partners in the South Eastern Trust have been following guidance issued by the Public Health Agency which has also been provided to staff and prisoners.

The Director General has put in place specific operational planning and implementation structures and established a dedicated team to oversee planning arrangements and to support Governors in dealing with the challenges they will inevitably face. The Prison Service recognise the importance of good communication and is committed to working with staff, prisoners, families and stakeholders as operational decisions are taken.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Justice whether her Department, under section 41 (3) of the Modern Slavery Act 2015, have requested over the last five years any reports from the UK Anti-Slavery Commissioner on modern slavery in Northern Ireland; and, if not, whether her Department proposes to ask the Anti-Slavery Commissioner to produce any such reports in this Assembly mandate.

Mrs Long: My Department has not requested any reports on modern slavery in Northern Ireland over the last five years under section 41 of the Modern Slavery Act 2015. However, reports undertaken by the IASC have a UK reach and we have taken note of those which have been produced.

As indicated in my response to AQW 3010/17-22, there has been very positive engagement between my Department and the two UK Independent Anti-Slavery Commissioners (IASC) appointed since 2017.

My Department has no current plans to commission any reports from the IASC specific to Northern Ireland but we will continue to keep this area under consideration.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice how much her Department has spent on producing materials in Irish, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 3431/17-22)

Mrs Long: The Department of Justice and its Agencies has had no expenditure on producing materials in Irish over the five financial years from 2014-15 to 2018-19.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice (i) to detail the amount of legal aid paid to date for cases 15/095107 and 11/103100; and (ii) whether the Minister will give a commitment to provide me with a summary of total final costs processed for these cases by the Legal Services Agency.

(AQW 3507/17-22)

Mrs Long: The Freedom of Information Act 2000 gives two rights of access when information is requested. It provides the right to know whether the information requested is held, and the right to have the information provided. These rights may only be overridden if the information requested is covered by an exemption in the Act. In accordance with the exemption provided by Section 40 (5B) (a)(i) I can neither confirm nor deny whether the Department of Justice holds the information you have requested. This section absolves the Department from the requirement to say whether or not we hold information where, to confirm or deny we hold any personal data about an individual, would contravene any of the data protection principles of the Data Protection Act 2018.

As such I can provide no commitment in respect of part (ii) of your question.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice, given the recent statements she made to the Committee for Justice and to the Assembly, whether she will investigate parental alienation within the family justice system, and, if so, when will this commence.

(AQW 3508/17-22)

Mrs Long: Research on parental alienation in family proceedings is a cross-cutting matter and to date I have not been involved in any discussions on commissioning a study. The merits of research could potentially be considered in the future under the new cross-departmental Family and Parenting Support Strategy. I understand that the Department of Health, which is leading on the Strategy, has already committed to considering guidelines for social services on parental alienation as part of that work and I expect the Strategy will provide ongoing opportunities to collectively consider how better to support relations between parents and parents and children. My current focus in that regard is on early intervention and my Department is already working with the Department of Health to consider actions which might be introduced to reduce acrimony and negative behaviours to improve outcomes for families and children.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 1737/17-22, to detail (i) how many cases the Legal Services Agency have referred to the Police Service of Northern Ireland; (ii) how many of these referrals involve the legal profession, in the last three years; and (iii) how she will involve court users, in particular Litigants in Persons, in the review of legal aid for family cases..

Mrs Long:

- (i) The Legal Services Agency has engaged with Police Service of Northern Ireland in respect of 25 cases in the last 3 years.
- (ii) Four of these cases involved the legal profession.
- (iii) Any proposals for substantive change to legal aid policy are subject to public consultation. This provides stakeholders, including all types of court users, the opportunity to put forward their views.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Justice whether she has any human rights concerns arising from the implementation of the Investigatory Powers Act 2016.

(AQW 3568/17-22)

Mrs Long: Responsibility for the Investigatory Powers Act 2016 is reserved to the Westminster Government and therefore does not fall within my remit as Minister of Justice. The exercise of powers under the Act is subject to a framework of oversight mechanisms.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Justice, given the ongoing concerns about the rate of conviction in rape cases, what work is being undertaken by her Department, in coordination with the PSNI, to ensure that we can have more confidence that those who have perpetrated such a crime will be brought to justice.

Mrs Long: The Gillen Report into the law and procedures in serious sexual offences in Northern Ireland contained 253 individual recommendations and 16 key recommendations. It is important to appreciate that the purpose of the Gillen review was not to increase convictions but rather to ensure complainants and accused persons alike receive a fair and just outcome.

Implementation of the Gillen Review is included in New Decade, New Approach and is a key priority for me and my Department.

The Department is working with multi-agency partners, including the PSNI, the PPS and others to develop a phased implementation plan for the current mandate and beyond. The Criminal Justice Board has agreed that recommendations which will have the greatest impact on complainants going through the system should be prioritised. Therefore a range of work aimed at increasing both the complainant's and the public's confidence in the criminal justice system is included in the implementation plan. This includes work in relation to; consent, dispelling rape myths, strengthening juror social media responsibilities, tackling delay, providing greater support to complainants through the provision of legal advice and representation pre-trial and research and training across a range of areas. It is anticipated that this work will contribute to increasing the reporting of and reducing the attrition rates in serious sexual offence cases.

Mr Givan asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of attacks on Prison Service staff in each prison establishment, in each year since 2017.

Mrs Long: The number of attacks on Prison Service staff in each prison establishment, in each year since 2017 is detailed in the table below.

	Maghaberry	Magilligan	Hydebank Wood College and Womens Prison
2017	43	2	21
2018	44	3	11
2019	28	5	9

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Justice what measures are being taken to ensure guidance around COVID-19 is being upheld within our prisons.

(AQW 3737/17-22)

Mrs Long: The Northern Ireland Prison Service take the threat presented by COVID19 extremely seriously and have undertaken significant work in preparation for the challenges an outbreak would bring in a custodial environment.

Preparations have included the purchase of additional protective clothing for staff and the preparation of areas within each prison where prisoners suspected and or diagnosed with the virus can be accommodated. Both the Prison Service and our partners in the South Eastern Trust have been following guidance issued by the Public Health Agency which has also been provided to staff and prisoners.

On Friday 20 March I agreed with the Director General that all prison visits should be suspended. This was a decision taken with regret but in the interest of staff, prisoner and family safety.

The Director General has put in place specific operational planning and implementation structures and established a dedicated team to oversee planning arrangements and to support Governors in dealing with the challenges they will inevitably face. The Prison Service recognise the importance of good communication and is committed to working with staff, prisoners, families and stakeholders as operational decisions are taken.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Justice to confirm how she intends to fund the Executive Action Plan for Tackling Paramilitarism or successor policy post 2020-21.

Mrs Long: The Action Plan is a cross-Executive effort and is co-ordinated by a team within the Department of Justice. The initial funding period runs from 2016/17 to 2020/21 and has an associated ring-fenced funding allocation of £50m, which is jointly provided by HM Treasury and the Executive. The expenditure for 2020-21 is part of those ring fenced funds.

Ending the harm caused by paramilitary groups was a stated commitment in the New Decade New Approach document. My officials are working with departmental colleagues and delivery partners to ensure that the learning generated through implementing the existing commitments is built into delivery going forward. Funding of a successor action plan will be a decision for the Executive, and I will be writing to the Executive on this matter in due course.

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Justice whether she will direct that defendants should stop attending court unless specifically required, in order to prevent the spread of COVID-19.

(AQW 3754/17-22)

Mrs Long: The management and listing of court cases is the responsibility of the NI Judiciary under the direction of the Lord Chief Justice (LCJ).

My officials in NICTS continue to work closely with the Office of the Lord Chief Justice on practical arrangements to reduce the need for attendance at court, including the adjournment of cases administratively and dispensing with the requirement of parties to attend save for certain specified circumstances.

The LCJ has directed that from 18 March 2020, judges should not require the attendance at court of persons who do not need to be there, or who express individual concerns. This includes individuals where it may be sufficient for their legal representatives to act on their behalf and individuals should contact their legal representatives for assistance in this regard. More information can be found at <https://judiciaryni.uk/>.

I welcome the LCJ's direction which is appropriate and proportionate in the current circumstances. These arrangements will be carefully monitored and adjusted as the public health situation develops.

Department for the Economy

Mr Stalford asked the Minister for the Economy to outline the number of small savers yet to receive payment from the Scheme of Arrangement, following the collapse of the Presbyterian Mutual Society.

(AQO 49/17-22)

Mrs Dodds (The Minister for the Economy): No saver who had shares and / or a loan in the Presbyterian Mutual Society has yet to receive a payment from the Scheme of Arrangement.

Savers who invested less than £20,000 in total received a payment of 100% of their shares and / or 85% of their loans.

Savers who invested more than £20,000 in total received a payment between 77% and 85% of the value of their holdings before deducting an individually agreed voluntary deferral.

Payments were made in August 2011.

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister for the Economy to provide an update on Project Stratum, to improve broadband connectivity.

(AQO 46/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Project Stratum is at the mid-procurement stage, with contract award expected in mid-2020.

On 16 December 2019, my Department published its response to the Open Market Review EU State aid public consultation. This confirmed a target intervention area of some 97,000 premises.

However, upon receipt of updated supplier data and following a nationwide data refresh by Openreach this month, the number of premises requiring intervention will be reduced. The revised number will be shared as soon as it is available.

Mr Allen asked the Minister for the Economy whether she plans to develop a manufacturing strategy.

(AQO 51/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Manufacturing comprises a wide and diverse range of industries and, despite a number of setbacks and challenges, remains at the very heart of business and industry in Northern Ireland. It contributes to 11.2% of all jobs and accounts for 50.8% of our external sales.

I do not have any plans to develop a dedicated manufacturing strategy. However the Northern Ireland Economic Strategy will set a clear direction to ensure the appropriate support and policy instruments are in place, in terms of skills, innovation and research and development that will collectively continue to assist growth in manufacturing and the wider economy.

My Department and Invest NI will also continue to provide support for manufacturing. Over the past five years, Invest NI has offered £294 million of support to support for the manufacturing sector in NI.

I recognise that our exit from the EU may present challenges for manufacturing. My focus will be on implementation of the NI Protocol to ensure our access to, and place within, the UK internal market.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for the Economy how she proposes to counter the impact of a regulatory and customs border in the Irish Sea.

(AQO 47/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: The UK Government has promised that there will be unfettered access for our businesses to the whole of the UK internal market.

I intend to hold them to that promise.

Mr Catney asked the Minister for the Economy what plans she has to address the low productivity rate in Northern Ireland.
(AQO 50/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Raising productivity will be a key focus of an economic strategy for Northern Ireland.

The emphasis will be on policies and programmes to support the drivers of productivity. There will include more effective innovation and research, development of high quality jobs with the skills pipeline to match and the development of the business environment and infrastructure to support businesses to thrive and grow.

Our exit from the EU will present challenges. We must make strategic choices to support productivity gains in those higher value adding sectors, where Northern Ireland has strength, capacity and export potential, while at the same time ensuring we have effective programmes that better support all businesses to reach their full potential.

Mr O'Toole asked the Minister for the Economy whether her Department will commission a study on the causes and long-term economic effects of the outward migration of students from Northern Ireland.
(AQO 48/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: The outward migration of students is an ongoing trend, with a quarter of Northern Ireland students studying elsewhere in the UK and the Republic of Ireland every year. There are many causes of this, with some students being 'determined leavers' and some being 'reluctant' leavers. This outward flow of students is not a recent phenomenon and has been ongoing for a number of decades.

My Department continues to assess the outward migration of students annually, however, I am keen to commission a more in-depth study into this matter.

In addition, my Department is currently working with the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development to develop evidence and recommendations on addressing Northern Ireland's skills challenges. This will inform a new Skills Strategy for Northern Ireland, to be launched at the end of this year. Evidence gathered to date has highlighted that addressing current and anticipated skills imbalances in Northern Ireland's labour market is a key priority for our economy.

As part of this work, the OECD has highlighted an opportunity to consider how inward and outward labour mobility impacts our economy, and what measures can be put in place to ensure our approach actively supports economic development.

Mr McGrath asked the Minister for the Economy what actions her Department is taking to secure regional air connectivity.
(AQO 52/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Regional air connectivity is essential to the growth of the Northern Ireland economy. My Department works with airlines and airports in a number of ways.

The Department currently provides financial support to airlines in the form of Co-operative and Destination Marketing through the All-Ireland body Tourism Ireland (TI). Destination marketing involves marketing Northern Ireland/Ireland in key external markets as a means of driving inbound tourism. Co-operative marketing is when TIL works directly with an airline to market that airlines route into NI.

I have written to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Secretary of State for Business, Energy and Industrial Strategy and the Secretary of State for Transport asking to meet to discuss the recently announced review of regional air connectivity and provide input. My officials are also currently making arrangements to discuss the review with colleagues in the two Departments.

We have, in partnership with the Department for Transport, confirmed funding for the City of Derry airport to London Southend Public Service Obligation flight until 31 March 2021.

My Department is always willing to consider any requests for support from airports/airlines that deliver value for money and are compliant with EU State Aid regulations.

Mr K Buchanan asked the Minister for the Economy to detail what progress has been made to improve the provision of broadband in rural areas.
(AQO 54/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Since 2007, over £77m of public investment has been channelled into broadband initiatives by my Department and its predecessor Departments, to encourage private sector upgrade to broadband networks, primarily in rural areas and where the market alone would not invest.

In line with the draft Programme for Government 2016 - 2021, my Department has developed Project Stratum to utilise the £150m additional broadband funding from the Confidence and Supply Agreement, together with a further £15m contribution from the Department of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, to build on previous achievements and improve internet connectivity for those premises currently unable to access broadband speeds of 30 Megabits per second or greater, primarily across rural areas of Northern Ireland.

Project Stratum is at mid-procurement stage, with contract award expected in mid-2020. Through this procurement process, my Department will seek to maximise broadband coverage across the intervention area through the utilisation of the total £165m public funding, along with an anticipated industry contribution.

On 16 December 2019, my Department published its response to the Open Market Review EU State aid public consultation. This confirmed a target intervention area of some 97,000 premises.

However, upon receipt of updated supplier data and following a nationwide data refresh by Openreach this month, the number of premises requiring intervention will be reduced. The revised number will be shared as soon as it is available.

Mr Sheehan asked the Minister for the Economy what plans her Department has to grow the Co-operative and Credit Union sectors.

(AQO 299/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Over the last decade, the Department for the Economy has been delivering a long-term plan to enhance and support the regulatory framework, allowing the sector to grow, while at the same time maintaining prudential governance.

This has resulted in credit unions being able to offer a greater range of services, and giving members additional consumer protection under the Financial Services Compensation Scheme.

It has allowed corporate members to join credit unions for the first time; and raised the limit on withdrawable shareholding for other mutual societies, removing a potential barrier for those societies which seek to grow their business activities.

In 2018, two further provisions were commenced when the registration of societies was transferred to the Financial Conduct Authority. This move reduced red tape for societies and removed transactional fees.

Last week, departmental officials held meetings with sectoral representatives as part of the final stage of this plan, and will shortly be issuing a 'Call for Evidence' so that a root and branch review of the mutuals legislative framework can be completed.

Modernising the legislative framework will ensure that bureaucracy does not frustrate growth, while still protecting members' interests. This in turn will provide the sectors with ample opportunity to grow.

Miss Woods asked the Minister for the Economy for her assessment of the duty in the Energy (Northern Ireland) Order 2003 to promote the development of the gas industry, in the context of net zero objectives.

(AQO 300/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: In line with its principal objective for gas under the Energy Order, the Department for the Economy has a statutory duty to promote the development and maintenance of an efficient, economic and co-ordinated gas industry in Northern Ireland.

The Department has supported extending the natural gas network to further towns and villages in Northern Ireland, helping to reduce dependency on more polluting fossil fuels, such as oil and coal.

In 2013 , the Northern Ireland Executive approved grant support of up to £32.5 million towards the Gas to the West project. It is anticipated that some 40,000 homes and businesses in eight towns in the West will connect to the new gas networks over several years with a target of saving over 60,000 tonnes of CO<sub>2</sub> by the end of 2022, mainly from the largest new gas consumers on the network.

The Department for the Economy is committed to setting policy to support the achievement of the UK Government's legislated target of net-zero carbon by 2050. A new Energy Strategy for Northern Ireland will set out the way forward for a transition to a zero carbon economy. Future policy on gas will be considered as part of the development of that Strategy.

As part of the on-going public engagement process to help inform and shape the Energy Strategy, the Department has published a Call for Evidence with responses due by 20 March. Following analysis of responses, a consultation paper on draft options for the future Energy Strategy will be published during fiscal year 2020/21.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister for the Economy whether she supports the industrial action being taken by University and College Union staff at higher education institutions.

(AQO 301/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: I am aware of the ongoing industrial action by members of the University and College Union over pay, workloads and pensions.

I respect the right of staff to take part in mandated industrial action and recognises that these decisions are not taken lightly. I also recognise that many of the staff that do take part in industrial action are putting in place resources and alternative arrangements so that their students do not miss out on learning.

However, I appreciate how unsettling this can be for students who may be impacted by the action.

I am aware that the universities are working hard to minimise the impact of any disruption during this period of industrial action.

The Department has been advised that Ulster University is taking steps to ensure that students are not disadvantaged, as a consequence of industrial action, at the point of assessment. Ulster University students will not be assessed on content or materials not delivered by the course or module as a result of industrial action.

Queen's has advised that the University and all of its services will remain open throughout the period and interventions are being implemented at a local level to mitigate the impact on a School-by-School basis as required.

Any student who is unsure of whether their classes will go ahead during this strike action is encouraged to contact their university directly for further information.

Mr Muir asked the Minister for the Economy to outline her plans to protect and develop an all-island economy in the context of Brexit.

(AQO 303/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: I have no plans to develop an all-island economy. Our approach to Brexit needs to work for all of our trade flows; north-south, east-west and globally. The Minister wants to grow trade in all directions to benefit all in our economy.

It is important that Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland continue to co-operate on areas of mutual economic interest.

Great Britain is by far our largest external market, accounting for £24.6 billion of sales and purchases in goods and services annually. It is vital to ensure that access to that valuable market is maintained.

I recently made these points to the Minister of State for Business and the Minister of State for International Trade.

I will continue to press UK Government to ensure that it meets its commitments to guarantee unfettered access for Northern Ireland's businesses to the whole of the UK internal market, to engage with the Executive on measures to protect and strengthen our place in the UK internal market, and to develop an international trade policy that works for the whole of the UK.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for the Economy why only one of the three companies that successfully tendered to carry out inspections of non-domestic Renewable Heat Incentive boilers has been engaged to do so.

(AQO 304/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: In June 2018 three contractors were appointed, onto a Framework Agreement, to complete site visits of installations accredited to the Non-Domestic Scheme. The procurement process to appoint these contractors was open and in accordance with EU requirements.

The Framework Agreement was awarded for an initial period of twelve months, with an option to extend for two further periods of twelve months each. In June 2019, the Department exercised the option to extend the Agreement for the first additional twelve month period.

The three contractors on the Framework Agreement are ranked in merit order on the basis of value for money. Each site is then automatically offered to the contractor ranked first and offering best value for money. Sites are only offered to the second, and then third ranked contractors, where the first ranked contractor either declares a conflict of interest, or confirms that it cannot complete a site visit within the required period.

To date, the Department has not been required to engage the second or third ranked contractors. Between July 2018 and February 2020, the first contractor completed 417 site visits, which equates to around 1,050 installations on the non-domestic RHI scheme.

Ms Rogan asked the Minister for the Economy what plans she has to promote and expand microgeneration as a way of improving energy self-sufficiency for homes, businesses and farms.

Mrs Dodds: Micro-generation helps to facilitate consumers to produce energy for their own consumption through low carbon technologies. In the case of electricity, this can also be exported to the grid for consumption by others.

