The SDLP talked about chipping away at the Good Friday Agreement and warned Sinn Féin of the dangers of those who would try to get away with that. Perhaps SDLP Members should read their leader's recent speech at Oxford and understand that those who think that power sharing is up for negotiation and can be chipped away gain succour from his speech. They should advise him accordingly.

I know that all the comments are from party perspectives, but if Ian Paisley Jnr believes that the work of the Committee was down to a quarrel between the SDLP and Sinn Féin, perhaps the next report should read "needs to pay more attention", or, at least, it should state that he needs to read the minutes of the Committee meetings.

As Deputy Chairperson of the Committee, I commend the 'First Report on the Arrangements for the Devolution of Policing and Justice Matters' to the Assembly. I reassure all Members that the Committee, under direction of the Chairperson, will continue apace with its work so that the transfer of policing and justice can proceed without undue delay.

EDUCATION BILL (NIA 3/08)

Members present for all or part of the proceedings:

Mr Mervyn Storey (Chairperson)
Mrs Mary Bradley
Mr Trevor Lunn
Mr Nelson McCausland
Mr Basil McCrea
Miss Michelle McIlveen

Witnesses:

Mr Jeff Brown	}	Department of Education
Mr John McGrath
Mr Chris Stewart

The Chairperson (Mr Storey): I welcome John McGrath, Chris Stewart and Jeff Brown. Gentlemen, I am glad to see you again; no doubt, you will be here regularly in 2009. I ask John to make a few opening remarks.

Mr John McGrath (Department of Education): Chairperson, I am glad that you want to extend the time that we will spend with you.

The Chairperson: Yes; we value your company.

Mr McGrath: We are heartened to hear it.

The Chairperson: I am sure that you are.

Mr McGrath: We look forward to that. We will have much to learn from bringing this first major Education Bill through the Committee. It will be useful because we will be able to share our experience with colleagues who are involved in drafting future legislation. Therefore, when I said that we look forward to working more closely with the Committee, I did not say it lightly. We have provided the Committee with a briefing paper and a timetable of events. If the Committee thinks that it will help, Chris can speak about the briefing paper for a few minutes.

The Chairperson: That will be useful. I wanted to hold this meeting so that members can inform themselves of the process so that relevant questions and concerns can be raised now. That way, when the Committee reconvenes after Christmas recess, it can get to down to hard work.

Mr Chris Stewart (Department of Education): Thank you, Chairperson; and good morning, members. This paper follows on from the stocktake paper that we provided to the Committee a couple of weeks ago. It focuses on the two-Bill nature of the Department's legislative programme, its timetabling and arrangements. We take members' concerns about the two-Bill process seriously, as does the Executive.

That is reflected in the Executive's decision that the Department of Education take forward the entire programme; cherry-picking is not an option. We will do that by means of two Bills in a way and to a timescale that addresses the Committee's and other stakeholders' need for clarity about the whole programme. The timescale and implementation arrangements outlined in our paper are intended to do that and to ensure that the two Bills remain synchronized.

The timescale is a significant challenge for us; a year of very hard work lies before us to meet it. However, our aim is that the First Stage of the second Bill should be given in the Assembly as the first Bill is being given its Final Stage. If possible, both Bills will become law at the same time in January 2010.

The fallback position is that the second Bill should come into operation no more than three months after the first. However, in either case, it is extremely important that the Committee be clear on the content and purpose of the second Bill before the first Bill has passed the point of no return.

We recognise that to achieve that and to earn the Committee's confidence we must have an open and transparent process and that we must work closely with the Committee in developing the policy and the legislation of the second Bill so that there are no surprises. That is what we intend to do. We look forward to working closely with the Committee on the first Bill in the months ahead and on the development of the second.

We recognise that, despite what I have just said, many members will continue to have concerns about the two-Bill approach and would have preferred that the Department had presented a single Bill. However, as I have attempted to illustrate in our written submission, a single-Bill approach would cause another significant delay to the review of public administration (RPA) reforms in education. Worse, it would have prolonged uncertainty for staff throughout the education system; it would have reduced morale, which has been low until recently; hastened the recent exodus of mobile staff; and threatened the continuity in delivery of services in the coming year.

Monday's debate and decision in the Assembly on the Education Bill's Second Stage has already changed the outlook significantly. It has ended uncertainty and has reassured people throughout the education sector who, until recently, continued to doubt whether the RPA would ever happen. However, as the Chairperson correctly emphasised, it has also brought home to the Department the fact that it has a great deal of work to do. Committee and other Members raised significant concerns at Second Stage, and the Department recognises that it must work hard to address them. We look forward to working with the Committee in the months ahead with a view to doing just that.

The Chairperson: Paragraph 3 of your written submission on the legislation timetable says:

"This was reflected in the Executive's decision that the programme in its entirety should be taken forward."

Am I right in drawing a distinction between the programme — that is the establishment of an education and skills authority (ESA) — and the details of the regulations? It is not saying that the Committee will not be able to make changes to the Bill during its scrutiny.

Mr McGrath: That is correct. Changes are subject to the will of the Assembly and the Committee. The paper simply says that the integrity of the programme must be preserved rather than, for example, deciding to stop halfway through.

The Chairperson: Paragraph 4 gives details of the intended timescale. You will have heard the Committee say earlier that it will seek an extension to the Consideration Stage. That extension is not to allow us to drag our feet but to ensure that we have appropriate time to consider the Bill. An exchange between the Committee and the Department on amendments, which would have to go to the legislative draftsman, would take time. There is an intended timescale, and we will endeavour to make it work.

I want the Committee to be clear that it has the power to scrutinise the Bill, express its concerns about it and suggest changes that will mould the authority into what it should be.

Mr McGrath: We fully recognise that. The outcome is subject to the decisions of the Committee and, ultimately, the Assembly. Members will recognise that we are becoming increasingly concerned about the state of play in the boards, for instance. I need not go into that; Members will know what I mean. Everyone agrees that it is critical that we get to the end point as quickly as possibly.

Mr McCausland: Mr McGrath said that everyone wants to get to the end point as quickly as possible. However, that will depend on the Committee's receiving clear information from the Department on contentious issues such as the controlled sector and input into the sub-regional structures as soon as possible. The quicker you provide us with information on those, the quicker the process will be; the longer it takes to provide that information, the slower the process will be.

Mr McGrath: Those are fair points. Some areas might be regarded as contentious or unclear, and the Department must quickly paint a clearer picture of them. That is one of the matters that we are considering. Now that the timetable has been set, we are addressing parallel work strands that need to be accelerated; we also need to paint a picture of how we see the ESA operating. I accept your comments, Mr McCausland: it is our responsibility to fill those gaps.

Mr B McCrea: You will be aware from the discussions on the Bill's Second Stage that the Ulster Unionist Party is suspicious of the ESA, and we think that we reflect a widespread concern throughout the education establishment. Although we understand that there are benefits in centralising certain functions — and we would like to see those pursued — we are worried that a £50 million invest-to-save fund is being made available to realise a potential £20 million per annum at a time when life is tough. From the information that we received from the chief executive designate, it seems that the savings are coming from a narrow band, and we are not sure that those savings can be trapped.

We are concerned about democratic accountability. If the Bill becomes a vehicle for the Minister of Education to bypass the Assembly, we will resist it line by line; I do not know whether I can make it any clearer. We are not happy with how the Minister of Education has engaged with the Committee, the Assembly or the people whom we represent. Our biggest concern is that everything else will become superfluous. Therefore you will need to help us in the process if you want our support.

We support the desire to devolve responsibility and resources to schools, but we must ensure that it is more than mere words. We hear all the nice stuff, but there is an old saying in the Civil Service that "he who drafts wins". It is imperative that in the drafting of the Bill the power and resources go to the authority because the voluntary principles that allow the schools the freedom for action — with appropriate resources and good leadership — are fundamental to good schools. That is what we want to see from the Bill.

Without that, it will simply be another layer of bureaucracy.

Mr McGrath: The Minister's recent statements outlined that the Bill is designed to deliver a proposition that differs from the original ESA, which aimed at making savings and centralising functions and which might have been regarded as a sort of regional monolith.

Caitríona Ruane's new proposition aims to maintain high standards at the top end and to raise standards elsewhere in order to reduce the gap between them. Furthermore, it will enable the ESA to help and support schools and, as we told the Committee previously, will leave schools in a commissioning model with the ESA and allow them the freedom to deliver the outcomes. Schools will be accountable to the boards of governors and local communities, to the Education and Training Inspectorate, the ESA and, ultimately, the Committee and the Assembly, which will assess the use of taxpayers' money.

More work needs to be done to flesh out the important issues of local accountability and delivery; indeed, we discussed some examples of supporting schools with Ken Robinson at the last meeting. Although the ESA will be a single authority, that will not dilute accountability to the Minister, the Assembly and the Committee. The Northern Ireland Housing Executive and Invest NI are single authorities; a single model is only ineffective if it is unaccountable.

We accept those points, and we need to provide more detail about how the new body will operate, some of which will extend beyond dry words and drafting. It is not necessarily a case of he who drafts wins but of he who creates the first draft having more influence than whoever creates the final draft.

Mr B McCrea: That is where I have gone wrong.

Miss McIlveen: I am unsure how to follow the Ulster Unionists' party-political broadcast.

Mr B McCrea: You should listen and learn.

The Chairperson: It is different from the party's manifesto.

Miss McIlveen: Although we want John and Chris to brief the Committee as often as possible, has the Minister indicated that she will, if required, attend the Committee to provide clarification?

Mr McGrath: I am sure that the Minister would give that appropriate consideration.

Mr B McCrea: We do not want party-political broadcasts.

Mr K Robinson: I am sorry that I had to nip out; I thought that we were going to discuss the Bill, and I did not want to go through a brand new copy again.

John and his colleagues must realise the historic background — there is not much trust between most Committee members and the various forms of the Department of Education. The legislation was a twinkle in the eye of a direct rule Minister or a direct rule regime. Over the years, those Ministers patted us on the head, gave us tea and a bun and sent on our way; that was "consultation". The Committee is not prepared to endure that again.

We have some grave reservations, particularly about the role of controlled schools, which, we always felt, have received the short end of the stick; they are not even getting a stick this time. Moreover, we are concerned about delivery. You said that the ESA will not be a monolith, and you used the Housing Executive as an example. I am dealing with the retrenchment of that body, which is vacating its offices. Regional education offices could gradually be centralised.

You talked about unease in the education and library boards. That unease is due to the job uncertainty that affects all grades. We sometimes forget that the lower-ranked people make the daily bread-and-butter decisions on which schools rely. Are those people in the loop? A newspaper headline last night mentioned the loss of 460 jobs in the education sector. There is a scare story doing the rounds before we have even begun our scrutiny of the Bill.

Mr McGrath: The jobs that will go are in senior and middle management.

Mr K Robinson: What about the people who have kept the system going? They will become uneasy too.

Mr McGrath: I agree entirely. The continued uncertainty has not been helpful to anybody, particularly staff.

Mr K Robinson: How did we get into such uncertainty? The Committee did not cause it.

Mr McGrath: Political uncertainty.

Mr K Robinson: There was a rush to bulldoze the legislation through before anybody understood its implications.

Mr McGrath: The ESA and the date of 1 April 2009 were included in the Programme for Government, for which there was political support; however, difficulties arose that created uncertainty. The problem was that it created uncertainty about whether, rather than when, the RPA changes that emerged in the Assembly were to take effect. That has caused difficulties. Some people were briefing against the very notion of the ESA until recently. However, the mood music has changed significantly in the past week or two; particularly since Second Stage when people realised that, subject to the will of the Assembly, there would be an education and skills authority.

There are issues about boards' capacity to continue to provide a service to schools in the meantime. There are worries across the piece; no doubt the Committee has heard that from school principals. The status quo does not hold. The model that we offer is a single but decentralised organisation, the main focus of which is to help and support schools. It will centralise the back-office functions because that is where efficiencies can be made; and the outline business case makes it clear that the 460 jobs are in senior/middle management.

I do not think that anyone would have difficulties in shrinking such posts.

Mr K Robinson: How do replace that loss of expertise? Will those people be put out of a job only to come back again next week as consultants at a higher salary?

Mr McGrath: If we centralise functions, we will be able to run the same single-functioning finance, human-resources and transport services without those posts. However, it is almost certain that there will be no compulsory redundancies. We will reduce posts, shrink the organisation and decentralise the back-office functions as a starter.

There is scope to make further savings as we centralise functions such as transport and operate them on a single regional basis; those savings will be made simply through efficiencies. The education transport budget is about half that of Translink — it is a big operation. I cannot believe that in moving from five organisations to one and introducing better logistical management, savings cannot be made that could go back into the schoolroom.

Mr K Robinson: Will it be more efficient?

Mr McGrath: It should be. I am talking about delivering a proper service more efficiently; I am not talking about simple cuts.

Mr Stewart: We cannot afford to lose expertise that is required for service continuity. However, such a risk already exists and has been exacerbated by the uncertainty that has pervaded the system until now. Vital mobile staff left educational organisations because they were not sure what the future of the RPA in education was. We hope that that pattern will now stop.

Mr K Robinson: Whose fault is this?

Mr Stewart: It is not a function of civil servants to apportion blame. Nevertheless, uncertainty has damaged staff morale and has impaired organisations' ability to deliver the services for which they are responsible. It is incumbent on the Department to move matters forward as quickly as we can, recognising, as has been said, the role of the Assembly and the Committee, and to be satisfied that we have the right model and the right legislation.

Mr K Robinson: Some of us were on the Committee for Culture, Arts and Leisure when it scrutinised the Libraries Bill. We saw the difficulties ahead, so we dug our heels in, and, after a long struggle, eventually other people recognised that we were not being obstructive; we merely wanted to ensure that the Bill would be more efficient.

I am glad that the Minister has at least recognised democratic accountability, although I know that Trevor has reservations about that. There must be democratic accountability of the kind that has been built into the Libraries Bill. Ensuring accountability is one of the functions of a Committee.

However, the Committee feels that this Bill is being steamrollered through. This Bill will effect such a massive change in the education system that we cannot afford to miss anything in it.

Mr Stewart: We do not want to give the Committee the impression that the Department will attempt to steamroller it.

The Bill is not immutable. The Department would not be surprised if significant amendments were proposed by the Committee and other MLAs; neither would we be surprised by a request for a significant extension to Committee Stage. Indeed, we bore that in mind when considering the timetable.

The Bill is the most important piece of education legislation in a generation. Therefore it is important that we get it right and that the Bill commands the broadest possible consensus.

The Minister has made it clear to John and me that she expects us to work closely with the Committee in addressing its concerns; there will be no attempt at steamrolling or at paying lip-service to the Committee.

Mr McCausland: In answer to Michelle's question, John said that the Minister would give consideration to requests to appear before the Committee. The nature of that consideration is one of the factors that will influence how people view the Minister's role and whether she is acting in good faith. Delighted though we are to see John, we are reminded constantly by the Minister that she is the Minister; therefore it would be appropriate for her to speak to the Committee. Not that we do not want to see you, John —

Mr McGrath: It is not my job to commit the Minister —

Mr McCausland: Yes, but will you convey that point to her?

Mr McGrath: I will convey your sentiments and the wish of the Committee that the Minister should appear before it on occasion to help explain the objectives of the Bill.

Mr K Robinson: In which context do you intend or not intend to commit the Minister?

Mr McGrath: I never commit Ministers unless I fully know their minds.

The Chairperson: You say that there is no intention to steamroller the Committee. This Committee will not allow itself to get into the same position as the Committee for Culture, Arts and Leisure with the proposed libraries authority. The Committee has raised several issues concerning the Bill, and we all believe that changes and amendments must be made.

Point 4 of your briefing paper states that:

“The first Bill will be introduced to the Assembly as soon as possible, with the aim that it would be on the statute books before the 2009 summer recess.”

Why must it be on the statute book by the summer of 2009 if we have commencement orders for 2010? The Committee will seek an extension of Committee Stage; therefore it could be on the statute books by the end of 2009, but it does not have to be on the statute books by the summer recess.

Mr Stewart: You are absolutely right. The timetable in the briefing paper was a compromise that was agreed by the Executive. That compromise balanced the desire of the Minister and the Department to establish and maintain momentum and demonstrate clearly to the education system that we are making progress with the concerns expressed by the Executive and the Committee on the need for clarity on the entire programme before there was an irrevocable commitment to any of it. That is why the briefing paper is carefully worded and why we have recorded that date as an “aim”.

If the Committee decides to extend Committee Stage significantly — and this is a significant and complex Bill — the Bill may not be enacted by the summer recess. We recognise that possibility, and it is a matter for the Committee to decide how long the Committee Stage will take.

The Chairperson: Thank you.

Mr Lunn: If the Bill had been presented a year ago, the Committee might have tried to extend its deliberations in order to stymie it. However, as John said, the mood music has changed and the Committee will examine the Bill in a constructive manner. We may need some extra time, but that extra time will be taken with a view to getting it right.

Ken Robinson is right that even the Alliance Party has reservations about aspects of the Bill. However, there has been a sea change and the Committee wants to see the Bill progressed. Some members still need to be converted, but as the months go on we will see how things progress.

I am looking forward to the next few months; it is nice to have substantive legislation to get our teeth into at last.

Mr Stewart: I assure the Committee that when the Second Stage of the Bill was passed on Monday, no one in the Department interpreted that as ticking a box. The first thing that I said to my team afterwards was that the work starts now. The Department has considerable work to do.

The Chairperson: John, Jeff and Chris, thank you very much for appearing before the Committee today.

PRESUMPTION OF DEATH BILL (NIA 23/07)

Members present for all or part of the proceedings:

Mr Mitchel McLaughlin (Chairperson)
Dr Stephen Farry
Mr Fra McCann
Ms Jennifer McCann
Mr Declan O'Loan
Mr Ian Paisley Jnr
Ms Dawn Purvis
Mr Peter Weir

Witnesses:

Mr Neil Lambe	}	Department of Finance and Personnel
Mr Oswyn Paulin

The Chairperson (Mr McLaughlin): The next item on the agenda is the Committee's clause-by-clause scrutiny of the Presumption of Death Bill. We will again hear evidence from Oswyn Paulin, the departmental solicitor and head of the Government Legal Service, and Neil Lambe, principal legal officer in the civil law reform division of the Departmental Solicitor's Office. I note that they arrived early. I refer members to the Department's response to the issues that were raised at last week's meeting and the secretariat briefing paper.

The public gallery is quite full. Hansard is recording this session, and I remind everyone that all mobiles telephones must be switched off completely to avoid any interference with the sound.

The best approach might be if, on a clause-by-clause basis, I ask the Committee Clerk to talk to the secretariat paper. I ask members to consider each clause in conjunction with the related explanatory paragraphs in the secretariat paper. As we consider each clause we will ask whether any further clarification is required from Oswyn or Neil, and then

I will put the question on a clause-by-clause basis. The Committee Clerk will now say a few words about the secretariat paper.

The Committee Clerk: The paper summarises briefly, clause by clause, the key issues that arose from the evidence sessions. There are a number of potential amendments against some of the clauses. The DFP officials are here, and members may wish to get any clarity that they require at this point. This is the last formal occasion to consider the Bill. The Committee report must be drafted after this session, and that draft will then be considered on 7 January 2009. It must be agreed by 14 January and laid before the Assembly by 16 January at the latest.

The paper briefly summarises the key issues arising in relation to each clause. It is not definitive; the table of issues that members received last week was a much more detailed document and covered all the issues, but this is just a summary.

The Chairperson: I know that the Department has taken account of the discussion last week. Oswyn and Neil, have you any comments initially, or will we simply deal with each issue as we come to it?

Mr Oswyn Paulin (Department of Finance and Personnel): We have no introductory comments.

The Chairperson: We will proceed to discussing the Bill on a clause-by-clause basis, and members will have an opportunity to request any further clarification or to make a comment.

Clause 1 (Declarations of presumed death)

The Chairperson: Members should take a moment to read through that clause, along with the relevant explanatory section of the secretariat paper, and I will then ask whether there are any issues arising.

Ms Purvis: I would like clarification that the additional third jurisdictional rule will be included in the clause, as we discussed last week.

Mr Neil Lambe (Department of Finance and Personnel): Yes; subject to the necessary consent of the Executive, we propose to table a third jurisdictional rule, which would become clause 1(2)(c).

The Chairperson: If there are no other indications, I will put the question.

Mr O'Loan: Are we agreeing the Committee's report now? What is the process here?

The Chairperson: We are discussing the Bill clause by clause; we are now dealing with clause 1. If you are not content that you have read the explanatory section on clause 1 you should take the time to do so. It is important that people understand.

Mr O'Loan: What are we doing differently, or extra, on 7 January?

The Committee Clerk: The report will simply reflect all of the issues that arose during the evidence sessions, the response of the Department to each issue, and the outcome of the clause-by-clause consideration. The report will be commentary on all of that, and will detail any proposed amendments.

Mr O'Loan: This meeting, here and now, is our key decision time as to the opinion that the Committee will offer on the Bill. Is that correct?

The Chairperson: Yes.

Mr O'Loan: Is it usual to do that in the presence of the departmental officials?

The Chairperson: I am assured that it is. The question did not occur to me prior to the meeting, but I am sure that it is usual. This is for clarification.

Mr O'Loan: Is the Committee in open session?

The Chairperson: Yes. The meeting is being recorded by Hansard.

Mr O'Loan: Is it usual to agree a report in open session?

The Committee Clerk: The evidence and proceedings on primary legislation should be covered in open session.

According to precedent, Committees' consideration of reports, such as inquiry reports, take place in closed session. The overriding rule is that Committees' consideration of Bills take place in open session.

The Chairperson: Several amendments have been accepted. We are reading down to point 13 on the briefing paper. Do members have any objections or points to raise?

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the Committee being satisfied with the wording of the Department's proposed amendment, put and agreed to.

Clause 1, subject to the Committee being satisfied with the wording of the Department's proposed amendment, agreed to.

Clauses 2 to 5 agreed to.

Clause 6 (Effect on property rights of variation order)

The Chairperson: I will give members time to read the short paragraph on the proposed amendment in the briefing paper.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the Committee being satisfied with the wording of the Department's proposed amendment, put and agreed to.

Clause 6, subject to the Committee being satisfied with the wording of the Department's proposed amendment, agreed to.

Clause 7 (Insurance against claims)

The Chairperson: I will give members a moment to read the short paragraph on the proposed amendments in the briefing paper.

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the Committee being satisfied with the wording of the Department's proposed amendment, put and agreed to.

Clause 7, subject to the Committee being satisfied with the wording of the Department's proposed amendment, agreed to.

Clauses 8 to 10 agreed to.

New Clause (Disclosure of information)

The Chairperson: A new clause on the disclosure of information must be inserted. I will give members a moment to read the briefing paper. I will also invite the officials to explain the clause, if that will help.

Dr Farry: The High Court will have the ability to order someone to disclose information. In the event that the person does not disclose that information, what is the recourse open to the court with regard to imposing a penalty? If a criminal penalty is to be imposed, do we need permission from the Secretary of State to create such a penalty?

Given that we are only a devolved Assembly, can this legislation bind bodies and institutions that are not part of the Northern Ireland devolved settlement?

Mr Paisley Jnr: On the back of the previous question, would that be a civil penalty or a criminal penalty?

Mr Paulin: My understanding is that it would follow the rules that apply in third-party disclosure in general, so it would be a contempt of court and it would proceed through the court, presumably at the instance of the Attorney General.

Dr Farry: There is no new offence being created then. It is simply a wider interpretation of the existing issue of criminal contempt of court.

Mr Paulin: There are two types of contempt of court — civil and criminal.

Dr Farry: Will this be civil or criminal contempt?

Mr Paulin: I assume that it would be civil contempt.

Mr Lambe: It is likely to be civil contempt of court. We were content to rely on the general law on contempt, rather than to create a new criminal offence.

Dr Farry: Does the scope of any requirement to disclose that information simply apply to institutions that are under the control of the Northern Ireland devolved settlement, or can it apply to non-devolved bodies?

Mr Paulin: The intention is that it will apply to both sectors.

Dr Farry: Do we have the capacity to deliver this piece of devolved legislation?

Mr Paulin: There are two aspects to that. First, the High Court and its powers are not devolved, so the Secretary of State's consent is required in respect of that. Secondly, as the new clause was not in the original Bill that was laid before the Assembly, we will have to go back to the Secretary of State and get consent in relation to it. The consent would cover the devolved and non-devolved sectors with regard to holding the documents, in addition to the powers of the court. In both aspects, the Secretary of State's consent would be sought.

The Chairperson: Before I invite any further questions, it might be helpful if Neil wishes to elaborate further on the matter, especially given that this is a new clause, which arose from the discussions that we had last week. If you give us a broad outline, it might anticipate or inform some of members' questions.

Mr Lambe: We also made clear that subsection 6 of the new clause as it is currently drafted binds the Crown. That statement coupled with the Secretary of State's consent that we hope to obtain will mean that UK-wide Departments of State, for example, would be bound by any order of the High Court to disclose information to it.

Mr O'Loan: As I have said before, I am very concerned about the new clause. I am supportive that the High Court would have the right to order information to be given to it, but I have argued before and I will continue to argue for a much stronger clause that imposes a general duty on anyone who has knowledge about the possible death of someone to bring that to the court if they know that the court is looking at that matter.

I refer to the answer which the departmental officials gave last week, and which they have now given us in writing: The second paragraph, on this point, reads:

"The Department considers that discretionary power as preferable" —

I am sure that the word "as" is intended to be "is" —

"to the imposition of a general duty of disclosure on any person with information about the circumstances surrounding the disappearance of the missing person. A duty of disclosure could result in the provision of large quantities of information to the Court, which could in no way assist it making a decision on an application. That would place an unnecessary burden on those who provided information to the court as well as an unnecessary burden on the Court in its consideration of that information."

I find those statements very surprising. I am seeking a requirement of disclosure pertinent to the decision that the court is making, which is whether the person can be presumed to be dead, and not information about anything else. Therefore, it would only put a duty on persons who had particular information relating to that issue only to provide that to the court. It would not require handing over vast amounts of documentation.

The suggestion that there could be a considerable amount of information to be handed over is, in itself, a concession from the officials that such pertinent information could exist. I am not persuaded of the point of putting an undue burden on persons to hand over such information, or an undue burden on the court to consider it. It is clear that the burden would only be to hand over information to the court that is very directly pertinent.

The equivalent Scottish legislation carries a requirement to disclose, and the Committee has been told that that provision has not been used in Scotland. However, we have a very different situation here, as this piece of legislation relates, in particular, to the situation of the disappeared. Those deaths have been much examined, and there may well be information in the hands of the public authorities regarding those deaths. That is quite different to ordinary cases of people being missing in the Scottish situation. We know that the relatives of the disappeared want that clause to be present and that, during the original consultations on the Bill, the judiciary wanted it to be present. Therefore, I find it strange that the officials are arguing against that weight of opinion.

I make explicit my concerns when I see some elements of the official system are unwilling to disclose information, or are placing barriers in the way of the disclosure of such information. That makes me very worried. My instinct is to allow that information to come forward.

The Committee should support the inclusion of an extra clause to cover such a situation. Indeed, there may be a stronger clause that could be used in place of the existing one, but I am not a lawyer, and I cannot argue that. There must be a clause in the Bill that imposes a duty on those who have information about a missing person and whether that person should be presumed dead. There should be a duty on that person to bring that information in front of the court.

The Chairperson: I refer members, in particular, to paragraphs 12 to 14 of the DFP submission.

Dr Farry: Peter, as a lawyer, are you on strike today?

Mr Weir: As MLAs, we should be well used to supposedly not working, but still getting paid.

Dr Farry: Really? [Laughter.]

Mr Weir: That is the public perception.

I do have a certain level of sympathy for what Declan has said, but I also have some concerns. There could be one of two scenarios if such a provision were included in the legislation. First, if there is a duty to disclose information on a missing person that is entirely general in nature, there is a danger that a deluge of such information could be received by the court. Although, I appreciate that is not entirely what has been said, if such a duty were enforced that could lead to a flood of information much of which would be completely irrelevant.

Conversely, if there were an attempt made to define the type of information to that of a pertinent nature, that could also create problems, as people would need to define what was “very pertinent” as I believe Declan said. That could potentially lead to relevant information being held back because a person or organisation did not want to disclose it, or could lead them to make the excuse that they do not believe it to be particularly pertinent. Alternatively, that person or organisation could err on the side of caution and send all the information that they have.

I have greater sympathy for the general position that the court has complete power to seek any information that it feels is relevant. Although I appreciate that our position is different from Scotland, the Scottish experience does not suggest that a general duty of power is something that is particularly useful in that respect.

Furthermore, there is the specific issue of the disappeared. Will the officials tell the Committee whether any consideration will be given to some degree of special consideration for the disappeared, as they are a relatively tightly defined group? Such a provision would take on board Mr O’Loan’s position, while retaining the general position of the power residing with the High Court.

Mr Paulin: It is worth returning to the purpose of the legislation, which is to enable people in certain circumstances to legally register a death. The purpose is not to investigate how that person came to disappear or die.

The difficulty in relation to the disappeared is that there seems to be absolutely no doubt that all those people in that category are dead. Therefore, little evidence is required to obtain an order from the court from which the legal consequences would flow. The efforts being made by relatives of the disappeared would not be helped by a disclosure order, which would merely add to the cost of their application.

One of the major expenses in litigation is disclosure. Large amounts of documents are frequently disclosed and not used. That involves a cost for the person who has the documents and for all the other parties who examine them because, if they are disclosed, everybody will look at them and take time in doing so. That is why the Department has sought a focused approach that gives the court the power to order disclosure, where it considers that necessary.

Mr Weir: Whatever effect disclosure would have on institutions, bodies or individuals in the UK, would it bind anyone in the Irish Republic? A lot of issues related to the disappeared were agreed between the British and Irish Governments. The location of the bodies means that the more relevant jurisdiction in respect of most of the disappeared is probably the Irish Republic.

Mr Paulin: The Department previously advised that it would work almost by consent from outside the jurisdiction. However, the Independent Commission on the Location of Victims’ Remains is protected from legal proceedings and from disclosure; therefore, any documentation that it has will not be captured by this provision.

Mr Weir: I have some sympathy for Mr O’Loan’s position, without agreeing with his conclusion. Would it better serve the purpose of this legislation if the duty to disclose information were associated with the powers and duties of the commission? Information would have to be gathered, and a broader level of disclosure is required in relation to the disappeared. That would require action by the British and Irish Governments, rather than this Bill.

Mr Paulin: The concern of the families is that there should be some proper investigation of how their relatives came to die. However, that would not be for the court in presumption of death proceedings. The court will only look at whether there is sufficient evidence that the person is dead.

In certain circumstances, where there is doubt, that might lead to an investigation into when a person was last seen alive. In regard to the disappeared, that is not the issue. I do not know if any other form of investigation continues into such deaths, or whether cases are closed when the bodies are recovered. I assume that inquests are held after bodies are found. That would be the proper forum in which to investigate the circumstances of those deaths, rather than an application for presumption of death.

Mr Paisley Jnr: Am I right to assume that this proposed insert is quite powerful, in that it gives the court the power to issue an instruction requiring any person to present and disclose information that he or she might have — even if that person is not party to the proceedings? Ultimately, that person could go to jail if he or she shows contempt for that order. That is quite a power, if it is used to its extreme.

Mr Paulin: Yes. One can also look at it as an intrusion on the people who hold documentation, and there can be consequences if the court's order is not complied with.

Mr Paisley Jnr: That power was not in the Bill originally. Members must realise that the Bill has that power of sanction as it progresses through the Assembly; it gives a different colour to what was available previously.

Mr Paulin: I agree.

The Chairperson: Mr O'Loan, are you satisfied that your comments be reflected in the Hansard report of the discussion? Or do you want to have the opportunity to register dissent?

Mr O'Loan: I will be registering my dissent at the draft statement of the Committee's view; I will be making a counter-proposal.

Mr Paisley Jnr: Can we agree to include the draft clause, with Mr O'Loan's agreement, and also look at his counter-proposal, which is very different?

Mr O'Loan: Counter-proposals usually are.

Mr Paisley Jnr: There is a chance that the person does not know that they have possession of certain material; they may be ignorant of the fact. The draft clause states that if the court discovers that an individual has relevant information, the court has the reins to bring a person or papers to them. However, your counter-proposal works the other way round; it puts the onus on the individual to present information to the court because they know that it is relevant. What happens if they do not know that it is relevant?

Mr O'Loan: My concern about the proposal as it is — and notice that we do not have the draft clause in front of us —

Mr Paisley Jnr: We do.

Mr O'Loan: It has not been signed off by all the interested parties, and discussions are still ongoing with Revenue and Customs and NIO, so it is not finalised. We know the broad thrust of it, so I am not quarrelling on that point. I am unhappy with it because it requires the court to have information or an instinct that a person or public body has further information before it can make any order. My counter-proposal would be to put a duty on an individual to present information if he or she knows that a court process is ongoing. Not being aware of that process would be an acceptable defence.

Mr Paisley Jnr: That is not a defence.

Mr Weir: Ignorance of the law is no defence.

Mr O'Loan: It is not ignorance of the law. You are lawyers; even I, as a non-lawyer, can see that you are not right. If the individual was unaware that the court was looking at a particular case, and did not reveal information for that reason, they would have a good defence. The clause should require anyone who has information about the circumstances of a person's disappearance and on whether they should be presumed dead — and who is aware that the court is examining the issue — to bring that information to the court.

Mr Weir: If there is a duty to disclose and an individual withholds evidence — and is found to have done so at a later stage — he or she will be told that they should have made the disclosure. This would be a get-out clause; the person could say that they were not aware of what was happening, even if they were. It strikes me that you are almost insulating people on that basis.

Would it be fair to say that what you have in mind would be a potential addition to what is there? You do not want to rein back the role of the High Court. Is it possible to take this in two stages? I would have thought that there could have been general acceptance of the power of the High Court; the issue is whether a general duty to disclose should be added.

The Chairperson: Mr O'Loan has suggested that he wants to put forward a proposition. That will have to be technically and legally proofed, as the offer that we have already in front of us has. I do not know whether you are in a position to do that today, but we can consider the options. An amendment could be offered at Consideration Stage, if more time is needed. I am not sure whether you can present something to the Committee today for consideration. Although we are discussing the Bill on a clause-by-clause basis, this is a new clause on which further work is ongoing, so we could just remit this to our next discussion, and deal with it at that point.

Mr Paisley Jnr: There is a huge principle at stake. This piece of draft legislation is to determine the question that comes before a court of whether person X is dead. That is the purpose and thrust of the legislation, and the clause that is being proposed adds to it quite considerably in that any judge can call any person — any person — and consider whether they have information relevant to the determination of that question. That is a very powerful insertion. I cannot understand why anyone on this Committee would not want to see that power in the Bill. Even though they may want to see a different power in addition to that, I cannot understand why we cannot agree, today, to what is actually there in principle.

The Chairperson: I will take a reading from the Committee on that. I am trying to establish, in the first instance, whether Declan is in a position to put his counter-proposal before us. There is a subsequent opportunity to offer an amendment. I intend to come back to the Committee to decide whether we want to proceed on what is in front of us. That is a matter for us to decide, not for me. I am not calling it at this stage; I will be guided by the Committee. Declan needs to tell us whether he has something additional that he wants to put before us.

Mr O'Loan: If we had a wording to say that the Committee is content with the inclusion of a new clause on the disclosure of information which confers on the court the power to require the disclosure of information, and that, in addition, with particular reference to the disappeared, we would seek an additional clause to impose a duty on any person who had information relating to the court's decision on the presumption of death of that person to bring that to the court.

Mr Weir: Clearly, we have to take a formal position on the new clause that has been drafted. I appreciate that Declan is being put on the spot to draft on the hoof, but as regards approving a new potential clause, do we not need to have the exact form of words, as opposed to a general proposition? There is the opportunity for us in January to make known our general position as part of the report. Presumably there would be the opportunity for Declan to have a bit of time to formulate an exact form of words for the legislation. That is what we are looking for. I am loath for the Committee to effectively give a blank cheque to a particular form of legislation, on any subject, without its specific wording having been decided on.

Currently, we are in a position to look at, and potentially adopt, the new clause that is in front of us. However, that does not rule out the possibility of Declan coming back to the Committee with a counter-proposal. I think that some members would want to see the wording of that proposal, and test whether legally it is the right way to go forward. We need an exact form of words for a new clause, rather than a general proposition. In January, Declan will have an opportunity to bring that forward.

Mr Ian Paisley Jnr: Mr O'Loan is suggesting a completely new clause, not an addition to the draft new clause before us. The draft new clause confers a specific power on the court. Mr O'Loan is proposing a different clause, and, therefore, I think, that has to be a stand-alone clause. We should consider the new clause as it stands, and, if another new clause comes forward, we can consider that too.

Mr O'Loan: I worded it as an additional clause, and I am content with that. I said that I thought it provided for a stronger requirement and, therefore, might replace the original new clause. As I said, I am not a lawyer.

The Chairperson: I have deliberately flagged up the fact that there is an opportunity to reflect on this, and to prepare the additional clause for consideration. Are you content that the Committee can proceed with what is in front of us?

Mr O'Loan: The wording of the question requires some alteration. To say that the Committee is content with the approach being proposed by the Department suggests that it is entirely content, and that that new clause is the sole proposition.

Mr Weir: As I understand it, the Committee is restricted; we have to follow a formula. Agreeing to the question does not mean that Committee members' minds are closed. There is the opportunity for Declan to bring forward his own additional proposal.

Mr O'Loan: I will take guidance from the Chairman and the Committee Clerk. However, it seems to me that to agree to the question as worded would close down the discussion.

Mr Weir: I do not mean it that way. My understanding is, as when we look at other questions, the question is whether the Committee is content. Technically, that is how we have to proceed. It does not preclude an additional clause being brought forward at a later stage. Agreeing that we are content with one thing does not mean that we are content with everything.

The Chairperson: Agreeing that we are content with the clause that we are considering does not close down the possibility of a further clause being added. The question would be whether the Committee is content with the approach being proposed by DFP for a new clause to be added concerning disclosure of information. That deals with the subject matter in front of us, without precluding Mr O'Loan from coming back to us with an additional clause.

Mr O'Loan: I am content with that.

The Chairperson: That will be reflected in the Hansard report. Are you content that we proceed on that basis?

Mr O'Loan: Yes.

The Chairperson: I recognise that everybody, including some of the consultees, will be on holiday over the recess period; however, I ask that, if it is possible, the officials inform the Committee of any updates in order to keep members as up to date as possible in their deliberations.

Question, That the Committee is content with the new clause, put and agreed to.

New clause agreed to.

Clauses 11 to 15 agreed to.

Clause 16 (Interpretation)

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the Committee being satisfied with the wording of the Department's proposed amendments, put and agreed to.

Clause 16, subject to the Committee being content with the wording of the Department's proposed amendments, agreed to.

Clauses 17 and 18 agreed to.

Clause 19 (Commencement)

Question, That the Committee is content with the clause, subject to the Committee being satisfied with the wording of the Department's proposed amendment, put and agreed to.

Clause 19, subject to the Committee being content with the wording of the Department's proposed amendment, agreed to.

Clause 20 agreed to.

Schedule 1 (Register of Presumed Deaths)

Mr Lambe: We are working with the Office of the Legislative Counsel to establish the precise wording that will be used to require the Registrar General to annotate an entry when he becomes aware that an entry in an ordinary register of deaths has been recorded outside Northern Ireland.

The Chairperson: Dawn Purvis raised that issue. Are you content with that response, Dawn?

Ms Purvis: Yes, subject to the Department's proposed amendment.

Question, That the Committee is content with the schedule, subject to the Committee being satisfied with the wording of the Department's proposed amendment, put and agreed to.

Schedule 1, subject to the Committee being content with the wording of the Department's proposed amendment, agreed to.

Schedules 2 and 3 agreed to.

The Chairperson: The next step in the process is for a draft report to be prepared for the Committee's consideration on 7 January 2009. In addition to reflecting the outcome of today's clause-by-clause consideration, that draft report will include a commentary on the various issues that arose. The Committee is required to report to the Assembly by 16 January 2009 at the latest, in accordance with the extended timetable for the Committee Stage of the Bill. Mr Paulin and Mr Lambe, can you confirm that the Department's amendments which the Committee has signed off on will be tabled by the Minister at the Consideration Stage of the Bill?

Mr Lambe: Yes. They will have to be taken through the formal Executive clearing process.

The Chairperson: That is the most effective and efficient system, because you have the legal wherewithal.

Mr Lambe: It is intended that, after the Committee has submitted the report and we have considered it, we will move quickly to the tabling of amendments for Consideration Stage.

The Chairperson: Thank you very much. It was a little complicated, but we got there in the end. The draft report will be available for members' consideration on 7 January 2009.

The Chairperson (Dr W McCrea): May I remind members that, for the purposes of Hansard, all mobile telephones must be switched off in order to prevent interference with the recording equipment. I also ask that members declare any interests. The meeting will consider two issues: departmental responses to amendments suggested by the Committee to the Diseases of Animals Bill at its meeting on 18 November 2008, and formal scrutiny of the draft Bill. The Committee made comments on the Bill as drafted, and the Department has responded on a number of clauses.

With regard to clause 1, 'Power to slaughter', the Committee recommended that the Department undertake a review of legislation relevant to the eradication of tuberculosis (TB), in particular extending powers to allow for a proactive cull of badgers. The Department has indicated that those powers are currently available under the Diseases of Animals (Northern Ireland) Order 1981, which is being amended by this Bill, and referred members to the 'The way forward on tuberculosis' in Northern Ireland. Members will be aware that that was the subject of a ministerial statement to the Assembly on 9 December 2008.

Members may wish to note that the principles of the Diseases of Animals Bill do not include culling, and that the Bill does not seek to amend legislation relating to the control of TB through the culling of badgers. Therefore, it is not possible to make an amendment to the Bill seeking the culling of badgers. However, members may wish to make a recommendation that the Department reviews and amends the Diseases of Animals Order (Northern Ireland) 1981 to allow for the culling of wildlife, including badgers, in areas of high-incidence levels, and as part of an enhanced disease-eradication programme. What is the mind of the Committee on that matter?

Mr Savage: I wish to return to a point that I made previously regarding clause 4, which, under "Powers of entry", states that:

"An inspector may at all reasonable times enter premises".

Should an inspector not have to give notice of entry?

The Chairperson: We will certainly come to that point in a moment. However, we are dealing first of all with clause 1, "Power to slaughter". I am told that it is not possible to make the amendment to this Bill seeking the culling of badgers.

Mr T Clarke: Why is that?

The Committee Clerk: The Bill has a number of principles that were considered at the Second Stage. That would have been the time to examine the possibility of having an additional principle, or to consider that principle. The power to slaughter is contained in the 1981 Order. The Chairperson is saying that — separately from this exercise — the Committee asked the Department to review the 1981 Order so that it could be brought up to date and amended in order to establish an eradication programme that would deal with circumstances in which levels of incidence of disease are high, in places such as Newry and Mourne or south Armagh. Such a programme would include the proactive culling of badgers.

Mr T Clarke: Can we not stall this process in order to bring that programme forward? The Department has not been willing even to consider such a course of action in the past. Why are we asking the Department to review that situation now? None of the suggestions that the Committee made in the past — including one that was raised by George Savage — have been taken on board anyway. Even if we continue to help the Department to get this Bill off the desk, it will not be that willing to help us with any other parts of it.

The Chairperson: The matter will be debated in an Assembly plenary. The Department cannot run away from any of the Committee's suggested recommendations if they are accepted by the Assembly. The 1981 Order will be reviewed and amended in order to allow for the culling of animals, including badgers, in areas of high incidence of disease as part of an enhanced disease eradication programme. What type of amendments can the Committee make?

The Committee Clerk: If, for example, the Assembly agreed in plenary to the Committee's recommendation that the 1981 Order be enhanced, the Department would have to take note of that. In the same way that the Committee is considering introducing a Committee Bill to deal with the Agricultural Wages Board, it could introduce a Bill to amend the 1981 Order.

Mr Elliott: Is it the case that the Department cannot include this issue in the Bill, or that it will not, because of the 1981 Order? If it cannot, we must know exactly why. However, if the only obstacle is the 1981 Order, I see no reason why the proposed Bill could not incorporate the slaughter of badgers for disease control. This is a totally separate Bill. There is no reason that separate provision could not be made as part of this legislation, as well as the 1981 Order. I do not see that the two would act against each other.

The Chairperson: Let us hear what the representatives of the Department have to say.

Ms Colette McMaster (Department of Agriculture and Rural Development): There are two elements to consider: the culling of badgers as a policy, and the legal powers to cull badgers. As the Minister said in her announcement, she has not introduced the culling of badgers as a policy at this stage. There is a need to gather more information. The Minister has announced that she wishes to carry out a study of the prevalence and distribution of TB.

The Chairperson: Let us get this right. Is it the case that the Minister cannot include such a provision in the Bill, or that she will not? Is it not possible to include that provision in the Bill?

Ms McMaster: It is our belief that the powers that allow us to cull badgers already exist in the 1981 Order. The new clause 1 adds to those powers. If, at some point in future, we decide to introduce a badger-culling policy, the primary powers are there. We would, however, have to introduce subordinate legislation that is based on those primary powers. We do not believe that new primary powers are required in order to enable the culling of badgers.

The Chairperson: Are you saying that a policy can be enabled only by way of subordinate legislation?

Ms McMaster: Our understanding is that that is all that would be needed.

The Chairperson: How do we get that subordinate legislation?

Ms McMaster: Subordinate legislation is a separate legislative process. The normal process is that subordinate legislation comes before the Committee, which has an opportunity to comment and consult on it. The subordinate legislation would be based on the powers that exist in the Bill, and, if the Minister decides on a cull in the future, we could introduce that legislation then.

Mr T Clarke: If the power is already partially included in the Bill, why can it not be made a part of the subordinate legislation, even though we may not want to use it? It seems that even if the Department had the power, it would not want to use it.

Is it not easier to include the issue now rather than when the Department makes a decision, which, given the track record of the Minister, is highly unlikely? If that decision is made, it will take longer to introduce the subordinate legislation.

The Chairperson: The officials tell us that they already have the power. Is that correct?

Ms McMaster: Yes, that is correct.

The Chairperson: If you already have the power, what is the purpose of the subordinate legislation?

Ms McMaster: The purpose of the subordinate legislation is to amend. I would ask Jennifer Corkey to comment on that.

Ms Jennifer Corkey (Department of Agriculture and Rural Development): Article 13 of the 1981 Order gives the Department extensive powers to introduce a scheme to destroy wildlife. The details of the scheme would be included in subordinate legislation, a procedure with which you are probably familiar, because such Orders come before you all the time. Subordinate legislation is, therefore, the procedure used to provide the detail of the scheme.

The issue is that it is not the Minister's policy at present to introduce a widespread, or particular, scheme to cull badgers. However, should that become a policy decision, the subordinate legislation would be introduced. After a policy commitment from the Minister, the Department would draw up the subordinate legislation. However, the Diseases of Animals (Northern Ireland) 1981 Order already contains all the powers necessary to deal with a cull of badgers, such as direct powers of entry and the power to devise a scheme.

The Chairperson: Can the Committee introduce the subordinate legislation?

Ms Corkey: Not until the Minister decides on a badger cull; subordinate legislation would follow that decision.

The Chairperson: My question is whether the Committee can introduce the subordinate legislation. Surely the Committee has powers to introduce legislation in its own right.

Ms Corkey: In the Diseases of Animals (Northern Ireland) Order 1981, the powers to make subordinate legislation are vested in the Department. Therefore, it is the Department that would bring the draft subordinate legislation to the Committee for its consideration.

Mr Elliott: I believe that it boils down to the difference between the existing legislation and the Committee wanting to introduce legislation that would, if necessary, enforce a badger cull. The issue is that the Minister has not agreed to a widespread badger cull taking place in certain circumstances; that is the crux of the matter.

Ms Corkey: Yes.

The Chairperson: Clearly that is the difference, but I am trying to find out how the Committee can make the Department or Minister act on the will of the Assembly.

Ms Corkey: That would be a matter between the Committee and the Minister, if that is the will of the Committee that there should be a —

The Chairperson: No, I am asking how the Minister could abort the will of the Assembly.

Ms Corkey: I am not aware that a debate on the subject has taken place in the Assembly. Has that happened?

The Chairperson: I am taking a step forward: if the Committee was minded to debate the issue on the Floor of the Assembly and achieved agreement, are you saying that the Department would still abort the will of the Assembly?

Ms Corkey: No; that is a matter for the Minister. Obviously, the Minister would have to speak to, and take into account, any Assembly debate on the matter.

The Chairperson: Can the Committee add an amendment to the legislation?

Ms Corkey: Yes, the Committee can table its own amendments through the Assembly. I am saying only that there are sufficient powers in the Diseases of Animals (Northern Ireland) Order 1981 to carry out a badger cull.

The Chairperson: Can the Committee add an amendment that will enforce that part of the legislation?

Ms Corkey: The enforcement powers are in the Diseases of Animals (Northern Ireland) Order 1981. You are really asking whether the Committee can table an amendment that will require —

The Chairperson: Yes, that will require the Department to get off its backside and do something.

Ms Corkey: That is really a policy matter. It is not a legislative matter.

The Chairperson: We are policymakers. The Assembly is a policymaker.

Ms Colette Connor (Department of Agriculture and Rural Development): The Minister is expected to come before the Committee fairly soon in 2009. That is certainly one of the issues that should be on the agenda, when the Committee can hear the Minister's views at first hand.

The Chairperson: Is the Committee minded to table an amendment on this issue and to ask departmental officials to seek legal advice in order to determine how to make the Department listen to the will of the Committee, and to put the matter on the Floor of the Assembly in order to make it the will of the Assembly?

Ms McMaster: That would be a policy issue. We do not think that it needs to be done through primary legislation.

The Chairperson: Something needs to be done through primary legislation, because nobody seems to be listening.

Ms Connor: That matter would not be included in primary legislation. It would be included in subordinate or secondary legislation — which is the implementing legislation — which would follow on from a policy commitment to carry out —

The Chairperson: The Committee is trying to ensure that the policy decision is made.

Ms Connor: The policy decision lies with the Minister.

The Chairperson: I believe that policy decisions can also lie with the Assembly, which has rights, too. Are you suggesting that a Minister will abort the will of the Assembly?

Ms Connor: No, we are not.

The Chairperson: Well, what are you saying?

Ms Connor: We are saying that it is the Minister's decision.

The Chairperson: We are saying that it is also the Assembly's decision.

Ms Connor: What we can do is to relay the Committee's comments to the Minister as soon as we leave this building today, and report back.

The Chairperson: In the meantime, the Committee will clarify its legal position with regard to how the matter can be taken forward.

Mr Elliott: The Committee is frustrated that no action has been taken. We have received report after report on the badger issue. Nothing has been done, and the Committee is, in a sense, using that issue in order to force policy changes. The Committee feels a general frustration.

The Chairperson: Can we include an amendment that states that, if high incidence of disease is identified, the Department should implement an eradication programme that includes the culling of wildlife? The general opinion is that such an amendment is necessary.

Mr Savage: Would that amendment include foxes?

The Chairperson: It would relate to all wildlife, which is why I did not use the word “badger”.

Mr Savage: Yes, I realise that it is open-ended.

The Chairperson: Can that amendment be included? The Committee will determine the legal position, and the witnesses can inform the Minister and the Department of the strength of our opinion that action needs to be taken. The Committee will not accept any more mere words from the Department, which is all that we seem to have had from the Department: words without action.

Ms Corkey: Do you intend to check the matter with your legal people?

The Chairperson: Oh, yes.

Ms Corkey: That is fine. I wanted to be clear on that.

The Chairperson: You can check it out, but I assure you that the Committee will determine its legal rights.

We move to clause 2, about the slaughter of animals and poultry treated with serum or vaccine. The Committee asked the Department to highlight legislative references to the compensation rate in the 1981 Order. The Department has provided those references for information. Other than that, are members content with the explanation provided by departmental officials at the meeting on 18 November 2008?

Mr Poots: How far do the powers to vaccinate extend, and to what animal diseases do they extend? I recall that, during the foot-and-mouth crisis, consideration was given to vaccination, which had been the case in South America. However, a decision was taken that that would not be done here. Do we have the ability to vaccinate for a range of illnesses in the case of an emergency, or would special powers need to be delegated in order for that to be done?

Ms Corkey: There are two ways to deal with vaccination. If it is to deal with a fast-spreading disease, such as foot-and-mouth disease or avian influenza, there are particular control orders to deal with those diseases, which contain powers for vaccination, if it was decided that vaccination was the appropriate route to follow. That is one way of implementing a vaccination scheme for a particular disease.

The other route that could be followed is outlined in clause 14 of the Bill, which gives the Department powers to cause such treatment as it considers necessary to be given to any animal or bird for the purpose of controlling or preventing disease. That includes treatment with serum or vaccine. Those powers could be used to vaccinate animals or poultry. Therefore, there are two ways of dealing with vaccination, but in a situation involving foot-and-mouth, it would be more likely to be dealt with under the Foot-and-Mouth Disease (Controlled Area) Order (Northern Ireland) 2002, and obviously in conjunction with the European Commission, the approval of which would be needed for a vaccination scheme.

The Chairperson: We now move to clause 3, which is about transmissible spongiform encephalopathies. The Committee was concerned that the clause provided the Department with too wide a range of powers. The Department has responded, indicating that the measures detailed in the clause and related schedule can be brought into force only by means of subordinate legislation, which is required to be presented to, and considered by, the Committee prior to its enactment.

In addition, the Department intends to have discussions on legislative proposals with the industry. It is probably that word “discussions” that gives cause for concern. Members may wish to consider advising the Department that the Committee will exercise close policy scrutiny of any relevant subordinate legislation, and make a recommendation that the Department undertakes a full 12-week consultation on legislative proposals, rather than that fancy word “discussions”. A proper consultation process should be carried out, rather than the Department simply stating that it will have “discussions”. What is meant by “discussions”?

Mr Andrew Kell (Department of Agriculture and Rural Development): What the Department means by that is a proper consultation process.

The Chairperson: Why was that not stated, because “discussions” are certainly not a full consultation process?

Mr Kell: We are talking about a scenario that has not happened. Hopefully, with the zero likelihood of BSE in sheep occurring, it is unlikely to happen. However, if there was a transmissible spongiform encephalopathy that was a public health risk, the Department would be of a mind to have discussions with local industry representatives about the best course of action. That would lead to proposals that would, ultimately, go out to consultation.

The Chairperson: It is important that, where there is subordinate legislation, or any legislation, there is a clear understanding that there is a full consultation process, because “discussions” could mean anything.

Mr Kell: I can confirm that there will be full consultation.

The Chairperson: Are members satisfied with that clear statement? The recording angels have made a note of it.

Clause 4 deals with powers of entry. The Committee called for the following amendments to the clause: that there be an opportunity to call upon third-party oversight; that standard operational procedure be included in the legislation, similar to the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) referring to biosecurity guidance; and that allowance be made for compensation to be paid to farmers should it be subsequently discovered that wrongful accusations were made. In respect of the latter, the Department states that legal advice is not to include such a clause as courts currently decide whether compensation is appropriate and at what level. Members may wish to accept — or not to accept — that explanation.

Members may wish to clarify whether standard operational procedure are made available to farm businesses in advance of an inspection or search; namely, would farmers be aware of the requirements placed on the Department? In addition, the Department states that non-compliance with standard operational procedure would result in internal disciplinary proceedings, whereby non-compliance with biosecurity guidance would result in publicly reduced compensation levels. The Department’s legal advisers feel that it is not advisable to create a precedent of including the standard operational procedure and suggests the use of judicial review and the courts if a complaint is made.

It is up to members to consider that matter. They may wish to see included in the Bill an amendment that specifies that inspections and/or searches must be undertaken in accordance with the standard operating procedure, as that offers protection and an awareness for not only farm businesses but for departmental officials, too. What is the Committee’s mind on that issue?

Mr T Clarke: If we accept what the Department proposes, are we not placing responsibility on the farmer? If the farmer is not satisfied, he has to take the legal case against the Department. It is highly unlikely that the farmer would go to that expense. Surely the idea behind the involvement of a third party is that there would be independence? There is a reference to a lay magistrate, but surely that was only a suggestion. Someone else could be a third party; it does not necessarily have to be a lay magistrate.

The Chairperson: Paragraph 28 of the central enforcement team standard operating procedure states that:

“A friend, neighbour or other person must be allowed to witness the search if the occupier wishes unless the Officer in Charge of the search has reasonable grounds for believing the presence of the person asked for would seriously hinder the investigation or endanger officers or other people.”

In other words, the officer in charge can not only object to the presence of that third party, but can prohibit it.

Mr Savage: I have raised this issue before, but I will do so again. It is clear to me that if someone wants to enter a farm, for whatever reason, notice should be given. I cannot see that matter clearly dealt with in DARD’s response. In this day and age, people cannot just walk on and off farms. I know that in some cases, premises must be entered, but the majority of farmers deserve to be treated with a bit of respect. If I were to enter the house or driveway of any of the officials who have entered farm premises, I would soon be asked what I was doing. Respect must be shown to the property owner. At the moment, DARD officials can do almost what they like. They are a law unto themselves. I mean that with the greatest respect, because I have a good working relationship with DARD officials.

There must be a common denominator whereby officials are not allowed to simply do as they please. It is a different story if officials have reason to be suspicious of a farmer. However, in order to build good relationships between DARD and farmers, the legislation should make provision to prevent officials from simply doing as they please. Most farmers want to have a good working relationship with DARD, but there must be mutual respect.

The Chairperson: The Department has stated that third-party oversight is not necessary as part of the normal inspection duties that it undertakes. The Department recognises that a third party should have a role if entry to a dwelling house is required. However, it also refers to the standard operating procedure and the appointment of a search liaison officer, who is a senior DARD official unconnected to the investigation. It is debatable whether any DARD officer is truly independent.

Ms Connor: We are conscious of the concerns regarding the search liaison officer, which the Committee raised in the last meeting. We reconsidered who a search liaison officer should be and agreed that a DARD official might not be wholly independent, even though that individual would not have any remit or knowledge in the case. We examined whether the search liaison officer should be drawn from a pool of our non-departmental bodies such as the Livestock and Meat Commission (LMC), or whether they should be drawn from a pool of our rural stakeholder forum, which includes representatives of the Ulster Farmers’ Union, the Northern Ireland Agricultural Producers Association (NIAPA) and the National Beef Association.

The search liaison officer would be totally independent from the Department and would be drawn from the pool when required. We do not expect the search liaison officer to have to be called on very often. A pool would be available, and the individual drawn from it would be totally independent from the Department.

The Livestock and Meat Commission, for example, is a non-departmental public body that operates at arm's length from the Department. Therefore, the search liaison officer could be someone from the LMC who is involved in the farm quality assurance scheme and who has knowledge of on-farm visits.

Mr Savage: I have no objections to that, providing that the farmer receives notice that someone will be coming onto the farm. If I opened the door of your house and walked in, you would ask me what I was doing. All of the people who you have mentioned are employed by DARD in one way or another. I mean this in the nicest way, but some of those people are not very sociable. Most farms now have CCTV because so much theft and so on has taken place, and those officials will be in trouble if they appear on those screens.

Ms Connor: Under the legislation, we must give 24 hours' notice of entry to a dwelling house.

Mr Savage: I will be quite happy as long as the farmer receives that 24 hours' notice.

Ms Connor: It is in only in circumstances that are not normal DARD business that we will not give 24 hours' notice. If we feel that we have to go out onto a farm immediately to investigate illegal activity, we will do that. The Department will need a search warrant from a lay magistrate, and there are other strict conditions in such cases. Nine times out of 10, 24 hours' notice will be given. Under the Diseases of Animals (Northern Ireland) Order 1981, the Department has never needed to use the power of entry to enter a private dwelling.

The Chairperson: I want you to clarify something because all the possibilities must be covered when legislation is being considered. A departmental official who is visiting my farm and house could prevent me from having my solicitor present at that visit. Your official could say that my solicitor has no right to be there. It is totally unacceptable for departmental officials not to allow my legal representative — a person on whom I would rely if matters were to be taken further — to oversee events. Under the legislation, such a person might not be allowed to attend.

Furthermore, because I have not seen your operating procedures, I do not have full knowledge of the rights of the officials who might come to inspect my facilities. Individuals have rights when officials come; therefore, the legislation should allow people to call upon third-party oversight.

You said that inspections or searches must be undertaken in accordance with central enforcement team standard operating procedure, which offers protection and awareness not only to the relevant farm business but to departmental officials, and that that procedure is furnished to the occupier at the time of the search. I am told that the legislation does not state that.

Ms Connor: I shall ask Mike Steel, who heads up the central enforcement team, to address those points.

Mr Mike Steel (Department of Agriculture and Rural Development): First, the powers that have existed since the introduction of the 1981 legislation have never been used — such circumstances are rare. Furthermore, to allay Mr Savage's fears, farms are not visited unaware unless there is good evidence to expect crime of some sort. Such visits are not used for run-of-the-mill matters or even when we are merely doubtful about whether things might be being done correctly; they are used only when there is strong evidence that something might require investigation without warning.

You referred to paragraph 28 of the central enforcement team standard operating procedure, which states that a friend, neighbour or other person may be present during a visit, unless the officer in charge of the search decides otherwise. You are concerned that the officer in charge has control of that decision.

The decision must be justified by certain circumstances, such as whether there was a risk that evidence might be destroyed, the investigation might be interfered with — which does happen — or that proceedings would be unreasonably delayed. When anyone wishes to be present at a visit, the default position is that he or she is permitted. Nevertheless, there are circumstances in which, for example, we know from a previous visit that if such a person were to be invited, they would come with a shotgun —

The Chairperson: We are not talking about anyone coming with a shotgun.

Mr Steel: I cannot envisage a circumstance in which departmental officials would not welcome someone else being present.

The Chairperson: The standard operating procedure states that a person must be allowed to witness the search:

“unless the Officer in Charge of the search has reasonable grounds for believing the presence of the person asked for would seriously hinder the investigation”.

When, how and to whom does the official prove that he or she has reasonable grounds for making such a decision? The official has the power to make the decision. A legal representative does not usually come with a shotgun; he or she usually comes with some papers. Nevertheless, a legal representative could be stopped.

Mr Steel: Legal representatives are frequently present, and we do not stop them.

The Chairperson: A legal representative could be stopped.

Mr Steel: Theoretically, he or she could be stopped, because we must accommodate circumstances in which someone arrives driving a digger at parked cars or brings a shotgun onto the scene. The procedure must cater for such circumstances, but it is not our intention for the officer in charge to use the powers that are outlined in paragraph 28 to prevent reasonable people from being present. Such actions would not benefit the investigation, because they would — correctly — be challenged when the case came to court, and the investigation would be cast in a bad light. I do not dispute the fact that paragraph 28 gives those powers, but it would not be in the investigating officer's interests to use those in the way in which you fear.

Mr Poots: I fully accept what is being said, but perhaps a little more clarity is needed about applying the procedure. In specific circumstances where officers feel endangered as a consequence of the actions of an individual, the procedure should indicate that they should have those powers. I understand the Chairman's point; officers could exceed their powers. Therefore, if some ground rules were in place at that stage, it would sort out the problem and find common ground.

Ms Connor: The Department supplied the Committee with a copy of its manual. It is prepared to reconsider what the manual says about the role of the search liaison officer. We are prepared to revisit paragraph 28 in order to clarify the roles and responsibilities of the officer in charge, the person who may or may not go on the farm at a given time and the search liaison officer. The role of those three individuals should be looked at again to try to be more specific on their roles and responsibilities.

The Chairperson: That would not necessarily give the individual protection in law. Paragraph 28 is not law and, therefore, that protection is not protection in law.

Mr Poots: It is also the duty of the officer to call the police if, for example, someone turned up with a shotgun or rammed the vehicle with a digger. The police would intervene in that situation and, I assume, would arrest the individuals who were acting in a threatening manner.

Mr Elliott: We all want the real criminals to be caught and to get their retribution. People who are genuinely innocent should not be made to feel as though they are criminals. I do not see that happening as a result of the proposed change to the legislation.

I accept that the alpha-nortestosterone issue was not covered by this piece of legislation. However, the circumstances that arose from that issue can be repeated. The Department continually hides behind the legal option that is open to farmers. In this day and age, how many farmers would be willing to take a judicial review against the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development? Unless the legislation includes some possibility for retribution against the Department when it wrongly accuses farmers, we are not making progress. I am adamant about that.

The Bill refers to fixed penalties against farmers. Why does the legislation not include fixed penalties that could be used against the Department? That would be a simple way around the issue. Let us have a fixed penalty against the Department.

Members know how departmental officials have treated some innocent farmers — and the officials who are here today will also accept that. The treatment of those farmers was not very nice. If officials were in a similar situation, they would not like it. I want such a provision to be included in the Bill. I will not put my hand up to vote for it unless that is included, and I am serious about that. Something should be included to protect the innocent farmer, and it is not in the Bill. The Department keeps hiding behind the fact that farmers can take a judicial review or go to court. They will not do that; they do not have the money or the power to do so.

In its response to the Committee's comments on clause 4, DARD said that its departmental solicitors do not feel that it would be advisable to create the precedent of making the standard operating procedure a legal document. Why do they not feel that that can form a legal document? The Department does not give any explanation for that.

Mr Steel: I shall return to a point that was made earlier, which does not address Mr Elliott's concerns, but might ameliorate them to some extent. I would be happy for the standing operating procedure — or a concise digest of it — to be handed to the people at the time of the investigation, so that they would be aware of the rights and rules under which the Department operates. That could be included in the standing operating procedure.

The Chairperson: We need an answer to Mr Elliott's point. It is important that proper protection is included. Penalties are always being placed on the farmer. No one who is dealing with the legislation wants to protect any rogue, whether that is a rogue farmer or anyone else. If anyone wanted to do that, they would not deserve to sit at this table. We are not out to do that; we are out to protect innocent people.

We want to ensure that that protection is included, because, unfortunately, the previous case that Mr Elliott mentioned left a bad taste in the mouth of the farming community. Farmers who were later proved to be innocent were treated and portrayed as though they were rogues. That is how it was left. They had to fight to clear their names in their communities, and that is a totally unacceptable position. Therefore, we want to be sure that, if the legislation allows for penalties to be imposed on the farmer — and it should do to penalise people who have done wrong — the Department must also be subject to warnings and penalties.

Mr Irwin: My concerns are similar to that of the Chairperson and the Deputy Chairperson. During the time of the alpha-nortestosterone situation, farmers in my constituency who were aged in their 70s and were very decent people were traumatised and shocked. Their houses were raided, and they were consequently proved to be innocent. The difficulty is that guilty people seem to get away and that the Department comes down on innocent people. Something must be done to offer redress to the people who were wronged. I do not think that the Department has made any redress or paid any compensation to those farmers who were traumatised and came through so much. The legislation must include provision to cover farmers in similar situations.

The Chairperson: We also need an answer as to why the Department has taken legal advice against the inclusion of the standard operating procedure in the legislation. It seems that the only reason for that suggestion is because of precedent. I am sorry, but that is not good enough.

Mr Pat Millen (Departmental Solicitor's Office): That is one reason why I concluded that the standard operating procedure would not be an appropriate inclusion in a primary Bill. To my knowledge, an internal administrative document has never been elevated to a statutory document. Essentially, the standard operating procedure is administrative internal guidance to departmental officials. Such guidance has never been given the status of being elevated to a statutory document.

The fact that it has not been done up to this point is a good indication that it is a course of action that should be thought over before it is pushed forward. In my view, pushing forward an internal administrative document and putting it in the face of the Bill would be tantamount to opening Pandora's box. One simply cannot know where it would go after that.

The Chairperson: If it is right, why should it not be included? You can turn things one way whenever it suits the Department, and make those into proper legislation if it suits, and you can change it the other way when it does not suit.

Mr Millen: I would need to see concrete examples of that. I am not sure to what you are referring when you say that the Department changes things over.

Regarding the standard operating procedure, an internal administrative document that is drawn up in the Department is not appropriate for inclusion in a piece of primary legislation.

The Chairperson: Perhaps, if I adjust the illustration, it will help you. I am led to believe that the biosecurity guidance, which is currently voluntary, will become primary legislation.

Mr Millen: Yes, that is the case, although it will not appear on the face of the Bill.

The Chairperson: Nevertheless, there will be an obligation in the Bill.

Mr Millen: There will be an obligation to produce guidance, although not in the Bill itself.

The Chairperson: That has consequences. I am not sure what Pandora's box that will open.

Mr Millen: With all due respect, I would not necessarily compare the two documents. One is an internal document that is drawn up by the Department to guide its officials in how it conducts its business. The other, when it is created, will owe its origins to a statutory document: in other words, it is a statutory document from the start.

The Chairperson: There is a problem. All that I am saying is that in order to activate the legislation, the issue must be dealt with. Members have indicated their feelings on the matter.

Mr Millen: I accept the Committee's point. I merely interjected in order to clarify to the Committee —

The Chairperson: In giving legal advice to your colleagues, you must take that issue into consideration. It is extremely relevant.

Mr Millen: I assure the Committee that when I sit down to consider something, I see both sides of the coin. You can be reassured that I did not put that into my response to the Department with one eye closed.

The Chairperson: I appreciate that. All that I am saying is that no reason is given —

Mr Millen: I apologise for that, Chairman. That should have been added. I provided that part of the response to the Department. Perhaps I should have elaborated.

The Chairperson: I appreciate that. It is hard to think of everything. Do not worry about it.

Mr Millen: I thought that I should interject when Mr Elliott made his point.

Mr Elliott: Although I appreciate that, I still do not consider it to be a good-enough reason as to why the matter was not included. I am not a learned gentleman like Mr Millen. However, as he is present at the table, can he offer advice on how the Department could include protection for innocent farmers?

Mr Millen: I suppose that that is where my expertise ends, Mr Elliott. I am not a policymaker. I cannot speak on behalf of the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development.

Mr Savage: Well, you are certainly not a farmer.

Mr Millen: I am not a farmer, although I live in the country. I assure you that I know several farmers. As I have said, that is where my expertise ends. Clearly, the issue must be examined. It is not sufficient to say that there must be protection, because that raises the question of what structure that protection should take, which is a policy matter. There are many options.

The Chairperson: No matter what policy emerges, it will be tested by the Departmental Solicitor's Office when it comes into legislation. It must be tested in order to determine whether it can be structured into a legal framework.

Mr Millen: That is the nature of policymaking. I am sure that it is no different in the Department of Agriculture, the Department of Health, and so on. That is the nature of the system. It is all about the devices that come forward. At present, there is none. Policymaking is about coming up with suggestions and solutions.

Although someone says that there must be protection, sometimes, there is simply not enough information on which to offer a view. Therefore, I am sorry, Mr Elliott, that I am not able to give you a list of matters that should be included. I believe that that will require much thought.

The Chairperson: Well, you may put on your thinking caps.

Mr Poots: It is fairly clear that Mr Millen is saying that the protection that we seek should not be put into primary legislation because that would cause huge difficulties for all legislation thereafter.

The Committee's problem is that the Department has a range of fixed penalties for farmers, but, in order for a farmer to receive compensation, he must take the Department to court. If the Department can apply a range of fixed penalties, and it acts inappropriately or in way that is detrimental to a farmer who has not broken the law in any way, shape or form, there should be means for it to pay fixed compensation. The Department does not have to take a farmer to court in order to apply a fixed penalty. If it is found that the farmer has not been acting wrongly, he should not have to take the Department to court.

The Chairperson: Fixed penalties are dealt with in the next clause of the Bill. I understand what you are saying about the Department.

Mr Poots: Mr Elliott's hurdle is one that all of us are facing, and if we are to get over it, the matter must be clarified. People who are innocent and who have been treated wrongly should have access to some means of compensation without having to go through the judicial process.

The Chairperson: Let us return to some of the suggestions that have been made.

Mr Millen: Perhaps I could address Mr Poots' last point. It is important to compare like with like. With respect, comparing a system of fixed penalties with a system in which a farmer has been wrongly accused is not comparing like with like. There is a difference between the two circumstances.

The Chairperson: No. The farmer is a small fry, but the Department happens to be a big fry.

Mr Elliott: Are you saying that it does not matter that a farmer's neighbours are saying that he is guilty of using illegal substances? Does it not matter that he is being wrongly accused and is being lambasted in his own community?