Northern Ireland has been successful at promoting micro-generation to date. Over 22,000 micro-generators are accredited under the Northern Ireland Renewables Obligation, the vast majority of which have installed solar panels. These micro-generators contributed 2.5% of the renewable electricity generated over the period 1 April 2018 to 31 March 2019.

The future for renewable energy of all capacities, including any potential future targets and the need for new support schemes, will be considered as part of the development of a new Energy Strategy.

A Call for Evidence to inform the development of a new Energy Strategy was published on 17 December 2019 and runs to 20 March 2020.

Mr Givan asked the Minister for the Economy to advise how the tourism offering of other areas is being actively promoted through Visit Belfast promotions.

(AQW 3413/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: My Department's arms-length body, Tourism Northern Ireland, supports Visit Belfast to handle visitor enquiries about products and experiences, across all of Northern Ireland. In addition, there is also a full programme of activities to attract business tourism to Belfast and Northern Ireland.

In the last financial year Visit Belfast handled 260,723 visitor enquiries seeking information on areas beyond Belfast.

However, as Visit Belfast is a destination marketing organisation who work on behalf of Belfast City Council, I would recommend that you contact Visit Belfast directly for any further information.

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister for the Economy to provide an update on Project Stratum, to improve broadband connectivity.

(AQO 46/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Project Stratum is at the mid-procurement stage, with contract award expected in mid-2020.

On 16 December 2019, my Department published its response to the Open Market Review EU State aid public consultation. This confirmed a target intervention area of some 97,000 premises.

However, upon receipt of updated supplier data and following a nationwide data refresh by Openreach this month, the number of premises requiring intervention will be reduced. The revised number will be shared as soon as it is available.

Mr Catney asked the Minister for the Economy what plans she has to address the low productivity rate in Northern Ireland.

(AQO 50/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Raising productivity will be a key focus of an economic strategy for Northern Ireland.

The emphasis will be on policies and programmes to support the drivers of productivity. There will include more effective innovation and research, development of high quality jobs with the skills pipeline to match and the development of the business environment and infrastructure to support businesses to thrive and grow.

Our exit from the EU will present challenges. We must make strategic choices to support productivity gains in those higher value adding sectors, where Northern Ireland has strength, capacity and export potential, while at the same time ensuring we have effective programmes that better support all businesses to reach their full potential.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Mr Humphrey asked the Assembly Commission whether Parliament Buildings will be illuminated red for 24 hours, in future years, to mark European Remembrance Day for Victims of Terrorism.

(AQO 425/17-22)

Mrs D Kelly (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): Under the Assembly Commission's Parliament Buildings Special Lighting Policy requests can be submitted until a month before the relevant date so no future request has been received for European Day of Remembrance for Victims of Terrorism (11 March) and it would be too early to consider it.

The policy contains a provision that other than the four days agreed by the Assembly Commission, special lighting will not be approved to mark an event that occurs repeatedly, unless it is a significant anniversary of that event. Furthermore, no such event can be marked by special lighting more than once in any three-year period. Parliament Buildings was lit for European Day of Remembrance for Victims of Terrorism in 2019

However, the Assembly Commission has undertaken to consider whether lighting of the Building might be appropriate to mark additional events over and above the existing four days chosen by the Assembly Commission. Officials have been asked to provide a list of events for consideration at a future Assembly Commission meeting.

Mr Frew asked the Assembly Commission for an update on progress to establish a new Independent Financial Review Panel. (AQO 426/17-22)

Mr O'Dowd (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): As agreed by the Assembly, oral question time for the Assembly Commission on Tuesday 24 March was cancelled and the question you tabled for oral answer on 24 March 2020, could not therefore be taken. Instead, a written response is being provided.

The Independent Financial Review Panel ("IFRP") was established pursuant to the Assembly Members (Independent Financial Review and Standards) Act (NI) 2011 ("the 2011 Act"). Under the 2011 Act, the IFRP is required to be independent and is not, in the exercise of its functions, subject to the direction or control of the Assembly or the Assembly Commission.

The Chair and two other Panel members are appointed by the Assembly Commission for a term of five years. The terms of office of persons appointed to the IFRP expired in July 2016. The Assembly Commission considered a range of options for the reform of the IFRP during 2015 and early 2016, but agreed that the incoming Assembly Commission that would be appointed following the May 2016 Assembly elections, should itself consider the options.

Following initial consultation with Assembly Commission Members during the summer of 2016, a comprehensive consultation document entitled "Independent Financial Review Panel: Reform" was issued to Assembly Commission Members on 28 October 2016, requesting an outline of their Party's views on the matters by 13 January 2017.

This work was overtaken by political events, namely that the Assembly did not resume normal business after the March 2017 election until 11 January 2020. The Assembly Commission was mindful that it was inappropriate for it to prioritise issues related to Members' salaries and allowances when the Assembly was not meeting.

It was anticipated that this work would recommence once normal Assembly business resumed and a new Assembly Commission could be appointed. In order to enable officials to undertake some preparatory work in advance of a potential return to normal Assembly business, at its meeting on 5 September 2019, the Assembly Commission asked officials to issue a fresh consultation document in order to seek the views of the Parties represented on the Assembly Commission and identify areas of agreement for possible reform of the IFRP. It was also agreed that following this, a wider consultation with all Members could take place.

A further consultation document was issued to Assembly Commission Members on 21 November 2019, requiring written responses from their Parties on the key issues outlined, by 17 January 2020. This deadline was extended to 7 February 2020 following appointment of the new Assembly Commission. There have been two responses to the consultation to date.

Discussions have taken place at the first meeting of the new Assembly Commission on 19 February 2020 and options for the potential reform of the system for determination of Members' salaries, expenses/allowances and pensions was considered by an Assembly Commission working meeting on 18 March 2020.

Following those discussions, officials are now working to develop the detail of a potential way forward for the Assembly Commission to consider.

Mr McGlone asked the Assembly Commission what plans it has to introduce technology for Member electronic voting in Plenary sittings.

(AQO 428/17-22)

Mr Butler (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The Standing Orders of the Assembly do not currently provide for electronic voting by Members. Standing Order 26 provides that the Speaker shall judge whether or not a question be carried by collecting voices. Standing Order 27 provides that, in certain circumstances, rather than collecting voices the Speaker shall ask the Assembly to divide with Members voting by passing through the relevant lobby.

In order for electronic voting by Members in plenary sittings to be introduced, it would require the Committee on Procedures to bring forward new standing orders and for the Assembly to agree these with cross-community support.

It is not the role of the Assembly Commission to seek to amend the Assembly's Standing Orders. However, the Assembly Commission has supported a previous Committee on Procedures through the provision of advice and options in relation to electronic voting.

Should the current Committee on Procedures wish to consider bringing forward new standing orders to provide for electronic voting, the Assembly Commission would, of course, work closely with it to ensure that the necessary infrastructure and technology could be put in place.

Mr Middleton asked the Assembly Commission to outline the policy, process and criteria for the external illumination of Parliament Buildings.

(AQO 429/17-22)

Mrs D Kelly (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The external lighting of Parliament Buildings is covered by the Parliament Buildings Special Lighting Policy 2020.

Under this policy, which is published on the Assembly website, the Assembly Commission may agree to light the Building for occasions that are significant in the wider community. The Assembly Commission has, for some years, agreed that the Building be lit annually on four days to mark International Women's Day, Saint Patrick's Day, the Twelfth of July and Armistice Day.

In addition, requests for special lighting can be made by Members, subject to cross-designation support, registered charities, public-sector, community or other non-profit making organisations.

Such requests must meet certain criteria to be approved. Those criteria include that the special lighting must be in connection with an event that is:

- Of exceptional local, national or international significance and/or achievement.
- Of constitutional or democratic significance.
- A significant anniversary of a significant local, national or international event.

Other than the four days agreed by the Assembly Commission, special lighting will not be approved to mark an event that occurs repeatedly, unless it is a significant anniversary of that event. Furthermore, no such event can be marked by special lighting more than once in any three-year period.

All requests for special lighting are put to the Assembly Commission and approval must be based on consensus.

Mr Allister asked the Assembly Commission whether arrangements will be made to fly the national flag from Parliament Buildings on the occasion of the centenaries of the creation of Northern Ireland and of the first sitting of the Northern Ireland Parliament.

(AQO 430/17-22)

Mr Blair (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): There are two aspects of Assembly Commission policy related to the Member's question. Firstly, the Assembly Commission agreed an approach in 2012 in relation to how anniversaries within the decade of centenaries would be marked within Parliament Buildings. This approach is guided by a set of principles including that all events will be inclusive, of a sensitive tone and respectful of our shared history and differing views on it.

In October 2018, the Assembly Commission agreed the anniversaries which would be marked in this mandate and this includes the centenaries of the creation of Northern Ireland/ partition and the first sitting of the Northern Ireland Parliament in 2021.

In line with the agreed approach, the Assembly Commission is required to agree by consensus early next year the nature of the events it will organise and will do so in the context of the events which have already been held.

Secondly, on flags, in June 2015, the Assembly Commission agreed to fly the Union flag on the days designated by the Department of Digital, Culture, Media and Sport. This decision followed an Equality Impact Assessment including a public consultation. The Assembly Commission has not agreed a Civil Occasions Protocol and is awaiting the outcome of a final report by the Commission on Flags, Identity, Culture and Tradition.

Miss Woods asked the Assembly Commission for an update on the establishment of a new Independent Financial Review Panel.

(AQO 432/17-22)

Mr O'Dowd (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The Independent Financial Review Panel ("IFRP") was established pursuant to the Assembly Members (Independent Financial Review and Standards) Act (NI) 2011 ("the 2011 Act"). Under the 2011 Act, the IFRP is required to be independent and is not, in the exercise of its functions, subject to the direction or control of the Assembly or the Assembly Commission.

The Chair and two other Panel members are appointed by the Assembly Commission for a term of five years. The terms of office of persons appointed to the IFRP expired in July 2016. The Assembly Commission considered a range of options for the reform of the IFRP during 2015 and early 2016, but agreed that the incoming Assembly Commission that would be appointed following the May 2016 Assembly elections, should itself consider the options.

Following initial consultation with Assembly Commission Members during the summer of 2016, a comprehensive consultation document entitled "Independent Financial Review Panel: Reform" was issued to Assembly Commission Members on 28 October 2016, requesting an outline of their Party's views on the matters by 13 January 2017.

This work was overtaken by political events, namely that the Assembly did not resume normal business after the March 2017 election until 11 January 2020. The Assembly Commission was mindful that it was inappropriate for it to prioritise issues related to Members' salaries and allowances when the Assembly was not meeting.

It was anticipated that this work would recommence once normal Assembly business resumed and a new Assembly Commission could be appointed. In order to enable officials to undertake some preparatory work in advance of a potential return to normal Assembly business, at its meeting on 5 September 2019, the Assembly Commission asked officials to issue a fresh consultation document in order to seek the views of the Parties represented on the Assembly Commission and identify areas of agreement for possible reform of the IFRP. It was also agreed that following this, a wider consultation with all Members could take place.

A further consultation document was issued to Assembly Commission Members on 21 November 2019, requiring written responses from their Parties on the key issues outlined, by 17 January 2020. This deadline was extended to 7 February 2020 following appointment of the new Assembly Commission. There have been two responses to the consultation to date.

Discussions have taken place at the first meeting of the new Assembly Commission on 19 February 2020 and options for the potential reform of the system for determination of Members' salaries, expenses/allowances and pensions was considered by an Assembly Commission working meeting on 18 March 2020.

Following those discussions, officials are now working to develop the detail of a potential way forward for the Assembly Commission to consider.

Mr Muir asked the Assembly Commission for an update on the consultation on the Independent Financial Review Panel.

(AQO 435/17-22)

Ms McLaughlin asked the Assembly Commission what plans it has to invest in the WiFi network in Parliament Buildings to ensure that Members and staff can work efficiently.

(AQO 436/17-22)

Mr K Buchanan (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The current Wi-Fi network was installed in Parliament Buildings in 2013 and originally consisted of 84 wireless access points located throughout the building. As the current system supports up to a maximum of 100 access points, an additional 16 were purchased and installed in 2015 in order to improve the overall Wi-Fi signal coverage for building users.

The current Wi-Fi network shares the Assembly's main internet connection which was upgraded from 80 to 500 Megabits in 2017. The speed of this connection is monitored on a daily basis and is currently operating well within the capacity of the connection.

Following the resumption of normal Assembly business in January of this year and the allocation of tablet PCs for use by Members and staff, the IS Office is aware that in some areas, particularly around the Assembly Chamber, Wi-Fi connectivity and signal strength has been an issue for some users.

In response, the IS Office is currently deploying 15 new higher speed access points to replace some of the older ones in areas where signal strength has been reported as problematic. This work was expected to be complete by the end of April 2020, however this has now been paused due to COVID-19. The IS Office is also currently preparing written advice to Members on how best to manage Wi-Fi connections on mobile devices and this will be issued shortly.

As the current Wi-Fi system is approaching end of life, the IS Office intends to undertake a review of the system and will consider setting up a project to replace the Wi-Fi network infrastructure before the end of the current Assembly mandate.

Should Members experience any difficulty with Wi-Fi access or performance in Parliament Buildings they should contact the IS Office Service Desk. The IS Office will continue to monitor the current Wi-Fi service in Parliament Buildings and will respond appropriately to any specific issues as they arise.

Written Answers

Department of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs (i) how he intends to increase the number of trees in West Tyrone; and (ii) whether his Department has earmarked land for planting.

(AQW 3440/17-22)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs): I made a statement in the Assembly recently announcing a new Programme of Afforestation which will plant 18 million trees by 2030 throughout Northern Ireland to contribute to the UK's net zero carbon target. I hope that woodland can be created in West Tyrone as part of this programme. I have written to Ministerial colleagues and Chief Executives of Councils, including Fermanagh & Omagh Council and Derry City & Strabane Council, requesting their support to develop plans for woodland creation on suitable public land under their control.

The Afforestation Programme, as outlined in my statement, will need also to further encourage rural landowners and other businesses to plant more woodland. Support for this through forestry grant schemes is currently under review, including the development of a specific small woodland grant scheme designed to help landowners to incorporate woodlands into their land holdings and farms.

Ms Anderson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs when funding will be made available to advance the Strathfoyle Greenway project.

(AQW 3492/17-22)

Mr Poots: Officials in my Department continue to engage with officials in Derry City and Strabane District Council, the Department for Communities (DfC) and the Department for Infrastructure (DfI) with the intention of progressing the Strathfoyle Greenway Project.

Derry City and Strabane District Council are currently developing a Business Case for the project which will determine how it progresses and funding requirements.

Mr Blair asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs how he will reassure farmers concerned by recent incidents of avian flu.

(AQW 3623/17-22)

Mr Poots: My Department continues to take a range of actions to reassure farmers concerned by the recent cases of non-notifiable avian influenza. The detection of any animal disease is always a concern and the prevention of epizootic disease incursions is one of my Department's main priorities.

The Department has published a control strategy for dealing with avian influenza outbreaks and these plans are continuously reviewed. Surveillance to detect disease is carried out on wild birds and poultry in accordance with European legislative requirements.

When a report of a suspect notifiable disease is received restrictions are immediately placed on the affected premises. These measures prevent any movements, on or off the premises, of susceptible species and/or products. Restrictions remain in place until veterinary enquiries are complete and notifiable disease has been ruled out.

My officials have been working closely with industry representatives in respect of the recent non-notifiable avian influenza cases to determine the potential sources of disease introduction and methods of spread. This information has enabled officials to provide further advice and recommendations to industry on risk pathways, and assist with voluntary depopulation and other biosecurity measures to minimise the risk of spread to other premises.

My Department continues to communicate messages which encourage vigilance, early reporting of suspect cases and the importance of maintaining excellent levels of biosecurity. Flock keepers are also encouraged to subscribe to a bird text alert service and reminded of the need to register their flocks with the Department.

These steps will help keep farmers informed of the current disease risk in Northern Ireland and of the practical steps that can be taken to mitigate that risk.

Dr Archibald asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs what percentage of forest cover will be delivered by the planting of 9,000 hectares of trees through the Forests for our Future programme.

(AQW 3836/17-22)

Mr Poots: Woodland cover in Northern Ireland is 8.2% at present (113k hectares) and will increased to 8.8% (122k hectares) following planting of an additional 9,000 hectares of woodland by 2030 through the Programme of Afforestation: Forests for our Future.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline what COVID-19-related restrictions are on (i) the farming community; and (ii) their operations, including livestock trading and testing.

Mr Poots: The response provided here was correct at 30 March 2020.

(i) The farming community:

DAERA Direct Offices

Additional measures are now in place to protect citizens and staff by ceasing all public facing direct services offered by DAERA Direct Offices.

All customers must now conduct their business through DAERA Online services, which can be accessed from the DAERA Website home page or, if appropriate, via the Cattle Registration Telephony line (0300 200 7855).

Documents can still be delivered to a DAERA Direct office and left in a designated post box at the entrance to the building. To ensure protection of the food supply chain, current certification arrangements will continue to apply until further notice.

Digital Assistance with applications to the Basic Payment Scheme (BPS) or the Environmental Farming Scheme (EFS) can be accessed through the SAF Advisory Service on 0300 200 7848.

All other appointments and general queries can be made directly with the local DAERA Direct office on 0300 200 7840.

Farm Family Health Checks Programme

After discussions with our partners in this initiative (the Public Health Agency and the Northern Health and Social Care Trust) the Farm Families Health Checks Service has been currently paused, this decision will be kept under review.

College of Agriculture Food and Rural Enterprise (CAFRE)

CAFRE has ceased all face-to-face teaching with students and all Knowledge Transfer events delivered to the agri-food industry. However, it is delivering education programmes remotely and is also providing reactive support and advice to the agri-food industry. Processing of applications for tranche 5 of the Business Development Groups (BDGs) scheme and registration of farmers/growers are continuing remotely. CAFRE will keep this situation under review.

(ii) Their operations, including livestock trading and testing:

Farm Quality Assurance Scheme (FQAS)

Following an emergency meeting of the Northern Ireland Beef and Lamb Farm Quality Assurance Scheme (FQAS) Industry Board, all face to face farm inspections have been deferred due to the coronavirus (COVID-19) outbreak. This policy came into effect from Wednesday 18th March at 5pm.

NI livestock markets

NI livestock markets have taken the decision to close initially for 2 weeks starting from 23 March 2020. This follows continued high numbers of farmers attending markets, despite warnings and pleas from farming unions. Other means of sale will be explored including virtual sales, buyer only markets and specialist sales. DAERA are working with the markets to ensure livestock movements can be facilitated by a combination of Aphise on-line and telephony services.

Farm Inspections and Animal Testing

DAERA, in consultation with the local agri-industry and colleagues across the UK, has drawn up guidelines for the safe delivery of on-farm inspections and tests. DAERA is committed to helping the industry in maintaining the food supply chain, which is central to everyone's wellbeing.

Routine farm inspections

All routine farm inspections will be paused until 30 April 2020. This move comes in response to the COVID-19 pandemic and is part of the wider effort to reduce the spread of the virus. It also takes pressure off the agri-food sector, which is working extremely hard to ensure the food supply chain keeps moving.

All routine farm inspections in the areas of the Environment, EU Area Based Scheme, Agrifood and Veterinary work, will be paused until 30 April. However essential inspections such as Public Health Risk Sampling, will continue where possible.

Where it has been reported or suspected that there has been, or there is likely to be, potential for a significant impact on public health, animal health or pollution of the environment, the pausing of inspections will not apply. In those cases DAERA staff may undertake site inspections on farms (or elsewhere) to assess and resolve any issues.

TB testing

From 30 March 2020, DAERA has updated its advice on TB testing: the general advice is that TB testing should not be carried out. This updated position is designed primarily to protect farmers and farm families and has taken account of feedback received from veterinarians and farmers.

Under exceptional circumstances, visits to carry out TB tests may continue if they can be done safely in accordance with guidance issued by the Public Health Agency. For each arranged test, the testing veterinarian must discuss the conduct of the test with the herd keeper before commencing. If the herd keeper has any doubts or concerns that he/she cannot provide the necessary facilities to maintain social distancing throughout the test, the test should not be undertaken. If a test commences, the testing veterinarian must ensure that social distancing is maintained throughout. If it cannot the test must be abandoned.

Inspections paused:

NIEA

- Planned inspections for SMR1 (nitrates and phosphates)
- Inspections for SMR2 (Wild Birds) and SMR3 (Semi-natural Habitats)

EU Area Based Schemes Inspections

- Rapid Field Visits (RFVs) for the Basic Payment Scheme
- Hedge Mitigation inspections
- New Business ID inspections
- Inspections for the Farm Business Improvement Scheme-Capital Tier 2 grant payments

Veterinary inspections

- Routine Inspections –These include animal welfare, cross-compliance, cattle identification inspections, sheep identification inspections and enforcement inspections. The only exceptions would be reactive inspections, if absolutely necessary, to investigate serious animal welfare incidents or serious animal health breaches (for example bovine TB fraud)
- Scheduled Official Control inspections
- Other Animal Disease Surveillance - including; post import sampling of GB sheep for Maedi-Visna and the scrapie monitoring scheme for sheep

Inspections continuing:

- All suspect epizootic disease cases on farm, such as Foot-and-Mouth, Avian Influenza, Bluetongue etc. will continue to be investigated
- Public health risk sampling
- Environmental Farming Scheme inspections

The position will be kept under review as the situation develops and a further announcement on routine inspections is planned by 30 April 2020.

The Department is also considering alternative ways of working, in some cases this could be making greater use of imagery, considering different types of evidence that customers can provide, or to look at options which reduce face to face interaction.

"The overall approach and proposals to pause inspections is generally in line and consistent with what is happening in other jurisdictions within the UK, for many of their routine inspection programmes. We will of course keep all these steps under review."

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs how he plans to incentivise farmers to participate in tree planting on small portions of their farmland.

(AQO 404/17-22)

Mr Poots: I made a statement in this Assembly recently announcing a new Programme of Afforestation which will plant 18 million trees to create 9,000 hectares of new woodland by 2030 throughout Northern Ireland to contribute to the UK's net zero carbon target.

My plans include planting on any available land on the public estate and to further encourage rural landowners, farmers and other businesses to plant more woodland to complement their holdings, and at the same time provide environmental benefits to the wider society.

Regarding incentives for this, support through forestry grant schemes is currently under review. As part of this, I plan to develop a specific small woodland grant scheme, designed to help landowners to integrate woodlands into their farm or other businesses. Integration of woodland into the farm business can provide buffer strips to reduce the risk of accidental breaches of water pollution. For example, in soils of high fertility, the location and extent of the woodland buffers can be refined by using LiDAR to identify which parts of the farm are contributing most to water pollution through rapid surface runoff. Woodlands can also provide shelter to improve crop and livestock productivity and reduce ammonia loss to the atmosphere from point sources. Farmers may wish to convert the steeper slopes which are hazardous for farming and unproductive bracken or gorse dominated areas to woodland.

There is a clear case for expanding woodland cover, it is not without its challenges and it will require partnership working across the Executive, the wider public sector, and importantly the participation of farmers, rural landowners and communities in woodland support schemes.

Mr Blair asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs for an update on the development of a new rural framework for Northern Ireland.

Mr Poots: The ongoing work to develop the new Rural Policy Framework was endorsed by stakeholders at an engagement event attended by over 120 delegates on the 16th January in Loughry College.

Following this each of the five working groups took on board feedback from the engagement event and finalised their agreed reports during February. Officials are now reviewing the reports and using this information to develop the overarching draft rural framework policy. Although we are focusing efforts on the Covid 19 response it is still planned that a draft framework will go to for full public consultation later this year.

Mr McGuigan asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs to outline any progress on the establishment and structure of the proposed Office of Environment Protection.

(AQO 407/17-22)

Mr Poots: DAERA is working with Defra to support the passage of the Environment Bill through Parliament. Parallel to that process, I will very shortly be consulting on the plans, principles and governance aspects of the Bill. It will be for the Assembly to determine whether to give legislative consent for and implement the provisions in the Bill which extend to Northern Ireland, including the Office for Environmental Protection. The Bill sets out the role and functions of the OEP. I do not expect full details of the administrative arrangements for the OEP to be ironed out until later this year. I will continue to work towards ensuring appropriate environmental governance arrangements are in place by the end of the Implementation Period.

Department for Communities

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister for Communities what data is held on the number of people presenting in each Health and Social Care Trust suffering from problem gambling; and how this information informs policy on addressing addiction.

(AQW 2442/17-22)

Ms Hargey (The Minister for Communities): I refer the member to the answer given to AQO 366/17-22 on 16 March 2020.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister for Communities what progress has been made to remove historical debt from the NI Housing Executive and to exclude it from having to pay corporation tax as outlined in New Decade, New Approach.

(AQW 2957/17-22)

Ms Hargey: "New Decade, New Approach" outlines that the Executive will examine options to remove historical debt from the Housing Executive and to exclude it from having to pay Corporation Tax.

I have met with Minister Murphy to discuss the matter and to explore what may be done in relation to the Housing Executive Landlord's legacy debt.

Corporation Tax legislation is an Excepted Matter under Schedule 2 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 and any changes to tax legislation need to be made at Westminster. Representations continue to be made through the Department of Finance and my officials will be working closely with the Minister for Finance and his Department to find a solution to this matter.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Communities to detail the planned (i) current; and (ii) future projects in Upper Bann which will be (a) fully; and (b) part-funded by her Department.

(AQW 3360/17-22)

Ms Hargey: Current and future projects within the Upper Bann area funded by my Department are listed in the tables below at Annexes A and B.

Annex A - each of these projects was funded at the level the applicant requested.

Annex B - as the Housing Executive does not group services under Parliamentary Constituency Area, the table at Annex B shows the relevant information for Armagh, Banbridge and Craigavon Council Areas most closely aligned to "Upper Bann".

Ms Sheerin asked the Minister for Communities whether she will allow extensions to completion deadlines for benefits applications and benefit renewal applications.

Ms Hargey: My Department is taking steps to ensure in the current circumstances no one will lose out if a benefit form is not returned within the normal specified time. Legislation already exists to allow the time for claiming to be extended under the relevant regulations for that benefit.

In addition to reassure vulnerable people about the continuity of their benefits during the Covid – 19 outbreak all reviews and reassessments for health and disability benefits will be paused for the next three months.

Arrangements will be put in place to extend awards that have an end date to ensure benefit remains in payment.

If people experience a change in their needs they are still encouraged to contact the Department to ensure they are receiving the correct level of support.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister for Communities, pursuant to AQW 2262/17-22, to outline the process taken to identify Drumellan as being the best site for this development.

(AQW 3725/17-22)

Ms Hargey: High level feasibility was conducted across Housing Executive owned land in this area to determine suitability for development based on the need for complex needs and accessible properties in the area.

Site A, land adjacent to 17 Drumellan Park, was first considered as a former brownfield site. It could also provide continuity of frontage and would require the least disturbance to the current road network. A Pre-Application Discussion (PAD) with Armagh City, Banbridge and Craigavon Council (ABC) took place who confirmed Policy OS 1 – Protection of Open Space within Planning Policy Statement 8 (Open Space, Outdoor Sport and Recreation) would apply. This will require an exception case to demonstrate substantial community benefits that decisively outweigh the loss of open space. The Department for Infrastructures Rivers Agency confirmed that a Flood Risk Assessment is required. A 5m wide working strip is also required as the site is adjacent to a watercourse reducing the development potential of the lands.

Site B, North West of 33 Drumellan Park was also considered as a potential site. The dwellings to the east 28-33 Drumellan Park are designed as a courtyard/cul-de-sac with the rears facing the main road and DfI Roads have confirmed that access should be from the cul-de-sac. Landscaping has been proposed for the new units to provide privacy and soften their impact particularly around the rears. ABC planners confirm that PPS 8 would also apply to this site however given the planning history and the nature of the proposal for special needs this policy could be overcome through a supporting statement.

Site C, land at Drumellan Brownlow, was considered as an option if Site A and Site B prove unsuccessful. However, this is a large site and careful design is required to incorporate these units within the setting. Mature trees are placed sporadically along the frontage and throughout the site. The lands have provided an amenity space/area within the estate for a number of years. Nonetheless the lands are zoned as housing lands C/H 8 with the following Key Site Requirements;

- 1 Detailed planting plan. Outline or full permission to incorporate new planting of trees and bushes of appropriate species within the site and on the boundaries to provide screening for the development and to break up housing mass.
- 2 Layout designed that no houses back onto public road.
- 3 Footway required all along site frontage, and within the site, to link with the existing footway network in the area. Direct access for individual dwellings will not be permitted onto the public road.

Progressing to Social Housing Development Programme

Choice Housing Association were nominated to progress the scheme and a briefing meeting took place in October 2018 where a development brief dealing with each of the sites (listed above) was provided.

Choice Housing Association also secured detailed feasibility from Turley planning consultants who deemed Site A + B high risk due to the PPS 8 requirement and Site C low risk due to its housing zoning. However, given the number of units required Site A+B were the most feasible and the council planners have acknowledged the open space within the area.

Choice Housing Association appointed a design team in June 2019 and a planning application was submitted LA08/2019/1342 - Proposed erection of 5 no. complex needs bungalows with car parking, amenity space and landscaping, works to the public road and associated site works at Lands to the north of 17 & 33 Drumellan Park and south of 35-40 Drumellan Gardens Moyraverty Craigavon.

Staff from the Housing Executive are in regular contact with Choice and the Planners in relation to this scheme and anticipate that planning permission will be granted to enable the scheme to start within the current financial year or early next year subject to necessary statutory and regulatory approvals.

In summary the site was selected in terms of suitability with prevailing planning policy, planning history, brownfield status, size requirements of bespoke units with regards to overall size of site, suitability of site for applicants with complex needs due to location of family support and location to Craigavon hospital.

Ms Ennis asked the Minister for Communities for her assessment of the recent Audit Office report into Governance Issues in Sport NI.

(AQO 417/17-22)

Ms Hargey: I welcome the publication of this report and the opportunity to look carefully at lessons learned.

The report examines, in detail, the circumstances around a period of internal instability and change within Sport NI.

This period included suspension of the Chief Executive and resignation of Board members. There were also very significant delays in the submission of financial statements.

There are important lessons to be learned highlighted in the report, not just for Sport NI and the Department for Communities, but for the wider public sector.

I am committed to ensuring that the recommendations for my Department and Sport NI and are taken forward collaboratively in the interests of sport and the positive impact it has on all our lives.

I also recognise the importance of good relationships between Boards, Chairs, Chief Executives and Senior Management teams of ALBs and the need for my Department to be proactive in its role with ALBs.

We have already seen financial statements for Sport NI certified up to 2017/18 with 2018/19 to be certified in the next few months. My Department and Sport NI have considered lessons learned in respect of the preparation of financial statements and I am confident that this key governance requirement, providing accountability for public funds will be back on track and the lessons learned will ensure that financial statements do not fall into backlog again.

My Department will work closely with the Department of Finance as they consider wider recommendations within the report and we will support further actions for improvement that come forward.

My Department will continue to support the Board of Sport NI and its Chief Executive as they deliver their plans to transform the organisation.

Crucially, we are working in partnership with Sport NI to ensure that the organisation operates within an appropriate governance framework to deliver positive outcomes in terms of sport and physical activity, from the very grassroots community level up to the highest performance level so the we can all benefit from the significant contribution sport plays in our communities and our lives.

Department of Education

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Education how much his Department has spent on producing materials in Irish, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 3428/17-22)

Mr Weir (The Minister of Education): The Department's expenditure on producing materials in Irish, in each of the last five complete financial years, was as follows:

	Total £
2014/15	67,792.88
2015/16	20,605.47
2016/17	5,810.33
2017/18	524.44
2018/19	36.35

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Education to provide a breakdown of schools that have participated in the Battlefields project from the South Antrim constituency.

(AQW 3527/17-22)

Mr Weir: The schools that participated in the Battlefields Project from the South Antrim constituency are as follows:

School Ref.	School Name	Management Type
3210134	Ballyclare Secondary School	Controlled
3250207	Parkhall Integrated College, Antrim	Controlled Integrated
3410008	Ballyclare High School	Controlled
3410209	Antrim Grammar School	Controlled

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Education what plans are in place to disinfect schools in order to prevent the spread of COVID-19.

(AQW 3646/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Education Authority (EA) has confirmed that, when requested to do so by schools, an 'Enhanced Clean' is carried out by the EA cleaning service. This facility is available to all schools, including Voluntary Grammar and Grant Maintained Integrated schools. An enhanced clean pays particular attention to surfaces and areas of shared use (taps, door handles etc.), as part of the regular cleaning team's normal system of work.

EA are also currently undertaking an enhanced clean in all schools and premises, as a preventative measure. This is not placing any additional workload on the Cleaning Service or consequently any additional financial cost to schools.

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Education what plans are in place for private bus hire companies who provide school transport services in the event of school closures.

(AQW 3811/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Education Authority has confirmed that it issued correspondence to all private bus and taxi operators on 23 March 2020 in relation to the provision of home to school transport during the period of school closures.

Its letter outlined that it will require some contracted operators to undertake alternative journeys, for example in providing home-school journeys for the children of key workers, small deliveries of teaching/cleaning materials and other goods, or to assist in the transportation of school meals.

It also confirms that the EA will continue to pay all existing home to school transport contracts until the end of June or the end of the current school closures, whichever is soonest. The EA will seek assurance from operators that during this period they will sustain the employment of drivers and escorts employed to provide school transport services and an assurance that during this period they will have the capacity to continue normal service delivery.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education whether there is any anticipated impact by the COVID-19 crisis on the holding of the transfer tests in 2020.

Mr Weir: My Department plays no role in the operation or administration of the tests including their timing. This is a matter for schools and test providers to consider. However, I am sensitive to the issues you have raised and while this is not something I can intervene in directly, I will bring your concerns to the attention of the test providers.

I would hope that the providers will reflect on the unique circumstances we currently find ourselves in and give due consideration to ensuring that the next transfer test series does not unduly burden young people or their parents.

Department of Finance

Mr Stewart asked the Minister of Finance to detail the additional rates anticipated to be raised in 2020/21 compared to 2019/20 following REVAL 2020.

(AQW 3578/17-22)

Mr Murphy (The Minister of Finance): The Regional Rate will be adjusted to offset the change in the total rateable value due to the revaluation. No additional rates revenue therefore will be raised.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance whether he will consider extending the small business rate relief scheme to businesses with properties of higher Net Annual Value than the current scheme accepts.

(AQW 3579/17-22)

Mr Murphy: I am considering the small Business Rate Relief Scheme as part of the Budget.

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister of Finance what the timeframe is for the Permanent Secretary in his Department to respond to written correspondence from (i) an MLA; and (ii) member of the public.

(AQW 3714/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The timeframe for the Permanent Secretary to respond to any correspondence received from both MLAs and members of the public is normally 2 weeks. However this is subject to all the relevant information being available. More complex correspondence can require a longer time period.

Mr McGrath asked the Minister of Finance what consideration is being given to the provision of a short-term basic income model, especially for self-employed people, to assist them during the COVID-19 outbreak.

(AQW 3815/17-22)

Mr Murphy: I have lobbied the British Government on provision for the self-employed and the Chancellor announced the Coronavirus (COVID-19) Self-employment Income Support Scheme on the 26th of March 2020.

I am disappointed that the first payments from this scheme are not expected until the beginning of June. My officials will be working with their Treasury counterparts to monitor its impact locally and I will continue to press Treasury Ministers on their support for the self-employed.

Mr McGrath asked the Minister of Finance what help and assistance is being considered and implemented to help self-employed people who have no income due to the lack of work due to the COVID-19 outbreak.

(AQW 3816/17-22)

Mr Murphy: I have lobbied the British Government on provision for the self-employed and the Chancellor announced the Coronavirus (COVID-19) Self-employment Income Support Scheme on the 26th of March 2020.

I am disappointed that the first payments from this scheme are not expected until the beginning of June. My officials will be working with their Treasury counterparts to monitor its impact locally and I will continue to press Treasury Ministers on their support for the self-employed.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance how relevant civil servants, who retire over the coming months, will be made amenable in respect of any disciplinary matters arising from the RHI report.

Mr Murphy: No civil servant can be disciplined after they cease to be an NICS employee therefore no disciplinary action can be completed in respect of any civil servant after their retirement date.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance what support arrangements exist in respect of councils arising from delaying rates collection.

(AQW 3867/17-22)

Mr Murphy: District Councils will continue to be paid on the basis of their 2020/21 estimates in twelve equal instalments on the first of each month throughout the rating year. Therefore, the delay in the billing will not have any impact on a Council's funding.

After the end of the 2020/21 rating year, Land & Property Services will determine the actual amount of money raised for each Council and will pay any additional money raised in the following rating year (that is, in 2021/22); conversely, where there is a shortfall this will be clawed back the following year. This is the usual arrangement that my Department has with Councils.

You will be aware that my Department is in the process of putting measures in place to allow businesses to benefit from a three month rates holiday for April, May and June 2020. The corresponding total loss in rates revenue will be borne by the regional rate, in a similar fashion to arrangements for the Small Business Rate Relief. As such, the rates holiday will have no impact on the revenue of District Councils.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance whether social distancing requirements are being observed in NIDirect call centres; and whether staff are required to share headphones and keyboards.

(AQW 3891/17-22)

Mr Murphy: In line with current advice and requirements the NIDirect contact centre staff are working to adhere to social distancing through spacing of desks. Hot desking has been stopped and staff are not required to share headphones and keyboards.

Increased breaks for handwashing and increased additional cleaning has been introduced. To maintain service delivery, and as call volumes reduce, further steps are being taken including working with IT Assist to relocate staff to remote working from home.

Department of Health

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Health to outline his plans to meet New Decade, New Approach targets for rheumatology patients.

(AQW 652/17-22)

Mr Swann (The Minister of Health): Planning is already underway to secure additional capacity to meet the commitment to reduce waiting times as set out in New Decade New Approach.

Mr Gildernew asked the Minister of Health (i) to provide the names of the manufacturers of insulin pumps being used in the Health Service; (ii) for a breakdown of the amount of pumps being distributed to diabetes patients; and (iii) for an update on the average waiting times for insulin pumps in each Health and Social Care Trust.

Mr Swann: The names of the manufacturers of insulin pumps being used in the Health Service are as follows: Medtronic, Roche, Tandem, Insulet (Omnipod) Ypsomed and Air Liquide.

The number of pumps distributed to adult and paediatric patients with diabetes since 2016/17 is shown below. Figures relate to new pumps and do not include replacement pumps issued to pre-existing insulin pump users.

Number of insulin pumps issued

	Belfast HSCT	Northern HSCT	South Eastern HSCT	Southern HSCT	Western HSCT
2016/17	34	20	51	42	12
2017/18	22	29	40	25	14
2018/19	21	8	33	26	19
2019/20 (up to 31st Jan 2020)	23	21	48	28	12

- (iii) There are a number of factors to consider before a patient can access an insulin pump including adherence to NICE guidelines, patient readiness and clinical priority. However, waiting times in each Health and Social Care Trust are as follows:

Belfast HSCT	The waiting list for pre pump assessment is approximately 24 months. There is no waiting list for insulin pumps.
Northern HSCT	Details of the average waiting time for an insulin pump is not available.
South Eastern HSCT	Waiting time for pre-pump assessment varies but can be up to 12 months.
Southern HSCT	No waiting times for insulin pumps or assessment for insulin pumps for children and young people. Adult waiting time for pre pump assessment is currently 13 months.
Western HSCT	For patients prioritised as having an urgent clinical need, access to insulin pump therapy is within 1-2 months. Average waiting time for routine pump start for paediatric patients is 6-12 months after assessment is completed.