The Chairperson: He will be written about in the newspapers until, some day, he may be able to prove his innocence. It is a very serious matter.

Mr Millen: I completely accept that. However, a system of legal redress is already in place to address such a situation.

The Chairperson: You said that you have listened carefully, so you will understand how difficult it is for an individual farmer to take a case in the current economic climate. Will he have the financial backing that is required in order to take such a case? Will his bank back him? If he does not get the backing of his bank, there will be a question mark over his ability to come up with the money to take the case, or to ensure that the money is paid upfront. Some of us have been in similar situations with legal advisers like you in the past, and there are lessons to be learned. It is very easy to talk people into taking a case, but it is a different thing when one has to come up with the spondulicks to do the job.

Mr Millen: Absolutely; but, as I said, a system of redress is available. When it comes to examining policy difficulties, the problem with such proposals is how to quantify the loss and express that in legislation. That is just one of the problems that are leaping off the page.

Mr Savage: In any rural area, those kinds of investigations on farms create a great deal of suspicion in the community. How many times in the past year has the Department used its special powers?

Mr Steel: To which special powers are you referring?

Mr Savage: I am referring to the powers of entry and carrying out raids.

Mr Steel: In the case of the alpha-nortestosterone problem, the abuse of growth promoters was quite common until 1996, and a lot of on-farm raids took place. Around 2004 or 2005, an allegation was made about stolen cattle from the Republic, and a Northern farmer was alleged to have been the responsible party. The police asked us to accompany them to the premises, where they found enormous quantities of an illegal growth promoter in a fridge. That search was carried out under warrant by the police.

A year later, a raid on another house revealed a quantity of illegal growth promoters and a syringe for delivering them. That led to the understanding that, if anyone was using those substances, they would not leave them lying around like a bottle of penicillin.

It will be hidden, and it will be in the house. Therefore, when the alpha-nortestosterone case kicked off, we worked on the basis that if there was material to find, it would probably be in the house. On that basis, houses on the first four farms — from about 150 — the houses were searched with police assistance. Those four cases gave rise to the furore since. The subsequent investigations did not include house searches, and, once it became apparent, as it rapidly did, that the science was dodgy and that people were being wrongly accused, we backed off completely and there has not been one since.

Mr Savage: Instead of pussy footing about, would it not be far better, plainer and cleaner to put something in the rules and regulations stating what will happen if someone is suspected of wrongdoing? That should be stated in a language that everyone understands.

The Chairperson: The Committee feels that there should be an opportunity to call for a third-party oversight, and that that person should be independent of the Department. It also feels that inspections or searches should be undertaken in accordance with the standard operating procedure, which will offer protection and awareness to farm businesses and departmental officials, and that that is furnished to the occupier at the time of the search.

Ms Corkey: The Department pursued your suggestion to include in the powers of entry a reference that inspectors must comply with the standard operating procedure. Our lawyer advised against that, because the standard operating procedure document is not a legal document and, therefore, does not have a standing in primary legislation.

Mr Millen: There are two ways to include the standard operating procedure document. First, the provisions in the standard operating procedure can be replicated on the face of the Bill in a schedule. Alternatively, it could be included using cross referencing, which does not put everything in the Bill, but requires all inspecting officers to comply with the procedure when they conduct searches. The net result is the same.

The Chairperson: Surely, that does not offend anyone. That is what inspecting officers should be doing: acting in accordance with the standard operating procedure. The only difference is that it is made clear and cross referenced in the legislation. Would you want such officers to behave otherwise?

Mr Millen: Absolutely not, but I return to my initial point as to whether that type of document is an appropriate inclusion in a primary piece of legislation, whether by inclusion itself or by cross reference. That is simply what I am suggesting.

The Chairperson: To be honest, if it is not appropriate to put into the documentation, it is not appropriate to use.

Mr Millen: I am suggesting that such a document is not appropriate for inclusion in a primary piece of legislation.

The Chairperson: If it is not appropriate for inclusion in the legislation, it should not be used — if it could not be put into law, there is something wrong. There is something suspicious and rotten in the process — the document is good enough to be put into operation, but there is a fear to put it down in law because it ties the Department. The Department should be tied to operate in accordance with proper procedure. Therefore, if you do not want to put it on the face of the Bill, you can cross reference it.

Mr Millen: That is a matter for the Committee. I just wanted to assist the Committee in its discussions on that subject

The Chairperson: With the greatest respect, your legal advice seems to be the impediment.

Mr Millen: Not necessarily. I have to give legal advice to the Department, and I must do so honestly. I cannot agree to a proposal when everything that I understand about it leads me to reject it. I am not against the inclusion of the standing operating procedure because I am worried about it becoming a legal requirement. The Department has an obligation to conduct its searches in accordance with that guidance, even though it is not a statutory document.

My fear is based on the fact that, to my knowledge, an internally drawn up document to guide departmental officials has never been included in primary legislation. I fear that, in going down that route, we would not know where we would end up. I cannot quantify the effect that that would have on other legislation across every Department in Northern Ireland.

Mr Elliott: That might be a good thing.

The Chairperson: Are you saying that, legally, it is not advisable or, as it seems to me, is it more a fear of opening Pandora's box?

Mr Millen: The two are closely connected. I believe that it has never been done before, and there must be a reason for that. As I keep saying, an internally drafted document to guide departmental officials is not appropriate for inclusion in primary legislation.

The Chairperson: I say this to the Department: you had better take this issue away, you had better think it through, and you had better talk to your lawyers, but we will talk to our lawyers, too. We must find out more about the fear that seems to strike at the heart of the Department that it might have to adhere to some statutory operating procedure; that it might have to do something right by strict operating procedures. There is something seriously wrong there.

Mr T Clarke: Pat, you said that when you give advice, you do not do so with one eye closed.

Mr Millen: Absolutely not.

Mr T Clarke: You said that you advised against the inclusion of compensation, and you went on to suggest that a farmer could request a judicial review of that decision. I know that I am touching on the next issue, but I want to draw a parallel: why could you not give the Department similar advice on the matter of a fixed penalty? Why could you not tell the Department that it could take farmers to court, as opposed to giving them a fixed penalty?

Mr Millen: The Department can do that.

Mr T Clarke: I want to draw that parallel now because it is part of the clause that we are discussing. Why did you not advise against fixed penalties and for taking court action, because that is the advice that you gave the Department: to let the farmer take the Department to court?

Mr Millen: Absolutely. That was the position before the Department proceeded with the proposal for fixed penalties; the default position is that everyone is prosecuted.

The Chairperson: There is a problem there, and I have concerns. If a person is faced with a fixed penalty of, for example, £100 or even £500, to tell you the truth, many people would plead guilty to something of which they are innocent, because it would cost thousands of pounds to fight their case. Therefore, they will take the fixed penalty and stand indicted and guilty, because paying the fixed penalty is more attractive than standing up and fighting the case. Can you see that legal danger: the lack of justice?

Mr Millen: That is the essential nature of all fixed-penalty systems. A penalty notice clearly indicates the evidence by which an official has judged a person guilty. There is no circumstance in which deciding not to accept a fixed penalty is the end of the matter. A person would be prosecuted; that is the alternative of not accepting the notice, but it is up to that individual —

The Chairperson: It is up to the individual to plead guilty.

Mr Millen: It is not a case of pleading guilty, because a fixed penalty notice is not an indication of guilt. It is not a guilty plea; it is simply a notice of a penalty that is paid in lieu of prosecution. That is the essential nature of all fixed penalty notices.

Mr T Clarke: Therefore, if the police catch you not wearing a seatbelt and you pay the fixed penalty notice, you are saying that you are not guilty of not wearing a seatbelt?

Mr Millen: No; what happens is that the police cannot subsequently prosecute you for that offence. That is what I mean.

Mr T Clarke: By paying the fine, you accept your guilt.

Mr Millen: No, what you have accepted is that you will pay the fine as an alternative to being prosecuted.

Mr T Clarke: What about the points on your driving licence?

Mr Millen: That is the system that is used. A person gets the points and the option of —

Mr T Clarke: By accepting the fixed penalty, however, a person has accepted their guilt.

Mr Millen: No. I think that the person has considered the case and concluded that the evidence shows that they committed an offence.

Mr T Clarke: Yes — guilty.

Mr Millen: The person has committed an offence, but they are not prosecuted for that offence.

Mr T Clarke: Draw a parallel with what the Chairperson said: if you have a choice between a fine of £100 or £200, or going to court and paying solicitors or barristers thousands of pounds to try and defend yourself, you would probably pay the £200 rather than run the risk.

Mr Savage: Then your farm is branded.

The Chairperson: That has been done and that has happened. I do not know whether you practice in the real world, but have you never heard of that before?

Mr Millen: Absolutely.

The Chairperson: Did you ever hear of legal advisers even telling their people to do that?

Mr Millen: There is no way to change. That is the essential nature of a fixed-penalty system — the evidence will be laid out in front of the individual and it is then up to him or her to make that choice.

The Chairperson: We are certainly not going to agree on that point. Before we move on to the next matter, which is fixed penalties, we will finish with clause 5. I ask the Committee Clerk to summarise the position.

The Committee Clerk: The Department suggested the appointment of a search liaison officer, who will be completely independent of the Department, as part of one of the non-departmental public bodies.

The Chairperson: The Committee said that it wanted that officer to be completely independent of the Department.

The Committee Clerk: The Committee wants the standard operating procedure cross referenced in the legislation and that it will take legal advice in that respect; it wants the standard operating procedure to be furnished to the occupier at the time of the search; and it wants the occupier to have access to a third-party oversight.

Mr Elliott: Something should also be included to provide direct retribution against the Department for any wrongdoing.

The Chairperson: Is that a summary of the position to which we refer? Are members agreed?

The Chairperson: We turn now to clause 6, which is about fixed penalties for certain offences. The Department told us that that is too bureaucratic to be done and that it is not being done elsewhere. The form of the fixed penalty notice will be introduced in subordinate legislation. However, the Committee suggested that the Bill be amended to ensure that the evidence on which the fixed penalty notice is issued is provided to the farmer at the time of issue. That would allow for consideration if the amendment that was suggested earlier was adopted.

The Department's legal advice is that an appeal system is not a feature of penalty-notice regimes and suggests that it would not be advisable to include it.

Mr T Clarke: That is not true. Parking-ticket fixed penalties can be appealed and overturned. That happens quite regularly.

Mr Millen: I studied other statutory examples, such as the Street Trading Act (Northern Ireland) 2001 and the Dogs (Northern Ireland) Order 1983. Those fixed penalty notices do not have appeal systems. There may be a particular reason as to why car-parking offences have an appeal mechanism. Those are appealed in a semi-judicial manner.

Mr T Clarke: The Department, in a summary of its responses to the Committee, states that its legal advice is that an appeal system is not a feature of penalty-notice regimes.

Mr Millen: Absolutely.

The Chairperson: In other words, you seem to be selective.

Mr T Clarke: You are selective about which examples you consider.

Mr Millen: Not at all. I studied the Street Trading Act (Northern Ireland) 2001 and the Dogs (Northern Ireland) Order 1983, and other pieces of primary legislation. Appeals systems are not features of those.

Mr T Clarke: If fixed penalties are considered, surely they must be considered in totality — one cannot be selective about which ones are considered. I cannot accept the advice that states that an appeals system does not work in other areas of fixed penalties when it clearly works for the Department for Regional Development (DRD).

The Chairperson: It operates in another legitimate Department.

Mr Millen: Appeals systems were not a feature of the two pieces of primary legislation that I considered. On that basis, I advised the Department that an appeals system would not be a feature of a fixed-penalty system. There is the car-parking provision, which, to my mind, is an anomaly.

Mr T Clarke: I am not talking about car parking. I am talking about someone parking on a single or double yellow line.

The Chairperson: What do you mean an anomaly? Just because DRD decided to do that, and it is regarded as legal, but because it has not been put in the DRD standard operating procedure then, somehow, DRD is right and the other Departments are wrong?

Mr Millen: Not at all. There may be a particular reason as to why that Department went down that route. It may have to do with the decriminalisation of parking offences.

The Chairperson: Surely a system that allows an appeal to be lodged in the 21 days allowed for payment would protect legitimate farmers who are willing to accept guilt rather than go to court. They could then examine the evidence outlined, as you have suggested, and appeal to an independent panel. That would avoid the cost of pursuing judicial reviews and taking innocent farmers to court. What would be wrong with that kind of justice system?

Mr Millen: I have no objection to that in principle, other than that appeals seem to undermine the essential nature of a fixed-penalty system.

The Chairperson: May I ask you a straightforward question: can it legally be done?

Mr Millen: It could be done.

Mr Poots: Is it not logical to have a system whereby papers can be presented that demonstrate that a fixed penalty should not have been applied in a particular instance, or, indeed, to demonstrate that it should have been applied, but that someone could lodge an appeal in any event and present their case so that someone else can consider whether the fixed penalty was applied correctly? Surely that would be better than encouraging people to go to court.

Mr Millen: It can be done. To repeat my initial conclusion: it is generally not a feature of fixed-penalty offences. If it is to be done, some thought will have to be given to the structure of an appeals system. The Court Service will have to be consulted, because the appeal could not be made to the Department, as it is not an independent body.

Mr T Clarke: DRD is a Department.

Mr Millen: Those appeals go to a semi-judicial appointee, who is scrutinised by the Court Service. Legally it is possible to have an appeals system, but some thought will have to be given to the structure, and the Department will have to speak to the Court Service.

The Chairperson: Surely now is the time to do it.

Mr Millen: Absolutely. I am simply saying that the Department will have to speak to the Court Service.

Mr Poots: The Department already has an appeals system in place. Fixed penalties are applied on occasions where, for example, single-farm payment requirements have not been met, yet there is an appeals system for that. There was an appeals system for the issue of duplicate fields, although it was not a very effective one because the Minister overturned the decisions that were made by the appeals panel, and caused huge problems. Nonetheless, there is already an appeals system in the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development to deal with this matter.

Mr Millen: You will find that those penalties do not lead to subsequent prosecution; that is the difference.

The Chairperson: The advice that was given to the Department by its lawyers was that an appeal system is not a feature of penalty-notice regimes, nor would it be advisable to make such provision. That is not what we are hearing today.

Mr Millen: I would still hold to that view.

The Chairperson: But you are telling us today that —

Mr Millen: It is legally possible to establish an appeals system, but such a system is not a feature of such penalty-notice regimes.

Mr T Clarke: I cannot and will not accept that.

Mr Elliott: Even if it is not a feature, why is it not right to do it now?

The Chairperson: If it can be done, why not do it? Is the Assembly not allowed to look outside the box? Are we just sitting here in straitjackets?

Mr Millen: What I have said is that an appeals system can be established, but it is generally not a feature of a fixed-penalty regime. It would be costly and bureaucratic.

The Chairperson: It might be a feature of any good society to protect the innocent.

Mr Poots: It would certainly be less costly, for both parties, than going to court.

Ms Corkey: The fixed-penalty scheme will be applied quite narrowly. We envisage that it will operate only during an epizootic outbreak, such as foot-and-mouth disease, when an individual might be illegally transporting animals. It will also apply to illegal imports. Therefore, the scheme will operate in a very narrow manner.

Mr T Clarke: So, there would not be that many appeals?

Ms Corkey: No.

The Chairperson: Therefore, the process will not be too costly.

Ms Corkey: That remains to be seen. If there is an appeals system —

The Chairperson: A few moments ago we were told that such a process would be costly.

Ms Corkey: It certainly would be costly if we have to set it up to the standard of a judicial hearing. We would have to consider that matter in the context of the costs of dealing with a disease outbreak. That is when we see the value of a fixed-penalty scheme.

The Chairperson: On the other hand, however, it could be less costly. You have not determined the costs because such a scheme has never been established. How can you use costs as a reason when you do not have those costs? That said, however, anything legal certainly seems to have a big cost associated with it.

Ms Corkey: If an appeals panel must operate to the standard of a judicial hearing, it will be costly. However, the Department believes that the fixed-penalty scheme will benefit the farming community during epizootic outbreaks because it will provide an effective way of dealing with a very small minority of farmers who do not comply with the rules. There is evidence of that during the foot-and-mouth outbreak in 2001.

The Chairperson: Some of those farmers might just happen to be innocent.

Ms Corkey: The Department would intend to use the fixed-penalty scheme for clear-cut offences, which would be specified in subordinate legislation.

Mr Poots: The Committee does not propose to remove that power. We are suggesting only that there is an appeals mechanism that does not involve a judicial hearing. If the scheme's application is as clear cut as the Department suggests, it will be seldom used.

The Chairperson: Members may want to recommend that amendments are made in order to ensure that the fixed penalty notice is signed by two officers and that the countersignature is a senior departmental official who is not involved in the investigation. That individual should verify that he or she has examined the evidence against the recipient and is content that it meets the requirements for issue of a fixed penalty notice.

Furthermore, the amendments will provide details of the evidence on which the fixed penalty notice has been issued to the recipient and will outline that the recipient has a right to appeal within 21 days. That will offer protection to innocent farmers who would rather accept the burden of guilt than be publicly embarrassed by a court case. Moreover, the amendments will define existing offences under the 1981 Order that will now be included in the fixed-penalty regime.

Does that summarise the Committee's position?

Ms Corkey: With regard to your third point about defining offences: the offences will be specified in subordinate legislation, which will be presented to the Committee in draft form. The Department wants to keep the particular offences under review in the light of experience.

The Chairperson: There are existing offences under the 1981 Order.

Ms Corkey: Yes, there are, but the fixed-penalty scheme will apply to only very particular offences.

The Chairperson: That is what the Committee is trying to establish: to what offences the fixed-penalty scheme applies.

Ms Corkey: That matter will be included in the subordinate legislation. As I said, it will probably relate to activities that may arise during epizootic outbreaks, plus illegal imports.

The Chairperson: Are members content with the response to that third point?

Mr Elliott: I think that that is reasonable, because it may be subject to change, and it would be much easier to change the wording.

Ms Corkey: Yes, either taking the term "offence" out of the fixed-penalty scheme, and perhaps —

The Chairperson: The first two points, however, remain.

Ms Corkey: Your first point about the two officers, and having a second officer to confirm the evidence;

how do you envisage that second officer confirming the evidence?

The Chairperson: I was very clear on that. The second officer should verify that they have examined the evidence against the recipient, and are content that it meets the requirements for the issue of a fixed penalty notice. In other words, they examine the evidence, yet would not have been involved in the investigations. They would be a senior departmental officer who could look at the evidence and ensure that —

Ms Corkey: Do you mean the paperwork evidence, or the actual offence on the ground?

The Chairperson: The second officer would have to look at all the evidence that is available.

Ms Corkey: To take the example of the illegal movement of animals: if an officer finds that animals are being moved illegally along a road on a lorry, and the officer stops the lorry and decides to issue a fixed-penalty notice, what would be the role of the second officer?

The Chairperson: Surely, if a second officer takes the evidence from the first officer and examines it, that would be a safety net for the officer concerned.

Ms Corkey: So, the second officer will not have seen the lorry or the animals; he will see only the paperwork — is that what you mean?

The Chairperson: You are talking about a very particular incident.

Ms Corkey: I am trying to envisage the practical situation when an officer on the ground detects illegal activity. Where does the role of the second officer come in?

The Chairperson: We will talk to our Committee Office regarding the actual wording of that, but the general idea is that a second officer, in my book, provides a protection for the first officer.

Mr Poots: It is easy to deal with the clear-cut cases, but where the case is not so clear cut, where perhaps someone observes a farmer with a jeep and trailer or a lorry, which is normally used to carry livestock, moving during a period when no livestock is allowed to be moved. However, if the vehicle is carrying not livestock, but fencing material, meal or some other material, and someone observes it moving, reports it and the officer institutes a fine, then that is where an appeal would kick in. It is at that point that a second officer may be beneficial. Ms Corkey's case was a very clear-cut one; those are always the easy ones with which to deal. There are always more complicated cases when people may think that they have a case, but they do not have a case to answer.

Ms Corkey: In that particular case, the officer issuing the fixed-penalty notice would have to inspect the vehicle at the time. It would not be acceptable to issue a notice for an event that he had seen in the distance. He would have to inspect the vehicle to check that it was transporting animals.

The Chairperson: I would have imagined that most officers would refer to a senior officer in any case. I would have thought that an officer would be looking for that protection, and that that would be the normal procedure.

Ms Corkey: I understand that; I just wanted to clarify how you saw the role of the second officer. I wanted to be clear about that.

Mr Steel: The case to which Mr Poots just referred would be a case in which there was insufficient evidence to prove anything at all. When any officer issues a fixed-penalty notice, it is an offer to that person as to whether they want to accept the fixed penalty or, possibly, be prosecuted. If prosecution is an option, we do not put cases to the court unless we have adequate evidence. In that case, we would not.

The cases during the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease to which reference has been made, when vehicles carrying livestock were stopped by the police, mostly, I believe, on the M1, the police called a departmental official. That is the sort of instance that actually occurred, and I think that there were eight or nine of such cases.

The Chairperson: If you did not have the evidence to take the matter to court, would there be even a suggestion of issuing a fixed-penalty notice?

Mr Steel: No, because it is only an offer.

The Chairperson: You would not be offering anyone a fixed-penalty notice if you felt that there was not sufficient evidence if the matter had to be taken to court.

Mr Elliott: That is the real danger of the fixed-penalty notice. That is when an appeals system works.

The Chairperson: That is only proving the very point that the Committee is raising.

Mr Elliott: That in actual fact they will use the fixed-penalty scheme because they do not have enough evidence to go to court, and they will say to the poor old farmer: look, you take your chances and go to court.

The Chairperson: Absolutely.

Mr Steel: I absolutely accept the point that there is potential for abuse of the system, but I am explaining how I would see it operating.

The Chairperson: I am merely pointing out what the Committee wants to do, because you are acknowledging the proof of what the Committee is saying. Therefore, we want to have a route by which the innocent can be protected.

Mr Steel: My personal view, for what it is worth, is that that is a flaw in the fixed-penalty system in any case. Anyone, in any circumstances, who is offered a fixed-penalty notice may feel that it is too costly or too difficult to defend themselves, or the embarrassment too great, and just pay and make the problem go away.

The Chairperson: Therefore, in acknowledging that, I am happy that the Department actually hears that that is what real life is like. However, the Committee is offering a route that could guard against that. In my opinion, that is what we ought to be doing: protecting the innocent, not defending the guilty, and providing an opportunity to guard against any of those matters that are now acknowledged.

Mr Elliott: I believe that this Committee is too pro-active and is making suggestions that are, perhaps, outside the box. I just want to confirm what Pat Millen said earlier that by accepting a fixed penalty one is not accepting guilt. That is not what the evidence is clearly saying. The purpose of a fixed-penalty scheme is to allow a person who accepts that he is guilty of an offence to avoid going to court.

Mr Millen: The distinction that I was raising, and perhaps I did not express myself clearly, is that you were not guilty of the offence in a court of law. You were not prosecuted for it.

Mr Elliott: But you are still guilty of the offence.

Mr Millen: You obviously have to accept that you committed the offence. The distinction that I tried to make clear to, I believe, Mr Poots and Mr Clarke, is that you were not prosecuted for that offence. You then did not have a criminal conviction or a criminal record. That is the distinction that I was making.

Mr Poots: That is a lawyer's obfuscation.

The Chairperson: I think that the Committee is clear on those two points. In light of the changes that we have recommended and the amendments that we have made, am I correct in suggesting that, while the Committee still has clauses 8 and 11 to consider, we can not proceed with the formal scrutiny of the draft Bill today?

The Committee Clerk: That is correct, because of the number of amendments that the Committee has recommended to the Department. The Committee must now see whether the Department agrees to any or all of those amendments. If that is the case, the Department would amend the draft legislation accordingly. If the Department is not in agreement with the amendments, but the Committee still feels that they should be included, then the Committee Office will have to liaise with the Bill Office, and the Committee have its own amending legislation drawn up.

At present, the recommendation from the Committee Office is that, after lunch, the remaining two clauses are considered. If the Department is then in a position to indicate whether it will allow the Committee recommendations to amendments —

The Chairperson: To be fair, I do not see how the departmental witnesses could do that this afternoon, because they may have to confer with their colleagues and legal team, which is only right.

Mr Millen: It is clear that, in the case of fixed penalties, the Department will have to go back to the Court Service with regard to the issue of appeals.

Committee Clerk: There are issues about which the Committee, too, will be seeking advice. Therefore, today's business can conclude after consideration of the remaining two clauses.

Mr T Clarke: I cannot see why the issue of a fixed-penalty appeals scheme has to be referred to the Court Service. Surely the appeals process is an internal mechanism within the Department?

Mr Millen: I would have thought that where there was a risk of prosecution, an appeal should really be dealt with by a person who is completely independent of the Department.

Mr T Clarke: I think that you should examine how DRD carries out its appeals. That Department carries out the appeal, and if an individual does not accept and pay the penalty, he or she still has the option to go to court.

Mr Millen: My understanding of how parking offences are dealt with is that an appeal is sent to an individual who has a semi-judicial role and who is appointed by the Court Service.

Mr T Clarke: Does that individual work for the Department?

Mr Millen: No, that individual hears appeals.

Mr T Clarke: So, you did examine that, too?

Mr Millen: That is my understanding of the appeals system for parking offences. An appeal is not sent to a member of staff in DRD — of that I am sure.

The Chairperson: We can get that process checked out. Given that, because of the narrowness of the remit, not many offences can be taken into consideration, could not a pool of people be used from, for example, the Law Society?

Ms Connor: The Department will have to examine that matter as well as the structure of an appeal, and all the points that you and the rest of the Committee have made will also have to be taken into account. We will have to deliberate on this issue, because it is a very important part of the Bill.

The Chairperson: The Committee will return to the formal clause-by-clause scrutiny on 20 January 2009. We will now move on to deal with those two important outstanding clauses.

Mr Savage: Jennifer Corkey raised earlier the important issue of animals in transit. Animals may leave a mart, be brought to the farm and remain there for a certain number of weeks, ending up in the abattoir for slaughter. However, if a digit happens to be wrong on the identification tag of one of those animals, is there no comeback for the farmer? I am talking about one animal in particular that was tested by departmental officials two, perhaps three, times. The animal left Enniskillen and returned to the farm, after departmental officials signed the docket to release it. The animal was brought back to be slaughtered and a digit on the tag was wrong. Does the farmer have no comeback in such a case? The animal had been through officials' hands two or three times, and there was inefficiency on the part of the farmer or some of the officials. Can the farmer not be safeguarded in that regard?

That is a serious issue and it happens day and daily, and the incident that I mention happened only two or three weeks ago. The animal was held in the abattoir for more than a week, and it transpired that there was nothing wrong with it. It ended up in the bin, and the farmer lost £700. He was not allowed to bring the animal home. The suspicion fell on the farmer. Some sort of legislation must be introduced to allow a farmer to bring an animal back home. He cannot afford to lose that money. That incident really happened, and similar incidents happen day and daily — not as often as they used to, but they still happen. I would like a provision included in the legislation that would safeguard the farmer. I do not know how that can be done. In the incident I mentioned, the tag must have been read incorrectly at the outset. When the documentation is produced, the numbers are taken from it.

I am not being awkward, but that is what really happens. I apologise for holding up the business of the Committee, but something must be done about it.

The Chairperson: Maybe the departmental officials need to take that illustration away and think about it.

Ms Corkey: There are strict EU rules on cattle identification. There is not a lot of flexibility in the cattle identification scheme.

The Chairperson: The animal had, however, passed through the hands of departmental officials a number of times.

Ms Corkey: I do not know the particular circumstances of the case.

Mr Savage: It all comes down to the fact that the Department sees the farmer as a soft touch, and the farmer is the person who loses out all the time. A wee bit of common sense must prevail.

The Chairperson: We now move on to clause 8, which deals with biosecurity guidance and compliance. The Committee expressed strong resistance to moving from a voluntary to a compulsory code and asked the Department to define and include its biosecurity concerns in primary legislation. The Department responded by recognising that any effective means of biosecurity must reflect the variety in range, type and scale of farming systems and the dynamic of risk. The Department stated that it was not in a position to provide a definitive list of the diseases on which it is minded to produce guidance, or what the content of that guidance is likely to be.

That response reinforces the Committee's view that the guidance should not be included in legislation, particularly if failure to comply with the as yet unknown guidance could be considered in a court and led to a reduction in the level of compensation. The Department seems to be rushing the matter without giving it due consideration. This was one of the issues to which the Ulster Farmers' Union was strongly opposed.

That is the Committee's opinion so far. Does any member want to raise any concerns on that matter?

Mr Elliott: There seems to be a clear difference of opinion on whether biosecurity guidance can be included in the Bill.

The Chairperson: Is it correct that the Department is unsure about what specific diseases should be included in the Bill?

Ms Jackie Robinson (Department of Agriculture and Rural Development): At this stage, the Department is reluctant to specify what diseases should be included in the Bill. That is on the basis that we have to take account of new and emerging diseases. If we specify the diseases to be included at this stage, we may not take account of, for example, West Nile fever, which could be topical in a year or two years hence.

Ms McMaster: The diseases for which we are likely to want to develop biosecurity guidance would include those serious diseases about which we know at present, but those might be added to. They would include foot-and-mouth disease or avian influenza, or brucellosis, which has serious economic consequences here at present. However, the Department cannot be definitive at this stage about which diseases should be included, because there might be other diseases that become very serious problems in Northern Ireland.

The Chairperson: Are there general biosecurity measures that need to be adhered to?

Ms J Robinson: Yes, as you are probably aware, we already have a biosecurity code. That code sets out simply and clearly the general biosecurity for any farmer. It is reasonably basic and covers most diseases in a general sense.

The Chairperson: Is it a voluntary code?

Ms J Robinson: It is a voluntary code at the moment.

The Chairperson: Is there an intention to change the code from being voluntary?

Ms J Robinson: We want to change it from a voluntary to a statutory-based code. The voluntary code is welcomed by 99% of farmers, because they welcome having guidance on what they can and should do. There is a very small number of farmers who do not take account of the code, and the Department would like to have a penalty system to deal with those farmers. Failure to adhere to the code would not be enough to take a farmer to court. However, if biosecurity guidance was based in legislation, we would be able to raise in court the fact that a farmer had not taken that guidance into account.

Ms McMaster: The current code provides general advice and outlines what is good practice across the board, but it does not give disease-specific advice to farmers. If there is a particular risk in Northern Ireland at any time — avian influenza, for example — we would like to be able to develop disease-specific guidance. The guidance would be produced at the time and contain everything that a farmer needed to know about what he can do to prevent an outbreak of a disease — avian flu, for example — on his farm. The guidance would be concise and easy to use, as opposed to the general guidance that exists at present.

Mr Elliott: I should have declared an interest as a farmer because the booklet reminds me of what farmers have to look through occasionally. The general guidance is, broadly, welcome. The difficulty will be moving from a voluntary code to a legislative base. I am concerned that it gives the Department an opportunity to prosecute farmers for something of which they may not have been even aware at the time. The Department may argue that that is not the spirit or intention of the code, but that is what could happen, especially if a farmer had to deal with a new disease or one that had not been about for a while. I would like to hear the Department's view on how the code would operate in practice.

Ms McMaster: The Department would develop the guidance along with industry, as it should be done in consultation; it is not something that the Department would produce by itself. If there was a specific disease risk in Northern Ireland, the Department would feel that it was important to produce guidance in conjunction with industry and to consult on that guidance, so that it would become known. It would also be given a lot of publicity. In a particular disease-risk situation, the Department would alert the farming industry through its normal communications of press releases and media coverage of the risk and threat to Northern Ireland. It would highlight the existence of the advice with which it was asking farmers to comply.

Would the Department use that risk as an excuse to prosecute? We do not plan to prosecute people if they breach the biosecurity guidance. However, if the Department were to prosecute someone for a breach of another statutory offence — and it would be a serious statutory offence if it went to prosecution — and if the Department also had evidence that that person had breached the guidance, then it would also bring that evidence to court. However, the Department would not, in itself, prosecute for a breach of biosecurity guidance.

Mr Elliott: If that is the case, what is the difference between having it in the Bill, as opposed to it being a voluntary code? Can a voluntary code not be used on the same basis if a case were brought to court?

Ms McMaster: It would not carry the same weight in court. One reason for wanting to make it statutory is to give it more importance in the farming community. The voluntary code is there, and people know that it is a voluntary code, although they might not look at it every day. Nevertheless, many people do comply with it, although some do not. The intention, in giving it a statutory basis, is to give it more importance and weight, so that people understand that it is important.

The Chairperson: It would certainly give it more importance if you were tying it all in with the whole compensation issue. Once again, it is a penalty on the farmer. It is strange that all of these codes and guidance can be put into legislation when, a wee while ago when we were talking about another matter, when it was the other way around we were advised that that should not be put in legislation. There seems to be one law for the Department and one law for farmers. Do you not see that?

Ms J Robinson: We were talking previously about putting in primarily legislation something that is very detailed — the standard operating procedure. We are now talking about having the power in the primary legislation that will allow us to set guidelines, and we will do that by subordinate legislation. As always in the case of subordinate legislation — and for every disease, unless it is an emergency — the Department will go through the full consultation process.

The Chairperson: Previously, I would have liked to have the power to put that in the legislation. However, what guidelines are you talking about? They have still to be drawn up.

Ms J Robinson: I would love to be able to sit here and tell you what those guidelines are. However, before I would do that, I would like to be able to talk to our industry. Our idea would be that we would set up joint industry groups so that the guidance would not be guidance that I have decided on, or guidance that purely the Department has decided on. It would be set up jointly with industry representatives, and they would play a very large part in drafting those guidelines.

The Chairperson: The explanatory and financial memorandum to the Bill states:

“Clause 8 of the Bill (inserting Articles 4A and 4B into the 1981 Order) enables the Department to prepare and publish biosecurity guidance for any disease specified by an order”.

That does not say “in consultation” or anything else, it just says “prepare and publish”.

Ms Corkey: It states in the Bill that the Department is required to consult —

The Chairperson: I am reading from the Department’s explanation.

Ms Corkey: Yes, but that is a summary. The Bill states that the Department must consult on the draft guidance. That is definitely written into the Bill.

The Chairperson: What is the feeling of members? Can the matter not be withdrawn until the guidance has been consulted on and developed? The Committee could consider it at that time.

Ms Connor: As you can appreciate, the timetable and programme for primary legislation involves a convoluted and lengthy process. It has taken a long time to reach this stage of the Bill, so it would take as long again to introduce an amendment to it. The Department wants the Bill to introduce permissive powers, and we will consult with the industry and the Committee on the biosecurity guidance. We hope that the Bill will give the Department permissive powers that will enable us — after we have gone through the full rigours of consultation — to draw up the biosecurity guidance. The Bill provides permissive powers only.

The Chairperson: Although that is true, my major concern is that those permissive powers will be developed. It would take a long time to get rid of a bad clause, and the farming community would suffer because of that.

Ms Connor: The farming community would not suffer. Although those powers will be in the primary legislation, they will be enacted through subordinate legislation: through the guidance. Nothing in the Bill will have a direct impact on the farmer; it must be enacted through the secondary legislation. This will give the Department the power to make subordinate legislation or guidance. The farmer would not, therefore, be disadvantaged, but the Department certainly would be.

Mr Elliott: What are the practical outworkings of the biosecurity guidance? Will it be implemented for only specific diseases, or will it follow a process similar to the farm quality assurance scheme, which includes a regular inspection for biosecurity?

Ms McMaster: Much of the detail on how the guidance will be best implemented will emerge from discussions with the industry. The Department does not have firm views on that at this stage. We will develop the question of which diseases are to be included on a disease-by-disease basis. We will consult on each code, so we are not simply adopting it on a wide scale. The method of how we implement the guidance will be discussed as part of the subordinate legislation consultation process in line with the consultation on the code.

The Chairperson: Can clause 8 refer to a voluntary code, rather than a compulsory code?

Mr Millen: One way of looking at that is that if it is a voluntary code, things may as well be left as they are. The code is currently voluntary.

The Chairperson: Apart from where it has not been working.

Ms McMaster: As you know, brucellosis has been a real disease problem in Northern Ireland in the past few years. There are examples of factors in serious disease outbreaks in Northern Ireland that currently fit under the voluntary code of practice. We have, so far, more experience where this has been an issue in the case of brucellosis. So far, luckily, there have not been serious outbreaks of avian influenza here, so we do not know whether there might be problems with a voluntary code in dealing with an outbreak of that or any other serious disease.

Mr T Clarke: You drew a parallel with the problems with brucellosis. From the first identification of the disease, how long does the process normally take before the Department decides whether there is a case to answer?

Mr Roly Harwood (Department of Agriculture and Rural Development): That depends. The Department investigates each outbreak.

Mr T Clarke: How long does that take?

Mr Harwood: As soon as the Department finds out about the outbreak, it begins its investigation. It can take months, as more and more information becomes available. The source is not necessarily found at the first outbreak. It could be discovered as a result of information from subsequent outbreaks.

Mr T Clarke: When a reactor is taken away, how long should it take you to determine whether a particular herd has the disease?

Mr Harwood: When we test for brucellosis, it could take a couple of weeks to get the results back from the laboratory, and it could take several weeks for a culture result. First, we have to slaughter the reactor and examine the culture.

Mr T Clarke: Therefore, from the first test on the farm, it could take two weeks for a result?

Mr Harwood: It can do.

Mr T Clarke: If brucellosis is so serious, why does it take so long after the first test to get the result? Given that the aim is to prevent the spread of disease, why is there such a long period between the first test and the identification of a problem? Yet, if a compulsory code was introduced, the Department would make the farmer jump through hoops, which he may not necessarily have to do if the Department was acting quicker.

Mr Harwood: We are not asking farmers to jump through hoops, but to take basic steps to prevent the disease entering their farms.

Mr T Clarke: My problem is that the disease may not be present on the farm, and, if the Department were to act more quickly, the farmer would not have to take those steps. At present, farmers can take such steps voluntarily, but if the code becomes mandatory, the farmer may become liable for not complying with it.

Ms J Robinson: Perhaps we are talking at cross purposes. The Department is talking about a biosecurity code to stop the spread of disease, whereas you are talking about what happens when a disease already exists on certain premises.

Mr T Clarke: Given that it takes the Department so long to determine whether the disease is present on a particular farm, that is disputable. Samples were taken from a farm on 19 December 2008, and the farmer found out the results from the Department only yesterday. For one thing, that is longer than two weeks. If brucellosis is so serious, why does it take the Department so long to get back to the farming community?

Mr Harwood: It does not always take that long. The processes involved take time, and even when everything works like clockwork, it still takes time to get the result of a blood test. In fact, a couple of blood tests are carried in order to obtain a confirmed result on which the Department can take action. The culture is a long process, but, by that stage, and after a positive blood result, immediate action is taken to prevent the spread of disease.

Mr T Clarke: What action is taken?

Mr Harwood: The herd is closed so that no more animals can be sold, people are advised to bring animals indoors, and to do whatever else is required to protect their neighbours and themselves from contracting the disease.

Mr Poots: I have less difficulty with that issue, given that the Committee will return to it under subordinate legislation, at which point it will have to be consulted again on its ratification. In that sense, we are not giving the Department an open cheque on biosecurity guidance. Furthermore, we are statutory consultees on the guidance. It is important to put in place reasonable, practical and sensible biosecurity measures, but sometimes people have different judgments on what those are; it is not a perfect science. Therefore, some degree of latitude is required in how departmental officials carry out their duties, so that individuals are not persecuted for committing a minor indiscretion, but have the opportunity to rectify the situation. Some common sense must be applied.

The Chairperson: Are we suggesting, therefore, that the amendment be withdrawn until the guidance can be developed and considered by the Committee?

Mr Poots: Unfortunately, we do not have the time to do that under this process.

The Chairperson: I thought that we were withdrawing our amendment because, under the subordinate legislation's consultation process, the matter would come back to the Committee for further scrutiny, at which point we could determine whether we liked the proposal.

Mr Poots: It is harder to stop under subordinate legislation than at primary legislation, but there is a fallback position.

Ms Connor: There is certainly a fallback position. However, the purpose of the consultation, with the industry and the Committee, is to try, as far as possible, to come up with biosecurity guidance that is acceptable and workable. Some of the Committee's concerns will, certainly, be addressed at the subordinate legislation stage. However, it is, at least, a two- or three-way process, which involves the Committee, the Department and the industry working together.

The code that Jackie Robinson showed you earlier was drawn up by a working group of the rural stakeholders' forum. It worked exceptionally well. The code was well received by the industry because there was buy-in. The Department also produced a laminated poster to accompany the code, which is in many of the farms that we have visited. Therefore, it has been demonstrated to work at local level.

The Chairperson: The Ulster Farmers' Union has difficulty with placing the guidance on statute, which it says would be an unwelcome step. It suggested that it should be retained as a voluntary code. Is that correct?

Ms Connor: Yes. That is probably because the Ulster Farmers' Union is concerned about the link to compensation rates. No one would disagree with the importance of biosecurity in any disease outbreak. It would certainly be to the benefit of the Committee, the Department and, indeed, the industry if it could be put on a statutory footing now in primary legislation, with the detail sorted out in secondary legislation, rather than to lose the vehicle with which to put the matter right. We will get only one chance with primary legislation.

The Chairperson: Can the compensation element be withdrawn and be considered under subordinate legislation?

Ms J Robinson: To clarify, it was never the intention that non-compliance with the guidance — even if it has a legislative basis — would, in itself, be an offence. It would be admissible as evidence only in connection with another offence under the Diseases of Animals Bill. Therefore, a person will not be penalised for having committed an offence under the biosecurity guidance alone. It is envisaged that cases will be taken when the most blatant or repeated biosecurity negligence has occurred or when lapses in biosecurity have far-reaching consequences for the entire industry.

Mr Elliott: In broad terms, I agree with Mr Poots: I do not have as big a concern as he, simply because the voluntary code is in place and most farmers — 99% was, I believe, the percentage mentioned — try to comply with it and, indeed, do so. My difficulty is the Department's duplicity, whereby it wants to make the voluntary code statute in that part of the Bill, but when the Committee tried to put an earlier portion of the standard operating procedure into statute, it would not allow that.

The Chairperson: Yes, I would like to draw that to the Department's attention. It seems that it is all one-way traffic.

Mr Elliott: That is what really annoys me.

Ms McMaster: The Department is not making the voluntary code statutory. The Ulster Farmers' Union was concerned that we would take the voluntary code that it had helped to develop, and make it statutory. That is not the case at all. We are discussing the development of new disease-specific guidance that will become the statutory code. That will be a different piece of advice, and not the existing voluntary code.

The Chairperson: It might even be stricter.

Mr Poots: I am more concerned about VetNI's response. Clearly, veterinary surgeons are in business to reduce and prevent animal disease where possible. It says that without a clear strategy for implementation and inspection, the suggestion that failure to comply with guidance could lead to criminal proceedings seems heavy handed because different owners will have a different understanding as to what is meant by biosecurity. I fully agree with those comments and urge that they be reflected in whatever action is taken by the Department.

Ms Sandra Dunbar (Department of Agriculture and Rural Development): I agree entirely with VetNI, but that is where subordinate legislation is critical and that when the Department draws up the guidance, it is written in a way that is achievable and understandable by farmers and is not excessive.

The example that was given about avian influenza is extremely relevant. If avian influenza arrived on the island of Ireland, we would want to insist on poultry being kept away from wild birds, and, perhaps, on the housing of free-range flocks. At the moment, we do not have the legislative authority to take such actions. The existing biosecurity guidance does not allow the Department to insist on compliance, but if there are other problems, we can at least use it in order to make a case against someone. It can be very useful in ensuring that disease does not spread.

The Chairperson: Unless I have taken it up incorrectly, it is more than guidance, because it is going to be considered as a mechanism by which part or whole of an amount of compensation can be withheld.

Ms McMaster: That would happen in only very serious circumstances.

The Chairperson: Therefore, it is more than guidance. If I have read it correctly, the courts can take the guidance into consideration as well.

Mr Poots: It can be used in criminal proceedings as opposed to civil proceedings. I have an issue with that.

Ms McMaster: The courts will take the guidance into consideration only if other statutory offences are being prosecuted. The Department is introducing the power to withhold compensation in very serious circumstances, in which an incident with far-reaching consequences has occurred.

The Chairperson: It is like everything else: beauty is in the eye of the beholder. Who decides the seriousness of a case? Who decides whether to withhold the whole amount of compensation, or a part of it?

Ms McMaster: In this case, there are existing processes and powers available to the Department. Those are not entirely new powers; we are just adding to those that already exist. We will have to consult with the industry as to how the process will be conducted. We envisage that we would put it to the person concerned that we had evidence. We would have to outline all the evidence that we had to provide the basis for considering withholding compensation. That would be presented to the herd keeper, who would have the opportunity to respond and present his or her case to the Department before a decision was made. That is the process that we would work through.

The Chairperson: What is the mind of the Committee?

Mr Irwin: I do not have a problem with the issue, other than the concern that other members have expressed about the possible overuse of those powers in some simple cases. The Committee has sometimes been critical of DARD for not getting to grips with diseases. At the same time, however, if those powers will help in some way, it will be difficult for the Committee to oppose their introduction. Many of us are fearful of the powers being used when they should not be used, particularly in minor situations in which compensation is being withheld. The Ulster Farmers' Union might say the same thing.

Mr Savage: I know that there have been some sagas when it comes to compensation for infected animals. Has the Department overcome that problem in the past while? How does the Department arrive at a valuation? Is there a more up-to-date way to compensate a farmer for the loss of an animal?

Ms McMaster: If an animal is being slaughtered because of TB or brucellosis, the Department's valuer will go and put a price on the animal. The herd keeper is then offered the valuation and can choose to accept that or bring in an independent valuer. The herd keeper also has the option to appeal a valuation to an independent valuation appeals panel. So, that is the system that currently operates.

Mr Savage: The system has not, therefore, changed in recent years.

Ms McMaster: The system was revised in 2004 and has been in place since.

Mr Savage: I asked that because we seem to be losing ground, instead of getting on top of the diseases. There seem to be more outbreaks now than ever, maybe not in as many herds, but herds have got bigger. I know farmers who have not been able even to let their cattle out these past six months, including in the middle of the summer. Although it was a wet year, the cattle were kept in because the surrounding farms had outbreaks of TB and brucellosis.

I have listened to all of the witnesses carefully, and drastic measures will have to be taken, because we do not seem to be making any headway with the problem. The amount of money paid out each year in compensation because of outbreaks in herds is unbelievable. I wish that there was an answer to the problem, but I cannot see one. When one thinks that an area is clear of disease, all of a sudden there is an outbreak, and the area is wiped out. There are areas that have been cleared, but the disease has continued up one side of the River Lagan, affecting farm after farm. How that can be eliminated I do not know. The situation is getting serious, because the outbreaks are getting into big herds and will eventually wipe them out.

Mr T Clarke: The Department is, in a sense, getting a double dunt at farmers through clause 8 — if the case goes to court, the Department can, first, use it as an additional rod with which to beat farmers, and, secondly, withhold compensation. Could the Department not remove the part about withholding compensation and use just the threat of failing to comply with biosecurity guidance, along with other matters, in court proceedings? The explanatory and financial memorandum states that: “The Department may withhold, either wholly or in part, compensation in respect of an animal slaughtered”.

We all know what that means — the Department will withhold the compensation in its entirety. Therefore, farmers are faced with that threat as well as the threat that a failure to comply can be used to bolster other action that the Department is taking against them. Can the compensation part not be done away with?

Ms McMaster: That measure helps to deal with the small minority of people who may disregard good practice.

Mr T Clarke: I understand that, but the problem is that DARD is the judge and the jury — the farmer has his animal taken away, and it is DARD that decides whether he has properly complied with the biosecurity guidance and whether to withhold his compensation. The Department is judge and jury, and the farmer has no redress.

I do not like the part of the clause that allows the Department to withhold compensation, because it means that the farmer has lost the animal and he is not being compensated for it. Surely, there can be an alternative process. There is already the threat of using the failure to comply in prosecuting the farmer. The Department will not use that power just for the sake of using it — it will use it to bolster and strengthen the chance of conviction in another case. Surely, that alone should be a big enough threat. The Department should not also be taking from the farmer compensation for the animal.

Mr Harwood: Looking at it from another perspective, if a farmer’s actions contributed to an animal becoming diseased, would the taxpayer feel it right that the farmer should be fully compensated?

Mr T Clarke: Good point. In that case, can another paragraph be added stating that if the Department fails to act quickly, it will compensate the farmer for the loss of animals because it was slow to act and to establish the cause of the outbreak? If the Department is slow to act and a disease spreads, that would be negligence on the part of the Department. Therefore, can we include a clause that would allow the Department to be fined for neglect?

Mr Savage: If a herd breaks down completely, how long is it before the farmer is allowed to restock it?

Mr Harwood: Do you mean following an outbreak of brucellosis?

Mr Savage: Or TB.

Mr Harwood: It is normally brucellosis that results in depopulation, in which case a farmer can restock within six months.

The Chairperson: That matter is not specifically mentioned in the Bill, and we must not digress into general debate.

Mr Elliott: We are all concerned about the possible misuse of those powers.

Mr Irwin: That is the only problem that I have.

Mr Elliott: The Committee originally asked about whether the biosecurity guidance issued by the Department could, in some way, be incorporated in the Bill. Is that possible? Although outbreaks will be addressed on a disease-by-disease basis, can the guidance that we asked for be incorporated in, or referred to by, the Bill?

Ms McMaster: Do you mean the biosecurity guidance code?

Mr Elliott: Yes.

Ms McMaster: That will be referred to in subordinate legislation.

Mr Elliott: So, it will not be referred to in primary legislation?

Ms McMaster: No, subordinate legislation will be required to activate that power, and that is where we will introduce a biosecurity code. With regard to compensation, the Department has in mind serious cases in which a minority of people cause problems for other Northern Ireland farmers. The compensation process is, in itself, quite a good deterrent. If someone’s actions seriously put others at risk, then that is —

Mr Elliott: Nevertheless, you must appreciate our problem concerning people who are genuinely innocent. I do not care what you do with people such as those referred to by the Chairperson as rogues.

Mr T Clarke: We do care.

Mr Elliott: We want them to experience the full weight of the law. The difficulty for the Committee arises when someone is proven innocent — having cost him or her an open fortune to prove that innocence — and the Department is able to walk away scot-free, with no recourse. My personal difficulty is that the Department may abuse or misuse those powers to do that.

Ms McMaster: When we come back to consult the Committee about the biosecurity code at the subordinate legislation stage, perhaps we could spell out the processes that we intend to go through when considering any cases with regard to withholding compensation.

Mr Elliott: OK. If there was some flexibility from the Department in the other areas that the Committee highlighted, I am reasonably content to give this issue the go-ahead.

Mr Irwin: I agree with Mr Elliott.

The Chairperson: The Department had better be very careful with what it comes up with in any subordinate legislation, because the Committee certainly wants to be involved in compiling the biodiversity guidance and in scrutinising the subordinate legislation.

Having listened to all that, I shall now ask the Committee Clerk to summarise what he has taken from what has been said.

The Committee Clerk: The Committee recognises the need for guidance; however, it is not content with linking biosecurity guidance with compensation and criminal court cases. Therefore, the Committee advises that it wishes to be fully involved in the compilation of biosecurity guidance and that it will conduct extremely close scrutiny of any subordinate legislation relating to that guidance.

The Chairperson: Do members agree with that summary?

The Chairperson: We come now to clause 11, which deals with deliberate infection. The Committee asked that this clause include repeat offenders, that provision for mandatory disqualification from keeping animals be included, and that custodial sentences for second offences of deliberate infection and repeat offences be catered for.

The Department has welcomed the comments of the Committee, and proposes to amend article 5B, so that in the case of a second or subsequent offence it will be mandatory for the court, by order, to disqualify the person from keeping, or dealing with, animals for a specified period. The Department also advises that under the provisions of clause 11(2) of the Bill, a person found guilty of such an offence is liable to imprisonment, and/or a fine.

Mr Poots: I would be happy with that. However, I have a concern that, very often, individuals who are banned from keeping animals simply start up again in the name of a wife, son or daughter, or someone else. I am aware of a case that involved animal cruelty, in which the same property was visited and prosecuted three times, yet animals are still being kept because they just keep rotating around members of the family.

Deliberately infecting animals is particularly pernicious behaviour, and the strongest measures must be put in place — measures that are not easily surmountable by such individuals. We need to consider those cases in which people were charged with animal cruelty and were banned from keeping animals, yet one goes to that property days and weeks later and animals are there because they found a means of getting around the ban. Otherwise, those who are engaged in the worst type of behaviour will get away with it.

Ms Connor: The Department is considering new powers under the Welfare of Animals Act (Northern Ireland) 1972. The legislation currently under discussion obviously deals specifically with the diseases of animals, but the Department is aware of the welfare issues, and that has focused our attention on the Welfare of Animals Act. We acknowledge that the current welfare of animals legislation does have that weakness, and the Department is taking steps to address that.

The Chairperson: The Department stated that it will disqualify a person from keeping or dealing with animals for a specified period. What does that mean?

Mr Millen: I would have thought that “keeping” would be the act of, perhaps, engaging in a personal farm business, whereas “dealing” would be those who may say that they are not farmers but commercial dealers, and that they do not hold animals — the animals come in the back of the farm and go out the front door.

The Chairperson: Does that cover the point about which Mr Poots was talking?

Mr Millen: At present, it does not.

The Chairperson: Can it be extended to cover that? That is one thing that really sickens the good farming community.

Ms Corkey: Are you asking whether the regulations can be extended to family members?

Mr T Clarke: Could the regulations not be applied to farms as opposed to family members? Extending any ban from keeping or dealing in animals would criminalise family members, too, which does not strike me as fair.

Mr Poots: The Departmental Solicitor’s Office will give advice on that, but under human rights legislation that may be difficult.

Ms Corkey: Yes, and those individuals have not been found guilty of anything.

Mr T Clarke: Surely the regulations could be applied to the farm property.

Mr Millen: A practical difficulty might arise where there is a father and son relationship.

Mr T Clarke: That is too bad. That is the farm.

The Chairperson: If we are talking about seriously trying to stop something that has serious implications for the whole farming community, we must do it right. It is the areas in which there are rogues that the teeth should be put in to the regulations, and not against the person who makes a genuine mistake. It seems that the person who genuinely makes a mistake could be faced with a plethora of enforcement actions, yet the person who is a rogue seems to be able to get away with it.

There must be a real deterrent to stop those who are destroying an industry and the good name of that industry. This Committee is very firm on that. We are not trying to justify wrong-doing; we want to get at the wrong-doer, the person who is a rogue and who is destroying an entire industry. We certainly want to keep an industry, which has been the backbone of Northern Ireland for years, prospering, and we wish to do what we can to enable that. We feel that this is a threat to the present and the future of the industry. The Committee honestly feels that this is an issue on which it wants the Department to show its teeth.

Ms Corkey: I am just thinking of the father/son relationship on the farm. If, for example, the son is found guilty of deliberately infecting an animal and is prohibited from keeping or dealing in animals, and the father knew nothing about it — what then happens to the father? He has not been found guilty of any offence.

Mr Poots: I did not offer a solution.

Ms Corkey: Are you saying that you would not allow the father to keep animals on that farm?

Ms Dunbar: How could you determine a geographical farm area? The person who is not allowed to keep animals could keep them on conacre, and how would you then legislate for all the possibilities?

The Chairperson: That is one of the things on which the Committee wants the Department to legislate. How is the person who is destroying every other innocent person to be stopped? How do you stop that 0·1% that destroys the good name of 99·9% of farmers?

Ms Corkey: It is that 0·1% that we are trying to target. I return to the father/son situation, and the father being innocent of any offence. How do you treat him? Are you saying that he should not be allowed to keep animals?

Mr Poots: I understand that, under human rights legislation, it is particularly difficult to apportion to someone else a crime or an offence which is associated with one particular individual. I have drawn to your attention the fact that those individuals can use other family members to get around the legislation and find a means of continuing their bad practices. We need to investigate whether there is another means of preventing that.

I do not have the solutions, but we need to apply ourselves to trying to make life as difficult as possible for those who continue to do that. The imprisonment option should happen. That is a matter for a court of law and a judge, but one hears of people getting suspended sentences for fairly significant misdemeanours. The Committee would support something stronger than suspended sentences.

Ms Corkey: That is an issue, but it is a matter for the courts.

The Chairperson: Surely, if the legislation specified that repeat offenders receive a custodial sentence, instead of, at present, a custodial sentence and/or a fine — such people would laugh at a fine. With the amount of business that those boys do, they could pay that fine in a bit of an afternoon. They laugh at it. Mind you, they do not laugh in the same way when the family is toddling down the road to the jail.

This is an issue on which the Committee is begging the Department to show its teeth, but against the rogue. It has been showing its teeth against a lot of the innocent. We are now begging you to show your teeth and show your claws, and to show that you are able to take those people on, because they are destroying an industry which we are all — the Department and ourselves — trying to protect. I would certainly like a clause detailing that repeat offenders would get a custodial sentence, and forget about a fine.

Mr Irwin: Exactly.

Mr Elliott: Is it in the gift of the Department to specify that it would have to be a custodial sentence?

The Chairperson: If the Department can tell you that such an offence is liable to imprisonment and/or a fine —

Mr Poots: Perhaps the legal advisor can advise us, because judges base their decisions on legislation.

The Chairperson: Absolutely.

Mr Poots: Can the legislation be devised in such a way as to allow a judge to find it easier to impose a custodial sentence?

Mr Millen: We could express something along the lines that a subsequent offence is a compulsory term of imprisonment. A judge has to apply the legislation as he sees it, so if that is what it says in legislation, then that is what he has to do.

Ms Connor: On that point, the Department would have to go back to the Secretary of State as it is, obviously, a reserved matter. We would not expect any difficulties with increasing it because we have already had discussions with officials in the Northern Ireland Office. We will take that forward.

Ms Corkey: Yes, we will take that forward and pursue your suggestion of a mandatory custodial sentence. Collette Connor is quite right: any matters regarding deliberate infection on which the Department agrees with the Committee is subject to the approval of the Secretary of State.

The Chairperson: That completes the session. The Committee will come back to the formal scrutiny of the Bill on Tuesday 20 January 2008.

Mr Savage: I would like to raise a matter just before we finish. Way back, I can remember when TB was rife. Whenever there was a breakdown in a herd, TB or brucellosis was detected. The farmer — and this happened to me, too — was not allowed to keep cattle for a period of time and the ground had to be ploughed. The Department made sure that no material was about the farmyard — it all had to be ploughed into the ground. Until the Department adopts such action again, TB and brucellosis will never be eradicated. Such action must be taken. It is cruel to say it, but if we are serious about eliminating TB and brucellosis, the Department must reintroduce those measures.

The Chairperson: OK. The Department received some advice there.

Mr Savage: Whether the Department takes that advice or not is another matter.

The Chairperson: May I very much thank all the witnesses, and we wish you all a very happy and prosperous new year.

Mr Steven Smyrl
	}	Council of Irish Genealogical Organisations

The Chairperson (Mr McLaughlin): I welcome Robert Davison, the honorary secretary of the Association of Professional Genealogists in Ireland (APGI), and Steven Smyrl, the executive liaison officer for the Council of Irish Genealogical Organisations (CIGO). Thank you both for attending the Committee, and I wish you all the best for 2009.

As the Committee previously agreed, the session is being recorded by Hansard. Therefore, all mobile phones must be turned off completely.

I invite the witnesses to make an initial statement. I understand that you are content with some of the responses issued thus far from the Department of Finance and Personnel, but perhaps you might bring your outstanding concerns to the Committee's attention.

Mr Steven Smyrl (Council of Irish Genealogical Organisations): I have prepared a short statement about

Mr Davison and myself, and the issues at hand. Shall I go through my presentation? Would that be easier?

The Chairperson: Sight unseen, I will take your guidance.

Mr Smyrl: I represent the Council of Irish Genealogical Organisations (CIGO). I have practised as a specialist in legal and probate genealogical research since the late 1980s. I am a founding member of CIGO, of which I was chairman from 2000 to 2002. In 1991, I founded Massey and King Ltd, the Republic of Ireland's only incorporated firm dedicated to legal genealogy.

CIGO was established in 1992, as a lobby group for national and international organisations that were interested in Irish genealogical research. It aims to provide a forum for family-history and genealogical groups and societies; to encourage greater public knowledge of, and access to, records that are relevant to genealogists; and to formulate, influence and co-ordinate policy on all issues of concern to member organisations.

My colleague is Robert Davison, who represents the Association of Professional Genealogists in Ireland (APGI). Members of APGI are independently accredited genealogists. After his retirement from the British Transport Police, Mr Davison moved to the Ards Peninsula in County Down, where he took up a long-time interest in his own Irish family history, and joined the North of Ireland Family History Society and the Upper Ards Historical Society. He has practised as a professional genealogist since 1997, specialising in genealogical probate and adoption research. He became a member of APGI in 2003. In December 2008, he completed a three-year term as the organisation's honorary secretary.

The daily work that Mr Davison and I do involves accessing civil registration records in Belfast and Dublin, and through the various county-based genealogical heritage centres that have access to historical registration data. We have each lectured extensively on the use of such records in the study of genealogy. With another colleague, Eileen O'Duill, I compiled a guide to Ireland's civil records, which was published by CIGO in 2000. We have brought a few copies for the Committee.

When the Republic's General Register Office (GRO) announced in the 1990s that it was to modernise legislation — much of it dating back to 1844 — that underpins civil registration, CIGO and APGI were to the fore in lobbying the relevant Department in the Republic in order to ensure that genealogists' views were heard. Over several years of contact with the Minister for Health and the GRO, we convinced the authorities that access to registration data, which are a matter of public record, must not be curtailed.

Beyond that, CIGO and APCI secured a commitment to improve data recorded in death registrations in order that a person's date and place of birth, and parents' full names, would be recorded. That small change in data collection revolutionised the credibility of the Republic's death registrations.

CIGO and APCI welcome the Civil Registration Bill, which will help to create a new and modern framework for civil registration in Northern Ireland, and make it easier for genealogists and historians to access historical registration data.

CIGO and APCI had initial reservations about clauses 13, 16 and 22. Clauses 13 and 22 deal with access to historical registration data through third parties and will lead to an innovative, Internet-based service. The importance of the reference to third parties is that current legislation states that registration data are available only in the form of a certificate issued by a registrar. To allow certain data to be passed to a third party will enable the General Register Office for Northern Ireland (GRONI) to establish Internet access to its historical records. CIGO and APCI very much favour that development, but we were concerned that clarity was needed about the wording of a clause that would insert a new article 34A into the Births and Deaths Registration (Northern Ireland) Order 1976.

Clause 16 will enable GRONI to issue edited certificates; for instance, death certificates that omit the cause of death. For example, submitting a death certificate to a bank does not require one that states the cause of death. CIGO and APCI were concerned that the issuing of edited certificates might be done to the exclusion of unedited, or full, certificates.

However, in the past few days, in response to our submissions made in August 2008, the Department has clarified some of those issues. In the light of that, we are happy to withdraw completely our suggested amendments to clause 16, and almost all of what we suggested on clauses 13 and 22.

We wish to see the heading changed in clause 13 at lines 8 and 11 on page 5 of the Bill. Both headings currently read:

"Access to information relating to births and deaths".

We wish to see both headings changed to read:

"Access to historical information relating to births and deaths through third parties".

We wish to see the heading in clause 22 at line 23 on page 8 of the Bill changed from:

"Access to information relating to marriages and civil partnerships"

to

"Access to historical information relating to marriages and civil partnerships through third parties".

Having read through the Department's response to our original submissions, which was mentioned earlier, we are now of the opinion that our new suggested minor changes will do much to improve the clarity of clauses 13 and 22. Furthermore, the new wording will ensure that the Bill is easily understood by people who are unfamiliar with legislation.

Lines 18 to 24 in clause 13 and lines 31 to 33 in clause 22 deal with the issue of where to draw the line between a "current" record, which can only be obtained in the form of a certificate from a registrar, and a "historical" record, which can be made generally available through third parties. The Bill sets the tariffs at 100 years for births, 75 years for marriages and 50 years for deaths, and describes those tariffs as the "relevant period".

In his recent response to CIGO's initial submission, Norman Irwin spoke on the Department's behalf on the subject of "relevant periods". He said:

"CIGO have suggested restricting GRO's power to extend 'the relevant periods' beyond those given in the Bill. GRO included these timeframes as it was considered that this proposal balances the individuals' and the families' rights to privacy against the need for openness. However, GRO consider it is prudent to have this power included so that 'relevant periods' could be extended in the future, if necessary. It should be noted that any future changes GRO may wish to make to the 'relevant periods' contained within the Bill would have to be made by means of subordinate legislation which would be subject to legislative scrutiny."

With regard to possibly extending the "relevant periods" beyond those given in the Bill, the Department's suggestion that they consider it:

"prudent to have this power included so that 'relevant periods' could be extended in the future, if necessary"

is far from convincing. After at least two periods of intensive consultation, GRONI surely cannot argue that it has not yet established where privacy ends and open access begins. Has it not been able to strike a balance between the rights of individuals and families and the need for openness? The "relevant periods" are already well in line with international standards and could be described, when compared with some other jurisdictions, as conservative. CIGO and APCI believe that the periods set out in the Bill are more than adequate and allow that, as a general rule, the subject — the person named in each record — will, by the time a record achieves "historical" status, have been born a century or more earlier. Bearing that in mind, CIGO and APCI are keen that their proposed amendments to lines 18 to 24 on page 5 and lines 31 to 33 on page 8 of the Bill be given further scrutiny and accepted.

In its response to our original submissions, the Department raised the issue of improving the range of data recorded in civil records. It indicated that it intends, by regulation, to commence recording extra detail in death registrations. The extra detail would include the occupation of a husband's wife, and the names and occupations of parents of children who die before reaching the age of 16. Interestingly, although the Department implies that there will be genealogical value in that new information, none of that extra detail is being recorded on foot of consultation with genealogists. GRONI is already well aware that CIGO and APGI would like the recording of parents' names extended to all persons who die, and not just to those under the age of 16. I raised that issue with GRONI's Stanley Campbell as recently as August 2008, and pointed out that, on foot of representations by CIGO and APGI, such information has now been a matter of record in the Republic of Ireland since 2006.

Given that, we wish to make a case for improving death registration in Northern Ireland by including — in addition to the deceased's date and place of birth — his or her parents' names, too. Beyond mere genealogy, the importance of recording parents' names in death records is that it allows death records to be matched to birth records, thus proving beyond reasonable doubt that a particular person has died. That is vital when dealing with the important subject of inheritance and intestacy. One might call the matching up of birth and death records a game of "genealogical snap".

Since 1973, GRONI has recorded the date and place of birth, and maiden surname, of married women in all death registrations but does not record the deceased's parents' names. Until the passing of its Civil Registration Act in 2004, the Republic did not include any additional information to the meagre data recorded since registration first began in 1864. It was only after extensive lobbying by CIGO and APGI that provision was included in the Republic's new Act for the recording of a deceased person's date and place of birth and parents' names. The fact that such details are not currently noted in Northern Ireland is an urgent issue and one that GRONI should address, particularly because as it can be argued that clause 27, which will establish a record of Northern Ireland connections, is not in any way urgent but is designed to be a register of value to genealogists.

On 28 May 2008, during an evidence session with the Committee of Finance and Personnel, Northern Ireland's Registrar General, Dr Norman Caven, said of clause 27:

"We are planning a book of Northern Ireland connections so that individuals who have a connection with Northern Ireland could register events, births, deaths or marriages that happen outwith Northern Ireland. Such registrations would not have any legal standing but would be an additional valuable resource to genealogists. That is being undertaken in Scotland and has been well received. It is another area where we see a potential improvement but which would be paid for by users and not be a cost to the public purse."

We hope that you have had the time to read the copy of a newspaper article about the improvement of data in death registrations, which was attached to the briefing notes that we provided last week. The article, which I wrote, appeared in 'The Irish Times' in January 2003 in response to a statement by the Republic's General Registrar Office that the inclusion of further data in death registrations would:

"be outside the requirements of civil registration".

The article compared the situation regarding registration of deaths in the Republic at that time with both Northern Ireland and the European Union, and, through quoting the United Nation's civil-registration policy, it challenged the status quo and highlighted the crucial need for change. Subsequent to our lobbying, the recording of deceased people's parents' names in death registrations is now a reality in the Republic. CIGO and APGI believe that Northern Ireland should now follow suit. In the near future, the Department intends to replace the 1973 registration regulations, and we hope that the Committee will recommend that the new regulations make provision for the noting of parents' names in death registrations.

Mr Weir: Thank you for your presentation. For a second, I wondered whether you were going to trace the antecedents of the Bill, back a couple of centuries, to previous pieces of legislation. I am glad that you resisted that temptation.

You have received various bits of communication from the Department and, to some extent, several of your concerns have been addressed. If I picked you up right, your remaining concerns deal with three particular aspects: minor amendments to the wording of the Bill; the potential to vary "the relevant period"; and what information is included on a deceased person's certificate, which is the biggest issue that you want to see addressed.

Mr Smyrl: Technically, our concern about the information that is included in the Bill on a deceased person's certificate is askew, because the Bill does not deal with that issue. It was the Department that raised the issue of improving information in civil records, so I took the tack to slip in some extra information and make a plea for that to happen.

Mr Weir: Given that your concern is relevant to the legislation but somewhat askew to its wording, will you seek to take separate action rather than to incorporate a provision into the Bill to address that?

Mr Smyrl: I had not considered that, because our concern is not really relevant to the Bill. The information that is collected on birth, death and marriage registrations in Northern Ireland is set, I think, by regulations. In the Republic, they are called statutory instruments.

Rather, I raised the issue to highlight the fact that not only will the legislation be updated but new regulations will be introduced to deal with the collection of registration data. I mentioned earlier that, in future death registrations in Northern Ireland, the parents' names of all children aged under 16 years who die will be recorded.

At present, when a married woman dies, she is said to be the wife of so-and-so, a carpenter. However, when a man dies, he is not said to be the husband of, for example, Florie, a housewife. That will be included in future.

Mr Weir: On the minor changes to wording, you received responses that satisfied you on the bulk of the issues. However, that area particular remains outstanding. Are you still pursuing that issue with the Department? I presume that the Department's mind is not closed to making those minor changes, and that you will pursue the matter further.

Mr Smyrl: Yes, we will go back to the Department. However, I hope that the Committee will recommend some changes.

A change to the heading to clause 13 will not change the Bill materially. However, in reality, that whole part of the Bill, which must be read through, and I not immersed in legal terms for legislation, is about access to historical information. There would be no harm in the heading's stating that clearly.

Mr Weir: The Committee can look at that issue.

I understand your concerns about the relevant qualifying period. However, to be fair to the Department and to those who drafted the Bill, there may not be any sinister motive behind the general provision to vary timescales. That is normal practice with many pieces of legislation in which there are references to time frames. There is a feeling that the original legislation has got it right; however, there is a general provision that if, at a later stage, something appears that requires a variation, it can be made by subordinate legislation, rather than by having to introduce new primary legislation. I appreciate your concerns, but do you accept that that is a safeguard provision that may not need to be used?

Mr Smyrl: Absolutely; it is unlikely — given the statements made today. The issue was raised with the Department, which said that it would be changed anyway. To give it its due, the Department did not pull those dates out of nowhere: 100 years for a birth; 75 years for a marriage; and 50 years for a death. The thinking was that a person would be 100 by the time his or her birth record would be available as a historical record. If a person were to marry at an average age of 25, 75 years later would make him or her 100 years old. Therefore, if someone died somewhere between 50 and 70 years of age, he or she would be more than 100 years of age 50 years later. The figures make sense. I would have liked to have seen them closed off, but I agree with Mr Weir that it is very unlikely that the Department will want to vary them — even though there is provision in the Bill for that. It is not the end of the world if the Department decides not to do that, but we have had our say and made our point.

The Chairperson: In the event that the power be included in the Bill, should the matter be referred to a plenary sitting and be subject to affirmative resolution?

Mr Smyrl: To my mind, it seems immaterial; it is a standard issue. For instance, in the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland, census records are made available once they are 100 years old. It seems to be an accepted instance that 100 years after a person's birth, or after the creation of a record, that information should be made available. I take on board what Peter Weir said about its being a safeguard — it allows for the legislation to be changed easily at a later stage without having to have recourse to primary legislation. However, it is an unnecessary measure, because one is not likely to lengthen the periods for which one would create a record as a historical record. Anything longer than that would be 100, 110 or 120 years.