Mr Gildernew asked the Minister of Health whether he plans to publish any consultations before summer recess; and, if so, to outline the topics for consultation.

Mr Swann: You will be aware of the significant pressure that my Department is currently under in dealing with the covid-19 pandemic.

To that end, I have had to re-prioritise the work of the Department to best tackle the risks to public health and social care in Northern Ireland caused by the COVID 19 Virus. My approach means that I have had to significantly redeploy Departmental resources which, in turn, has created unavoidable pressures in carrying out normal 'business as usual'. Therefore at this current time no consultations will be published before summer recess.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Health to detail the number of times each GP Out Of Hours base in the Southern Health and Social Care Trust has had to close because of no medical cover in each month since April 2017.

(AQW 2716/17-22)

Mr Swann: The table below outlines the number of times each SHSCT Out of Hours base has had to close since April 2017.

SHSCT GP Out of Hours: Number of occasions closed by Base

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Health whether he plans to intervene to save the services at Compass Counselling and provide much needed financial support.

(AQW 2999/17-22)

Mr Swann: I refer the member to the answer given to priority AQW 828/17-22 on 30 January 2020.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health what proposals he is bringing forward to increase the number of mental health social workers; and under what timescale.

(AQW 3088/17-22)

Mr Swann: There are a number of initiatives ongoing which will inform future workforce planning.

My department is working on an overall workforce planning strategy for health and social care and social work officials from my department are involved in this.

In addition, my Department is working on a separate social work workforce review which is scoping social work demand in all areas including mental health.

Social work officials are also working on a regional Approved Social Work (ASW) workforce plan which will make a recommendation on ASW numbers.

My Department is also rolling out the new model of multi-disciplinary teams in primary care which includes significant investment in social work staff. While these social workers have a generalist remit, much of their work will involve prevention and early intervention in relation to mental health problems.

Ms McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health whether his Department has conducted an analysis on the potential impact on social care resulting from the loss of existing and new workers from 26 EU nations as a result of Brexit; and to outline the results of any such analysis.

(AQW 3122/17-22)

Mr Swann: My Department will be assessing the likely impacts across health and social care in Northern Ireland, with a view to completing an assessment by early summer.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Health (i) why Evorel Sequi patches have been unavailable; (ii) when these patches will be available; and (iii) what other options there are for patients who have tried other HRT treatment but have been unsuccessful.

(AQW 3187/17-22)

Mr Swann: The Department is aware that manufacturing issues have impacted on the supply of Evorel HRT patches. However, most of the Evorel HRT range of products should now be available in community pharmacies and the Evorel Sequi product range is due back in stock from the end of March 2020.

Patients who may be experiencing issues with accessing HRT products on prescription should contact their GP who will be able to advise them about alternative HRT preparations and the most appropriate option for them.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health what support his Department can offer to carers.

(AQW 3195/17-22)

Mr Swann: Thank you for your Assembly Written Question.

Following the Speaker's letter to all MLAs (18 March) you will be aware of the significant pressure that my Department is currently under in dealing with the biggest public health emergency that this country has ever faced.

To that end, I have had to re-prioritise the work of the Department to best tackle the risks to public health and social care in Northern Ireland caused by the COVID 19 Virus. My approach means that I have had to significantly redeploy Departmental resources which, in turn, has created unavoidable pressures in carrying out normal 'business as usual'.

I am conscious that the Assembly not only has a desire, but also a duty to request the latest information relating to this unprecedented and rapidly changing situation, and I am therefore committed to providing Members with regular updates as developments occur. I trust that you will agree that it is in the public interest that my officials and I remain primarily focused on the task in hand over the coming period in relation to COVID-19 and I will therefore not be in a position to answer your written question at this time.

I appreciate your understanding.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Health to detail the funding provided to Western Urgent Care in each of the last five years.

(AQW 3279/17-22)

Mr Swann: Thank you for your Assembly Written Question.

Robin Swann, MLA

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Health for his assessment of the reforms of the individual funding request process; and whether this has led to greater access to non-NICE approved drugs.

(AQW 3280/17-22)

Mr Swann: A key element of the reform of the Individual Funding Request (IFR) process is the introduction of a new Regional Scrutiny Committee (RSC). The Chair of the Committee and the associated administrative support took up post in February 2020 and work is ongoing to secure appropriate representation from each Trust.

The Health and Social Care Board is currently working with the Chair of the RSC to review the procedural documentation including the Standing Operating Procedure (SOP), guidance for patients and the IFR application form. It is anticipated that following a training event in April 2020, the RSC will formally convene on 5 May 2020.

Once established for a period of approximately six months, a review of the arrangements will be made to ensure compliance with the new policy and to provide an assessment on whether greater access to non-NICE approved drugs has been realised.

Mr McNulty asked the Minister of Health what advice his Department has provided on the organisation of large-scale public events during the coronavirus outbreak.

Mr Swann: On 23 March the UK Government introduced three new measures, requiring people to stay at home, except for very limited purposes; closing non-essential shops and community spaces, and stopping all gatherings of more than two people in public.

The Public Health Act (Northern Ireland) 1967, amended by The Coronavirus Act which received Royal Assent on 25 March, confers on my Department powers to take action to restrict events and gatherings. Under the Health Protection (Coronavirus, Restrictions) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2020, which came into force on 28 March, gatherings of more than two people are prohibited, subject to certain exceptions including where all the persons in the gathering are members of the same household; where the gathering is essential for work purposes, or to attend a funeral.

Contravention is an offence, punishable on summary conviction by a fine of up to £5000. A person over 18 years of age can also receive a fixed penalty notice of £60, increasing with any subsequent offence up to a maximum of £960.

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Health, given the statutory care sector can build-in resilience and response plans to the coronavirus outbreak, whether similar protections will be afforded to domiciliary care staff and similar agencies.

Mr Swann: Guidance for care homes and domiciliary care on COVID-19 was published on 17 March.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Health (i) whether contingency plans are in place to protect the welfare of vulnerable adults and the elderly within a care or nursing home setting should a resident or care staff member contract COVID-19; (ii) whether his Department will engage with the private care home sector to ensure preparedness and precaution is taken; and (iii) what support could be given to care homes to ensure safe staffing levels are maintained for a period should a number of employees be out of work temporarily due to contracting COVID-19.

Mr Swann: Guidance for care homes and on domiciliary care was published on 17 March.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health what plans he has to implement policies which will make up for the absence of a rapid redress scheme in the event of avoidable fatality or injury of baby during birth.

However, the Department is committed to providing high quality, safe and effective health and social care services to reduce the number of avoidable deaths or injuries during birth. Mr Swann: Thank you for your Assembly Written Question.

Following the Speaker's letter to all MLAs (18 March) you will be aware of the significant pressure that my Department is currently under in dealing with the biggest public health emergency that this country has ever faced.

To that end, I have had to re-prioritise the work of the Department to best tackle the risks to public health and social care in Northern Ireland caused by the COVID 19 Virus. My approach means that I have had to significantly redeploy Departmental resources which, in turn, has created unavoidable pressures in carrying out normal 'business as usual'.

I am conscious that the Assembly not only has a desire, but also a duty to request the latest information relating to this unprecedented and rapidly changing situation, and I am therefore committed to providing Members with regular updates as developments occur. I trust that you will agree that it is in the public interest that my officials and I remain primarily focused on the task in hand over the coming period in relation to COVID-19 and I will therefore not be in a position to answer your written question at this time.

I appreciate your understanding.

Mr Swann: Thank you for your Assembly Written Question.

Following the Speaker's letter to all MLAs (18 March) you will be aware of the significant pressure that my Department is currently under in dealing with the biggest public health emergency that this country has ever faced.

To that end, I have had to re-prioritise the work of the Department to best tackle the risks to public health and social care in Northern Ireland caused by the COVID 19 Virus. My approach means that I have had to significantly redeploy Departmental resources which, in turn, has created unavoidable pressures in carrying out normal 'business as usual'.

I am conscious that the Assembly not only has a desire, but also a duty to request the latest information relating to this unprecedented and rapidly changing situation, and I am therefore committed to providing Members with regular updates as developments occur. I trust that you will agree that it is in the public interest that my officials and I remain primarily focused on the task in hand over the coming period in relation to COVID-19 and I will therefore not be in a position to answer your written question at this time.

I appreciate your understanding.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Health to detail his plans to protect health workers from the COVID-19 pandemic, including the provision of protective clothing for frontline workers and testing frontline workers for the virus.

Mr Swann: Thank you for your Assembly Written Question.

Following the Speaker's letter to all MLAs (18 March) you will be aware of the significant pressure that my Department is currently under in dealing with the biggest public health emergency that this country has ever faced.

To that end, I have had to re-prioritise the work of the Department to best tackle the risks to public health and social care in Northern Ireland caused by the COVID 19 Virus. My approach means that I have had to significantly redeploy Departmental resources which, in turn, has created unavoidable pressures in carrying out normal 'business as usual'.

I am conscious that the Assembly not only has a desire, but also a duty to request the latest information relating to this unprecedented and rapidly changing situation, and I am therefore committed to providing Members with regular updates as developments occur. I trust that you will agree that it is in the public interest that my officials and I remain primarily focused on the task in hand over the coming period in relation to COVID-19 and I will therefore not be in a position to answer your written question at this time.

I appreciate your understanding.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health to detail the number of confirmed COVID-19 infections, broken down by Council Area; and whether this information will be published by the Public Health Agency on a daily basis.

Department for Infrastructure

Mr McAleer asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she plans to provide additional funding for the repair and maintenance of rural roads.

(AQW 1960/17-22)

Ms Mallon (The Minister for Infrastructure): The independent review (by Barton 2018) identified an annual funding requirement for structural maintenance of around £143m at today's prices. This report makes the case for timely, targeted road maintenance interventions, noting that late interventions can cost up to four times as much representing poor value for money.

Regrettably, due to severe budgets constraints imposed on my Department in recent years, it has had to operate a limited road maintenance service. I recognise the importance to communities of repairing and maintaining rural roads. I have highlighted this in representations to the Finance Minister in respect of the 2020/21 budget in the hope of securing the necessary funding to deliver essential services including repair and maintenance of our rural roads.

Mr Chambers asked the Minister for Infrastructure for her assessment on being able to enhance grass cutting services as a result of the new budget currently being worked on by the Executive.

Ms Mallon: Grass cutting is key to road safety and forms part of my Department's environmental maintenance work programme which has been curtailed in recent years due to significant budget cuts. As a result, my Department has had to reduce its routine road maintenance activities to a limited service, which prioritises delivery of essential services for maintaining public safety and protecting the transport network. As a consequence, all roadside grass verges and sightline grass was cut at least twice in the period April to October 2019. Whilst a normal grass cutting service in rural areas was provided, it was not possible, within the funding envelope available, to reinstate the three cuts per year in urban areas. However, to ensure public safety was not compromised sightlines were cut as required throughout the season.

I have engaged with the Finance Minister setting out my Department's funding needs for the 2020/21 budget period including the requirement for acceptable routine maintenance services including adequate grass cutting. I will continue to work with the Finance Minister and Executive colleagues on the 2020/21 budget and as a result I hope to secure the necessary funding to deliver essential services such as grass cutting in the year ahead.

Mr McCann asked the Minister for Infrastructure how her Department plans to improve the condition of streets in West Belfast.

Ms Mallon: In addition to carrying out a programme of cyclical maintenance safety inspections on all of the adopted road network using well established guidelines, my officials carry out assessment and prioritisation of streets for inclusion in the annual resurfacing programme using a range of factors.

You may be aware there has been severe cuts to the funding allocated to my Department for a number of years. I have been raising the need for additional investment with the Minister for Finance, in order to better maintain our roads, including street lighting and deal with other growing pressures facing my Department.

Of the £2.2m capital funding allocated to the Belfast North Section Office for resurfacing work in the financial year 2019/20, I can confirm that £900k was spent in West Belfast. Major works in West Belfast over the last few years include resurfacing of Divis Street, Falls Road, Andersonstown Road, and Stewartstown Road prior to the introduction of Belfast Rapid Transit.

I welcome the additional £3m allocation made to my Department after making representations to the Finance Minister and I am keen to allocate all of that available funding, after fully funding the winter gritting services up to 31 March, to fix broken Street Lights and improve road surfaces by filling potholes across the North.

In common with other parts of the public service we continue to face severe budget challenges which means we have to strike a balance between maintaining existing infrastructure in water and sewerage, the road network and public transport, and investing in new infrastructure. The extent of future improvement programmes among other pressures in my Department, will be determined by the forthcoming budget factoring in of course the full impact of the current Covid 19 crisis.

Mr Wells asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AWQ 2100/17-22, whether she has plans to amend the Motor Vehicle Testing Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2003 to include checking for the presence of bull bars.
(AQW 2966/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Frontal protection systems (including bull bars) are not listed as a testable item under the Motor Vehicle Testing Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2003 or the Goods Vehicles (Testing) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2003. However, during the annual roadworthiness inspection tests, DVA carry out a general safety inspection on parts of a vehicle, including a bull bar if fitted, to ensure they are not likely to cause a danger on the roads. I have therefore no plans at present to amend these Regulations to include checking for the presence of bull bars.

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister for Infrastructure why there has been a delay in legalising the taxi parking bay in Lancasterian Street, Carrickfergus.

(AQW 3129/17-22)

Ms Mallon: The provision of Taxi Stands requires the making of a Statutory Rule which is subject to a legislative process including a consultation period. The statutory consultation period in respect of this proposed taxi stand has ended and as part of the legislative process I have recently considered the draft Statutory Rule and an SL1 has been sent to the Committee for Infrastructure for consideration. After the Committee has considered the SL1 the Order may be made enabling the required works to implement the Taxi Stand on the ground, however due to the Covid-19 situation it is not possible at present to give a timeline for completion of this matter.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure how the new vehicle lifts will be distributed across MOT centres.
(AQW 3203/17-22)

Ms Mallon: The Member will be aware of the decision I took to close MOT centres to protect DVA staff and customers from the spread of the coronavirus. The current COVID-19 situation will lead to delays in the delivery and deployment of the 52 newly purchased lifts and therefore at this stage the plan cannot be finalised.

Mr Buckley asked the Minister for Infrastructure to provide a breakdown of the maintenance allocation for each section office within the Southern Division.

(AQW 3210/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Southern Division has five section offices which deliver a number of roads related services. As funding allocations are made at Divisional rather than section office level, details of maintenance allocations for each individual section office are not available.

Allocations to the four DfI Roads Divisions are made on the basis of need, using a range of weighted indicators tailored to each maintenance activity. The Divisions also use these indicators when apportioning budget across District Council areas to ensure, as far as possible, an equitable distribution of funds across Northern Ireland.

Ms Anderson asked the Minister for Infrastructure (i) when the findings of the Culmore study, to assess sewerage and wastewater capacity in Derry, will be published; and (ii) what steps she will take to ensure sewerage and wastewater capacity issues do not put building planning applications in Derry on hold.

(AQW 3493/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Northern Ireland Water is currently progressing a Drainage Area Plan (DAP) for the Derry drainage area (i.e. the Culmore study). The current forecast completion date for the DAP is summer/autumn 2021.

NI Water's role in the planning process is that of a Statutory Consultee. It has been engaging with Derry City and Strabane District Council on wastewater system capacity issues over several years

Over the last 2 years, substantial survey/investigative work has been undertaken throughout Derry to inform the DAP process (including flow survey, network asset surveys and CCTV investigations). At this point, NI Water will have a more detailed understanding of the capacity issues and as such be better positioned to provide outline solutions.

NI Water has advised me that it has included 8 projects for the Derry area in its business plan for the period 2021-2027, known as Price Control 21. These 8 projects would cost an estimated £31.25 Million. However, this investment will only happen if all of the funding requested for Price Control 21 is funded. The business case for Price Control 21 is currently being reviewed by the Utility Regulator who will work with NI Water and the Northern Ireland Environment Agency to prioritise all of the projects in the business case.

As Minister, I aim to ensure that my Department will do all it can to assist in tackling these capacity issues. However, my budget is subject to a number of competing priorities. I have, therefore, engaged with the Finance Minister to highlight the critical need to secure the funding that I require to ensure sewerage and wastewater capacity issues do not put building planning applications in Derry and across the north on hold.

Mr McCann asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she will review the criteria used when determining whether to fill potholes, as many potholes in residential areas go unrepaired due to the current intervention level being high.

Ms Mallon: For a number of years there have been considerable pressures on my Department's Resource budget which is used to deliver day-to-day maintenance activities including repair of potholes. As a result, my Department has had to reduce its routine road maintenance activities to a limited service which prioritises delivery of essential services for maintaining public safety and protecting the transport network. In relation to repair of potholes budget cuts imposed on my Department means that only the highest priority defects across the network can be repaired.

I acknowledge the impact this limited service has had on road users but the restoration of road maintenance activities to previously established levels ultimately depends on the available budget. I have been raising the need for additional investment with the Minister for Finance in order to allow better maintenance of our roads and deal with other growing pressures facing my Department.

Ms Sheerin asked the Minister for Infrastructure, in regard of the volume of traffic on the road, whether she will consider the upgrade of the C554 road, between Sixtowns and Omagh, from a C road to a B road.

(AQW 3550/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Road classification dates back to pre-Local Government Reorganisation in 1973 and its use today is limited to route identification. Road classifications are intended to reflect the importance of each road within the overall road network and to assist road users with knowledge of the network to navigate across the network.

Classification of roads is not predicated on traffic volumes, nor indeed does it influence traffic management measures or maintenance and winter service regimes, all of which are influenced by traffic volumes rather than road classification.

Given this position my Department has no current plans to upgrade the C554 between Sixtowns and Omagh, however, I have asked my officials to keep this under review.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Infrastructure for an update on the post-project review of the Alfred Street cycle lane, commenced in 2018.

(AQW 3589/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I understand that you met with officials from my Department on 26th October 2018 to discuss a number of concerns that you had about the operation of the Alfred Street / Upper Arthur Street segregated cycle lane. Subsequent to that meeting the Department undertook to do a review of the operation of the cycle lane.

This review has taken longer to complete than was initially expected as some information was not available until recently. It should not have taken this long and I am keen to see this work finalised so that we can learn any lessons from it as I move to further develop a sustainable transport network across the North.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether her Department would consider measures, such as traffic lights or a roundabout, to alleviate congestion of vehicles on Lough Road at the junction with Dublin Road, Antrim.

Ms Mallon: My Department is aware of reports of congestion at this junction and in response has undertaken traffic surveys and monitoring during peak times to determine the extent of any traffic delays.

These have shown that, whilst traffic emerging from the junction does experience delays when events are being held at the Antrim Forum or Massereene Golf Club, there are no significant delays during normal peak times. Therefore as traffic is generally moving satisfactorily at this location, there are currently no plans to change the junction layout at this time.

My officials will continue to monitor the junction to determine if any further changes are required when the newly opened Lough Shore Gateway Centre is fully operational.

Mr Blair asked the Minister for Infrastructure for her assessment of adding Translink to the list of organisations that are accountable to the Rural Needs Act.

(AQW 3622/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Whilst Translink is not included in the schedule to the Rural Needs Act (NI) 2016, the Department wrote to Translink on 28 February 2018, highlighting good practice to pay 'due regard' to rural needs and further recommended that it commits to rural proofing practices in future.

All Translink's rural services are provided under contract to the Department for Infrastructure. As a Government Department, DfI is subject to the Rural Needs Act and takes regard to rural needs when developing, adopting, implementing or revising policies, strategies and plans, and when designing and delivering public services, including the public transport services that the Public Service Contract between DfI and Translink define. Given the Public Service Agreement signed by the Department and Translink, any changes to the level of the public transport network coverage would have to be approved by the Department and therefore be given consideration under the Act.

Mr Muir asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether there are plans to (i) improve enforcement measures to prevent pavement parking; or (ii) make it illegal, as it is in England.

Ms Mallon: My Department is committed to increasing the level of sustainable travel in Northern Ireland and I am aware that cars parked inconsiderately on footways present real challenges for footway users. Because of this, my Department already carries out enforcement action against cars parked on footways where there are parking restrictions on the adjacent carriageway. PSNI officers can and do also take enforcement action against cars found to be obstructing footways. Our road safety and sustainable travel social media channels also regularly post reminders of the relevant Highway Code rule on footway parking.

I am, however, keen to explore what further can be done. I will monitor closely the current consultation exercise in England and consider any learning points.

Ms Anderson asked the Minister for Infrastructure, in order to address any potential DfI Roads concerns, whether representatives from DfI Roads will meet with stakeholders involved in the Sean Dolan's scheme in Derry as soon as possible.

(AQW 3635/17-22)

Ms Mallon: The Department has recently been consulted by the planning authority, Derry City & Strabane District Council, regarding an application associated with the Sean Dolan's scheme. After my officials have had an opportunity to review and respond to the Council on this latest submission, they would be happy to meet with the applicant. However, in line with established protocol, it is important that such meeting requests are submitted through the planning authority.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure what action she is taking to mitigate the adverse effects COVID-19 may have on the freight industry.

Ms Mallon: I have been in contact with freight industry representatives and understand their concerns regarding the developing COVID-19 situation.

I recognise the importance of undertaking contingency planning to deal with the impact on the various supply chains and I have already announced a number of measures to help the freight industry and ensure the continuing flow of goods into and out of Northern Ireland. These include a temporary relaxation on drivers' hours for all Goods Vehicle Drivers, a suspension of all MOT tests for commercial vehicles including HGVs, Trailers and buses and the lifting of planning restrictions on delivery times to retailers.

Officials and I continue to work closely with the Freight industry and we are working together to address any emerging issues including difficulties for drivers in completing their driver CPC hours of training, accessing medicals to renew their driving licences, having digital tachograph cards that are lost/damaged/due to expire and accessing the temporary relaxation of the daily rest requirement from 11 hrs to 9 hours on ferry crossings.

I will continue to monitor the situation and do all I can to help those most impacted in the freight industry whilst recognising that it is important that I get the balance right and offer solutions that do not jeopardise road safety.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she plans to introduce deep cleaning for (i) Glider buses; (ii) Metro buses; (iii) their stops; and (iv) train stations to help address the spread of COVID-19.

Ms Mallon: I am acutely aware of the concerns that many communities and people have regarding the COVID-19 virus and how best to tackle the outbreak. My Department is working with all Departments, agencies, operators and the Public Health Agency to respond to and plan for this evolving situation. No effort will be spared in our work to tackle the outbreak.

From Monday 30 March, Translink Bus and Rail Services will operate a further reduced frequency timetable. These measures are being implemented following the new NI Executive advice issued during the week to stay at home. I would reiterate the advice that we all must avoid non-essential travel and continue to practise social distancing in the fight against COVID-19. It is advice we must all follow.

The timetable changes will ensure continued public transport coverage across Northern Ireland, so that our essential workers can continue to travel at peak times. Translink will also have additional buses and relief trains on standby for heavier used services to facilitate and accommodate social distancing.

My Department has received advice on the coronavirus epidemic from the Chief Medical Officer that has been shared with Translink which has implemented a range of measures in the light of that advice. They include enhanced weekly cleaning of buses and enhanced twice-weekly cleaning of trains. That is in addition to the regular daily cleaning that is undertaken on the public transport fleet. Stations are being cleaned more frequently, and, when cleaners are on site, an enhanced cleaning of stations will take place. Translink is working closely with its supply chain to ensure continuity of supply of cleaning materials. Throughout all of this, I would underline the Public Health Agency's advice that personal hygiene is the appropriate method to protect all of us. As part of that, Translink provides guidance on COVID-19 on its website to keep customers updated on the latest developments. The safety of the public and its staff will remain Translink's priority and Translink continues to review its guidance in the light of advice from the Public Health Agency.

Mr Chambers asked the Minister for Infrastructure to detail the total value of recent projects undertaken by her Department to utilise unspent 2019/20 budget money.

Ms Mallon: My Department does not routinely have unspent budget, not least, due to year on year cuts to funding as a result of government austerity.

In the most recent Monitoring Round, January 2020, I was allocated £1.8m in Capital to make safe dangerous street lighting columns which I allocated in full to improve public safety.

I also received £1m Resource funding in the first stage of January Monitoring, with a further £3m in the Treasury additions to the NI Block. I directed this funding to street lighting outage repairs, winter gritting services and routine maintenance of the road network, which includes repairing potholes which are important to all our citizens.

My Department is not forecasting any unspent funding in 2019/20.

Mr McCann asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she plans to review the (i) powers; and (ii) service provided by utility companies and their impact on communities.

(AQW 3721/17-22)

Ms Mallon: As Minister for Infrastructure I am responsible for overall policy and legislation in relation to the water and sewerage provided by NI Water. Other utilities fall within the responsibilities of the Minister for the Economy.

The actual delivery of water and sewerage services is the responsibility of the Company and is subject to regulatory oversight by the NI Authority for Utility Regulation and environmental regulators. If you have specific concerns about utility service provision I would encourage you to contact the Regulator.

In 2018/19, NI Water achieved its best ever performance for the quality of drinking water and the environmental compliance for used water. I will keep NI Water's powers under review to ensure that the company can meet new challenges, such as climate change and the current Covid 19 crisis as we work together to keep communities across the North safe.

Every day, NI Water staff are working tirelessly to make sure that supply interruptions are avoided or minimised. At this time it is particularly important when we all need to be washing our hands regularly. In doing so it is playing a major role in helping to support our communities by delivering essential services every day.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Infrastructure how many staff are employed by Waterways Ireland in (i) Northern Ireland; and (ii) the Republic of Ireland.

Ms Mallon: Waterways Ireland currently employs 81 staff in Northern Ireland with a further 2 employed through an employment agency and 238 staff in the Republic of Ireland.

Mr McCann asked the Minister for Infrastructure for her assessment of the criteria her Department uses when determining when streets and footpaths are repaired.

(AQW 3787/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Article 8 of the Roads (Northern Ireland) Order 1993 places a duty on my Department to maintain all public roads in reasonable condition. This duty is fulfilled by complying with a set of Maintenance Standards which adopt a risk based approach that seeks to ensure a proportionate allocation of resources when the repair of roads and footpaths is being considered.

Our current maintenance standards, under the severe funding constraints imposed on my Department, specify a range of response times for the repair of road defects which depend on factors such as their severity and the volume of traffic on the road. Response times range from one calendar day for the most serious defects, to periods of five working days and four weeks for less serious defects with the least serious defects having to be repaired within the next work programme for that route. Similarly inspection and repair of footpath defects are prioritised based on usage and this seeks to ensure that higher risk defects, such as those identified in busier town and city centres, are quickly addressed.

When it comes to maintaining our roads, street lighting and other essential infrastructure, I would like to be able to do more and I have been raising the need for additional investment to do so with the Minister for Finance in budget discussions as I recognise how important it is to citizens and communities across the North.

Mr McCann asked the Minister for Infrastructure how much is currently paid to private contractors to carry out grass cutting and weed removal.

(AQW 3788/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My Department records expenditure on Environmental Maintenance, which includes grass cutting, weed control and tree related (urban and rural) maintenance.

Expenditure on Environmental Maintenance, across the north, paid to private contractors during 2019/20 up to February 2020 was £1.9m.

Mr McCann asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether contracts to the private sector for the cutting and removal of grass and weeds are a single contract, or broke down into smaller contracts.

(AQW 3790/17-22)

Ms Mallon: There are currently nine contracts in operation for environmental maintenance across the public road network. Within each contract, the services include maintaining grass areas; controlling weed growth; and cleaning, jetting and inspection of roadside drainage systems.

Ms Anderson asked the Minister for Infrastructure, if there is a partial or full COVID-19 lockdown, and with specific regard for workers or carers who need access to their vehicle, (i) whether MOT testing will go ahead as scheduled; and (ii) if not, whether she has plans to temporarily defer upcoming MOT dates.

Ms Mallon: On 24 March I took the decision to close all MOT test centres and suspend all MOT tests for three months, until 22 June 2020. I took this decision because my top priority is the safety of customers and staff and to limit the spread of COVID 19. Therefore, customers, including the owners of four year old cars, who have booked an MOT within the next 3 months do not need to present for a test and a Temporary Exemption Certificate (TEC) will be issued. My officials are urgently working on a solution to resolve this issue for taxis as PSV tests are subject to different legislation and regulations. Customers should continue to book their tests when they are due so that a TEC can be issued.

Ms Anderson asked the Minister for Infrastructure (i) what measures she is putting in place to help facilitate the practice of social distancing on public transport to protect drivers and customers from COVID-19; and (ii) whether she will issue any urgent guidance on COVID-19 for private taxi operators and customers.

Ms Mallon: I am acutely aware of the concerns that many communities and people have regarding the COVID-19 virus and how best to tackle the outbreak. My Department is working with all Departments, agencies, operators and the Public Health Agency to respond to and plan for this evolving situation. No effort will be spared in our work to tackle the outbreak and I have outlined the work undertaken on public transport and taxis below.

- (i) In response to the COVID-19 pandemic I took the decision on 30th March 2020 to further reduce the public transport network. These measures are being implemented following the NI Executive advice to stay at home and in line with the significant reductions in public transport numbers that we are seeing as the public follow that advice. This has allowed us to reduce the network to primarily protect citizens and keep people safe. My department also continues to work to protect our public services and provide resilience in responding to COVID 19. The changes to the timetables provide resilience in responding to COVID 19 and ensure we can continue to provide public transport coverage across the North of Ireland for essential workers at peak times. In introducing those changes a key priority has been to maintain the ability of passengers to follow social distancing guidance on public transport. Translink continue to monitor demand on individual services. Drivers have been instructed to limit passenger numbers to enable social distancing, with additional vehicles brought on should demand require it. Translink has also continued to liaise with the Public Health Agency on this matter. PHA has produced new posters on social distancing and these are being distributed throughout all vehicles and stations.
- (ii) I have been engaging with the taxi industry and have also issued an open letter to set out the work that I am doing in my capacity as Infrastructure Minister and also the work I am doing with other Ministers across our Government. My officials are working hard to put new legislation in place so that within coming days I can grant an extension to the PSV testing period. My officials are working hard to find solutions to licensing and other regulation related challenges arising from this crisis.

While my responsibility for taxis only extends to the regulation of the industry, I am very aware of the increasing financial hardships this crisis is creating. I pushed hard with Executive colleagues to secure the self-employed financial package announced by the British Government last week. This package has weaknesses, not least the delay until June for payment, which as an Executive we are pushing the British Government to address. With Executive colleagues, I will continue to press for more assistance.

I also know that social distancing is a real worry and a challenge for those taxi drivers continuing to provide a service to the public. The Department for Economy is the Department responsible for issuing this guidance. I have been engaging with the Minister for Economy and am assured that guidance on social distancing, to keep taxi drivers and their customers safe, is being prepared as quickly as possible.

With the numbers of taxi journeys greatly reducing, there is also now a real opportunity to explore how taxi drivers can play their part in the emergency response to this crisis. To look at, for example, opportunities for delivering food and vital supplies or to get patients to essential appointments. To help progress this, I have raised this with Executive colleagues to examine how taxis can be re-purposed to support the emergency efforts. I am pleased to tell you that my officials are already working together with the Department for Communities and, through them, local government to explore how this can be done. The Department for Communities will lead on this.

Ms Anderson asked the Minister for Infrastructure (i) whether she has engaged with the British Government in order to provide emergency transport for citizens from across the island of Ireland whose flights have been cancelled due to COVID-19 in Spain; and (ii) has she engaged with her counterparts in Dublin to co-ordinate an all-Ireland response.

Ms Mallon: Responsibility for aviation matters in Northern Ireland remains a reserved function of the United Kingdom (UK) Department for Transport (DfT). I have not therefore been directly engaged with either the British Government or my counterparts in Dublin regarding this matter.

However I understand that both Jet2 and EasyJet recently operated a number of additional flights from Spain to the Belfast International Airport, and that Aer Lingus and Ryanair operated additional flights from Spain to the Republic of Ireland as well. In addition the UK Foreign and Commonwealth Office and The Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade in Ireland have been providing on-line advice for travellers in Spain returning home.

Department of Justice

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) how many staff are employed within her Department's information service; (ii) of these, how many are classed as press officers; and (iii) the annual cost of this service.
(AQW 3604/17-22)

Mrs Long (The Minister of Justice): There are a total of 6 staff, all of which are press officers, seconded from Executive Information Service in my department. The staffing costs are estimated at £335,598 annually.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice what plans she has to mark the centenary of the formation of the Ulster Special Constabulary.
(AQW 3679/17-22)

Mrs Long: My Department has no plans to mark the centenary of the formation of the Ulster Special Constabulary.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Justice to detail when her Department last issued formal guidance to medical practitioners involved in assessing applications and appeals for payments under the PSNI injury on duty schemes.
(AQW 3749/17-22)

Mrs Long: The Northern Ireland Policing Board appoints Selected Medical Practitioners who consider applications made under the Scheme, whilst my Department appoints Medical Referees for the purposes of medical appeals.

Joint formal guidance by the Department of Justice and the Northern Ireland Policing Board was last reviewed in September 2016 and can be viewed on the Department's website.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Justice to detail what contribution her Department is making to address the recorded decrease in crime outcomes for older people.
(AQW 3826/17-22)

Mrs Long: Addressing the recorded decrease in crime outcomes for older people is an operational matter for PSNI. However speeding up justice and ensuring support for victims through the justice system, which assists quicker and better outcomes is a matter for my Department.

You will be aware that the Commissioner for Older People for Northern Ireland published his report on Crime and Justice: The Experience of Older People in Northern Ireland (available at <https://www.copni.org/media/1540/206567-online-a4-crime-report-56p.pdf>). This report was discussed at the recent motion on older people's experience of crime and the justice system on 3 March 2020. The report makes a number of recommendations aimed at improving the experience of older people who have been victims of crime, including speeding up justice and improving outcomes.

The Department is currently working on these recommendations, in conjunction with other delivery partners, with an initial draft action plan prepared.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Justice to confirm whether she will seek to roll-out the Support Responder Initiative for older victims of crime in Ards and North Down to other parts of Northern Ireland, including North Antrim.

(AQW 3827/17-22)

Mrs Long: Addressing the fear of crime, particularly in older people who are vulnerable, is a key area of work for my Department. Whilst figures show that older people are statistically less likely to be the victim of crime, they also show that older people have the highest level of fear of crime.

In recognising the impact that crime can have on an older victim, my Department worked with the Commissioner for Older People, the PSNI and St John Ambulance to develop a pilot for a Support Responder Service for older victims of crime.

This service launched in December 2018 in two Council areas (Ards & North Down and Lisburn & Castlereagh), providing immediate practical and emotional support to older people if they become victims of crime. It is designed to reduce the immediate impact of crime on an older person. The service was reviewed in December 2019 and it was noted that uptake was limited due mainly to immediate support being provided by family and/or friends.

The service continues to operate in the two council areas and consideration is being given to extending the service to at least one other council area at this time.

Partners remain open to an extension of the scheme. However further rollout into other Council areas will be dependent on demand as assessed by PSNI and St John Ambulance being in a position to recruit and train volunteers for the service.

Department for the Economy

Mr G Kelly asked the Minister for the Economy, in light of our successful peace process, how she intends to fulfil local tourism potential.

(AQO 55/17-22)

Mrs Dodds (The Minister for the Economy): Political stability over the past two decades and the normalisation of society in Northern Ireland over that period, has allowed us to very successfully market Northern Ireland as an attractive tourism destination.

As the member will be aware, tourism has now become a very important sector within the local economy, with tourists now spending one billion pounds annually across Northern Ireland and employing almost sixty five thousand people.

Since 2000, we have seen visitor numbers from Great Britain & overseas rise from just over one million to two million two hundred and eighteen thousand, and spend from two hundred and thirty five million pounds to five hundred and sixty one million pounds.

The sixty five thousand jobs supported represents eight point seven percent of employee jobs in Northern Ireland showing that the sector can deliver meaningful benefit to all parts of Northern Ireland as well as employing people from all sections of society.

Tourism Northern Ireland and Tourism Ireland jointly launched a new tourism brand Northern Ireland - Embrace a Giant Spirit at the World Travel Market in London last November. This was an important development and will help us to continue to promote Northern Ireland as a must see destination.

My officials are currently working to bring forward a draft Tourism Strategy for public consultation later this year, which will set out how we intend to continue on a journey of sustainable tourism growth over the next decade.

Mr Allen asked the Minister for the Economy whether she plans to develop a manufacturing strategy.

Mrs Dodds: Manufacturing comprises a wide and diverse range of industries and, despite a number of setbacks and challenges, remains at the very heart of business and industry in Northern Ireland. It contributes to 11.2% of all jobs and accounts for 50.8% of our external sales.

I do not have any plans to develop a dedicated manufacturing strategy. However the Northern Ireland Economic Strategy will set a clear direction to ensure the appropriate support and policy instruments are in place, in terms of skills, innovation and research and development that will collectively continue to assist growth in manufacturing and the wider economy.

My Department and Invest NI will also continue to provide support for manufacturing. Over the past five years, Invest NI has offered £294 million of support to support the manufacturing sector in NI.

I recognise that our exit from the EU may present challenges for manufacturing. My focus will be on implementation of the NI Protocol to ensure our access to, and place within, the UK internal market.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for the Economy how she proposes to counter the impact of a regulatory and customs border in the Irish Sea.

(AQO 47/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: The UK Government has promised that there will be unfettered access for our businesses to the whole of the UK internal market.

I intend to hold them to that promise.

Mr Stalford asked the Minister for the Economy to outline the number of small savers yet to receive payment from the Scheme of Arrangement, following the collapse of the Presbyterian Mutual Society.

(AQO 49/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: No saver who had shares and / or a loan in the Presbyterian Mutual Society has yet to receive a payment from the Scheme of Arrangement.

Savers who invested less than £20,000 in total received a payment of 100% of their shares and / or 85% of their loans.

Savers who invested more than £20,000 in total received a payment between 77% and 85% of the value of their holdings before deducting an individually agreed voluntary deferral.

Payments were made in August 2011.

Mr O'Toole asked the Minister for the Economy whether her Department will commission a study on the causes and long-term economic effects of the outward migration of students from Northern Ireland.

(AQO 48/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: The outward migration of students is an ongoing trend, with a quarter of Northern Ireland students studying elsewhere in the UK and the Republic of Ireland every year. There are many causes of this, with some students being 'determined leavers' and some being 'reluctant' leavers. This outward flow of students is not a recent phenomenon and has been ongoing for a number of decades.

My Department continues to assess the outward migration of students annually, however, I am keen to commission a more in-depth study into this matter.

In addition, my Department is currently working with the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development to develop evidence and recommendations on addressing Northern Ireland's skills challenges. This will inform a new Skills Strategy for Northern Ireland, to be launched at the end of this year. Evidence gathered to date has highlighted that addressing current and anticipated skills imbalances in Northern Ireland's labour market is a key priority for our economy.