Mr Hamilton: Does the General Registrar Office in the Republic intend to make pre-1922 records for the whole of Ireland fully and freely available on the Internet?

Mr Smyrl: The General Register Office in the Republic has a long-standing, ongoing policy to make information available on the Internet eventually. Given the current financial situation, such a development may be a long way off. On numerous occasions, we have been promised access to the new computerised index of births, deaths and marriages that the GRO in Dublin has created. However, we still do not have access to that index.

Mr Hamilton: Does GRONI intend to make post-1922 records available on the Internet as well as offering access to the records in its office for a fee?

Mr Davison: I am a member of the GRO users group. As far as the group is aware, post-1922 records will not be available on the Internet. The idea is to make historical records available to enable users to conduct index searches and view digitised versions of the records.

Mr Hamilton: If post-1922 records are available on a fee-paying basis only, will that pose problems for genealogists? Is it a competitive disadvantage?

Mr Davison: Genealogists and researchers want all information to be made available. However, we realise that, for obvious reasons, limits are necessary. It is positive that GRONI is taking steps to introduce a digitisation process for historical records. Although the current search facility at Chichester Street is, occasionally, slightly restricted, it provides a very good service within those limitations. Post-1922 records are available there and will, I hope, continue to be available there.

Mr Hamilton: If public authorities were to make records available online, would that encourage more people in Northern Ireland, and in Ireland as a whole, to trace their roots? Have you conducted any empirical research into that matter?

Mr Davison: It is a given that if we provide easier access to information, more people will use that facility. More and more information is being made available online daily through Departments, agencies and commercial organisations. In fact, the 1911 UK census was placed online yesterday. We are keen to keep that information coming.

Mr Hamilton: The more the merrier. Your earlier submission mentioned the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (LDS). Are its records freely available in libraries and in its Churches in Ireland and the UK? Or are they available in Salt Lake City in Utah only?

Mr Smyrl: As part of its belief system, members of the LDS Church trace their ancestors and baptise them as members of the Mormon Church. That should not affect other Christian Churches that do not share those beliefs. The LDS Church actively encourages outside parties to view its material. During the past 50, 60 or 70 years, it has assiduously microfilmed and made copies of records.

Although I do not know the history of the matter, in the 1950s, the LDS Church convinced the GRO in Dublin and in Belfast to allow it to microfilm copies of records. Although there was no legal provision for such action, an agreement was signed and the records were copied. Almost all Dublin's records, which, prior to 1922, covered all of Ireland, were microfilmed. However, every single birth, death and marriage in Northern Ireland and the associated indexes from 1922 to 1959 were microfilmed and stored in the Church's library in Salt Lake City. The LDS Church can copy the microfilms from the negative to create a positive, and circulate the records to any LDS church that has an attached library. The LDS church on the Hollywood Road in Belfast had copies of many of Northern Ireland's post-1922 births, deaths and marriages, and associated indexes, which it made available.

Those were withdrawn about a year ago, and we heard that that was facilitated by negotiations with the General Register Office in Northern Ireland. Making the films available was contrary to the agreement that was struck between GRONI and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in 1959-60. I appreciate that GRONI has reservations about that, but the films should have been readily available. It seems bizarre that, although the same information can be obtained free of charge in various libraries around the world, Northern Ireland citizens must pay GRONI to see it.

Mr Hamilton: Near the end of your presentation, you mentioned additional information on death certificates in the Republic. You said that, in Northern Ireland, information is available only on death certificates for children up to the age of 16. Is there any reason why a more conservative approach is being taken in Northern Ireland?

Mr Smyrl: It is actually the other way around. The Department is suggesting that genealogists should be thankful and pleased that that new information will have genealogical value. However, it was not recorded for its genealogical value but for its statistical value. The most useful new information will be that information relating to children who died before the age of 16 and the names and occupations of their parents. Recording details about a deceased husband's wife is about parity of esteem; a wife must not be treated as her husband's chattel, and, therefore, a husband's death record should state the name of his deceased, or living, wife.

In order to illustrate why such information should be included on death records, take, for example, an individual called John Murphy, who was born in Limerick. Up to two or three years ago in the Republic, exactly the same information was recorded on death records as was recorded on records going back to 1864: a person's home address; occupation; age; and cause of death. If John Murphy were born in Limerick and died in Dublin, the only identifying information on his death record would be his name and age — John Murphy, age 67, died Dublin — but there would be nothing to say that he was born in Limerick. Therefore, when attempting to demonstrate that an individual had died, it was difficult to match one record with another.

Since 1973, death records in Northern Ireland have sensibly included individuals' date and place of birth, and that at least provides one with some idea when attempting to match birth and death records to prove that someone has definitely died. One problem that can arise from that is that dates and places of birth can be wrong. Consequently, one can end up not being absolutely sure, so the proof positive is to include parents' names, and that is why including such information would be a great boon to genealogists. Moreover, having worked as a legal genealogist, I know that it is important to be able to say to a solicitor that John Murphy died on a particular date in a particular town, and here is the death record, on which the information matches that on the birth record — snap, two matching records.

Mr Davison: As someone who deals with adoption tracing, I agree that such a paper trail is invaluable.

Ms Purvis: To return to what Simon Hamilton said about the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and the removal of records from its Family History Centre on the Hollywood Road, you said that the agreement with the church more than 40 years ago would be unlikely to have withstood legislative changes in recent years. Will you elaborate on that?

Mr Smyrl: I was necessarily vague, because I cannot pretend to be an expert in that area. However, I was attempting to say that, given the UK's Freedom of Information Act 2000 and Data Protection Act 1998, I cannot envisage a contract made more than 40 years ago, which insists that people in Northern Ireland must pay to access information that the body charging for it has allowed a third party to make available outside Northern Ireland free of charge, still being valid. That seems inequitable.

Ms Purvis: Therefore, would you be an advocate of making those records freely available at the Family History Centre on the Hollywood Road?

Mr Smyrl: Yes, I would.

Ms Purvis: Or would you prefer that they be available at GRO for free?

Mr Smyrl: I do not want to say whether the GRO should provide free access to its records. It must be allowed a means of gaining revenue — one cannot provide free service and access to everything. The LDS Church already has copies of those microfilms, and, until a few years ago, it made them available through every one of its libraries worldwide. Now we are being told that it can provide them free of charge at every library across the world except at those in Northern Ireland. I do not know whether there is more than one located in Northern Ireland, but the LDS Church has one at the Hollywood Road in Belfast.

The Chairperson: I thank the witnesses for the information and evidence that they have provided.

The Committee will consider that evidence, and the general body of evidence relating to the Civil Registration Bill, at next week's meeting. Does the Committee agree to forward to the Department of Finance and Personnel the Hansard report of the discussions on the Bill from 28 May 2008? We can also send it the briefing paper received from organisations today, the response from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, and any other outstanding issue raised at today's meeting. We will ask the Department for a written response on all outstanding issues by the end of this week. That will fit into our agreed programme of work.

Thank you all very much for taking the trouble to come to talk to the Committee this morning.

Mr Joe Reynolds
Mr Chris Stewart

The Chairperson (Mr Storey): The two issues that we want to discuss today are the regional and sub-regional structure of the education and skills authority (ESA) first, and the sectoral representation organisations. I welcome John McGrath, Chris Stewart and Joe Reynolds. Joe, you are very welcome, and it is nice to see you here. I will now ask John to proceed.

Mr John McGrath (Department of Education): I am very glad to be here this morning for the continuing process of the review of public administration (RPA) Bill. I have my trusty support Chris, and also Joe, who has joined the RPA team in the Department, and who will be a constant feature at these meetings. We have provided two papers to the Committee: the first on the regional and sub-regional structure of ESA, and the second on the role and responsibility of sectoral organisations. I will speak about the first paper and deal with any questions that Committee members may have, and then Chris will discuss the second paper team (ESAIT), but they do not yet represent signed-off proposals, particularly with regard to structure. The Department will shortly feed back some views to ESAIT on how its existing thinking matches the criteria set out by the Department. After that process, it is envisaged that ESAIT will begin a consultation process, involving particularly the trade union side and other stakeholders. After that, the proposals will formally come to the Department for the Minister to sign off. We would, obviously, like to accelerate that process in the next couple of months, because we are working to a tight deadline to get senior posts out to the market and filled in adequate time for ESA to be up and running by the target date of 1 January 2010.

A considerable amount of work has gone in to producing both papers, by the Department, and by the education and skills authority implementation

As was set out by Catriona Ruane in several speeches in the Assembly recently, ESA has a number of clear, overriding objectives: to raise standards overall, and reduce the gap between the highest and lowest achievers, and in so doing reduce the barriers faced by many in accessing education and fulfilling potential; to provide a clear and consistent model of delivery focused on equality, which is child-focused and also reflects modern professional practice; to provide locally-based and accessible frontline services to help, support and, as necessary, to challenge schools and other education providers — education providers is meant in the widest sense, encompassing everything that is in the education basket, from early years to youth; and to provide efficient and effective support services, and free up resources to be redeployed to the frontline.

ESA, led by its chairperson and members, will be accountable for its performance to the Department, the Minister and the Assembly, and, in so doing, will be, in a broader sense, open to scrutiny by this Committee. The accountability framework for ESA will be clear, transparent and rigorous, and will also reflect the guidance and good practice and the oversight of arm's-length bodies, which are emerging from the Department of Finance and Personnel and from previous work of the Public Accounts Committee.

The two main drivers in designing the structure are to provide locally, as much as possible, the services that schools and other providers need, and, parallel to that, to centralise and derive economies of scale from regional back-up services that need not be provided locally. Schools will be the focus of the system: they will be at the centre of the system, rather than being one element in a wider command-and-control system.

The paper that the Department has provided, therefore, outlines the current development of thought with regard to the regional disposition of central functions — that is, finance and human resources — and how they will be brigaded; and, linked to that, the current thinking with regard to a network of local area offices and the frontline services that they would provide to schools and other education providers. It is envisaged that those local offices, led by senior managers, should have the flexibility to respond to specific local circumstances in line with the central policy framework. They will aim to be sensitive to, and receive input from, local committees, comprising, among others, a number of elected representatives. The Bill under consideration already contains provisions for the establishment of such committees.

As members will know, the Department set out a range of criteria against which proposals for the structure of ESA should be shaped and, eventually, judged. There has been considerable rigour in the thinking to date. The outline business case, which has been signed off in the system and has now been made available by the Minister, demonstrates the robustness of the case for the creation of ESA and the reduction of a significant number of middle-management and senior posts, which will lead to savings of some £20 million per annum by the third year of implementation.

The intention for the number of senior posts — those that attract salaries in excess of £55,000 per annum — is that they will reduce from 80-odd to fewer than 50. That alone will generate savings of £2 million per annum. As regards the Department's response to thinking on ESA's structure, it is currently considering the cost parameters that it will set for ESA and is finalising the structure with regard to senior management posts.

I emphasise that although those proposals are well developed and have been tested against criteria that have been set by the Department, they have not yet been formally signed off. Therefore, there is still scope for the Department to offer views to ESAIT and for those to be reflected before final decisions are made. In that context, the comments and views of the Committee will be a welcome ingredient. I look forward to discussion on that paper.

The Chairperson: I remind members that the proceedings will be reported by Hansard. Therefore, it is important that you raise any concerns that you have, because they will be recorded.

Mr McGrath, what references are there in the Bill or in its schedules to ESA's structure and sub-regional structure? How is that dealt with in the Bill? In addition, what staffing structure is envisaged below senior-official level for each of the six local teams? One of many concerns is that paragraph 12 of the briefing paper on the structure of ESA at regional and local levels begins with the words:

Are those posts equivalent to current Senior Civil Service posts in the Department of Education, or is that a generic term?

Mr McGrath: Those posts are benchmarked against the salary level at which the Senior Civil Service starts.

The Chairperson: Therefore, the number of posts will be reduced from 80 under the current arrangements to fewer than 50. I am not being a cynic, nor, in any way, suggesting that that will never happen. However, if the threshold is under 50, do we run the risk that, over a period of time, we end up in a situation in which there will be requests for more staff and resources? Five years after ESA has been established, more people will be employed than there are at present in the five education and library boards. People will ask what all that was about: you went through all of that only to have more senior-level staff and the savings that were envisaged were not realised.

Mr McGrath: I will deal with those questions in reverse order. A solid piece of work in the outline business case demonstrates that about 460 posts can be removed while still delivering the same functions by rationalising and centralising them.

The Chairperson: Are those 460 posts separate from the 80 senior posts?

Mr McGrath: Those 80 posts are a subset of that. You could remove 460-odd posts and deliver the same functions with that reduced number of posts. When that is fully implemented, £20 million per annum could be saved. At the senior-management core, 80-odd posts will be reduced to fewer than 50.

As I mentioned, the Department is considering the parameters that it will set for ESA's senior-management costs. We must get that right at the outset so that ESA can do its job. We recognise that the public-expenditure structure and future budgets are almost certain to bring about continued expectations for efficiency savings from public bodies. Education will not be immune from that, although whether we believe that that is a good idea is a different matter. As the second biggest chunk of the block, it would have to be a contributor, and whether generating 3% or 3.5% per annum in the future one would expect to bear down on management costs. Therefore, we expect the drift to tighten up over time as ESA beds down more efficiently, not to increase.

The trick is to get the change process — that is, from the five education and library boards and the other organisations — right at the outset and managing that process over three or four years by putting in drivers that will, essentially, squeeze management costs. That is why it is important to get a figure at the start of the process — and it may be an envelope figure — whereby we say that senior management costs should not exceed X amount, and then — and I am speculating — to say that, in two years' time, we expect that figure to be reduced by Y per cent.

Therefore, the driver will be intended to push down costs, and that is quite appropriate because the public will expect that, as much as possible, management costs should be what is needed but no more than that, with the maximum amount of resource going to the front line. If that answer is satisfactory, I will let Chris deal with the specific provisions in the Bill.

Mr Chris Stewart (Department of Education): Chairperson, you asked about how the legislation deals with the sub-regional structure of ESA as described by John McGrath. The legislation does not specify the model that John outlined but it allows for that model, or a variation of it, to be introduced if that is what is ultimately decided. The relevant provisions are in paragraphs 7 and 8 of schedule 1 to the Bill, which allow for the establishment of committees of the ESA and for any statutory function of the ESA to be delegated to those committees or to ESA employees.

That means that if the sort of model that John outlined is signed-off and decided as the right way forward, the legislation allows for that to be implemented from the outset. The flexibility of the approach in the legislation is also an advantage. If that model needs to evolve if we do not get it right first time, the legislation is sufficiently flexible to allow the changes to be made quickly, whereas, under the current arrangements, structures are prescribed in primary legislation and the only way to make a change is through more primary legislation.

Therefore, the Department feels that the approach in the legislation will allow for the introduction of a model that meets all the principles and parameters that John outlined, or a variation on that, and for that model to evolve if necessary.

The Chairperson: The problem is that we could end up in the same situation as with pupil profiling — that is a different issue, but the same principles apply. In that instance, the issue was debated and, months ago, organisations went to the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment (CCEA) and said that it was not working but the pilot was continued. Then, in September, the Department of Education issued the revised curriculum to all schools and although pupil profiling was mentioned in that, a number of weeks later an announcement was made stating that that was a bad idea and will be scrapped. Are you going to let the matter run, talking about it until March and then with reports having to be done by June? It is a mess. My concern is that, by having a provision whereby the model can be changed, we may allow a similar situation to develop. Is that really the best way to present policy?

Mr McGrath: A lot of work is going into getting ESA structures right, getting the key balance between local sensitivity and support, and centralising those functions that can be centralised and making them sweat to get savings out of them. My own view is that there are no magic answer regarding perfect structure for any organisation, and circumstances will change. I would like to think, therefore, that the issue is not about getting the model wrong. It is more the case that if, over time, there are changes with regard to strategic priorities, or if, for example, there are serious issues about public expenditure and the Department and the Minister are required to take out significant efficiency savings and one way to do that is to tighten up the management structure, the approach that the Department is adopting provides the flexibility to do that.

Almost certainly, once ESA beds down over three or four years, and moves from having been the amalgam from day one, particularly of the five education boards and the smaller organisations, and develops its own culture, any organisation will say that, once it gets over that initial stage and gains a degree of maturity, it may well want to consider and establish whether it has the correct balance that is appropriate for it to move ahead.

The issue is not about getting things wrong; it is about having the scope to fine tune and refine the job that has to be done and the wider policy planning and public expenditure constraints. Therefore, it is not setting in concrete something that could be unpicked only by introducing primary legislation. I believe that that is consistent with the approach that is taken by organisations such as the Housing Executive and, perhaps, Invest NI, which are not subject in primary legislation to any degree of specificity about their detailed organisational structure.

The Chairperson: Following on from that, the Bill says that the substructure could include committees. A decision could be made not to have any subcommittees, because the Bill says only that “ESA may establish committees”. It may not agree to establish committees.

Mr Stewart: The Department will not give ESA that freedom. The Minister made it clear in the policy memorandum, which was agreed by the Executive, that committees will be established. The Department has, therefore, made a decision that there will be committees, and ESA will not be given that freedom.

The Chairperson: If that is the case, why is that not reflected in the Bill? Why does schedule 7 to the Bill use the word “may” when you say that the Minister has made a policy direction, and the policy memorandum uses the word “shall”?

Mr McGrath: It is the same issue. In five years from now, the Minister of the day from whatever party may decide that this model is not a good one. In those circumstances, legislation that stated that ESA “must” establish committees would allow no discretion. The word “may” is permissive, and that approach tends to be taken to legislation in general. If someone were to say in a couple of years' time that those committees are not a good idea or that you want them to evolve with community planning, the Department would have to say that it was stuck with them because Bill had makes that arrangement compulsory. That would not be helpful.

The Minister's policy direction to ESA, reflecting what is in the policy memorandum that went to the Executive, is that there shall be committees. The Minister will tell ESA that she wants it to establish local committees in line with the local area structure, and to get on with that, please.

Mr Stewart: There is nothing Machiavellian in the wording. It is normal legislative practice for such measures to be permissive rather than prescriptive. It is also worth emphasising that the Department does not see those committees as window dressing. The important distinction is that they will not be external scrutiny committees; they will be formally part of ESA, and they will be able to carry out functions on behalf of the organisation. They are not, in any sense, external; they are intrinsic to the structure.

The Chairperson: I want to give Members the opportunity to ask questions, because time has been set aside to deal with those two items.

Mr D Bradley: When the Committee had its initial discussions with officials from the Department about ESA, the selling point was the savings that would be made and that those savings would be redirected back into front line services. The emphasis then shifted to the raising of standards, which now seems to be the Department's key selling point for ESA, and the point that savings would be made is now in second place, as it were.

In your introduction, John, you said that staff who operate in local teams would be guided, supported and, where necessary, challenged by senior management in their efforts to achieve the key priority of driving up standards of educational achievement, with particular regard to closing the attainment gap. Yet, the Committee has a letter from the leader of the CCMS primary principals' group in the Derry City Council area, who already wrote to the Department on 21 May 2008 to ask questions in relation to the raising of standards. The letter states:

"I have been requested by our group to seek specific clarification on the points raised in our initial correspondence that we do not believe were addressed by your response. Accordingly, given the generic change in educational administration that will arrive with the advent of ESA, we feel it is imperative that frontline leaders are absolutely clear in terms of the following:

Is there any empirical evidence to suggest that the development of such a large unitary authority will improve the educational outcomes of our young people?"

With regard to the Minister, the letter continues:

"In your initial response you merely stated what the current educational outcomes are and the perceived economic benefits of a huge authority."

It is very important that education leaders in the front line at the chalk face have confidence in the ability of ESA to improve standards. That group of education leaders in Derry city from whom the letter came are not convinced that that will happen. They are asking whether there is any empirical evidence to suggest that the lofty ideals that the Department has for ESA with regard to raising standards will be realised.

Mr McGrath: That demonstrates the problem: that there is an issue about standards at present.

Mr D Bradley: Everyone knows that.

Mr McGrath: Those school principals and the children are not being served well by the current system. There is an increasing understanding of that, particularly in view of the profile that Caitríona Ruane has given the issue in recent months. There are significant issues about standards and the PAC reports on literacy and numeracy. One of the main problems at present, put bluntly, is that at least five systems — if not more — are doing things in different ways. That was highlighted in the PAC report on literacy and numeracy.

In some cases there are a plethora of organisations. If one organisation is using best practice, one would expect every other organisation to adopt that. However, we have a system in which people make a virtue of doing their own thing. That does not serve children well, and it does not ensure that equity or equality is provided across the Six Counties.

Under Caitríona Ruane, the language surrounding ESA has refined to make raising standards and reducing the gap the primary objective. Achieving savings is still an objective, but it is clear where the savings have to go: to the front line in order to improve standards.

As was the case previously, and as is still the case today, schools remain the focus of the new system. Schools are not somewhere down the chain of command; they are at the absolute centre, and they are to be helped and supported, and that will be the function of the local ESA structure. They will have more of a commissioning role in what services and support — particularly with regard to professional development — that they need and want. Given that facilitation and empowerment, the wider community — and the Department and ESA, on behalf of the wider community — will expect the schools to perform better with regard to delivering standards.

The issue is about not only organisational change, it is about the empowerment of schools. In parallel with that, however, it is finding a more rigorous system of monitoring and performance management, which is articulated through 'Every school a good school: a strategy for raising achievement in literacy and numeracy', which is moving to final fruition, and the school improvement policy. It is that entire package. The organisation — and that policy direction and the focus on putting pupils first and schools next — is the package which, we believe, will do far more to improve standards than anything that has happened to date.

There is no automatic empirical evidence that one single organisation will bring about improvements; that is not the issue. The issue is that the current system is, arguably, not serving children well. There has been disparity and an unsustainable patchwork of approaches, and they have not served children well. Surely, we need to do better by establishing a single, but decentralised, organisation. We have the opportunity to sweat out the amount of savings, which the outline business case demonstrates, without reducing service. A saving of £20 million, without reducing services, is a good start: it is not the end, it is the start. Against that context, the propagated model deserves the opportunity to demonstrate that it can improve on the past.

Chris may wish to say something about the specific correspondence from which Dominic Bradley quoted.

Mr Stewart: I am sure that you are familiar with that correspondence, we are —

Mr K Robinson: I apologise for interrupting, Chris, but my comment may actually tie in with what he is going to say. What reward is there for schools that improve their attainment?

The Chairperson: Currently?

Mr K Robinson: No, built into this process. If this process is going to raise standards, and the whole focus has moved to money, what reward is there for a school or schools to do that?

Mr McGrath: I may be naïve, but I would have thought that any school would want to raise and maximise the standards of outcomes of the pupils in its charge.

Mr K Robinson: Yes, but they would want recognition for doing so. How will the Department do that?

Mr McGrath: How are we going to recognise that?

Mr K Robinson: How is the Department going to recognise a school which really sweats itself out, to use your term, and raises standards? We are all in this game to raise standards. If a school really puts itself through a hoop, and the teachers, the principal, the governors, everyone pulls together and the school is assessed as having raised their standards, what reward is in it for them? What carrot? There are lots of sticks, but no carrots.

Mr McGrath: I think that there needs to be a balance. I would expect any organisation to take pride in the fact that it is doing a good job —

Mr K Robinson: We do take pride —

Mr McGrath: In general, I do not mean a school, I mean anyone —

Mr K Robinson: We take pride and there's a satisfaction. However, if we are now moving to this super-duper authority, what recognition is going to be built in to make tangible rewards to schools? Will there be extra staffing or some sort of emoluments that can make people strive to improve?

Mr McGrath: First of all, the enrolments of a well-performing schools are likely to increase. On the other hand, if there are schools that are performing poorly, and the Department deals with the school improvement agenda —

Mr K Robinson: That is the stick. What is the carrot?

Mr McGrath: It is both. Parents and pupils will, increasingly, go to the schools that are deemed to be performing and performing well. If there is a more rigorous approach taken with underperforming schools than there has been in the past, there will be a further issue of capacity. First of all, there is the capacity of high performing schools to grow —

Mr K Robinson: John, we are moving to a business model here, and in business those executives who perform well, unfortunately, receive very large salary increases in addition and all sorts of bonuses. Therefore, what is in it for the school? I do not mean the individuals in a school, but the school as a corporate body. What is in it for the school if it improves its standards?

Mr O'Dowd: The improved life of its pupils.

Mr K Robinson: That is taken as a given, and that comment is a wee bit glib, actually.

Mr McGrath: This is speculation, but if we are in the territory of asking whether there are ways in which there can be financial incentives for the school, as an institution, to enable it to reinvest in equipment or employ more teachers, then that may well be something that the Department needs to examine. However, I would hesitate in doing so, and I am sure that Mr Robinson is not suggesting some type of bonus system for schools where money goes —

Mr K Robinson: I am sure that the unions would jump on that if I were to suggest it. I am not suggesting that.

Mr McGrath: One of the issues that the Department has at present is that it has given more money to poorly performing schools, which had no eventual outcome, because we did not link it —

Mr K Robinson: The Department did not reward the successful schools. Here is an opportunity to do that.

Mr McGrath: No, the Department actually rewarded underperforming schools.

Mr K Robinson: The Department rewarded failure.

Mr McGrath: We need to find a way, and I agree —

Mr K Robinson: Schools that were successful had their added bonuses taken away for raising school standards.

Mr McGrath: I do not have any difficulty with encouraging and incentivising the institution to do well, but in any discussion we have with school principals they say that they want to do their best. In many cases, those principals feel — and I am sure that the Committee hear this — that they are prevented from doing so and are disempowered. In matters of professional development, they are told what they can get rather than given the scope to say what they would like. Empowerment will be a feature of the future, and principals will be able to commission what they want, and will have far more freedom with regard to professional support. There will also be accountability.

I agree that schools that perform well should be recognised in the broadest sense of the word, and should be celebrated. Let us face it: well-performing schools — that is, well with regard to the circumstances with which they deal, and not just the pure academic achievement — already take great pride in doing well. The Department, and, I am sure, the Minister, would want to find ways to incentivise, as you put it, in such a way that it enables the school to progress and to do better.

Critically, if we are going to improve standards, we must improve teaching. That is the core of it. There are issues around incentivising and creating a better approach to the workforce, including morale and absenteeism, as opposed to investing a lot. As Mr Robinson put it bluntly, there will need to be carrots and sticks. It is not linked to just ESA: if we were not changing the organisational structure, we would still need to do something about standards. ESA's importance is not seen in just organisational structure.

Mr D Bradley: I will go back to my question, which I am asking on behalf of that group of teachers which wrote to the Committee and to the Department. You outlined the difficulty with standards and the long tail of underachievement, about which we have known for some time. You said that it is worth giving the model a chance, but are those sufficient grounds to make such changes? In the letter, the leader of that group of primary school principals asked whether the Department has done any research which offers empirical evidence to support the establishment of such an authority as the best way to raise standards.

Mr McGrath: I believe that the issue is more complex than that.

Mr D Bradley: When you said that it is worth giving the model a chance, that does not sound extremely complex to me.

Mr McGrath: There is enough evidence that standards are not high enough.

Mr D Bradley: I did not dispute that.

Mr McGrath: The current organisational structure has not helped — and has, perhaps, hindered — achievement or the pursuit of it. We have not made the best use, as PAC reports have demonstrated, of significant funds that were invested in literacy and numeracy in particular. Therefore, the status quo is simply not good enough.

The 'Every school a good school' policy is soundly based and contains mechanisms and approaches to school improvement that have far more rigour and transparency in how to deliver that. Linked to that is the need to create the organisational structure, the vehicle that will help to support schools and drive improvement.

Mr D Bradley: Where is the evidence that that particular model is the most effective vehicle by which to achieve that improvement?

Mr Stewart: The evidence is in the GCSE results.

The Chairperson: I would like to go back to something that John said, because it is a worry. You referred to numeracy and literacy. The problem was not the education and library boards; the problem was the Department.

Mr McCausland: Hear, hear.

The Chairperson: I do not think that any of the education and library boards will take any of the blame for the failure of the Department which introduced a numeracy and literacy strategy on which it spent £40 million, and they are now being told that there has been failure and that that failure lies with the boards, when the failure on that occasion lay fairly and squarely with the Department.

Mr McGrath: I think that I said the current structure.

The Chairperson: The rationale of your comments, however, is that the boards were responsible.

Mr McCausland: The point is that the only things that are being changed are the schools and the system. The Department is not changing. It is a classic example of buck passing.

Mr Stewart: The Department is changing very substantially.

Mr McCausland: Well, maybe not for the better.

Mr Stewart: However, the Chairperson is absolutely right on the point that he made about literacy and numeracy. The Public Accounts Committee (PAC) put the blame squarely on the Department and said that the Department was wrong to allow to continue a system in which there were five different approaches to literacy and numeracy. The PAC rightly criticised us for not having done something about that earlier.

If I could return to Dominic Bradley's point. The Department is familiar with the correspondence that you mentioned, and we are engaging with that group of principals. It is very important that we do so, because, as we emphasised, all school improvement starts and finishes with school principals and school leaders. The Department very much wants to engage with them and take seriously what they have to say. It is, I believe, interesting that that concern comes from a group of CCMS principals, which is, of course, a regional organisation which covers all Catholic maintained schools throughout Northern Ireland. The schools and CCMS as a sector have been very successful in tackling underperformance and raising standards.

As John said, the evidence is there, but, sometimes, the question has the wrong emphasis. The size of the ESA is not the issue. We are not making this change because we feel that we have to achieve some kind of critical mass in order to achieve success. The issue is about the number of organisations and the number of approaches.

We have seen — and the empirical evidence is in the GCSE results — an unacceptable variation in outcome and an unacceptable inequality in the standards of attainment in different parts of the fragmented education system in Northern Ireland. Good practice is being developed by principals; however, it is not crossing sectoral and organisational boundaries.

They are not the only source of good practice; good practice is being developed in all the other sectors, including the controlled sectors, but it is not spreading. It is being trapped in the organisational boundaries of the present system. The PAC rightly criticised the Department for not doing anything about that.

Ken asked me to make the link between the two. We need carrots — I will be careful in how I phrase this because it may sound as if the carrot may involve a great deal of work — but where a principal or school leader or group of school leaders have demonstrably achieved success we should publicly recognise and celebrate that success. However — and this is part of the change — the completely different approach that the ESA will take compared to the education and library boards will be to ask what a principal has done or what new approaches have been developed in a school or a group of schools that have worked? Should the ESA be made amenable and responsible to that principal who, along with his local colleagues, may ask for money because they have developed good practice in one school which will spread, rather than the ESA's simply offering a set of services to schools and telling them that they must take what is on offer? That good practice could spread from one school through the neighbouring area by means of co-operation, sharing of staff, and the sharing of resources.

The development of services in schools or groups of schools — and this is captured in the Every School a Good School policy — is based on their self-improvement and self-development rather than simply taking what is offered on a very restricted menu from education and library boards, as they do at present.

The two straight-forward carrots are recognition and money for the development of services and expansion of good practice in schools, which, as John said, is driven by the schools in a commissioning role and making the ESA responsive. If the ESA cannot provide the services, and the schools can provide them better, then we shall make sure that the ESA responds appropriately.

Mr K Robinson: Thank you very much, Chris; that is quite heartening. A school that came here showed how it had changed things around, and how with added flexibility they could do so much more —

Mr Stewart: It could put an arm around the school down the road as well.

Mr K Robinson: You said something right at the end of your presentation that interested me. However, it has gone for the moment; I have lost my train of thought.

Mr McGrath: May I respond to what Nelson said? Reports have highlighted failures of the Department. Many of those failures, to be blunt, stemmed from the Department's failing to performance-manage the education system — to give direction and expect people to take account of it. It has allowed a system without the necessary orchestration in which people did their own thing. That is not acceptable in a devolved context where a Department and a Minister are accountable to the Assembly, and in which the Committee would also have a role.

The Department is changing; it is about to change its structures radically. However, it must accept that its job is to police the policies and targets that have been endorsed and police them across the system. I referred to the accountability framework for ESA, and it will expect to be held to account by the Assembly and by the Committee that is it doing its job in overseeing and pursuing targets and holding people to account. The Department needs, culturally and structurally, to address its weaknesses, and it is doing so.

Miss McIlveen: In relation to the recruitment of the core structure, which you refer to in paragraph 8 of your paper on the structure of the ESA, saying that you aim at finalising the overall proposals by mid-February and at starting recruitment in early spring.

Paragraph 6 talks of undertaking a consultation on a proposed structure. It almost looks as if the proposed structure has been pre-empted and that that consultation has already been sorted. Drafting job descriptions for the core structures gives the impression that decisions have already been made, irrespective of the consultation.

You refer to the PAC recommendations and the commitment to appoint high-calibre candidates, and we would not expect you to recruit anyone less than high calibre. However, experienced people who would meet the requirements are likely to come from the existing boards. I raised that issue before when I mentioned asset-stripping and our concerns about the transition. I know that you are aiming for an operational date of 1 January 2010, but that may not be realised; there may be slippage. How will we ensure that the boards operate efficiently and that there is no asset-stripping?

Mr McGrath: To date, much work has been done to consider structure in ESA and in the Department, and consultation on that will begin shortly with trades unions and other sides. The timetable is very tight, and work is ongoing on various issues on which there is no disagreement: we will need a director of finance, because there is a £2 billion budget; that is almost a given. People can begin to work on the bones of a job description and have it in the tank while the consultation is under way. Indeed, it is important to remember that commitments have already been given to the PAC that high-calibre appointments would be made to the human resources post and director of finance post. Reports on job evaluation and other issues highlighted a lack of expertise in those areas.

As regard asset-stripping, the Minister met the chief executives of the boards on Monday morning. ESA will largely be made up of people who have moved across from the education and library boards. The boards will largely be responsible for the delivery of services until 1 January 2010. It is in nobody's interest for ESA to "asset-strip" boards by moving people thereby leaving gaps in delivery. If people in the board structure are successful in their application for a post in ESA — whether they be second or third level — we will have to adopt a clever management approach to deal with the situation. We must first ensure that they are not removed from their day job any earlier than need be, and we must work out a sophisticated system in the autumn when staff move posts.

We must be very careful, because this transition is not about asset-stripping. The first step is to identify who will hold the posts in the future. The second is to figure out how to, in a sense, migrate from managing the current situation to managing future changes. However, we know that we must not suddenly pluck successful applicants out of the system on a given date, thereby leaving the boards beleaguered in the last months of transition. That is by no means our intention; such a move would not help ESA or us.

Business continuity, which has been flagged up, will be critical over the next 10 months. We have already said that there must be a careful balance between managing existing services and supporting schools and getting ready for ESA. We must ensure that the second does not prejudice the first. It will not be a matter of asset-stripping, Michelle. It will be about allowing people to apply for the posts — and, of course, people are free to apply — getting some certainty about who will do certain jobs and then working out how they migrate over and when.

Miss McIlveen: At the same time, you do not want anyone to feel that they cannot apply for those posts.

Mr McGrath: The matter will have to be very carefully managed, for the reasons that you have outlined. The earlier we know who will fill the posts in ESA, the better — even if those people are not actually in post. That is important.

Miss McIlveen: There is mention of business changes, and you talked about the seven main functions and a process that would last three to five years. Do you foresee a post being established so that someone can oversee that change?

Mr McGrath: Gavin Boyd is making a strong case, based on empirical evidence, that it is a significant challenge for any organisation to weld more than five organisations together, create new structures, build in the identity of the new organisation and then set strategic targets so that everyone is moving in the same direction.

Books have been written about managing change. In the early years, there must be someone whose job is to oversee that process of change in the organisation and to get systems built in and bedded down. There may a post that reports to the chief executive for the first three or four years of ESA, but when systems have sufficiently bedded down, that post would not be needed. Change does not end on 1 January next year: it starts then. We will have to look at how far the transformation from the boards and the organisations into a single cohesive body has progressed. That is an issue that the Committee will want to be reassured on.

It would be a time-limited post that will not, however, be a part of the permanent structure.

The Chairperson: Paragraph 17 states:

"The Department's initial thinking is that a configuration of six units (one covering the greater Belfast area and five others)".

In his presentation Gavin Boyd said that ESA had envisaged 11 units.

Mr McGrath: I do not wish to talk behind anyone's back. However, at that time ESA might have thought that such a structure should be compatible with 11 local authority areas.

The Chairperson: Gavin showed us a diagram setting that out.

Mr McGrath: If Gavin were here, I imagine that he would say that that is one option. The Department's view is that we need to strike a balance between having a local structure that is sensitive and coterminous with local government and also cost effective. We envisaged that each would be headed by a senior manager, as they will be doing an important job.

However, we need to strike a balance between a decentralised structure with 11 offices — which would complicate the reporting relationships in ESA — and cater for local sensitivities. Therefore a six-unit model, five of which would dual two of the new district councils and one of which would be in Belfast, is preferable. Which council areas would be paired is an issue for further discussion. Many of the deep-seated issues of school improvement and performance concern Belfast, and we need a focus on that. That is not to say that there are not significant issues about performance elsewhere. The six-unit model strikes the right balance between local sensitivities and keeping management costs sensible without over-complicating the structure of the organisation. That is within the parameters that the Department has given ESA and will limit senior management costs in future.

The Chairperson: Where is the thinking on children's services? Three options were given originally. How many posts will be needed to deliver children's services?

Mr McGrath: There should be a second-level post in charge of children's services, which will be one of the primary posts in the system relating to quality and standard of service. We have not yet considered the structure below that post, but children's services will fit into the role of the local offices. ESA is setting up two groups to advise it: one on education quality and another on children's services.

Mr Stewart: Members will know the background and the concept of children's services. It originated in England in response to several serious cases of child abuse, including the Victoria Climbié case. It is not a direct read-across to Northern Ireland. However, the key point about directors of children's services in any organisation is not about the quantum but — uniquely in this case — the level of the post. He or she must be at a sufficient level in the organisation to have the clout necessary to ensure that the difficulties and deficiencies revealed by the Climbié case and similar cases do not occur here.

Those difficulties include issues that fall between stools, a lack of sharing of information, and a lack of co-ordination within, between and across organisations. The issue, therefore, is having someone at sufficient level in the organisation to pull the levers and ensure that that cannot happen. That is why thinking has evolved to show a particular focus on the second tier.

Mr McCausland: I welcome John's assurance that the Department will act in a way that is clever and sophisticated.

Mr Stewart: There is nothing new in that.

Mr McCausland: It is a novel approach, and one that the Committee welcomes.

Paragraph 16 of your submission states:

"Local managers and service staff will have the flexibility to respond to specific local circumstances and need. They will be sensitive to and receive input from a committee for that area comprising, amongst others, a number of elected representatives."

What do you mean by:

"They will be sensitive to and receive input from?"

Mr McGrath: It means that a range of functions would be provided locally to the education system, including schools, statutory and non-statutory youth providers, and so forth. However, they will also act as the local front offices of the ESA, they will be expected to connect and interrelate with local representatives and other service providers.

Mr McCausland: What power will the local committee have?

Mr McGrath: The committee will be largely advisory, but it is a question of striking a balance. The model for the committee may be based on bodies such as the district policing partnerships (DPPs) — and I use that model carefully — which are there to advise the system. It is not a central decision-making body. I am trying to find a body in the pantheon of local bodies with which to draw a comparison. It will identify the challenges and the particular circumstances of a local area, of which ESA and its parent organisation must take account.

Mr McCausland: Staff in a local office will take decisions, and they will probably be advised by a local committee. However, they can ignore that advice, in the same way that the police often ignore the advice of a DPP.

Mr Stewart: Perhaps the key difference is that this committee, unlike a DPP, is part of the organisations, and I do not think that it can, therefore, be ignored. The formal power of a committee would depend on which, if any, formal functions are delegated to it from the ESA.

Mr McCausland: At what point would that be decided?

Mr Stewart: We would welcome the Committee's views on that; it is not set in stone. As John said, we must strike the right balance: on the one hand, this is not intended to be a federated model, and we do not intend to move from five boards to six or 11 boards. On the other hand, there is a genuine recognition that for this sort of model to work properly, those committees cannot be ignored. The representatives of local communities and locally elected representatives must have sufficient influence over what is happening at that level. Otherwise, the structure would be a waste of time.

Therefore, we want to strike the right balance, and we welcome the Committee's views on what functions the committee have and what decisions should it make. How far beyond the role of advice ought it to go?

Mr McCausland: Might it go beyond being merely advisory?

Mr Stewart: The legislation allows for that; it allows for functions to be delegated to the committee. However, the key point is that the committee is not, in any sense, a separate organisation acting off its own bat; it remains functionally part of the ESA. Anything that a committee does or says, it does as in the name of, and as part of, the ESA.

Mr McCausland: I am interested in the possibility that its role might be more than simply advisory, because that has not been clear until now.

Paragraph 17 mentions:

"six units (one covering greater the greater Belfast area and five others)".

I understand that grouping 11 councils into pairs results in five units, but does "greater Belfast area" refer to the Belfast council area as it emerges, or might it not necessarily be totally coterminous with that?

Mr McGrath: Our starting premise will be that it should be based on the new Belfast district council area.

An issue with area-based planning is that several areas will straddle the boundaries. However, we suspect that that would be the case regardless of where the boundary is cut. That is something that is facing other Departments as well as education. In the current Belfast area, there were planning issues concerning Poleglass and Newtownabbey. It would take a strong argument to convince us that we should not stick to the new Belfast district council area.

Planning work has to be done on a cross-boundary basis. Two or three of the area offices might be engaged in strategic planning; the travel-to-school patterns, for example, do not adhere to administrative boundaries.

Mr McCausland: Have you any indication of what percentage of the activities and expenditure that are currently dealt with by the individual board would remain at a local level? Human resources, pay systems and so on will be centralised, but what percentage of activity will continue to be delivered at a local level?

Mr McGrath: I cannot give you a figure because thinking on area offices is still developing. It may well be that there will be a change in the pattern of spending within boards.

Mr McCausland: I am not seeking an exact figure such as 36.9%, but is it a half, a quarter or three quarters? I want you to make a guesstimate.

Mr McGrath: We will need to come back to you on that, Nelson. The thinking is that local area offices will have a number of functions, including dealing with standards and school improvement. Ken Robinson might comment on this point, but the view is that anyone who is talking to schools about standards must have credibility. The model might be a principal who is on secondment to ESA, and the budget for school improvement would be devolved locally to deal with that.

There will be an arm that deals with area-based planning. The area teams will have to undertake several area-based planning exercises because, for example, travel-to-school areas will be much smaller than some of the other areas. There will be a range of direct educational-support mechanisms, including education welfare officers, educational psychologists, help for literacy and numeracy, and child protection. The current CAS budgets will be disaggregated and reshaped to fit the commissioning model that we talked about earlier. There will be support for a linkage with youth in early-years education.

There will be management support and a finance support function in the local management of schools. There will be human resources capability to help schools on local issues of recruitment and discipline. Some elements of the function area will even be available locally.

Mr McCausland: Consider, for example, a building on Academey Street in Belfast that has x number of staff carrying out a range of activities. What presence will remain in that building if these plans come to fruition? Will a similar number of people be employed there? We are trying to get a sense of what situation you envisage. When will it become clear how the process will work out?

Mr McGrath: It will be a while before that becomes clear, but there are two strands. As Gavin Boyd has explained, the education and skills authority's thinking is that centralised functions reflect its current footprint. For example, finance could be centralised in Ballymena; human resources could be centralised in Omagh; the teachers' payroll is already based in Derry; something else could be centralised in Armagh; and there could be a centralised function between the south-east and Belfast. Therefore, some of that would remain under the new model. There would also be an area office for Belfast, which might be —

Mr McCausland: It is the area offices that I am talking about.

Mr McGrath: We do not anticipate the area offices being big — they will have, perhaps, 50 people in them. Those offices will have budgets and will be dealing with the support for the local management of schools; that is, the services that need to be available locally. Subsidiarity is important — we must provide services locally in order to support schools, but those services that do not need to be available locally should be centralised. Doing so will produce economies of scale and will mean that the services benefit from more professional oversight and management.

Mr Stewart: Some services may move out of Academy Street, but they will not all necessarily move centrally — some may move more locally. I am sure that the Committee is aware of the good examples that exist of services that have been developed by particular learning communities, where groups of schools have developed services, functions, and activities that call for staff to be recruited and based in the schools. As we move beyond the Curriculum Advisory and Support Services (CASS) into school-led self-development and self-improvement, we see a lot of scope for that model. Therefore, some services that are currently based at Academy Street will end up being provided out in the schools.

Mr McCausland: I have no problem with that; there are services that should be moved from what are currently boards into schools.

Mr McGrath: What do you have in mind, Nelson? I think that we are talking the same language.

Mr McCausland: I agree that a conversation should be had about that, but not necessarily this morning.

Mr McGrath: The idea is that the services that need to be available locally to help support schools should be available locally, which is why some elements of finance and human resources will be available locally, services relating to recruitment, discipline, and absence management, for example. The big machine elements — for example, payroll and awards — can be centralised.

Mr McCausland: People are familiar with the current system because it has been there for some 30 years. It would be helpful is to have some indication of what a typical board will be like. That is why I am asking about percentages — I want to know what is moving up, what is moving down, and what is left sitting there. That would help us to develop a better understanding of what the system might be like and the implications of that.

Mr McGrath: I understand your point, but the problem is that in the case of Belfast, for example, some people are probably not based in Academy Street, which makes it difficult to calculate figures for before and after. I hope that, before too long, we will be able to provide an embryonic idea of the structures that might exist in an area office, which should help.

The Chairperson: You must be pretty near that stage, because you mentioned going out to consultation and having some of this in place by February —

Mr McGrath: It has been an iterative process and we are still testing because, to be frank, I have been in the Department for almost 12 months and the whole issue of local presence and sensitivities has moved on significantly in that time. That issue was not on the radar as much when I joined the Department, the concerns were about the money agenda and centralising. However, the issue of local sensitivity and local support has come much more to the fore because the Minister has put it to the fore and it fits with the whole issue of standards. A lot of elements are in train currently; the issue is not signed off.

ESAIT will go out to consultation shortly and I am quite happy to return to the Committee before too long — perhaps with Gavin — to try to paint a more detailed picture of that. The scheme is on the cusp of being realised; we are simply fine-tuning a lot of the detail. We need to feed in how area-based planning will work — an issue that I know that the Committee will want to discuss; examine what skills are needed to do that locally; find the balance between local presence and engagement; and undertake core pieces of research, analysis and number crunching about how we do that.

I see area-based planning as an issue that the area offices will have a major role on and that will be very labour-intensive. It is not just education providers who will want to know about this issue — local communities will also want to know about it. It will be very time intensive so we need to factor that in to the thinking. We are developing that but will want to come back to it pretty quickly, because — as you pointed out to us previously — the more that we paint the picture and fill the gaps, the more that that will help Committee members to understand what we are about, which is something that we take very seriously.

Therefore, we want to be able to add quickly to the information that we have given today. I am not sure whether we have the precise number analysis that you would like. However, we could, perhaps, look at a hypothetical board and imagine which functions might go in which direction in the future. If the Committee wishes, we will talk to ESAIT to see whether we can do that, if the Committee thinks that that it would be helpful.

Mr McCausland: Could that be done in the next few weeks?

Mr McGrath: Yes, of course. The structure of ESA and the functions of the area offices should be put out for consultation soon, as Michelle McIlveen said. We need to be explaining what the area offices will do. We want to be explaining more. Although we are explaining to the Committee, we also want to be explaining and filling in the gaps much more for the wider stakeholders. That is one of the issues that Joe Reynolds is on board to help us to do in the period up to the spring.

The Chairperson: We could table a motion for the Assembly and maybe get the information on the day before.

Mrs M Bradley: It could be rushed through.

The Chairperson: Not that I am not a cynic, by the way.

Mr O'Dowd: We would have to make sure that the Irish version was available.

Mr McCausland: Yes, for Michelle.

Mr B McCrea: The Ulster Unionist Party has deep-seated concerns that this is a triumph of process over policy. We do not think that there is agreement on what the policies should be and that some sort of mechanism has been arranged in lieu of that agreement. It does not seem right that regions should be divided on a geographic basis. Inner cities provide a big challenge, so I wonder why the Department takes Belfast as a council area and lumps all the schools in together, because some schools are in challenging inner city areas and others, such as Grosvenor Grammar School, that straddle borders.

If you had told me that Northern Ireland has a population of only 1·8 million people and that that is why we could afford to have one regional body, and why ESA works — despite what was being said by colleagues from Londonderry — I could, perhaps, have understood the intellectual thinking behind that. I thought that the essence of this process was about removing duplication. Yet, we are just going to go back in and do the same thing again. There will, effectively, still be five boards.

Mr McGrath shakes his head, but he must recognise that there is a dichotomy in the views that I am expressing. On the one hand you say that ESA will police the system, look at standards and control the problems that were highlighted in the PAC report on numeracy and literacy. On the other hand, we talk about decentralisation and about getting as many resources as possible to the school level. I view those as being inconsistent.

With regard to local involvement and political input, I do not particularly want local councillors involved in the issue. The changes that you are trying to bring about have a political — with a small 'p' — connotation. If you do not get on board the views of everyone, you are not going anywhere with this. I see no mechanism in the new arrangements to get those views on board; in fact, I see a mechanism to sidestep what are the widely held views of different political parties, because one particular grouping may be in the ascendancy at this time. I am looking for a mechanism that ensures these matters are not run roughshod over the views of a lot of people.

Mr McGrath: ESA is a public body to deliver public policies, as signed off by the Assembly and the Minister. The political level and political process have to determine the policies. ESA can only take them and deliver. With regard to your point about boundaries, you are correct in saying that it is a small population, and I am not sure whether we made it clear if we can afford a model with at least five organisations all doing things differently in such a small population. If everything was being done consistently, there might have been a different debate.

I made the point that there are differences, and the challenge about school improvements in particular circumstances presents differently in inner city Belfast than in some rural areas. Therefore, in each area office, the profile of school improvement, as opposed to raising standards, will be different. In some areas of Belfast, it will be the major issue, elsewhere it will be a problem but not the major issue compared with the balance of staffing. However, no matter where the administrative boundary is drawn, there will always be a problem that crosses it, whether it is in health or in education.

Mr B McCrea: I hope that you do not mind me saying, but that is why drawing boundaries on a geographic basis seems illogical. If you had said to me that numeracy and literacy is a core issue cutting across the entire 1·8 million of the population, albeit focused on various areas, I could understand a body being set up to deal with numeracy and literacy, or if you had said that the Department understands the problems about early years and that it wants to have an early years strategy across Northern Ireland —

Mr McGrath: Which we are working on.

Mr B McCrea: Absolutely, but it is form following function. We are carving up what seems to be, and I apologise for saying this, a rehash of the old system, and that is a worry. I will not labour the point, but you need some help.

Mr McGrath: Yes, but essentially anything that makes this seem as if we are moving from five boards to six or 11 is not what my Minister is about, and it is not in the remit that we have given to ESA. This matter needs to be viewed in tandem with the issues that we discussed with Ken Robinson. It is about putting schools first and enabling them to have as much scope as possible regarding how they shape and go about their business. Therefore, there need to be things that are closer to them. I do not see any contradiction between delegating responsibility to schools and getting more control over their affairs but then holding them to account for delivering standards. There is no contradiction in that. You empower them to do as much as they can, and then you say that you will measure what they have done against benchmarks and expectations.

Mr B McCrea: I could get into a discussion with you about that, because I do not subscribe to a one-size-fits-all approach. Some schools are operating in very challenging areas and have different sets of standards. Furthermore, I reject free school meals as being a proxy for social deprivation, because many people do not take them up. I look at all those issues to find if there is a system that will help to move things forward, and my personal feeling — and I think that there is some support for this view from the public — is that devolving control to local school leaders, with appropriate financial support, appears to be the way forward. However, all the time I am worried. We will not sort out this issue today, but I am simply telling you our concerns.

It all comes back to the failed command and control structure of a centralised Department or a centralised ESA telling people what to do, standardisation, one-size-fits-all, what happens here will happen there. All of that seems to strip the professionalism away from the teachers and the people who can make developments.

You said that ESA is not really for policy — it is for implementation and that policy happens elsewhere. However, everything is connected. There is no forum for my colleagues and I to influence policy, short of winning the election and taking the position of Minister of Education.

The Chairperson: You have 20 years. [Laughter.]

Mr B McCrea: One of the good things about coming from my culture is that I do not mind being in a minority of one, if that is the case, because the truth is still the truth.

When it comes to the issue, therefore, I put to you another challenge, which I am not necessarily expecting you to resolve, because there are other political aspects to it. Nevertheless, I tell you that our biggest concern is that ESA is a Trojan Horse designed to propagate other policies that do not have the agreement of a significant proportion of the population. If ESA is given all of those powers, people will fight battles by proxy, and I do not believe that rationalisation and cost saving — which the Ulster Unionist Party supported in the early stages — will be achieved. However, we are extremely unhappy that ESA is being used for purposes for which it was not originally intended.

Mr McGrath: The political process by which policy is determined is not for me to comment on. Whether the organisational structure will be ESA, five boards or something else, it will have to deliver whatever policies come down. I cannot offer a view on the political input into that.

The Department favours the points that you made about local sensitivity with regard to the local structures. The approach to tackling issues about standards and school improvement in inner city areas and the mechanisms for that are likely to be different to the approach that is taken in a rural area where schools are not close together and issues of scale are a consideration. Therefore, a policy of school improvement will be set down and driven forward by strategy from the key post at the centre of ESA, but the precise delivery mechanisms may differ depending on the local area and the circumstances.

Particular issues relate to inner city schools in areas such as north Belfast, Shankill and west Belfast. A special push, which might not be needed elsewhere, will be needed from one of those area offices to deal with a significant problem, and school leaders will need to be directly involved in that.

Mr Stewart: I shall answer Basil McCrea's earlier point. John has explained why the Department sees the need for local services to be locally based. That lends itself, therefore, to a structure of delivery of services that has a strong geographical element to it, whatever that may be.

However, the legislation is flexible enough that if ESA, for example — or if the Department instructs ESA — needs to take a particular focus on youth services, early-years provision or some other aspect of education delivery, ESA can set up a committee on early-years provision, youth services or on raising standards for the length of time and with the focus that is deemed appropriate to deal with a cross-cutting or thematic issue. The legislation does not bind us to having everything squeezed through a geographical sieve; it is flexible enough to cope with the challenges that are there.

Mr McGrath: Mr McCrea made a point about free school meals as indicators of social deprivation. The Department will introduce proposals for a longer term review of the common funding formula, and Catríona Ruane is keen to address how to recognise deprivation in the funding formula. That vehicle is available, and, when results come out of that through the political process, ESA's job will be to distribute funding in line with that.

Not every policy aspect is covered by the legislation. As Chris said, as policies emerge and are signed off, ESA will have to cope and flex itself to deliver that with the appropriate balance between regional strategies and coherence and local flexibility. That needs to be fairly sophisticated, because this is a very complex and sophisticated business. I use that term in a generic sense, because we are trying to improve.

Mr B McCrea: I want to ensure that you understand the key point. The Ulster Unionist Party does not see the intellectual rationale for having five or six sub-regional bodies. That appears to be an arbitrary decision. If you said that there are different challenges, one could argue that there is an inner city challenge in Belfast, that there is a Belfast travel-to-school challenge and that there is a rural challenge that is separate from those two challenges.

A regional body is required in order to achieve the real economies of scale that have been set out for ESA. The sub-divisions should focus on the challenges that schools face, such as numeracy and literacy, early years, and social deprivation and exclusion. Why has the Department arrived at five plus one as a set of bodies? That is not logical to us. John said that the travel-to-school areas are likely to be different —

Mr McGrath: But smaller.

Mr B McCrea: — different to those inner city areas. I personally believe that policy decisions on area-based planning need to be taken in a regional context, because people travel such large distances, and there are other areas in which two schools can be only 500ft apart and yet have completely different demographic intakes and challenges. I have set out those issues in an attempt to be helpful. Our concern is that the new structure will simply be a replication of what went before, and we do not like the look of that.

Mr McGrath: That is helpful. The education and skills authority is designed to help to support schools. One of the issues that Ken Robinson raised was having support available locally, whether in human resources or school improvements, whereby someone can go and have a dialogue with a group of local principals and suggest that they should have something available to them.

However, it is difficult to pitch where on the spectrum an issue sits between, for example, literacy support or something that is a bit more sub-regionally significant. Basil McCrea essentially summarised that balance. The authority is not six bodies, it is six areas, and, in one sense, it is not unlike the way in which the Housing Executive is organised. It is a regional body with a number of areas. Area managers do a lot of the political connection and facing up, dealing with local councils and representatives. However, policy is set down centrally. ESA is a similar sort of model: it is not six new education and library boards; policy will be set down centrally by the Department; and the delivery of issues such as special educational needs, where there are five different approaches, which is unacceptable, will move towards more coherence.

There are different circumstances, and Basil McCrea has just produced an example of such a difference in travel-to-school. Addressing area-based planning in the Belfast area will present a different set of challenges to those in Fermanagh, which, being a larger county, will be identified as having a larger travel-to-school area, whereas Belfast has a hub-and-spoke model. The solutions may be different, but the same principles about area-based planning are needed and will come out from the centre.

I take Basil McCrea's point, which is helpful. It is precisely on that spectrum that we all want to get it right: that ESA is a regional organisation, with central policy and guidance from the Department, a consistent approach, and equity and equality with regard to what children get, while having a sensitivity to respond to local needs and circumstances.

Mr Stewart: That is why we were cautious in our answer to the earlier question about what might be formally delegated to local committees. On the one hand, we must avoid the situation in which a committee could be ignored by a local office. On the other hand, we do not want to bring about the thing that you fear, which is a federated model of six boards. Therefore, the Department must strike the correct balance with regard to what powers would be devolved formally to a committee.

Mr O'Dowd: My questions have been covered, but perhaps I might comment on Basil McCrea's previous point. Health and education almost mirror each other in the sense that where there are poor educational outcomes, there are poor health outcomes. If you advance Basil's argument, the Health and Social Care (Reform) Bill, which was recently passed by the Assembly, would have further broken down the health structure, with a health trust for north and west Belfast, or broken it down even more for west of the Bann in order to zone in on areas of poor health outcomes. As I see it, ESA can, under its structures, be broken down in order to examine areas of poor educational achievement, just as, under the health trusts, it will, hopefully, be possible to zone in on north and west Belfast. Therefore, the ESA structures are not so rigid that they simply apply a one-size-fits-all, as Basil put it.

The other side of your argument leaves us with the prospect of having not five or six new boards, but 950 boards — one for each primary school in the North. If each primary school were allowed to set its own educational agenda, there would be 950 different outcomes instead of one centralised outcome. That can not be done for the same reason as the Health Minister does not allow doctors and nurses in each hospital or health centre to set health policy.

They implement, and are key to, the health policy, but there needs to be a centralised direction, which must also be as democratically accountable and as responsive as possible to the needs of local communities. Under ESA, that is possible, because the majority of members of the board of that authority would be political representatives. The local communities would have their political representatives. Nelson McCausland's point about what heed senior management must take of the committee needs to be expanded and further explored.

Mr B McCrea: I think that I have obviously not made my position sufficiently clear: I was not going down the route of having 950 individual boards; I was going in the other direction. The idea of having a regional body is an interesting one, because many of the issues, such as area-based planning, have regional implications. If a solution is provided for Downpatrick, for example, that will have an impact on the intake of schools in Belfast, because some pupils currently travel from Downpatrick to Belfast. My view is along the lines of give unto Caesar what is Caesar's; that is, certain issues must be dealt with on a regional basis, while others must be dealt with on a topical basis, because the geography is not relevant.

Mr McGrath: There is nothing in the structure which means that that cannot happen.

Mr B McCrea: I just wanted to make that clear, because John O'Dowd was, perhaps, thinking that I was heading in a particular direction. My view is that the Ulster Unionist Party supported a regional body because Northern Ireland is a relatively small area with a relatively small population, and it is possible to do it on a regional basis. However, one then gets into situations in which, quite patently, that sometimes does not work due to different regional variations.

I want someone to tell me the guiding principles, in which everyone's views are respected and worked out. A process that works properly can then be devised. In other words, we should try to get the cart behind the horse, not in front of it. My worry is that, in the absence of having worked out those guiding principles, we come up with a set of rules, which is almost like shaking dice and seeing what way things fall out. I do not believe that that is helpful.

I apologise, therefore, if I did not express myself properly at the outset. I agree with John O'Dowd that there must be a tie-in with health, because the inequalities in each sector are linked, and there is also an interesting point with regard to regional structures.

Mr McGrath: John O'Dowd made a very good point. The other dimension in all of this is what happens when the RPA of local government occurs and community planning rolls out. Health inequalities cannot be dealt with in isolation from wider issues. Forums are required, and the Department believes that the structure of ESA offers the potential for community-level planning into which the education aspect can slot neatly. Furthermore, the structure will also allow for someone of sufficient calibre to be available to contribute to the wider process from an educational perspective, in relation to the health perspective. Whether each sector should have exactly the same boundaries is always an issue and is never right.

Basil McCrea is quite right in saying that an area-based planning exercise around Belfast would be of sufficient weight that it would not be done by the Belfast office alone, because it would have such significant knock-on implications that it would probably be centrally led within ESA and have to be signed off at a very senior level. An area-based planning exercise for somewhere such as Fermanagh or Coleraine would be much more self-contained within that area, and could probably be led locally. However, it would still have to be signed off centrally in order to ensure that it met the central principles governing area-based planning, and did not have repercussive implications that were not spotted locally.

That is how that balance would be achieved. It is not a do-it-yourself-locally thing. It is a question of balance. Whether tackling health inequalities or wider issues of deprivation, a joined-up public sector approach is required. That is not easy to do, under even the current structures, and ESA offers the potential to achieve that.

In my previous work in the Department for Social Development, we tried to pull the various factors together. If I may cite one example: we did work at Dunclogh a couple of years ago, and, from the education sector alone, one had to get someone from the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS), someone from youth services and so on, and one would end up with four people in the room to deal with just the education bit. Under this model, however, the person leading the local area office is the front person in education, with, for example, the chief executive of the local trust or council. That is where you begin to get some of the advantages of the new model.

The Chairperson: I want to tease that out: it is vital that there are public representatives on the, for want of a better phrase, local committee. However, how do we then define the key stakeholders, who they are and how they get onto that committee? What we do not want is a local strategic partnership (LSP) Mark II, when everyone came and said that is fine, lovely, great but I am sorry, I cannot make a decision on that because that is outside the remit of my Department, and it becomes pointless.

Mr McGrath: I understand exactly what you mean.

The Chairperson: If that local committee does not have the power to make a decision, one wonders why bother getting everyone around the table in the first place, because paragraph 5 of the document entitled 'Structure of the education and skills authority at regional and local levels' — which is, I suppose, directed at the board — states that:

"The Minister, through her Department, will direct the work of the ESA Board."

If the Minister does not give direction to the board, and if the board does not delegate power to the local committee, we will all be shaking our heads and saying that we disagree, but nothing could be changed.

Mr McGrath: I understand exactly. However, the LSP was, in a sense, a collection of representatives of every stakeholder. These committees will be committees of ESA. There will not necessarily be officials from other public bodies on the committee, because that would be mixing up governance issues.

The Chairperson: Do you understand the rationale behind my question?

Mr McGrath: I understand exactly.

The Chairperson: How will we identify who is a key stakeholder in a local area and is best suited to sit on a local committee? Taking the point that Basil McCrea and John O'Dowd made about the crossover between education and health, there is a big issue there, because we have all visited schools in which there are problems with, say, getting psychologists into schools each side of the current provision that is made by the Department.

Mr McGrath: I think that one has to be very careful. These are committees of ESA, and I am not sure that officials from other public bodies would sit on them, because that would put them in a difficult position. In my view, the key stakeholders begin with the community — the people that we are trying to serve — followed by schools and other bodies. Within youth and early-years services, there is a large voluntary representation. One would want to involve those who are more closely connected. The local committee must reflect the community — the pupils and the parents — rather than institutional stakeholders.

You are right; further work is needed, but you have highlighted some of the issues about which we need to be very careful.

Mr McCausland: You say we need to be very careful; I think that there are questions around who would represent the interests of parents and the community. Those matters must be teased out very carefully.

Mr McGrath: I know, but I just meant that, at times, stakeholders are seen as just schools and some sector representatives. In my view, the principal people that we are trying to serve are communities and children and pupils.

I understand the point that you make about determining who are to be the representatives of those groups, but they should not be populated with the providers, rather than the users, of the services.

Mr McCausland: That is fine.

The Chairperson: Is there any paper or emerging thinking that you could provide to the Committee to help that process? Has ESA done anything in regard to that?

Mr McGrath: To be honest, I do not think there is a lot in stock on that issue. We are grappling with the issues that have been well articulated by Basil McCrea regarding how a balance can be achieved between local sensitivity without diluting the advantages of a regional body, and without confusing decision making or mixing up accountability, which can lead to trouble. The factors that were flagged up about the role of the committee and the delegations will need to be addressed. Today's meeting has been helpful, because issues were raised that had not yet come into our ken. The Department will do some work on those and bring back a think-piece paper on the committees.

Mr Stewart: You have given us two areas on which such work clearly needs to be done and more detail produced. One is more detail on the precise delivery functions at the local level, and the other on what those committees will do, who will be on them, and how they will get there.

The Chairperson: That would be very useful. I have purposely allowed the discussion on the first paper to carry on rather than moving to discuss the second paper. If members agree, and if John McGrath is happy with that, we will deal with the second paper, on the sectoral bodies, next week.

Mr McGrath: I am quite happy with that.

The Chairperson: I am conscious of the time, but I want these sessions to be focused and beneficial, and we have stuck reasonably well to dealing with the paper, for which I commend members. I know that Trevor will do the same.

Mr Lunn: Of course I will. I want to ask about the establishment of the organisational structure as outlined in the paper. If recruitment is to begin in early spring, does that mean that senior people will be recruited before ESA has been legally established?

Mr McGrath: The ideal is that we are not actually appointing people. The recruitment process can be started, but people cannot be appointed until the Bill is, ideally, on the statute book, or is in such a condition that it is clear that it will be on the statute book. There is a balance to be struck. The target date is 1 January 2009, and people will have to be appointed so that there is an organisation to pick up the reins on that date. Therefore, there are difficult judgments to be made with regard to balancing the implications of a political process, the scrutiny of this Committee and the Assembly in general, and taking some preparatory steps.

Advertisements will be placed, but it is only when someone is appointed that a definitive decision has been taken. In the same way, as I have mentioned, for the sake of openness we need to identify the chairperson-designate for ESA at an early stage, because the chairperson should, ideally, have a role in the appointment of senior executives, so one would want him or her to be in place. The chairperson should also be involved in the appointment process of the members of the authority, in line with the practice for commissioners. Therefore, the Department is now looking to start a process to identify a chairperson, but it could be June before that process has culminated. However, some of those processes must be started.

The Chairperson: Who would appoint the chairperson?

Mr Lunn: Presumably the Minister will appoint the chairperson. On the issue of appointing staff, I presume that we are talking about the 50 senior staff to which the paper on the structure of ESA refers. I believe that there was a suggestion earlier that they would come mostly from within the existing education and library boards. However, some will not: staff in the boards may be reluctant even to apply until they see what way the whole thing is going. It is not certain that ESA will be established, although I would like to think it will be.

Mr McGrath: The point is that something needs to be done, because if it is established on 1 January, everyone, including the Committee, will be exercised to ensure that it is ready to pick up the mantle. We spoke earlier of asset stripping, as Michelle McIlveen termed it. There must be a balance. We must start some processes and then make a judgement to finish them. For example, are people appointed formally or on another basis?

Gavin Boyd has been chief executive-designate of ESA for a significant period because he did not envisage this delay. Under a different scenario, if there was no ESA then that status would end. We would want to appoint a chairperson, or a chairperson-designate, subject to the Assembly passing the Bill. We should do everything in the proper sequence for the 1 January date. The Department has put together a fairly detailed and critical path, which is still being refined, listing everything that needs to be done in order to get ESA up and running. It is highly challenging, and slippage on one item will have a knock-on effect. For example, if there is no chairperson to participate in the recruitment of senior posts, that will be delayed, which will delay the appointment of members, and the structure will be up and running.

At the same time, we have serious concerns about the position in boards as a result of the uncertainty to date, which has people voting with their feet and moving to other jobs in other organisations because they did not have the certainty of ESA coming along and applying for positions there. We need, therefore, to send signals to the recruitment market. Senior posts will be advertised in line with the Public Service Commission's guidelines on the review of public administration. There will be due process within the parameters set and the outcome will be the most appropriate that can be achieved within a proper recruitment process. The expectation is that a number of those working in the current system will be successful, but there is no automatic presumption: it will depend on the outcome of the recruitment process. In some areas, it may well be that there is not the same reservoir, because with regard to age profile, a lot of people are part of the present – they will choose not to be part of the future.

Mr Stewart: I will add some detail to that in order to reassure Trevor Lunn further. We do not in any way ignore the democratic process, or anticipate the will of the Assembly. As John McGrath has said, however, the practicalities demand that certain processes have to get under way now.

There are rules that govern this: we can take certain action at only certain points in the process. It would be entirely wrong to move on the appointment of a chairperson or members of ESA before the Bill had proceeded to Second Stage. The Department of Finance and Personnel's rules on financial guidance and accountability state that it is legitimate for us to incur expenditure in the appointment of staff at this stage, and to take steps related to the appointments now that the Second Stage of the Bill has been reached. That does not mean that there is any guarantee that this will go ahead. Therefore, we must take steps to manage the risk involved in doing that. We cannot at present appoint senior staff to ESA, because ESA does not exist. If we appointed staff at present, it would have to be, as John McGrath said, on a designate basis and to an existing organisation — the Department or one of the existing education organisations.

That might provide a part of the answer to Michelle McIlveen's question on asset-stripping. If senior appointments are made in advance of 1 January 2010, then those staff could be based, initially, in one of the existing organisations and combine their new role with a transitional role in that existing organisation.

A further risk-management arrangement would be to make the appointments, initially, on a secondment basis. Then, in extremis, if the Assembly decides to vote down the Bill and not to proceed with the review of public administration, the secondments would be ended and the staff would return to their original organisations. We would still have incurred expenditure, but only nugatory expenditure, and we would have managed the risk to highest possible degree.

Mr Lunn: If we could move on to the authority itself and the appointment of members and chairperson: if the Assembly decides to amend the requirements for members of the authority, particularly that the majority of them should be local councillors — and I believe that only the Alliance Party is absolutely certain that that is a bad thing; however, we are very important, you know —

Mr B McCrea: I think that you got a little support from others on that matter.

Mr Lunn: If we managed to persuade the Assembly that that is not a good thing, is it possible that the Minister and the Department would have already moved ahead and appointed members-designate, so to speak?

Mr McGrath: Given that a chairperson-designate would need to be appointed in order to participate in the process of identifying members, it is unlikely that the process to appoint members would begin until after the summer. Therefore, I imagine that if any detailed changes were made, we would know about them.

Appointments are appointments, as opposed to jobs. If it turned out that the nature of those appointments no longer existed, there would be scope for the Minister to terminate them. Appointments are not the same as jobs, whereby it would be too late to terminate the appointment if someone was already in post. People would be appointed on the basis that they would take up a post at ESA if the structure of the authority was as originally intended. If that structure changed, the matter would be orchestrated in such a way that the appointments would lapse or would have to be made again. It is a process that can be refined very easily. Appointments are easier: they are not jobs; they are appointments made at the Minister's discretion.

Mr Stewart: They can be un-appointed.

Mr McGrath: They can be un-appointed.

Mr Lunn: I might stand down from my position as a councillor and join that.

Ms McIlveen: I want to return to a point that Trevor Lunn made with regard to appointments. Would the situation be similar to that of area-based planning groups, whereby the Minister simply taps someone on the shoulder, or will there be open recruitment?

Mr McGrath: No. The Office of the Commissioner for Public Appointments has very clear guidance. Any of those appointments — for example, the chairperson — will be widely advertised publicly. People will apply and will receive a job description, et cetera. They must submit an application form. Application forms will be scrutinised in the first place with an assessor who has been identified by the Office of the Commissioner for Public Appointments. In that case, for each competition, an assessor is identified and chosen by the commissioner. The Department does not choose the assessor. That individual is there to ensure that the process is conducted properly.