As part of this work, the OECD has highlighted an opportunity to consider how inward and outward labour mobility impacts our economy, and what measures can be put in place to ensure our approach actively supports economic development.

Mr McGrath asked the Minister for the Economy what actions her Department is taking to secure regional air connectivity.
(AQO 52/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Regional air connectivity is essential to the growth of the Northern Ireland economy. My Department works with airlines and airports in a number of ways.

The Department currently provides financial support to airlines in the form of Co-operative and Destination Marketing through the All-Ireland body Tourism Ireland (TI). Destination marketing involves marketing Northern Ireland/Ireland in key external markets as a means of driving inbound tourism. Co-operative marketing is when TIL works directly with an airline to market that airline's route into NI.

I have written to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Secretary of State for Business, Energy and Industrial Strategy and the Secretary of State for Transport asking to meet to discuss the recently announced review of regional air connectivity and provide input. My officials are also currently making arrangements to discuss the review with colleagues in the two Departments.

We have, in partnership with the Department for Transport, confirmed funding for the City of Derry airport to London Southend Public Service Obligation flight until 31 March 2021.

My Department is always willing to consider any requests for support from airports/airlines that deliver value for money and are compliant with EU State Aid regulations.

Mr K Buchanan asked the Minister for the Economy to detail what progress has been made to improve the provision of broadband in rural areas.

(AQO 54/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: Since 2007, over £77m of public investment has been channelled into broadband initiatives by my Department and its predecessor Departments, to encourage private sector upgrade to broadband networks, primarily in rural areas and where the market alone would not invest.

In line with the draft Programme for Government 2016 - 2021, my Department has developed Project Stratum to utilise the £150m additional broadband funding from the Confidence and Supply Agreement, together with a further £15m contribution from the Department of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, to build on previous achievements and improve internet connectivity for those premises currently unable to access broadband speeds of 30 Megabits per second or greater, primarily across rural areas of Northern Ireland.

Project Stratum is at mid-procurement stage, with contract award expected in mid-2020. Through this procurement process, my Department will seek to maximise broadband coverage across the intervention area through the utilisation of the total £165m public funding, along with an anticipated industry contribution.

On 16 December 2019, my Department published its response to the Open Market Review EU State aid public consultation. This confirmed a target intervention area of some 97,000 premises.

However, upon receipt of updated supplier data and following a nationwide data refresh by Openreach this month, the number of premises requiring intervention will be reduced. The revised number will be shared as soon as it is available.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Mr Dunne asked the Assembly Commission why there is evidence of water leakage from the roof in Parliament Buildings, given the roof replacement project in 2014.

(AQW 3715/17-22)

Mr K Buchanan (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): It is not unusual in large construction projects, particularly those involving repair and refurbishment work, for issues to arise in subsequent years relating to the works that were carried out. Although the roof project was successfully completed in 2014 to provide a waterproof solution to a problem that had plagued Parliament Buildings for many years, there were and continue to be issues to be resolved under the terms of the contract.

One such issue, water ingress on the 3rd floor South corridor, first came to light shortly after the handover of the roof project and was addressed at that time, as a defect, by the contractor. Recently, however, a similar problem came to light in the same vicinity, causing water damage to the corridor area on the 3rd floor. The contractor and the design team responsible for the roof project have been instructed to address this and investigative work has begun to determine the source and how this will be repaired.

Once the cause has been identified, the problem will be addressed as a latent defect under the terms of the contract and the damaged areas made good at no cost to the Assembly Commission.

Another issue currently being investigated is a sporadic water leak in the vicinity of the North lift lobby on the fourth floor. This problem arose after the roof project was completed and initial investigations suggest that it relates to the structure of the lift as opposed to an issue that was included in the remit of the project. Building Services Branch is considering how best to address this issue.

Mr Carroll asked the Assembly Commission whether agency staff employed in Parliament Buildings can avail of measures similar to agency workers in the Civil Service in relation to job protection throughout the COVID-19 pandemic.

(AQW 3875/17-22)

Mr O'Dowd (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The Assembly Commission has replicated the measures introduced in the Civil Service in respect of agency workers. These include support for agency workers if they become ill or are required to self-isolate, support for agency workers who require time off work to make alternative childcare arrangements and support for the continuation of salary payments if alternative working arrangements cannot be found by either the Assembly Commission or by the recruitment agency.

In line with the Civil Service, these measures will remain under review as the position with COVID-19 develops.

Mr Hilditch asked the Assembly Commission what action it is taking to address COVID-19.

(AQO 427/17-22)

Mr K Buchanan (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): Since 10 March 2020, a COVID-19 Response Group has been in operation. At its inception, the purpose of the Group was to:

- Monitor advice provided by the PHA and NHS in relation to COVID-19;
- Provide Parliament Buildings users with information and advice issued by the PHA and NHS;
- Ensure that practicable actions recommended by the PHA and NHS in relation to workplaces and public buildings are implemented;

- Ensure that the Assembly Commission has planned for and is ready to respond to future developments; and
- Maintain regular contact with other legislatures to share best practice and learning.

In addition, the Speaker has met with officials to review the Assembly Commission's actions by way of response. The Assembly Commission has also met to review the emerging situation.

In terms of specific actions, the Assembly Commission has maintained a strict policy of adhering to Public Health Authority and Government guidance on many of the aspects of dealing with COVID-19 that have now become an established part of daily life such as regular hand-washing and social distancing.

As this is a fast-moving and rapidly evolving situation, the Group has met every other day since the first meeting on 10 March. Updates are provided to all users of Parliament Buildings after each meeting. These updates have included advice on the various services within Parliament Buildings that have been curtailed at this time including the closure of the building to the public, necessary changes to catering arrangements and the widespread use of electronic communications to limit face-to-face interactions for various services. The Group has arranged for more specific advice to be provided to Members on a range of topics including support for Members' staff and support for facilitating home working for Members' staff.

The Assembly Commission has also taken its legal responsibilities as an employer seriously. The necessary steps have been taken to ensure that those staff who have a serious underlying medical condition (as advised by official guidance) are no longer working in Parliament Buildings and a comprehensive programme of home working arrangements has been put in place. Naturally, there remains a cadre of staff whose presence is required in the building but that number of staff will be kept to the minimum that is absolutely necessary to support Assembly business.

While not a matter for the Assembly Commission, it is however worth noting that there has also been considerable liaison with the Executive, the Speaker has made practical arrangements for the conduct of plenary business and Committee Chairs have met to review the need for Committee meetings to take place.

The Assembly Commission will continue to assess the range of services required in Parliament Building, in close liaison with Executive colleagues and with its staff to seek to ensure that there is a safe working environment in Parliament Buildings.

Mr McGrath asked the Assembly Commission what plans it has to make the Assembly chamber more accessible for people with disabilities.

(AQO 431/17-22)

Mr Butler (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The Assembly Commission is very aware of the need to ensure that the Assembly Chamber is accessible for people with disabilities and a number of alterations and improvements have been carried out for that purpose in recent years.

In addition, temporary measures have been put in place specifically to improve access for wheelchair users. The reduction in the number of Members provides the opportunity to design a permanent solution for better access and the Speaker has indicated to parties that this is a priority in any future work in the Chamber.

Therefore, the Assembly Commission will continue to give consideration to opportunities to improve the facilities in the Chamber for people with disabilities and will consult with Members when any workable proposals have been developed.

Mr Harvey asked the Assembly Commission what steps are being taken to mitigate the threat of interruption to Assembly business as a result of COVID-19.

(AQO 433/17-22)

Mr K Buchanan (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): Since 10 March 2020, a COVID-19 Response Group has been in operation. At its inception, the purpose of the Group was to:

- Monitor advice provided by the PHA and NHS in relation to COVID-19;
- Provide Parliament Buildings users with information and advice issued by the PHA and NHS;
- Ensure that practicable actions recommended by the PHA and NHS in relation to workplaces and public buildings are implemented;
- Ensure that the Assembly Commission has planned for and is ready to respond to future developments; and
- Maintain regular contact with other legislatures to share best practice and learning.

In addition, the Speaker has met with officials to review the Assembly Commission's actions by way of response. The Assembly Commission has also met to review the emerging situation.

In terms of specific actions, the Assembly Commission has maintained a strict policy of adhering to Public Health Authority and Government guidance on many of the aspects of dealing with COVID-19 that have now become an established part of daily life such as regular hand-washing and social distancing.

As this is a fast-moving and rapidly evolving situation, the Group has met every other day since the first meeting on 10 March. Updates are provided to all users of Parliament Buildings after each meeting. These updates have included advice on the various services within Parliament Buildings that have been curtailed at this time including the closure of the building to the public, necessary changes to catering arrangements and the widespread use of electronic communications to limit face-to-face interactions for various services. The Group has arranged for more specific advice to be provided to Members on a range of topics including support for Members' staff and support for facilitating home working for Members' staff.

The Assembly Commission has also taken its legal responsibilities as an employer seriously. The necessary steps have been taken to ensure that those staff who have a serious underlying medical condition (as advised by official guidance) are no longer working in Parliament Buildings and a comprehensive programme of home working arrangements has been put in place. Naturally, there remains a cadre of staff whose presence is required in the building but that number of staff will be kept to the minimum that is absolutely necessary to support Assembly business.

While not a matter for the Assembly Commission, it is however worth noting that there has also been considerable liaison with the Executive, the Speaker has made practical arrangements for the conduct of plenary business and Committee Chairs have met to review the need for Committee meetings to take place.

The Assembly Commission will continue to assess the range of services required in Parliament Building, in close liaison with Executive colleagues and with its staff to seek to ensure that there is a safe working environment in Parliament Buildings.

Written Answers

The Executive Office

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they will be in Northern Ireland for the publication of the RHI Inquiry report.

(AQW 1979/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): Prior to the release of the publication date, we had accepted an invitation to an event overseas but due to the situation with COVID-19 we decided not to travel at that time.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when they intend to publish a successive child poverty strategy, as committed to in New Decade, New Approach.

(AQW 3154/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: In line with New Decade, New Approach, I will be publishing a timescale for the delivery a range of social strategies, including anti-poverty in the coming weeks. The principles and practice of citizen and community engagement, co-design and co-production will be a key part of the development and delivery of these strategies.

It is my intention that the co-design group for the anti-poverty strategy will consider and make recommendations to me on the requirement for a stand-alone child poverty strategy or alternatively for the development of a single anti-poverty strategy that considers and make recommendations for all sections of the community, including children.

Mr Easton asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether the Irish Language Commissioner will be fully accountable to them.

(AQW 3261/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: The Northern Ireland Act 1998 (Amendment No.2) Bill, as published, alongside the New Decade New Approach Agreement provides for the appointment of the Irish Language Commissioner by the First Minister and deputy First Minister acting jointly (the Ministers).

The Bill further provides for the Commissioner to be a corporation sole with powers to do whatever is appropriate for the exercise of the functions of the office. In exercising these functions the Bill provides for Ministers to give guidance in respect of proposed best practice standards for the use of the Irish language by a public authority and for Ministers approval of those standards. There is also power for Ministers to give directions as to the exercise of the Commissioner's functions.

The Commissioner must also provide to the Department annually a report on the carrying out of its functions and a statement of financial accounts.

Mrs D Kelly asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the Syrian Vulnerable Persons Relocation Scheme.

(AQO 377/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: To date 1,815 refugees have been resettled here under the Vulnerable Persons Relocation Scheme. This has required a high degree of collaboration from departments, the community and voluntary sector and the refugees themselves to ensure the families are supported to build a new life, realise their full potential and be active members of our communities. Much has been achieved to date.

Given the current Covid-19 pandemic, we have agreed to postpone the arrival of the last group under the current scheme due to arrive in April in order to minimise the risks to staff, volunteers and the refugees themselves.

The current scheme, which was due to come to an end in March 2020, has been consolidated into a new Global Resettlement Scheme as announced by the Home Secretary on 17 June 2019. We agreed to continue to receive refugees under the new scheme for a year initially, principally to allow an evaluation of the scheme to take place here.

We will continue to liaise with the Home Office on future arrivals as the situation around Covid-19 develops.

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the level of input the Executive Office has had to the Joint Ministerial Committee (EU Negotiations).

(AQO 378/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: We attended the most recent Joint Ministerial Committee (EU Negotiations) meeting, held on 28 January in Cardiff.

The meeting focused on the role of the devolved administrations in the negotiations on the future relationship between the UK and EU.

We emphasised the importance of meaningful engagement and stressed that we have a key role to play in all future negotiations to ensure the protection of our economy and citizens' rights after Brexit.

At that meeting, we successfully secured UKG agreement to a dedicated protocol workstream and relevant commitments in New Decade New Approach.

Department of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs

Dr Archibald asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs (i) to detail the number of trees that are felled every year by the local forestry and timber industry; and (ii) for his assessment of the impact of this on his Department's plans to plant an additional 18 million trees over the next decade.

(AQW 3837/17-22)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs): Each year approximately 1.14 million trees are felled in the Department's forests and a further 0.11 million trees are felled in other woodlands. Both the Department's forests and other woodlands where trees have been felled are required to be replanted or naturally regenerated with trees, except under certain exemptions, in accordance with the Forestry Act (Northern Ireland) 2010.

The new Programme of Afforestation, which I announced in the Assembly, will plant 18 million trees to create 9,000 hectares of new woodland by 2030, which will be in addition to the regeneration or replanting of woodlands following felling.

Department for Communities

Mr Allen asked the Minister for Communities to detail how many (i) individuals were referred for social security benefit sanctions; and (ii) sanctions or adverse decisions were imposed since 2014, broken down by sanction reason.

(AQW 249/17-22)

Ms Hargey (The Minister for Communities):

- (i) In 2015/16 1,538 individuals were referred for consideration of an Employment & Support Allowance sanction. The number of individuals referred for a sanction in respect of other social security benefits from 2014 is not available as this data is not collected.
- (ii) Information on the number of sanctions imposed for each social security benefit, together with the reasons for imposing the sanctions, from 2016/17 through to 2018/19 is provided below where the data is available. This information for 2019/20 is not yet available but will be published in due course. Information for 2014 through to 2016 has been provided in responses to previous Assembly Questions AQW 9384/16-21 and AQW 3792/16-21.

More detailed information on sanctions is available in my Department's Annual Reports on Welfare Supplementary Payments, Discretionary Support, Standards of Advice and Assistance and Sanctions. These Reports have been laid before the Northern Ireland Assembly and are available on the Departmental website at the following link: -

<https://www.communities-ni.gov.uk/publications/welfare-supplementary-payments-discretionary-support-standards-advice-assistance-and-sanctions>

I am currently considering how the Department uses its powers to sanction people. Whilst conditionality is a key part of the existing rules, I want to further explore how we can use that to incentivise rather than punish people, and to make sure we have the necessary safeguards in place to protect the most vulnerable and particularly those with underlying health conditions.

I plan to make further announcements about this in the time ahead.

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister for Communities when the recommendations of Private Rented Sector in Northern Ireland – Proposals for Change report will be implemented.

(AQW 3219/17-22)

Ms Hargey: Housing, and in particular the role and regulation of the Private Rented Sector, is one of my priorities. My Department's consultation exercise on proposals for change to the role and regulation of the private rented sector ended on 3 April 2017. The Department is currently carrying out a comprehensive review of the role and regulation of the private rented sector to ensure the regulatory framework and supporting policy improve standards for the benefit of both tenants and landlords. The areas being reviewed include:

- Supply
- Affordability
- Security of tenure
- Tenancy management
- Property standards
- Dispute resolution

I am currently considering how to take forward the recommendations in that review, and what other measures may be necessary.

Department of Education

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education how free school meal provision will be maintained in the event of school closures.

(AQW 3662/17-22)

Mr Weir (The Minister of Education): The Executive has placed lead responsibility on the Department for Communities on feeding vulnerable children and families. The Department of Education has been working closely with the Department for Communities to ensure families do not experience hardship as a result of schools closing. On Thursday 26 March, the Communities Minister Deirdre Hargey and I announced these plans. The Department of Education's input to this process has been to ensure families in receipt of free school meals receive £2.70 per child per day for each day of term the schools are closed. This money will be paid to families on a fortnightly basis and to date around 51,000 families have received their first payment.

The Department for Communities is leading on plans to ensure that low income families and vulnerable people get the vital support they need in response to the Coronavirus outbreak.

Further details can be found at: <https://www.education-ni.gov.uk/news/ministers-take-action-relation-free-school-meals-payment-0>

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education what guidance has been issued to schools catering for the children of essential workers as to the staff-pupil ratio which should be operated.

(AQW 3887/17-22)

Mr Weir: The Department issued a range of guidance to schools on 24 March which included advice on the implications of class sizes and teachers pupil ratios, which should be assessed based on what is being delivered in the classroom and bearing in mind guidance in relation to PHA advice about social distancing. For non-statutory pre-school providers, the ratio of adults to children is 1:8.

Here is a link to the full guidance to date:

<https://www.education-ni.gov.uk/faqs-schools-opening-children-key-workers-24-march-2020>

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Education whether he will introduce a scheme of financial assistance for teachers currently on the Northern Ireland Substitute Teacher Register who have been forced to self-isolate due to COVID-19.

(AQW 3907/17-22)

Mr Weir: Substitute teachers will continue to receive their normal pay over the period of the Covid-19 crisis, for any periods that they have been engaged to work. Normal pay applies regardless of whether people are quarantined, medically advised to self-isolate, unable to work due to caring responsibilities or unable to attend their workplace due to closure.

I recognise that some workers in education, such as the substitute teaching workforce providing day-to-day cover, will no longer have access to secure work. Proposals have been developed for a hardship fund for those substitute teachers who were providing day-to-day cover in recent months but whose regular work has now ended as a result of Covid-19.

A separate bid for this has been made to the Department of Finance and this will be dependent on additional funding.

Department of Finance

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance how far the normal rules governing procurement have been relaxed in terms of the Coronavirus crisis; and how were procurement rules applied in terms of the order of Personal Protection Equipment from China in association with the Government of the Republic of Ireland.

(AQW 3906/17-22)

Mr Murphy (The Minister of Finance): These are not normal times and there are procurement rules for urgent contracts which can be reverted to in such circumstances.

Procurement rules provide for direct negotiation with suppliers for reasons of extreme urgency to respond to unforeseeable events. The rules also allow members states to act jointly to procure supplies, works and services.

The Cabinet Office and the EU Commission have published new guidance highlighting the provisions within the public procurement rules that can be used to respond to urgent requirements during the COVID-19 emergency.

The Executive has also approved Procurement Guidance Note 01/20 – Supplier Relief due to COVID-19- This modifies the approach for existing contracts, e.g. prompt payment to improve cash flow.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance, in light of his statement in the Assembly on 31 March 2020 when he stated that, as of last week, we have a joint approach to PPE procurement, the one that is identified in the joint order with the Government in Dublin, to detail (i) whether an order was placed, in association with the Government of the Republic of Ireland, with China for personal protection equipment; (ii) when any such order was placed; (iii) what was ordered; (iv) whether there was a written contract; (v) who signed any such contract; (vi) what was the total contract price; (vii) what was the contracted delivery date; (viii) what procurement process was followed and who approved it; (ix) for which departments and services was the equipment intended; (x) has such equipment been delivered and, if not, when it is expected; and (xi) was the order approved by the Executive.

(AQW 3914/17-22)

Mr Murphy: The joint order with the Government of the Republic of Ireland was not completed due to major economic powers entering the market. However, I can confirm that the consignment of 5 million PPE items organised through the British government has arrived today.

Department of Health

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Health to detail the reported underspend on all services provided by each Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 2501/17-22)

Mr Swann (The Minister of Health): In order to ensure Health and Social Care Trusts achieve a breakeven position, the budget for each Trust is managed, over the course of the financial year, at an organisation level, with pressures in one area being covered by easements in another.

Individual Trusts' annual financial performance is reported through their annual accounts which may be accessed via individual Trust's websites.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Health how many people in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust have received direct payments for carers in the last five years, broken down by (i) age of recipient; and (ii) nature of the illness or disability.

(AQW 2677/17-22)

Mr Swann: Information on the number of people in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust who have received direct payments for carers is not available.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Health to detail the amount of money raised by each Health and Social Care Trust through care home provision in each of the last five years.

(AQW 2743/17-22)

Mr Swann: Due to the ongoing situation in relation to the COVID19 outbreak, we are unable to provide a response to this question.

Mr McCrossan asked the Minister of Health (i) whether his Department will test all suspected cases of COVID-19; and (ii) to outline how the Department will track the virus should this not be the case.

(AQW 3661/17-22)

Mr Swann: Thank you for your Assembly Written Question.

Following the Speaker's letter to all MLAs (18 March) you will be aware of the significant pressure that my Department is currently under in dealing with the biggest public health emergency that this country has ever faced.

To that end, I have had to re-prioritise the work of the Department to best tackle the risks to public health and social care in Northern Ireland caused by the COVID 19 Virus. My approach means that I have had to significantly redeploy Departmental resources which, in turn, has created unavoidable pressures in carrying out normal 'business as usual'.

I am conscious that the Assembly not only has a desire, but also a duty to request the latest information relating to this unprecedented and rapidly changing situation, and I am therefore committed to providing Members with regular updates as developments occur. I trust that you will agree that it is in the public interest that my officials and I remain primarily focused on the task in hand over the coming period in relation to COVID-19 and I will therefore not be in a position to answer your written question at this time.

I appreciate your understanding.

Robin Swann, MLA

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Health what measures have been taken to increase the usage of labs for the processing of COVID-19 testing.

(AQW 3910/17-22)

Mr Swann: Thank you for your Assembly Written Question.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Health whether he plans to take control of private hospitals and healthcare facilities for use in tackling COVID-19.

(AQW 3912/17-22)

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Health to detail the types and quantities of personal protection equipment delivered within the last week to (i) each Health and Social Care Trust; (ii) the NI Ambulance Service; (iii) the NI Fire and Rescue Service; and (iv) other agencies within his Department's responsibility.

(AQW 3913/17-22)

Department for Infrastructure

Ms Kimmings asked the Minister for Infrastructure to outline plans to implement a pedestrian crossing at Mulkern's on Forkhill Road, Newry.

(AQW 2774/17-22)

Ms Mallon (The Minister for Infrastructure): Following requests from elected representatives my Department has programmed traffic surveys to inform the assessment for the provision of a controlled pedestrian crossing at this location. Once the surveys have been completed, the proposal will be assessed in accordance with the current policy, to determine if it meets the minimum criteria required to merit further development for the provision of a pedestrian crossing.

Progress of schemes will be dependent on the funding allocated to my Department in the 2020/21 budget.

Mrs Barton asked the Minister for Infrastructure when she will answer AQW 951/17-22.

(AQW 2823/17-22)

Ms Mallon: I refer the Member to my response to AQW 951/17-22.

Mr Wells asked the Minister for Infrastructure for her assessment of the impact to pedestrians who are in collision with vehicles which have bull bars attached.

(AQW 2968/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My Department has liaised with the PSNI and there is currently little recorded evidence available which details collisions involving pedestrians with vehicles which have bull bars fitted. I am therefore unable to offer an accurate assessment of the impact to pedestrians who are in collision with vehicles which have bull bars attached to them.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Infrastructure (i) how many staff are employed in her Department's information service; (ii) how many are classed as press officers; and (iii) what is the annual cost of this service.

(AQW 3603/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My department has four Executive Information Service Press Officers broken down as follows: one Principal Press Officer, and three Senior Press Officers (FTE)

The total salary cost for EIS Press Officers in my department from 1 April 2018 to 31 March 2019 was £211,694.50.

Mr McCann asked the Minister for Infrastructure (i) for an update on the financial position of the Water Service; and (ii) how she will ensure that it is fit for purpose.

(AQW 3789/17-22)

Ms Mallon: In Public Expenditure terms, I can report that NI Water currently has a cash resource DEL allocation of £105.6m and capital DEL spend of £151.4m for 2019/20. NI Water has delivered over £60m in annually recurring savings since formation in 2007. In 2018/19, NI Water achieved its best ever performance for the quality of drinking water and the environmental compliance for used water.

However, these results mask the underlying problem of lack of capacity for new customers, particularly in relation to waste water. Additionally, the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic and resulting economic shutdown, has had an immediate impact in reducing NI Water's income from non domestic customers, and increasing operational expenditure needs in 2019/20. The response to COVID-19 will also require additional funding support for NI Water to operate safely and effectively into 2020/21. I have advised the Department of Finance of these additional financial pressures.

In terms of looking forward, NI Water has submitted a business plan to the Utility Regulator, detailing investment priorities for the next Price Control period from 2021-2027. The Regulator will make a draft determination which will be consulted on in summer 2020. I will be working with my Executive colleagues to secure adequate finances for a fully funded water and sewerage service. Without this, we will not be able to deliver the services needed to support affordable homes, economic growth, public health and a safe environment.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Infrastructure whether she will publish, or place in the Assembly Library, the advice by her Chief Planner to all Council Heads of Planning on the implications of the COVID-19 emergency for the planning system.
(AQW 3900/17-22)

Ms Mallon: Chief Planners Update (5) dated 27 March on COVID 19 issues affecting the planning system in Northern Ireland was published on the DfI website on 27 March. The link is attached below:

<https://www.infrastructure-ni.gov.uk/publications/chief-planners-updates>

Department for the Economy

Mr Chambers asked the Minister for the Economy whether she is in a position to offer reassurance to EU workers, currently employed in the hospitality sector, that their employment and residency rights will not be affected as a result of the United Kingdom's withdrawal from the European Union.

(AQW 1461/17-22)

Mrs Dodds (The Minister for the Economy): This has been passed to the First Minister and deputy First Minister for response as the EU Settlement Scheme is a departmental responsibility in The Executive Office.

All EU, EEA or Swiss citizens must apply to the EU Settlement Scheme to continue living in the UK after 30 June 2021. The Executive Office is working closely with the Home Office to facilitate and support the implementation of the scheme in Northern Ireland.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister for the Economy whether she has met, or plans to meet, the Minister for Business, Enterprise and Innovation of the Irish Government.

(AQW 3421/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: I have not yet had the opportunity to meet with the Minister of Business, Enterprise and Innovation. When the new Irish Government in place, I will engage with them on areas that are mutually beneficial.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Ms P Bradley asked the Assembly Commission to outline the difference in cost to the Assembly of employing the three on-site tradesmen directly, as opposed to paying via a contractor.

(AQO 434/17-22)

Mr Blair (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): In common with the majority of the public sector estate, the Assembly Commission avails of a pan-governmental collaborative framework for planned maintenance and minor works, tendered by Central Procurement Directorate, Department of Finance, to undertake the maintenance of Parliament Buildings as well as relevant minor works building projects.

Due to the nature of our business and the heritage of Parliament Buildings, the Assembly Commission uses the services of a small team of tradespeople, consisting of two joiners and an electrician, based in Parliament Buildings, under the terms of the framework.

In addition to their own trades, these workers carry out a supervisory role in respect of other construction-related work being undertaken by other tradespeople, also under the terms of the framework agreement.

The three tradespeople based in Parliament Buildings are employed by H&J Martin, the current provider, under the terms of the framework agreement. The Commission separately records the cost of all tradespeople who provide services under the framework (for example, painters, plumbers, plasterers, etc.) including the three workers who are based in Parliament Buildings. From these costs, the Commission typically pays approximately £220k per annum to the contractor for the services of the three tradespeople.

The likely costs of directly employing the required staffing levels to undertake the full range of services that are available under the framework is not known at this time as no analysis of the grade of staff that would be employed has been undertaken. These costs will include salary costs including all employer's pension and national insurance contributions. In addition, the cost of specialist training, the cost of tools and equipment and the cost of the transport of materials, etc. would need to be assessed as these costs are included in the current contractual arrangements.

The Assembly Commission has already commenced a review of options for the future provision of maintenance and minor works building services for the Commission and a range of options, including direct appointment of tradespeople, will be investigated in that study.

Department of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs

Dr Archibald asked the Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs, with regard to the Forests for our Future programme, whether he plans to introduce restrictions or regulations on the forestry and timber industry to prevent deforestation.

(AQW 3835/17-22)

Mr Poots (The Minister of Agriculture, Environment and Rural Affairs): My Department already regulates deforestation under the Environmental Impact Assessment (Forestry) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2006 (as amended). These regulations were last amended in 2017 following a public consultation and I have no plans to introduce further amendments at present.

Department of Finance

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance (i) what representations have been made to HM Treasury in respect of recently self-employed with no 2018/19 tax return; and (ii) whether she will press for recently self-employed people to be given four weeks from 6 April 2020 to file their 2019/2020 tax return as a means of qualifying such individuals for the lump-sum payment under the Self-employment Income Support Scheme in June 2020.

(AQW 3908/17-22)

Mr Murphy (The Minister of Finance): I have pressed the Treasury a number of times now to ensure that proper support is available to all those impacted by this crisis.

In terms of the Self-Employed Income Support Scheme (SEIS) specifically, my department has raised a number of issues with the Treasury, including eligibility and whether it would be possible to allow 2019/20 tax returns to be submitted early and income assessed on that basis. The Treasury responded that there are a number of operational reasons why they could not agree to this, but referred to the other support that is available to those that started trading after April 2019.

Rest assured, I am committed to addressing the gaps that exist in the current schemes and will continue to press Treasury so that adequate support is provided for all those that need it during this difficult time.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Finance to detail his Department's efforts to access supplies of personal protection equipment.

(AQW 3911/17-22)

Mr Murphy: Construction and Procurement Delivery (CPD) is working closely with Health, Justice and other public bodies to source Personal Protection Equipment (PPE) items locally and globally.

In addition, we are working on a 4 Nations basis to source and co-ordinate PPE items. We saw an example of this cooperation when our Health Service received 5.5 million PPE items from England at the beginning of April.

CPD, Department of Health (DoH) and InvestNI are also working with local manufacturers on repurposing to produce essential medical clothing, PPE items and hand sanitisation products.

My Department intends to continue to work collaboratively with all jurisdictions and sectors to help staff on the frontline and those fighting the COVID-19 virus.

Department of Health

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Health (i) whether victims of crime will be considered within the new mental health strategy; (ii) who will take the lead on victims affected by crime due to mental health issues; and (iii) whether he will consider a victims forum to inform mental health issues.

(AQW 1568/17-22)

Mr Swann (The Minister of Health): The work of my department is currently focussed on dealing with COVID-19. Once work resumes on a mental health strategy consideration will be given to issues related to mental health and crime.

Ms Bradshaw asked the Minister of Health for an update on his Department's Brexit preparations in line with the Northern Ireland protocol; and how many people are working on ensuring compliance with the protocol.

(AQW 1970/17-22)

Mr Swann: The means by which the Northern Ireland Protocol may be implemented, and any corresponding impact this may have on the health and social care sector, is not yet fully known. My Department continues to engage extensively with the Department of Health and Social Care and other Whitehall Departments, the other Devolved Administrations, the Department of Health in the Republic of Ireland and with The Executive Office and other Northern Ireland Civil Service Departments regarding preparations relating to the Northern Ireland Protocol.

Work is being taken forward on a number of fronts including health security, regulation and supply of healthcare products (medicines, medical devices and clinical consumables), regulation relating to tobacco and E-cigarettes, and issues surrounding the movement of people, such as the Mutual Recognition of Professional Qualifications.

It is not possible to provide an exact number of staff working in this area. There are 6 posts which directly support Brexit preparations; however, there are others working within existing policy teams who support preparations as part of normal business. In recent weeks it has been necessary to reprioritise the work of my Department and it has been necessary to re-deploy some staff to deal with the Coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic, the situation is being monitored and is being kept under review.

Department for Infrastructure

Mr Givan asked the Minister for Infrastructure, pursuant to AQW 642/17-22, to provide detail around the differentiation between Eastern Division and other divisions, especially around capital maintenance.

(AQW 1858/17-22)

Ms Mallon (The Minister for Infrastructure): As outlined in my response to your AQW 642/17-22, capital maintenance is allocated to the four DfI Roads Divisions on the basis of need, using a range of weighted indicators tailored to each maintenance activity. Divisions also use these indicators when apportioning budget across District Council areas to ensure, as far as possible, equitable distribution of funds.

The four Divisions boundaries are coterminous with local government areas; the Table below shows which District Councils fall into each Roads Division. I have included an analysis of road lengths, by way of example, which is one of the indicators that is used to allocate budgets. Other indicators relate to traffic volumes and condition assessments of roads. Application of the weighted indicators provides a fair and equitable basis for budget allocation and results in Eastern Division receiving a relatively equitable capital maintenance allocation.

Division	Council	Route Length (km)
Eastern	Belfast	1,088.4
Eastern	Lisburn and Castlereagh	1,360.7
Eastern	Total	2,449.2
Northern	Antrim and Newtownabbey	1374.7
Northern	Causeway Coast and Glens	2,649.3
Northern	Mid and East Antrim	1748.0
Northern	Total	5,772.0
Southern	Ards and North Down	1,162.7
Southern	Armagh City, Banbridge and Craigavon	3,574.8
Southern	Newry, Mourne and Down	3,067.4
Southern	Total	7,804.9
Western	Derry City and Strabane	2,327.4

Division	Council	Route Length (km)
Western	Fermanagh and Omagh	3,985.6
Western	Mid Ulster	3,396.0
Western	Total	9,709.0
Grand Total		25,735.1

This information is available from my Departments website on Page 11 of my Departments Transport Statistics for 2018-2019 which are available via this HTML link <https://www.infrastructure-ni.gov.uk/system/files/publications/infrastructure/northern-ireland-transport-statistics-2018-2019-publication.pdf>.

Eastern Division's resource maintenance budget includes £2.5m for the cost of running the Traffic Information Control Centre and its associated traffic management equipment.

Department of Justice

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister of Justice what plans her Department has to address the issues raised in the Audit Office report, entitled Injury on duty schemes for officers in the Police Service of Northern Ireland and the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

(AQO 382/17-22)

Mrs Long (The Minister of Justice): I welcome the recently published Northern Ireland Audit Office Report on Injury on Duty schemes for officers in the police service and the Northern Ireland Prison Service. My Department is considering the recommendations for the Police Service Injury on Duty scheme raised in the report in detail. The Department of Finance is also considering the recommendations in relation to the Northern Ireland Civil Service Injury on Duty scheme which includes the Northern Ireland Prison Service. A working group, led by my Department, has already been established to consider how best to ensure a proportionate use of public money in the future while providing an appropriate level of support to officers who have suffered injuries in the course of performing their duties.

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Justice for her assessment of the commitment in New Decade New Approach to introduce legislation to implement the Stormont House Agreement, to address Northern Ireland legacy issues.

Mrs Long: The UK Government announced a new approach for dealing with the legacy of the past on 18 March. This approach differs in a number of respects from the arrangements set out in the Stormont House Agreement, with a stronger focus on information recovery and the proposal that full investigations should only be undertaken in those cases in which there is a realistic prospect of a prosecution as a result of new compelling evidence. There would then be a legal bar on any future investigation. Instead of the ICIR and HIU sitting separately, as set out in the Stormont House Agreement, their intended functions would be brought together in a new Legacy Commission.

The Secretary of State has stated that he intends to begin an intensive period of engagement on the proposals with the Northern Ireland political parties and the Irish government. These have not yet commenced. Given the details provided in the Secretary of State's statement are limited, I am unable to make a comprehensive assessment of these latest proposals. I do, however, have significant reservations that what is outlined reflects the content of the Stormont House Agreement or the UK Government's Article 2 obligations, as well as how practicable they may be to operate in practice.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the development of a new, streamlined, advocacy support service for victims of domestic and sexual abuse.

(AQO 384/17-22)

Mrs Long: My officials have been working with key statutory and voluntary sector partners - including Victim Support NI, Women's Aid, Nexus, Men's Advisory Project and NSPCC – to develop a streamlined advocacy service to support victims of domestic and sexual violence and abuse across Northern Ireland. I intend to introduce the new service next year.

In practice, the service will build on existing services, by providing a co-ordinated response to the needs of victims. It will apply to those engaging with the criminal justice system, and regardless of the level of risk posed to them, their gender or age or where they live within Northern Ireland.

It is important to provide the best possible service within the funding that may be available and in this regard, my officials continue to work collaboratively with police colleagues – our intended funding partner - to finalise the detail of the model and how it could operate.

Mr Gildernew asked the Minister of Justice to outline what measures are being taken to contain and mitigate the risk of COVID-19 in the Prison Service and prison population.

Mrs Long: It is important to note that while there has not to date been a coronavirus case in any of our prisons, the Prison Service take the threat presented by COVID19 extremely seriously and have undertaken significant work in preparation for the challenges an outbreak would bring in a custodial environment. This has included placing a small number of recent committals in isolation as a precaution.

Preparations have included the purchase of additional protective clothing for staff and the preparation of areas within each prison where prisoners suspected and or diagnosed with the virus can be accommodated. Both the Prison Service and our partners in the South Eastern Trust have been following guidance issued by the Public Health Agency which has also been provided to staff and prisoners.

The Director General has put in place specific contingency planning structures and established a dedicated team to oversee planning arrangements and to support Governors in dealing with the challenges they will inevitably face. The Prison Service recognise the importance of good communication and is committed to working with staff, prisoners, families and stakeholders as operational decisions are taken.

Notwithstanding the disruption and challenges ahead, supporting staff and keeping safe those in our care remains our primary focus. I know the House will join me in supporting the Prison Service as they seek to manage what is an unprecedented situation.

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Justice what action she has taken to implement the recommendations of the May 2019 Report of the Commissioner for Older People for Northern Ireland entitled Crime and Justice: The Experience of Older People in Northern Ireland Report, in line with the motion adopted without division in the Assembly on 3 March 2020.

(AQO 386/17-22)

Mrs Long: I would like to reassure the member that work on considering the recommendations in the Commissioner's report is being progressed. An initial action plan has been prepared and is being further developed by my officials in conjunction with our partner organisations.

While it is not within my Department's gift to deliver on all of the recommendations, discussions continue with other delivery partners within the criminal justice and other sectors.

My Department will work closely with the Commission to deliver on the recommendations and will discuss the Action Plan with the Commission before it is finalised.

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister of Justice for a timeline for the introduction of domestic homicide reviews in order to support best practice in safeguarding potential victims.

(AQO 387/17-22)

Mrs Long: I intend to introduce Domestic Homicide Reviews locally by the autumn. A recruitment exercise to identify suitable individuals to Chair the domestic homicide reviews is currently underway. Once appointed we will ensure that the Chairs have access to a period of appropriate training before commencing reviews.

The Chairs will work alongside a multi-agency panel to see what issues can be learnt from these tragic cases, to prevent future abuse and deaths. It is hoped to begin the reviews around autumn.

Worryingly there are, on average, 6 domestic homicides each year in Northern Ireland, with a domestic abuse incident every 17 minutes. Each domestic homicide is a tragedy, and behind every statistic there is a person, with family and friends, whose life has ended in traumatic circumstances. I want to do all I can to prevent this happening in the future.

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Justice for her assessment of the Assets Recovery Community Scheme.

(AQO 388/17-22)

Mrs Long: The Assets Recovery Community Scheme, or "ARCS", is an important fund that has been used to good effect to prevent crime and reduce the fear of crime. It funds valuable initiatives – mainly in community settings – that are actively helping victims, or communities, or the environment, in support of a culture of lawfulness.