From that process, those candidates who meet basic eligibility requirements will be interviewed by a panel which, again, includes an assessor from the Office of the Commissioner for Public Appointments. That will result in the selection of the names of those deemed fit to do the job — the key principle which the commissioner must ensure — which will go to the Minister, who can choose one of them or instruct us to start the process again. No Minister can appoint anyone who, under the commissioner's rules, is not judged to be up to the job.

Ms McIlveen: Presumably, those positions will be time-bound and reviewed after certain periods? There will not be a situation in which the same board remains in post for life.

Mr McGrath: No. A term would normally be three or four years. The commissioner's rule is that no one should normally do more than two terms. When a board is appointed, the convention is that a stagger is built in whereby there would not be a date when all members would stand down and a completely fresh board appointed. Some people would, for example, be appointed for four years and then another two, and others for four years followed by another four, while some would stand down after four years and there would be rolling membership. That is the convention, and it is carefully orchestrated and scrutinised by the commissioner's office.

Ms McIlveen: The remuneration will, presumably, not be too extensive. Will members be paid a wage? Obviously, the role will carry heavy responsibility.

Mr McGrath: There will be remuneration, which would take account of the role. ESA will be a major public-sector body.

Ms McIlveen: I would be concerned that members would, essentially, be on a wage that competes with that of the chief executive.

Mr McGrath: No, we are very clear on that matter: the entire process to identify chairpersons and board members is designed to test their understanding of what non-executives do on a board, as opposed to executives, and that they understand the balance of boards. Their role is to scrutinise and challenge. They are not there to run the organisation on a day-to-day basis. The critical test in any such competitions is to understand corporate governance and the role of non-executives. The principal role of a chairperson is to manage and hold to account the chief executive and other executives.

We can return to that issue. When the proposals come out, we will be happy to talk, but this is a well-trodden path across the public sector.

Mr McCausland: When do you expect to start the process of appointing a chairperson? Do you already have the job description and personnel specifications?

Mr McGrath: The Department is working on such material to bring to the Minister about the critical path. It would be our advice that we need to start the process soon by publishing advertisements and so on with a view that it could well be May or June at the earliest before we would be in a position to appoint someone. Even the appointment would be on a chairperson-designate basis subject to the organisation's coming into existence. Therefore, we need to start soon because it takes time to get to the position of having a chairperson ready to step into place at the appropriate time.

Mr K Robinson: The Library Authority has already started that process by sending circulars to councils and so forth.

The Chairperson: The travel-to-school issue was raised several times by members. What work has the Department done on that, and what is its current thinking on that? Perhaps you could prepare a paper for the Committee on the issue.

Mr McGrath: Travel-to-school is very much in the context of area-based planning, so would that be the framework in which to put it?

The Chairperson: Yes, exactly. It is not included in the context of this subject, but it has emerged as an issue, and I would like some more detail on it.

Mr McGrath: That is an issue at which the Department is looking generally. I know that the Committee is interested in it, so we would be happy to bring something back to the Committee in the context of area-based planning.

The Chairperson: Thank you, John, Chris and Joe. Next week, we will look at the issue of sectoral bodies.

Mr Stewart: We will also endeavour to supply the Committee next week with the input on employment matters for which is asked, if you wish to address that at the same or at a subsequent session. In any case, we will get it to you in time for next week's Committee meeting.

The Chairperson: Thank you.

We will move on. The Committee agreed at its meeting on 10 December 2008 that there would an extension motion on the Bill, which we would consider today. We have until next week at the latest to make a decision on that. We have agreed that there would be a motion to extend the time that we can spend on the consideration as a Committee. You can see the reasons why the Committee needs to take as much time as it possibly can, not to delay the process unduly, but to make sure that the Committee has satisfied itself that the issues of concern are being properly and adequately addressed.

Another reason, which we also discussed at the meeting on 10 December, is that we do not know at this stage what is in the second Bill. If the Department makes sure that that information is brought forward in a due and timely fashion, as it has said that it will be, then I think that that gives us all confidence as we work through this process. It is not about trying to have a delay tactic for the sake of delay; it is to ensure that the integrity of this Committee is maintained and kept intact, and that we have given every possible consideration to all the issues of concern.

Therefore, I ask all members, particularly, I suppose, in relation to the parties, to make sure that we will make a decision by next week. We must decide on the date, and whether it will be before the summer recess or after the summer recess. That decision must be made, because the deadline for moving the motion in the House is 13 February.

The Committee Clerk: The Assembly must meet in plenary session and debate the motion before 13 February. Therefore, it is imperative for the Committee to put forward its motion by next week.

The Chairperson (Dr W McCrea): I welcome Ms Colette Connor, Ms Colette McMaster and Mr Patrick Millen. Thank you very much for coming. I am sure that more officials will come to the table, as necessary, as we move through this Bill.

The Committee sought legal advice in respect of the power to slaughter in clause 1. The advice is contained in the table of correspondence. It indicates that there may be scope to include an amendment that would require the Department to implement an eradication programme when a defined trigger level is reached in an area. That programme would only be conducted in that specific area, and it would include the removal of animals that are susceptible to bovine tuberculosis (TB).

It is unlikely that the Department will agree to such an amendment. However, there is nothing to stop the Committee from proposing it, seeking the agreement of the Assembly and making the Department listen to sense. At this stage, it may be more appropriate to recommend that the Committee conducts an inquiry into the eradication of bovine TB, with an objective in its terms of reference being the amendment of article 16 of the Diseases of Animals (Northern Ireland) Order 1981 to implement that scheme. That would require the Committee to propose its own legislation. That may be the route that we must take with regard to that matter. If the Committee desires such an inquiry, it can take that approach. What is the mind of the Committee?

Mr Elliott: Would that be an inquiry solely into the eradication of TB?

The Chairperson: Yes. According to the terms of reference that the legal adviser supplied to the Committee, a defined trigger level would need to be reached.

The Committee Clerk: According to the advice that has been provided by Legal Services, an eradication scheme is within the scope of the current Bill. However, the degree of detail available at this stage is insufficient to do that, and the inquiry would need to build the detail of the policy behind the proposed eradication scheme.

The intention would be that, once a trigger level was reached, the policy would change. The Diseases of Animals (Northern Ireland) Order 1981 says that that the "Department may" implement an eradication programme with respect to bovine tuberculosis. Subject to the findings of the proposed inquiry, a Committee Bill could be promulgated that would change that wording to the "Department shall." Therefore, the Department would be compelled to implement an eradication programme within a defined trigger area, which would include the removal of wildlife and cattle at risk from bovine tuberculosis.

Mr Elliott: That could be a lengthy process. The Committee would need to conduct an inquiry, make recommendations, bring those recommendations to the Floor of the Assembly and then start the process of amending the Bill.

The Chairperson: Seemingly, it would a speedier process than the Department —

Mr Elliott: I am not saying that it would not be speedier. Would the inquiry be a totally separate process to the Diseases of Animal Bill that we are dealing with at the moment? I thought that there was a degree of linkage.

The Committee Clerk: It is linked, and the advice was given in relation to the Bill that has been presented to the Committee; however the detail is required.

Essentially, the Committee would need to draw up the policy and identify issues such as the trigger levels and when those levels would be introduced. An inquiry would allow the Committee the scope to do that and to take advice, for example, from colleagues in the National Assembly for Wales who have recently conducted a similar process and may be in the course of defining their own eradication policy. The Committee could also consult with the Convenor of the Rural Affairs and Environment Committee in the Scottish Parliament to find out whether it has had any developments in this area. An inquiry would give the Committee more time for consideration of the issue, and would allow for consultation with stakeholders.

Mr W Clarke: Mr Elliott has already touched on a question that I wanted to ask. However, where would the resources for an eradication scheme come from?

The Committee Clerk: If the proposed Committee Bill were to become statute, the obligation would fall on the Department to provide the resources.

Mr W Clarke: Yes, but the Department does not have that sort of money; so that funding must come from the Executive.

The Committee Clerk: The onus would be on the Department to access funding. On several previous occasions, the Committee has raised the issue of the annual spend of £26 million on the control of TB. That £26 million a year would become available to the Executive in future if an eradication process were to be successfully implemented.

The Chairperson: Therefore, rather than paying out for problems caused by a disease, that money would be spent on the eradication of a disease. That seems to be a wiser option.

Mr Elliott: It would also mean a long-term saving.

The Chairperson: It would be provide both short- and long-term savings.

The Committee Clerk: Furthermore, as part of the inquiry, a business case could be drawn up, or the Department could be asked to estimate the costs. That evidence would then come before the Committee.

The Chairperson: Therefore, it is up to the Committee. Does the Committee accept that it will go down that route, rather than press ahead?

Mr Elliott: Does that mean that we will not propose any amendment to clause 1?

The Chairperson: Considering the possibilities under the clause, we have been advised that, legally, it would be better to go down the inquiry route, because we must have the evidence to prove our case.

Are members agreed?

The Chairperson: We will now move on to clause 4, which deals with powers of entry. The Committee called for a number of recommendations, and it sought legal advice in respect of the inclusion of standard operating procedures (SOPs) in the legislation. The director of Legal Services said that he would not recommend that they should be included but that there is scope for referral to the code of practice in the Bill. Therefore, members may wish to seek the agreement from the Department to insert an amendment indicating that they may be complicit with the code of practice, for example, amend clause 4(1)(a)(i) to read: “substitute “premises” in accordance with the Code of Practice for the Search of Premises under Warrant.” Our legal advisers have said that that can be done.

Ms Colette Connor (Department of Agriculture and Rural Development): We are very keen to look at that matter, and we will, in conjunction with the Minister, suggest an amendment to the Bill, which will reflect the amendment that you have just outlined, to say that the code of practice will apply to the search of dwelling houses under warrant.

The Chairperson: The Department has agreed that the search liaison officer will be totally independent, the occupier will be given the opportunity to call on third-party oversight and the occupier will be furnished with a copy of the SOPs — to be referred to as a code of practice, following the amendment — at the time of search.

Mr Savage: My only concern is about the proper treatment of farmers. At the previous meeting, I listened very carefully to the comments that were made about the powers of entry, but I do not want people to abuse their powers.

The Chairperson: I would like clarification that the Department has agreed that the search liaison officer will be totally independent, that the occupier will be given the opportunity to call on a third-party oversight, and that the occupier will be furnished with a copy of the SOPs, which will be referred to as a code of practice following the amendment, at the time of search.

Ms Connor: That is correct.

The Committee Clerk: The code of practice will be agreed between departmental stakeholders, and it will come to the Committee as a policy document. Therefore, the Committee will also have scrutiny of it.

Mr Savage: On a previous occasion when the issue was mentioned, I said that a lot of farms now have CCTV cameras. If a farmer switches on one of those cameras, the last thing that he wants to see is someone in his yard, knocking around near his cows. They would be lucky to come out alive. Someone would probably end up in a scraper.

The Chairperson: Let us hope that that will not happen.

Mr Savage: That is a very serious point.

The Chairperson: Yes. However, we need to be careful about this point, Mr Savage, because a warrant has to be served. The search liaison officers have a right to come on to premises and notify the occupant that they are serving a warrant.

Mr Savage: As long as the farmers are notified, that is fine. However, if they are not notified, the officers are asking for trouble.

Mr Elliott: Are we not getting the standard operating procedure adopted into the legislation? Is there no way of bringing to book those officers from the Department who fundamentally make mistakes in their assessments?

The Committee Clerk: Our legal advice, which echoes that from the Department and its solicitors, is that the detailed nature of standard operating procedures, and the fact that they must act as operational guidelines, makes the process of drafting them into the Bill far too messy. Therefore, a code of practice must be developed and agreed by the Committee, and any future amendments to that code would have to be applied through a statutory rule, which would also come before the Committee.

Our advice concerning some form of recourse against departmental officials is that that is outside the scope of the Bill. The principle was not agreed at Second Stage, and, as members will be aware, once principles are agreed at Second Stage, the Committee can neither change them nor add alternatives, and that is why we can do nothing about that matter now.

The Chairperson: When might we be able to do something about it?

The Committee Clerk: Although there might be scope to incorporate some type of punitive action into the code of practice, it may be necessary for farmers or occupiers to seek recourse through the civil courts.

Mr Elliott: I feel that that matter is well within the principles of the Bill, so that excuse is unacceptable, and I am disappointed by that suggestion. Even before we began discussing the details of the Bill, we flagged up the fact that such recourse should fall within the Bill's scope, and, in my opinion, it does.

The Chairperson: Nevertheless, the legal advice is —

The Committee Clerk: The legal advice is that action against departmental officials does not fall within the Bill's principles. The Bill's Second Stage — not its Committee Stage — was the time to discuss that.

Mr T Clarke: Was a nuclear-button option not discussed all along?

The Committee Clerk: Such an option should have been discussed during the Bill's Second Stage in the House. Although the Committee discusses the matter during the Committee Stage, once a Bill has passed through its Second Stage, such a fundamental principle cannot be amended.

Mr Elliott: If that is the case, perhaps, in the future, we should not agree any part of a Bill until we are familiar with every detail. The legal advice may be that action against departmental officials does not fall within the principle of the Bill, but I totally disagree. We all know that the people who give legal advice can interpret information, and direct their advice, in any way that they wish. Is that advice part of the legal opinion that we received today?

The Committee Clerk: No, I received advice verbally that such recourse falls outside the principles of the Bill. As I said, we can explore through Legal Services whether something might be included in the code of practice, which would obviously be referred to in the primary Bill.

Mr T Clarke: Could clause 4, on the powers of entry, not be removed altogether?

The Committee Clerk: Members could propose that, but —

Ms Connor: Clause 4 is critical to the Bill. It not only deals with powers of entry, but it affords us our powers of inspection and our new powers to take DNA samples; it enables us to take account of new technology. It is an integral part of the Bill, and if we were to lose clause 4, there would be no point in proceeding with the Bill. The other clauses are not nearly as important to the Department — or to the industry — as clause 4.

Mr T Clarke: If we were to decide to remove clause 4, would that mean that we could go back to the start?

Ms Connor: Perhaps I can reassure the Committee about the code of practice. The Minister said that she is anxious that her officials will be totally accountable in their powers of search and that their role should be open and transparent. She will pay particular attention to those points when her officials are drafting the code of practice.

She wants to protect the industry and, at the same time, she wants to safeguard the role of her inspectors. As I said during an earlier Committee hearing, the Committee will have the opportunity to scrutinise the code of practice fully, and then we can look at the safeguards.

The Chairperson: Will the code of practice be included in the legislation?

Ms Connor: Yes, it will be in the legislation. It is too important to remove from the Bill, which will fall without it.

Mr T Clarke: Were the Bill to fall and we had to restart this process, how quickly could we get back to this stage? We have heard statements from the Minister before, but they do not mean much.

The Chairperson: I see your point, but the code of practice must come through this Committee.

Ms Connor: Creating a new Diseases of Animals Bill would involve us bidding again for inclusion in the Northern Ireland legislative programme, and it could take years to have the resources in place because of the pressures on the programme. We would then need to start from scratch by consulting the industry and other stakeholders. It could literally take years, and would not be an easy process.

The other problem is that if, tomorrow morning, there were an outbreak of an epizootic disease — foot-and-mouth disease, for example — the powers under clauses 2 and 3 will not be in place to allow us to act on that. Even if the European Commission introduce a directive, we do not have the powers to apply that directive at the moment. Our powers are very limited with regard to disease control. The primary purpose of the Bill it is to prevent disease entering Northern Ireland.

The Chairperson: We certainly need to be very careful about that.

Mr T Clarke: The problem is that there is no willingness from the Department to try to find a way around this. Its message is that it is our way or no way — that is how it has always been with that Department. The Department is basically saying that if we do not take this on, everything is at risk. As Tom Elliott rightly said, all these matters have been discussed at an earlier stage, and any time that we have made a suggestion, we have been told that we cannot do that at the stage we were at, and that is done at a later stage. Now we are at the later stage, and are being told that we cannot do things because we did not suggest them at an earlier stage. You can never win with the Department.

Ms Connor: Mr Clarke, that is not strictly true — we are saying that we are going to work with the Committee and the industry on a code of practice to safeguard individuals whose dwellings are being searched under warrant. That code of practice will not go anywhere without the full agreement of the Committee. It will be enshrined in primary legislation. Even if a new Bill were introduced, the same clause would still have to be amended.

Mr W Clarke: The safety net is the code of practice — we can scrutinise that. There is willingness on the part of the Minister. Mistakes have been made in the past — that has been widely recognised by a number of people, including departmental officials and the Minister. We cannot drop this clause — there is a cost of time and resources. Not allowing the Bill to roll out would be very wrong and very dangerous. The Bill is intended to safeguard the industry and we need to get it passed as quickly as possible.

The Chairperson: It would be wrong, however, to give the impression that the Bill does not involve any change, because it will result in there being a totally independent search liaison officer and the right to call on third-party oversight.

Mr T Clarke: That right has a caveat, however. If you read on down, the paper states that it may not be possible to have a third party present, in very limited cases. To play devil's advocate again, surely the Department is creating the possibility to do what it likes.

The Chairperson: There is going to be a code of practice — if that code is tight, the Department will not be able to do that.

Mr T Clarke: Why do we need that? Why would there be cases when it is not possible to have a third party present? It is either possible or it is not.

The Committee Clerk: The Department is referring to instances when there may be endangerment to the official.

Mr T Clarke: Who deems whether that is the case? The Department can say that it did not allow a third party because it felt that that official would be danger, but who adjudicates over that? Is it the Department?

The Committee Clerk: The independent search liaison officer will adjudicate over that.

Mr Savage: Would the independent official be of a different nationality? Could he come from a different country?

Mr T Clarke: No, he is from the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD).

Ms Connor: I do not think that he will be from another country. We need someone whom we can call on at short notice for assistance.

Mr Savage: I know that the Department employs veterinarians from Spain and other jurisdictions.

Mr Elliott: In our previous meeting, we talked about someone from the Livestock and Meat Commission (LMC).

The Chairperson: Yes.

Ms Connor: A totally independent person.

Mr Savage: But they are all under the jurisdiction —

The Chairperson: The Department stated that it was going to consult the public appointments unit of the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister (OFMDFM), and that there was a procedure for appointing a panel.

Mr Mike Steel (Department of Agriculture and Rural Development): I hope that it would be helpful to provide an example. During the foot-and-mouth disease outbreak in 2001, one of the hauliers who brought in infected sheep from Great Britain would not state where he got the sheep or where they had been distributed to. Eventually, he was arrested and his house was searched for documentary evidence that confirmed that the sheep had been distributed all over the island. However, that happened two or three days later, and the police probably acted with questionable legality on a warrant — or rather, the question of legality was not recorded. An urgent response was required, but two or three days later, those sheep had mixed with other sheep or had been transported to other destinations. Immediate action is required in circumstances that might arise, but which might not be apparent here and now.

The Chairperson: We must be careful not to throw the baby out with the bath water. We must protect our industry.

Mr T Clarke: The paragraph that includes the phrase:

“where it may not be possible”

should be taken out. I cannot see how, in such a case, and if a warrant is served, that a third party cannot be allowed to be present.

Mr Irwin: Perhaps the Department could explain that a little further? Could you explain the reasons why a third party could not be involved and how that might undermine an investigation?

Mr Steel: There is no question about that where there is a case of physical threat. That sort of thing happens. On the other hand, there was a recent case in which a man was bringing old cattle for culling here, and taking fat cattle down to the Republic. He was switching tags left, right and centre, and he had cattle dispersed in a number of holdings. The minute we spoke to anyone, he would get his pals or his workers to shift the cattle that we were coming to see next. Those sorts of circumstances are not straightforward.

The Chairperson: We must ensure that we are not covering a rogue's back.

Mr T Clarke: Why include any reference to third parties at all?

The Chairperson: In the normal scheme of things, we would want a third party to be present. The unions want such a provision. However, in exceptional circumstances, in which a person might be doing something illegal and which might threaten our industry, we must be careful that we are not covering for them. I will certainly not cover for them.

Mr T Clarke: I do not accept the argument that is being made. If cattle are being held at different locations, are you saying that the Department will only visit one yard? Its inspectors will visit all those yards at the same time. No one will change tags when a departmental inspector is present.

The Chairperson: You do not know the real world, Trevor.

Mr T Clarke: I know that the Department's inspectors will be out in excessive force. If they know that cattle are being stored in various locations, they will visit those locations.

The Chairperson: I am sad to say that an awful lot of boys have slipped through the Department's net. I would demand that action be taken against them.

Mr Irwin: I agree 100%.

The Chairperson: That is the real world. Those rogues are a threat to our industry, and I will not protect them.

Mr T Clarke: I am not disputing that, Chairperson. I am arguing against giving excessive powers to the Department.

The Chairperson: Where are those excessive powers?

Mr T Clarke: The Department can decide whether or not a third party can be present during a farm visit.

The Chairperson: Is that not the role of the independent liaison officer?

Mr Steel: The officer may not be on the premises. The search might take place at a different time. From my understanding, the independent liaison officer will have been consulted and notified about the search, and given agreement for the search to take place. The herdkeeper will have been notified of the officer's name and contact details, so that the officer can be contacted. In those circumstances, it would be unlikely for him or her to be in the farmyard.

The decision to prevent a third party nominated by the herd keeper to be present at the time would rest with the leader of the investigation at that time, in relation to the circumstances. Normally, there would not be a problem with that. However, there are circumstances, such as the one that I described, whereby something must be done to protect the evidence.

Mr Elliott: No one wants to protect the rogues; we want to be even firmer with them. However, there is no recompense for the innocent farmers who are caught up in something and accused in the wrong. I hear about the code of conduct and taking a judicial review. No ordinary innocent farmer will take a judicial review; people need to be aware of that — it is only a smokescreen. We want something that will protect the innocent farmer and get to grips with the rogue. In fairness, the Bill is trying to get to grips with the rogue. However, I have concerns about the other side of that: protecting the innocent farmer.

Mr Irwin: The problem is that the rogue will pose as an innocent farmer. In all probability, if there is something in the system to help the innocent farmer, the rogue will use it to his advantage.

The Chairperson: Previously, everything was decided by the Department. I thought that the code of practice was not decided by the Department any more; it was decided by the Department, the stakeholders and the Committee. Is that correct? The code of practice will be referred to in the legislation.

Ms Connor: Yes.

The Chairperson: And it comes through the Committee. I would have thought so. I agree with the Deputy Chairperson; there are lessons to be learned. We must be careful what we let through at the early stage, because when the Bill is introduced, that will not have been debated on the Floor of the Assembly. However, we must take things as they are now, and that is the Committee's legal advice — not the Department's.

Mr Savage: Why can that not be put down in black and white, and then there will be no excuse?

The Chairperson: It will be in black and white in the code of practice.

Mr Savage: It is not there now.

Ms Connor: It will be in plain English, and it will be published —

Mr Savage: Chairman, I am not going to agree to something that I do not have in front of me.

Ms Connor: It will be freely available and copies will be placed on the DARD website.

The Committee Clerk: To reply to Mr Savage, the Committee is recommending that the Department, the stakeholders, and the Committee, will develop the code of practice with some urgency. When it is enshrined as part of the primary legislation, any subsequent amendments to the code of practice must come through the Committee by means of a statutory rule. Again, the Committee will have a scrutiny role. That is different to the system currently in operation. Chapter 8 of the standard operating procedures has been defined by the Department alone. However, the Committee and the industry now get a say in what goes into the code of practice and how the Department conducts those searches.

As part of the process, members will be entitled to introduce additional safeguards to the code of practice. However, the code of practice has been recommended to us; we cannot have it at the moment, because we are recommending that it be developed. As Trevor Clarke intimated, we need to get it as quickly as possible.

The Chairperson: Is the Committee really saying that it is not proceeding with the Bill and, therefore, not providing any protection against diseases?

Mr T Clarke: No. We want something with the proper powers. The Department can do it; if there is a will, it can be done.

The Chairperson: The legal advice is that it cannot —

Mr T Clarke: Has the code of practice been referred to?

The Chairperson: Yes, it can be done under the code of practice.

The Committee Clerk: With regard to areas that may be searched under warrant, the 1981 Order includes:

“land, building, shed, pen or place”.

It has been proposed to substitute that with “premises”. The Committee is suggesting that it be amended to:

That code of practice will be developed, and it will be enshrined in the primary legislation. The Department has agreed to accept that Committee amendment.

The Department has agreed that the code of practice will be developed by the Department, the industry and, through its scrutiny role, the Committee.

The Chairperson: How quickly can that be done? It is important that the code of practice be finalised urgently.

Ms Connor: We will have to come back to you on that. It will be done as quickly as possible, but we will need to discuss it, because other people will be responsible for the drafting of the code of practice. We will present something soon at a Committee meeting, as per the forward work programme.

The Chairperson: We will come back to this issue, and you will have to return to us with a response.

Mr Steel: We will be looking at a code of practice that is along the lines of the standard operating procedures that you have seen already. That is what I envisage.

Ms Connor: More work needs to be done to reassure members — particularly Mr Clarke, Mr Elliott and Mr Savage. We will have to seek comments from the industry as well.

The Chairperson: It is critical that the legislation be progressed. You need to act urgently, but you must consider the concerns that have been expressed by Committee members. They want a robust code of practice that will defend and protect the innocent.

Ms Connor: I assure you that the Minister used those very words yesterday, so the Committee and the Minister are at one on this, and I think that we can work together.

The Chairperson: In the meantime, we will take the views of the union on the matter. We will come back to this issue.

The Committee Clerk: The Department will draw up the amendment, and we will come back to it next Tuesday for formal agreement.

The Chairperson: We are not asking for formal agreement now.

The Committee Clerk: Members are aware of the recommendations that have been made. The Department has accepted the amendment in relation to the code of practice, and members' concerns must be considered.

The Chairperson: The Department is aware of the serious need for a robust code of practice.

Clause 6 is entitled "Fixed penalties for certain offences". In its response to the Committee, the Department stated:

"there is no precedent for this and the requirement for two signatories does not provide additional control; DARD has stated that the intention of fixed penalty notice is that they are applied to designated clear-cut offences which occur".

Members also previously asked that particular offences be detailed in the Bill. Members may wish to call for the "designated clear-cut offences" to be included in the Bill or for the Department to be precise in naming the circumstances in which notices will be issued. That is the crux of what we said.

The Committee Clerk: Yes, Chairperson. Originally, Members asked that the notices against which fixed penalties would be applied be detailed in the legislation.

The Chairperson: The Department reneged on the designation of the offences. It said that that would be done for clear-cut offences, yet it has not told us what those clear-cut offences are. We ask that they be detailed and circumstances named. As the Department said, the fixed-penalty scheme is intended to apply:

"to designated clear-cut offences which occur during epizootic outbreaks or at ports and airports."

The Committee Clerk: The Committee asks that the Department either inserts the list of designated clear-cut offences, or that that provision be restricted to the definition given: namely that the fixed-penalty notices be issued only during epizootic outbreaks or at ports and airports.

The Chairperson: We leave that with the Department. The Committee hopes to remove confusion and ambiguity, and asks for clarity. If the Department wants to insert something and states the purpose of it, that should be done.

Mr Savage: So long as that is inserted, I am content.

The Chairperson: So you will take that back to the Department? That is the Committee's wish.

Ms Connor: Yes, we will take it back.

The Chairperson: The Department's response continues:

"The Department has concluded that, in the absence of legislative precedent, they cannot agree to this right of appeal."

Members may wish to refer the Department to the statement provided at the head of DARD's central enforcement at the meeting. I hope my quoting this does not get individuals into trouble:

"I absolutely accept the point that there is potential for abuse of the system..."

"My personal view, for what it is worth, is that there is a flaw in the fixed-penalty system in any case."

I will not quote any further. In the absence of an alternative from DARD, and given the narrow application of correctly applied notices claimed by DARD, the Committee may suggest an amendment to clause 6 to allow for a right of appeal. The Department may not agree to it; however, if that is the mind of the Committee, it can suggest such an amendment. Therefore, formal consultation will be undertaken with stakeholders about the particular offence and the draft subordinate legislation will be forwarded through the Committee. That is my suggestion as to how the Committee should proceed. What do members think?

Mr W Clarke: I was not at the last meeting. Could you clarify which appeal we are discussing?

The Committee Clerk: At the last meeting, and many of the others, Members were concerned that there may be circumstances in which a fixed-penalty notice is issued to farmers who have not committed an offence but, rather than take the option of going to court and incurring the cost and public humiliation associated with that, opt to pay the fine.

The Chairperson: That happens in many other cases.

The Committee Clerk: The head of the enforcement team acknowledged that the potential for that existed. The Committee has suggested to the Department that, in the circumstances where a fixed penalty notice is issued, the likelihood of a guilty person going to court and contesting the notice is minimal. In that case, they would pay up.

However, the Committee has expressed the view that protection must be offered to those people who are innocent. It was felt that there would be only a small number of appeals, and that those appeals should be lodged and considered with a period of 21 days. The Department has since stated that there is no precedent in any other legislation for an appeal against a fixed-penalty notice. The Committee, particularly last week, was of the view that the fact that no legal precedent exists does not mean that it cannot be established. The Committee was keen to see an appeals process put in place to protect those farmers that were innocent of an offence.

Mr W Clarke: I understand where you are coming from; however, that would be very difficult to implement. Obviously, if someone is innocent, they will not take the fixed-penalty notice — they will go to court to prove their innocence.

The Chairperson: That is not always the case. The cost of going to court has to be considered, and, unfortunately, no one can ever know how the court will rule. As people often say, at times, the law is an ass. Even if the claimant is innocent, one can never be sure what the court will decide; we see that in everyday life — many an innocent man has been found guilty.

However, there is potential. A flaw has been acknowledged, not only by us, but by departmental officials. Although it was honourable that the Department acknowledged that, how to fix that flaw falls to us. There must be an opportunity for appeal; it cannot be a choice between accepting a fixed-penalty notice or going to court.

Mr W Clarke: In that case, everyone would appeal the fixed penalty.

The Committee Clerk: If the Department accepts a narrower definition — that the fixed-penalty notices will be issued only during epizootic outbreaks or at airports and ports — that will further restrict the number of fixed-penalty notices, and minimise the number of potential appeals. That will not be a bureaucratic system, and it will not be a costly system for the Department.

A good example was given earlier. If, at a market, a Department official recorded on a camcorder animals being brought in illegally, that is evidence. However, if the camcorder was broken and failed to record, and a fixed penalty was issued anyway, and, subsequently, it was found that the farmer was innocent, the chances are that that farmer would accept the penalty rather than go to court and face the public humiliation and cost. If, however, the Department accepts the amendment in relation to the restricted definition of when fixed-penalty notices will be issued, there will be very few appeals.

Mr W Clarke: In general, an appeal is a request to see the evidence against you, before accepting a fixed penalty.

The Committee Clerk: An appeal is asking for consideration that you have not caused an offence.

Mr W Clarke: Basically, it is a request to see the evidence against you.

The Committee Clerk: It is asking for additional consideration that you have not caused an offence, and that a fixed-penalty notice has been issued in error.

Mr W Clarke: The fixed-penalty provision is designed to cut down on bureaucracy; we have to guard against replicating the current situation or even making it worse. I think that it is fair enough for a farmer to ask to see the evidence against him before deciding whether or not to accept a fixed penalty.

Mr Irwin: There are a number of people — in all walks of life, not just agriculture — who, despite being innocent, would pay the fine rather than go to court, and that is a problem.

The Chairperson: That happens because the cost of going to court is exorbitant and people cannot afford it. I know of quite a public case in which a fixed penalty was issued, and, despite being genuinely innocent, the person accepted it. The person in question was a public figure and, as such, could not take the chance of going to court.

Mr Savage: Therefore, can I assume that when a fixed-penalty notice is issued, and a farmer comes home and has time to talk it over with other people, he has 21 days in which to lodge an appeal? Is that correct?

The Committee Clerk: No. There is no right of appeal. You either accept the fixed-penalty notice, or you choose to go to court. At present, you would go directly to court. The fixed penalty is being brought in by the Department —

Mr Steel: It is being brought in as an alternative to prosecution.

The Committee Clerk: It is being brought in, through this Bill, as an alternative to prosecution. The Committee suggests that fixed-penalty notices should be issued in a restricted manner — for example, for epizootic outbreaks — but that a farmer must have a right to appeal in order to offer a safeguard or protection to innocent farmers who have been issued fixed-penalty notices in error.

Mr Savage: I am not being awkward, Chairman, and I do not want to go against the Department. However, it is a grey area.

The Chairperson: The Department has concluded that there is no precedent. It knows that the Committee has major concerns about fixed-penalty notices. In fact, the Department's official review accepted that there is a problem. We do not believe that the proposed legislation meets farmers' needs.

Ms Connor: I understand that it does not meet their needs as regards a right of appeal. The Department has serious concerns about introducing a right of appeal. Again, the particulars of fixed penalties and how they are handed out will be detailed in subordinate legislation, which will be brought before the Committee. As we said in the letter, our intention is to amend that clause in order to ensure that it is subject to affirmative resolution in the Assembly. Therefore, the entire Assembly will scrutinise the legislation. That should safeguard against fixed penalties being handed out — as someone said earlier — like confetti.

The Chairperson: The Committee will most likely wish to table an amendment to that clause, which will be debated in the Assembly.

Ms Connor: We will certainly take that point back to the Minister, because she may want to —

The Chairperson: I suggest that we should try to find some middle ground on the matter.

Ms Connor: I will refer that to the Minister.

Mr T Clarke: I want to explore the matter further. I can understand to an extent why the Department says that two people cannot countersign fixed-penalty notices, because there will not always be two people available to do that. I am going to throw a question out there, because that is just my nature. We talk about rogue farmers: however, rogue departmental officials could issue fixed-penalty notices. There is nothing to protect farmers against the actions of such officials. However, if a rogue official issues a fixed-penalty notice, and there is an appeal mechanism, the farmer is protected.

The Chairperson: Officials from the Department have already agreed that there is potential for abuse. We must ensure that abuse is prevented. Ms Connor has said that she will refer that matter to the Minister.

Ms Connor: I will, certainly.

The Chairperson: The Department sought clarification on biosecurity guidance. The Department's reading of the Hansard report is that, although the Committee was not content linking biosecurity guidance to compensation and criminal proceedings, members agreed that it would be subject to scrutiny. The Committee Clerk's view is that, in particular, the link to reducing or removing compensation should be removed. The deterrent fact then becomes admissible in a court of law on a separate and more serious offence. Is that correct?

The Committee Clerk: Yes.

The Chairperson: I do not believe that the Committee will agree with the Department on that matter. The Committee expressed strong views on the matter during a previous meeting. I honestly believe that the Committee will table an amendment.

Ms Connor: Before you propose an amendment, Chairman, perhaps, I could call upon Colette McMaster and Ian McKee to explain our position. Ian is head of the epizootic disease control unit. It may, for members' benefit, put into context the importance of biosecurity, which, I am sure, you all appreciate. It might inform the decision-making process before the clause is changed radically.

The Chairperson: We are happy to listen to information. We hope that the Department is also happy to listen to our views.

Ms Colette McMaster (Department of Agriculture and Rural Development): The last time the Committee discussed the issue of biosecurity it expressed concerns, and the Department recognises those concerns. We wish to inform the Committee of the rationale for including the proposed links to penalties, and the implications of removing those penalties. We also want to give the Committee further concrete examples of instances where breaches of biosecurity have had serious consequences.

At the last meeting, we were asked why two penalties were required, because admissibility of the evidence in court proceedings should be a sufficient penalty. We want to draw it to the Committee's attention that admissibility of evidence in court proceedings would apply only in circumstances where a herd-keeper has also committed a statutory breach of the legislation. If a herdkeeper has seriously breached biosecurity guidance, and that has had serious consequences, he or she would not be brought before the courts unless there was an accompanying statutory offence. Therefore, there is a gap with regard to the penalty and deterrent for such breaches. That is why we have proposed the link to compensation. That link will act as a deterrent for people who might consider acting in a negligent manner, or who do not take biosecurity seriously, because there will be a risk that their compensation will be withheld if their actions, or failure to act, lead to serious disease outbreaks. I wanted to make that clear to the Committee.

The briefing papers contain examples of brucellosis outbreaks in Northern Ireland over the past few years. There are also a couple of examples of avian influenza outbreaks in GB — we have been fortunate enough not to have a serious epizootic disease outbreaks here, so we do not have such examples of how breaches of biosecurity guidance can lead to a serious spread of disease.

Mr Ian McKee (Department of Agriculture and Rural Development): Biosecurity guidance is essential, and, although it is not our primary concern at this stage, it appears that Brussels intends to strengthen that guidance.

The admissibility in court of breaches of biosecurity guidance is valuable. In this country and across the water, there have been several cases in which no offence was committed and compensation was payable because there was a defensible reason. However, in those cases the fabric of a plant was such there could have been of ingress from wild birds, which could have spread avian influenza, and other routes of disease transmission had been established. Although an actual offence might not have been committed, the amount of money that is called for from the public purse is such that it is incumbent on operators, particularly those who are reputable and are established national names, to ensure that the fabric of their plant and housing is such that they are beyond reproach.

It is unfortunate that, in certain circumstances, the taxpayer may have to pay substantial sums of money to compensate for people who have not shown a duty of care. I appreciate that those are rare and exceptional circumstances, and I can see that we have to be reasonable. The Committee's concern is that the Department might be tempted to establish some sort of tick-box failure rate for cost-saving purposes, but that is not the intention. The question is how to legislate to ensure clarity in those matters.

The Chairperson: Surely it is incumbent on the Department to lay all the facts out before the court, and for the court to make a decision as regards a penalty. Surely guidance should be guidance. I am very concerned that, quite often when it suits Departments — for example, the Planning Service — guidance is regarded almost as statutory law; yet when it suits an officer, we are told that guidance is merely guidance. It seems that beauty is in the eye of the beholder. Personally, I believe that guidance should be guidance, and if it is not guidance, it should be statutory.

The Bill will give the Department the power to reduce compensation, and, unfortunately, if the Department gets itself into a financial situation, it may do so. I feel that the legislation is a step too far. It has been admitted in the past that biosecurity guidance and everything must be taken in the round. There may be certain circumstances in which guidance can not be followed, and the Department has accepted that it is not possible to do certain things. Occasionally, the Department has not stepped in, because guidance is only guidance.

I would rather that a case be taken to court and a decision be made there, rather than give the Department the right to step in. For example, people felt aggrieved because the Department had an internal process for making decisions on issues, such as duplicate fields, and when those decisions were put to a supposedly independent body, the body ruled in favour of the individuals, but the Minister was able to overturn that ruling. That does not give me confidence that the Department would not use its power to suit particular circumstances. I feel that the legislation gives too much power to the Department by linking the guidance to compensation and criminal proceedings.

Ms Sandra Dunbar (Department of Agriculture and Rural Development): My concern is that guidance already exists, but it is sometimes not adhered to. There is no deterrent. That is the argument from the veterinary point of view — the guidance is there; unfortunately a number of farmers ignore it.

The Chairperson: Is it not a deterrent that that guidance is admissible in court?

Ms Dunbar: That is what we are trying to achieve.

Mr McKee: That is part of it; the Department wishes to have that provision, and I take it that the Committee is agreeable to that.

The Chairperson: I have no problem with guidance being admissible in court, as it sets out the legal responsibility of the person. The problem is the link between the guidance to the compensation.

Mr McKee: I think that we are all in agreement that they should be linked where an offence has been committed. The problem is that there may be a rare occasion on which an offence has not been committed, but there has been gross negligence.

The Chairperson: If no offence has been committed, it will be a matter of an official from the Department making a judgement call. I am happy for the courts to make such a link, but departmental officials should not have that power.

Ms McMaster: We have outlined for the Committee the process that we would use to reach decisions.

The Chairperson: That still involves the Department having the power. To be frank, I do not want that power to be in the Department's hands. It has sufficient power without adding the power to decide to link breach of the regulations with reduced compensation. Why would anyone breach regulations anyhow, if that would cut their compensation?

Ms McMaster: We cannot envisage any circumstances in which that decision would be made by an individual official from the Department.

The Chairperson: I know. However, the situation about duplicate fields had an appeals process, and the people involved were supposed to know exactly what they were all supposed to be doing. The appeal body sided with the farmers. However, the Minister overturned that decision on the advice of departmental officials. Why bother with an appeals process?

People thought that a proper appeals process existed and, therefore, breathed a sigh of relief. Then they found out that the Minister had overturned it. The Minister is fooling the public by having an appeals process, because the Department will make decisions anyway, and there is no need to put people through sham proceedings. I have no problem with guidance being taken and court decisions, but the Department should not have that power.

Mr W Clarke: I agree; we all want better biosecurity. Some rogue farmers have no interest in the well-being of the farming industry. They demonstrate poor biosecurity and allow cattle to roam. It is dangerous to the entire industry, and the Department requires a process through which those people can be brought to book.

The Chairperson: They should be taken to court if they have committed an offence.

Mr W Clarke: Non-compliance with biosecurity standards is dangerous and affects the well-being of animals on other farms. The Committee discussed conducting an inquiry into the eradication of TB, and we need to take such measures to eradicate TB. We cannot tolerate broken fences and people who allow cattle to stray deliberately in order to receive compensation. The Committee and the Department need to meet in the middle on that matter. I do not want the Department to abuse the system, but diseases, such as TB, must be eradicated.

Ms Connor: We will return to the Minister on that particular clause to make her aware of the Committee's concerns about the link to compensation. We will come back on that point before the Committee tables its amendment. We can find middle ground on that issue.

Mr Savage: The biosecurity code that was introduced in 2004 is not nearly tight enough. Strict regulations are required in order to eradicate TB and brucellosis. The Department should return to the system that it used several years ago. That would have a big impact.

Mr McKee: We appreciate Mr Savage's support on the biosecurity issue, and we recognise that the Committee is not opposed to biosecurity but is, in fact, encouraging the strengthening of it. Making biosecurity matters admissible in court proceedings is a forward step and signals our intention. We have put all our cards on the table. The Committee has rejected some of the proposals. It is your right to do so, and, as Collette Connor has said, we will consider your opinions and discuss them with the Minister.

I agree that we all should be determined to ensure greater compliance with biosecurity standards. Individual responsibility is important when trying to reduce the risk of infection and transmission.

The Chairperson: If there is particular guidance on the matter, and it is enforced by subordinate legislation, there would be something to act on. People would be liable if they were in breach of that legislation, and I would like those people to appear in court. The guidance should be admissible in court; that should be in the Bill, and I will be happy to help the Department to take that step forward.

Clause 11 deals with deliberate infection. The Committee has asked the Department to investigate how a person can be prevented from circumventing a disqualification from keeping or dealing with animals by passing responsibility to a family member. The Department has indicated that that would be in contravention of the European Convention on Human Rights. That may be the case, but the Department must acknowledge that everyone else has human rights too. We cannot allow persons to overstep the mark and bring the entire industry into disrepute and, indeed, great danger.

Ms Connor: The problem is that, usually, only one person in a family is found guilty. It is very difficult for the Department to stop that guilty person passing the ownership or keepership of an animal to his son, for example, if that son has never been found guilty of an offence. We do not have the power to prevent a guilty person from transferring animals to a son while he or she is in jail for three or six months or whatever. It is a case of being innocent until proven guilty.

The Chairperson: The problem was that a guilty person would not have been in jail for three or six months. That person would have been given a fine or a wee rap over the knuckles, rather than feeling the effects of having caused real damage to an industry.

Ms Connor: We have raised the issue with the Northern Ireland Office, and the Minister will write to Paul Goggins about that shortly.

The Committee Clerk: I remind members that the Department has already agreed to an amendment in respect of clause 11. Members had been concerned about aspects of mandatory disqualification for second offences and so on, and the Department has agreed to amend the Bill due to those concerns.

Mr Savage: We have talked about different diseases and one thing and another this morning. How many different types of TB are there?

The Chairperson: That is a good question, and Roly is here to give the answer.

Mr Roly Harwood (Department of Agriculture and Rural Development): There is one type of TB in Northern Ireland, and that is M bovis, which affects cattle.

Mr Savage: I asked that question because farms all around my home are breaking down, and I daresay other people here have noticed similar situations. I was told just last week that there are two different types or strains of TB. I am curious to know whether that is true.

Mr Harwood: There is one main type of TB, but there are different strains within it. The laboratory on Stoney Road has been doing a lot of work on that, and there are different strains for different localities. Those strains can be subdivided, but there is only one main type of bovine TB.

The Chairperson: No other members have indicated that they want to ask questions. That is as far as we can go this morning. I thank all the officials for coming in and expressing their views forthrightly. I trust that members and officials will reflect on all that has been said this morning. We look forward to hearing from you next week on some of the issues that the Committee feels are contentious and important for the continuation of the Bill. Thank you very much indeed, we are much obliged.

                                      and Research Agency

The Chairperson (Mr McLaughlin): I welcome Norman Caven, who is the Registrar General from the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency, and Annette Gilkeson, who is the Deputy Registrar General. You are going to take us through the table of issues. Members can interject on an issue-by-issue basis if they wish to further clarification.

Dr Norman Caven (Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency): Good morning. I will move forward on that basis and talk about the comments received and about the departmental comments.

The first issue relates to clause 8 of the Bill, which deals with the registration of deaths. Clause 8 is more concerned with allowing deaths to be registered at any registration office in Northern Ireland, and it talks about the potential for remote registration of deaths rather than actually attending the registration office. The issue arose during discussion of the clause with the genealogists, so it is not a point in the Bill itself. Current legislation, which is the Births and Deaths Registration (Northern Ireland) Order 1976, makes provision for us, by regulation, to specify what information needs to be collected at the time of death. Therefore, it does not necessarily pertain to the Bill. It is something that we would come to in the regulations, but we may consider the issue anyway at this point.

The representatives from the genealogical organisations were concerned that the General Register Office for Northern Ireland (GRONI) was not collecting information about the names of the parents of the deceased person at the time of death, and wished that to be included. During the consultation, the Department proposed that we collect information, in that respect, for deceased children under the age of 16, mainly for epidemiological purposes — analysis of death by social class, because children under 16 do not have a social class. We will look favourably on the proposal and give it further consideration before the regulations come into effect, subject to any disproportionate burden that might be placed on respondents.

The system seems to have been working well — in Scotland since 1855 and in the Republic of Ireland since 2006. Subject to the above caveat, we will be prepared to move forward on this matter. In Scotland, particularly when an elderly person dies and the information is not readily available, it is not strictly necessary to include information about the names of the deceased's parents.

Dr Farry: You have more or less answered my question. How will the regulations be framed? Would it be a case of when the information is readily available, it will be included. How much of a burden will be placed on people to obtain that information? If a family member is registering the death of an elderly person, he or she may well know the names of the deceased's parents. If that person is not a family member, it may be more difficult.

Dr Caven: In Scotland, individuals registering a death are instructed, where possible, to submit a copy of the birth certificate and the marriage certificate. We will consider following that model. However, it is not a compulsory part of the registration process, which is made plain at the time. We will look more closely at that, and at how the system operates in the Republic of Ireland, so that we will know how to phrase the provision, but the aim is to ensure that there is no disproportionate burden.

Mrs Annette Gilkeson (Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency): The majority of deaths in Scotland are registered with that information included. The Scottish authorities already have the additional benefit of having records in digitised form.

That means that the registrar has the option of checking records on screen while the informant is present.

Mr O'Loan: I am sorry if I missed your introductory comments. I wished to raise three points, including the matter of a deceased person's parents. I tuned in to what you were saying about considering that issue, and I support that idea. If it can be done, it would be a good thing, with the protection that it would not be an absolute requirement, because of the attendant difficulties.

My second point is about the evidence given by the genealogists, who referred to the agreement with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints that was made in 1959. They said that it would not stand up —

The Chairperson: We will come to that.

Mr O'Loan: I am sorry.

The Chairperson: That is OK.

Dr Caven: The next comments relate to clause 13. The genealogists have accepted the Department's assurance that the article being introduced by clause 13 is not designed to deny access to registration data. That was certainly not our intent, and the genealogists are prepared to withdraw their proposed amendments, with one exception, which concerned the title of the clause. They asked for a specific reference to historic information to be included, and said that the insertion of the word "historic" would be beneficial.

The clause makes provision for access to the registers. Currently, people are afforded access to the indexes, but they do not have access to the actual register entries. Access to those is provided by way of copies of the entries. This clause will open up access to the register entries themselves — as has been the case in Scotland for a considerable period of time — and that universal opening up will be provided by the new article 34A(1).

For those records that will be made available on the internet, we will be inserting an additional caveat of "the relevant period", meaning that access to death records will not be available until after 50 years has elapsed, marriage records will not be available for 75 years and birth records for 100 years. That caveat will only apply to the records that will be available on the internet, in order to prevent causal browsing, and it relates not just to historical records — pre-1922 — but to all records. Therefore, we feel that the insertion of the word "historic" is inaccurate, and we are not proposing to insert it for that reason.

Ms Purvis: Article 34A will provide for access to records via the Internet. Will those records be free to view?

Dr Caven: No. The intention, which we will come to later, is that a fee will be paid, as is the case throughout the British Isles. That fee reflects the cost of the service, and the principle in all registration work is that the cost of the service is passed on to the customer.

The genealogical groups were also concerned about the phrase "the relevant period" and wondered whether the Department could vary it; albeit in regulations. I believe that the provision was discussed with those groups last week, and the point was made that the position that the Department would adhere to is that to allow for future concerns to be communicated, it is normal practice when timescales are specified, for contingencies to be established to vary those timescales if required. Any attempt to vary the timescales would be subject to legislative scrutiny.

If the proposed timescales were to be changed, the likelihood is that the periods would be shortened. However, there is a counter argument that if people are living longer, the number of who would be over 100 years old could increase quite significantly. That would mean that allowing a birth record to be made available after 100 years could become more of an issue. Therefore, having the option to vary the timescales is prudent.

The Chairperson: The Committee has raised the issue of whether there is any merit in the related subordinate legislation being subject to affirmative, rather than negative resolution. That would mean that the Assembly would be able to exert its views on the issues. Do you have a view on that?

Dr Caven: The regulations we will introduce, subsequent to this Bill, will consolidate all of the regulations contained in the Births and Deaths Registration (Northern Ireland) Order 1976 and this Bill. That legislation will be enacted by negative resolution as there is no need for affirmative resolution in any of the other clauses. Introducing a particular clause, to be enacted by affirmative resolution, would require a separate regulation. From the Department's perspective, negative scrutiny still provides an opportunity to question what the Department is doing.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is concerned that the reference in clause 14 to "any register" implies that the Registrar General will be making alterations to foreign and consular marriages, for which the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has responsibility. The power to make alterations to foreign and consular marriages is not within the compass of the Registrar General's powers. The reference to "any register" was implicitly meant to mean that the Registrar General may alter any register that is within the compass of his powers. If it would help, the Department is happy to provide clarification on that by including a definition of "any register", citing that point in an amendment.

The issue around clause 16 has been resolved satisfactorily. I will move to clauses 22 and 23, which were referred to earlier. If members are content with the explanations I gave previously, we can apply those to these two clauses also.

The Chairperson: That is sensible.

Dr Caven: Clause 27 deals with the record of Northern Ireland connections. I invite my colleague to speak on that issue.

Mrs Gilkeson: The record of Northern Ireland connections will be an entirely voluntary scheme, whereby someone who registers an event abroad will be able to register it in Northern Ireland also. That will be helpful for genealogical research.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office is concerned that the proposal will impact on the work of consular officers abroad and that it will have resource implications, because lots of procedures will have to be changed and documentation followed up on.

The record of Northern Ireland connections will not impact on the procedures that the consuls and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office operate currently. GRONI will maintain the register and all issues relating to an event — registering, deleting or accessing of records — will be conducted through our office in Northern Ireland; therefore, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's procedures will not be changed in any way.

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office did not contradict this proposal in its latest submission to the Committee. Rather, it focused on elaborating the details of the Foreign Marriage Order 1970. It did not suggest that any changes be made to the Bill. None of the points raised require a change to the Bill as drafted.

Dr Caven: A number of other issues that do not relate to clauses of the Bill arose during the course of the Committee's evidence sessions.

First, the genealogists who gave evidence said that they did not want any new legislation or regulations that would restrict access to data. In our original consultation for this Bill, we were slightly concerned about the balance between privacy and public access. That has led to the mooted suggestion that certain fields might not be available on the records. In view of the consultation responses, and the situation in Scotland, where that system has worked quite well over the past quarter of a century, we have changed our proposals in the Bill. Therefore, that is no longer an issue for those who responded.

The Chairperson: I am sure that people will welcome that response.

Dr Caven: There was also some discussion about the agreement entered into in the 1950s by the General Register Office and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints to microfilm Northern Ireland civil registers.

Information from the registers was then appearing in the Church library in Northern Ireland. The terms of the original agreement provided for a copy of the records to be made available in the Family History Library in Salt Lake City for research purposes and to be available there only to the attention of the Church. Subsequently, the Church has decided to adhere to the terms of that original agreement and withdraw those records from the library here.

The Committee posed a number of questions relating to that. The first was whether the General Register Office (GRO) intends to make the post-1922 records for Northern Ireland available on the internet as well as at the GRO offices in Belfast and in the various district council offices. The answer to that is yes, but that is subject to what I said earlier: it will include the records of births prior to 1909, marriages prior to 1934 and deaths prior to 1959 and, as each year passes, an extra year will be added to those categories.

There is also the question as to whether making post-1922 records from Northern Ireland available only on a fee-paying basis, creates a commercial disadvantage to genealogists here. Subsequent to the withdrawal of that information by the Church, post-1922 Northern Ireland records are not available anywhere, other than from the General Register Office, so that there is no disadvantage to any group.

Finally, a question was asked as to the correct balance between charging for the information and making it freely available. What would be the impact on tourism? As I said to Ms Purvis, all charging for access to records in Northern Ireland is based on the principle of charging for the service received. In this case, the service is received by a genealogist or someone who is interested in family history. There is a cost attached to that, which would otherwise be borne by the taxpayer. The principle that the Department adheres to is that a charge reflecting that cost should be levied: that is the case in all registration offices in the British Isles.

With respect to tourism, Scotland has a website called "ScotlandsPeople" where such information has been available over the Internet for a number of years. No quantitative or before-and-after study has been carried out as to whether it generates tourism: that might be difficult to prove. Despite the fact that the site levies an access charge, it has been successful.

The Chairperson: The theory still stands: but it has not been tested.

Dr Caven: It is a hypothesis.

Mr O'Loan: I wish to make two points. Many think that if records are put on the Internet, they should be freely available, for they become almost public records. On first consideration, I think that having a charge, as a barrier to that availability sits ill with me. Various charging mechanisms may be considered: a one-off charge could be levied for people to become registered users, or an annual licence sold. I do not know what system is currently being used. My first instinct, however, is that once such material becomes regarded as of sufficient general use that it is taken out of the protections for the individuals and the families, it becomes a like a public record. If we go so far as to put it on the Internet, it ought to be freely available. How do you react to that?

Dr Caven: The Internet will be only one means whereby people can access the records. People will still be able to go to the General Register Office in Belfast and access them there. That inevitably involves a cost: the time of employees who assist people who arrive in Oxford House to find the information that they seek. We try to work out what the cost is. We will include any updating of the Internet system that would otherwise be funded by the taxpayer in the costing regime.

Mr O'Loan: I think this is an area in which an economic gain could be made — there has been a reference to tourism. An argument could be made that we would be happy to give away historical information for free, with the expectation that there would be some degree of economic gain elsewhere, but not for GRONI.

The Chairperson: We could ask the Tourist Board; I am sure it would be able to put up the money.

Dr Caven: If it were helpful, I could provide information on the scale of charges attached to the information in Scotland.

Mr O'Loan: The Committee will keep an open mind on the issue. The submission provided by the Council of Irish Genealogical Organisation states that:

“The agreement entered into by GRONI with the LDS Church over forty years ago now would be unlikely to withstand the legislative changes of more recent years.”

Do you know what legislative changes that refers to?

Dr Caven: I have been puzzled by that; I do not know.

Ms Purvis: I can clarify that, because it is an issue that I raised with the representatives of the Council of Irish Genealogical Organisations (CIGO) who appeared before the Committee last week. They explained that the legislative changes referred to were in relation to the holding of data and freedom of information. Due to those legislative changes, if the GRONI were to enter into an agreement with the Church now to take those records, that agreement would not withstand those legislative changes because of data protection regulations. It would be like handing over records that belong to someone else.

Dr Caven: Certainly, if the agreement entered into in 1959 were entered into now, I would want to take quite a lot of legal advice as to whether it was not ultra vires.

The Chairperson: Is that because of the legislative changes, or because of a problem with the original approach?

Dr Caven: It is because of the existing legislation.

The Chairperson: How can that issue be resolved? Should we just play it safe?

Dr Caven: The records that we are making available are public records. Under statute they are available for inspection; we are opening them up more, with certain caveats in relation to Internet availability. I do not think we are transgressing any freedom of information or data protection legislation in that respect.

Ms Purvis: I would like to return to the issue of cost. I know some amateur genealogists, and people with an interest in family history. For those who may be just beginning a search and may not have the investigative skills of a professional genealogist, the cost can sometimes be off-putting, particularly if they are just beginning with a general search. I take Declan's point about the Internet and information being freely available, and Dr Caven's point about other citizens in the UK who use the service paying for the cost of that service. Is there any way in which limited information could be made freely available — for example, names and years — so that those who may just be starting a search can try to find information in the general time frame that they are interested in? If they then require further investigation, they could be charged for that, and for the issuing of certificates, etc.

Is there any way in which that information can be made available without an initial charge levied? Somebody could be charged for 10 searches in relation to their great-grandfather, and end up going down totally the wrong line; that is money wasted. Perhaps a limited amount of information from the records could be made available to help people place their search within the relative time period and context.

Dr Caven: Are you talking about people who are starting up a search?

Ms Purvis: I am talking about not only people starting up, but those who do not have the skills that the professionals have.

Dr Caven: The General Register Office offers the facility for an assisted search, which can be a very cost-effective way for someone starting up to begin their search. However, there is a charge to cover the time of the person who provides assistance; I am afraid that I keep coming back to the principle of cost. That can be a useful means of finding your way around the records. An individual can book a time to come into the General Register Office to avail of an assisted search, and a member of staff will assist them.

Ms Purvis: I am thinking more about the Internet; more and more people are using the Internet and therefore would not go into the office.

Dr Caven: When it comes to the Internet, the website will include a self-instruction section which will advise people about how to use it. However, I am afraid that we still come up against the basic principle of cost.

Mrs Gilkeson: It is worth noting that there is a concurrent project to digitise all our records dating right back to the beginning of registration. Following that, we expect to see a significant reduction in cost; an individual will then be able to access records quickly on the internet, and that is a lot more cost-effective than accessing the books in GRO.

Currently, a person can pay, per hour, for an assisted search, or, they can look at the indexes and then ask for the records — it costs £12 for a certified copy of each individual record. Once passed, the legislation, coupled with the benefits of the digitisation project that we are currently involved in, will allow us to move to a simplified and more cost-effective system.

The Chairperson: Digitisation will open up access. Is there a charge for checking the indexes? Is that a step that an individual can pursue in the first instance?

Mrs Gilkeson: There is a charge for checking the index, and that entitles the individual to four free searches each time they come in. However, that can still add up to quite an amount of money. Following the digitisation project, there will be an enhanced index, which means, potentially, that someone could check the index without looking at a digital copy of the actual record. Therefore, more information will be available in GRO and on the Internet, for instance, by exposition of a list of common names in Northern Ireland throughout the generations.

Ms Purvis: Do you think that those reductions in cost will be passed on to service users?

Mrs Gilkeson: Yes; we operate on a full cost recovery basis — there is no profit.

The Chairperson: We will move on.

Dr Caven: The next issue relates to data security and the risk of people hacking into the central systems. The main General Register Office computer systems are internal and do not have a public interface; nonetheless, as bespoke operating systems, they have industry-standard protection procedures in place, and those are kept under continuous review. There are audit processes and reports built in, which allow GRO to monitor activities carried out on the system. Over and above that, the public-facing material that we will have on the internet will consist of static images, which cannot be manipulated.

Mr O'Loan: An intensive review of all Government security in Northern Ireland was carried out following some major releases of information. Was Northern Ireland Statistics Research Agency (NISRA) part of that review, or are you an independent agency? We may have been told that information before, but I do not remember.

Dr Caven: NISRA is an agency, but it is not independent, in the sense that it is an integral part of the Department of Finance and Personnel.

Mr O'Loan: Were you part of the review, which was reported by Bill McCluggage on a number of occasions?

Dr Caven: I do not recall. I will send you a note on that.

Mr O'Loan: There was a lot of new thinking about security in the review, and it would seem prudent for NISRA to be linked into any new processes, correctives and protections that were introduced.

Mrs Gilkeson: We have appointed an accredited consultant from the communications electronic security group (CESG) listed adviser scheme, a CLAS consultant, and that is in order to implement the British standard for information security management to BS 7799 for current and new systems such as the digitisation project that we are involved in. The CESG is the UK Government's national technical authority for information assurance. A CLAS consultant was appointed to look at the systems that we had in place and to do an IT health check on them. Those systems, as well as the project that we are currently involved in, have been accredited. The CLAS consultant can approve information data on the system up to, and including, "secret" level.

Dr Caven: Will that suffice in place of sending you a note?

Mr O'Loan: It would also be useful if you were to send a note to let us know whether you were part of the security review process.

The Chairperson: Thank you for your assistance.

Dr Caven: I have a final point about sharing information with other Departments and the extension to the Irish passport service. Annette was going to say something about that.

Mrs Gilkeson: I have been in discussions with the Passport Office in the Republic of Ireland, and there are no electronic links between that office and the General Register Office in the Republic. Any checks that the Passport Office wishes to carry out are done by telephone or by written correspondence. The Passport Office in Dublin has no short-term or long-term plan to initiate any action in that area. As such, it has confirmed that it does not wish to enter into any discussions with us at this point in time.

Dr Farry: “Ourselves alone”. I presume that the introduction of the use of electronic signatures would be allowed in the proposed legislative or regulatory provision.

Dr Caven: We will not require a signature as part of the new process. If someone is doing a remote registration, the legislation will allow us to say that whatever is articulated as being required in regulations for the registration of a birth or other event, with or without a signature, actually constitutes the required record. We will have checks in place so that a birth cannot be registered until we get information from the Health Service that it has actually occurred. In the same way, a death cannot be registered until the medical authorities provide that information. Therefore, someone cannot just come along and register a person as being dead when they are not dead.

The Chairperson: Thank you for your assistance. Your responses to the issues were very helpful and constructive.

EDUCATION BILL (NIA 3/08)

Members present for all or part of the proceedings:

Mr Dominic Bradley (Deputy Chairperson)
Mr Trevor Lunn
Mr Nelson McCausland
Mr Basil McCrea
Miss Michelle McIlveen

Michelle O'Neill
Mr Edwin Poots

Witnesses:

Mr John McGrath	}	Department of Education
Mr Joe Reynolds
Mr Chris Stewart

The Chairperson: I welcome the witnesses from the Department. Good morning, gentlemen.

Mr McCausland: I understand that the embryonic education and skills authority (ESA) has been holding staff-consultation seminars with various sectoral groups. Can we get information about the nature of those meetings, who was in attendance and the contents of the presentations? I have received feedback that mixed messages were sent at one meeting in particular. For example, the impression was given that the ESA was unclear about where it was going — what a surprise. Moreover, it appeared to be asking what its role should be. I suppose that one should expect that in a consultation, but papers were tabled and PowerPoint presentations were given. Can we get copies of those presentations and papers?

Mr John McGrath (Department of Education): Yes, that should not be difficult. It is important to distinguish between those meetings and the workshops that the education and skills authority implementation team (ESAIT) has been involved in since the summer with staff members who fulfil various functions for the boards — transport, catering, education and children's services — to inform them about what services might look like under the ESA. Such meetings dealt with operational matters. For example, how might catering be configured under a regional organisation? Papers were presented at the workshops and people were asked for their thoughts about how structures might be reorganised.

Mr McCausland: I am concerned that papers were presented about how the ESA envisages itself. The ultimate shape of the ESA depends on legislation; even last week, you spoke about flexibility.

Mr McGrath: Yes.

Mr McCausland: It is important that, rather than ESAIT simply consulting the various sectors, the political process be involved as well. We are talking about the legislation in very general terms, but its practical outworking is equally important. The Committee should be updated on all the information that was given to those sectors.

Mr McGrath: Do you mean the representational sectors that we are about to discuss?

Mr McCausland: No. I mean the "services", as you would call them.

Mr McGrath: That is fine. The Department can obtain material for the Committee on that.

Nelson is correct that this is subject to legislation and to the overall framework that will eventually be agreed. The Department and the Minister will also have views, but someone must begin the preparatory work to realise what the options for delivery are, before those options are signed off. There is no assumption that the process has been taken for granted or that the political process is being ignored. For example, last week the Chairperson asked whether there would be 11 offices or six, and although ESAIT might have its own view on that issue, the Department feels that six offices would be more appropriate. There may be different strands of thought at the moment, but no decisions have been made.

In relation to keeping the Committee updated on all the work with the various services, ESAIT has conducted a series of workshops and presentations, so there would be a great deal of paper to present to the Committee. The alternative would be to ask Gavin Boyd to make a presentation on that process to the Committee.

Mr McCausland: Let us do that.

Mr McGrath: Would that be suitable? I am wary of drowning the Committee in 35 PowerPoint presentations.

Mr McCausland: Has ESAIT also conducted workshops with the various education sectors?

Mr McGrath: No. The sectoral organisations — as envisaged and set out in the paper that Chris will present to the Committee — do not yet exist. It is a different relationship. Gavin Boyd is talking to people who will move into the ESA as the legislation develops. For example, he is talking to those responsible for catering and asking how they would run a regional catering service. Entirely different discussions will need to be held with the embryonic sectoral organisations. Those discussions are on a different basis and require the policy context to be set before they begin.

The Department will lead the negotiations and will make arrangements for them. When the ESA comes into being they will have a dialogue role with it, as set out in the paper.

Mr McCausland: It would be useful to have a presentation from Gavin Boyd fairly soon.

The Chairperson: OK. We will take a note of that and see how we can fit it into the work programme.

Mr McGrath: I ask Chris Stewart to make his presentation on the sectoral organisations.

Mr Chris Stewart (Department of Education): Good morning. The Committee asked for more detailed information on the role and responsibilities of the various sectoral organisations under the review of public administration (RPA) arrangements, and I will provide that information through this presentation.

First, I will provide the Committee with some background information and context. The policy for those organisations is set out in policy papers 20 and 21, which the Committee has received; however, it is worth recapping the principles governing the development of the policy. I will not weary the Committee by reading out all the principles, but there are several key points that set the context for addressing the Committee's concerns. Those are that all the sectoral-support organisations will be small; they will be non-statutory and without statutory functions; they will be modestly funded; and all sectors will be treated on the basis of equality, including what we refer to as the controlled sector.

On the organisations and their roles, the sectors that have indicated that they wish to be included in the arrangements are Irish-medium schools, represented by Comhairle na Gaelscolaíochta; integrated schools, represented by the Northern Ireland Council for Integrated Education; voluntary grammar schools, represented by the Governing Bodies Association (GBA); and Catholic schools — both maintained and voluntary grammars — which will be represented by a new voluntary organisation to be established by the Commission for Catholic Education. As I have said, the controlled sector must also be included in those arrangements; however, a slightly different approach is required for that sector, which I will describe in a few minutes.

The Department has commissioned, and received, initial draft business cases from those organisations and is undertaking a robust and detailed scrutiny of those business cases.

We aim to complete the process within six to eight weeks. At that point, we will be able to advise the Committee in considerable detail on the proposed grant agreements with each of the organisations, including the level of funding and the detailed activities that those grants will support.

The Committee may find it useful to receive the details of the commissioning brief that we gave to the organisations to inform the development of their business cases, which lists the functions in the paper that we asked them to consider. I emphasise that that is the long list — not all organisations will want to engage in all the activities outlined in the paper. The potential functions are grouped under five headings.

The first group comes under the heading of ethos and identity, and the type of functions that we are prepared to support include: the fostering and development of the collective ethos of schools in a sector; the identification of potential foundation or community governors to serve on school boards; and the offering of advice to the ESA on the ethos and content of support and training programmes that have been provided for boards of governors.

The second group of functions comes under the heading of employment. The paper describes the centrality of schemes of management and schemes of employment in the legislation, which will set out, respectively, the governance arrangements for schools and the role of boards of governors in employment matters. In the paper we describe the role of the “submitting authority” in those schemes, including a potential change to the legislation that we are minded to introduce, subject to the Committee's views.

In that context, the role of a sectoral body might include: the preparation of draft schemes of management and employment on behalf of submitting authorities; providing responses to any consultation by the ESA or the Department on guidance that governs the preparation of those schemes; providing assistance to trustees or owners of schools in the discharge of their role in the preparation and submission of schemes, and general liaison with the Department and the ESA on that matter.

The next group of functions comes under the heading of ownership, planning and procurement. The functions that we could consider are: advising trustees or owners of schools on their roles; and participating in the area-based planning arrangement that the ESA will operate, which might include assessing provision in a sector, future need, consultation with parents and communities, development and advancement of options and proposals. It is important to emphasise that we are talking about a single planning process that the ESA will operate, to which sectoral organisation will provide input — we are not talking about separate planning processes in each sector.

We have also stated that we will support sectoral bodies to enable owners or trustees to discharge their role in procurement arrangements. Again, those procurement arrangements will be operated by the ESA. That will provide the link between owners and the ESA. The last function under that heading is to engage with any other statutory planning processes that exist or come into being, particularly the community planning process that district councils will lead.

The fourth group of functions comes under the more general heading of representation and advocacy and includes liaising with schools in a particular sector; liaising with, and offering advice to, the ESA, the Department and our colleagues in the Department for Employment and Learning, including, through participation in the education advisory forum when it is established; engaging with other education sectoral interests or stakeholders; and responding to any policy consultation processes that the Department may initiate.

The final group of functions comes under standards and performance. I emphasise that there will be only one statutory authority with legal responsibilities for raising standards — the ESA. However, we recognise that a strength of the present arrangements is the interest that sectors and sectoral bodies take in the performance of their schools. In that context, we see the role of sectoral organisations as including: promoting high-quality education; advising and supporting owners or trustees of schools on strategic issues on performance as they arise; advising owners or trustees of schools on data, reports or information that they may receive on the performance of schools in their sector; offering advice and support to owners or trustees when consulted by the ESA on the discharge of its functions; and liaising generally with the ESA on matters related to the performance of schools in the sector.

That is the long list of functions in which we see a sectoral body being potentially involved. We have received business cases from the existing organisations and from the Catholic trustees on that issue.

The controlled sector requires slightly different treatment because the starting point is different and is, in some ways, more difficult than for the other sectors. No existing organisation is well placed to take on the sort of role that we have outlined. It must also be acknowledged that there is no real tradition in that sector of those sorts of functions or that type of interest being taken on behalf of schools.

We must also recognise that the controlled sector is large and serves diverse communities across Northern Ireland. The starting point is different, but we are clear that, on the basis of equality, the end point must be same for that sector as it is for all other sectors and that the timescale must be the same. By 1 January 2010, those schools must have effective sectoral representation and advocacy, and in doing so it is important that we ensure that there is a strong sense of ownership across that sector. The sector must have trust and confidence in the arrangements that are established; the arrangements cannot simply be parachuted in by the Department.

Therefore we have proposed the first steps of a way forward on which we welcome the views of the Committee. As a first step, we suggest the establishment of a small working group to act as interim advocates or champions for the controlled sector. That group will be charged with developing more detailed proposals for the more substantive arrangements that will be put in place. In the interests of effectiveness, we have suggested that that group should be relatively small, perhaps comprising between six and eight members. That group should include education professionals; the Transferor Representatives' Council (TRC) would also have an important role to play.

In addition, an important element of the group will be representatives from the communities that are served by the controlled schools. The representatives would have a good understanding of their communities, particularly communities that face the greatest education challenges and in which the socio-economic challenges are considerable. The representatives would understand the service that education can provide and the contribution that it can make to their communities.

The group should be asked to undertake a short, focused exercise with the terms of reference that we have set out in the paper; it should be asked to report as quickly as possible to the Department and, through us, to the Committee. The Department will, of course, be prepared to provide support for that group, including a secretariat. I am happy to take questions from members.

The Chairperson: Members will wish to tease out many issues during this section. You referred to “modest” funding. You said that a sectoral body will be established for the controlled sector and that it will have a different starting point because it is a completely new organisation. Given that you referred to equality of treatment across those bodies, how will you ensure that the deficit in the controlled sector — because there is no sectoral body — will be adequately filled?

The deficit in the controlled sector must be given particular attention and assistance because of its diversity. The controlled sector includes controlled grammar schools, which cover a wide diversity. Can we be assured that objections will not be raised on the basis of equality? There is a disparity, and that inequality must be addressed first. All the sectoral organisations should not be lumped together and treated in the same way because that will cause one sector to lag behind.

Mr Stewart: That is correct. We have to address the issue that the controlled sector is lagging behind. It is difficult to comment on what the precise outcome will be, because we do not have a draft business case for the controlled sector. However, I assure you that the Department will work with the interim champions — if we can establish them — to introduce as quickly as possible a business case that is fit for purpose and that will lead to a level of grant that will allow the controlled sector representative body to discharge as many as possible of the functions that we have outlined.

The structure and funding for the representative body that is established for the controlled sector will have to reflect the sector's diversity; it must be fit for purpose and must be capable of discharging its functions.

I assure you that even though it is starting behind other sectors, we will not leave it there. There is no question of our sorting out all the other sectors and merely seeing what is left for the controlled sector; the equality principle will be central. The controlled sector must be able to operate on the same basis as the other sectors.

The Chairperson: You mentioned the possibility that the TRC could be included in that. Given that the TRC's representative constituency has changed in the years since it was brought into existence and that the Churches handed over their schools to the Government, how will equality be assured for denominations that are not covered by the TRC? Those denominations have increased in number over the past 30 or 40 years. How can we ensure that they will be adequately represented? Is that discussion ongoing with the TRC?

Mr Stewart: Yes, Chairman, to all those questions. This afternoon, the discussion will continue when I meet the TRC to discuss those and other points.

The TRC recognises that although it is a voice for the controlled sector, it is not that sector's only voice; it would be the first to acknowledge that other denominations' interests must be reflected. The interests of the increasingly diverse communities — ethnic minority groups, for example — that are served by those schools must be recognised and considered carefully.

The Department's challenge is to ensure that it recognises that, in putting together the interim champions and the more substantive organisation in due course, it can speak on behalf of all the schools in the sector and all the communities that they serve.

The Chairperson: I will open up the discussion, and if my questions are not covered during the discussion, I will come back to them.

Mr D Bradley: What protections does the Bill afford to the Catholic ethos?

Mr Stewart: It is the Department's contention that the Bill offers protections to the ethos of any sector and, indeed, to any school. The Bill does not seek to challenge or interfere in any way with the ethos of any school or type of school.

Earlier, I referred to the provisions on the role of submitting authorities and the submitting of draft schemes of employment and draft schemes of management. The change that we are minded to suggest is to define the submitting authority of every school as the owners or trustees of that school, while recognising that, in some cases, the board of governors owns the school.

That is to allow the owners or trustees of every school to ensure that its ethos is lawfully and properly reflected in a school's governance and employment arrangements. We proposed that change because we believe that we did not get the legislation entirely right in that respect. We want to ensure that there is consistency across all sectors and all types of schools.

Mr D Bradley: The ethos of an Irish-medium school, for example, is not necessarily protected under the Bill, as a board of governors could un-designate an Irish-medium school. Is that correct?

Mr Stewart: I believe that that is correct.

Mr D Bradley: Where, then, is the protection of the Irish-medium ethos in the Bill? Could a Catholic school do the same?

Mr Stewart: I do not wish to avoid your question, but I am not sure from what we would be protecting the ethos. If a school's board of governors — presumably reflecting the wishes of the community that it serves — decided for some reason that it ought to become a different type of school, I am not certain from whom we would be protecting it.

Mr D Bradley: Would a maintained school be able to do the same thing?

Mr Stewart: Yes.

Mr D Bradley: Could a Catholic school become a school other than a Catholic school if it so wished? Could the board of governors decide that?

Mr Stewart: Yes, although there is a caveat: the ethos of a school is not prescribed in legislation, and neither would the Department seek to control or direct it in any way. The important caveat relates to a question that Nelson asked several meetings ago and to which I still owe him an answer. He asked whether it would be possible for an integrated school to “reverse-transform” or transform into a different type of school, and we agreed to check the legislation to find out. It is not possible in a straightforward way. In fact, the legislation specifically rules out either a controlled integrated school or a grant-maintained integrated school transforming into a different type of school. A further caveat is that the only means of achieving it in practice is for a school to close and reopen as a different type of school. Forgive me if that is a rather long, technical and involved answer.

Mr McCausland: It is a very interesting answer.

The Chairperson: Could it technically close and reopen?

Mr Stewart: Yes, as a different type of school.

Mr D Bradley: Would the trustees of maintained schools rather than the board of governors not have to change a school’s ethos?

Mr Stewart: Yes. The commonality or the consistency across all schools and sectors is that it is the owners or trustees who determine ethos. In the case of Irish-medium schools the owners are the board of governors, and in that regard there is consistency between the two sectors.

Mr D Bradley: Therefore there is a different system of management or ownership?

Mr Stewart: There are certainly differences in ownership.

Mr D Bradley: Is that why those differences are emerging in the Bill?

Mr Stewart: No, quite the opposite; we want to ensure that the effect of the legislation is the same, regardless of any differences in ownership. Part of the central thrust of the RPA is that there are differences in everything from governance arrangements, structures of boards of governors through to finance arrangements, which simply reflect historical differences and ownership. It will require the two RPA Bills to achieve that fully. However, we want, as far as possible, to enable any grant-aided school to enjoy the same relationship with the ESA and be part of the same administrative arrangements as any other type of school. The owners or trustees of a school can determine its ethos, but that will have no bearing on the administrative arrangements.

Mr O’Dowd: The scenarios that Dominic outlined can happen now; in a sense, the Education Bill does not change anything.

Mr Stewart: That is the case.

Mr O’Dowd: My question is about sectoral support, particularly for the controlled sector, and I will touch on the Chairperson’s comments. There is some validity in the argument that a sector starting from a standstill position may be disadvantaged; therefore it might need some further departmental or financial support. The Committee would have a role in any evidence-based argument that is developed along those lines.

Will the finances and role of sectors collectively be subject to review? As the ESA develops, will the role of the sectors come together without the loss of ethos or identity about which Dominic expressed concerns? Does the ESA plan hold out that hope?

Mr Stewart: Yes, very much so. The business cases that we are scrutinising aim at arriving at grant agreements with each sector. Normally, grant agreements would last for no more than three years. That strikes the right balance between allowing an organisation a reasonably stable base on which to plan, but it also recognises the need to review continually such arrangements to ensure that they continue to be necessary and that they represent and provide value for money for the public purse. That is what we expect to happen.

Over time, we envisage that the role of the sectors will evolve. However, we do not foresee a time when the diversity, ethos, character or identity of any type of school or sector will be reduced, and it is not our intention that that will happen. However, the thrust of the RPA is the need for a consistent, equality-based approach that recognises that education is a publicly funded public service from which children and young people in any community are entitled to receive the same provision. We expect and require sectors to operate in the spirit of co-operation more than they have in the past, when they were separate and, at times, antagonistic and adversarial — particularly in the planning of the schools estate and the delivery of the curriculum.

There is no room for sectors to pursue their own agendas in a modern education service. We must proceed on the basis of co-operation.

Mr McGrath: The Department will support the sectoral arrangements for three years, at least; however, the present division of schools into different sectors might begin to break down. The Chairperson referred to controlled grammar schools; perhaps they might see themselves as having more in common with voluntary grammar schools. The way in which the pie chart is divided at present may change; there may well be less differentiation. For instance, the sector-support bodies might decide that they want to migrate to a different place, because the situation might change. If that happened, we will respond to it, but we will not be driving any changes.

Mr Stewart: We do not want to engineer change, but, as John said, we will respond to it. That is already happening. In your papers you will have seen the proposal for a single body representing all Catholic schools. The senior trustees want a more coherent Catholic education sector in which the Catholic maintained schools and Catholic voluntary grammar schools come together closely and co-operate as a single, more coherent Catholic-managed sector.

Mr D Bradley: Why does the Bill contain a separate clause on Catholic maintained schools and not for other sectors?

Mr Stewart: There is a range of definitions of school types. A definition of Catholic maintained schools is provided in the Education Bill because at present it sits in the midst of the provision that established the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS). That provision is being repealed because that organisation is being dissolved. Therefore, rather than leave one subsection in splendid isolation in a long provision, we will repeal the whole clause but, for the time being, leave the small part of it that is required — the provision on the definition of Catholic maintained schools.

The other definitions are less affected by the legislation, so they can remain in the existing Orders. However, the Committee will see that our aim in the second Bill is to reduce the number of definitions and separate school types. The only reason for having a definition of Catholic maintained schools was to identify the block of schools for which CCMS is responsible.

When the ESA is the only statutory authority for all schools, there will be no need to separate Catholic maintained schools from other maintained schools. It will be relatively easy to make that change in the second Bill, and, in time, the second Bill will contain a provision to remove the definition of Catholic maintained schools.

Mr D Bradley: Is that why it says that Catholic maintained schools are designated under a scheme “for the time being”?

Mr Stewart: That is correct. It is a curious provision in many ways. It means that a Catholic maintained school is a school on the list of Catholic maintained schools. That is the most circular definition that I have seen in legislation; it is a technical hangover from the present legislation, and it will be taken out in the second Bill.

The Chairperson: I do not want to go off the subject, but there has always been an issue about controlled grammars — and they have been mentioned already. They are different from voluntary grammars in that controlled grammars are under the jurisdiction of the education and library boards.

In respect of function, is that the only difference?

Mr McGrath: In the round, yes; therefore, in future, language will be needed that does not state that it is a controlled sector support group, because the schools will no longer be controlled.

The Chairperson: Will that create almost the same situation as that which currently exists in the maintained sector?

Mr McGrath: We must think about our language around that situation. I would welcome suggestions that are better than “ex-controlled”. When the schools come out of the jurisdiction of the education and library boards, there will be fundamental differences. Many schools have aspirations of autonomy, which we talked about last week. In the future, they may want to see themselves in a broad voluntary grammar sector, rather than in an ex-controlled one. The boundaries between those sectors may move in the future. In a sense, we would want that, because sector support arrangements should not act as a barrier to schools that seek more autonomy.

Mr Stewart: That is correct; indeed, nor should those arrangements determine the outcome. John O’Dowd raised the issue of the future of sectors. Although we do not intend to reduce sectors, we note that they may change by themselves, and we do not want the autonomy of schools to be determined by anything other than the capability of the school and its wish to have autonomy. That should not be determined by historical accident, resulting from the fact that the school happens to find itself in a particular sector. We want policy to go in that direction, and the Department does not regard that as being incompatible with the existence of sectors, or with the champion or advocacy role that those sectors may have.

Mr Lunn: The Department’s paper to the Committee on the functions of sectoral bodies states that their roles will be allowed to “prepare”, “respond”, “assist”, “advise”, “assess”, “liaise”, “engage” and “advocate”. It does not state that one of their roles will be to “decide”. May I take it that no decision-making powers whatsoever will be left to the sectoral organisations?

Mr McGrath: They can decide how they run their own business, but they are not statutory organisations. One model that is used in many other sectors is that voluntary bodies perform an advocacy role in the discharge of tasks. Age Concern is one example of that.

The Department is very clear that ESA will have the statutory role. That is the function that it is funded to perform. Accountability for raising standards, for example, must not be blurred by involving too many organisations. Clearly, the sectoral bodies will be non-statutory organisations, which the Department will fund to carry out a range of functions of the nature that are described in our paper. The Department will fund them for what they must do, but no more than that. That is a difficult area.

To pick up on the Chairperson's point, equality is an issue in the controlled sector. However, the Department is focusing on equality in respect of the support that we give the sector. We will not take a mechanistic, "count the money in" approach, because there is no value in fostering an ex-controlled sector support body if it cannot do its job. That will not serve us in any way.

Mr Stewart: I have an example of school improvement that may illustrate that point. As John McGrath said, the statutory authority with responsibility for action will be ESA. However, if a performance issue arose in the controlled sector, one might expect the controlled-sector champion — its representation and advocacy body — to closely scrutinise and, if necessary, to challenge ESA. As a body that understands the schools it is serving, it might ask ESA: what is it doing to raise standards in controlled schools; what work is it doing with controlled schools; does it understand the ethos of controlled schools and the communities they serve?

The contribution that the controlled-sector body might make is just that — one of challenge, liaison, and of examining whether there is a sectoral ethos. However, the professional, technical, formal, legal and statutory roles are all with ESA.

Mr Lunn: Your presentation says that the role of sectoral organisations in the area-based planning process will be brought to the Committee in a few weeks' time. Even at this stage, can we assume that the roles of those sectoral organisations will be reduced to the provision of advice and advocacy? Is there any possibility that they might be left with some decision-making power?

Mr Stewart: No. The ESA will operate a single planning process. The role of any sectoral organisation is to provide input into that process, not to decide anything.

The Chairperson: Will that also include development proposals?

Mr Stewart: Yes. In due course, we still see the legislation focusing on development proposals. At present, a development proposal can come from any source. In future, the key difference will be that, in deciding whether a development proposal should go forward, it will be scrutinised with due regard to the area plan that is in force at the time. By and large, if a development proposal does not accord with the area plan, it is unlikely to go forward. If it does accord with the area plan and has been brought forward in order to deliver the area plan, then it is likely to go forward.

The Chairperson: Can the sectoral bodies produce development proposals?

Mr Stewart: They can produce development proposals, but if a sectoral body, or, indeed, any other interest, produces a development proposal in defiance, if you like, of an area plan, it is unlikely to get very far.

Mr McCausland: I want to pick up on two issues, on which, in a sense, Dominic touched earlier. The first is about equality, and the other is to do with ethos. Some time ago, the Committee asked the Minister to provide information on the range of issues in the education system in which structural or other inequalities had been identified. That request has not been answered yet.

The Chairperson: Several issues were highlighted in that correspondence.

Mr McCausland: Yet we are always being told that inequality is one of the issues that must be addressed. We do not have a list of those inequalities, or what they are in the Minister's view. Mr Stewart mentioned another inequality — that a controlled school can change to an integrated school, but it cannot transfer back. That is clearly inequitable.

Mr Stewart: I note your view on that.

Mr McCausland: Is it inequitable?

Mr Stewart: That is an issue of policy. I note your view on that.

Mr McCausland: Whether that inequality exists is a matter of policy? Whether it is an inequality is not a matter of policy; it is a matter of fact. Is it an inequality or not?

Mr Stewart: I contend that it is a matter of policy. It is for the Minister of the day or the Administration of the day to determine policy. The current policy is that legislation does not require a route to transform from integrated status to another type of school.

Mr McCausland: It is not permitted. There are many things that were not permitted in the past but are now permitted because of equality arguments. We are back to the question of whether the Department has considered, or intends to consider, the equality implications and other implications of such a course of action.

Mr Stewart: The Department has not considered such an option. The issue was not raised until you asked the question.

Mr McCausland: Now that it is on the radar —

Mr Stewart: Now that it is on the radar, I will, of course, convey your view to the Minister that it constitutes an inequality. I have no doubt that the Minister will consider that.

Mr McCausland: I will park the other equality issue. You say in your paper that:

"It will be important to ensure that sectoral support arrangements treat all sectors on an equitable basis."

Is that the same as saying — I contend that it is not — that all children will be treated on an equitable basis?

Mr McGrath: It is a different paradigm.

Mr McCausland: Will you be able to ensure that the new structure will treat all children equally? Will that be checked by way of an equality impact assessment (EQIA)?

Mr McGrath: The Minister has made it clear that her priority is to raise standards and to ensure that each child who goes into the education system has the maximum opportunity to fulfil his or her potential. Therefore, we focus on equality of outcome. If we focus on equality of inputs, we are missing the fact that there is a gross disparity in outcomes. The Minister is very clear about that. In a sense, sectoral support is a different frame of reference.

Mr McCausland: A policy decision is being made to create a new structure. Has an EQIA been conducted to test whether that structure will treat all children equally, or will it impact on some children differently than on others?

Mr Stewart: Equality impact screening has been applied, and consideration has been given, to the review of public administration programme in general, and to the first Bill in particular. I am aware that the Committee has been waiting for the results of that exercise for quite some time, but, although the results have yet to hit the streets, we expect them to come out within the next week or two. We concluded that, subject to consultation, ESA will treat all children equally.

The obvious answer is that the new arrangements will be based on equality. As a public authority, ESA will be subject to the statutory duties that are contained in section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998. I suspect that that is not the answer that you are looking for, or perhaps you are attempting to make a different point

Mr McCausland: We have already talked about the integrated/controlled issue, from which inequalities emerged that had not previously been picked up. Such things can happen, so it is important that all arrangements are checked.

Dominic Bradley mentioned the religious and cultural ethos in Catholic-maintained and Irish-medium schools. Who will determine the cultural and religious ethos of controlled schools?

Mr Stewart: An ethos will evolve and emerge from individual schools and from the sector, and a test of the effectiveness of the central body will be the extent to which it can articulate an ethos. Perhaps a multi-dimensional ethos will be required to cover such a diverse range of schools and communities. However, one cannot define, or prescribe, an ethos. The Department made a heroic attempt at doing so in an earlier policy paper, and, as a result, we managed to unite all education stakeholders in the view that we had got it entirely wrong. At that point, we recognised that any attempt on our part to define ethos is doomed to failure. An ethos comes from schools and sectors; it is not in the Department's gift to define or create it.

Mr McCausland: My point is that the focus for those matters is very much on sectors; whereas, I think that it should be on the rights of individual children. Therefore, it is important that the cultural and religious rights of the child are reflected and accommodated in whatever system emerges. Britain has signed up to international commitments in that regard that are only being partially implemented in the controlled sector; whereas, those commitments are being fully implemented in the Catholic-maintained and Irish-medium sectors. There is now an opportunity to address that matter, and, if the sectoral body has a role to play in that process, it is important that it properly reflects the ethos of the community that it serves. I am sure that we will return to that point.

Mr Stewart: You are entirely right. Many people associate most schools in the controlled sector with a broadly Christian ethos because they serve predominately Protestant communities, and they associate schools, or parts of schools, in that sector predominantly with a Protestant Christian ethos. However, every grant-aided school must be open to children from any religious denomination or none.

Therefore, we will expect the sectoral body to recognise that the controlled-sector's ethos — perhaps more than any other — must be multi-dimensional, reflecting different faiths, denominations, community backgrounds, and minority and ethnic interests. We would take a dim view of the sectoral body if it were not to recognise that when trying to advocate the ethos of the sector, if it were to attempt to do so.

Mr McCausland: Is it accepted that every child has the right to an education in which he or she is taught about, and given respect for, the culture and the ethos of the home from which he or she comes?

Mr Stewart: We are not proposing any change to the legislation in that regard.

Mr McCausland: There is no legislation in that regard.

Mr Stewart: There are references in early articles of the Education and Libraries (Northern Ireland) Order 1986. I cannot recite the full detail to you, but there are duties on us and on education authorities to respect parental wishes regarding the education that is delivered for children.

Mr McCausland: It needs to be taken a lot further if it is to meet international obligations. How does the current legislation meet the obligations of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child?

Mr Stewart: Will you draw out that question a little further?

Mr McCausland: The UN Convention on the Rights of the Child states the point that I have just made, which is that every child has the right to an education. That education should encourage respect for, and knowledge and awareness of, culture in the broadest sense, of the community from which he or she comes.

Mr Stewart: The UK does not have any specific legislative provisions to give effect to the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child, because, unlike the European Convention on Human Rights, it has never been directly incorporated in domestic legislation. Our contention is that our body of education legislation, and the education system that is put in place thereby, give effect to those things.

If the view is that the legislation somehow falls short in relation to any of those dimensions, we would want to look at that, because, although the convention has not been incorporated, it is, nevertheless, an obligation that applies to the state, and we would want to ensure that that is delivered.

Mr McCausland: I am merely saying that it happens in Irish-medium schools. They have a clear cultural dimension, and CCMS schools have a clear religious ethos to them. However, that does not necessarily happen in all controlled schools. We have an opportunity now to deal with the issue, while we are reshaping the system.

Mr Stewart: We welcome the opportunity to explore that issue and tease it out a little further. We recognise, as I think you have done, that the multi-dimensional nature of the controlled sector presents a particular challenge in that regard.

Mr McCausland: The point that I am making is that it is down to the children who attend a particular school. Therefore, the ethos of a school in one town may be different to the ethos of a school in another town, depending on the children who go to it.

Mr Stewart: That is true of all sectors, but, on several occasions, I have heard trustees of Catholic schools acknowledging that very fact. A central thread of Catholic education and ethos runs through the sector. However, there are perceived differences in ethos in individual Catholic schools, for the very reasons that you have given.

Miss McIlveen: We have to recognise that we probably operate in an 'Animal Farm' view of equality, in which all animals are created equally, and some are created more equally than others.

I welcome Mr O'Dowd's comments, because he recognised that there may be a deficit in relation to representation of the controlled sector. However, I am concerned that he is looking for an evidence-based argument when the evidence is quite clear that there is nothing, and we are starting from nothing.

Following some of the comments that you made in response to the Chairperson, it appears that a can of worms may be opening up regarding who will sit on the group that will be created for the former controlled sector. I will return to a comment that I made last week about the ESA board. Will members of that group be chosen by simply being tapped on the shoulder, or will they have to apply for the positions? How will that process work?

Mr McGrath: The paper highlights the fact that it is not for the Department to create the sectoral support body for the former controlled sector, because it is not a statutory body. It is an advocacy body, but it will not be our body. Therefore, we want to foster that by getting a group of people who will be connected in that sector to begin to do some of the legwork, because it is not our job. We will do our utmost to help to create the body.

The deficit was mentioned, but I wish to make it clear that we will support that work by finding the secretariat. Who the initial key players will be is open for discussion, and that is why we brought the matter to the Committee. In fact, it may be a matter of persuading some people to give their time and effort in certain communities outside the normal TRC and other denominations. Indeed, it will be a broader church than that.

We need to identify people who have some understanding of the issues — particularly those of underachievement — and who want to make a contribution. If those elements of straw form enough of a brick that those people want to constitute themselves into an organisation with the appropriate governance structure and the right legal statutes to produce a business case for us, that is where we want to go.

We will not appoint people; it is not our right to do so. The group will not be a statutory organisation, and it should not be beholden to the Department. It should be as independent as the other sectoral support bodies; otherwise, the general deficit that currently exists in the controlled sector will continue.

Miss McIlveen: Who, other than the TRC, have you spoken to about that?

Mr Stewart: We have spoken to individuals in education and library boards and with the TRC, whom I am meeting again this afternoon. We have not gone particularly far beyond doing that. We would welcome suggestions from the Committee as to how we might gather the voices or identify those who might play a role in such a facility. It is difficult, but as John has said, we have to start somewhere.

The arrangements that we have set out regarding ESA members and the ESA board are clearly appropriate. ESA will be a statutory organisation to which public appointments will be made. There are clear procedures to follow. The sectoral support body for the former controlled sector will not be a statutory organisation, and public appointments will not be made to it. Its make-up will be defined on the basis of personal contact, persuasion and seeking views and input on an informal basis. If that is characterised as a tap on the shoulder, then yes, it is a tap on the shoulder at this stage.

Miss McIlveen: Has anyone indicated that they may be interested in getting involved in that group?

Mr Stewart: No, I am not aware of any specific approaches that have been made.

Mr McCausland: Is it basically a self-selecting group?

Mr McGrath: No, it is not a self-selecting group.

Mr McCausland: Whoever turns up at the first meeting —

Mr Stewart: Tell us which shoulders to tap.

Mr McGrath: In the other sectors, there are pre-determined groups or embryonic organisations that have a link and a broad sense of ownership. That does not exist at all in the controlled sector, which is quite diverse. Collectively, everyone interested in this — including Committee members — has to ensure that enough people are interested so that they can take up the mantle themselves.

The group may eventually be constituted as a charitable trust or a company limited by guarantee, but it will not have ministerial appointments. Its members will not be beholden to the Department, because that would put them in a different position. They will have to be as independent as members of the other sectoral support bodies, otherwise there would be inequalities.

We have made clear in this and in other settings that as much assistance as possible must come into that process, because it will be a matter of trying to identify the people who can give it enough momentum at the start. That does not necessarily mean that those are the people who would constitute the body in due course. It is very difficult. We have spoken about the TRC and about other denominations. Across the region, the body needs to serve a number of very diverse communities, both urban and rural. It must consider secondary schools and grammar schools and the aspirations of different schools, and that is a major challenge.

Mr Stewart: If we were to conclude that we must not tap any shoulders anywhere, the alternative would be that we would simply sit in the Department and wait for the appointments to be made. If they were made at all, it would take a long time. Rival approaches might come forward or rival bids might be placed in order to establish a sectoral organisation. We could allow some of those to succeed and some to fail, and perhaps, in due course, we might end up with something that is effective.

Given what the Committee has rightly said about the need not to let the controlled sector get left behind, we do not feel that we can do that. Although the process may be inelegant and cumbersome, we have to use it to try to hothouse the development of the body without making it an artificial construct of the Department in which people in the sector would simply have no trust or confidence. The starting point is that, yes, we have to tap a few shoulders.

Miss McIlveen: Do you have any idea of when the process will start?

Mr Stewart: It will start as soon as possible, and within weeks.

Miss McIlveen: The other sectors have already put forward a business case. Have you had specific discussions with those sectors about that?

Mr Stewart: Yes, and those discussions are ongoing.

Miss McIlveen: So you have had meetings with the other sectors?

Mr Stewart: Yes.

Miss McIlveen: Nelson, did you ask a question earlier in relation to sectors?

Mr McCausland: We were told that they were not meeting with sectors.

Mr McGrath: No, we have been discussing with the sectors. We said that the education and skills authority implementation team has not been meeting with sectors.

Mr Stewart: Given the role that the organisations will have in liaising with, and perhaps occasionally challenging, ESAIT, it is very important that the sectoral support organisations are not funded from ESAIT. They will be funded by the Department, and that is to ensure that no conflict of interest in the relationships would exist.

The Chairperson: Let us draw a distinction here, in case there is a slight confusion. We are talking about the sectoral body, but the paper has talked about the establishment of a working group. Who has been tapped on the shoulder for that? That is; who is taking responsibility for it? There is nobody.

Mr Stewart: No one has yet been tapped on the shoulder.

Mr McGrath: It is in everyone's interest that we make some progress on this affair — that is why the paper states that we would welcome the Committee's views on it and on the proposals. We would like to provide some secretariat support for the process, with others taking the lead in identifying people who could become part of the working group. Time is pressing, and it will take some time to establish that working group, have some discussion, gel it together, create a constitution and articles of association for a new organisation, and do a business case. No one has been tapped on the shoulder.

I think that you would agree that having discussions with the TRC is a genuine, valid and appropriate action. However, when casting the net to include more than the usual suspects — if you will excuse the phrase — it would be important to capture the diversity of communities that are currently served by controlled schools. In a sense, we are open to any proposals, suggestions and ideas, and we are happy to proceed with that on a clean sheet of paper.

Miss McIlveen: I know that, ideally, you want between six and eight members. However, when you start to drill down to identify the number of interested bodies, you could end up with 30 or 50 people in the room.

Mr McGrath: We are looking for a core group that will proceed with the work. However, you are quite right — I envisage that that will mean lots of people in the room on different occasions reflecting different interests. We will need to be quite careful when establishing how that is eventually distilled down to a sector support group, which will be a legal entity but which will cover many different constituencies. However, that is not beyond the wit of man.

Miss McIlveen: Will the Department provide a secretariat for that group?

Mr Stewart: Yes, we will. The group will start off with six people; however, as John said, we always envisaged that rippling out to larger gatherings very quickly. As regards the size of the eventual governance arrangements for the body, your guess is probably as good as ours. It is likely to be larger than between six and eight people, to reflect what is a large and diverse sector. We will provide a secretariat to that working group.

Following on from the point that John O'Dowd made, we recognise that the Department will have to continue to do a bit of hand holding and assisting to that organisation as it comes into being and gets up to speed in order to ensure that it is not left behind by any of the other sectoral organisations. We would not have any difficulty with doing that.

Mr D Bradley: Will the Transferors' Representative Council have a guaranteed place as representatives of that sector?

Mr Stewart: It is not for us to guarantee any particular membership of the body, but, before we would agree to fund it, we would be looking for evidence that the body is genuinely representative of the controlled sector. I would be very surprised if such a body did not include the TRC but, as we said earlier in response to the Chairperson's questions, not only be the TRC would be there. We expect other very significant and important voices to be there as well.

Mr B McCrea: It is quite interesting; I have got my head around where we are now. As I understand it, the Department did not really want sectoral bodies at all, so it is now prepared to provide them with a very modest amount of funding but no statutory basis and no real input. Presumably they will wither on the vine fairly shortly?

Mr Stewart: I am not certain that you will ever hear me describe the policy in those terms. It is not that we do not want sectors, because we recognise the reality that sectors exist. The education system is pluralist, and schools of a particular character and ethos come together to recognise a common identity and ethos.

Mr B McCrea: Could a school be a member of more than one sectoral body?

Mr Stewart: Yes.

Mr B McCrea: The situation is fairly bizarre in that the situation with sectoral bodies will be similar to Prince becoming known as the Artist Formerly Known as Prince. Controlled schools will become schools formerly known as controlled.

Mr Stewart: We will aim to have a better descriptor for those schools in due course.

Mr B McCrea: I am sure that I can rely on the creativity of the Civil Service to come up with a better name.

Mr Stewart: It has failed to come up with a better name so far, but we welcome suggestions.

Mr Storey: Made in Britain?

Mr B McCrea: I can see commonality among schools that operate in inner cities. Could there be a sectoral body that represents inner-city schools?

Mr Stewart: The short answer is yes. As John said earlier, we envisage that sectors will evolve. If, at some point in the future, a proposal were to come forward from a group of schools with something in common, and those schools were to make a business case that demonstrated that that would add educational value, we would accept that proposal.

Mr McGrath: We are starting by providing resources that will be used to support sectors in the school system. If morphing were to take place and subsets were to emerge, we would not continue to put more money in to the existing sectors without assessing the division; you would not expect us to do anything different. For example, if we were to fund a controlled-sector sectoral body from the start and then an inner-city-school sectoral body emerged, we would revisit the funding. We do not want duplicate funding.

Mr B McCrea: I understand your point, and I agree with morphing. I contend that the existing sectoral bodies will effectively be made redundant. What is the difference between a grammar school and any other school in a non-selective education system? There is no difference. What is the difference between grammar schools and schools in the controlled sector? The only difference was with certain control matters, but those too will now be changed.

There will be no difference between grammar schools and controlled-sector schools, because they will have the same level of governance and there will be no selectivity. Therefore, those existing sectoral bodies will effectively be done away with. I appreciate that it might be useful for common interests to be brought together in a single body, and I envisage that morphing will take place.

The real challenge is with the tension between the Department and some sectoral bodies. The Department wants to devolve autonomy to schools, provided that the schools want it and that they work within certain policy guidelines. However, some sectoral bodies will want stronger control in order to influence the development of schools in the sectors that they represent.

Mr McGrath: There could be tension in some cases.

Mr Stewart: There could be some tension, but I do not think that the contrast is as stark as you describe. We have been talking to the various sectors about that matter for some time, as the RPA policy emerged and developed. There is a high degree of agreement between the Department and the sectors that the main focus of each sector is to foster and maintain the ethos, identity and character of the schools that it represents. However, issues such as: the curriculum; the detail of employment arrangements; the handling and stewardship of financial matters; and ensuring that there is commonality of best human resources practice are not sectoral matters. They are matters of front line support to schools, and that is the domain of the ESA.

Mr B McCrea: As I said, it has been helpful to listen to you, and I understand what you are saying, but I think that there will be tension from the sector that is formally known as the Catholic maintained sector, which has a strong position. I know that you could not possibly comment, but I would imagine that you would prefer to see a reduction of influence. There will be a problem in relation to that. I am in favour of around 80% of what you have proposed.

Mr Stewart: That is probably the highest score that you have given us yet.

Mr B McCrea: The problem involves two key areas. The first is the question of who decides the policy. You have told me today what I already knew: the Minister of the day — or the Administration of the day, but probably the Minister — will decide the policy. I have already expressed concern about any multi-faceted education system that does not appear to be inclusive. I have a problem with ESA because of the control that will be exercised over that body.

Secondly, who decides the area plan? Presumably, that is based on the policy decisions that are taken by the same Minister. Although I understand all of the operational issues and all of the issues that you have mentioned, ESA is fundamentally flawed at the policy input stage at the top. This is a diverse society with different requirements, and that is not reflected in the overall structure.

I do not see why the TRC should not have its own sectoral body. I know that you have said that it should be included with the sector formally known as the controlled sector, but why should it not have its own sectoral body? The TRC has a common ethos, and the only mistake that it made was that it, rather stupidly, gave away its schools at one stage. I understand your view on the issue of the exchange; you have a clearer understanding of our objections to the course being taken. I accept that it is not in your gift to change that, but at least you know what the problem is.

Mr McGrath: ESA is a much more modern and appropriate vehicle to implement policies that are set down by Government. Your issue is how the policies are set down by Government.

Mr B McCrea: I have no absolutely no disagreement with you on that.

Mr McGrath: We are talking now about the policies of the day, but we must design a system that is capable of discharging the policies in the future, whether that is in 10 or 15 years from now.

Mr B McCrea: The Ulster Unionist Party has never been against a more streamlined, coherent and consistent educational administration system. If we felt that ESA would provide that, we would have welcomed it. However, we have fundamental problems with who controls the area planning and who controls policy, because, in the wrong hands, the efficient and effective system that you have introduced is actually a Trojan Horse, which will be used to further legitimise political positions, but not necessarily my position.

The Chairperson: We have dealt with that issue. We will now move on to the issue of ESA as a single employing authority, which is exercising the minds of a considerable number of people and has raised concern. Members have the Department's briefing, in which the issue of employment arrangements is covered.

Mr Stewart: We have provided two papers, both of which cover the range of issues that you asked us to address. You asked for some more detail on the employment arrangements, particularly on the respective roles of the ESA and boards of governors. You also asked for information on the review that the Minister announced on teacher employment opportunities, and we have covered that in a separate related paper.

With your approval, Chairperson, I shall deal with the employment arrangements first, and then move on to the review. The paper on employment arrangements addresses two themes: the first is the respective roles of boards of governors and the ESA; and the second is the concerns that have been expressed to the Committee and to the Department by the Governing Bodies Association about those employment arrangements.

By way of background and context, the paper summarises some of the key features of the current employment arrangements. The points to emphasise there are that 86% of schools are already involved in some form of collective employment arrangements, but the remaining 14% of schools currently employ staff directly. The role of boards of governors at present varies greatly.

For example, in Catholic maintained schools, the boards of governors determine all teaching appointments. In the controlled sector, by contrast, some of the senior appointments are determined not by boards of governors, but by the teaching appointments committee of the relevant education and library board. Those variations are historical. They are not based on evidence of the contribution of that sort of arrangement to effective education.

With that in mind, our aim is to achieve greater consistency and equality across the education system, with all schools being given the opportunity to run their own day-to-day employment affairs on the basis of their desire and ability to do so, rather than of their history of ownership or of the sector in which they happen to find themselves.

Turning to the key features of the new arrangements, it is proposed that all staff in all grant-aided schools will be employed by the ESA. That means that formally, for the purposes of education and employment law, the ESA will be the employer, and all contracts of employment will be between the ESA and the staff. However, the role of the boards of governors, as we have said, is to take the day-to-day decisions on the running of their schools, including on employment matters. In practice, that means that the relationship between the ESA and boards of governors will be one in which the boards act on behalf of the ESA and discharge employment functions that are delegated to them by the ESA.

Those delegation arrangements, and the detailed role of individual boards of governors, will be set out in the schemes of employment. The provisions that cover those issues are contained in clauses 3 to 12 of the Education Bill. It is proposed that those schemes will be drawn up by the schools and approved by the ESA. It is for the schools, not the ESA, to decide on the level of delegation. Clearly, some schools will want to carry out the full range of employment functions and leave only a minimal role for the ESA. However, other schools, equally legitimately, may decide that they wish to leave certain functions in the hands of the ESA. Once again, the key point is that that is a decision for the schools.

Our paper attempts to illustrate that in a little more detail by setting out the respective roles of boards of governors and the ESA in relation to several areas of functions. Those are: determining the staff complement of the school; recruiting staff; managing staff, including any necessary disciplinary action; dismissing staff; and managing redundancy.

Taking recruitment as an example, members will see that almost the entire process, from end to end, will be in the hands of the boards of governors. The role of the ESA will be one of providing support and advice, ratification of procedures and the formal action to put into effect the decision of a board of governors, which, of course, in relation to recruitment, simply means issuing the contract of employment.

Members may wish to ask, in such arrangements, how we will ensure that the ESA and boards of governors stick to their respective roles and that they each respect the role of the other. The answer is that clear legal duties will be placed on both, which are covered in clause 8(1) and 8(2) of the Bill. The boards of governors will be under a legal duty to comply with their own procedures, and the ESA will be under a legal duty to give effect to decisions that are made by boards of governors.

The ESA will not be allowed to unreasonably interfere in the day-to-day affairs of schools. Its ratification role will be limited to ensuring that the correct procedures have been followed and that a decision of a board of governors is not manifestly unreasonable. If the ESA were to feel that something had been handled incorrectly, it would be able to refer a matter back to a board of governors to be revisited. However, there is no question of the ESA second-guessing a decision or substituting its own decision for that of a board of governors. In summary, the ESA will not lawfully be able to refuse to put into effect any proper decision of a board of governors.

The paper also attempts to anticipate some of the questions that Committee members may have. The first of those is that if the ESA is formally the employer in law, could it initiate action without waiting for a board of governors? The answer to that is yes, but only in very serious and extreme circumstances. Those functions will be delegated to a board of governors. Therefore, it will not be for the ESA to initiate action unless a board of governors cannot, or will not, discharge its responsibilities.

The second key question is where the legal liability for employment matters might rest if something were to go wrong. That question is normally put to me as “who gets sued?”, and the answer is potentially everybody. If a complaint were made to a court or tribunal about an employment matter, those proceedings would be likely to include any body that has played a part in the matter that is the subject of the complaint. Therefore, in practice, if something were to go wrong, both the board of governors and the ESA would be likely to be involved in legal proceedings.

That is no different to the current collective employment arrangements, and it would not change the fact that liability for actions on boards of governors is collective; it is on the board of governors as an entity and not on individual governors.

That is a summary of the arrangements that the Department has proposed in the legislation. I can either pause at this point or move on to the concerns of the Governing Bodies Association (GBA).

The Chairperson: I think that we should deal with those concerns, because they are all related. Will you deal with those issues now? Members can then raise any questions that they might have.

Mr Stewart: The GBA, in commenting on those arrangements, has proposed two counter-arguments to the Department. First, it said that the arrangements would, in fact, constitute a loss of autonomy for the schools that it represents, and, secondly, it said that the arrangements would dilute or interfere with the important voluntary principle that exists in those schools.

On the issue of autonomy, the Department recognises that there is a genuine sense of loss on the part of the GBA. However, we question whether there is any real or practical loss of autonomy. That is because the boards of governors of those schools will remain responsible for the exercise of employment functions for those schools, and they will take employment decisions that the ESA will be under a legal duty to effect. As stated, the aim of the Department is not to reduce autonomy in employment matters, but to ensure that it is available to all schools on the basis of equality, rather than to some schools on the basis of historical differences in ownership.

In relation to the voluntary principle as described and set out by the GBA, the Department recognises that the voluntary principle embodies many good features. However, it is not convinced that those are unique to any one sector or type of school, or that it is incompatible with the employment arrangements that we propose.

To begin with, the term “voluntary school” is very broad. It includes schools that are employers in their own right — the voluntary grammar schools — and those that are part of collective employment arrangements, such as Catholic maintained schools. All of those are voluntary schools in law. All grant-aided schools have governors who discharge important and significant responsibilities in a voluntary capacity and all grant-aided schools, including voluntary grammar schools, are funded by the public purse to deliver a public service. They all do so on the basis of significant voluntary input from parents and communities.

Undoubtedly, many voluntary grammar schools are extremely successful, but the Department does not view that success as being limited to that sector, or, indeed, to any sector or school type. The most successful schools in any sector tend to be those that embody the voluntary principle; that is those that have a strong sense of belonging and being accountable to the pupils, the parents and the communities that they serve. The Department values the voluntary principle, but we do not accept that any strong case has been made for any particular group of grant-aided schools to have separate employment arrangements.

The Chairperson: Thank you. Obviously, that issue continues to be of concern. We want to reach a point where locally delegated autonomy is the reality, and, rather than its being a loss to some schools and a gain to others, every school will gain and will have the sense that they can make decisions. However, there is fear and concern that, somewhere among all of that, the voluntary principle and the schools that have exercised it will have a deficit, although other schools will consider it to be a great opportunity.

To return to the earlier discussion on equity and ensuring that everyone is treated fairly, one matter on which the Committee wants to be absolutely clear and sure is that delegated responsibility does what it says on the tin. We want to ensure that that is what schools get and that the way that they govern themselves will not be hampered or restricted.

Mr McGrath: Those are fair points. We do not want to do anything else. The general mood music that we are creating is about promoting autonomy for all schools. The extent to which they want to use it — for back up, and so on — is for them to decide. That is quite appropriate. We do not want to constrain any school.

The issues around the employing authority will, in fact, bring little difference for voluntary grammar schools. As Chris explained articulately, no particular sector has or should have a monopoly on voluntarism.

In a sense, that is what we aim to promote. Earlier, you made an analogy about controlled grammar schools. There is no reason why a controlled grammar school should not aspire to the same status and want to be in the same area of the pitch as a voluntary grammar school. We are trying to reach a point where all schools can aspire to that standard. Therefore, it aims to bring standards level, not widen them.

Mr Stewart: We recognise the concerns that you have expressed. They have been put to us by the GBA. That is why we have attempted in the legislation to build in safeguards and to go as far as possible towards dealing with those concerns. That is the reason for those admittedly complex and somewhat unusual arrangements. The key is that the level of delegation and the role of the board of governors are in schools' hands, not in ESA's hands, in order to guard against the danger of undue interference by ESA. We are aware that that issue concerns our colleagues in the voluntary grammar sector.

It has also been recognised that, in developing those arrangements, a one-size-fits-all approach will not do. There will be schools, perhaps, in any sector, that will want to take on the maximum level of delegation and assume all of those functions. However, equally, there may be schools in any sector — particularly smaller ones — that might want to leave much of that in ESA's hands. It will suit them simply to get on with the delivery of teaching and learning. That is an equally legitimate choice. Importantly, it is the choice of the school, not of ESA.

Mr O'Dowd: Some schools in the voluntary sector take me to the fair when they talk about their autonomy and their right to be voluntary. Although they want to spend tens of millions of pounds of taxpayers' money, they do not want taxpayers' representatives anywhere next or near them.

It has been the case previously in, for instance, the Catholic sector that a board of governors has set up an interview panel and gone through the paperwork. Does the CCMS ensure that the panel has been set up correctly and that the paperwork has been submitted? Does it ensure that all legal requirements have been fulfilled?

Mr Stewart: Yes.

Mr O'Dowd: Therefore, now that CCMS is going, will it be ESA's function — if a board of governors decides — to ensure that the legalities of the interview panel, and so on, have been fulfilled?

Mr McGrath: As we said earlier, ESA would provide human resources support locally in order to help, for instance, to frame job descriptions, and, perhaps, to sit in interview rooms to ensure that due process is carried out. That is normal procedure in any public-sector body.

Mr Stewart: It is very much the call of the board of governors. If it happens to have among its members a human resources professional or someone from that background, it may need little help and support to operate recruitment procedures.

On the other hand, if it does not, it may decide that they want a human resources professional from the ESA to sit with them at every stage of the process to ensure that they get it right. That is done as required and at the behest of the school.

Mr O'Dowd: Therefore the skills and knowledge base in a board of governors determines how much support it requires from the ESA. Given the nature of employment law, boards of governors would need to be on a pretty sure footing.

Mr McGrath: You are right — boards of governors will want to protect themselves. To be really sure, a board of governors would have to include a practitioner as opposed to someone who dabbled; however, it is the decision of individual boards of governors. The law of the land outlines requirements on fair employment, and every organisation wants to get its system right first time rather than have to be corrected.

Mr Stewart: That would be prudent. I have never been a school governor, but I have been a director of personnel. If I were a school governor, I would want an HR professional from the ESA beside me all the way.

Mr Poots: John's initial comments explain a great deal. Given that he has been taken to the fair quite often, and CCMS has adopted the policy that he talked about for many years, it is no surprise that he is so critical of the voluntary sector.

When schools appoint head teachers, they must send three names to the education and library boards after they have completed their processes. Is that nonsense going to end? Often, a school identifies the best candidate and has to take part in a lottery and hope that the education and library board chooses the same person.

Mr McGrath: That will end. You are correct — that situation is complete nonsense.

Mr Stewart: Schools will send one name, and the ESA will issue the contract to that person.

Mr B McCrea: It strikes me that your issue is with the GBA because you have to reassure it that you will not take away its autonomy. If you can sort that out, the basic principles are fine.

Mr McGrath: We think so. In discussions about resources we have spoken about funding for classroom assistants in voluntary, grammar and grant-maintained integrated schools, because the pay award was for education and library boards, but it has not applied to those schools. The Minister has adopted the principle that those assistants are doing the same work as their counterparts in education and library board schools and, morally, should be paid the same rate. That almost reflects the spirit of a single employing authority and a single set of terms and conditions. If the GBA wanted to be different, one could argue that it should stay in a position where it pays its own rates. Therefore there is a contradiction between the arguments being put in the Committee for the workforce and the view that a different employing authority outside the system would lead to different terms and conditions. Otherwise what would be the point?

Mr B McCrea: The point is the perceived loss of autonomy. There is nothing more central to the ethos of a body than the staff that it recruits. We acknowledge where the problem lies, and we need to find a resolution.

John made sweeping statements about grammar schools —

Mr O'Dowd: I commented on some schools in the voluntary sector.

Mr B McCrea: We want schools to have governors who reflect their communities and who can select staff who are in keeping with the ethos of a school. That is one of the great strengths of the system that we want to maintain.

Mr O'Dowd: We want boards of governors to appoint staff who are qualified for the job and who passed an interview.

Mr B McCrea: There was a debate some time ago about whether we need to return to first principles. Do I need to premise my remarks with a statement that I support the Union?

The Chairperson: I remind Committee members that the meeting is being recorded by Hansard.

Mr B McCrea: I am trying to make the point that I am interested in identifying the areas in which we can move forward and those in which we cannot.

I support the general principle of helping schools to select teachers that they believe are in keeping with their ethos and of relieving them of the inconsistencies and burdens of associated legal matters. However, I am concerned that that principle could be perceived as a Trojan Horse to allow the Administration of the day to dictate to schools whom they should employ or what they should do. We understand the issue and we must find a way of resolving it.

Mr McGrath: You said that there is a genuine perception that there has been a reduction in autonomy. As long as they stick to the general parameters of the law of the land and to their management scheme, there should be no less autonomy for a voluntary grammar school in appointing staff. As with all such matters, the difference between perception and reality is critical.

Mr B McCrea: John, I am in danger of being far too reasonable, but I agree with you.

Mr McGrath: Thank you. We should quit while we are ahead.

The Chairperson: Clause 8(3), "Effect of employment scheme", states:

"Where ESA is of the opinion that a decision of the Board of Governors on any matter which falls to be taken in accordance with such a scheme was taken otherwise than in accordance with the scheme," — And this is the important part:

"ESA may require the Board of Governors to reconsider that matter."

However, paragraph 11 of our briefing paper states that the ESA cannot lawfully refuse to put into effect any proper decision of a board of governors. Can you explain that contradiction?

Mr Stewart: There is no contradiction.

The Chairperson: It is good Civil Service speak.

Mr Stewart: It is a precise use of language.

Mr McGrath: It means that if the ESA has reason to believe, or there is evidence, that a decision has not been taken properly, it would have a duty to intervene. For example, if there was evidence of partiality or if something did not stack up, it would be appropriate for the ESA to intervene; that is entirely consistent with the provisions of the Bill and what is in the briefing paper. If proper decisions are taken in a proper manner, they will not be subject to second-guessing by the ESA.

Mr Stewart: Even if a board of governors were not to act properly, the ESA's power to intervene is limited to asking it to repeat the process.

Mr D Bradley: On 2 May 2008, the Governing Bodies Association told the Committee that the freedom of individual schools to make local-level decisions in the interests of children will be severely constrained by the vast powers that are proposed for the ESA.

In addition, the association outlined four basic principles: voluntary schools' ownership of buildings and properties; the right of boards of governors to govern schools; their right to employ and dismiss staff; their right to procure materials and equipment deemed necessary for the running of a school; and the right to determine a school's ethos, character and activities.

Recently, the Committee received further correspondence from the GBA; it is still not convinced that the ESA will be a benign force in the operation of its schools. Therefore it appears that the Department of Education has yet to convince the GBA of the ESA's benefits to its members or in general. What is your response to the points made by the GBA on 2 May 2008 and to its concerns?

Mr Stewart: Taking the GBA's points seriatim, school ownership — the most straightforward one to deal with — will not change in any way. You are right that we have yet to convince its members that the arrangements will maintain boards of governors' right to make decisions concerning the employment and dismissal of staff and everything in between. The ESA's role will be to ratify proceedings and to do the paperwork. Forgive me, but I have forgotten the other two points.

Mr D Bradley: The procurement of equipment and materials necessary for the proper running of schools.

Mr Stewart: Procurement procedures will not change in response to the review of public administration; they will change in response to the requirements of public-procurement law, which is largely driven by EU legislation.

Nothing in the RPA will change that. Voluntary grammar schools will not be affected, and they will not be subject to any changes in procurement that any other publicly funded authority that delivers a public service will not also experience.

Mr D Bradley: My other point concerned a school's right to determine its ethos, character and activities.

Mr Stewart: We have tried to ensure that ethos is properly reflected by building it into the arrangements concerning the role of the submitting authority and through the proposal that schools be responsible for developing schemes of employment and schemes of management. You are correct that we have not convinced schools. Perhaps our next move to attempt to convince them will be to say that we recognise that the GBA will want to see the detailed guidance on those schemes and what the model of the schemes might look like.

Perhaps the GBA could offer its suggestions for a model scheme to the Department. We would find it helpful if the GBA were to set down what it would expect from a scheme and the sorts of the protections that it would wish to underpin the role of its boards of governors. We are more than happy to continue to work with the GBA, as we are with any sector or group of schools, to ensure that we can put in place the safeguards for ethos, identity and character that it wants.

Mr D Bradley: The GBA also said that about 62% of the general education budget in Northern Ireland finds its way into schools whereas 80% of the education budget in England reaches schools. The GBA is of the view that it is unlikely that the establishment of the ESA will increase that figure to anywhere near the figure for England and Wales.

Mr McGrath: I am not sure that we agree with the figures of 62% and 80%; it depends on the currency that is used. More than 62% of the education budget is spent in the classroom, although the route by which it gets to the classroom is, in some cases, a bit more confusing. The ESA was aimed at making savings in administration, and, already, £20 million will be saved, predicated on the outline business case. We see that the ESA will make further savings, so there is a direct contradiction between the GBA's view and the Department's. Those savings are happening, because £20 million is predicated on the outline business case, and the budget settlement envisages that already.

Mr Stewart: The curriculum advice and support (CAS) service, for example, is staffed by capable and dedicated individuals who work extremely hard; nevertheless, some schools say that it does not deliver the services that they want. The CAS budget is between £30 million and £40 million a year. That is money that, at least in part, we need to move from the ESA into schools or into groups of schools.

In future, instead of CAS offering its services whether they are needed or not, scope must be left for schools, groups of schools or learning communities to come together to ask for some of that money to procure or deliver those services themselves. Schools or groups of schools may fund and take forward their professional development in a way that is specifically tailored to the needs at the point of development that those schools have reached. Instead of CAS being a one-size-fits-all service, a move could be made to a model in which schools commission, first and foremost, from the ESA but procure and provide professional development services themselves.

Mr D Bradley: The GBA might argue that the best that the ESA can offer is maximum supported autonomy. The GBA might say that since schools have that already, the ESA offers no advantage. It may ask why it should give up some of its functions when it does not gain anything from the ESA.

Mr Stewart: From time to time, the GBA articulates its argument in that way. The GBA does not always recognise that although it represents institutions that are privately owned, they are publicly funded and deliver a public service. When many of those institutions came into being — in some cases, hundreds of years ago — they were private institutions that delivered a private service. That is no longer the case, and they must recognise the need for equality and consistency across the delivery of the public education service.

Mr D Bradley: The GBA would argue that the Department has the right to send the Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI) into any of its schools at any time to carry out a full inspection. It would argue, therefore, that its schools are accountable to the Department and to the public.

Mr Stewart: They are accountable and amenable to ETI inspection, but there are other dimensions of accountability. They are accountable to staff across the education system; we are all accountable to staff and have a duty to staff to ensure equality, consistency and commonality of best practice in employment.

Mr D Bradley: Is there evidence that that is not the case at present in voluntary grammar schools?

Mr Stewart: There is some evidence of a lack of consistency and of an information deficit. Neither the Department nor the ESA, when it comes into being, could reassure the Committee that there is consistency because of the fragmented arrangements that we have.

Mr D Bradley: Are the discrepancies in equality not being addressed? Does the Department not have a right to ask voluntary grammar schools to address those discrepancies?

Mr Stewart: We have a right to ask them to address discrepancies, but we feel that there is a systematic issue that needs to be addressed. We need to move to effective, consistent, single-employer arrangements rather than those that obtain at present. That would be the best safeguard and the best means of addressing those issues.

Mr D Bradley: Are you saying that there is a lack of consistency in the arrangements for employment in voluntary schools and that that is leading to inequality for staff?

Mr Stewart: We have anecdotal evidence of an inconsistency of approach across education. We do not have enough information, so I cannot give you figures. I cannot give you specific examples because the current arrangements are not amenable to our having sufficient information even to know whether we have, or are moving towards, greater consistency or equality.

Mr D Bradley: Have you no means of getting that information?

Mr Stewart: Not at present.

Mr Lunn: Paragraph 13 deals with legal liabilities for employment matters. There seems to be some change in who is responsible or against whom action might be taken. I have read the paragraph half a dozen times and cannot get my head round it. Does it say that at the moment individual governors cannot be sued or that under the new arrangements they could not be sued individually?

Mr Stewart: Both; the position will not change. The liability for governors in employment matters is collective not individual. Therefore, if the decision of a board of governors is wrong according to employment law, the board of governors as an entity must answer for it. Any penalty is applied to the board of governors.

Mr Lunn: Therefore, neither now nor in the future can individual governors be liable.

Mr Stewart: That is extremely important. We recognise that school governors undertake at present and in future very important tasks on a voluntary basis. From time to time, members have expressed concern about the supply of suitable, qualified people to serve as governors, and it is important that they are not put off by a fear of being individually liable for the consequences of actions that they might take in good faith as a member of a board of governors.

Mr B McCrea: I want to return to your response to one of Dominic's questions. It is significant that the GBA and the schools think that they are doing pretty well under the present system, yet you are asking them to give up something for nothing. Your response was that they are publicly funded bodies and that they will just have to get used to it. That is an unhelpful approach. It is important that you win over people and convince them that there is benefit in what you are doing. My party's opposition stems from our belief that although your words may be sweet, your attitude may alter once change has been implemented. If you allow that belief to develop, you will have a very difficult job. It is important that we find commonality and address legitimate concerns.

Mr Stewart: That is a fair point. In attempting to set out our position candidly, I would not want to give you the impression that we simply set our faces against the GBA and that we would not continue to engage with it to convince it of the benefits of the proposed changes. We will try to build in additional safeguards if they are required to deal with the GBA's concerns.

I contend that we have already done so to a great degree. The employment arrangements that we have proposed are unusual, to say the least, which reflects the fact that we have gone a considerable distance in building in safeguards. That has resulted in a complex model and complex arrangements, but that is legitimate because of the points that the GBA has raised.

Mr O'Dowd: In general, Basil's points are fair enough, but there is also an onus on the GBA to approach the matter with an open mind and not from an entrenched point of view of not wishing to be convinced. If there are genuine concerns — and I assume that there are — they must be responded to. If the GBA can develop a scheme or draft guidance of which the Department can take heed, that would be a very good, open proposal. However, there is an onus on both sides to approach the matter open-mindedly.

Mr B McCrea: Would you permit a response?

The Chairperson: Yes, briefly.

Mr B McCrea: Many voluntary schools will consider the effectiveness with which they run their schools and educational affairs and compare it to what they see happen in other Government-led bodies. The voluntary schools will conclude that it is they who have adopted good practice, not the other way round.

I will make my next comment through the Chairperson. I am not sure that people really listen to the concerns that are raised here or whether they simply bat them back and forward. I have heard some legitimate concerns that I am trying to articulate, and I am sure that any reasonable person would be prepared to listen to arguments. I cannot speak for the GBA, but I am sure that if it was reassured and if we examined matters, it would respond in the right way. The danger is, John, that people sometimes do not get to the nub of a concern and therefore focus on other issues. If reasonable proposals come forward, it behoves everybody — the GBA included — to listen attentively to them and accept them.

Mr Lunn: I think that there is a word missing in paragraph 14, page 61, and that is causing confusion. It says that “this does alter the position”, whereas I think that it should read that it does not alter it.

Mr Stewart: You are quite right.

The Chairperson: Well spotted, Trevor. You win the prize today.

Mr Stewart: A very important “not” is missing.

Mr D Bradley: I want to follow up on a point that you made earlier that there was unequal treatment of staff in voluntary grammar schools. That is a serious allegation, which, you say, the Department has no powers to investigate. Can you give examples of that inequality?

Mr Stewart: To be fair, I said that there was anecdotal evidence that there is an inconsistency of approach, but I would not go so far as to say that there is unequal treatment of staff. That would be a very serious allegation indeed.

Mr D Bradley: I thought that you mentioned inequality.

Mr Stewart: I think that I said that there is an inconsistency of approach that could give rise to inequality.

Mr D Bradley: That was not my understanding of what you said.

Mr Stewart: I am grateful for the opportunity to clarify.

Mr D Bradley: We can check the Hansard report in any case.

The Chairperson: Earlier, you said that the GBA could, if it wanted, propose recommendations or suggestions regarding the employment schemes. However, the briefing paper says that detailed guidance on model schemes will be developed in the coming months and will be made available to us. Is there still time for that to happen and for an exchange of views on schemes? Is that work ongoing?

Mr McGrath: Yes, it is ongoing, but it is not set in concrete. The guidance on a model scheme might suggest what its key components might be, but one would still have to decide what the model scheme would be. Nothing is precluded.

There is still scope for iteration and dialogue. Further to Basil’s helpful points, we have to address the real problems and the existing perceptions.

Education has a significant workforce that requires strategic planning, but that is not available to date. A single employing authority will address that shortfall by, for instance, balancing recruitment and supply and demand. One way in which the Minister wants to raise standards is to improve the quality of teaching. That will require strategic drivers for all the workforces that are involved, and that could be planned.

It is critical not to miss the strategic dimension when dealing with the issues at local employment level. Workforce planning, establishing a balance between what teachers and classroom assistants do and deciding whether there is scope to change the barriers or adopt new approaches need to be addressed strategically. If actions are to be taken on those issues, everyone must move at the one time. It is important to keep that dimension. That is one of the pluses of the single employer system, and it needs to be fed into the equation.

Mr Stewart: The door will not close on employment schemes. Model schemes will be produced, but schools will not be obliged to take them. They can take them off the peg and adopt or adapt them or they can come up with their own schemes — if they wish — provided that they are in accordance with the policy.

The Chairperson: Chris, you can speak on the opportunities for teaching staff and the review.

Mr Stewart: I will be as brief as I can, as I am conscious of the pressure on your time. On several occasions, members expressed concern about the exemption of teacher recruitment from the provisions of the Fair Employment and Treatment (Northern Ireland) Order 1998 and about the related issue of the requirement to possess a certificate in religious studies as an eligibility criterion for some posts in Catholic schools.

It is worth emphasising two important points. Any changes to the Fair Employment and Treatment (Northern Ireland) Order 1998 will be a matter for the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister (OFMDFM) to consider. Before any decisions are taken on that matter, the Minister of Education has said that there should be a thorough public consultation and that the matter should be considered by the Executive and advice sought from the Equality Commission.

It is also worth reminding members that even if that exemption were removed and if teacher recruitment were brought fully within the parameters of the Fair Employment and Treatment (Northern Ireland) Order 1998, it is likely that the requirement to possess a certificate could continue to be lawfully applied in relation to some posts where it is a genuine occupational requirement of the post.

Nevertheless, the Minister has recognised — and takes seriously — the concern expressed by members about the potential for inequality. Therefore she has decided that there will be a review of teaching opportunities for teaching staff, for which the terms of reference have been suggested, and we welcome the Committee's views on them. They are set out in the paper. Departmental officials will forecast the number of teaching vacancies that are likely to arise over the next three years. They should be analysed by school-type and sector so that we have good, reliable and robust information about the future.

Officials will also have to estimate the proportion of those vacancies for which a certificate in religious studies is likely to be an eligibility criterion and identify the routes by which teachers might obtain a certificate — either as part of their teacher education or subsequently. Furthermore, officials will identify any barriers to obtaining a certificate that could give rise to inequality and make recommendations, as appropriate, on measures to promote equality of opportunities for teachers.

Members will see that the approach suggested and the terms of reference take as their starting point the recognition of the reality that the requirement for certificates is likely to continue, at least for some posts. Therefore we feel that the best way to address the Committee's concerns is to examine and ensure that there are no barriers to any teacher obtaining the necessary certificate if they wish and, therefore, being eligible to apply and take up a post in any school.

On completion of the review, the Minister will advise the Committee of the outcome.

The Chairperson: Are we back to the same argument that we discussed earlier? This is not about the potential for inequality; it is about an inequality that has to be addressed. It is not about removing barriers to obtaining the certificate — nobody is saying that anyone is ineligible to obtain a certificate. It is the use of that certificate, in the generic sense, that could be used to discriminate against people of a different religion who do not have it. For instance, the certificate in religious studies is not specific to anyone who wants to teach geography or mathematics.

An argument could be made that the certificate is necessary for the teaching of religious education, which is a sensitive issue. You referred to the Minister talking about the potential for inequality, but the problem is not the potential for inequality; it is about addressing an existing inequality.

Mr Stewart: Before we draw any firm conclusions on that, we would like to have much better information to present to the Committee about which posts have such a requirement attached to them, because we simply do not have definitive information. I am sure that, as part of the review, the Committee expects us to present a clear picture of where that requirement is, or might be, applied.

Mr McCausland: We are told that the certificate is a requirement for some teaching posts in Catholic schools. My understanding is that it is also a requirement for some posts in integrated schools, where children are being prepared for first communion. Why is that not included in the briefing paper?

Mr Stewart: That is an omission that I am happy to correct.

Mr McCausland: People have come to my office and told me that they had been unable to apply for teaching posts in integrated schools. Of all the things, it seems most bizarre that they were excluded from an integrated school.

I notice that the review will take a year. In the meantime, is it possible for you to supply the Committee with some simple, easily accessible information? For example, information on how the certificates are obtained — the teacher who came to me was able to explain that in about five minutes. We would also appreciate information from CCMS, for example, regarding its estimate of the percentage of teaching posts in Roman Catholic schools for which the certificate is required.

Mr Stewart: We should be able to bring that information to the Committee very soon and will not dither in doing so. In relation to the routes for obtaining a certificate, I understand that student teachers at Stranmillis can obtain a certificate by distance learning, which is provided, I believe, by Glasgow University. However, it seems that there is a route for teachers in initial teacher education going through Stranmillis.

However, it is not clear whether an already qualified and practicing teacher who, for whatever reason, did not obtain a certificate, has an easy and straightforward route to getting one now. If that is not the case, there would be a barrier for qualified and practicing teachers, and we must consider how that barrier might be overcome.

Mr McCausland: I was led to understand that the distance-learning route was not as simple as might first appear.

Mr Stewart: That is why, rather than offering the Committee a bland reassurance that a route exists, we want to get detailed information about how that opportunity is provided, how is it funded, to whom it is available, and whether it is a real opportunity or whether it merely appears to be one. We must discover whether a barrier exists.

There is information that we can get to the Committee quickly. We recognise the seriousness of your concern and that is why we want to get to the bottom of the issue.

Mr McCausland: It would be useful to have that information soon rather than wait to the end of the year.

Mr Stewart: I do not envisage the review taking a year — the paper says that it would be complete before 1 January 2010, but we expect it to be completed long before then.

Mr McCausland: Will the information that we request be available within a couple of weeks?

Mr Stewart: Yes.

Mr B McCrea: Has the Minister agreed that there will be a significant change on this matter? Whereas a certificate was once required for a wide range of posts, it will now be required only for posts for which it is relevant.

Mr Stewart: I do not think that that is in the Minister's power to agree. While teacher recruitment remains outside the Fair Employment and Treatment (Northern Ireland) Order 1998, that requirement can be applied in — if I may use the phrase — a blanket fashion. If the exemption were removed and teacher recruitment brought under the 1998 Order, it would be incumbent on individual schools to justify the need for such a requirement in relation to every post to which they wish to apply it as an eligibility criterion.

I do not think that we can say how much difference that would make without researching where the requirement applies and where it might apply in future.

Mr B McCrea: We have spoken anecdotally. There is potential for structural inequality in the requirement to have a certificate in religious education, even if it does not relate directly to a subject.

Mr Stewart: In order for there to be a structural inequality, two conditions would have to obtain: one, that the requirement was being applied in the way that you have described; and two, that a group of teachers was denied the opportunity to meet that requirement. We do not look at either/or of those things; we look at them both. We need to provide the Committee with information on how and where the requirement is applied and how and where teachers can satisfy it.

Mr B McCrea: I agree with your analysis that both conditions must be met. From what I have gathered, is the Minister's position that if that was found to be the case, it would not be acceptable and a way would have to be found of dealing with it?

Mr Stewart: I think that that is a reasonable description. I do not think that we would have agreed to such a review were not a clear intention to remedy any deficiencies or problems that it uncovered.

The Chairperson: That brings us to a conclusion of our discussion. I thank Chris, John and Joe for their attendance.

Mr B McCrea: Chairman, do you not think that Joe gets a very easy ride?

Mr Stewart: He does not; he works me by remote control.

Mr Joe Reynolds (Department of Education): A swan glides only because of what happens under the surface.

The Chairperson: I would like to deal the motion to extend. Members will remember that the 30 days' referral stage of the Bill to the Committee that began on 8 December 2008 ends on 15 February 2009. Therefore the Committee must agree an end date for the Committee Stage today so that the Bill can go as a Committee motion for debate in the Assembly on 2 February or 3 February. The end date for Committee Stage is the last date that the Committee must report to the Assembly on its scrutiny of the Bill.

I remind members that the Committee sought a single-Bill approach. We have the unique situation of having two Bills as part of one legislative programme. As the Committee heard from officials on 10 December, they must earn the Committee's confidence on the first Bill and on the development of the second Bill, which will not be introduced into the Assembly until just before the summer recess.

I also remind members that when I raised with senior officials the need to have the first Bill on the statute books by the summer recess, it was recognised that that date was an aim and that it is a matter for the Committee to decide. This is a significant and complex Bill to be enacted by the summer recess. In light of that, I propose that we extend Committee Stage until Wednesday 30 September.

The Committee would does not wish to delay the Bill unduly — I reiterate what I said in the Hansard report of 10 December 2008 — this is not a delaying tactic. We will continue to work. Over the past weeks we have seen the magnitude of what is before us, but we must ensure that we have allayed all the concerns that have been expressed and that the integrity of the Committee — as its legislative requirements are to scrutinise a Bill — is maintained and upheld. Therefore I make that proposal. Is everyone content?

Mr O'Dowd: In effect, by delaying Committee Stage until September — whatever the Committee's intention may be — the Bill will be delayed. Are you suggesting that the Committee's approach is to have one Bill?

The Chairperson: The Committee has expressed a concern. It would have preferred one Bill, although there will be two; but we have not seen the second Bill. However, the Department has given a commitment that it will present us with that information. I am reiterating the Committee's concern about having two Bills. I am not saying that we must have one Bill; we are on course for two Bills.

Mr O'Dowd: I appreciate that clarification. Given the many months — if not years — of discussions on the Education Bill, we feel that there is no need for a lengthy extension, such as the Chairperson has proposed, and we are concerned that an extension to September will cause delay. If the Committee were to set itself a course of all-day meetings instead of half-day meetings — which many other Committees have to do when scrutinising Bills — it could complete its legislative scrutiny much sooner than September.

The Chairperson: That is not precluded by a date of the end of September.

Mr D Bradley: Extending to the end of September — all things being well — would not preclude the establishment of the ESA by January 2010.

The Chairperson: It would not. If we did what was recorded in the Hansard report of 10 December, that would not be the case. I refer members to Chris Stewart's comments of 10 December.

Mr D Bradley: Getting the work done before that will entail close co-operation between the Department and the Committee; papers would have to arrive with us in good time to be considered.

The Chairperson: Yes.

Mr Lunn: Two aspects are involved: one is that we carry out a proper scrutiny of the Bill; the other is that we get a chance to see the second Bill before we agree the first one. I do not know how long it takes to scrutinise a Bill — this will be the first Bill that I have ever scrutinised. We received a copy of the first Bill in draft form in June 2008, and we did not see the final Bill until December 2008. I wonder when we will see a draft of the second Bill, never mind the final Bill. That could have a significant effect on our thinking and how long scrutiny will take. From now until the end of September seems a long time to scrutinise a Bill. If there were no second Bill, how long would it take us to scrutinise a Bill? Would it take nine months? I doubt it.

The Chairperson: The Committee for Health, Social Services and Public Safety took five months to scrutinise a Bill.

Mr McGrath: It is the Department's intention to have a draft Bill available as soon as possible. John wrote to say that you want us to talk about area-based planning and the ownership of the controlled estate. There will be a dialogue about components of the Bill and we will paint a picture of the issues in a matter of weeks, so there will be early transparency about the provisions envisaged in the Bill and how they will work. That is what the Committee wants to know. That work will start soon.

The legislative timetable for getting the Bill on the books must be taken into account. There is also the operational timetable, involving issues such as the appointment of staff, which could not be delayed too late in the year.

As Dominic said, if there were to be prolonged scrutiny, some of the preparatory work, such as appointing a chairperson, establishing structures and creating second-tier posts should commence over the summer. Otherwise, although the ESA could legally come into existence on 1 January it would be unable to operate.

Mr McCausland: Our choice of date is prudent. The onus is on the Department to respond promptly. The quicker the Department provides information, the sooner we will achieve our goals. The Committee is not in control of that matter.

Mr B McCrea: It is a complex situation. The Education Bill, unlike the Health and Social Care (Reform) Bill, is particularly contentious, and there are strong views on its provisions. Today's session was helpful in identifying issues. If issues such as area-based planning can be resolved to our satisfaction, it is more likely that the Bill will receive a proper passage in the Chamber. We should not underestimate the difficulties, and therefore we need as much time as possible to hear other bodies' opinions because folk need reassurances. The sooner we complete that process, the sooner we can finalise a report.

I have stated the Ulster Unionist Party position, which Michelle McIlveen usually refers to as a party-political speech. We oppose the Bill because we fear that unidentified issues might arise; however, if those issues are resolved, progress can be made. A process of engagement provides the best way forward. Therefore we support the Chairperson's proposal.

The Chairperson: I want to clarify the position. Issues of area planning and the controlled estate are not included in the first Bill but are in the second Bill; they are tabled for 4 and 11 February. As John McGrath said, I included those issues in the work programme to ensure that the Committee will have commenced that dialogue before 20 February, which is the closing date for consultations on the first Bill.

As Chairperson, I want to ensure that the necessary preparatory work and the scrutiny of the provisions of the second Bill are not delayed until an unknown end date and that the Committee examines the two Bills coherently and holistically. That provides a safeguard. It is not a signal to the Department or anybody else that we intend to drag our feet. The Committee will work hard to address the issues, raise concerns and achieve resolutions. It will be useful if the spirit shown in the past two weeks continues. Do members agree with my proposal?