By redistributing the value of criminal assets that have been recovered through the Courts via confiscation orders, ARCS is not only helping to prevent crime and reduce the fear of crime but is also sending a strong message to those who seek to disregard the law and cause harm, that crime does not pay and that their activities will not be tolerated.

In early 2019 my Department announced an allocation of over £1.8 million under ARCS up to 31 March 2021, taking the total funding support provided to over £5million since the Scheme began. This was the first time that applications were invited for longer-term projects, allowing my Department to fund more strategic interventions. In addition to projects in local areas, a number of projects are operating on a Northern Ireland-wide basis. A range of interventions are being supported including drug support projects, restorative justice initiatives, youth diversionary projects, crime prevention projects and initiatives to reduce environmental and wildlife crime.

Mr Stewart asked the Minister of Justice what representations she has made to the Minister of Finance and HM Treasury on the position of police officers to help resolve the Northern Ireland public service pension scheme dispute.
(AQO 389/17-22)

Mrs Long: The impact of the McCloud judgment on all public service pension schemes is under active consideration. The police pension scheme, like all public sector pension schemes, take their direction from the Department of Finance with regard to the outcome of this judgment.

The employment tribunal cases relating to the Police Service of Northern Ireland have been stayed pending the final remedy of the McCloud judgment and, therefore, it is not appropriate for me to comment.

Mrs Barton asked the Minister of Justice to outline her plans for police training facilities.
(AQO 390/17-22)

Mrs Long: Decisions relating to plans for police training facilities are an operational matter for the Chief Constable. However, I can advise that the PSNI's Police College Redevelopment Board is currently developing a business case. My Department will consider that case, when received, as part of wider discussions with the PSNI on the Chief Constable's plans for transformational change.

Mr Beattie asked the Minister of Justice to outline how many military veterans are currently serving a custodial sentence.
(AQO 391/17-22)

Mrs Long: There are currently 33 individuals serving a custodial sentence who have self-disclosed the military as a previous employer.

Ms Armstrong asked the Minister of Justice for an update on her plans to introduce an offence of controlling or coercive behaviour.
(AQO 392/17-22)

Mrs Long: The Domestic Abuse and Family Proceedings Bill received Executive approval on 16 March.

While I had previously indicated that the Bill would be introduced in April or May work took place at an accelerated pace to allow the Bill to be introduced on Tuesday 31 March. This is a significant step forward in our efforts to criminalise patterns of psychological and emotionally harmful behaviour through the creation of a domestic abuse offence.

While I have indicated to the Assembly that Royal Assent may be secured around April/May 2021, with the goodwill of the Committee in considering the Bill expediently, I would hope to be in a position to secure Royal Assent before this.

My officials continue to have discussions with operational and voluntary sector partners in relation to operationalisation of the new offence, as well as colleagues elsewhere to identify lessons learned. The advice from other local jurisdictions has been that a 9-12 month period is needed, however, my Department, along with our statutory and voluntary sector partners, will do all that we can to ensure that the introductory timeframe is kept to the minimum needed.

Mr O'Dowd asked the Minister of Justice for her assessment of the representation of people from a Catholic background in the composition of the Prison Service workforce, in comparison to the wider population.
(AQO 393/17-22)

Mrs Long: The Northern Ireland Prison Service is part of the community and the staff perform a hugely important role by supporting and challenging people in our care to change.

It is very disappointing that the Catholic community are underrepresented in the workforce. This is despite huge efforts by the Director General and his team to try to secure a more representative workforce.

The Prison Service's outreach in the last few years is well beyond anything that has happened before. Each time there is a recruitment campaign, efforts are made to secure as wide a base of applications as possible.

The Prison Service will continue their work to reach out to under-represented sections of the community and I have asked the Director General to meet political parties represented in this House to see how we can support the Prison Service to address this issue. I understand he will be meeting representatives of the Member's Party on 2 April.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice what measures her Department is taking to address the level of sickness absence amongst prison officers.
(AQO 394/17-22)

Mrs Long: As members of the Northern Ireland Civil Service, prison officers who are off work due to sickness absence are managed in accordance with the NICS Sickness Absence policy. Every effort is being made to reduce the levels of absence further. Management is committed to continue to work with staff and their Trade Unions to address the current levels of sickness absence.

Under Prisons 2020, the Northern Ireland Prison Service is committed to employee well-being support to ensure there are suitable provisions in place to build staff resilience and enable staff to meet the needs of the challenging work environment.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Justice what plans are in place to protect prisoners and prison officers from an outbreak of COVID-19 in the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

Mrs Long: It is important to note that while there has not to date been a coronavirus case in any of our prisons, the Prison Service take the threat presented by COVID19 extremely seriously and have undertaken significant work in preparation for the challenges an outbreak would bring in a custodial environment. This has included placing a small number of recent committals in isolation as a precaution.

Preparations have included the purchase of additional protective clothing for staff and the preparation of areas within each prison where prisoners suspected and or diagnosed with the virus can be accommodated. Both the Prison Service and our partners in the South Eastern Trust have been following guidance issued by the Public Health Agency which has also been provided to staff and prisoners.

The Director General has put in place specific contingency planning structures and established a dedicated team to oversee planning arrangements and to support Governors in dealing with the challenges they will inevitably face. The Prison Service recognise the importance of good communication and is committed to working with staff, prisoners, families and stakeholders as operational decisions are taken.

Notwithstanding the disruption and challenges ahead, supporting staff and keeping safe those in our care remains our primary focus. I know the House will join me in supporting the Prison Service as they seek to manage what is an unprecedented situation.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Justice what progress has been made to introduce a local scheme, similar to the Places of Worship protective security funding scheme operating in England and Wales.

(AQO 396/17-22)

Mrs Long: I have commented on this issue previously and want to reiterate that I recognise the effect that an attack on a place of worship can have for members of a faith community in terms of the distress and disruption from any damage it causes.

My officials are continuing to explore evidence based information in relation to attacks on places of worship, in liaison with the police, as well as the criteria for the Places of Worship Security Fund that operates in England and Wales.

The scheme in England and Wales, which is not a statute provision, focuses on religiously motivated hate crime. Early indications are that there would be little evidence to support the introduction of a scheme in Northern Ireland based on similar criteria.

If a scheme were to be introduced in Northern Ireland there are other issues that may need to be considered such as: the types of building to be included; security measures that could be covered; administration of the scheme and available funding.

I will want to reflect on these issues and the findings provided by my officials before reaching a conclusion in the months ahead.

Department for the Economy

Mr Allister asked the Minister for the Economy, further to her statement to the Assembly on 24 March 2020, what steps her Department are taking to ensure that agency workers are treated the same way as other employees when it comes to Her Majesty's Government 80% Coronavirus Job Retention Scheme.

(AQW 3893/17-22)

Mrs Dodds (The Minister for the Economy): It is my opinion that all workers eligible for the UK-wide Job Retention Scheme, including eligible agency workers, should be treated in the same way. Ensuring this happens falls to Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs.

It is my understanding that furloughed workers must have been on a PAYE payroll on 28 February 2020, and can be on any type of contract, including agency contracts, flexible or zero hours contracts as well as full-time and part-time workers and employees.

The Executive Office

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 2758/17-22, to address and answer the specific question posed in both its parts.
(AQW 3870/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): We would refer the Member to the answers previously provided.

Mrs Barton asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the salaries for each of the Commissioners within the Office of Identity and Cultural Expression.
(AQO 371/17-22)

Mrs Foster and Mrs O'Neill: To clarify, the draft legislation for the creation of the Office of Identity and Cultural Expression provides that the Office holder will be known as the 'Director of Identity and Cultural Expression', not a Commissioner.

We are not in a position to provide details of the Director's likely salary, as the required legislation has not yet been introduced and approved by the Assembly.

Department of Education

Ms Bunting asked the Minister of Education, in the course of preparation for eventual school closures as a result of COVID-19, (i) what practical contingency plans is he considering for those pupils in receipt of free school meals, to ensure they still receive one hot meal per day; (ii) whether he will, where necessary, liaise with relevant Executive colleagues to roll-out any such plans, and (iii) whether he will give consideration to assisting with local solutions.
(AQW 3829/17-22)

Mr Weir (The Minister of Education): The Department of Education has ensured that families in receipt of free school meals will receive £2.70 per child per day for each day of term the schools are closed, including the Easter break. This money will be paid direct to parents' bank accounts on a fortnightly basis and to date over 53,354 payments (representing 96,000 children) reached bank accounts by 15th April.

The Executive has placed lead responsibility on the Department for Communities on feeding vulnerable children and families. The Department of Education has been working closely with the Department for Communities to ensure families do not experience hardship as a result of schools closing. On Thursday 26 March, the Communities Minister Deirdre Hargey and I announced these plans. Further details can be found at: <https://www.education-ni.gov.uk/news/ministers-take-action-relation-free-school-meals-payment-0>

The Department for Communities is leading and co-ordinating the wider response on plans to ensure that low income families and vulnerable people get the vital support they need in response to the Coronavirus outbreak. A weekly service will see 10,000 food boxes being delivered to the most vulnerable during the COVID-19 lockdown. Food boxes are available for people who cannot afford food and who do not have a support network of family and friends to help them through this emergency. These boxes will also be available to those who are not shielding, but who are in critical need of food including families and older citizens. Further information is available at: <https://www.communities-ni.gov.uk/landing-pages/covid-19-service-updates>

The EA youth service is also contributing to these plans and will provide essential services particularly around children and vulnerable young people.

Department of Health

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Health what support he will provide to boost the workforce and funding within community pharmacy, to alleviate the risk to community pharmacy services.

(AQW 2045/17-22)

Mr Swann (The Minister of Health): Completion of a review of the pharmacy workforce commissioned by the Department has been delayed due to the focus on responding to the Covid-19 pandemic. It is the intention, however, that the Action Plan developed in response to the review will include actions to address workforce challenges across all pharmacy sectors, and community pharmacy in particular.

When appropriate, discussions will be progressed with the Health and Social Care Board and Community Pharmacy Northern Ireland (CPNI) with the aim of establishing new contractual arrangements for community pharmacy and a corresponding financial envelope. In the meantime, £10.5m has been made available to provide support for community pharmacy in responding to the Covid-19 pandemic.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of Health for his assessment of the findings of the Northern Ireland Affairs Select Committee report into health funding in Northern Ireland, of November 2019, with specific reference to the recommendation for his Department to agree a sustainable funding package for community pharmacy to enable it to play a vital role in transforming health and social care.

Mr Swann: The Northern Ireland Affairs Select Committee report makes a number of helpful recommendations to address challenges currently facing the health service in Northern Ireland.

In relation to the recommendation on community pharmacy, a stable and sustainable community pharmacy network commissioned to provide services which contributes to population level improvements in health will ultimately support health and social care reform. Current levels of funding for community pharmacy services have been informed by a Cost of Service Investigation, alongside other sources of information, including an ongoing margins survey and the Department considers the level of remuneration sufficient to meet its statutory objectives for current commissioned services.

The current focus of the Department and wider HSC system is responding to the Covid-19 pandemic. When appropriate, discussions will be held with the Health and Social Care Board and Community Pharmacy Northern Ireland (CPNI) with the aim of establishing new contractual arrangements for 2020/21 and a corresponding financial envelope. In the meantime, £10.5m has been made available to community pharmacy to support its response to the Covid-19 pandemic.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Health how many support workers have been tested for COVID-19; and when all support workers, who are still working, will be tested for COVID-19.

(AQW 3915/17-22)

Mr Swann: Thank you for your Assembly Written Question.

Following the Speaker's letter to all MLAs (18 March) you will be aware of the significant pressure that my Department is currently under in dealing with the biggest public health emergency that this country has ever faced.

To that end, I have had to re-prioritise the work of the Department to best tackle the risks to public health and social care in Northern Ireland caused by the COVID 19 Virus. My approach means that I have had to significantly redeploy Departmental resources which, in turn, has created unavoidable pressures in carrying out normal 'business as usual'.

I am conscious that the Assembly not only has a desire, but also a duty to request the latest information relating to this unprecedented and rapidly changing situation, and I am therefore committed to providing Members with regular updates as developments occur. I trust that you will agree that it is in the public interest that my officials and I remain primarily focused on the task in hand over the coming period in relation to COVID-19 and I will therefore not be in a position to answer your written question at this time.

I appreciate your understanding.

Mr Carroll asked the Minister of Health when people who have had to suspend contact with care workers because of COVID-19 will be able to regain access to support and respite services.

(AQW 3916/17-22)

Mr Swann: Thank you for your Assembly Written Question.

Department for Infrastructure

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Infrastructure (i) what obligations exist for (a) contractual; and (b) insurance purposes for regulatory inspections of lifts at MOT centres by contractors; and (ii) whether the Minister is satisfied that these were honoured.

(AQW 1427/17-22)

Ms Mallon (The Minister for Infrastructure): DVA had a vehicle testing equipment maintenance contract in place with MaHa Ireland Ltd. consisting of two elements:

- 1 Service, Maintenance and Calibration of all vehicle testing equipment
- 2 Reactive Repairs to all vehicle testing equipment

As part of a regular preventative maintenance programme (PPM), there were minor inspections every eight weeks and major service inspections every six months of the DVA's equipment, including lifts, within its MOT centres. As part of the six monthly major inspection the vehicle lifts also received an independent examination by an independent insurance company.

Based on expert engineering, audit, procurement and legal advice, on 27 February I announced that an order for 52 new lifts had been placed, with an accelerated production, delivery and installation programme agreed with the contractor which would see all lifts replaced between April and mid July. Based on advice from the same sources, I also initiated a review of the contract and strengthening of the inspection process. New arrangements were agreed and are now in place. The revised contract includes improvements to the maintenance and inspection regime; provision for ongoing review of the condition of equipment; and ensures that regular insurance inspections will be conducted independently in future. The contract management regime has also been strengthened with provision for additional processes and reporting.

These new arrangements will provide a more robust assurance on the maintenance and condition of vehicle lifts to ensure this situation does not occur again. The safety of staff and customers remains my top priority.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Infrastructure how much has been spent on flood prevention measures, broken down by constituency, for each year since 2010.

(AQW 3318/17-22)

Ms Mallon: My Department does not hold all of its expenditure information, on flood protection measures, in the format you have requested. However, I can provide you with details of expenditure on flood prevention measures, for the geographical areas covered by each Rivers operational office over the last seven financial years. Details prior to 2011/12 are not available. This information is provided in table 1.

Table 1

Area	2018/19	2017/18	2016/17	2015/16	2014/15	2013/14	2012/13	2011/12

In addition, there are in the region of 160 properties identified by NI Water that are at risk of internal flooding, on a list known as the DG 5 register. NI Water has, to date, since 2015 invested £15.8m to address internal flooding issues identified on their DG5 register. NI Water are unable to provide details by Council area or prior to 2015.

Mr Lynch asked the Minister for Infrastructure what action she is taking to mitigate the risk of COVID-19 for people using (i) public transport; and (ii) taxis.

Ms Mallon: I am acutely aware of the concerns that many communities and people have regarding the COVID-19 virus and how best to tackle the outbreak. My Department is working with all Departments, agencies, operators and the Public Health Agency to respond to and plan for this evolving situation. No effort will be spared in our work to tackle the outbreak and I have outlined the work undertaken on public transport and taxis below.

- (i) In response to the COVID-19 pandemic I took the decision on 30th March 2020 to further reduce the public transport network. These measures are being implemented following the NI Executive advice to stay at home and in line with the significant reductions in public transport numbers that we are seeing as the public follow that advice. This has allowed us to reduce the network as we continue to focus on protecting our public services and provide resilience in responding to COVID 19. The changes to the timetables provide resilience in responding to COVID 19 and ensure we can continue to provide public transport coverage across the North of Ireland for essential workers at peak times. In introducing those changes a key priority has been to maintain the ability of passengers to follow social distancing guidance on public transport. Translink continue to monitor demand on individual services. Drivers have been instructed to limit passenger numbers to enable social distancing, with additional vehicles brought on should demand require it. Translink has also continued to liaise with the Public Health Agency on this matter. PHA has produced new posters on social distancing and these are being distributed throughout all vehicles and stations.

- (ii) While my responsibility for taxis only extends to the regulation of the industry, I am very aware of the increasing financial hardships this crisis is creating. I pushed hard with Executive colleagues to secure the self-employed financial package announced by the British Government. This package has weaknesses, not least the delay until June for payment, which as an Executive we are pushing the British Government to address. With Executive colleagues, I will continue to press for more assistance.

I have been engaging with the taxi industry and have also issued an open letter to set out the work that I am doing in my capacity as Infrastructure Minister and also the work I am doing with other Ministers across our Government. To help progress this, I have raised this with Executive colleagues to examine how taxis can be re-purposed to support the emergency efforts. I am pleased to tell you that my officials are already working together with the Department for Communities as the lead Department and, through them, local government to explore how this can be done.

I also know that social distancing is a real worry and a challenge for those taxi drivers continuing to provide a service to the public. The Department for Economy is the Department responsible for issuing this guidance. I have been engaging with the Minister for Economy and am assured that guidance on social distancing, to keep taxi drivers and their customers safe, is being prepared as quickly as possible.

With the numbers of taxi journeys greatly reducing, there is also now a real opportunity to explore how taxi drivers can play their part in the emergency response to this crisis. To look at, for example, opportunities for delivering food and vital supplies or to get patients to essential appointments. To help progress this, I have raised this with Executive colleagues to examine how taxis can be re-purposed to support the emergency efforts. I am pleased to tell you that my officials are already working together with the Department for Communities and, through them, local government to explore how this can be done. The Department for Communities will lead on this.

On the regulatory side for which I have responsibility, I am pleased to report that my officials have completed work on new legislation to grant an extension to the PSV testing period. Finding a means to exempt taxis from PSV tests was more difficult than I would have liked and has required a temporary change to regulations which has now been put in place. I can confirm that the Taxi Licensing (Amendment) (Coronavirus) Regulations (Northern Ireland) became operational on 10 April 2020.

These Regulations cover taxi vehicle licences which expire during the current emergency. They provide for the automatic renewal of these licences – without prior testing. This will ensure that vehicles can remain on the road during this period. Automatic renewals will be for a six month period and will apply to all existing licences that expire between 10 March and 9 October 2020, unless normal testing can resume before this date. They will also be issued free of charge. To keep this simple for everyone, there is no application process and those with licences that have expired recently or are due to expire shortly, will be prioritized. This is a temporary measure reflecting the exceptionally challenging times of this current pandemic.

Please be assured that I am doing everything within my remit as Infrastructure Minister to help the industry through this crisis and I will continue to work with Executive colleagues to do as much as we can together to help the industry for as long as this crisis lasts.

Department for the Economy

Mr Carroll asked the Minister for the Economy whether Education Maintenance Allowance payments will continue as normal throughout social distancing and the COVID-19 pandemic.

(AQW 3872/17-22)

Mrs Dodds (The Minister for the Economy): The Minister for Education and I have agreed that Education Maintenance Allowance (EMA) weekly allowance and bonus payments will continue as normal for eligible school and FE college students following closures due to Covid-19. This will apply for the remainder of this academic year, or earlier should the schools and colleges re-open before then.

Schools and colleges have been advised accordingly, and have a key role to play in this process, as in order for a student's payment to be released, EMA administrators must continue to confirm attendance to the Student Loans Company on a weekly basis in the normal way.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for the Economy how will small businesses that pay their rates in their rent to the landlord be able to claim the Small Business Support Grant; and when this will happen.

(AQW 3897/17-22)

Mrs Dodds: The Small Business Support Grant has been designed to support small businesses and not landlords or managing agents.

If a business pays rent, including rates, to a landlord or managing agent and the property is eligible for Small Business Rates Relief, the standard online form for registering details should not be used. A new online form for rental properties will be available on nibusinessinfo.co.uk in the coming days. Work is underway to make this available as soon as possible.