Mr O'Dowd: No. Sinn Féin counter-proposes 1 June as the date for extension.

Mrs O'Neill: John O'Dowd's suggestion demonstrates an intention to extend to 1 June; however, there is nothing to preclude the Committee from asking for a further extension at that stage.

Mr McCausland: It is not possible to ask for a second extension.

The Chairperson: Under Standing Orders, I can request an extension in the House only once. Therefore if the Committee identified problems at a later date, it could not request a further extension.

An extension to the end of September will give us all in the Committee a safeguard. We do not envisage that anything will arise, but if it does we have given ourselves that protection. I have only one opportunity, as Chairperson of the Committee, to ask for an extension of the Committee Stage. The protocol is to take a vote on the latter proposal first.

NORTHERN IRELAND ASSEMBLY

Friday 12 December 2008

Written Answers to Questions

OFFICE OF THE FIRST MINISTER AND DEPUTY FIRST MINISTER

Public Sector Job Location

Mr Durkan asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister to set out the Department's plans to decentralise Departmental employment and operations of its agencies to locations outside Belfast. (AQW 2202/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister (Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness): We are currently considering the content and implications of Professor George Bain's Independent Review on the Location of Public Sector Jobs alongside various other relevant issues and public policy considerations.

Brownlow, Craigavon: Recent Violence

Mr O'Dowd asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister what support and assistance it has offered local statutory agencies and local communities in overcoming the effects of recent violence on community life in the Brownlow area of Craigavon. (AQW 2870/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: On 18th November, Junior Minister Donaldson and Junior Minister Kelly met with representatives from local government, local statutory bodies, Department of Education and PSNI officers about the disturbances involving young people over recent months in and around the Craigavon/Brownlow area.

Ministers were briefed on the disturbances in order that they could identify issues where they could facilitate or support efforts to put in place appropriate responses in order to reduce tensions.

Ministers are continuing to monitor the situation in Craigavon and will meet with local representatives in this area to ascertain how the local initiatives are progressing and are reducing tensions.

Annual Reports — OFMDFM Staff

Mr Simpson asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister how many staff in its Department did not receive an acceptable mark in their annual report for the last reporting year. (AQW 2981/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: No member of staff received an unacceptable mark in their annual report for the last reporting year.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister what contribution it has made or will be making to the consultation by the UK Department of Work and Pensions on reservations to the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with disabilities. (AQW 2995/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: In December 2006, officials from the Department of Work and Pensions contacted our officials about the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (the Convention). OFMDFM assumed lead responsibility for progressing this issue and wrote to other Departments on 2 January 2007 to ask them to scrutinise their legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check their compatibility with the provisions of the Convention. This was to enable the UK Government to make an informed decision about the ratification of the Convention and to identify any need for reservations or interpretative declarations.

Further, on the 26 September 2008, Departments were asked to confirm whether they had any difficulty with the areas of competency covered by the Convention and to confirm how they had arrived at their policy position. Officials concluded that, based on a working knowledge of their respective Department's policies, practices and legislation and their Department's statutory duties and compliance with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, as amended, and Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998, the Convention was unlikely to impose any additional requirements.

Finally, we will be bringing forward a paper to the Executive next month to inform them of the progress made in ratifying the convention.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister what preparations it has made for the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. (AQW 2997/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: Since January 2007, officials within OFMDFM have taken the lead in preparing for implementation here of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (the Convention). The preparations have included:-

- Asking Departments to scrutinise their legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check their compatibility with the provisions of the Convention and to confirm whether they had any difficulty with the areas of competency covered by the Convention and how they had arrived at their policy position;
- Conducting formal and informal discussions with the Northern Ireland Human Rights Commission (NIHRC) and the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland (ECNI) about being designated jointly as a Monitoring Body as required by Article 33 (2) of the Convention;
- Ongoing formal and informal discussions with relevant officials from the Office of Disability Issues (which is within the Department of Work and Pensions) (ODI); and with representatives from NIHRC and ECNI; and representatives from Disability Action on wider implementation issues.

Finally, our officials are intending to organise an event, in conjunction with Disability Action and ODI, early in the New Year to discuss the Convention with interested parties.

Loan Charges/Mortgage Repayments

Mr W Clarke asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister when it meets with the local banking sector, if it would consider discussing lowering (i) loan charges for small businesses experiencing difficulties; and (ii) mortgage payments for people. (AQW 3141/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: As part of our series of 'Cost of Living' meetings we met with the representatives of the local Banking sector on 21st July 2008. The purpose of this meeting was to gather information on the impact of the present difficult financial situation on local social and economic interests.

We are committed to doing all we can to minimise the impact of the economic downturn on local people and businesses. We are examining all of the possible measures at our disposal. While banking is a reserved matter we are also prepared to have further meetings with the local banks if necessary. In such an event we will raise the matters you have raised.

Positive Relations Project

Mr McKay asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister to provide an update on the Positive Relations project that was submitted by Loughgiel Community Association. (AQW 3174/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: We have been requested to consider 5 project applications which have been referred by the Special European Union Programmes Body under delegated authority requirements. These relate to PEACE III, Priority 1.1 (Building positive relationships at the local level).

These are under active consideration, which includes a review of the full economic appraisals, and we shall reply to SEUPB at the earliest opportunity.

European Commission: Meetings

Mr B McCrea asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister what meetings it has had with representatives of the European Commission since restoration of devolution. (AQO 1505/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: There is an ongoing positive relationship between the Department's Ministers and officials and the European Commission. Commission President Barroso visited Belfast shortly before restoration and announced the establishment of a Task Force that will help us make the most of the opportunities that the EU offers. Since then, Ministers from our Department have met with Commissioners or senior Commission officials 8 times in Brussels and 3 times in Belfast. There has also been extensive engagement between our officials and Commission officials as the Task Force report, and the Action Plan that sets out our response to it, are developed. We aim to secure Executive agreement to the Action Plan early next year and hope to visit Brussels in the New Year to present the document to the European Commission.

We are committed to increasing our engagement with all the European Institutions, including the European Parliament, whose President, Hans-Gert Pöttering, visited here two weeks ago.

A list of meetings between OFMDFM and representatives of the European Commission will be sent to the Member and a copy placed in the library of the House.

Investment Strategy: Opportunities for the Construction Industry

Mr Brolly asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister how the roll-out of the Investment Strategy will be accelerated to provide opportunities for the construction industry. (AQO 1606/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: The present difficulties that are affecting the construction industry are a key concern to the Executive at this time, as was made clear to the Assembly two weeks ago during a debate on this issue.

We commissioned the Strategic Investment Board to advise us on how we could best use the Investment Strategy to provide practical help to the construction industry at this time. SIB has now reported its findings and we are urgently examining the range of options open to us to accelerate projects within the available funding envelope.

The Minister of Finance and Personnel will shortly be advising the Executive on the December monitoring round, including his assessment of the amount of capital funding available for the remainder of 2008-09. With the advice we have now received from SIB, we are prepared to bring forward worthwhile projects if funding becomes available through the surrender of reduced requirements by departments.

We are also looking at the position for 2009-10 and beyond in the context of the Strategic Stocktake.

As part of December Monitoring and the Strategic Stocktake we will also consider the opportunities to make use of the flexibility to accelerate up to £86.5 million funding for investment in the local economy over the next two years as a result of the Chancellor's Pre Budget Report.

MEPs: Meetings

Mr Cobain asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister how many times it has met with Northern Ireland elected MEPs since restoration of devolution. (AQO 1513/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: A list of meetings between OFMDFM and MEPs is set out in the following tables.

Strategic Investment Board: Appointment of Replacements

Mr Boylan asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the process for appointing replacements to the Strategic Investment Board. (AQO 1555/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: We are presently considering the appointment of replacements to the Board of the Strategic Investment Board.

European Parliament: Visit of President

Mr W Clarke asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister for its assessment of the visit by the President of the European Parliament to Parliament Buildings on Monday 24 November 2008. (AQO 1602/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: We were very pleased to welcome European Parliament President Hans Gert Pöttering to Belfast on 23 and 24 November 2008.

President Pöttering met representatives of many different faiths and heard their experiences of bringing communities together. We had a very useful discussion with President Pöttering covering a wide range of issues including cultural integration, the current economic challenges, our particular task of resolving the education transfer issue and our response to the European Commission Taskforce on Northern Ireland. President Pöttering demonstrated great interest in what has happened in Northern Ireland and indicated his willingness to help us in whatever way he can.

President Pöttering addressed the Northern Ireland Assembly and expressed himself honoured to do so as head of one of the three institutions of the European Union. President Pöttering highlighted the importance of the European project in contributing to the process of peace. His speech also covered the challenges for the European Union in the areas of economic stability, climate change and ratification of the Lisbon Treaty.

We were delighted to be able to show good examples of peace and reconciliation work to President Pöttering by facilitating project visits in Belfast and Lisburn and by hosting an evening reception when the President was able to talk to many representatives of civil society who have done excellent work throughout Northern Ireland. The primary themes of the President's visit were inter-parliamentary and inter-cultural dialogue with an emphasis on work with young people.

We regard this as a very significant visit and a very successful one. President Pöttering has told us how impressed he was with what he saw and heard during his visit. He has also given us a firm indication of his support for our European objectives, in particular as we progress to implement the recommendations of the European Commission Taskforce on Northern Ireland. This includes our wish to share with others our experiences in peace and reconciliation. We intend to avail of this offer of support as we develop our proposals for such a facility.

Child Poverty: Rising Energy Costs

Mr Durkan asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister what action it is taking to deal with the implications of rising energy costs on targets to eradicate child poverty. (AQO 1531/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: We continue to be concerned at the impact of all recent cost increases, including rising energy costs, although it is not possible at present to assess precisely what those impacts will be. However, work is in progress which will examine how the purchasing power of different households has changed as a result of recent increases in retail prices. This work is due to report in early January 2009.

The Executive remains determined however to meet our PFG commitments to:

- work towards the elimination of child poverty in Northern Ireland by 2020 and reducing child poverty by 50% by 2010; and
- to work towards the elimination of severe child poverty by 2012.

To take this work forward, a cross departmental group has recently been established. The aim of the cross-departmental group is to ensure a comprehensive and cohesive focus on the issue of Child Poverty in Northern Ireland.

More specifically, the sub-group's work will include the consideration of the social and economic policies needed to reduce child poverty taking account of the current economic climate. The sub-group will also give careful consideration to the recommendations emerging from the OFMDFM Committee's Inquiry into Child Poverty.

The sub-group is chaired by a senior official from OFMDFM and will meet for the second time in early December. Officials will report its conclusions to the Ministerial Sub Committee for Children and Young People.

The Executive recently adopted the 'Lifetime Opportunities' strategy to tackle poverty and social exclusion and patterns of deprivation based on objective social need. Actions on child poverty will be monitored as part of the implementation process for 'Lifetime Opportunities'.

West Belfast and Greater Shankill Task Force Report

Ms S Ramsey asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister what discussions it has held with Ministerial colleagues on ensuring that its policy commitment to the West Belfast and Greater Shankill Taskforce Report is honoured fully. (AQO 1597/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: We are presently considering a paper from the Minister of Enterprise Trade and Investment which proposes bringing forward an Executive paper on the way forward on the West Belfast/Greater Shankill initiative.

Washington Trip

Mr Burnside asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister what meetings it will hold during the business trip to Washington DC and to confirm if it will meet with the incoming President-elect's transition team. (AQO 1484/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: The main purpose of our mission to the US was to promote the local economy and to attract further inward investment. In Washington we met with President Bush and the Director of the National Security Council Stephen Hadley and we addressed top executives at the Fortune 500 Forum dinner on the benefits of investing here. We also met with the British and Irish Ambassadors and visited Annapolis where we met with Martin O'Malley, the Governor of Maryland. During our visit to New York we participated in a series of high level political and business meetings aimed at promoting the local economy and securing further investment.

The President-elect has stated that it is not appropriate for his incoming transition team to meet with representatives of foreign governments until after the Inauguration

Civil Service: Privatisation Plans

Mr K Robinson asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister, following the announcement on 11 November on the need to transform public services, what plans it has to privatise any of the services offered by the Northern Ireland Civil Service or other government agencies. (AQO 1485/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: A key priority in our Programme for Government is to deliver modern, high quality and efficient public services and we are currently taking forward the most wide ranging reform of public services for a generation. This includes key reform programmes in areas such as health, education, water, planning and local government. At the heart of this reform programme is a commitment to world class public services which meet the needs of the economy and wider society.

Modernising the infrastructure and processes of the Civil Service is a key part of our reform programme. This aims to reduce costs and cut out bureaucracy by sharing key corporate services such as human resources, finance and ICT across departments. This will realise significant savings which will be redirected to delivering key services direct to the public.

In relation to the Northern Ireland Civil Service Reform Programme, there are no current plans to change the delivery mechanisms for any of the projects in order to pursue a higher level of outsourcing or privatisation of these services. The only project where a contract is still to be awarded is Workplace 2010, which envisages the transfer to the private sector of some messenger and facilities management work currently undertaken by civil servants. However, the procurement of Workplace 2010 is currently suspended.

Asylum Seekers: Conditions in Northern Ireland

Ms Anderson asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister if it will make representations to the UK Government to improve holding conditions in Northern Ireland for asylum seekers and their children. (AQO 1547/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: Under schedule 2 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 asylum and the status and capacity of persons in the United Kingdom who are not British citizens are excepted matters and are the responsibility of the Minister of State for Borders and Immigration. Accordingly queries about specific holding conditions for asylum seekers and their children need to be addressed to the Minister of State for Borders and Immigration, Mr Phil Woolas MP.

We do however recognise that immigration matters have substantial implications for government here, and for people living here under immigration control, and are thus a legitimate concern of the devolved administration. As a member of the OFMDFM Committee you will be aware of our recent correspondence with the Committee on these issues and our continuing engagement with the UK Border Agency (UKBA) over matters of specific concern, including those relating to asylum seekers.

These matters are important and in the interests of all people living here, especially those who are most vulnerable, including people who are seeking asylum, we want to ensure that they can avail of their rights and that they are treated with sensitivity, dignity and respect. This is at the forefront of our engagement with the UKBA.

Child Poverty

Mr D Bradley asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister for its assessment of the importance of childcare provision in a strategy to tackle child poverty; and to confirm when it will produce a strategy for childcare. (AQO 1526/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: We recognise that many of the children here living in poverty are in workless lone parent families or in workless couple households. We believe for many of these families employment is the best route out of poverty and lack of quality, affordable childcare is undoubtedly one of the major barriers to this.

Childcare is an issue which cuts across the remit of a number of departments and at the last meeting of the Ministerial Sub-Committee for Children and Young People it was agreed that an additional cross departmental sub-group would be established to focus on child poverty. The group will make recommendations including on childcare provision.

This group is expected to report in the Spring of 2009.

AGRICULTURE AND RURAL DEVELOPMENT

Farm Nutrient Scheme

Mr Bresland asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many farm businesses were awaiting approval for an offer for the Farm Nutrient scheme at 15 November 2008. (AQW 2720/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development (Ms M Gildernew): At the 15 November, 133 FNMS applicants still had to provide information so their approvals could be issued. Seven have since submitted the information required and have had their approvals issued. The Department cannot approve the remaining 126 as in these cases it still awaits information from the applicants, e.g. planning/NIE approvals and revised quotations, before processing their approvals.

Fair Pricing: Retail Policies

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development if she places fair pricing at the centre of her Department's retail policies. (AQW 2756/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Retail pricing is a reserved matter under the NI Act 1998 and therefore not within my remit. However, I do agree with the concept of fair pricing and consider that I have a role to encourage and facilitate a mutual understanding of the challenges facing each part of the food chain. As part of that process, I have visited a number of retailers, as well as producers and food processors, to encourage discussion of the challenges facing each part of the food chain, particularly the economic pressures on producers. I believe that all partners in the supply chain have an important role to play and all need to share in the profits.

Beef Farms

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, how the figure of 20% of the Republic of Ireland's beef farms being economically viable, compares with statistics for beef farms in Northern Ireland. (AQW 2762/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: There is no standard definition of farm viability. Whether a farm might be regarded as viable, i.e. will continue to operate, will be determined by the particular circumstances and preferences of, and choices exercised by, the individual farmer and members of the farm household. These will vary over time. Therefore, viability is not necessarily related to farm size or any other statistical measure. Consequently, DARD cannot offer an objective view on the proportion of beef farms that might be regarded as viable or not viable any given point in time. DARD, however, offers a range of services and support mechanisms which are available to beef farmers whatever their individual circumstances.

Tuberculosis in Cattle

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in relation to tuberculosis in cattle, to detail (i) the cost of testing; (ii) the cost of veterinary fees for testing; and (iii) the number slaughtered but found to be disease free, in 2008. (AQW 2765/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development:

- (i) We do not record separately the costs of all the activities involved in testing of animals and samples for bovine TB. However the bulk of testing work relates to the costs we record for the Veterinary Science Laboratory at AFBI (VSD), to PVP costs, Staff Costs under the TB programme, and the costs of Tuberculin, and this amounted to £12.5 million for the year ending 31 March 2008. Total costs for the Tb programme are attached.
- (ii) The cost of PVP fees for conducting a comparative skin test in that year was £6.3 million.
- (iii) The tests currently in use confirm the presence of disease but cannot confirm its absence. Between January and June 2008, 4009 animals were removed under the TB Programme of which 3036 did not have disease confirmed.

Cost of the DARD TB Programme 2007/2008

VSD Costs	PVP Costs	Compensation	Staff Costs	DARD Funded Research	Haulier Costs	Misc	Tuberculin	Salvage	Total Expenditure
740,061	6,311,631	8,547,534	4,700,904	526,786	169,918	183,916	793,476	-738,509	21,235,717

Elderly People: Assistance in Rural Communities

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what steps her Department is taking to assist elderly people in rural communities. (AQW 2774/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My Department is taking action to assist elderly people in rural communities in a number of ways.

Under the Rural Development Programme the six 'quality of life measures' of Axis 3 are designed to strengthen the social and economic infrastructure of the entire rural community. Worth up to £100 million, delivery is through a bottom up approach by seven local council clusters, each in partnership with a newly formed local action group. In preparation of the local development strategy for each area, the cluster/local action group partnership was required to include initiatives under the six measures which focus on a range of commitments to key Government cross-cutting strategies including Ageing in an Inclusive Society.

I have also secured a further £10m budget to address rural Poverty and Social Exclusion, a number of key actions in respect of Fuel Poverty, Community Development, Transport and Access to services have been identified. To date my department has collaborated with DSD to ensure that delivery of the Warm Homes Scheme to rural areas can be maximised this year. This includes supporting the installation of central heating to householders over 60 and in receipt of certain benefits.

Further anti-poverty actions are being developed and will be available next year. Already my department plan to support travel for the elderly in rural areas and target direct actions to identify and support the elderly in the most deprived and excluded rural areas.

BSE and Tuberculosis Testing

Mr Burnside asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many farms are closed due to BSE and tuberculosis testing. (AQW 2779/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: As at 27 November 2008 there were a total of 2963 herds with TB related movements restrictions applied. I can confirm that there are no herds closed for BSE.

Family Farm Options Scheme: Mid Ulster

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many farmers have taken up the Family Farm Options Scheme in Mid-Ulster, in each of the last three years. (AQW 2783/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Approximately 5,500 members of farm households participated in the Farm Family Options Scheme over the three year period 2004/05, 2005/06 and 2006/07. Information on a constituency basis is not held by the Department.

Supply Chain Partnership Training: Mid Ulster

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many farmers in Mid-Ulster have taken up supply chain partnership training, in each of the last three years. (AQW 2787/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: A pilot Supply Chain Development Programme, designed to provide support for farmers and growers working collaboratively to improve rewards from their supply chain, was promoted and delivered during 2006 – 2008. Seven groups comprised of almost 100 farmers and growers applied to take part in the Programme. None of the groups who participated in the programme were located in the mid-Ulster area. Provision for a new Supply Chain Development Programme has been made in the NI Rural Development Plan and is due to open for applications early in 2009.

Prior to the Supply Chain Development Programme, DARD offered a Supply Chain Awareness Programme which was available between 2003 and 2007 and attracted some 1335 participants. The programme improved communications and integration between producers, processors and multiple retailers throughout the supply chain by developing an awareness of market requirements, best practice methods and the capability to access and interpret information. The programme was delivered to a total of 98 farmers from the Mid Ulster area over the 4 years as follows; 03/04 (30), 04/05 (19), 05/06 (26), 06/07 (23).

Gyrodactylus

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what she is doing to address the parasite gyrodactylus, in fishing waters. (AQW 2859/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: I am not aware of a parasite with that name. The Member may be referring to the parasite Gyrodactylus salaris (GS) which causes the serious notifiable disease Gyrodactylosis. I can confirm that GS is not present in fishing waters in the North of Ireland.

The European Commission has granted the North of Ireland additional guarantees to help safeguard against the introduction of the parasite. As a result imports of salmonids from areas which are not free of GS are prohibited. GS is notifiable under the conditions of fish culture licences granted by DARD, and the Department also has a contingency plan in place in the event of suspicion or confirmation of the disease.

Flood Management Legislation

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what plans she has to introduce flood management legislation similar to that in other European countries. (AQW 2971/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The approach and legislative requirements for flood risk management in Europe is being driven by the EU Directive on the assessment and management of flood risk (Floods Directive). DARD, Rivers Agency as the competent authority in the North of Ireland has plans in place to transpose this Directive into the North legislation by the EU deadline of 25 November 2009.

The Agency also has programmes in place to meet Floods Directive obligations on assessment, mapping and production of flood risk management plans within the required timescales.

Animal Cruelty Offences: Disqualification/Imprisonment

Mr Moutray asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to the answer to AQW 2257/09, to outline the general nature of offences for which neither the maximum disqualification nor maximum imprisonment were handed down for cases of animal cruelty, in each of the last five years. (AQW 2982/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Since Questions 2982/09 and 2984/09 refer to the same subject matter, this response deals with both questions together.

The general nature of offences for which neither the maximum disqualification nor the maximum imprisonment sentences were handed down for cases of animal cruelty, in the last five years, is as follows:-

- Causing, procuring or permitting unnecessary suffering to animals or causing unnecessary pain or distress to animals;
- Failing to comply with the farm animal welfare standards set out in the Welfare of Farmed Animals Regulations (NI) 2000, as amended;
- Failing to comply with animal welfare transport requirements or transporting animals in a way likely to cause injury or unnecessary suffering;
- Cruelly ill-treating animals;
- Failing to comply with pet shop welfare requirements;
- Abandoning animals causing unnecessary suffering; and
- Being in custody of animals in contravention of disqualification order.

With regard to why only one person received the maximum disqualification and two people received the maximum imprisonment for animal cruelty in the last five years, this is a matter for the Courts.

Veterinary Office Closure: Larne

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development where the gateway to 'Fortress Ireland' would be situated if the proposal to close the veterinary offices in Larne is accepted. (AQW 3016/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Should the Larne Divisional Veterinary Office be re-located as part of the roll-out of DARD Direct, the Department will maintain its portal inspectorate facilities in Larne. Checks on imported livestock, animal products and personal imports of risk animal based foodstuffs will continue to be carried out from these facilities. All imported livestock are recorded on APHIS and restricted on the destination farm pending follow up sampling, where appropriate. DARD has devised generic contingency plans that will be activated if a serious epizootic disease is confirmed in Britain or Europe. The proposed relocation of the Larne Divisional Veterinary Office will not impact on control measures or on the local risk.

Veterinary Office Closure: Larne

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the impact to the farming community in East Antrim, in terms of marginalisation, if proposals to close the Divisional Veterinary Office in Larne proceed with potential relocation to either Antrim or Ballymena occurs. (AQW 3017/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The Equality Impact Assessment (EQIA) on the DARD Direct proposal provides a vehicle through which all impacts on DARD staff, Section 75 and agri-food industry stakeholders can be identified and actions proposed to mitigate against negative impacts.

To facilitate this we sought views from these stakeholders as well as all Councils and MLAs during the public consultation. We received 31 responses of which 29 were received within the timeframe to allow consideration within the EQIA. Responses were received from staff, the agri-food industry, rural and S75 stakeholders as well as from some Councils, MPs and MLAs.

You may be aware the ARD Committee, UFU (Ulster Farmers' Union) and NIPSA (NI Public Service Alliance) provided views on the final draft EQIA report last week and I am currently considering these. Once I have done so, the EQIA will be completed and published.

Veterinary Office Closure: Larne

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development if she will consider the negative impact on the rural community should proposals to close the Divisional Veterinary Office in Larne be presented, as indicated by the meeting held on 28 November 2008, in Larne Library. (AQW 3018/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The Equality Impact Assessment (EQIA) on the DARD Direct proposal provides a vehicle through which all impacts on DARD staff, Section 75 and agri-food industry stakeholders can be identified and actions proposed to mitigate against negative impacts.

To facilitate this we sought views from these stakeholders as well as all Councils and MLAs during the public consultation. We received 31 responses of which 29 were received within the timeframe to allow consideration within the EQIA. Responses were received from staff, the agri-food industry, rural and S75 stakeholders as well as from some Councils, MPs and MLAs.

Veterinary Office Closure: Larne

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of how the proposed closure of the Divisional Veterinary Office in Larne will affect farmers in East Antrim, particularly in Islandmagee. (AQW 3021/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The Equality Impact Assessment (EQIA) on the DARD Direct proposal provides a vehicle through which all impacts on DARD staff, Section 75 and agri-food industry stakeholders can be identified and actions proposed to mitigate against negative impacts. To facilitate this we sought views from these stakeholders as well as all Councils and MLAs during the public consultation. We received 31 responses of which 29 were received within the timeframe to allow consideration within the EQIA. Responses were received from staff, the agri-food industry, rural and S75 stakeholders as well as from some Councils, MPs and MLAs.

Feedback from the pilot project in Fermanagh has indicated that the availability of a full range of services at one location and improved quality of service has increased customer satisfaction with DARD's service delivery. Along with the availability of other means of transacting business with DARD this has helped reduce the impact of additional travel distances.

However, no final decision yet been taken on the location of the remaining DARD Direct offices. You may be aware the ARD Committee, UFU (Ulster Farmers' Union) and NIPSA (NI Public Service Alliance) provided views on the final draft EQIA report last week. I am currently considering these and once I have done so, the EQIA will be completed and I hope to be in a position to make an announcement on the location of DARD Direct offices.

Veterinary Office Usage

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many people used each Divisional Veterinary Office, per month, in each of the last five years. (AQW 3022/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Prior to June 2007 no such data was collated. However since then customer information is being collated on a rolling basis, using a quarterly survey, as part of a DARD wide Customer Service Improvement Programme.

The information in the attached Annexes shows usage statistics at the relevant DARD Offices.

Veterinary Office Closure: Larne

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how far farmers would have to travel, by road, to get to their closest Divisional Veterinary Office, if the Larne office is closed. (AQW 3023/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The distance farmers have to travel to their Divisional Veterinary Office is dependent on their location within the DVO catchment area. Currently for Larne DVO this can be up to 40 miles for farmers in the South Antrim area near Moira, 30 miles from Lisburn, 25 miles from Cushendall and 33 miles from Toome. Farmers at the northernmost point of Islandmagee (Ballylumford) could travel up to 15 miles due to the geography of the island.

Under the proposals for DARD Direct, farmers will be able to access veterinary services at any DARD Direct office. The current proposals are for Veterinary Services to be available from DARD Direct offices in Ballymena and Antrim. Within this model, typical travel distances to the closest veterinary services would be Moira to Antrim - 20 miles; Lisburn to Antrim - 18 miles; Toome to Antrim - 12 miles; Islandmagee to Antrim - 32 miles; Carrickfergus to Antrim 20 miles; Larne to Ballymena - 21 miles and Cushendall to Ballymena - 20 miles.

However, final decisions have not been taken on the locations of the remaining DARD Direct offices. You may be aware the ARD Committee, UFU (Ulster Farmers' Union) and NIPSA (NI Public Service Alliance) provided views on the final draft EQIA report last week and I am currently considering these.

Meat-Processing Companies: Pricing

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the correspondence she has had with meat processing companies in relation to the low prices they pay to local farmers, despite higher prices paid to farmers in other part of the UK.[R] (AQW 3045/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Pricing is a reserved matter under the NI Act 1998. I have not, therefore, corresponded with meat processing companies on this matter.

However, I do share your concern and feel that I have a role to encourage and facilitate dialogue to increase understanding of the challenges facing each part of the food chain to ensure everyone gets a fair return.

As part of that process I have met with representatives of the NI Meat Exporters Association and with a number of major retailers to express my concerns about the pressures being faced by producers, and to emphasise the importance of everyone in the supply chain sharing in the profits.

Women's Groups: Funding

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what funding has been made available by her Department to each women's group for the 2008-09 financial year; and what programme each group is funded under. (AQW 3179/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The Department has provided funding of £135,560 to the NI Rural Women's Network (NIRWN) under the EU Building Sustainable Prosperity Programme (BSP) for the period 1 April 2008 to 30 November 2008; and £67,456 for the period 1 December 2008 to 31 March 2009 under the Community Development element of the Anti-Poverty and Social Exclusion Framework.

Pork Crisis

Mr Savage asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many farms affected by the Irish Republic's pork crisis have been farm quality assured. (AQW 3423/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Nine of the 12 farms affected by the crisis are members of the NI Farm Quality Assurance Scheme.

Pork Crisis

Mr Savage asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what contact she has had with (i) the Ulster Farmers Union; (ii) European Commission officials; (iii) Executive colleagues; (iv) members of the Committee for Agriculture and Rural Development; and (v) Republic of Ireland government officials, since the beginning of the Republic of Ireland's pork crisis on Friday, 5 December 2008. (AQW 3425/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development:

- (i) I have had no direct contact with the UFU. However contact took place, at official level, with UFU representatives;
- (ii) I have had no direct contact with the European Commission. However, the DARD official based in Brussels has linked into all relevant discussions there;
- (iii) I discussed the dioxins in animal feeding stuffs issue with Executive colleagues on Monday 8 December;
- (iv) A Senior official briefed the Chair of the Assembly Agriculture and Rural Development Committee on Monday 8 December.

I made a Statement in the Assembly on the same day and participated in the subsequent question and answer session which involved Members of the Committee. I also responded to a Private Notice Question on Tuesday 9 December at which Members of the Committee had a further opportunity to participate in a question and answer session; and

- (v) I spoke to Mr Brendan Smith in the Department of Fisheries and Food in Dublin on Sunday 7 December.

You may wish to note that contact took place with representatives of the farming and meat processing industries at official level. My officials have also been liaising closely with the Food Standards Agency, Invest NI, NI Meat Exporters' Association (NIMEA) and the Departments of Health, Social Services and Public Safety and Enterprise, Trade and Investment.

I continue to remain in close contact with the Minister for Health, Social Services and Public Safety.

Pork Crisis

Mr Savage asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development why it took her Department two days to contact the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to inform them of the public health risks surrounding pork sourced in the Republic of Ireland. (AQW 3426/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My Department were first made aware of concerns around pork sourced in the South late afternoon on Friday 5th December. At the same time the authorities in the South advised that potentially affected feed had gone to 9 premises here. The immediate concern at that time was to place restrictions on those premises to ensure that no further potentially infected meat could enter the food chain. My staff were in touch with the Food Standards Agency on Friday and over the weekend to advise them of the situation.

My understanding is that in the event of any incident of this nature which may have public health implications, the FSA would raise the issue with DHSSPS. However, as a matter of courtesy I did speak to Health Minister Michael McGimpsey on Sunday to ensure that he was fully aware of the actions my Department were undertaking.

CULTURE, ARTS AND LEISURE*Cricket Clubs: Funding

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the money that has been allocated to date by Sport Northern Ireland to cricket clubs for ground safety improvements. (AQW 2946/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (Mr G Campbell): Sport Northern Ireland (SNI) is responsible for the development of sport including the distribution of funding. SNI has advised that no cricket club has applied for funding specifically for ground safety improvements. However, the table below details awards that have been made to clubs and elements of these relate to ground safety.

Cricket Club	Year	Amount	Project
Downpatrick CC	2000	£10,600	Purchase of equipment
Lisburn CC	2000	£25,000	Provision of 5 new grass pitches

Commonwealth Games: Delhi 2010

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the funding available from his Department and Sport Northern Ireland for athletes preparing for the Delhi 2010 Commonwealth Games.

(AQW 2947/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: Responsibility for assisting athletes preparing for the Delhi 2010 Commonwealth Games rests, in the first instance, with the governing bodies of the sports. Sport Northern Ireland, however, which is responsible for the development of sport including the distribution of funding, administers the Athlete Support Programme which provides athletes with financial support to train, compete and access a range of support services such as coaching, sports science and sports medicine.

Irish and Ulster Scots

Mr Moutray asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to the answer to AQO 1182/09 and AQW 2067/09, for his assessment of (i) the degree to which the use of Irish and Ulster Scots has become politicised and divisive; and (ii) the remedial work required to tackle divisiveness in any future language strategy.

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: It is difficult to assess to what degree the use of Irish and Ulster-Scots has become politicised and divisive.

In developing a Strategy for Indigenous or Regional Minority Languages I am seeking to ensure that both languages are given equal respect and recognition. These languages are a shared part of our cultural heritage and the strategy will seek to protect, enhance and develop both Irish and Ulster-Scots for those who wish to use them.

The strategy should also increase awareness of the background to the languages and create a framework where the languages can be shared by all who wish to use them.

Capital Projects: DCAL

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what actions his Department is taking to bring forward the delivery of capital projects to help redress the economic downturn.

(AQW 3104/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: I share the Member's concern about the current state of the economy. My Department is endeavouring to implement DCAL's capital programme as effectively and efficiently as possible. The DCAL Capital Programme Management Board continually monitors the capital programme and budget and is working closely with the Arms Length Bodies (ALBs) to develop robust delivery plans and a steady flow of projects and expenditure.

Work is currently progressing or planned in the near future on a number of key projects with a combined project cost of over £90m. Work on the Ulster Museum refurbishment and the Crescent Arts Centre (Botanic area) is already well underway. We also have a number of major projects coming forward later this financial year: Lyric Players' Theatre, the MAC (Metropolitan Arts Centre), and redevelopment of Tollymore Mountain Centre near Newcastle. In addition site work commenced on 24 November on the new PRONI Headquarters in Titanic Quarter, which represents a £30m public sector investment.

Due to the long lead in times for new capital programmes the Department is not in a position in this first year of the Investment Strategy to bring forward additional projects.

However, I want to reaffirm that I and my Department will continue to do all we can to ensure that the Department's ALBs deliver DCAL's capital programme within the shortest possible timeframe.

EDUCATION

Free School Meals

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Education what plans she has to introduce free school meals for children with no EU status. (AQW 1727/09)

The Minister of Education (Ms C Ruane): Bíonn na socruithe reatha ag dul i mbun béilí scoile saor in aisce a sholáthar do pháistí nuair atá a dtuismitheoirí oiriúnach de réir na gcritéar ábhartha incháilithe. Seo iad mar a leanas:

The current arrangements provide for free school meals to be awarded to children whose parents meet the relevant eligibility criteria. These are:

- i. he/she or the parent is in receipt of Income Support or Income based Jobseeker's Allowance; or
- ii. he/she or the parent is in receipt of Income related Employment and Support Allowance; or
- iii. the parent receives the Child Tax Credit; and is ineligible for the Working Tax Credit because he/she works less than 16 hours per week; and has an annual taxable income not exceeding an amount as determined by the Department (currently £15,575); or
- iv. the parent receives the Guarantee element of State Pension Credit; or
- v. he/she has a statement of special educational needs and is designated to require a special diet; or
- vi. he/she is a boarder at a special school; or
- vii. he/she is the child of an asylum seeker supported by the Home Office National Asylum Support Service (NASS).

Children with no EU status are, therefore, currently not eligible for free school meals. I can confirm, however, that officials are reviewing the position.

To date, they have considered the position in the South, and sought the advice of the Human Rights Commissioner (HRC). In the South, meals are provided through the Urban Schools Meals scheme, and the School Meals Local Projects scheme. Both schemes are aimed at schools rather than pupils. However, the nationality of the children in the schools has no bearing on provision.

The HRC advised that persons with no EU status may, like asylum seekers, require a separate category within the existing arrangements, as criteria (i)-(iii) are not suited to assessing their income. I have advised officials to make temporary arrangements from now to feed affected children until a policy line is considered.

Attacks on Teaching Staff: North Down

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of attacks on teaching staff in the North Down area, in each of the last five years. (AQW 2270/09)

The Minister of Education: Ní bhailíonn an Roinn Oideachais an t-eolas a iarradh.

The Department of Education does not collect the information requested.

However, statistics on the reasons for suspension and expulsion are gathered each school year from Education and Library Boards. The table below provides the number of occasions where pupils were suspended for physical attacks on staff, in the North Down Parliamentary Constituency, in each of the last five years that information is available.

Teacher Recruitment Spend: NEELB

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Education for her assessment of the North Eastern Education and Library Board spending £63,694 on recruiting teachers through recruitment agencies during the academic year 2007/08. (AQW 2637/09)

The Minister of Education: As of 1 September 2006, all substitute teaching staff employed in schools must have their names on the Substitute Teachers Register (NISTR); and as from 1 August 2008 substitute teachers paid through the Departmental payroll must also be booked on-line via NISTR. Schools may in exceptional circumstances use employment agencies to recruit and remunerate substitute teachers, provided that this offers value for money and the teachers are registered with NISTR.

Áfach, ní mholann an Roinn an cleachtas seo. Impím ar gach údarás fostíochta lena chinntiú go mbíonn a gcuid scoileanna ag cloí le himlitreacha na Roinne (2006/7 agus 2008/10) maidir le fostaíocht mhúinteoirí ionaid.

However, this practice is not encouraged by the Department. I would urge all employing authorities to ensure that their schools comply with the Department's circulars (2006/7 and 2008/10) on the employment of substitute teachers.

Investment Delivery Plan

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Education to report on the development of her Department's Investment Delivery Plan. (AQW 2843/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá Plean mo Roinne um Sholáthar Infheistíochta le fáil ar láithreán gréasáin na Roinne ag an nasc seo thíos.

My Department's Investment Delivery Plan is available on the Department's internet site at the link below.

Broadbridge Primary School

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Education (i) for her assessment of the progress on the delivery of a new school for Broadbridge Primary School in Eglinton; (ii) to detail any delays that have occurred; and (iii) when the project will be completed. (AQW 2910/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá Staidéar Fiúchais faoi bhreithniú ag an Roinn agus chomh luath agus a bheidh comhaontú ann, tabharfar faoi mheasúnú eacnamúil le CCMS agus na hIontaobhaithe ionas go socrófar an rogha molta don scéim chaipitil.

A Feasibility Study is with the Department for consideration and once it has been agreed, an economic appraisal will be undertaken with CCMS and the Trustees to determine the recommended option for a capital scheme. It is a requirement for consideration for capital funding that there is an agreed appraisal in place, and as that is not the position for this school I cannot indicate when a scheme would be completed.

School Leavers

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education how many school leavers without an upper secondary qualification went into (i) further education; (ii) training; and (iii) employment, for each academic year since 2004-05, broken down by parliamentary constituency. (AQW 2926/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá an t-eolas a iarradh mionsonraithe sna táblaí thíos:

Blind and Partially Sighted Pupils

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education the timescale for all books in the education system to have an accessible format for blind and partially sighted children. (AQW 2954/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá tugtha le fios dom ag Príomhfheidhmeannaí na mBord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne (ELBanna) go mbíonn fáil ag ELBanna ar ábhair agus ar théacsleabhair do dhaltaí atá dall agus do dhaltaí a bhfuil drochradharc acu ó réimse leathan d'acmhainní speisialta, an National Blind Children's Society, an Royal National Institute for Blind People (RNIB) agus an RNIB National Library Service san áireamh.

I have been advised by the Chief Executives of the Education and Library Boards (ELBs) that ELBs currently access material and textbooks for blind and partially sighted pupils from a wide range of specialist sources, including, the National Blind Children's Society, the Royal National Institute for Blind People (RNIB) and the RNIB National Library Service.

Each ELB provides textbooks and materials from selected publishers and locally accessed materials such as providing photographic services or adaptive technology services in response to the needs of specific children and young people who are blind or visually impaired.

I recognise that the expediency with which material can be accessed by children and young people is an area where further enhancements to service delivery could be made. In response to the RNIB campaign, "Where's My Book?", DE established a scoping project, which was led by the Education and Library Boards and on which RNIB was represented. The aims of the project were to consider and scope the scale of the local difficulties in making available materials in the correct format. In conclusion, the scoping study research has found the main conclusion of the RNIB's research "Where's my Book", to be justified and recommends that consideration be given to the establishment of a regional centre which can respond quickly to school requests.

The ELB Regional Strategy Group for Special Educational Needs (RSG) established a working group which is dedicated to the specialist area of visual impairment. The aim of the group is to promote a consistent approach across the five ELBs in relation to service delivery. The working group has consulted the voluntary sector, statutory sector and parents as well as children. The RNIB has had an active role in this consultation process. The Group has recently reported its findings to RSG and the key recommendation of the report was that the consultation process produced a consensus view that, in the context of an overall strategy of achieving full educational inclusion and of improving levels of educational attainment amongst children and young people with visual impairment, a resource base for the north of Ireland should be established.

Under the direction of the RSG the Working Group is currently considering the strategic proposals and is in the process of preparing a detailed options appraisal which will be submitted to DE as soon as possible. The Department of Education will consider the proposals in due course.

Blind and Partially Sighted Pupils

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education to outline her proposals for increasing educational attainment for blind and partially sighted people in the education system. (AQW 2956/09)

The Minister of Education: Taispeánann an Suirbhé um Lucht Fágála Scoile 2007 go raibh ar a laghad 5 GCSEanna nó níos mó ar ghrád A* - C bainte amach ag 58.3% de na fágóirí scoile a bhí dall nó a raibh drochradharc acu i gcomparáid le 71.2% de na fágóirí scoile nach raibh SEN acu .

The 2007 School Leavers Survey indicates that 58.3% of blind or visually impaired school leavers achieved at least 5 or more GCSEs at A* - C as compared to 71.2% of non SEN school leavers. The Survey also indicates that of those school leavers who are blind or have a visual impairment, approximately 36% have an additional special educational need.

The Education and Library Boards (ELBs) advise me that they are satisfied that all children with a visual impairment have their needs assessed and met on an individual level. This provision includes a range of teaching methods, peripatetic and classroom support and equipment that includes a range of IT applications. I recognise, however, that the expediency with which reading material can be accessed by children and young people is an area where further enhancements could be made.

The ELB Regional Strategy Group for Special Educational Needs (RSG) has established a Visual Impairment Working Group . The aim of the group is to promote a consistent approach across the five ELBs in relation to service delivery. The Working Group has consulted with the Voluntary and Statutory Sectors and parents as well as children. The Royal National Institute for Blind People has had an active role in this consultation process and has met with Working Group to discuss outcomes. The Group has recently reported its findings to RSG and the key recommendation is that a regional resource base is needed, in the context of an overall strategy of achieving full educational inclusion and of improving levels of educational attainment amongst children and young people with a visual impairment.

Under the direction of the RSG the Working Group is currently considering the strategic proposals and is in the process of preparing a detailed options appraisal which will be submitted to DE as soon as possible. The Department of Education will consider the proposals in due course.

Statemented SEN Pupils: Expulsion Rates

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Education how many and what percentage of pupils with statemented special educational needs have received permanent exclusion from (i) maintained; and (ii) controlled school sectors in each Education and Library Board, in each of the last five years, broken down by gender in both primary and secondary level schools. (AQW 2960/09)

The Minister of Education: Information on pupil expulsions, which the Department collects annually from Education and Library Boards, specifies if a pupil has special educational needs (SEN), however it does not specify if the pupil has a written SEN statement. A pupil does not become 'statemented' until he/she has reached stage five of the SEN statementing process.

I understand from the Education and Library Boards that a very small number of pupils with a SEN statement have been expelled. Due to data protection and confidentiality, it would be inappropriate for me to provide the level of detail requested.

However, the table below provides the number of pupils with SEN expelled from schools by management type over the last five school years. The data has not been provided by Education and Library Board as this would have necessitated suppression of the majority of these small figures.

	No. of pupils with SEN expelled from controlled schools	No. of pupils with SEN expelled from catholic maintained schools	No. of pupils with SEN expelled from 'other' schools	Total no. of pupils with SEN expelled from all schools	Total no. of pupils expelled

	No. of pupils with SEN expelled from controlled schools	No. of pupils with SEN expelled from catholic maintained schools	No. of pupils with SEN expelled from 'other' schools	Total no. of pupils with SEN expelled from all schools	Total no. of pupils expelled
2006/07	8	5	5	18	45

Notes:

1. Includes pupils at Key Stage 1-4 only.
2. The 'other' category is used for statistical purposes during data collection and includes grant maintained and controlled integrated schools, voluntary grammar schools and other maintained schools.
3. * denotes figures fewer than five.
4. # denotes a figure  $\geq 5$  which has been treated to prevent disclosure of small numbers elsewhere.

Tá anailís dheiridh á déanamh ar líon na ndaltaí ar cuireadh ar fionraí agus ar díbríodh ón scoil iad sa scoilbhliain 2007/2008 agus foilseofar uair éigin sna seachtainí atá romhainn í.

Statistics on suspensions and expulsions for the 2007/08 school year are undergoing final analysis and will be published in the coming weeks.

Secondary School Places: Waterside, Londonderry/Derry

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Education what is the number of secondary school places in the Waterside area of Londonderry/Derry, broken down by (i) State; (ii) Catholic; and (iii) Integrated sectors. (AQW 2991/09)

The Minister of Education: Táispeáintear sa tábla thíos líon na n-áiteanna mheánscoile i gceantar Thaobh an Uisce i nDoire, agus miondealú orthu ó thaobh (i) na Stáite de (ii) an Chaitlicigh de agus (iii) na hearnálacha imeasctha de.

The number of secondary school places in the Waterside area of Derry, broken down by (i) State; (ii) Catholic; and (iii) Integrated sectors are provided in the table below.

Sector / School	Approved Enrolment No. 2008/09 School Year	Approved Admissions No. 2008/09 School Year
(i) State (Controlled) Sector
Lisneal College	960	178
(ii) Catholic (Maintained) Sector

(iii) Integrated Sector

Catholic Secondary Education: Waterside, Londonderry/Derry

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Education to outline development plans for Catholic secondary education in the Waterside area of Londonderry/Derry. (AQW 2992/09)

The Minister of Education: Tuigim gur chuir na hIonntaobhaithe tús le tionscadal athbhreithnithe ar iarbhunscolaíocht chun iniúchadh a dhéanamh ar sholáthar Caitliceach-bhainistithe do cheantar Chathair Dhoire agus Chlóidí.

I understand that the Trustees have established a post-primary review project to examine Catholic-managed provision for the Derry City and Claudy area. Provision in the Waterside is being considered within this review. Work is continuing and no decisions have been made on a proposed way forward for the schools covered by the review.

Statemented SEN Pupils: Exclusion Rates

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Education how many and what percentage of pupils with statemented special educational needs have received fixed period exclusions from (i) maintained; and (ii) controlled school sectors in each Education and Library Board; (a) once; and (b) twice; (c) more than twice; and (d) more than five times, in each of the last five years for both primary and secondary level schools. (AQW 2999/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá socraithe agam go gcuirfear an t-eolas a iarradh i Leabharlann an Tionóil.

I have arranged for the information requested to be placed in the Assembly Library.

Excluded Pupils: Alternative Education Costs

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Education how much has been spent by each Education and Library Board in providing alternative full-time education for pupils that have been (i) temporarily; and (ii) permanently; excluded from school in each of the last 5 years. (AQW 3001/09)

The Minister of Education: Ní bhailíonn an Roinn an t-eolas seo.

The Department does not collect this information.

The Department allocates earmarked funding to the Education and Library Boards, which they can augment from their block grant, for a range of interventions for pupils with challenging behaviour. Each Education and Library Board decides how to allocate this funding to best meet the needs of the young people in their area.

If a young person is suspended from school, the school is responsible for providing suitable school work during the period of suspension. Education and Library Boards take responsibility for young people who cannot attend school on a temporary basis, due to a range of reasons including physical or mental health, behavioural or emotional difficulties and those who are permanently excluded from school or who have disengaged from mainstream education. The Boards provide a range of 'Education Other Than at School' (EOTAS) provision to meet specific pupil needs, including for example:

- full time placement in alternative education provision;
- full time placement in an intensive support unit;
- temporary placement in a special school or behavioural unit;
- a mixture of tuition and school placement;
- home tuition or hospital tuition; or
- placement in a pupil referral unit.

I understand from the Education and Library Boards that it is not possible to differentiate expenditure on alternative education between those pupils who have been suspended or expelled from school. Nor is it possible to separate expenditure on EOTAS for pupils who are excluded and for others who need to access alternative provision for another reason such as illness or emotional difficulties.

Selection at Age 14

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Education what estimate she has made of the costs associated with moving to selection at 14. (AQW 3020/09)

The Minister of Education: Sna tograí a chuir mé faoi bhráid an Choiste Feidhmiúcháin ar 15 Bealtaine 2008 moladh próiseas 'roghnaithe eolasaigh' ag 14 bliain d'aois, seachas próiseas ina mbíonn roghnú acadúil ag 14 bliain d'aois i gceist leis.

The proposals I brought before the Executive on 15 May 2008 allow for a process of 'informed election' at age 14, rather than a process that involves selection at age 14. I have therefore made no estimate of the costs involved in a system of selection at age 14.

Kindle Primary School

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to her answer to question AQW 2621/09, how many pupils transferred from Kindle Primary to (i) Curran Primary; and (ii) St Joseph's Primary, Tyrella, in September 2008. (AQW 3058/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá curtha in iúl ag Bord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Oirdheiscirt (i) gur aistrigh 21 dalta chuig Curran Primary agus (ii) gur aistrigh 3 dhaltacha chuig St Joseph's Primary School i mí Mheán Fómhair 2008 ó Kindle Primary School.

The South-Eastern Education and Library Board have advised that (i) 21 pupils transferred to Curran Primary and (ii) 3 pupils transferred to St Joseph's Primary School in September 2008 from Kindle Primary School.

Teaching Vacancies: Mid-Ulster

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Education how many teaching vacancies there are in each school, in the Mid Ulster constituency. (AQW 3070/09)

The Minister of Education: Bíonn an Roinn ar lorg eolais faoi fholúntais múinteoirí ó gach scoil dheontaschúnta ar bhonn bliaintúil. Soláthraíonn an teolas alaghráf na bhfolúntas ar dháta ar leith gach bliain. ### 'Love for Life': Funding

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Education to detail the total funding awarded to 'Love for Life' by the North Eastern Education and Library Board. (AQW 3117/09)

The Minister of Education: Tugann Bord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Oirthuaiscirt le fios nach bhfuil aon chuntas aige ar dháileadh mhaoinithe chuig 'Love for Life'.

The North Eastern Education and Library Board advises that it has no record of allocating any funding to 'Love for Life'.

Class Sizes: SEELB

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education for the average size of (i) P1; (ii) P2; and (iii) P3, classes in the South Eastern Education and Library Board; and to detail the schools that have classes in excess of her Department's maximum guideline of 30 pupils. (AQW 3136/09)

Language Support: SEELB

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education what language support is available in the South Eastern Education and Library Board, to parents of children whose first language is not English. (AQW 3182/09)

The Minister of Education: The Inclusion and Diversity Service brought together services across the five Education and Library Boards in relation to the education of all newcomer pupils, whose first language is not English. The aim is to strengthen and improve support to all such pupils, their parents and teaching staff, primarily working through schools by using a number of new services and approaches available on a regional basis. Whilst the service works with schools, it also offers specific help to parents whose first language is not English. In particular, parents can have access to interpreters for initial parent/teacher interviews, parent consultation interviews, critical incidents and pastoral care issues. In addition, schools have access to 10 generic school policies and a number of key letters translated into 15 languages for issue to parents in their own language.

In response to a need to inform the parents of newcomer children about our education system, the Inclusion and Diversity Service created a multi-lingual website for parents in 15 languages, as well as Irish and English. This website can be accessed at www.education-support.org.uk. All of these services are available to all schools.

Tá curtha in iúl ag an Aire Fostaíochta agus Foghlama dom go soláthraíonn coláistí breisoideachais cúrsaí atá oiriúnaithe chun Béarla a theagasc d'oibrithe ó thíortha eile.

I am advised by the Minister for Employment and Learning that further education colleges provide courses specifically tailored to teaching English to migrant workers.

Our Lady and St Patrick's College

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Education the reason for the delay of over six years, on work commencing on building a new school on the site of Our Lady and St Patrick's College Knock, and to give her assessment of (i) exactly when work will commence; and (ii) the expected completion date. (AQW 3202/09)

The Minister of Education: Ní raibh moill 6 blianta ar an tionscadal cé gur thóg sé níos mó ama ná mar a bhí réamh-mheasta.

The project has not been delayed for six years though it has taken longer than anticipated. Approval of funding was given in 2002 following which there are a number of necessary stages to be completed before the construction stage, as for all such projects. Since the approval a delay arose with a change in the scope of the project from extension and refurbishment to a replacement school. There have also been particular site issues for the project, involving a protracted planning process. Full planning approval was achieved in June 2008. Following this approval there was a judicial review period of three months. The Project Board expect to submit the latest information for the Full Business Case to the Department before the end of the year. Subject to the approval of the business case it is estimated that work could commence on site in Spring 2009 and be completed within two years.

Protestant Schools: Funding Cuts

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Education what discussions she has had with her counterpart in the Republic of Ireland about the decision to cut funding to Protestant schools. (AQW 3242/09)

The Minister of Education: Is ceist í seo a bhaineann leis an Roinn Oideachais agus Eolaíochta i mBaile Átha Cliath. Ní raibh aon phlé agam leis an Aire i ndeisceart na hÉireann faoin cheist seo.

This is a matter for the Department of Education and Science in Dublin. I have had no discussions with my counterpart in the south of Ireland about this issue.

EMPLOYMENT AND LEARNING

Capital Building Programmes

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline his Department's major capital building programmes, for the next three years. (AQW 2740/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning (Sir Reg Empey): The Department for Employment and Learning will spend around £232m on capital projects in the higher and further education sectors in the next three years.

On specific projects in Northern Ireland's higher education institutions, the Department has an allocation of £75.4m across the current Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR) period. The projects are funded from the Department's Learning and Teaching Capital (£25.5m), Research Capital Investment Fund (£33.85m), the Universities Strategic Capital Investment Fund (£13.8m) and the University Colleges Strategic Capital Investment Fund (£2.25m) budget. However, the individual projects belong to the institutions and must fit within their overall strategic direction and business constraints. They cannot be described as being part of the Department's capital building programme.

Turning to the further education sector, there are currently six projects at construction stage at a total cost of £83m, which are all scheduled to be completed by August 2010. These projects are located at: the Lisburn, Downpatrick/ Ballynahinch/ Newcastle and Newtownards campuses of the South Eastern Regional College (total cost: £49m); the Enniskillen Campus of South West College (£9m); the Newtownabbey campus of Northern Regional College (£9m); and the Strand Road campus of North West Regional College (£16m).

In addition, other major projects totalling £74m are anticipated to come forward later this financial year, including projects at the Bangor Campus of South Eastern Regional College (£13m), and the Titanic Quarter campus and Springvale centre for Belfast Metropolitan College (£61m).

Learning Opportunities

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the learning opportunities that exist for those who are currently economically inactive; and are unlikely to gain employment, for various reasons.

(AQW 2799/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: Further Education Colleges offer a wide ranging curriculum through their main campuses and community outreach centres. Colleges are committed to meeting the learning needs of all those of working age, to improve their prospects of employment. Colleges also offer learning opportunities for senior citizens. Provision includes courses in essential skills, professional and technical training, leisure and hobby activities and tailored courses for students with learning difficulties or disabilities.

In addition, the Department is also funding a £3 million per annum Learner Access and Engagement Pilot Programme. This programme will allow FE colleges to contract with third party organisations to provide learner support. This support is directed at those 'hard to reach' adults who are economically inactive, disengaged from the labour market, and with few or no qualifications.

Teacher Training: Religious Breakdown

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the religious breakdown of students applying for teacher training, for each of the last three years.

(AQW 2806/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: Information on religious background is not collected for students applying for teaching training. This information is gathered solely for enrolments in the Higher Education Institutions.

Government Grants: Postgrad Students/Apprentices

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to compare the government grants available to (i) post graduate students; and (ii) students in apprenticeships.

(AQW 2832/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: While both areas of learning attract government support, the funding criteria reflect the respective skills and disciplines required. Post graduate funding is aimed at higher level skills and research and provides support for research and taught studentships of up to £12,940 per annum for the current academic year. In relation to apprenticeships, it is a requirement that all apprentices are in permanent remunerative employment from the first day of the provision, and the Department requires that employers pay them the going rate for the job. Consequently, the Department does not provide any additional grants to apprentices due to their employed and remunerated status.

Apprentices: Available Assistance

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline what additional assistance will be available from his Department to those in apprenticeships, during the 2009-10 financial year.

(AQW 2833/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: I refer you to the answer that I provided to you in my response to AQW 2834/09 which sets out in detail the assistance that is already available to apprentices.

I would already consider that the Department provides significant levels of additional assistance to apprentices, to enable them to complete their training. If, however, the need for additional specific assistance becomes apparent, the Department will of course consider its introduction.

Apprentices: Available Assistance

Mr Lunn asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what consideration he is giving to bringing into line the assistance available to apprentices with that available to students in full time education. (AQW 2834/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: Under the Department's ApprenticeshipsNI provision, apprentices with a disability or learning difficulties can avail of support from specialist providers to assist in their training. This is in place to ensure that apprentices with additional support needs are given every opportunity to overcome their difficulties and develop using the most appropriate support mechanisms. Specialist Support Providers can, for example, help apprentices to increase and improve confidence, self-esteem and value.

The Department will also pay a supplement to Training Suppliers, if an apprentice has a disability. This supplement enables the Training Supplier to provide significant additional input of resources in terms of training time, equipment or support in order for the apprentice to benefit fully from training.

All apprentices also have access to the Department's Careers Service which can provide them with pre-entry guidance whilst they are still in school, and Careers information, advice and guidance that is appropriate to each participant's needs throughout their training period.

Every apprentice is also provided with a Personal Training Plan which provides a clear pathway towards achieving the apprentice's training objectives and the specific actions that will be undertaken to achieve these, as well as addressing any assessed learning needs.

Higher Education Students can avail of a range of assistance from the local Higher Education Institutions, which includes pastoral care and support, chaplains, student mentors, study advisers and the students' union. Similarly, the six Further Education Colleges offer a range of pastoral and other services to students, including careers advice, learning support and counselling.

I would therefore consider that the range of general assistance that is available to apprentices is already in line with that which is in place for students in full time education. If, however, the Department becomes aware of a need for further specific assistance to be introduced, then we will of course give consideration to this.

Sector Skills Councils: Funding

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) the Sector Skills Councils that have received project funding to support employer engagement; (ii) the amount of funding provided in each case; and (iii) the criteria used by his Department to measure value for money. (AQW 2905/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: Sector Skills Councils receive their 'core funding' from the UK Commission for Employment and Skills. The bulk of this funding is provided by the Department for Innovation, Universities and Skills, with contributions from the devolved administrations. The funding is provided to enable the Sector Skills Councils to carry out their core remit, which includes employer engagement, across the United Kingdom. In addition to this my department works with the Sector Skills Councils and supports Northern Ireland specific projects which generally require the involvement of employers in that sector. Employer engagement can take a variety of forms including; labour market research, employer forums or project involvement. A table has been placed in the library setting out details on current funding provided by my department to the Sector Skills Councils:

My Department completes an Economic Appraisal for each project funding application received from a Sector Skills Council. The Economic Appraisal will consider at least 3 options, including the 'Status Quo' or do nothing option; an alternative such as reduced funding or an alternative project provider; and the application submitted by the SSC. It will also evaluate the aims and objectives of the project to ensure they are in compliance with those of the Department in relation to skills issues. During the course of a project the Department evaluates progress by receiving interim reports and prior to final payment will receive a complete evaluation of the project.

SME Employers: Skills Pledge

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning when he will make a decision on the relevance of a skills pledge by SME employers. (AQW 2969/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: The Skills Pledge is a public and voluntary commitment made by employers in England to support all their employees to develop the essential skills of literacy and numeracy, and work towards relevant, valuable qualifications to at least Level 2 (equivalent to five good GCSEs). The objective is to ensure that all staff are skilled, competent and able to make a full contribution to the success of the organisation.

Not all companies in the UK have signed up to the Skills Pledge, as it is a voluntary agreement Northern Ireland companies are free to commit to the Pledge if they wish.

Capital Projects: DEL

Dr Farry asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to report on what actions his Department is taking to bring forward the delivery of capital projects, to help address the economic downturn. (AQW 3011/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: Officials from my Department are working closely with Colleges, Universities and the Strategic Investment Board to progress major capital works.

In further education there are 6 major projects under construction, with a total capital value of £83m and it is anticipated that contracts for another three projects, totalling £74m, will be signed later this financial year.

In the higher education sector work is progressing to ensure that capital spend is advanced as quickly as possible. This includes £20m in the current year and £55m in the following two years.

You will appreciate the inherent difficulty in bringing forward major capital projects due to National and European procurement regulations. However, my officials are conscious of the concerns of the construction industry and will proceed with all business cases without any undue delay.

Student Loans: Rate of Interest

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what rate of interest is being paid on student loans and how often this is changed or varied each year. (AQW 3042/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: Student loans are issued on the basis that borrowers should repay broadly the same amount, in real terms, as they borrowed. Therefore the interest rate is linked only to the rate of inflation which is calculated annually using the Retail Price Index (RPI). For the academic year 2008/09 the interest rate is set at the current RPI rate of 3.8%. This represents a decrease from 4.8% in 2007/08 and may continue to fluctuate year on year according to the rate of inflation.

Further Education: Disadvantaged Students

Mr Elliott asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the assistance his Department is giving to students entering further education from a disadvantaged socio-economic background. (AQW 3043/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: The Department provides Further Education Colleges directly and through the Education and Library Boards with funding to provide financial support to Further Education students, including those from disadvantaged socio-economic backgrounds, through a number of earmarked initiatives detailed below.

Support Funds (Discretionary) are specifically earmarked for the purpose of providing assistance for students in particular financial hardship and who are inhibited by financial considerations from accessing and participating in Further Education, or who, for whatever reason including physical or other disabilities, face financial difficulties. In the 2008/09 academic year £2.5m is available for this purpose.

Further Education Awards are administered by the Western Education and Library Board and provide financial assistance to full time students in respect of courses approved by the Department. Awards can include assistance toward tuition fees, support for living costs, childcare and Disability Student's Allowance. In the 2008/09 academic year £3.25m is available for this purpose.

Care to Learn NI Scheme – in the 2008/09 academic year £400k is made available to Further Education Colleges to provide financial assistance for childcare support to 16 to 20 year-old parents who may be inhibited by financial considerations from accessing and participating in Further Education.

Educational Guidance Service for Adults

Mr Attwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning if he plans to suspend the proposed adult guidance tender process and continue to provide funding for the Educational Guidance Service for Adults beyond March 2009, so it can meet the needs of the increased number of people made redundant and seeking advice in the current economic difficulties. (AQW 3283/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: The Educational Guidance Service for Adults currently receives funding to support my Department in the provision of educational guidance services to adults and to introduce adults to learning.

The need to clarify the services required by the Department's customers and to ensure that these services are appropriately provided and demonstrate value for money is particularly crucial in the current economic climate.

My Department is currently scoping a tender to take account of the current economic situation and proposed changes to adult guidance services in Great Britain. I have no plans to suspend the tender process although the timing may be affected by the scoping exercise and the delay in the launch of the Careers Education, Information, Advice and Guidance Strategy and Implementation Plan.

Education Maintenance Allowance: Delay

Mr Lunn asked the the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the causes of delay in the provision of the education maintenance allowance. (AQW 3328/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: There is currently no delay in the provision of education maintenance allowance. All applications received have been processed. To date over 22,000 applications have been received and over 17,000 have been approved for payment, a further 1,000 have been deemed ineligible.

There are currently some 4,000 applications which are unable to be processed due to insufficient information. These students have been contacted and asked to supply the missing evidence.

ENTERPRISE, TRADE AND INVESTMENT

Electricity Generation

Mr Kennedy asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail (i) the electricity generated in each of the last 5 years; and (ii) the anticipated amount of electricity to be generated (a) this year; and (b) next year; and what is the current margin between anticipated demand for electricity and generating capacity, allowing for maintenance and intermittent generation. (AQW 2836/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (Mrs A Foster): The System Operator for Northern Ireland (SONI) has provided the following information in respect of electricity generation within Northern Ireland for use in Northern Ireland. The information represents the generation output required to meet Northern Ireland demand.

(I) ELECTRICITY GENERATED IN EACH OF THE LAST 5 YEARS

Year	Generated Energy (GWh)
2003	8608

Year	Generated Energy (GWh)
2004	8800
2005	8937

(II) THE ANTICIPATED AMOUNT OF ELECTRICITY TO BE GENERATED (A) THIS YEAR; AND (B) NEXT YEAR

Year	Forecast Generated Energy (GWh)
2008	9343

(III) THE CURRENT MARGIN BETWEEN ANTICIPATED DEMAND FOR ELECTRICITY AND GENERATING CAPACITY, ALLOWING FOR MAINTENANCE AND INTERMITTENT GENERATION:

GENERATION SURPLUS:

Electricity Demand	Generator Availability	2009	2010
Medium	High	446MW	586MW

Electricity Generation

Mr Kennedy asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what plans she has to change the sources and means of electricity generation over the next 10 years. (AQW 2837/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: My Department is currently reviewing Northern Ireland's generation mix as part of the development of a revised Strategic Energy Framework for Northern Ireland. Continued reliance on fossil fuels for 94% of power generation within Northern Ireland is not sustainable.

The All Island Grid Study jointly developed by my Department and its Irish counterpart, the Department of Communications, Energy and Natural Resources, concluded that it was technically feasible for up to 42% of power generation to come from renewable sources. Wind represented the most cost effective technology.

It is likely therefore that onshore wind will continue to be the main source of future renewable electricity generation but I do expect other renewable resources, such as offshore wind and marine energy to make a greater contribution over the medium to longer term.

Start A Business Programme: Derry/Londonderry

Ms Anderson asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the adverse impact on the economy in the Derry/Londonderry area of the decision to remove the grant for the Start A Business Programme (SABP) and to detail what steps she intends to take to redress this impact. (AQW 3234/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: The decision to remove the £400 grant from the Start A Business Programme was as a result of the recommendations of an independent evaluation which highlighted serious concerns surrounding value for money and the fact that a majority of participants indicated that they would have completed the Programme without grant.

The removal of the one off payment of £400 came into effect in April 2008 and, given the short period of time that has elapsed, and the often long lead times for applicants to progress through the Programme, it is too early to assess the full impact of this decision both across Northern Ireland and within the Londonderry area. The impact of the grant withdrawal is also likely to be "masked" by the economic downturn which may deflate confidence levels for those contemplating starting a business.

I have asked for the participation levels on the current Programme to be kept under review and, in the absence of grant support from the Programme, there are still a number of financial support options available to those considering starting a new business.

The Enterprise NI Loan Fund, for example, is one obvious source of finance, which has been under utilised in recent years, and we will be encouraging Enterprise NI to raise the profile of this option. The Prince's Trust also operates a loan fund (supported by Invest NI) for young entrepreneurs from disadvantaged backgrounds and the Department for Employment and Learning provides an allowance to those pursuing the Steps to Work self-employment route, the majority of whom will have previously been unemployed or economically inactive.

Start A Business Programme: North West Marketing Ltd

Ms Anderson asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment if she will reinstate the grant for the Start A Business Programme (SABP), in light of the conclusions by North West Marketing Ltd. which estimate that the removal of the grant will lead to a reduction of 185 start ups this year at a cost of up to 333 jobs and the loss of an economic contribution of £5.9m to the Derry/Londonderry economy. (AQW 3235/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: The decision to remove the £400 grant from the Start A Business Programme was as a result of the recommendations of an independent evaluation which highlighted serious concerns surrounding value for money and the fact that a majority of participants indicated that they would have completed the Programme without grant.

The removal of the one off payment of £400 came into effect in April 2008 and, given the short period of time that has elapsed, and the often long lead times for applicants to progress through the Programme, it is too early to assess the full impact of this decision both across Northern Ireland and within the Londonderry area.

I cannot comment on the research undertaken by North West Marketing as I have not had sight of the report or the criteria used. On-line monitoring by Invest NI, although indicating some reduction in numbers, does not show a significant decline in enquiries and it is difficult to say whether any decline is due to grant removal or to the depressing effect of the harsh economic climate.

The decision to remove the grant remains in place, however in view of the current economic conditions, I have asked for the participation levels on the current Programme to be kept under review over the coming months.

In the absence of grant support from the Programme, there are still a number of financial support options available to those considering starting a new business. The Enterprise NI Loan Fund, for example, is one obvious source of finance, which has been under-utilised in recent years, and we will be encouraging Enterprise NI to raise the profile of this option. The Prince's Trust also operates a loan fund (supported by Invest NI) for young entrepreneurs from disadvantaged backgrounds and the Department for Employment and Learning provides an allowance to those pursuing the Steps to Work self-employment route, the majority of whom will have previously been unemployed or economically inactive.

ENVIRONMENT

Planning Policy Statement: 12/14

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the timescale for revisions to (i) Planning Policy Statement 12; and (ii) Planning Policy Statement 14. (AQW 2167/09)

The Minister of the Environment (Mr S Wilson): Draft PPS 21(which replaces draft PPS14) was published for consultation and with immediate effect on Tuesday 25 November. Now that it has issued, I look forward to beginning work on PPS12.

Illegally Dumping: Fines

Mr Hamilton asked the Minister of the Environment how many (i) individuals; and (ii) companies; were fined for illegally dumping waste originating in the Republic of Ireland, and the amount of these fines, in each of the last three years. (AQW 2772/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) prepares prosecution cases for illegal dumping under the Waste and Contaminated Land (NI) Order 1997. The charges brought under this Order do not relate to the origin of the waste, but to its illegal deposit.

The following fines were imposed against named offenders over the past three years, in relation to illegal deposit of waste from the Republic of Ireland:

- 2006, £52,250 in fines against 10 offenders;
- 2007, £113,900 against 11 offenders;
- between January and October 2008, £50,000 against 3 offenders; making a total of 24 offenders over the last three years.

No limited companies have been prosecuted during the past three years; any other sole traders or partnerships operating under trading names would have been prosecuted as individuals.

ASDA Superstore: Junction One

Mr Burnside asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the status of the planning application for the ASDA superstore at Junction One, Antrim, which has been in the system for several years. (AQW 2778/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The application was submitted to the Department on 31 July 2006 and was designated as a major application under the Article 31 procedures.

Further information received on 13th October 2008 was subject to consultation and publicity and is currently under consideration. The application will be processed as quickly as it is possible to do so.

Planning Service

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment how many representations his predecessor as Minister of the Environment, made to the Planning Service during her tenure. (AQW 2792/09)

The Minister of the Environment: A search of Planning Service records shows that Arlene Foster MLA, as the former Minister of the Environment, did not make any representation to the Agency during her period in office.

Energy from Waste Facility

Mrs Long asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the environmental issues relating to the North Foreshore site as a possible location for arc21's proposed Energy from Waste (EfW) facility. (AQW 2824/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The Waste Management Groups, working on behalf of the councils and in line with their responsibilities to provide waste facilities, are operationally responsible for considering the suitability of specific sites. No planning application has been submitted for an Energy from Waste plant in the North Foreshore area of Belfast. I am aware of the proposed consultation by Belfast City Council for a proposed EfW plant at this site.

If an application is submitted to the Department, the Planning Service will be required to formally assess environmental issues in the planning process and take a balanced, measured decision. It would not be appropriate for me as Minister to usurp their role in this regard.

Flood Relief: Claims from Craigavon Borough Council

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of the Environment what is the monetary value of the 131 claims that have been forwarded by Craigavon Borough Council to his Department for flood relief; and when payment is likely to be made for these claims. (AQW 2865/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Craigavon Borough Council has submitted a claim to the Department, dated 14 November 2008, seeking reimbursement of expenditure totalling £133,297.63 incurred under the “Scheme of Emergency Financial Assistance to District Councils”.

129 payments of £1,000 were made to individual householders by the Council and £129,000, which is a part-payment, is currently being processed. The Council has been asked to provide clarification on some aspects of the balance of £4,297.63 and once this information is received, reimbursement of the remaining eligible costs will also be made.

GAA Sports Complex: Burrenbridge Road, Castlewellan

Mr Wells asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the representations to the Planning Service by (i) Members of Parliament; and (ii) MLAs, in support of the application to build a GAA sports complex on the Burrenbridge Road, Castlewellan. (AQW 2873/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The Divisional Office currently holds records of one letter of support dated 2 April 2008 from Councillor Margaret Ritchie MLA.

Climate Change

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment what has he done to combat climate change since taking up office. (AQW 2875/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Since taking up office, my Department has:-

- provided input to many EU, UK and Northern Ireland policies that will ultimately lessen the impact of climate change; and
- raised awareness of the impacts and effects of climate change through partnership working.

Northern Ireland Tourist Board

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of the Environment to detail Planning Service’s policy of consultation with the Northern Ireland Tourist Board on tourism planning applications; and to explain why the Northern Ireland Tourist Board has not been consulted in relation to planning application P/2008/0408/F. (AQW 2878/09)

The Minister of the Environment: My Department will consult Northern Ireland Tourist Board on tourism applications on a case by case basis based on the location and size of the proposal. In addition to consulting the NITB, my Department must be satisfied that a full assessment against the relevant policy has been carried out for all tourism proposals. Any proposal located in the countryside must be assessed against the development plan and the relevant policies contained in A Planning Strategy for Rural Northern Ireland and draft PPS 21 – Sustainable Development in the Countryside and any other material considerations.

Given the small scale of planning application P/2008/0408/F which is for the retention of 2No. 1 bedroom holiday cottages the Divisional Planning Office deemed it not necessary to consult with the Northern Ireland Tourist Board on this occasion.

Planning Application: P/2008/0408/F

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of the Environment, in relation to planning application P/2008/0408/F, if he will provide copies of photographs referred to in the case officer’s reports that are currently being withheld. (AQW 2881/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The Ordnance Survey photographs referred to in the case officer's report on planning application P/2008/0408/F have now been released and a copy sent to the applicant's solicitor as required.

Planning Service: Presumption Against Planning Permission

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of the Environment to explain the Planning Service's definition of 'presumption against planning permission'. (AQW 2882/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The planning system exists to regulate the development and use of land in the public interest. Paragraph 59 of PPS 1: General Principles clearly states that my Department's guiding principle in determining planning applications is that development should be permitted having regard to the development plan and all other material considerations therefore there is a presumption in favour of development unless the proposed development would cause demonstrable harm to interests of acknowledged importance. In such cases my Department has the power to refuse planning applications. Operational planning policy is drafted to seek to ensure that interests of acknowledged importance are protected in the determination of planning applications. The general presumption against development in Green Belts and Countryside Policy areas in the former Planning Strategy for Rural Northern Ireland has now been removed with the publication of draft PPS 21, with the exception of limited areas of very high scenic value.

Planning Service: Presumption in Favour of Planning Permission

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of the Environment to explain the Planning Service's definition of 'presumption in favour of planning permission'. (AQW 2883/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Further to my answer to AQW 2882/09 the planning system exists to regulate the development and use of land in the public interest. Paragraph 59 of PPS1: General Principles states that the Department's guiding principle in determining planning applications is that development should be permitted, having regard to the development plan and all other material considerations therefore there is a presumption in favour of development unless the proposed development will cause demonstrable harm to interests of acknowledged importance. In such cases my Department has the power to refuse planning applications. Operational planning policy is drafted to seek to ensure that interests of acknowledged importance are protected in the determination of planning applications.

Planning Service: Substantially Built Up Road Frontage

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of the Environment to explain the Planning Service's definition of 'substantially built up road frontage', in the context of infill sites. (AQW 2884/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The term 'substantially built up road frontage' is contained within Policy CTY8 of draft PPS 21, 'Ribbon Development' which replaced draft PPS14 on Tuesday 24 November 2008.

In the context of infill development this term relates to a situation where it may be appropriate to develop a small gap site for up to two houses, within an otherwise substantial and continuously built up frontage, provided certain planning and environmental criteria are met.

This is normally where there are a significant number of dwellings side by side fronting onto a road. It may be appropriate to allow infilling of small gap in such a frontage in accordance with the above policy. However, individual planning applications will be assessed in accordance with the merits of the application site.

Audit Committee

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of the Environment which Councils have yet to agree to the establishment of an Audit Committee; and to detail the reasons for the delay in this matter. (AQW 2894/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Whilst it is not a statutory requirement for district councils to establish Audit Committees, it is considered good practice.

21 district councils have Audit Committees in place and the first meeting of Strabane District Council's Audit Committee is planned for February 2009.

The Department has been advised that Carrickfergus Borough Council has subsumed the audit function within its Corporate Governance Committee and that Lisburn City Council has incorporated the audit function within its Corporate Services Committee. Moyle District Council has recently established an Audit and Governance Working Group, as the Council does not operate a formal committee system. Magherafelt District Council does not have an Audit Committee.

Rural Communities: Dispersed

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the settlements that have been designated as 'dispersed rural communities'; and (ii) the criteria for this designation. (AQW 2906/09)

The Minister of the Environment: In my recent speech to the Assembly, on the Launch of PPS 21 Sustainable Development in the Countryside, I outlined that I propose to re-instate Dispersed Rural Communities (DRC) as a policy designation in rural areas. I also indicated that there are currently twelve such settlements in adopted Area Plans these are:

Fermanagh Area Plan 2007

- Aghadrumsee, Aghakillymaud, Boho, Cashel, Coa, Cooneen, Corraney, Derrygannon, Knocks, Mullaghdund and Mulleek

Cookstown Area Plan 2010

- Broughderg and Davagh Upper.

There is a further DRC proposed in the draft Magherafelt Area Plan 2015 at Carntogher. This will not be confirmed until the plan is adopted following the Independent Examination which opens in February.

I have attached as Annex 1 the relevant section of PPS 21 which gives the criteria for the designation of a DRC.

Annex 1

Extract From Public Consultation Draft PPS 21 Sustainable Development in the Countryside Dispersed Rural Communities

4.5 In the interests of promoting rural regeneration, and in recognition of the strong sense of belonging and sense of place in certain rural areas the Department, through the development plan process, will identify and designate Dispersed Rural Communities (DRC) after consultation with District Councils, local communities and the public. The development plan may also bring forward local policies, to amplify and complement regional policy, on matters specific to the local circumstances which exist within particular DRCs.

4.6 The criteria for designation as a DRC includes:

- location in a remoter rural area and away from areas of development pressure close to existing towns;
- association with a traditional focal point, where there is convincing evidence of local community activity; with the existence of social and recreational facilities, such as a church, hall, school, community centre or sports club;
- other facilities or services, such as a shop, public house or sewage treatment works;
- a strong community identity. This could manifest itself through a local community association, church organisation or sports club; and
- a locally significant number of dwellings that have been built over time. Although these places are not nucleated settlements, they will have to be more than just open countryside. A build-up or cluster of recently built houses will normally not be considered as fulfilling this criterion.

4.7 A limit of development will not necessarily be drawn round the existing dispersed settlement pattern, as this may be an unnecessary obstacle to promoting the regeneration of the community and gives no indication of the availability of housing or other sites.

Planning Service: Omagh District

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of the Environment how many planning applications in the Omagh district have been deferred; and if his Department (i) has allocated; or (ii) is planning to allocate, additional personnel resources to the western division of Planning Service to expedite the reassessment exercises in the Omagh district. (AQW 2907/09)

The Minister of the Environment: There are currently 330 deferred applications in Omagh District. 217 of these applications have been recommended for refusal under dPPS14 and await reconsideration under dPPS21 which was introduced on 25 November 2008.

The 113 non dPPS14 deferrals are subject to ongoing negotiation with applicants and agents on such matters as amended design.

The 217 dPPS 14 deferrals constitute an historic backlog which will be re assessed chronologically. This exercise, which has begun and should be completed by June 2009, is being undertaken by the Omagh District Planning Team and a Principal Planning Officer. No new staff resources have been allocated to this work.

Road Safety Strategy

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on developments in the review of the Road Safety Strategy. (AQW 2915/09)

The Minister of the Environment: A replacement for the current road safety strategy is planned for introduction in 2010. A small team in DOE is coordinating the preparation of the new strategy and taking forward supporting preparatory reports and research projects.

A project board comprising senior officials from the statutory road safety partners has also been set up to oversee the development of the strategy. The Board held its inaugural meeting in October 2008.

Reports on the existing strategy, general progress and the current road safety position in Northern Ireland are being finalised for circulation in the New Year.

A number of research projects are also in progress and contracts are expected to be awarded early in 2009. These include:

- consideration of whether there is a link between child pedestrian casualties and deprivation;
- a road safety benchmarking exercise;
- an investigation into riders' and drivers' behaviours and attitudes to motorcycling safety; and
- a review of relevant road safety research and identification of any gaps.

Preparations for workshops with statutory stakeholders, planned for February 2009, are under way. These will be followed by engagement with external stakeholders, which I would anticipate beginning in April/May 2009.

Road Fatalities: Financial Cost

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the financial cost of each road fatality. (AQW 2917/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The latest figures supplied by the Department for Transport indicate that each death on the roads costs £1,648,390.

Road Traffic Accidents: Financial Cost

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the financial cost of injuries resulting from road traffic accidents. (AQW 2918/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The latest figures supplied by the Department for Transport indicate that each serious injury on the roads costs £185,220 and each slight injury £14,280.

Cycling Proficiency Scheme

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of the Environment to breakdown the per capita costs to his Department of the Cycling Proficiency Scheme in schools; and the comparable figures in (i) England; (ii) Scotland; and (iii) Wales. (AQW 2919/09)

The Minister of the Environment: My Department has responsibility for road safety, and Road Safety Education Officers promote and deliver a range of road safety initiatives, including cycle training, in schools. The time spent by Road Safety Education Officers on individual road safety initiatives is not recorded because they often cover more than one road safety topic when visiting a school. Consequently, it is not possible to provide a precise per capita cost of the Cycling Proficiency Scheme.

I can confirm that the annual cost of delivering the scheme is around £84K plus staff costs, and this figure includes the payment to individual teachers who provide instruction to pupils, and the cost of producing the teaching resource pack, which includes a DVD. Since 2004, retail group Centra has sponsored the scheme, and the current level of sponsorship is just under £6K per annum. In 2007, 596 primary schools, out of around 885 primary schools in Northern Ireland, participated in the scheme, and just over 8,500 children were trained. The Cycling Proficiency Scheme involves up to 12 hours of training activity, including a two-hour test. The suggested maximum pupil/instructor ratio is 12:1. The scheme is playground based but schools are actively encouraged to provide an element of on-road training where appropriate. The number of schools involved in the Cycling Proficiency Scheme has increased over the last five years from just over 500 to the current figure.

I understand that the Department for Transport (DfT), which has responsibility for encouraging sustainable transport and cycling to school initiatives, is providing £140M over 3 years to local authorities to encourage the development of Bikeability in England. The Bikeability scheme operates at three levels. Level 1 consists of three hours off-road tuition delivered in one or more sessions with a ratio of one instructor to 15 trainees or less. Level 2 consists of five sessions with a maximum of 12 children and includes four 90-minute sessions on local roads with a pupil/instructor ratio of 6:1. Level 3 is usually taught 1:1 in a two hour session. The grant provided by DfT is based on £40 for each child trained up to Level 2 standard. DfT does not provide financial assistance for Level 3. Approximately fifty per cent of local authorities have introduced Bikeability. The remainder are continuing with the Cycling Proficiency Scheme.

Road Safety Scotland produces cycling material and encourages the take up of the Scottish Cycle Training Scheme. However, all instructors are volunteers, who receive no financial support directly or indirectly from Road Safety Scotland. The Scottish scheme is very similar to the Northern Ireland scheme with the vast majority of children receiving off road training only, although participation in on road training is increasing. Data on the number of children trained has not been recorded until recently and will not be available until 2009. Road Safety Scotland has taken a firm decision not to introduce Bikeability.

The Department is aware that the Welsh Assembly has provided a grant to encourage participation in Bikeability but it has not been possible to obtain details of the amount of grant awarded or the conditions attached.

You will note from the above that it is not possible to make direct comparisons between the different areas in the United Kingdom. Also, those providing cycle training are doing so for different reasons. From the Northern Ireland perspective, my Department must have regard to its statutory duty, which is to promote road safety in order to reduce the number of people killed and seriously injured on Northern Ireland's roads. Resources are therefore targeted primarily at addressing the main causes of road traffic casualties.

Cycling casualties have been falling for a number of years. Figures for the period up to 3 December 2008 show that two pedal cyclists have been killed so far this year compared with two for the same period in 2007 and none in 2006. There have been no child cyclist fatalities since 2005. Over the last three years, 10 children, on average, have been seriously injured on bikes. This represents a reduction of over 64% on the average of 28 for the baseline period of 1996-2000. The figures suggest that while there is no room for complacency the current approach to the delivery of cycle training for children is working.

Planning Applications

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of the Environment if Planning Service is required to take the proximity of utilities into account, when assessing a planning application; and will he clarify when a planning application is submitted for a building that is not a safe distance from Extra High Tension cables, he has the authority to refuse the application. (AQW 2993/09)

The Minister of the Environment: While there is no specific policy for the assessment of planning applications in close proximity to high tension cables, my Department ensures that Northern Ireland Electricity plc (NIE) are consulted on all individual planning applications on land crossed by existing overhead power lines. NIE advise Divisional Planning Offices and developers on operational safe clearances for such proposals. The advice given by NIE with regard to the necessary clearance at a specific location is dependent on a number of factors. This includes the location of the line passing over and the lines' construction, design and operating voltage. Operators of overhead power lines are required to maintain safe conditions in compliance with legislation which are administered by my colleague Arlene Foster's Department of Enterprise Trade and Investment (DETI).

Paragraph 59 of PPS 1: General Principles clearly states that my Department's guiding principle in determining planning applications is that development should be permitted having regard to the development plan and all other material considerations unless the proposed development would cause demonstrable harm to interests of acknowledged importance. In such cases my Department has the power to refuse planning applications.

PPS 21

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of the Environment to detail what consultation his Department has had with the Council of Mortgage Lenders on PPS 21. (AQW 3056/09)

The Minister of the Environment: My Department has had no consultation with the Council of Mortgage Lenders on Draft PPS21. The Council has however been advised of the publication of the new policy and will therefore have the opportunity like all others during this public consultation phase, to comment on all aspects of the document.

Down High School

Mr Wells asked the Minister of the Environment to explain the reasons for the delay in approving the planning application for a new Down High School at a site on the Strangford Road, Downpatrick. (AQW 3063/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The South Eastern Education and Library Board is proposing, subject to the granting of planning permission, to construct a new 1,100 pupil High School at Strangford Road, Downpatrick.

The proposal is at pre-application discussion stage and a series of meetings have been held with planning officials from the Strategic Projects Division which have proven to be extremely productive in terms of identifying and exploring the key issues associated with the proposal. To date a planning application has not been submitted.

I understand that the Education Board is currently compiling the necessary information in order to submit a planning application. Indications are, at this stage, that it may be submitted early 2009.

Should a planning application be forthcoming my officials will process it as quickly as it is possible to do so.

PPS 14

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister of the Environment the reasons why his Department did not carry out a strategic environmental assessment on PPS 21 given that the Department for Regional Development considered this assessment was required under the strategic environmental assessment directive for PPS 14. (AQW 3158/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Draft PPS 21 is neither a plan nor a programme under the terms of the relevant EC Directive. Consequently a Strategic Environmental Assessment is not required.

Ministerial Visits: Transport Used

Mr Gallagher asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to the answer to AQW 2568/09, to detail the number of occasions when he has used (i) public transport; and (ii) any form of transport other than his ministerial car, when carrying out official visits. (AQW 3168/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Since taking up office I have carried out a few visits using my own car.

FINANCE AND PERSONNEL

Energy from Waste Facility

Mrs Long asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the impact on domestic rates for householders across the arc21 group of councils, if a suitable location for a proposed Energy from Waste (EfW) plant is not agreed. (AQW 2825/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel (Mr N Dodds): Any speculation around the potential impact on ratepayers is purely hypothetical and clearly it is important to ensure that ratepayers are not caused any needless concern, particularly given the pressures on household budgets at this time.

Meanwhile, my Department will continue to work closely with DOE, arc21 and Local Councils on this important matter.

Capital Programme 2008-09

Mr O'Loan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the known and anticipated changes to the funds available for the capital programme of the Executive for 2008-09, since the Budget was agreed. (AQW 2827/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: The funds available for the capital programme of the Executive consist of Capital Department Expenditure Limits (DEL), funded via the block grant from the Treasury, and borrowing under the Reinvestment and Reform Initiative. This may be further supplemented by capital receipts income.

Since the Budget 2008-11 was published, the main change to Capital DEL has been the addition of the £100 million draw down of End Year Flexibility, which was agreed with the Treasury as part of the CSR settlement. There have also been adjustments to reflect the Chancellor's Budget and Pre Budget Report additions of £1.8 million and transfers to GB departments of £2.6 million.

The Pre Budget report also allowed the Executive the option of accelerating £9.4 million of capital expenditure from 2010-11 into 2008-09. This will be considered as part of the December Monitoring process.

The majority of capital receipts identified in the Budget were expected to come from the disposal of surplus assets. The level of receipts from this source has obviously been affected by the downturn in the local property market and this will in turn impact on the capital funds available for the Executives investment programme. The largest single instance of this has been the delay of the Workplace 2010 project which has resulted in the potential £175 million capital receipt not being realised in this financial year.

The in-year capital position will be considered in detail during the December Monitoring round the outcome of which will be the subject of a statement to the Assembly on 15 December.

Carbon Neutral Government Estate

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel if his Department is still on course to deliver a carbon neutral government estate by 2015. (AQW 2879/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: The strategy being implemented to create a carbon neutral government estate is based on reducing the amount of office space occupied by the NICS, improving the energy efficiency of the buildings occupied and sourcing energy from low and zero carbon technologies where this is commercially viable. Ultimately carbon offsetting will be required for the remaining emissions.

The move to a Workplace 2010 compliant office estate will provide a major contribution towards the implementation of the strategy to create a carbon neutral estate. The current suspension of the procurement has the potential to impact on the strategy and will be reviewed in early 2009.

Public Sector Job Location

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel if there will be a green book cost and benefit analysis for each proposal for the decentralisation of public sector jobs. (AQW 2913/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: The recommendations of Professor Bain's independent review have to be carefully considered by government before any decisions on a way forward can be reached. On 21 October 2008, during the Assembly debate on the location of public sector jobs, I gave an assurance to the Assembly that I would in due course report to the Executive on how the issue of relocation should be addressed. That assurance included a commitment to consider value for money.

To date, I have written to Executive Ministers asking for their views on location and on receipt of their responses, I will put these together with the views of the Finance and Personnel Committee and the points raised during the debate, and will bring my proposals to the Executive in the New Year. An important part of my deliberations will be the issue of affordability, the deployment of resources and the level of priority that should be attached to the value-for money case.

Public Sector Job Location

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to report on the conclusions that he has drawn in relation to the potential relocation of public sector jobs, from the de facto freezing of the similar process in the Republic of Ireland. (AQW 2914/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: Professor Bain's report takes account of the experience of relocation of public sector jobs in the Irish Republic and the other jurisdictions in the United Kingdom. He has concluded from his research that relocation in Northern Ireland should be modest and that we should proceed with caution. He has also proposed that relocation should be considered in the context of pilot projects and that any initiatives should be phased. I will be considering his recommendations carefully, as well as the lessons learned from elsewhere, when putting my conclusions to the Executive in the New Year.

Land at Ballee, Ballymena

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the quality of valuation work carried out by the Valuation and Lands Agency, and Land and Property Services in 2007, on the Department for Social Development's landholding at Ballee, Ballymena. (AQW 3003/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: Valuation and Lands Agency (VLA), now Land and Property Services, was instructed in February 2007 by the Department of Social Development to provide a valuation of the lands at Ballee to inform the Department's discussions with the former owners of the land.

VLA was then instructed in March 2007 to undertake negotiations with Agents representing the former owners but agreement was not reached on value. Subsequently, Land and Property Services was asked to provide further updates to reflect the rapid growth in property values that the market was experiencing at the time.

This work was carried out promptly and professionally by experienced senior staff in the Agency and I am confident of the quality of both the valuations and advice provided to DSD.

eHR Project: Resourcing Costs

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to state the resourcing costs of the eHR project from its launch, for (i) the management of the tendering process, including legal, consultancy and direct costs, incurred by his Department and (ii) direct input from the Northern Ireland Civil Service staff. (AQW 3033/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: The costs of the eHR project from its launch in 2002/3 for the management for the tendering process are:

Total	£362,000	£1,046,000	£2,484,000	£3,866,000

Implementation work on the eHR project commenced in April 2006. The costs of direct input from Northern Ireland Civil Service staff are:

	2006/07	2007/08	2008/09
DFP Staff Costs (inc GAE)	£1,082,000	£1,598,000	£1,818,000
Other Departments' Costs (funded by DFP)	£598,000	£1,092,000	£789,000
Total	£1,680,000	£2,690,000	£2,607,000

These costs include the planned expenditure for the remainder of the 2008/9 financial year.

Clostridium Difficile

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of death certificates that list Clostridium Difficile as the primary cause of death, from 1 January 2006 to date, broken down by year and Health and Social Care Trust. (AQW 3067/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: The attached table gives the number of deaths registered in Northern Ireland between 1 January 2006 and 30 June 2008, where Clostridium difficile was recorded as the underlying cause of death by year and the Health and Social Care Trust in which the deceased died.

Table: Number of deaths registered with Clostridium difficile<sup>1</sup> as the underlying cause of death by Health and Social Care Trust, 1 January 2006 - 30 June 2008<sup>P</sup>

Rates Relief Scheme

Mr Poots asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what consideration his Department has given to the introduction of a small business rates relief scheme, based on the Welsh model. (AQW 3081/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: I would refer the Member to the answer I provided to Mr Simon Hamilton on 1 December in response to his question on a small business rate relief scheme for Northern Ireland, (AQO 1368/09).

I hope to be able to make an announcement shortly.

Human Resource Services

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what financial savings are expected to arise from the outsourcing of human resource services over the period of the eHR contract. (AQW 3096/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: The outsourcing of Human Resource services through the eHR Contract has resulted in financial savings being generated from the redeployment of in the region of 500 NICS staff to other duties in the NICS as well as savings achieved through the termination of existing HR services contracts. These financial savings are being used to fund the eHR service charges over the life time of the contract to deliver a modern, faster, more, effective personnel service which supports the NICS and NIO in meeting their business objectives.

Senior Civil Service: Female Representation

Ms J McCann asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what steps he is taking to combat the under-representation of women in the Senior Civil Service and in professional and specialist grades. (AQW 3119/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: My officials are currently undertaking an in-depth analysis of gender in all grades and disciplines across the Service. It is hoped that the results of this analysis will be available in the new year and we will then be in a position to consider what action is required to address areas of under representation.

In the meantime, in order to attract as wide an applicant pool as possible we will continue to make extensive use of open recruitment to fill posts in senior grades. Recruitment advertisements also include a statement welcoming applications from under-represented groups, including females. Appointments are, however, based on merit.

Government Contracts: Procurement

Mr Gallagher asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQO 1387/09, to detail all of the procurement arrangements in place for the awarding of (i) major Government contracts; (ii) all other contracts dealt with on behalf of Government; and (iii) all other contracts dealt with on behalf of other public authorities. (AQW 3156/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: Public procurement activity by all NI Government Departments, their Agencies, NDPBs and Public Corporations is governed by the EU Treaty, EU Directives, the Public Contracts Regulations 2006 (PCR 2006) and NI Public Procurement Policy. All procurement activity by these bodies is conducted through the Central Procurement Directorate or a relevant Centre of Procurement Expertise (CoPE). There are seven CoPEs in Northern Ireland.

Given the financial importance of procurement policy, both in terms of total spend and in relation to the Executive's budget, the Procurement Board has responsibility for the development, dissemination and co-ordination of public procurement policy and practice for the Northern Ireland public sector. The Board is responsible to the Executive and accountable to the Northern Ireland Assembly.

As Minister for Finance and Personnel I undertake the role of Chairperson to the Board. Membership of the Board comprises the Permanent Secretaries of the 11 Departments, in order to ensure that there is compliance with the agreed policies and procedures in all Departments, their Agencies, NDPBs and public corporations. Other members of the Board include the Treasury Officer of Accounts, 2 external experts without a specific sectoral interest, the Director Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) and a representative of the Comptroller and Auditor General and of the Strategic Investment Board Ltd as observers.

The Procurement Board has determined that all contracts shall be awarded on the basis of objective criteria which ensure compliance with the EU Treaty principles and which guarantee that tenders are assessed in conditions of effective competition.

Regulation 30(1) of PCR 2006 states that 'a contracting authority shall award a public contract on the basis of the offer which (a) is the most economically advantageous from the point of view of the contracting authority; or (b) offers the lowest price'.

The Programme for Government (PSA 21) and NI Public Procurement Policy have determined that contracts are to be awarded on the basis of Most Economically Advantageous Tender (MEAT) with any exceptions being subject to formal approval by the Head of Procurement for the relevant CoPE.

Regulation 30(2) requires a contracting authority to use award criteria linked to the subject matter of the contract to determine which offer is the MEAT. The Regulation lists the following award criteria – quality, price, technical merit, aesthetic and functional characteristics, environmental characteristics, running costs, cost effectiveness, after sales service, technical assistance, delivery date and delivery period and period of completion.

The award of grants is not included within the activity of public procurement as the legal requirements are different, particularly in the context of EU procurement law. However, public sector bodies which receive grants are expected to apply procurement policy to their expenditure, which only leaves grants to non-public bodies excluded.

As regards District Councils, the NI Executive accepts that their different and separate framework of accountability must be recognised and, under existing legislation, compliance with NI Public Procurement Policy can only be on a voluntary basis.

Civil Service: Pension Scheme

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what progress is being made to implement the new Pensions Post Award, Administration and Payroll Project. (AQW 3227/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: A partnership between my Department and Capita Hartshead has resulted in the successful implementation of a new Pensions Post Award Administration and Payroll solution for Civil Service Pensions (CSP). The implementation has been completed both on time on 14 May 2008 and within budget £2.7m.

Stage 2 of the project is to implement a Web-based service which will allow pensioners to have secure access to their pension details and payslips and enable them to amend some of their personal details. It is planned that this functionality will be available by February 2009.

HEALTH, SOCIAL SERVICES AND PUBLIC SAFETY

Management Consultants

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much has been paid for management consultants, in each of the last two financial years. (AQW 2639/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (Mr M McGimpsey): The total expenditure on Management Consultancy for 2007/08 was £1,114,680.

Specific information on Management Consultancy is only held by the Department for the 2007/08 financial year and is not available before that date.

Mental Health

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assistance his Department is giving to voluntary groups to address mental health problems in the community (AQW 2713/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: My Department supports voluntary organisations which operate on a regional basis throughout Northern Ireland. This year, over £750,000 has been allocated to support organisations that provide services for people with mental health problems. Local voluntary or community organisations can seek funding from the Health and Social Services Boards and Health and Social Care Trusts in whose areas they operate.

National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what funding his Department is using to meet the guidelines of the National Institute for Clinical Excellence, similar to those in place in England and Wales. (AQW 2714/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: There is no specific budget for the introduction of NICE guidelines here. Instead funding is labelled for, and therefore linked to, service developments. For example my Department identified additional funding of £9.28m/£20.3m/£39.1m over the CSR period for investment in specialist drugs. The funding is to meet specific PSA targets and also to improve access to specialist drugs including the introduction of effective new drug therapies recommended by NICE and endorsed by my Department.

Rural Communities: Elderly Population

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action the Department is taking to help elderly people in rural communities. (AQW 2715/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: My Department is committed to ensuring equality of access to health and social care services for all the people of Northern Ireland regardless of age or geographic location, and I am investing an additional £60million over the CSR period to support at least an additional 1,500 older people in the community. The HSC offers a complete range of health and social care services to elderly people in rural communities including access to community nursing, GP services, social services, allied health professional services, day care services and domiciliary care. In addition, Trusts provide a range of local initiatives specifically tailored to the needs of local elderly populations.

Residential Homes: Mid-Ulster

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many residential homes there are in the Mid-Ulster constituency. (AQW 2729/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: At 30 June 2008, there were 14 residential homes in the Mid-Ulster constituency.

Nursing Home Care: Mid-Ulster

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many elderly people in the Mid-Ulster constituency require nursing home care. (AQW 2732/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The information is not available in the form requested

Residential Care: Mid-Ulster

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many elderly people in the Mid-Ulster constituency require residential care. (AQW 2733/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The information is not available in the form requested

Children with Autism: Northern Area

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline what steps his Department is taking to address the lack of service provision for children with autism in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust area. (AQW 2735/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust have advised me that currently children with autism receive services both from within core and specialised services for example Occupational Therapy, Speech and Language, pre-school, in special schools, Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services, Child Development Centres and general paediatric services. Children are also treated within the Multi-Agency Support teams to Schools Service.

As a result of the Comprehensive Spending Review I secured £2.02m to improve autism services over the next three years, and the ASD Strategic Action Plan which is currently available for public consultation outlines the proposed areas of autism services in which this funding should be spent.

Children with Autism: Waiting Times

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what the current waiting time is for children awaiting a diagnosis of autism, in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust area. (AQW 2736/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The information requested is not collected centrally, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Learning Disabilities: Western Area

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people in the Western Health and Social Care Trust area have (i) a learning disability; and (ii) a severe learning disability. (AQW 2745/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Information provided by the Western Health & Social Care Trust indicated that:

- (i) At 25 November 2008, 2,237 people have been assessed as having a learning disability; and,
- (ii) Information on the number of people with a severe learning disability is not currently recorded.

Learning Disabilities: Western Area Funding

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the amount of money from his Department that has gone into learning disability in the Western Health and Social Care Trust area, in each of the past five years. (AQW 2746/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: My Department makes funding allocations to Health and Social Services Boards rather than Health and Social Care Trusts, therefore the information is not available in the format requested. However, Trust expenditure costs for learning disability services are held centrally. The latest figures my Department holds are for the financial year 2007/08. The table below provides the latest information available on the total amount of money spent by the Western Health and Social Care Trust on learning disability between 2003/04 and 2007/08.

WESTERN HSC TRUST TOTAL LEARNING DISABILITY EXPENDITURE 2003/04 TO 2006/07

Programme of Care	2003/04	2004/05	2005/06	2006/07	2007/08
Learning Disability (PoC6)	20,100,697	22,070,501	24,970,428	26,762,441	29,216,677

Learning Disabilities

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail how many people with a learning disability are attending adult training centres, in the Western Health and Social Care Trust area. (AQW 2747/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Information provided by the Western Health & Social Care Trust indicated that on 26 November 2008, 731 people with a learning disability were attending statutory day centres.

Care Homes: North Down/Ards

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail how many residents are in (i) Ravara House, Bangor; (ii) Loch Cuan House, Newtownards; and (iii) Northfield House, Donaghadee. (AQW 2752/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Information provided by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust is detailed below:

- (i) Ravara House, Bangor has 29 current residents and provides 13 respite beds.
- (ii) Loch Cuan House, Newtownards has 8 current residents and provides 6 respite beds and 10 intermediate care beds. There are also 9 beds currently vacant that could be used for respite or intermediate care.
- (iii) Northfield House, Donaghadee has 24 current residents and provides 1 respite bed and 17 intermediate care beds.

Respite Care Beds: North Down/Ards

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many respite care beds are provided by (i) Ravara House, Bangor; (ii) Loch Cuan House, Newtownards; and (iii) Northfield House, Donaghadee. (AQW 2753/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Information provided by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust is detailed below:

- (i) Ravara House, Bangor has 29 current residents and provides 13 respite beds.
- (ii) Loch Cuan House, Newtownards has 8 current residents and provides 6 respite beds and 10 intermediate care beds. There are also 9 beds currently vacant that could be used for respite or intermediate care.
- (iii) Northfield House, Donaghadee has 24 current residents and provides 1 respite bed and 17 intermediate care beds.

Broadway Workshop

Mr Burnside asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if he will give an assurance that the Broadway Workshop will not be closed by the Northern Health & Social Care Trust without the matter being fully investigated, especially in respect of the needs of people with learning disabilities being able to access a range of day opportunities, designed to suit the needs of everyone who attends Broadway. (AQW 2781/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The responsibility for operational matters in the provision of services rests with the Health and Social Care Trusts within Northern Ireland.

However, the Northern Health and Social Services Trust (the Trust) have advised me that under its response to the Comprehensive Spending Review it is proposing to reduce the current level of statutory day care provision and seek to provide alternative day opportunities for clients. This is in keeping with their Day Care Strategy, "Widening Choice and Opportunities".

As the Trust are currently consulting on their proposals, engaging with all interested parties and will discuss with each client and their family/carer opportunities tailored to individual needs based within the local community, I am satisfied that the necessary steps are being taken to identify the needs of each individual who attends the Broadway Workshop.

Autism: Waiting Lists

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety the number of children currently on a waiting list for autism diagnosis, in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust area. (AQW 2784/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The information requested is not collected centrally, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Autism: Staffing Levels

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety the number of staff currently working with children with autism, in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust area. (AQW 2785/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: It is not possible to quantify the number of staff working with children with autism as a large number of staff have varying degrees of involvement dependant on the child's specific circumstances. This includes Speech and Language Therapists, Occupational therapists, Paediatricians, school nursing, community dental service, Children's Challenging Behaviour Service, Transition Service and Educational Psychologists.

Patients Travelling Abroad for Treatment: Mid-Ulster

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of patients in the Mid-Ulster constituency, who have had to travel abroad for treatment. (AQW 2786/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Information on the number of patients in the Mid-Ulster constituency that have had to travel abroad for treatment is not collected centrally by the Department. Provision of such data by Health and Social Service Boards and Health and Social Care Trusts would incur a disproportionate cost.

Lagan Valley Hospital: Maternity Services

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the cost of the latest public consultation that the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has launched regarding the closure of maternity services in Lagan Valley Hospital. (AQW 2800/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: This information is not available as the Trust's consultation on a proposal to transfer consultant-led inpatient obstetric services from Lagan Valley Hospital is ongoing.

Health Service Dentists: Lagan Valley

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many Health Service dentists are available; and how many vacant patient places there are, in the Lagan Valley constituency. (AQW 2801/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: At 26th November 2008, Central Services Agency figures show that there were 42 dentists<sup>1</sup> registered to provide Health Service dental treatment in the Lagan Valley parliamentary constituency<sup>2</sup>. As the general dental services is a demand led service there is no quota of patient places and therefore information on vacant places is not available.

Notes:

1. Figures include Principal dentists only - excludes assistants and Vocational Dental Practitioners.
2. Statistics are at 26th November 2008 and are based on the location of the dental surgery where the dentist is employed.

Energy from Waste Facility

Mrs Long asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety his assessment of public health issues relating to arc21's proposals for an Energy from Waste (EfW) facility. (AQW 2823/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: My Department is not aware of any detailed proposals from arc21 relating to an energy from waste facility at this time.

Investment Delivery Plan

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to report on the development of his Department's Investment Delivery Plan. (AQW 2844/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I received a total of £3.3bn over the 10 years of the Investment Strategy 2008, just under £700m of which is in the CSR, against an identified need of £7.8bn. A major element of this investment has already been contractually committed.

In light of the funding constraints I commissioned a Review of Capital Priorities over the next 10 years. I am currently considering the report, which was completed on 30 September 2008. It has highlighted that some very difficult decisions will need to be taken in order that the limited funding available to me will be allocated to areas of highest need across all Programmes of Care, and optimise the benefits for the entire population of Northern Ireland.

Only once I have considered the report in full will my Department be in a position to publish its Investment Delivery Plan.

Neighbourhood Renewal

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much money his Department contributed to the delivery of Neighbourhood Renewal in (i) Lurgan; (ii) Brownlow; and (iii) Portadown, in each of the last three years. (AQW 2853/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: No funding has been provided by my Department to Neighbourhood Renewal in Lurgan, Brownlow or Portadown in the last three years.

Lurgan Hospital

Mr O'Dowd asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) what services will be retained at Lurgan Hospital; and (ii) are there any plans to enhance the range of services, in the next five years. (AQW 2869/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Lurgan Hospital will continue to have a lead role in Care of the Elderly services, including the assessment and rehabilitation of older people. The day hospital will continue to provide support and rehabilitation for patients on discharge, as well as facilitating medical and falls clinics.

The Southern Health and Social Care Trust is in the process of establishing a multidisciplinary, one stop assessment centre for older people at Lurgan Hospital and an early supported discharge and stroke community rehabilitation team in the Craigavon/Banbridge locality. The Trust is also exploring options to facilitate the expansion of its breast screening programme over the next 3-5 years; these will include options based on the Lurgan Hospital site.

Bipolar Disorder

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people have been diagnosed with bipolar disorder. (AQW 2893/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The information requested is not available.

Capital Building Programmes: DHSSPS

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline his Department's major capital building programmes, for the next three years. (AQW 2921/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I would refer the Member to the reply I gave Alex Easton for AQW2192/09.

Clostridium Difficile

Mr Bresland asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if he intends to include the recent outbreak of Clostridium Difficile in the Western Health and Social Care Trust area, within the remit of the public inquiry on the outbreak of Clostridium Difficile in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust area.

(AQW 2927/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I advised the Assembly on 14 October 2008 that the purpose of the public inquiry is to establish how many deaths resulted from the Clostridium difficile outbreak in Northern Trust hospitals and to examine the experiences of patients and others who were affected by that outbreak. I have no plans to change the scope of this inquiry.

I fully expect that there will be lessons to be learned from this inquiry, and all Trusts will be expected to act on these.

All five Trusts are already acting on lessons learned from Northern Trust outbreak. The report of the independent review by RQIA contained 53 recommendations. These are being implemented by my Department and the Trusts.

Until ribotyping results are received it is not known whether the three cases of C. difficile reported by the Western Trust on 20 November were an outbreak.

Princes Gardens Children's Home

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how did his Department arrive at the decision to close Princes Gardens Childrens Care Home.

(AQW 2939/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: No decision has been made to close Prince's Gardens. The Trust has proposals out for consultation. The Trust has advised that the first phase of the consultation exercise started on 23 October 2008 and will end on 19 December 2008. A second phase with the results of the Equality Impact Assessment is expected to start on 7 January 2009 and end on 4 March 2009.

Princes Gardens Children's Home

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if a financial evaluation was carried out for children's homes other than the Princes Gardens Children's Home, in Larne.

(AQW 2940/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The decision to propose efficiencies in one area of Trust activity rather than another requires the application of financial appraisal principles rather than necessarily full formal evaluation. Furthermore, since proposals in respect of Princes Gardens are also subject to public consultation, everyone will have their say.

While the unit is registered with RQIA, it is not seen as being "fit for purpose" as a 21st century Children's home. The building requires significant investment to meet and maintain current standards for children who require residential care provision. This needs to be taken into account in determining the way ahead.

Princes Gardens Children's Home

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much investment has his Department put into the Princes Gardens Children's Home, over the last ten years.

(AQW 2941/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: A number of schemes have been carried out on Princes Gardens Home in the last ten years:

Initiative	Cost	Year
Structural Fire Precautions	£17,476.80	2002
Replacement Porch	£4,989.89	2003
Fire Code Works (Estimated to start January 2009)	£25,500.00	2008/09

Initiative	Cost	Year
Ongoing maintenance and upkeep from 1 January 1999 to date, including external painting and roof repairs	£ 33,904.00
Total	£81,870.69

Princes Gardens Children's Home

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what improvements are required to the Prince's Gardens Children's Home to bring it up to standard. (AQW 2942/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Trust has advised in relation to the existing premises considerable improvements are needed to the physical external and internal condition of the house which includes major work to the roof. Other areas which require attention relate to Fire and Health and Safety issues and functional suitability including the provision of a disabled bathroom.

Health Service Users

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans he has to enshrine the right of service users to be involved throughout any consultation process, including the drafting of the final report, so that Health Service consultation is on service users rather than on medical professional, and to ensure a move from a medical to a patient based model in any reforms of the Health Service. (AQW 2949/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Health and Social Care (Reform) Bill, currently in its legislative passage through the Assembly, has provisions which require the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, the Regional Health and Social Care Board, the Regional Agency for Public Health and Social Well-being, Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts and special agencies to prepare a consultation scheme within a specified period. Each body's consultation scheme must make it clear how the Patient and Client Council, persons to whom care is being or may be provided and the carers of persons are consulted on specific HSC matters.

Rainbow Project

Ms Ni Chuilín asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what funding it has given to the Rainbow Project and to the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Community; and what plans it has to allocate future funding to this Section 75 group. (AQW 2965/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety has provided funding, in the form of grants, to The Rainbow Project since it was established in 1994. In 2008/09 my Department has made available funding of £31,652 towards the organisation's central administration costs.

In addition, my Department made available funding of £48,486 in the current financial year to voluntary organisations supporting issues relating to the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender community.

Regarding future funding, subject to the availability of resources, assessment and monitoring procedures, it is anticipated that the Department will make available funding to meet its existing funding commitments, including to those organisations in the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender community. Voluntary and community organisations may apply in the future should the Department invite project funding applications through public advertisement.

Healthcare Acquired Infections

Mrs I Robinson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if he is aware that there was a call for the Hazard Analysis and Critical Control Point Protocol to be applied to the field of Healthcare Acquired Infections by both the Chief Medical Officer, Sir Liam Donaldson, for England and Wales, and the Chair of the National Patient Safety Council, Sir Philip Hunt. (AQW 2967/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I am aware that this methodology was mentioned in the 2003 report 'Winning Ways - Working Together to Reduce Healthcare Acquired Infections' by the Chief Medical Officer for England and Wales.

Healthcare Acquired Infections

Mr Simpson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the process by which relatives are informed if patients have contracted MRSA or other hospital acquired infection, broken down for each hospital. (AQW 2978/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The process for informing patients and relatives if they have acquired MRSA or other healthcare associated infection is similar in all Trusts and is as follows.

If the patient has the capacity to understand, staff will inform the patient directly and provide them with an appropriate information leaflet if available.

The relatives of a patient with capacity to understand are informed only with consent of the patient.

If the patient does not have the capacity to understand, staff will act in the best interest of the patient. The patient's relatives will be informed and will be provided with an appropriate information leaflet if available.

Ambulances

Mr Simpson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many ambulances are operating, broken down by each division. (AQW 2979/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The table below shows the average daily number of Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (NIAS) accident and emergency ambulances operating, split between night and day shifts.

NIAS Division	Day Shift	Night Shift
East City	10	8
East Country	14	12
North	14	12
South	13	10
West	11	10
Total	62	52

Midwives

Mr Moutray asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of midwives in each Health and Social Care Trust (i) in total; (ii) per 100 births per annum; and (iii) per head of population. (AQW 2983/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The information requested is given in the table below.

Efficiency Savings Plans

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the bed closures under consideration in the efficiency savings plans of Health and Social Care Trusts. (AQW 2988/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: It is not possible to estimate reliably how many hospital beds might be affected at this time. Health and Social Care Trusts are currently consulting on a range of their efficiency proposals.

Across the CSR period I will be investing very specifically in services which keep people out of hospital when they do not need or want to be there - my Department has been tasked by the Executive with supporting more people at home as part of its Public Service Agreement. This, combined with improvements in productivity within our acute services, will lead to a reduced number of beds being needed.

Efficiency Savings Plans

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what consultations took place with unions on his Department's plans for efficiency savings. (AQW 2989/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I have met the Trade Unions on several occasions to discuss the process being undertaken by Trusts in seeking to identify efficiency savings. Currently, Health and Social Services Trusts and the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service are taking forward consultation processes on proposals. As further detail on proposals to meet efficiency demands becomes available, it is being shared with local Trade Unions on a local and regional basis.

Nursing Positions

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the cuts to nursing positions that are being planned by his Department, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust.

(AQW 2990/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I would refer the member for North Down to my answer to AQW 1423/09.

Care Homes

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail his Department's guidelines for consultation criteria when there is a proposal to close a nursing or residential home. (AQW 3036/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Departmental guidelines dictate that the consultation document must contain up-to-date information on the facility and the nature and consequences of the proposed closure, including:

- an explanation for the need for change;
- details of the services under consideration, including present activity levels;
- a description of the options considered, together with outline costs and advantages and disadvantages of each option for patients and clients;
- proposed timetable for implementation; and
- any proposals for alternative use or disposal of the facility concerned.

All interested parties should be invited to comment on proposals. It is, of course, of paramount importance that those residents potentially directly affected by such a proposal are kept fully informed, and that their views, health and well-being are given full and proper consideration during the process.

Care Homes

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what consultation is planned with the residents of a residential or nursing home, when there is a proposal to close that home. (AQW 3037/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Departmental guidelines dictate that the consultation document must contain up-to-date information on the facility and the nature and consequences of the proposed closure, including:

- an explanation for the need for change;
- details of the services under consideration, including present activity levels;
- a description of the options considered, together with outline costs and advantages and disadvantages of each option for patients and clients;
- proposed timetable for implementation; and
- any proposals for alternative use or disposal of the facility concerned.

All interested parties should be invited to comment on proposals. It is, of course, of paramount importance that those residents potentially directly affected by such a proposal are kept fully informed, and that their views, health and well-being are given full and proper consideration during the process.

Care Homes: North Down/Ards

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what future consultation is planned on the proposed closure of (i) Ravara House, Bangor; (ii) Loch Cuan House, Newtownards; and (iii) Grove House, Ballynahinch. (AQW 3038/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I refer the member to the answer I gave to AQW 2750/09. In addition officials from the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust have held meetings with residents of Ravara House, Loch Cuan House, Grove House and their families to discuss proposals for the future delivery of services for older people in the area.

Care Homes: North Down/Ards

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what consultation has taken place regarding the proposed closure of (i) Ravara House, Bangor; (ii) Loch Cuan House, Newtownards; and (iii) Grove House, Ballynahinch. (AQW 3039/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I refer the member to the answer I gave to AQW 2750/09. In addition officials from the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust have held meetings with residents of Ravara House, Loch Cuan House, Grove House and their families to discuss proposals for the future delivery of services for older people in the area.

Health and Social Care Trusts: Budget Deficits

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if any Health and Social Care Trusts have a budget deficit. (AQW 3040/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: While all trusts are currently facing financial pressures, every trust has a statutory duty to break even.

Women's Groups

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what funding has been made available by his Department to each women's group for the 2008-09 financial year; and what programme each group is funded under. (AQW 3178/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: In the financial year 2008-2009 my Department will provide core and project funding to Women's Group as listed below.

Women's Group	Funding Stream	Amount
NI Women's Aid Federation	Departmental Core Funding	£229,222
Women's Information Group	Departmental Core Funding	£17,969
Women's Information Group	Departmental Project Funding	£10,000
Women's Resource Development Agency	Departmental Core Funding	£44,752

In addition, my Department is currently funding, until March 2009, all of those projects formerly supported by the Children's Fund that support the health and social services objectives and functions of DHSSPS, including the following projects run by women's groups.

Organisation	Project Title	2008-09 Grant Offer
Ballymena Women's Aid	Domestic Violence Interagency & Community Development Worker	£37,671
Ballymurphy Women's Centre	Yahoo Project	£44,969

Cookstown & Dungannon Women's Aid	The Children's project	£42,688
Fermanagh Women's Aid	Refuge & Community based aftercare children's services	£50,500
North Down and Ards Women's Aid	Children & Domestic Violence	£12,810

Those ex-Children's Fund projects, which are the responsibility of other Departments, are currently being supported by £2 million of centrally earmarked funds until March 2009 with DHSSPS acting as the distribution point for them. They include the following women's group projects.

Organisation	Project Title	2008-09 Grant Offer
Derry Women's Centre	Moving Up Mothers (MUM)	£48,590
Falls Women's Centre	Children's Project	£35,844

Street Drinkers: Londonderry/Derry

Ms Anderson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what services are in place to meet the health needs of street drinkers, in the Londonderry/Derry area. (AQW 3223/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Western Drug and Alcohol Co-ordination Team (WDACT), through the New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs (NSD), funds the Foyle Haven in Derry, a service which was specifically developed to support the needs of the street drinkers, including their health needs. The Foyle Haven provides an accessible drop-in centre where their assessed needs can be met and appropriate care and support undertaken. They provide a meals and snacks, along with laundry, showering, clothing, and personal hygiene facilities. In addition they deliver a range of activities designed to improve the self-esteem, knowledge and well-being of service users.

There is a specific Health Worker employed to facilitate clients gaining access to primary health services, and accompanies service users to GP, hospital or treatment appointments when necessary.

The “Get Your Head Down” project is also currently being implemented. This is night shelter accommodation to be provided to the homeless drinkers in a Methodist Church Hall. The WDACT has contributed £5,000 funding to facilitate the running of this service in the short term.

Street Drinkers: Belfast

Ms Anderson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what services are in place to meet the health needs of street drinkers, in the Belfast area. (AQW 3224/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Within the Belfast area there are several organisations who offer services that help meet the needs of street drinkers, including:

- Multi-Disciplinary Homelessness Assessment Team (Extern) – which provides an assessment service at the point of contact for those with complex needs. The team is funded by the Eastern Health and Social Services Board (EHSSB), the Probation Board for Northern Ireland and the Northern Ireland Housing Executive;
- Homelessness District Nursing Service (Belfast Health and Social Care Trust) - Belfast HSC Trust has a district nursing service which focuses exclusively on those sleeping rough or in temporary accommodation. It offers a crucial primary care link and gateway for those with mental, physical health or addiction issues;
- Day Centre/Outreach Teams in Belfast (Welcome Centre and Homeplus) - There are two services operating in the Belfast aimed at addressing the physical health needs of rough sleepers including street drinkers. They provide access for people to the homeless district nursing service;
- Stella Maris Hostel (De Paul Trust) - the Stella Maris Hostel is an emergency homeless hostel providing 24/7 care to long term street drinkers in the North Belfast area. It provides a range of services from single room accommodation to full catering and laundry facilities, and during residents stay they are also engaged in a key working system which allows them to gain access to welfare rights advice, health care, education and training and any other specialist services that they may need; and
- Centenary House Crash Facility (Salvation Army) - This facility provides emergency overnight accommodation to those sleeping rough including street drinkers allowing them to gain access to shelter, food welfare rights advice and health care.

Loch Cuan Home

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what scoring the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust used in its proposal to close Loch Cuan Home, in Newtownards. (AQW 3414/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The scoring system used by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust in its proposal to close Loch Cuan Home is detailed in the consultation document available on the Trust’s website: <<http://www.setrust.hscni.net>> and clicking on ‘Involving You’.

Loch Cuan Home

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why is the Health and Social Care Trust considering the closure of Loch Cuan Home when the original decision was to build single independent units. (AQW 3416/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The original proposal by the legacy Ulster Community and Hospitals Trust, like the current proposal from the South Eastern Trust, was to close Loch Cuan and pursue the development of a Supported Housing project on the site. The Supported Housing project will be dependent upon capital and revenue funding being available from the Department of Social Development's Supporting People Programme.

Cleft Palate

Mrs O'Neill asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many children (i) have been born with a cleft palate; and (ii) are on waiting lists for corrective surgery. (AQO 1601/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Out of approximately 24,500 births in 2007/08, 29 children were born with a cleft palate or cleft palate & lip. Currently 10 children are on a waiting list for corrective surgery.

Cherry Lodge Children's Home

Mr Brolly asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what examples there are of good practice in relation to the proposals by the Northern Health and Social Care Trust to replace Cherry Lodge Children's Home with 12 specialist salaried carers to extend the family based respite scheme. (AQO 1619/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Studies show that families would like choice in the type of respite care available. In cases where children have complex health care needs, families want reassurance that their carers are competent and have access to a range of specialist advice, support and training which their children's health needs require. Evidence shows that this can be achieved in a range of settings including residential, day care, family based settings and domiciliary care within the child's own home. The Trust's proposal, is currently out to a public consultation which will end on 19th December 2008. Following the consultation the Trust will need to take account of responses in determining what respite services are most appropriate to meet the needs of disabled children. An Equality Impact Assessment and further consultation on the proposal will take place early in 2009. A final decision will not be made before March 2009 and will be made in conjunction with my Department.

Omagh Hospital Provision

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when work for the new enhanced hospital in Omagh is due to commence. (AQO 1499/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The new enhanced hospital in Omagh is currently in the process of being procured. The enabling works commenced in 2007.

I would say that I have deep concerns about the lack of support shown by the Omagh District Council for this project and asked them to confirm their support for the new hospital as planned. I have a letter from the Chief Executive of the Council confirming their endorsement and I have responded.

Drug Misuse Database

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the Drug Misuse Database April 2007 to March 2008, finding that of the clients presenting with drug misuse over a third were as a result of cocaine misuse; and what plans he has to reduce this figure. (AQO 1566/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Northern Ireland Drug Misuse Database 07/08 did not report that over a third of clients presenting were as a result of cocaine misuse. What it in fact reported was that while cocaine (including crack cocaine) was the third most commonly reported main drug of misuse, it was only reported by 10% of individuals in that period, compared to 11% in 2006/07.

However, I am very concerned about the level of cocaine use in Northern Ireland, especially among the 25-35 age group. Under the New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs work is underway to address issues relating to prevention, treatment, and enforcement of all drug misuse.

Healthcare Centres: Tyrone

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans his Department has to allocate priority funding for the development of new healthcare centres in (i) Carrickmore; and (ii) Fintona, Co Tyrone. (AQO 1613/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I received a total of £3.3bn over the 10 years of the Investment Strategy 2008, just under £700m of which is in the CSR, against an identified need of £7.8bn. A major element of this investment has already been contractually committed.

In light of funding constraints, I commissioned a Review of Capital Priorities across the entire health and social care system over the next 10 years. I am currently considering the report which has highlighted that some very difficult decisions will need to be taken in order that the limited funding available will be allocated to the areas of highest need across all Programmes of Care, including Primary & Community Care, in order to optimise the benefits for the entire population of Northern Ireland.

I have made a number of announcements recently and hope to be in a position to decide on, subject to business case approval, the HSC Trust allocations in the coming weeks.

Lagan Valley Hospital

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the public consultation issued by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust on the complete closure of maternity services at Lagan Valley Hospital, given that the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust has stated that maternity services at the Mater Hospital cannot close due to lack of capacity at the Royal Victoria Hospital. (AQO 1516/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The South Eastern Trust is currently consulting on a proposal to transfer consultant-led inpatient obstetric services from Lagan Valley Hospital, not the complete closure of maternity services at the hospital. Under the Trust's proposal, Lagan Valley will continue to provide antenatal and postnatal care.

As the consultation is under way it would not be appropriate for me to comment on the Trust's proposal at this time. I am however well aware of the pressures on maternity services. That is why I have asked the Eastern Board to review maternity services for the Greater Belfast area.

Safefood Community Food Initiative

Ms J McCann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many applications were made to the safe food community food initiative program. (AQO 1568/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: There were 94 applications made to the safefood community food initiative program. The closing date for applications was 30 September 2008.

Royal Victoria Hospital: Listeria Outbreak

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the results of the investigation into the outbreak of listeria at the Royal Victoria Hospital. (AQO 1477/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: A report is being prepared and this will be published as soon as possible after it has been finalised.

Childcare Services

Mr A Maskey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans he has to increase the provision of adequate childcare services taking into account the impact of social security legislation on lone parents. (AQO 1572/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Responsibility for Early Years policy, which includes policy responsibility for child minding, transferred from my Department to the Department of Education in November 2006, with DHSSPS remaining responsibility for the regulation and inspection.

My Department is working with the Department of Education to review childcare registration and provision. Childcare is an issue which cuts across the remit of a number of departments and at the last meeting of the Ministerial Sub-Committee it was agreed that an additional cross departmental sub group would be established to focus specifically on this issue.

This group will undertake a short exercise to consider the potential for increasing childcare provision and will link to the sub-group on child poverty. On completion of the exercise a report will be submitted to the Ministerial Sub-Committee identifying costed options.

The Department for Social Development has advised that when a lone parent claims Jobseeker's Allowance, they will be subject to the same rules that apply to other jobseekers. An adviser will draw up a jobseeker's agreement and amongst other things will discuss the availability of suitable and affordable childcare with the lone parent. Additional flexibilities will be available in Northern Ireland where suitable and affordable childcare is not available to the lone parent.

Older People's Health and Well-being

Mrs M Bradley asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the service framework for Older People's Health and Wellbeing. (AQO 1560/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: My Department has commenced the development of a service framework on the Health and Wellbeing of Older People. Work is currently underway to finalise the terms of reference for the framework and to identify and confirm the most appropriate people from within the Health and Social Care service who will lead its development. I anticipate that the draft service framework for older people will be launched for consultation early in 2010.

Mental-Health Facilities: St Lukes Hospital

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the infrastructure in place to maintain the programme to reduce the number of people with mental health illness who are in long stay hospital care, given the proposed closures of villas 1 and 2 in St. Luke's Hospital, over the next two years. (AQO 1559/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Southern Trust has developed proposals to re-settle 60 of the remaining 80 long-stay patients in St. Luke's Hospital over the next 3 years, together with plans to enhance community provision. These proposals are subject to the outcome of formal consultation commencing in December 2008.

A Project Board/Implementation Team made up of members from all the key stakeholders, has been established to oversee the resettlement programme. The Project board has been resourced to ensure all objectives are met. The individual needs of relevant patients in Villas 1 and 2 will be assessed by a multidisciplinary team and will be met in the most appropriate care environment with the full involvement of patients, their families and carers.

No patient will be discharged before the appropriate infrastructure for his/her individual needs is in place.

Autism: Facilities in West Belfast

Mr P Maskey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what facilities exist for children with autism in West Belfast. (AQO 1564/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Belfast Health & Social Care Trust have advised me that services for children with autism are situated within the Community Child Health Services and Children's Disability Services. The services operate across the Belfast Trust. North and West Belfast are covered together. Children with ASD in West Belfast are served by a number of Community Paediatricians based in the Cupar Street Clinic, and a multi-disciplinary ASD service based in the Carlisle Wellbeing centre. The multi disciplinary ASD service also provides support for the Special Schools in the area.

Fuel Poverty

Mr Cobain asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what his Department is doing to tackle fuel poverty. (AQO 1517/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: A link between living in cold, damp conditions and a number of illnesses, including poor mental health, respiratory disease, and premature mortality has long been accepted. For this reason fuel poverty was recognised as an area for action in the public health strategy, Investing for Health.

The DSD - led Fuel Poverty Strategy encourages a partnership approach to tackling fuel poverty. Locally based Investing for Health Partnerships have been working with a number of partners, including DSD, NIHE, Councils and energy agencies to identify the extent of fuel poverty in their respective areas and have put in place local strategies to help address the issue. This includes identifying those at risk, signposting and supporting clients to access appropriate initiatives such as energy efficiency advice, boiler replacements, whole house solutions, awareness raising sessions, referrals to grant schemes, and access to benefits. This work is ongoing.

Respite Facilities at Cherrylodge

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many families are on the waiting list to avail of respite facilities at Cherrylodge. (AQO 1605/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust have indicated there are 13 families on a waiting list to avail of respite facilities at Cherrylodge.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Translink: Reckless Driving

Mr Savage asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline what initiatives have been implemented by Translink in Banbridge to encourage the use of public transport, (i) in rural areas; and (ii) on the Belfast-Banbridge-Newry corridor. (AQW 2454/09)

The Minister for Regional Development (Mr C Murphy): I have been advised by Translink that it has implemented the following initiatives:-

Following the Ulsterbus Strategic Review (Banbridge, Newry, Craigavon, Armagh), Translink recently introduced an hourly frequency on all Banbridge town services Monday to Saturday, combined with a half-hour frequency to The Outlet shopping mall. New Sunday town services were introduced to Bridgewater Park.

Additional Newry to Belfast express services were introduced on 30 January 2006 serving Banbridge and Sprucefield park and ride.

£1.70 day tickets allowing unlimited day travel on Ulsterbus town services were introduced on 26 March 2007.

Translink: Fuel Purchasing

Mr Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the number of bus drivers who have been disciplined by Translink for dangerous or reckless driving; and (ii) the nature of the disciplinary action taken, in each of the last five years. (AQW 2468/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: Translink has provided me with the following information:

Year	Number of drivers disciplined for dangerous or reckless driving	Nature of disciplinary action taken
2004	Nil	-
2005	2	Final Written Warning x 2
2006	Nil
2007	7	Final Written Warning and referred to Driving School x 1 Final Written Warning x 3 Final Written Warning and 3 days' suspension x 1 Written Warning x 1 Dismissed x 1
2008 (to date)	6	Dismissed x 1 Resigned x 2 Written Warning x 1 Final Written Warning x 2

Translink

Mr Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the process Translink follows to purchase fuel; (ii) the suppliers Translink currently purchases fuel from; and (iii) the amount Translink currently pays for a litre of fuel. (AQW 2701/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have been advised by Translink that fuel procurement is carried out in accordance EU procurement legislation, under the Utilities Directive 2004/17EC, implemented in the UK by the Utilities Contracts Regulations 2006. The current supplier for ultra low sulphur diesel and gas to Translink is Nicholl Fuel Oils.

In relation to the amount paid for fuel, Translink considers that the release of this information is likely to prejudice its own commercial interests and also those of its supplier.

Southern Newry Relief Road

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister for Regional Development when the feasibility study for southern Newry relief road will be completed, and the findings published. (AQW 2722/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that the feasibility study for a Newry Southern Relief Road is nearing completion and they expect to receive the draft report in the near future. The study will consider whether this scheme is feasible and provides Value for Money.

In addition, Louth County Council are undertaking a technical study into a possible bridge crossing at Narrow Water, and it has been agreed that they and Roads Service will share information from these two projects, when the relevant studies have been completed.

I expect to be in a position to make available the findings of the feasibility study into a Newry Southern Relief Road scheme in Spring 2009, following Roads Service's consideration of the report.

Parking Penalties

Mr McCartney asked the Minister for Regional Development how much revenue has been generated from fixed and court imposed parking penalties in the last 12 months. (AQW 2738/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that £3.75 million was received through Penalty Charge Notices (PCNs) in the second year of the current parking enforcement contract, for the period 13 November 2007 – 12 November 2008.

Parking Penalties

Mr McCartney asked the Minister for Regional Development what proportion of the revenue gained from fixed and court imposed parking penalties is given to his Department. (AQW 2739/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: All revenue generated by the payment of PCNs is used, along with income from car-parking and other charges, to supplement the overall financing of Roads Service by Central Government.

Northern Ireland Water/Roads Service: Rasharkin

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the work currently being carried out by Northern Ireland Water and the Roads Service, in Rasharkin; and when this work is scheduled to be completed. (AQW 2794/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service is undertaking a Department of Social Development funded Environmental Improvement Scheme in the centre of Rasharkin. As part of the scheme, existing Northern Ireland Electricity and British Telecom overhead cables will be placed underground. This work will affect all footways on Main Street and Church Road between Moneyleck Road and Glebe Road, and also on Churchill Crescent. On completion of this work, the footways will be resurfaced and the Street Lighting will also be upgraded.

Central hatching and two pedestrian refuges will be installed along the stretch of Main Street between Bridge Street and Moneyleck Road. It is anticipated that these works will be completed by the end of February 2009.

I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water, that pipe-laying on the Rasharkin sewerage scheme is underway, with a section on the Moneyleck Road now complete and work continuing in adjacent fields. A short section along the Finvoy Road is scheduled for completion before Christmas, and the overall scheme will be completed by April 2009. Work on the watermain rehabilitation scheme in Rasharkin is presently in the final stages and should also be completed by Christmas.

Paint Resistant Kerbstones: Lisburn

Mr Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the trial of paint resistant kerbstones currently being undertaken in Lisburn. (AQW 2812/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has not undertaken a trial of paint resistant kerbstones in the Lisburn area.

However, I can advise that following concerns within the construction industry about the manual handling of very heavy concrete kerbstones, the Health and Safety Executive issued a recommendation to the construction industry, relating to the lifting and laying of concrete kerbstones.

As a result, the Section Office in Lisburn agreed to trial the use of a lightweight plastic kerb as an alternative to the traditional heavy concrete kerb. The kerbs were laid 18 months ago and to date this kerblane remains in good condition, and the plastic kerbs would appear to be performing well. The location will continue to be monitored over the coming months, before a decision will be made regarding their suitability for general use.

Park and Ride Facilities

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development how many park and ride facilities have been provided by (i) his Department; and (ii) Translink/ Northern Ireland Railways, on the Belfast to (a) Larne line; and (b) Ballymena section of the Londonderry line; and how many cars can be located on each site.

(AQW 2821/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department provides the necessary funding to Translink for the provision of Park and Ride facilities at railway stations.

Currently Translink are providing 457 Park and Ride spaces on the Belfast to Larne line and 254 between Belfast and Ballymena on the Belfast to Derry line.

Neighbourhood Renewal

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Regional Development how much money his Department contributed to the delivery of Neighbourhood Renewal in (i) Lurgan; (ii) Brownlow; and (iii) Portadown, in each of the last three years.

(AQW 2854/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department has not contributed any money to the delivery of Neighbourhood Renewal schemes, in the subject areas, during any of the last three years.

Potholes

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Regional Development if he intends to review the current policy for the inspection and repair of potholes.

(AQW 2857/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that its defect maintenance standards were comprehensively reviewed and implemented in June 2000. These were subsequently reviewed and updated in 2005, with the revisions coming into operation in April 2006.

In the circumstances, I have no plans to instigate a further review of Roads Service's maintenance standards at this time.

Translink: Rail Halt, Craigavon

Mr O'Dowd asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans Translink has to build a rail halt in central Craigavon.

(AQW 2867/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: Translink's Corporate Plan identifies planned projects to be taken forward in line with the Regional Strategic Transport Network Transport Plan and the provisions in the Budget and the Investment Strategy. At this time there are no plans to build a railway halt in Craigavon.

Roads Service: GAA Complex, Castlewellan

Mr Wells asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the representations to the Roads Service and his Department by (i) Members of Parliament; and (ii) MLAs, in support of the application to build a GAA sports complex on the Burrenbridge Road, Castlewellan.

(AQW 2874/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: The only representation received by my Department from a MP or MLA, in respect of this application, has been from Mr Eddie McGrady, MP, on 3 September 2008. Mr McGrady also met with Roads Service officials regarding the proposal, on 7 August 2008.

Water Charges

Dr Farry asked the Minister for Regional Development to report on the scale of the budgetary pressures to be addressed in relation to the 2009/10 and 2010/11 financial years arising from the loss of anticipated revenue from water charges as a consequence of the Executive's decision to defer the payment of water charges in both of those years. (AQW 2929/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: The Executive has taken into account the current economic circumstances and agreed not to impose additional household payments for 2009/10.

As a result of deferral and the consequent loss of anticipated revenue to Northern Ireland Water the Executive will have to increase the subsidy paid to the Company for 2009/10. This could amount to an additional £180 million under existing arrangements. My Department is currently working with the Department of Finance and Personnel to assess the budgetary implications of this and other issues.

A2 Road Maintenance

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the amount spent on maintenance on the A2 road, in each of the last five years. (AQW 2943/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service does not record details of total annual expenditure on individual roads. I am, therefore, unable to provide the requested information.

Zebra Crossings: North Down

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development how many zebra crossings are in North Down. (AQW 2944/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that there are three zebra crossing facilities in the North Down area. These are located at:-

1. High Street, Holywood – between Downshire Road and Sullivan Place;
2. Hamilton Road, Bangor – near its junction with Springfield Avenue; and
3. Quay Street, Bangor – near its junction with High Street.

A6 Derry/Londonderry By Pass

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the (i) current indicative budget; (ii) current timescale; and (iii) updated progress for the A6 Derry/Londonderry to Dungiven by pass dual carriageway scheme, and to make a statement. (AQW 2950/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that the current indicative budget for the A6 Londonderry to Dungiven dual carriageway scheme is in the region of £320 million. I hope to announce the 'preferred Route' for this scheme in spring 2009. Work on the scheme could possibly commence in 2012/13 subject to:

- satisfactory progress through the statutory processes;
- economic appraisal;
- the availability of funding through the normal budgetary process; and
- satisfactory progression through the procurement process.

A6 Randalstown to Castledawson Dualling

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the (i) current indicative budget; (ii) current timescale; and (iii) updated progress for the A6 Randalstown to Castledawson dualling upgrade scheme, and to make a statement. (AQW 2951/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: The current indicative budget for the A6 Randalstown to Castledawson dual carriageway scheme is in the region of £100 million. It is anticipated that work could commence on site in 2011, with completion in 2014, subject to:

- economic appraisal;
- the availability of funding through the normal budgetary process; and
- satisfactory progression through the procurement process.

A6 Dual Carriageway Scheme

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Regional Development what category standard of dual carriageway is planned for (i) the A6 Derry/Londonderry to Dungiven by pass scheme; and (ii) the A6 upgrade scheme between Randalstown and Castledawson. (AQW 2953/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I can advise that the A6 Londonderry to Dungiven and the A6 Randalstown to Castledawson dual carriageway schemes will be high standard category six dual carriageways with grade separated junctions, left in-left out minor junctions and no central reserve cross-overs.

Permeable Paving

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of permeable paving; and what plans he has to ensure this type of paving is used by Roads Service, especially in areas that are liable to flooding. (AQW 2973/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: Permeable paving is one technique used in the design of Sustainable Drainage Systems (SuDs). My colleague, Sammy Wilson MP, MLA, the Minister of the Environment, has advised me that Annex C of Planning Policy Statement 15 'Planning and Flood Risk' contains information on SuDs, and on some of the benefits and constraints which influence their use. It advises that SuDs techniques may in certain circumstances help reduce flooding, but cautions that they can, like traditional piped drainage systems, be overwhelmed during extreme rainfall events.

My Department's Roads Service has advised that porous asphalt surface materials are available for road surfacing. The primary purpose of using this material is to reduce spray and noise generated from the inter-action of the tyre and the road surface, and to facilitate the drainage of the surface water from the road. However, the Specification for Highway Works does not allow the use of these on the public road network in the North, without a formal Departure from Standard being approved.

Other systems, such as thin-surfacing, also allow some penetration of rainwater below the surface, mainly to reduce spray from traffic as opposed to dealing with all the surface water run-off.

As the water permeates through these paving materials it makes the systems more susceptible to frost damage due to the possibility of water freezing within the road surface structure; hence the restriction on their use.

It is considered that the choice of surfacing material does not have a significant effect on reducing flooding, as any rainfall ultimately finds its way into the drainage system either from the top of the surface course or through the permeable paving material.

Water Rates: Caravans

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development to clarify if caravan owners will have to pay water rates on their static caravans. (AQW 2985/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that individual caravan owners on caravan sites are not directly responsible for water and sewerage charges. Liability for measured non-domestic water and sewerage charges for such sites rests with the site owners.

Traffic-Calming Measures

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the ranking of Olympia Drive, South Belfast, in terms of priority for traffic-calming measures. (AQW 3027/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that Olympia Drive, Belfast, is currently ranked 209 on the prioritised list of sites assessed for traffic-calming measures within Roads Service's Eastern Division. However, as further assessments are completed, priorities and plans may change.

Selective Vehicle Detection: South Belfast

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Regional Development if Selective Vehicle Detection has been provided at all the traffic signals in South Belfast. (AQW 3028/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that there are currently 52 locations where Selective Vehicle Detection (SVD) has been installed in the South Belfast Constituency. These are located at signal controlled junctions and pelican crossings on the:-

- Saintfield Rd, from its junction with Beechill Rd to Rosetta;
- Lisburn Rd, from its Junction with Black's Rd to Bradbury Place;
- Malone Rd, from its junction with Balmoral Avenue to University St (including Stranmillis Rd); and in
- Belfast City Centre.

As the SVD gives priority to buses, Roads Service and Translink are currently identifying other junctions where SVD will be of benefit to buses.

Hilltown/Rathfriland Flooding

Mr P J Bradley asked the Minister for Regional Development to confirm that investigations into the flooding that occurred on the 16 and 17 August in the Hilltown/Rathfriland area are ongoing; and for his assessment of the outcomes of the meeting held at Spelga Dam on 25 November to discuss this matter. (AQW 3041/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that its investigation into the flooding at Hilltown/Rathfriland area on 16 and 17 August 2008 was completed shortly after the event. It found that the overflow system at Spelga Dam was operating normally and that the damage to property and crops was not caused as a result of any lowering of the water levels in the Dam by NIW.

At the meeting on 25 November 2008, Local Councillors, Newry and Mourne Council officials and representatives from the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development were advised by NIW that it remains satisfied the overflow system at Spelga Dam did not contribute to the flooding.

A25 Upgrade

Mr Wells asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to his answer to AQW 2263/09, to outline any plans his Department has to upgrade the junction of the A25 with the Burrenbridge Road. (AQW 3059/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I can advise that my Department's Roads Service has considered an improvement scheme at the junction of the A25 with the Burrenbridge Road. However, it has proved difficult to achieve a value for money scheme, given the estimated high scheme costs, and taking into consideration the relatively lightly trafficked rural nature of the Burrenbridge Road. I can therefore advise that, Roads Service has no proposals to improve the junction at this time.

Buncrana Road Upgrade Scheme

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the (i) current indicative budget; (ii) current timescale; and (iii) progress on the Buncrana Road upgrade scheme in Derry/Londonderry; and to make a statement. (AQW 3064/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that the current indicative budget for the Buncrana Road widening scheme is in the region of £40-50 million. I hope to be in a position to announce the 'preferred route' for the scheme in spring 2009. The scheme is currently in the ten year Investment Strategy for Roads, 2008-18, and Roads Service are planning to deliver the scheme during the later half of the plan period, subject to:

- satisfactory progress through the statutory process;
- economic appraisal;
- the availability of funding through the normal budgetary process; and
- satisfactory progression through the procurement process.

Gritting Schedule

Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Regional Development if he will include Derrybard Road, Fintona, on the gritting schedule. (AQW 3065/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: The Derrybard Road, Fintona, is a "C" class road connecting Fintona, via the Greenmount Road, to the A5. At present it does not carry a sufficient volume of traffic to warrant inclusion in the gritting schedule.

However, I can advise that the B46, one of five salted roads serving Fintona, connects to the A5 at a junction less than 2 miles further north. This is a higher standard of road, carries more traffic, and runs almost parallel to the Derrybard Road.

Road Linkages

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Regional Development when the preliminary reports commissioned on road linkages around Derry/Londonderry (i) will be completed; (ii) whether the findings will be made public; and to make a statement. (AQW 3068/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I can advise the Member that the preliminary investigations and discussions with key stakeholders, on whether sufficient need exists for connection between the A6, A5 and around the city to the A2 Buncrana Road, are ongoing. Once completed, the report will make recommendations on the future need for these connections, possible alignment corridors and any further actions required. It is unlikely that the report will be finalised by Roads Service before mid 2009. Information on the outcome of the preliminary investigation will be published on the Roads Service web site.

Railway Study

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Regional Development when the study to consider the long-term redevelopment of the railway throughout the North West will be completed. (AQW 3069/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: The tender process for the selection of the consultants to conduct the development study is underway. The award of contract is due to take place prior to the Christmas break in order to enable work to commence in early 2009. The anticipated timeframe for the study is approximately three months. Once completed, officials in my Department and other interested parties will consider the report and provide details and recommendations to me. It is envisaged that the study will be complete by early summer next year.

Capital Projects

Dr Farry asked the Minister for Regional Development what actions his Department is taking to bring forward the delivery of capital projects to help redress the economic downturn. (AQW 3101/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have presented proposals to bring forward the delivery of some DRD capital projects to the Executive for consideration in its response to the economic downturn.

I and Executive colleagues will be reviewing all departments' proposals in tackling this important issue.

Road Works

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the role of his Department in the enforcement of effective signage at road works. (AQW 3102/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: It is a legal requirement that the signing and guarding of all road works comply with the Safety at Street Works and Road Works – A Code of Practice which is issued under Article 25 of the Street Works (NI) Order 1995, and Chapter 8 of The Traffic Signs Manual.

All contractors appointed by my Department's Roads Service are required to design, install and maintain Temporary Traffic Management (including signage) in accordance with the above legal requirements. In addition, contractors are required to have quality management accreditation to National Highways Sector Scheme 12.

If a contractor fails to comply with any of the above requirements, the contract will permit Roads Service to take appropriate enforcement action.

However, the enforcement of the above legal requirements, in respect of other utilities, to ensure that road works are adequately signed, is a matter for the Police Service of Northern Ireland.

Northern Ireland Water: Use of Renewable Energy

Mr W Clarke asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to his answer to AQW 2415/09, to detail the measures that will be introduced to increase the amount of renewable energy used by Northern Ireland Water in its installations. (AQW 3107/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that it aims to increase the amount of renewable energy used at its installations, where possible, through the development of additional water turbines and wind turbines to generate electricity at sites within its estate. The new incinerator at Duncrue Street, Belfast, which is scheduled to commence operations in April 2009, incorporates a steam powered turbine for generating electricity. In addition, NIW will purchase additional renewable energy through the All Ireland Single Electricity Market as it becomes available. NIW will only purchase renewables from this source where it does not entail excessive additional cost.

Northern Ireland Water: Use of Renewable Sources

Mr W Clarke asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to his answer to AQW 2415/09 to detail the renewable sources used by Northern Ireland Water, and what volumes of energy are created by each source. (AQW 3108/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that since April 2007 to the end of September 2008 the renewable sources used for electricity generation and the volumes of energy in kilowatt hours created by each source, is as follows:-

SITE	OUTPUT (kilo watt hours)
Fofanny Water Turbine	399,994
Oaklands Water Turbine	396,760
Silent Valley Water Turbine	2,832,783

SITE	OUTPUT (kilo watt hours)
Purdysburn Water Turbine	297,447
Breda Water Turbine	28,043
Incinerator Steam Turbine	2,894,276
Contract from Airtricity	13,962,000
Contract from ESBIE	13,538,169

Passing Loop: Derry/Londonderry and Coleraine

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Regional Development when a final decision will be made on the location of a passing loop between Derry/Londonderry and Coleraine. (AQW 3128/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: In my earlier response (AQW 2500/09 refers), I advised that the work undertaken to date by Translink suggests that the passing loop should be located in the Carrowreagh area. However detailed design work must be completed and geographical and land acquisition must be addressed before the precise location can be determined. Translink expect that a final decision will be made in February 2009.

Traffic-Calming Measures

Mr P J Bradley asked the Minister for Regional Development what action is planned to introduce traffic-control measures that will improve the safety of children attending St. Mary's Primary School, Downpatrick Street, Rathfriland. (AQW 3146/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I can confirm that my Department's Roads Service recently completed an assessment for road safety features at St Mary's Primary School, Rathfriland, which will allow the school to compete for inclusion on the 2009/10 Safer Routes to Schools programme. Typical road safety measures included in this initiative would be the implementation of enhanced road markings and flashing school warnings signs.

M2/A8 Traffic Congestion

Mr Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development to explain the severe traffic congestion currently affecting the M2 and A8(M) city bound during the morning rush hour, particularly given long traffic queues on Monday 1 December and Tuesday 2 December. (AQW 3150/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service is presently undertaking improvement works on the M2 Motorway between Sandyknowes and the Greencastle junctions. These works involve widening the Belfast-bound carriageway to three lanes between the junctions, widening the country-bound carriageway of the M2 over the Greencastle Interchange, replacing the Longlands, Hightown and Collin Bridges, and upgrading Bellevue Bridge. The scheme is specifically designed to improve journey times on this section of the M2 and the approaches to it.

The introduction of narrow traffic lanes and a temporary speed limit to facilitate these improvement works has affected traffic progression on this busy section of the M2 motorway, particularly at peak times. In addition, the cold weather conditions and high traffic volumes contributed to the traffic congestion experienced on the M2 and A8(M) on 1 and 2 December during the morning peak.

Roads Service officials will continue to actively manage traffic conditions on the M2, A8(M) and Sandyknowes junction and, if necessary, amend traffic signal timings in order to minimise delay to roads users.

I can advise that the M2 Improvement Scheme is progressing well and is currently on target for completion by March 2009, some five months ahead of the original programme.

M2/M3 Flyover Traffic Congestion

Mr Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development to make a statement on the severe traffic congestion that affected the M2 and the M3 flyover during the evening rush hour, on 1 December 2008. (AQW 3151/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: Roads Service has advised that, at approximately 4:40pm on Monday 1 December, a vehicle broke down on the country-bound carriageway of the M2 motorway near the Bellevue Bridge. This obstruction resulted in severe traffic congestion and long delays on the M2 and the M3 motorways during the evening peak, with traffic queued back on the M2 motorway to York Street junction and on the M3 motorway to the Sydenham Bypass.

In response, Roads Service displayed warning signs on overhead gantries on the Westlink and both the M2 and M3 motorways. Details of the incident were also passed to radio stations and posted on the Roads Service website.

I understand that the vehicle causing the obstruction was moved to a lay-by further along the M2 at approximately 5:15pm and the traffic lane was reopened.

Traffic Assessment

Mr Irwin asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to the answer to AQW 96/09 to detail the results of the traffic assessment. (AQW 3161/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that the results of the traffic assessment for Moss Road, Annaghmore are not yet available. The assessment requires data on the number of vehicles, including buses, using the road during the winter service season. This information is currently being gathered, along with the number of buses using the road, by all bus service providers.

The results of the assessment are expected in early January 2009 and I have asked Roads Service officials to inform you of the outcome of this assessment.

Gritting Schedule

Mr W Clarke asked the Minister for Regional Development what consideration he has given to gritting the road to Slieve Croob Inn, 119 Convaraghan, Castlewellan Road, County Down, given the large number of customers being prevented from accessing this tourist location during bad weather conditions. (AQW 3177/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that the Clonvaraghan Road is a C-class, road which runs between the B175 Ballylough Road, Castlewellan and the Kilnhill Road, Finnis.

Whilst the Clonvaraghan Road has not previously met the criteria for inclusion on the winter gritting schedule, Roads Service is arranging for an assessment to be carried out, to ascertain whether this route now meets the criteria.

This assessment will be undertaken at the earliest opportunity and I have asked Roads Service to write to you to advise you of the results.

Traffic-Calming Measures

Ms Anderson asked the Minister for Regional Development if his Department can pursue the implementation of traffic-calming measures despite receiving an objection from a resident. (AQW 3222/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service is required to consider any objections it receives to a proposed traffic-calming scheme within the statutory period. In addition, Roads Service may consider it necessary to hold a public inquiry.

However, I can advise the Member that the final decision to implement any scheme rests with the Department.

SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT

Mental-Health Problems: Young People

Mr McCartney asked the Minister for Social Development to detail what facilities are funded by her Department that address mental health problems affecting young people. (AQW 2325/09)

The Minister for Social Development (Ms M Ritchie): Mainstream funding of programmes addressing young people with mental health problems is primarily the responsibility of the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety. However, my Department funds organisations and projects through the Neighbourhood Renewal Strategy, the Community Investment Fund, the Community Volunteering Scheme and the Northern Ireland Housing Executive.

The Northern Ireland Housing Executive works in partnership with Health Trusts by providing “Supporting People” funding. There are currently 125 schemes aimed at people with mental health problems and 45 schemes targeting young vulnerable people.

Neighbourhood Renewal Funding: Derry/Londonderry

Ms Anderson asked the Minister for Social Development for her assessment of the impact of the decision to cease funding for Neighbourhood Renewal posts in Derry/Londonderry on (i) vital childcare; (ii) women’s community education; and (iii) family services. (AQW 2379/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Mainstream funding of childcare services is the responsibility of the Department of Education. Responsibility for women’s and family services is spread across a number of departments. My Department cannot be expected to fund programmes in every instance where other departments who have equal, if not greater, responsibility do not provide funding.

Neighbourhood Renewal contracts which expire and are not renewed are not considered to impact heavily on the delivery of overall Neighbourhood Renewal objectives.

Housing Executive Staff

Mr Bresland asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to her answer to AQW 1712/09, to detail the number of full-time and part-time staff employed in each (i) district office; (ii) area office; (iii) grants office; (iv) housing benefit office; and (v) rent collection office, broken down by religious background, in the (a) Omagh District Council; (b) Strabane District Council; and (c) Derry City Council areas. (AQW 2717/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The table below gives details of staff employed by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in their offices within the Omagh District Council, Strabane District Council and Derry City Council areas. Some offices have small numbers of part-time staff from one community and therefore, to prevent possible identification of individual persons, the information is not provided for each individual office, nor disaggregated into full-time or part-time staff.

Housing Executive staff by Community:-

Location	Protestant	Roman Catholic
Omagh District Council area	18	55
Strabane District Council area	7	16
Derry City Council area	41	154

Social Housing: Newtownards

Mr Shannon asked the Minister for Social Development what help her Department is giving to Housing Associations to build new social homes; and to quantify the number of social homes in the Newtownards area. (AQW 2782/09)

The Minister for Social Development: At present there are approximately 4,450 Social Homes across the Newtownards area. Just under 4000 of these are managed and maintained by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, the remainder by registered Housing Associations.

As part of the New Housing Agenda I have committed to delivering more social housing than ever before. Over the next 3 years Housing Associations will be supported to deliver 5,250 new homes. Four hundred and ten of these will be in the Newtownards area, spread across 23 different locations.

Community and Recreational Facilities: Crumlin

Mr McLaughlin asked the Minister for Social Development if she is aware of the lack of community and recreational facilities available in Crumlin; and, if so, what measures does she intend to take to address this deficit. (AQW 2803/09)

The Minister for Social Development: My Department have been engaged with community representatives from Crumlin for a number of years and is aware of the needs of the village. The fact that it is currently defined as a village means that it is only able to benefit from those DSD programmes which are not confined to urban areas.

In its role as an agent of the International Fund for Ireland, my Department is at present working with Crumlin Together Limited to bring forward a Community Property Development Scheme in the village. An application for DSD funding under the Modernisation Fund is currently being assessed.

Social Housing: Sirocco Site, Belfast

Mr A Maskey asked the Minister for Social Development what action she has taken since November 2007 to encourage the provision of social housing on the Sirocco site, in Belfast (AQW 2826/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Northern Ireland Housing Executive is committed to securing 20% of the residential development for social and affordable housing and is engaging with the developers to ensure this is delivered, and will include three schemes totalling 150 units in the new Social Housing Development Programme due to be published in 2009. The Housing Executive is also engaging with the Planning Service regarding planning permission.

SPED Scheme

Mr O'Loan asked the Minister for Social Development to explain the increased spending on the SPED scheme, that was funded in the September monitoring round. (AQW 2830/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Spending on the Special Purchase of Evacuated Dwellings scheme has increased due to a higher number of applications. During the first 8 months of this year 32 properties were purchased under this scheme at a total cost of £7.2m, compared with 22 properties during all of 2007/2008 at a cost of £4.96m.

In the majority of cases applicants do not specify the reasons behind their Special Purchase of Evacuated Dwellings application. The detail of the intimidation is a matter for the Chief Constable of the Police Service for Northern Ireland.

Public Sector Job Location

Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the current distribution and location of public sector jobs within her Department. (AQW 2846/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Details of the current distribution and location of public sector jobs within this Department are as follows:

Social Housing: Maintenance Budget

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for Social Development to provide a breakdown by parliamentary constituency (i) how much has been invested into the maintenance budget for social housing; and (ii) the period the maintenance budget will cover. (AQW 2852/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Northern Ireland Housing Executive does not record this information by Parliamentary Constituency. As the question does not specify a particular period, the information has been provided for the last two financial years, by Housing Executive District Office.

Housing Associations

Mr Shannon asked the Minister for Social Development what funding she is giving to Housing Associations to purchase homes on a single home purchase basis. (AQW 2860/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The most common single home purchase is the “Existing Satisfactory Purchase” where existing dwellings are purchased by the Housing Associations from the property market at current market value. If the Northern Ireland Housing Executive supports the purchase of a property to meet social housing need and no suitable social house is available, approval is given and the Housing Executive awards grant funding to the Housing Association up to the current level of Total Cost Indicator costs for the area. The Housing Association will lever in Private Finance for the remainder. The average funding in the current financial year for an Existing Satisfactory Property is £164,721.

Game Licences

Mr Shannon asked the Minister for Social Development what is the Department’s current position on the issue of game licences, as they have been removed in other parts of the UK. (AQW 2861/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Whilst my Department has a legal duty to manage the Northern Ireland game licensing system, the legislation governing the conservation and hunting of game species is primarily the responsibility of DOE. As the member may be aware, a proposal to abolish the existing game licensing system was consulted upon earlier this year under the DOE Review of Wildlife law. Responses to the consultation are currently being analysed by DSD and DOE officials. An announcement on the way forward will be made in due course.

Liquor Licences

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Social Development how many alcohol and intoxicating liquor licences have been refused, in each council area, in the last five years. (AQW 2863/09)

The Minister for Social Development: While my Department is responsible for promotion of the law on liquor licensing, the administration of the licensing system is a matter for the Courts. My Department does not hold records of applications refused by the Courts.

Moyravyty Redevelopment

Mr O’Dowd asked the Minister for Social Development when the planned redevelopment of Moyravyty shops/flats complex in Craigavon will take place. (AQW 2868/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Northern Ireland Housing Executive is currently reviewing the long term future of the Moyravyty shops/flats complex and has appointed consultants to assist with the preparation of an economic appraisal and strategy for the complex and the wider Moyravyty neighbourhood. The Housing Executive is continuing to consult with Land and Property Services with a view to bringing proposals forward by the end of March 2009. The Housing Executive will also consult and engage fully with local residents, their representatives and other stakeholders before finalising any strategy for the future of Moyravyty.

Armagh Confederation of Voluntary Groups

Mr Irwin asked the Minister for Social Development what plans she has to support financially the Armagh Confederation of Voluntary Groups after March 2009, given its funding deficit. (AQW 2909/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Armagh Confederation of Voluntary Groups received financial support from 2001-2007 through the EU Building Sustainable Prosperity Programme. My Department has provided a further £160,000 over the last two financial years through the Community Support Programme. The award of £80,000 for the current year was made on the clear understanding that it was a final year’s funding. It was designed to give the Confederation time to find alternative sources of funding and to strengthen efforts to achieve long term sustainability. Regrettably, having already provided two extensions, the Department is not in a position to provide another extension of funding to cover the 2009-10 period. This is consistent with the view expressed to the Confederation at that time.

Housing Executive: External Work Schemes

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development what criteria are used when prioritising external work schemes for Housing Executive properties. (AQW 2931/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Northern Ireland Housing Executive's main criteria in formulating the external work schemes programme are the date of previous works and physical need. External maintenance and repair works are normally carried out through the Housing Executive's external cyclical maintenance programme.

Housing Executive: Development Criteria

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development if the (i) age; (ii) condition; and (iii) profile, of a Housing Executive property is taken into consideration when deciding when a work scheme will commence. (AQW 2934/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The physical condition and age of stock are key factors which prompt dwellings to be surveyed for planned improvement and repair works.

Pensioners' Bungalows: Ballyree Drive

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development if funding is in place to start the scheme to improve pensioners' bungalows on Ballyree Drive, Bloomfield Estate. (AQW 2936/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Northern Ireland Housing Executive currently has an improvement scheme for the Ballyree bungalows programmed for May 2009.

Community Worker: Bloomfield Estate, Bangor

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development if her Department will continue to fund the community worker for the Bloomfield Estate, Bangor, for the 2009-10 period. (AQW 2938/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Northern Ireland Housing Executive funds the community worker post in the Bloomfield Estate in Bangor. The one year contract commenced in April 2008 and will be reviewed on an annual basis. The Northern Ireland Housing Executive understands that the Bloomfield Community Association will make an application to fund the worker for the financial year 2009/2010. The Housing Executive will make a decision in March 2009 regarding the continuation of funding.

Social Security Agency Staff

Mr Doherty asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the projected number of Social Security Agency staff, broken down by grade, that will be employed at each Jobs and Benefits Office and Social Security Office if proposed organisational changes, arising from the Strategic Business Review, are implemented in full. (AQW 3025/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Implementation of the Strategic Business Review is proposed to commence in October 2009 and conclude around October 2012. Therefore it is not possible at this time to detail the projected number of Social Security Agency staff, broken down by grade that will be employed at each Jobs & Benefits Office and Social Security Office at full implementation. However, based on current volumes of work the overall projected number of Social Security Agency posts would be as follows – it should be noted that these figures are purely indicative.

Social Security Agency

Mr Doherty asked the Minister for Social Development if the Equality Impact Assessment element of the Social Security Agency Strategic Business Review Consultation will take into account the current disparities in public sector jobs in each District Council Area. (AQW 3026/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Consultation on the Social Security Agency's Strategic Business Review proposals was launched on 27 November 2008 and runs over two phases until late April 2009. I will await the findings of the consultation process before making a full assessment of the impacts. The Equality Impact Assessment element of the consultation will reflect the fact that the key objective of the Strategic Business Review is to secure the future delivery of modern, efficient and more accessible service delivery for customers of the local office network..

Social Security Agency

Mr Doherty asked the Minister for Social Development for her assessment of the equality implications of the proposal in the Social Security Agency Strategic Review to (i) further downgrade its Strabane District office to provide 'front office only services'; and (ii) re-deploy the majority of staff elsewhere, given that Strabane already has the lowest base of public sector jobs. (AQW 3031/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Public consultation on the Strategic Business Review proposals was launched recently on the 27 November 2008 and is planned to run in two stages until late April 2009. I will await the findings the consultation process before completing my assessment of the equality implications for Strabane District office and the staff currently employed there. I would highlight the fact that, irrespective of the proposed changes to back-office processing functions, there has been no previous downgrade to the service to customers provided by Strabane District office.

Construction Industry Jobs

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister for Social Development what plans she has to introduce a scheme similar to that announced by the UK Chancellor in his pre-budget Report where additional construction industry jobs are being provided through the insulation of homes in the private and public sectors. (AQW 3066/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Schemes announced by the UK Chancellor are funded through the Carbon Emissions Reduction Target programme (CERT). CERT is not available in Northern Ireland and cannot be mirrored here as the funding is ultimately paid by consumers through higher energy bills. Northern Ireland already has the highest levels of fuel poverty in the UK. My department funds the Warm Homes Scheme which provides heating and insulation measures. I intend to use all available resources to reduce the Warm Homes Scheme waiting list so that I can assist those people in greatest need. I have submitted a bid as part of December monitoring for additional resources to help clear the Warm Homes Scheme waiting list.

Benefit Offices

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for Social Development for her assessment of how many staff working in benefits offices are at risk of losing their jobs as a result of modernisation plans by her Department. (AQW 3082/09)

The Minister for Social Development: There is no risk of staff working in benefit offices losing their employment.

Energy Relief Scheme

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for Social Development what (i) legal powers she has at her disposal to introduce her proposed energy relief scheme, as outlined in the Irish News on 26 November 2008; (ii) costings have been estimated for her proposals and how finance will be acquired; and (iii) potential exists for her to introduce legislation to enable her to financially assist those in fuel and energy poverty. (AQW 3125/09)

The Minister for Social Development: I submitted an Executive Paper on Tackling Fuel Poverty in September and followed this up with a further paper in October, which took account of comments from Ministerial colleagues. As yet the Executive has not had these papers on its agenda. Protocol prevents me from commenting in detail until the Executive has considered my proposals. I can state however, that any proposal for an energy credit payment is merely one element in a package which is designed to encourage the Executive to adopt a collective position on the crucially important issue of fuel poverty.

Community Investment Fund

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development how the 14 women's centres were selected for funding from the Community Investment Fund; and to detail the reasons why no women's centres based in county Down and Fermanagh were selected as part of this process. (AQW 3129/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Community Investment Fund (CIF) opened for applications in April 2006. The application process was competitive, and some 137 applications were received. After a rigorous process of assessment and Economic Appraisal some 34 organisations working with disadvantaged communities were awarded funding. This includes 13 Women's Centres and Women's organisations. There were no applications to the CIF received from Women's organisations in County Fermanagh, and only one from an organisation in County Down. This organisation was screened out at an early stage in the assessment process.

Community Investment Fund

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development when the review of the Community Investment Fund within the women's sector was completed and who was consulted as part of this review. (AQW 3133/09)

The Minister for Social Development: There has been no review of the Community Investment Fund within the women's sector.

Women's Centre Regional Partnership

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development, in light of the review of the women's centre regional partnership, how her Department will ensure transparency and inclusiveness in the funding process for the women's sector. (AQW 3134/09)

The Minister for Social Development: DSD has policy responsibility for women living in disadvantaged areas. It does not have responsibility for funding the 'women's sector'. The Women's Centres Regional Partnership (WCRP) is funded under the Department's Regional Infrastructure Programme to provide support to women's centres working in disadvantaged areas across Northern Ireland. The WCRP project which runs to 31st March 2009 is currently being evaluated in accordance with established departmental procedures.

Women's Centre Regional Partnership

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development when the review of the women's centre regional partnership will be completed and what groups will be consulted as part of the process. (AQW 3135/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The review of funding to the Women's Centres Regional Partnership (WCRP) under the Regional Infrastructure Programme will be completed by the end of December 2008. Officials from my Department, WCRP staff and management and a representative sample of women's centre stakeholders will be consulted during the review.

Social Housing: Armagh

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 716/08, to give an update on plans to build (i) 32 social housing units at Mullacreevie, Armagh; and (ii) 12 social housing units for the elderly at Ballynahonemore, Armagh; and if a suitable site has been found for 16 single person units in Armagh.

(AQW 3163/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Following a recent review of the Social Housing Development Programme, it is now proposed to build 44 units at Mullacreevie, Armagh and 24 units at Ballynahonemore, Armagh. A suitable site has not yet been identified for the 16 unit single non-elderly person scheme.

Social Housing : Armagh

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Social Development when work will commence on the 32 social housing units at Mullacreevie, Armagh.
(AQW 3164/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The revised Social Development Programme due to be published by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in January 2009 indicates that the Mullacreevie Phase 1 scheme for 22 units will start in 2012/13, and the Mullacreevie Phase 2 scheme for 22 units will start in 2013/14.

Social Housing : Armagh

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Social Development which Housing Association will be partnering the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in building the 32 social housing units at Mullacreevie, Armagh.
(AQW 3165/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Following a recent review of the Social Housing Development Programme, it is now proposed to build 44 units at Mullacreevie, Armagh. Fold Housing Association has been nominated to develop the Mullacreevie Phase 1 scheme for 22 units. The Mullacreevie Phase 2 scheme for 22 units has not yet been allocated to a Housing Association.

Social Housing : Armagh

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Social Development if planned social housing to be built at Mullacreevie, Armagh, can be brought forward in her Department's works schedule to assist the difficulties currently being faced by the construction industry.
(AQW 3166/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The revised Social Development Programme due to be published by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in January 2009 indicates that the Mullacreevie Phase one scheme for 22 units will start in 2012/13 and the Mullacreevie Phase two scheme for 22 units will start in 2013/14. It is not possible to bring these schemes forward in the Social Housing Development Programme at this stage, as a number of issues regarding the development of the site, including zoning and open space provision, have to be addressed, and planning permission will have to be obtained.

Social Housing : Armagh

Mr Boylan asked the Minister for Social Development whether she can confirm that local labour is used in the construction of 32 social housing units at Mullacreevie, Armagh.
(AQW 3167/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The source of labour for the proposed schemes at Mullacreevie will be a matter for the successful contractor.

Benefit Fraud

Mr Armstrong asked the Minister for Social Development what problems have been experienced with recruiting and retaining staff for units engaged with tackling benefit fraud; and what action she is taking to remedy the situation.
(AQW 3196/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The primary responsibility within my Department for investigating benefit fraud lies with the Social Security Agency's Benefit Investigation Service. In the past there had been some difficulties recruiting and retaining staff because of the nature of the work which involved unsocial hours, covert surveillance and court attendance. There was also a high turnover of staff as a result of promotions and leavers from the Agency. Following a number of initiatives to attract and retain staff, however, there are no longer any significant problems in this area - a point acknowledged by the Northern Ireland Audit Office in its report on Social Security Benefit Fraud and Error published in January 2008.

Social Security Agency Staff

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of Social Security Agency staff currently employed in the Foyle constituency, broken down by (i) grade; and (ii) location. (AQW 3236/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The table below details the number of Social Security Agency staff currently employed in the Foyle constituency, by (i) grade and (ii) location as at 03/12/08.

Social Security Agency Staff

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development how many Social Security Agency staff will be located in the proposed (i) Income Support Benefit Processing Centres; and (ii) Centralised National Insurance Number Processing Centres, broken down by (a) grade; and (b) location. (AQW 3237/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Implementation of the Strategic Business Review is proposed to commence in October 2009 and conclude around October 2012. Therefore it is not possible at this time to detail the projected number of Social Security Agency staff, broken down by grade that will be employed at each of the proposed Income Support Benefit Processing Centres and Centralised National Insurance Number Centres. However, based on current volumes of work the overall projected number of posts at each would be as follows - it should be noted that these figures are purely indicative at this stage.

Areas at Risk Pilot Programme

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development if she plans to extend the number of areas included under the Areas at Risk Pilot Programme, and if she will make a statement. (AQW 3284/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Consideration is currently being given to extending the Areas at Risk Pilot Programme to include a number of new areas under a possible 3rd phase. A decision will be made over the coming weeks and a statement announcing the outcome will be made early in the New Year.

DSD Budget and Expenditure

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) all budget under spends; and (ii) the bids that have yet to be met for which money is available. (AQW 3356/09)

The Minister for Social Development: (i) I refer the Member to my written answer 2292/09 on 24 November, which detailed the Department's budget and expenditure figures for each of the last 3 years and highlighted the areas of underspend accordingly. The final position for 2008-09 will not be known until after the year end.

(ii) This Department bid for additional funding in the December monitoring round to reflect known pressures. However, money to meet Departmental bids is held centrally by the Department of Finance & Personnel, so I have no knowledge of what is available.

ILEX Corporate Plan

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development how soon there will be tangible evidence of regeneration at the two ILEX sites in Derry/Londonderry. (AQO 1522/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The current ILEX Corporate Plan for 2008 - 2012 envisages 40% of the Ebrington site and 30% of the fort George site being built out or under construction by March 2011. In addition, ILEX estimates construction of the new Foot & Cycle Bridge, which will link Ebrington to the city centre, commencing in late 2009.

Masterplans have been produced for both sites and some preliminary site clearance and demolition works is underway.

Under Direct Rule, regeneration in Derry did not move forward with sufficient pace and enthusiasm. I am confident that this has changed under devolution and that together with OFMDFM, Ilex and Derry City Council and other important stakeholders we can start to make real progress.

Social Housing

Mr Neeson asked the Minister for Social Development what plans she has to use Departmental underspends to build social houses. (AQO 1592/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Departmental underspends occurring at the year end cannot be reallocated within the Department but are instead held centrally by the Department of Finance & Personnel. The Department of Finance & Personnel controls any easements in Departmental expenditure during the year, including approval to reallocate to other areas of work. For example, in the September monitoring round, we secured approval to utilise £15.5m from other Departmental sources to address pressures in the Housing budget, which have arisen due to the shortfall in house and land sale receipts.

I can assure the member that DSD runs a tight ship against its budgets. We will spend our capital right up to its limits and could do with more. On the revenue side, we will have underspends – not because of failure to deliver programmes – but because of tight management of costs, particularly staff and administration costs. We are in constant engagement with DFP to get approval to use out hard-earned efficiency savings to deliver more programmes outcomes.

Ulster GAA Community Development Unit

Mr Storey asked the Minister for Social Development if the invitation she received to attend the second annual meeting of the Ulster GAA Community Development Unit was issued to her in her official capacity as Minister. (AQO 1487/09)

The Minister for Social Development: I was invited to the second Ulster GAA Club and Community Development Conference as Minister for Social Development. The theme of this year's Conference was "Strengthening community cohesion through the development of GAA clubs and volunteers". This theme clearly addresses my Ministerial priority of building communities, tackling disadvantage and encouraging social responsibility. I was asked to jointly launch the new Ulster GAA Community Development Unit, a dedicated unit for volunteer development, for strategic development and for community outreach initiatives. I am committed to encouraging and supporting this type of work.

Foot and Cycle Bridge: Derry/Londonderry

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the proposed foot and cycle bridge in Derry/Londonderry City Centre. (AQO 1569/09)

The Minister for Social Development: As part of its current regeneration plan for Derry, ILEX has proposed the construction of a foot and cycle bridge linking the Ebrington site with the city centre. The project is expected to cost £13 million and funding had been requested from the Special European Union Programmes Body (SEUPB) under the Peace 3 programme.

On 17 October, the SEUPB issued a letter of offer for £13.3 million to ILEX for the foot and cycle bridge. This offer was accepted by the ILEX board at its meeting on 14 November.

ILEX has now proceeded to the design and construct tender stage and hopes to select a preferred contractor early in 2009. Subject to the necessary planning approvals, ILEX anticipates construction commencing in late 2009.

Fuel Poverty

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Social Development for a progress report on the fuel poverty proposals she circulated to the Executive for consideration. (AQO 1520/09)

The Minister for Social Development: I had submitted my paper on Tackling Fuel Poverty for consideration by the Executive in September. As no Executive meeting took place I sought clearance to bring forward my proposals under urgent procedure. No decision was made on this. The Executive is now meeting. I hope that my paper will be considered in its entirety at the earliest opportunity as we are running out of time if our ambition is to make a difference this Winter.

Child Maintenance

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development for her assessment of how absent parents could increase their financial contribution towards the maintenance and welfare of their children. (AQO 1523/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Since I took office in May 2007, the number of children benefiting from child maintenance has steadily increased to well over 20,000 at the end of October 2008. However, one of the biggest obstacles to progress in securing money for all children has been the unwillingness, indeed refusal, of some Non-Resident Parents to take financial responsibility for their children. We need to change the mindset that it's ok not to support your child. That's why on 10 September 2008 I launched an Enforcement Campaign to target those parents who are failing to meet in full, their financial responsibility towards their children. This campaign is about changing societal attitudes. It is about sending out the simple message that failure to support your children is wrong.

Andersonstown RUC Barracks

Mr P Maskey asked the Minister for Social Development the reasons why a second commercial developer was chosen to work on the former site of Andersonstown RUC barracks. (AQO 1586/09)

The Minister for Social Development: A second commercial developer was not chosen.

Orange Community Network

Mr Craig asked the Minister for Social Development for her assessment of the Orange Community Network's performance in achieving community development and cohesion, following her meeting with the group earlier this year. (AQO 1518/09)

The Minister for Social Development: My meeting of 6 June with the Orange Community Network and Brookmount Cultural and Education Society was an opportunity for the Orange Community Network to outline the work they have been engaged over the last two years and for me to hear, first hand, the positive impact their work has had on one particular group, Brookmount Cultural and Education Society. While it is difficult to fully assess any organisation's work in one visit, I was impressed with the commitment, vision and enthusiasm shown by the staff of Orange Community Network. It is clear that they are working hard with a growing number of local people.

Fuel Poverty

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister for Social Development to outline her priorities to counter fuel poverty this winter. (AQO 1527/09)

The Minister for Social Development: In response to the rising cost of fuel I established the Fuel Poverty Task Force in May 2008. The Task Force produced recommendations which I compiled into an Executive paper and circulated to the Executive in September. As of 7 December 2008 the Executive has not adopted a collective position on fuel poverty. I hope that Executive colleagues will endorse the proposals contained in my Fuel Poverty paper.

Another primary tool in tackling fuel poverty is the Warm Homes Scheme. The Scheme offers insulation and heating measures to eligible applicants living in privately rented or privately owned accommodation. I have bid for additional resources as part of the December monitoring round in an attempt to try and clear the current waiting list.

Fuel Poverty

Mrs Long asked the Minister for Social Development for her assessment of the impact on fuel poverty of the failure of the Executive to meet for 5 months. (AQO 1595/09)

The Minister for Social Development: In response to the rise in energy prices I established the Fuel Poverty Task Force to look at how we could assist those people most affected this Winter. I brought a paper on Tackling

Fuel Poverty to the Executive in September 2008 seeking their endorsement of a number of recommendations emanating from the Task Force. The Executive has yet to form a collective view on fuel poverty. Had the Executive done so, these recommendations could have been progressed more quickly.

Winter Fuel Allowance

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister for Social Development, in light of fluctuating fuel prices, what action she is taking to ensure the Winter Fuel Allowance is appropriate. (AQO 1508/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Westminster Government introduced the Winter Fuel Payments Scheme in January 1998 as part of its commitment to alleviate fuel poverty.

The Winter Fuel Payment is not intended to cover the total cost of a household's fuel bills, but to provide a significant contribution. The payment was £20 when it was first made in 1998. This increased to £100 in 1999/2000. An additional £100 for households with someone aged 80 or over was introduced in 2003/2004.

For 2008/2009 there is to be a one-off increased payment of £200 - £250 for those aged 60 or over and one of £300 - £400 for those aged 80 and over.

I met recently with the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, James Purnell MP, and impressed on him my view that the Winter Fuel Payment should be increased and refocused to help those in greatest need.

Social Housing

Mr Burns asked the Minister for Social Development what plans she has to build an increased number of social houses on land already in public ownership. (AQO 1538/09)

The Minister for Social Development: When land in public ownership is declared surplus, it must first be offered across the other Public Bodies who may have an interest in acquiring it. My Department has already purchased a number of sites through this process to deliver social housing in areas where it is needed most.

Winter Fuel Allowance

Mr Cree asked the Minister for Social Development what plans she has to extend the Winter Fuel Allowance to people suffering from cancer. (AQO 1509/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Winter Fuel Payments Scheme was introduced in January 1998 to alleviate fuel poverty by providing help specifically to older people towards their winter fuel bills. Older people are targeted as they are more vulnerable to the effects of cold weather during the winter months than other groups. There are no plans to extend the Winter Fuel Allowance to people suffering from cancer.

However, depending on an individual's circumstances, a range of social security benefits is available to people suffering from illness or disability including disability living allowance, attendance allowance, employment and support allowance, incapacity benefit and income-related benefits, such as income support and pension credit.

Disability Living Allowance (DLA) and Attendance Allowance (AA) are paid as a contribution towards the extra costs faced by people with cancer, or any other progressive disease.

In cases of terminal illness the qualifying period is waived and the highest rate of AA or DLA care component is awarded automatically.

I met recently with the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, James Purnell MP, and impressed on him my view that the Winter Fuel Payment should be increased and refocused to help those in greatest need.

ASSEMBLY COMMISSION

Energy Efficient Light Bulbs

Mr McKay asked the Assembly Commission if energy efficient light bulbs are used throughout all of the buildings used by the Assembly. (AQW 2922/09)

The Representative of the Assembly Commission (Rev Dr R Coulter): The Assembly Commission works closely with the Department of Finance and Personnel's Energy Conservation Branch and the Carbon Trust to improve energy efficiency.

Energy-saving bulbs are used wherever feasible throughout Parliament Buildings and in all cases where new light fittings are being installed.

One exception to this is the Great Hall where it has been accepted by the Carbon Trust that it would not be appropriate to replace the existing light bulbs used in the chandeliers with energy saving bulbs. These lights are turned off at all times when not required.

In addition to energy saving bulbs, many offices in Parliament Buildings have motion sensor lighting that turns off when the office is unoccupied.

Motion sensor lighting was also installed in the Gent's Toilets in the Basement during the recent summer recess and, where installation costs are not prohibitive; there are plans to install motion sensor lighting in other areas of the building.

With regard to the temporary accommodation at Annexe C, fluorescent tubing strips are used throughout the offices and the toilets are lit with 2D fluorescent lights, all of which are deemed to be energy efficient. All lights are turned off when the building is not in use.

Assembly Waste

Mr McKay asked the Assembly Commission what percentage of the total waste from the Assembly is recycled. (AQW 2923/09)

The Representative of the Assembly Commission (Rev Dr R Coulter): Waste and recycling for Parliament Buildings and the Stormont Estate is currently managed by the Department of Finance and Personnel's Estate Maintenance Division.

I attach a previous response to a similar question AQW 3487/08 which details the percentage of waste recycled monthly from Parliament Buildings from October 2006 to December 2007.

The table below details the percentage of waste recycled monthly from Parliament Buildings and Annexe C from January 2008 to September 2008.

The figures include paper, plastic, cardboard and tins but do not include glass, which is recycled by a different contractor. Approximately 250kg of glass is recycled weekly.

Month	% Recycled
January 2008	26
February 2008	23
March 2008	21
April 2008	34
May 2008	30
June 2008	31
July 2008	35
August 2008	33
September 2008	32

In addition, printer and fax cartridges and other computer consumables are recycled as is the waste cooking oil from the kitchen.

It may also be helpful to note that monthly recycling figures are published on the Assembly website, AssISt. <http://assist.assemblyni.gov.uk/services/ok/works/recycling.htm>

PowerPoint Presentations

Mr Ross asked the Assembly Commission what consideration it has given to ensuring that all committee rooms are fully fitted with audiovisual equipment and projectors to allow for PowerPoint presentations.

(AQW 2970/09)

The Representative of the Assembly Commission (Rev Dr R Coulter): Powerpoint presentations can be made in committee rooms at present. However, the presentation is normally projected onto the meeting room wall meaning that it can be difficult to see. The Chairpersons' Liaison Group has accepted a recommendation to install plasma screens in committee rooms and the Assembly Commission is content for expenditure to be incurred on this project. It is proposed to integrate computing facilities into the screens to allow them to support presentations without the need for projectors, display screens, etc. It is planned for the installation to take place before the end of the current financial year i.e. before 31 March 2009.

NORTHERN IRELAND ASSEMBLY

Friday 2 January 2009

Written Answers to Questions

OFFICE OF THE FIRST MINISTER AND DEPUTY FIRST MINISTER

Child Poverty

Mr Shannon asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister what action it is taking to assist LifeStart and other similar bodies as part of its strategy to address child poverty. (AQW 2716/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister (Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness): The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (DHSSPS), by way of the Children's Fund, supported the costs associated with the Lifestart Westville Family Resource Centre, Enniskillen, from April 2003 to March 2008. In that time, it received grant assistance in the region of £82,900.

Since March 2008, DHSSPS has continued to fund the project and will be making available funding of around £20,500 up until 31 March 2009. Decisions about funding after this date will be based on a review of the project's performance, and the extent to which its activities continue to contribute to key children's service planning priorities in the Western Board area.

Key actions within the draft DHSSPS parenting strategy 'Families Matter' include increasing the provision of parenting education programmes to assist with child health and development, household management and stress management; reducing the negative impact of parental separation on children by developing and expanding family mediation services; and providing a fully responsive regional help-line to enable parents to obtain timely advice and support.

We welcome and endorse all the work that Departments carry out which contributes to meeting the Executive's targets for eliminating child poverty and is consistent with its anti-poverty strategy 'Lifetime Opportunities'.

Children's Health

Mr Beggs asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister what part walking and cycling initiatives play in the Department's policies for improving children's health. (AQW 3088/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety has lead responsibility for developing policies to improve children's health and we understand that you have also submitted your question to him.

Civic Forum

Mr Craig asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister how many responses were received to the consultation on the future of the Civic Forum. (AQW 3226/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: A total of 60 written responses were received to the consultation on the Review of the Civic Forum. These responses are available to view on the Review website at www.ofmdfmi.gov.uk/civic-forum-review.

Strategy for Cohesion, Sharing and Integration

Mrs D Kelly asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister, given the continuing delays in bringing the strategy for cohesion, sharing and integration before the Assembly Committee, what assurance can it give that this strategy remains a priority. (AQW 3314/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: As we have stated previously, the Executive is fully committed to a vision for the future of all of the people who live here, to moving society forward and making a real difference to the lives of all our people. We are, and continue to be, fully committed to challenging sectarianism and racism and have indicated that our vision is for a future based on tolerance, equality, mutual respect and respect for the law.

The Programme for Government, including the key goals and associated PSA framework, was developed with a focus on addressing the key challenges and seizing the opportunities to deliver a shared and better future.

We met with the Committee for OFMDFM in October and stated that we would bring the Programme for Cohesion, Sharing and Integration before it by the Halloween recess. That has not been possible as work is still ongoing. However, it is our intention to bring forward these proposals to the Committee and to the Assembly as soon as practicably possible.

We would wish, however, to draw attention to the emphasis in the Executive's Programme for Government and Budget which quite clearly confirms our commitment to tackling racism and sectarianism. We are giving a clear lead and endorsing ongoing work on the ground which is proving so successful in building new relationships within and between communities. We have committed an additional £7.5m direct expenditure over the next three years – 2008/2011, with a total investment of approximately £29m on good relations and good race relations.

Policing and Justice Powers

Mr Burnside asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister if it has had discussions with the UK Government about the transfer of Policing and Justice powers to the Assembly and Executive; and if this included a commitment to be made by all MLAs and the Executive to cooperate fully in all particulars, if requested, with the Historic Enquiries Team. (AQW 3330/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: There have been discussions at Ministerial level with the UK Government on the devolution of policing and justice powers. There has also been engagement at official level in the context of administrative preparations for the transfer of these responsibilities.

Maze Prison Site

Mr Craig asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister what progress has been made in relation to the development of the Maze site. (AQW 3432/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: At present, an extensive programme to demolish buildings and structures is under way and this will be completed in this calendar year. The first phase of substantial remediation work to remove contamination at part of the site is also near completion.

Recently, we approved a £3.5 million second-stage remediation programme that is essential to prepare the site for future use. As the funding suggests, second-stage remediation is extensive and will entail, for example, the removal of diesel oil spillages and contaminates from other parts of the site.

We are acutely aware that a redevelopment of this size will impact directly on the Lisburn and the wider community and can confirm that it is our desire to see a decision about the redevelopment of Maze/Long Kesh reached as speedily as possible.

Interface Violence

Mr A Maskey asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the programmes it is carrying out in relation to the prevention of interface violence in (i) primary schools; (ii) post primary schools, in Belfast and what plans does it have to introduce such programmes if none exist. (AQW 3486/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: Our department does not currently directly operate any programmes designed specifically to address the issues of interface violence within primary or post primary schools. However, funding of £400,000 per annum is provided by OFMDFM to the Department of Education for the provision of a range of Summer Intervention Programmes, which are delivered by the Education and Library Boards through the youth service. The Belfast Education and Library Board has received £160k of this funding. A further £100k has been provided to the North Belfast Community Action Unit for youth diversionary programmes to help reduce tensions over the summer months.

European Policies and Legislation

Mr Shannon asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister which Department (i) has direct responsibility; and (ii) is accountable, for the implementation of policies and legislation originating from Europe. (AQW 3586/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: Each Department is responsible and accountable for the implementation of European policies and legislation that fall within its devolved responsibilities.

Ebrington Regeneration

Mr Durkan asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to the answer to AQW 2966/09, to detail (i) the reasons for its proposed surrender in the December 2008 Monitoring Round of £0.998 million in relation to capital requirements at the Ebrington regeneration site; (ii) the nature of, and reasons for the delays; and (iii) the measures being taken to ensure progress is expedited in the future. (AQW 3665/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: Amounts surrendered from Ebrington and other projects free up funds for other necessary investment. The earlier this is done before the end of the financial year, the greater the chance that the funds can be used elsewhere. Ilex has a range of key regeneration projects underway at the former Ebrington Barracks which are at various stages in the process of delivery. The surrender of funds represents a re-adjustment in the timing of a number of these projects to all of which Ilex remain committed. Some indeed are ahead of schedule and none should be significantly delayed.

Measures being taken to ensure progress is expedited include the recent appointment of programme management consultants to accelerate activity and work to improve turnaround times for departmental approval of business cases.

AGRICULTURE AND RURAL DEVELOPMENT

Capital Projects

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what actions her Department is taking to bring forward the delivery of capital projects, to help address the economic downturn. (AQW 3010/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development (Ms M Gildernew): The Department's capital budgets for 2008-09, 2009-10 & 2010-11 were set as part of Budget 2007 and the capital programme was outlined in Investment Strategy Northern Ireland (ISNI), with further details contained in the Department's Investment Delivery Plans published on 3 July 2008.

The Department is concentrating on delivering its agreed capital investment programme in full within the resources available.

Cereal Growers

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the action she has taken to assist cereal growers, following increased costs of production, a drop in prices for cereal crops and the poor weather of 2008, that prevented harvesting of crops. (AQW 3047/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My Department is continuing to assist cereal producers in a range of ways aimed at improving efficiency and reducing input costs.

The College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise (CAFRE) provides a range of education and training programmes and encourages cereal farms here to adopt cost-efficient technologies through its technology transfer projects. CAFRE also offers benchmarking to the cereal sector to help them identify areas for potential improvement.

The Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute (AFBI) provides information on reduced nutrient and pesticide inputs to help meet the industry's environmental and economic objectives.

In addition, as a targeted measure to aid those who have suffered loss as a consequence of the flooding of 16th of August 2008, I have submitted proposals to make hardship payments to cereal and potato growers, to my Executive colleagues for consideration.

Dairy Farmers

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what action she has taken to assist dairy farmers as a result of falling prices being paid for their produce.[R] (AQW 3048/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: In recognition of the deteriorating market situation I have been working hard to try and achieve a re-introduction of export refunds for dairy products. Following the sharp drop in prices at the October United Dairy Farmers' milk auction I immediately spoke to the DEFRA Secretary of State to seek his support on the matter. Subsequently the Minister for Enterprise Trade and Investment and I issued a joint letter to Hilary Benn pressing the case for the local dairy industry and making clear our view that Britain should be taking the initiative within the EU by requesting early re-introduction of export refunds. We are also seeking a meeting with the European Commissioner, Marianne Fischer Boel, to ensure that she is aware of the seriousness of the situation. In addition the First Minister and Deputy First Minister, at my request, have written to the Prime Minister to lobby his support on the matter. The Finance Minister, Nigel Dodds, and I subsequently had a meeting with Hilary Benn to impress upon him further the challenges being faced by the sector. This followed a meeting I had with industry representatives when they outlined the case for export refunds to be re-introduced. The dairy industry makes an important contribution to the agri-food industry and I will continue to do what I can to support it in these difficult times.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what contribution her Department has made or will be making to the consultation by the UK Department of Work and Pensions on reservations to the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. (AQW 3050/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Since January 2007, officials within OFMdfM have taken the lead in preparing for implementation here of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. As part of this process DARD has had the opportunity at several stages to consider its legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check its compatibility with the provisions of the Convention and we do not have any difficulty with the areas of competency covered by the Convention.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what preparations her Department has made for the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.(AQW 3052/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Since January 2007, officials within OFMdfM have taken the lead in preparing for implementation here of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. As part of this process DARD has had the opportunity at several stages to consider its legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check its compatibility with the provisions of the Convention and we do not have any difficulty with the areas of competency covered by the Convention.

On a general note the Department is doing good work in promoting and raising awareness of disability issues. We have appointed a Disability Champion whose role is to support and promote disability equality across all aspects of our business.

DARD's Disability Forum was launched in 2002 and aims to provide an opportunity for staff with disabilities to have a voice, to develop confidence and to express their views directly to decision makers. The Forum has been kept informed of developments in relation to the Convention.

The Department has developed close links with Disability Action and in January 2008, they formally agreed to work with DARD to help raise awareness of disability equality including the new duties.

One member of Equality Branch staff is completing a Human Rights Course with a specific focus on disability.

Benchmarking: Farmers in Mid-Ulster

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many farmers have taken up benchmarking in Mid Ulster, in each of the last three years. (AQW 3053/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My Department does not record details of the number of farmers benchmarking on a Constituency basis. The figures given relate to the Cookstown, Dungannon and Magherafelt District Council areas. In each of the last three years the number of farmers undertaking either physical or financial benchmarking, or both, from within these Council areas is: -

2005/06 – 107

Fishing Industry: Foreign Workers

Mr P J Bradley asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development if her Department has access to all records of terms and conditions of employment for foreign workers being offered work in the fishing industry. (AQW 3142/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My Department has no access to these records. They are a commercial matter between the fishing businesses, workers and the employment agencies involved.

Fishing Industry: Foreign Workers

Mr P J Bradley asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development if she is aware of any alleged mistreatment of foreign workers employed in the fishing industry. (AQW 3143/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My officials have briefed me on meetings they have had with the Irish Congress of Trade Unions, International Transport Federation and the Council for Ethnic Communities which took place to hear their concerns about the treatment of Philippino fishermen in the local industry.

I condemn totally any exploitation of workers in whatever way and I have asked my Department to work with those organisations, representations of the local industry and other agencies which have statutory responsibilities in this area to address the concerns raised.

Fishing Industry: Foreign Workers

Mr P J Bradley asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the of the contracts issued to workers from the Philippine Islands who are employed in the fishing industry. (AQW 3144/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: I have no access to those contracts but I understand that a variety of arrangements exist depending on the employment agency used by the fishing business and agreements made between the fishing business and the Filipino fishermen themselves.

Fishing Industry: Foreign Workers

Mr P J Bradley asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development if she will undertake a study to ensure that all foreign workers employed in the fishing industry are treated with the equality afforded to indigenous workers. (AQW 3145/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: I don't believe a study is necessary. A fundamental change that is needed is to ensure that foreign workers involved in our fishing industry are here under the authority of a work permit which will guarantee their employment rights. The Borders Agency which is responsible for the immigration arrangements for migrant workers is aware of the important contribution these workers make to our fishing industry has agreed to consider the visa status of migrant fishermen from outside the EU.

Hunting with Dogs

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what consideration she has given to introducing a ban on hunting with dogs, similar to the Hunting Act 2004 that applies in England and Wales. (AQW 3162/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: There has been very little public and political debate on hunting in the North. Any decision to introduce a ban on hunting here would have to be taken in conjunction with other Ministerial colleagues at the Executive and is not solely a matter for my Department. However, my party position is that we are opposed to bloodsports.

My Department has no powers to prohibit or regulate hunting or coursing with dogs as its' responsibilities towards animals in the wild are very limited. The Department does have responsibility for the Welfare of Animals Act (NI) 1972, Section 15 of which specifically exempts from its' provisions the coursing or hunting of any animal, other than a domestic animal.

This provision does not legitimise hunting or coursing, it simply precludes enforcers from making use of the offences of cruelty contained within the Act in respect of these activities.

However, it should be noted that the hunting exemption in the Welfare of Animals Act (NI) 1972 does not apply if unnecessary suffering is caused to an animal or if the animal is released in an injured, mutilated or exhausted condition. Similarly, the exemption does not apply if an animal is hunted in an enclosed space from which it has no reasonable chance of escape.

Therefore, unlike in Britain, if sufficient evidence is forthcoming that unnecessary suffering has been caused to an animal during a hunt, a prosecution can be taken under existing legislation.

Flood Prevention: A26

Mr Butler asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development (i) to provide details of her Department's investigation into the problems of flooding; and (ii) what measures her Department is taking to prevent future flooding, on the A26 between Glenavy and Moira. (AQW 3204/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Following investigation DARD Rivers Agency has established that the heavy flooding that was experienced on the A26 road was as a result of the exceptional levels of rainfall in August 2008. In order to reduce the risk of future flooding DARD Rivers Agency has carried out maintenance works during late October – early November 2008 to the designated section of the County Drain, which the A26 road drainage system discharges into.

Animal Disease Testing/Compensation

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to report on the nature of the additional cost pressures of £16.8m and £18m anticipated in 2009/10 and 2010/11, respectively, in relation to animal diseases' testing and compensation. (AQW 3221/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Approximately half of the bid reflects the historic underprovision in the animal disease compensation baselines. The balance is to improve the testing regimes for TB and Brucellosis in order to detect and remove potentially infected animals earlier, and to promote better biosecurity on farms. These measures will reduce the risks of spreading disease

Telephone Communication Masts

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the total revenue generated through her Department leasing its land or property to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts. (AQW 3264/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The Department and its Forest Service Agency generated revenue of £130,000 for the period 8 May 2007 to 8 December 2008.

Fisheries Meeting December 2008

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development who will be accompanying her to the fisheries meeting in Brussels in December 2008, broken down by (i) officials; and (ii) representatives of fishing organisations. (AQW 3275/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: I will be accompanied by my Special Advisor, Personal Secretary and 4 officials to the Fisheries Council in December. During Council I will be meeting with representatives from the local industry to keep them apprised of developments. The NI Fish Producers Organisation and the Anglo North Irish Fish Producers Organisation usually send 2 representatives each to Brussels.

Fishing Fleet

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development if she has had discussions with her counterpart in the Republic of Ireland on assistance that can be given to the Northern Ireland Fishing Fleet at the EU fisheries meeting in Brussels in December 2008. (AQW 3276/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: I met with Brendan Smith TD in September when we discussed a range of issues that had the potential to impact on fishing opportunities for both our fleets in the Irish Sea and we agreed that there was a good deal of common ground. By way of follow up to that meeting my colleague Conor Murphy, who attended the November Council on my behalf also met with Fisheries Minister Tony Killeen TD.

The purpose of that meeting was to confirm our priorities in the Brussels negotiations for Irish Sea stocks and ensure there was a consistent message given to the Commission about the unacceptability of its proposals to cut Irish Sea stocks, such as Nephrops when the science confirmed that they were being fished sustainably.

Fisheries Meeting: Discussions with DEFRA

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what discussions she has had with DEFRA before the fisheries meeting in Brussels in December 2008. (AQW 3277/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: While I was on leave my colleague, Conor Murphy, Minister for Regional Development participated in 2 meetings with Huw Irranca Davies the DEFRA Fisheries Minister. I also have had several discussions with Huw Irranca Davies to impress on him my priorities for the December Fisheries Council and further discussion with Hilary Benn on Wednesday 10th Dec in London.

Efficiency Savings

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development which policies and practices within her Department have been changed to deliver the 3% efficiency savings required under the Budget 2008-11. (AQW 3292/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My Department has in place 12 Efficiency Delivery Plans (EDPs) in place to deliver the 3% efficiency savings required under the Budget 2008-11. Policies and practices have changed in respect of in respect of 5 of our EDPs as follows:

- Forest Service Receipts:

This EDP relates to the achievement of additional receipts from timber sales through adjusting the balance between higher value roadside sales, as opposed to standing sales.

- Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute (AFBI) Grant in Aid reductions:

AFBI will seek to attract additional non-DARD funding and further savings will be delivered through centralising procurement activities throughout the organisation.

- TB (Tb) and Brucellosis (Br) Control Programmes:

The Department has modified its Tb and Br disease management process mainly by extending the use of key performance indicators. This is aimed at improving the management and delivery of critical elements of the programmes.

- Identification, Registration and Movement of Animals Procedures:

The Department has assisted market operators and meat plants to fulfil their responsibilities for movement notification of cattle and sheep, thereby allowing the release of the Department's own staff for other duties.

- The NI Rural Development Programme (NIRDP)

The majority of measures under Axis 1 and all of the measures under Axis 3 of the NIRDP 2007 - 2013 will be delivered by third party agents on behalf of the Department. One delivery agent will deliver a range of measures under Axis 1 of the Programme, while Axis 3 measures will be delivered by groups of councils and local action groups (LAGs) working together. This represents a change from previous Rural Development Programmes where DARD was more directly involved in delivering schemes and in managing LAGs.

Those DARD staff previously involved in delivery will now manage contracts with delivery agents, once all the new procedures are set up.

Short Rotation Coppice

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for the number of new hectares of short rotation coppice planted in the private sector by each year since 1995. (AQW 3298/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development:

Year Planted	Hectares Planted

The Department only holds information relating to planting of Short Rotation Coppice carried out in the private sector which it has grant-aided. Figures refer to planting completed and for which grant aid has been paid between January and December of the given year. Prior to 2005, standard grant payments were available for SRC under the Woodland Grant Scheme. The Short Rotation Coppice Challenge Fund commenced in 2005.

Forestry Planting

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what targets have been set for forestry planting in each year since 1970 by the (i) Forest Service; and (ii) private sector.[R] (AQW 3299/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Formal targets were not set before the Forest Service Agency was established in April 1998. Since then, afforestation targets have been set and published each year in the Agency's annual Business Plan. Details are shown in the table below.

* An overall target only was set

Lost Livestock

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what measures she has sought, or provided, to compensate farmers for livestock lost directly as a consequence of severe flooding in August 2008. (AQW 3337/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: There is no compensation available for the loss of livestock due to the severe flooding in August 2008.

The flooding damage assessment carried out by my Department showed that the greatest losses were suffered by the potato and cereals farmers, with losses estimated at around £1 million. Given significant budgetary constraints, I have had to focus my proposals for government intervention on those worst affected.

Countryside Management Scheme

Mr P J Bradley asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development (i) how many farm visits took place during the assessment of applications for the Countryside Management Scheme this year; and (ii) if every farm business that applied from within a prioritised area, received a farm visit. (AQW 3364/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development:

- (i) Countryside Management Scheme farm visits to applicants with land in designated sites (prioritised areas) are currently being made and almost 1000 farms have been visited to date (12/12/08).
- (ii) Approximately 300 farm businesses remain to be visited.

Dioxin Contamination

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what measures are being taken to ensure that pig farms do not have their products banned as a result of the dioxin scare. (AQW 3376/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The information we received on Friday 5th December from the authorities in Dublin was promptly acted upon. We became aware that the farms notified to us by DAFF as recipients of the affected material did not have pigs on them; however we did have to establish that there were no forward movements of that material from those farms to any pig herds here. Our traceability system was absolutely key to the prompt action taken.

It is our detailed investigations that have provided the necessary confidence to inform the FSA statement that our pork and pigmeat products are safe. I welcome the fact that in such a short space of time those products were back on supermarket shelves and the industry was again moving.

We moved very rapidly, in a period of just 3 days, from a position where the safety of our pork was in question to one where the clear message from the FSA is that pork from pigs born and reared in the North of Ireland is safe.

Processing quickly resumed at our pork factories and our pigmeat is again on supermarket shelves.

The action to withdraw local pork and pigmeat products from sale on Monday 8th December was absolutely essential to protect the industry from the very real risk of Brussels closing our pig production and processing industry.

Contaminated Pigs

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what action has been taken to isolate the farms that are contaminated with dioxin in pigs. (AQW 3377/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: You are aware that on 5th December 2008 the authorities in the South notified my staff about concerns in relation to nine premises that had received feed potentially contaminated with dioxins.

My staff immediately identified farm premises from the Animal and Public Health Information System (APHIS) and restricted those premises until further investigations could be carried out. Herd owners were contacted and informed why this action was necessary. Animals on restricted sites were flagged on APHIS to ensure they could not enter the food chain until investigations were completed.

Tracing was also carried out to identify any pigs that had come here from the South either for direct slaughter or for breeding and production since 1st September which was the earliest date potentially contaminated feed was in use.

Any potentially infected herds were restricted and animals were not allowed to move off. In light of the nature of this case there was no need to isolate farms.

Contaminated Pigs

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what action has been taken to identify the farms that have been effected by the dioxin contamination in pigs (AQW 3378/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: You are aware that on 5th December 2008 the authorities in the South notified my staff about concerns in relation to nine premises that had received feed potentially contaminated with dioxins.

My staff immediately identified farm premises from the Animal and Public Health Information System (APHIS) and restricted those premises until further investigations could be carried out. Herd owners were contacted and informed why this action was necessary. Animals on restricted sites were flagged on APHIS to ensure they could not enter the food chain until investigations were completed.

Tracing was also carried out to identify any pigs that had come here from the South either for direct slaughter or for breeding and production since 1st September which was the earliest date potentially contaminated feed was in use.

Any potentially infected herds were restricted and animals were not allowed to move off. In light of the nature of this case there was no need to isolate farms.

Pork Industry

Mr Savage asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what steps (i) have been taken; and (ii) will be taken to ensure the protection of the pork industry at this time. (AQW 3424/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My officials have taken swift action to ascertain if pigs were present on any of the premises which received potentially contaminated feed from the South and I am pleased to be able to confirm that none of the premises contained pigs. Officials have, however, identified 5 consignments of live pigs which were imported to the North from the South since 1 September 2008. It has now been confirmed that none of these consignments came from an affected herd.

The following outlines the steps my Department has taken to protect the pork industry here.

On Friday 5 December, affected herds on the Department's traceability system (APHIS) were restricted, herd owners contacted and the measures explained to them. Meat inspection staff were put on alert in case animals from the affected herds were presented for slaughter. The Department's Quality Assurance Branch (QAB), which is responsible for animal feed, was also alerted. Information was shared with the FSA concerning advice on potential risk to consumers and actions taken by DARD.

Over the weekend of 6/7 December, I held meetings with senior Departmental officials. Veterinary officers also met representatives of the FSA and informed the Northern Ireland Meat Exporters Association of implications for them. Tracings continued to identify potentially affected animals and notify herd owners.

On Monday 8 December meat plants were updated as further information became available. Tracing of potential infected feed continued with appropriate restrictions being placed on premises to ensure potentially contaminated meat could not enter the food chain. Further meetings were held with the FSA following which I made a statement to the Assembly. A Press Release was subsequently issued advising that the FSA had confirmed that there was no risk from pigs born and bred here.

On Tuesday 9 December meat plants recommenced the slaughter of pigs and I made a further statement to update the Assembly. I also issued a press announcement to give a clear message that there is no risk from pork or pork products sourced from the North.

I believe that the foregoing amply demonstrates that the Department can act swiftly and comprehensively in an emergency situation. My officials maintain regular contacts with their colleagues in the South and with the industry here to ensure that all available relevant information is shared at the earliest opportunity. The Department is also supporting the pig industry through the provision of export trade certificates.

Monitoring of the current situation will continue and I will continue to take such steps as are necessary in the future to protect the pork industry here.

Pork Industry

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development if compensation will be available for those who lost pigs and pork produce due to feedstuff coming from the Irish Republic. (AQW 3472/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The issue of compensation is an evolving one and I have raised with the DAF Minister, Brendan Smith, the question of access to the compensation package recently announced in the South. Officials are currently liaising with DAFF on the details of the scheme.

Following the announcement on Thursday of the EU approval for Private Storage Aid for the South I lobbied the Defra Minister for a similar scheme for the North. I felt strongly that our industry should not be put at any economic disadvantage to their southern counterparts. A formal written request has been made to Commissioner Fischer-Boel and we await her response.

Pork Industry

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development why officials from her Department and FSA were not available over the weekend of 6 and 7 December 2008, when her Department was aware that the problems with pork were unfolding. (AQW 3473/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: I assure you that I and my officials were available over the weekend of the 6th and 7th of December.

Over the weekend of 6/7 December, I held discussions with senior Departmental officials. Veterinary officers also met representatives of the FSA and contacted the NI Meat Exporters Association to inform them of implications for them.

The extent of the incident unfolded throughout the weekend and I believe that our actions amply demonstrate that the Department can act swiftly and comprehensively in an emergency situation.

Milk Prices

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what steps she is taking to support dairy farmers following the downfall in milk prices. (AQW 3540/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: In recognition of the deteriorating market situation I have been working hard to try and achieve a re-introduction of export refunds for dairy products. Following the sharp drop in prices at the October United Dairy Farmers' milk auction I immediately spoke to the DEFRA Secretary of State to seek his support on the matter. Subsequently the Minister for Enterprise Trade and Investment and I issued a joint letter to Hilary Benn pressing the case for the local dairy industry and making clear our view that Britain should be taking the initiative within the EU by requesting early re-introduction of export refunds. We are also seeking a meeting with the European Commissioner, Marianne Fischer Boel, to ensure that she is aware of the seriousness of the situation. In addition the First Minister and deputy First Minister, at my request, have written to the Prime Minister to lobby his support on the matter. The Finance Minister, Nigel Dodds and I (supported by Dr David Dobbin, Dairy UK (NI)) subsequently had a meeting with Hilary Benn to impress upon him further the challenges being faced by the sector. This followed a meeting I had with industry representatives when they outlined the case for export refunds to be re-introduced. The dairy industry makes an important contribution to the agri-food industry and I will continue to do what I can to support it in these difficult times.

Contaminated Pigs

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development if her Department was able to trace the pigs that were allegedly contaminated with dioxins. (AQW 3542/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: We have traced all pigs imported from the South through the EU Traces system both for further keep and for direct slaughter. There are considerable numbers of direct slaughter pigs identified and a smaller number of pigs for further keep. The plants involved in the slaughter of the direct slaughter pigs have been provided with this information to help them identify any product containing pork from these animals. The industry has withdrawn that product from sale.

The authorities in the South provided my Department with a comprehensive list of all business premises that received potentially contaminated feed. Following investigations we were able to confirm to the FSA that no pigs in the North had been fed contaminated feed.

Contaminated Pigs

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what measures she is taking to ensure stakeholders will not be affected, financially or commercially, by the recent pork, and other livestock, contamination. (AQW 3556/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My priority is to get the industry moving again and to rebuild consumer confidence in relation to the safety of food produced on farms in the north. To that end I was successful in securing Private Storage Aid in line with the south.

Immediately on hearing that the EU had approved the PSA scheme in the south, I lobbied the Defra Minister, Hilary Benn, for a similar scheme here, making a strong case that our pig industry should not be placed at any economic disadvantage to that in the south. A formal written request was made to Commissioner Fischer-Boel and, at the Commission's meeting on 18 December, it was agreed to extend Private Storage Aid to pigmeat from the north. It is estimated that this could be worth £6m to the industry here.

You will appreciate that the issue of compensation is an evolving one and I have raised with Brendan Smith, the DAFF Minister, the question of access to the compensation package recently announced in the south. I have also written to him jointly with Arlene Foster, the Minister for Enterprise, Trade and Investment. Discussions between us are ongoing.

In conjunction with Invest NI, I am also exploring options to provide additional assistance to processors to raise awareness of pork quality and to increase consumer confidence in pork produce. The breakfast reception which I hosted jointly with the Health and Economy Ministers, on Monday 15th will, I hope, also send out a clear message to the public that pork in the north of Ireland is a healthy and nutritious product which is safe to eat. My Department is also supporting the industry through the provision of Export Trade Certificates.

Regarding other livestock, there are no concerns over milk and milk products in the north of Ireland. Sheep and poultry remain unaffected and 8 beef herds have been restricted to ensure that no animals from these herds can enter the food chain.

Rural Poverty Strategy

Mr Burns asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development which projects she intends to fund as part of the rural poverty strategy, in the South Antrim constituency. (AQW 3598/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My Department is currently developing a policy framework for addressing poverty and social exclusion in rural areas. Several priority areas for action have been identified, including rural fuel poverty, rural childcare, rural transport, rural community development and a challenge fund for projects that address poverty and social exclusion in rural areas.

As some further consultation with stakeholders will take place over the coming months it is too early at this time to say which projects will be funded.

However, it is my intention to provide an opportunity for rural dwellers right across the North to benefit from projects under the different strands of this framework.

Countryside Management Scheme

Mr Bresland asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many farm businesses were admitted into the Northern Ireland Countryside Management Scheme up to 1 December 2008. (AQW 3601/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: At the 1 December 2008, there were 8700 farm businesses in the existing Countryside Management Scheme.

On 15 September 2008, farm visits for the new Countryside Management Scheme (NICMS) commenced. At 1 December 2008, 904 farm visits had been completed. It is anticipated that in early 2009 up to 1300 farm businesses will be accepted into NICMS upon signing Scheme agreements. Therefore to date no farm businesses have yet been accepted into the new Countryside Management Scheme.

Local Action Groups' Action Plans

Mr Bresland asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the progress made in implementing each Local Action Groups' action plans under the Northern Ireland Rural Development Programme. (AQW 3602/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: I can advise that since initial receipt of the strategies all clusters were advised of general weaknesses and afforded the opportunity to review their respective strategies in the light of same. The revised strategies have now all been assessed as complete with written notification of this along with confirmation of 1st tranche funding having issued to all Joint Committees on 12th December.

Farm Modernisation Programme

Mr Bresland asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what progress has been made in implementing the Farm Modernisation Programme. (AQW 3603/09)

The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: At its meeting on 7 October 2008 I advised the Agriculture and Rural Development Committee that the Farm Modernisation Programme will open for applications in January 2009, which is still the case.

When the Programme is opened an information pack comprising the following guidance will be available from a range of DARD offices across the north of Ireland:

- An Explanatory Booklet detailing the Programme requirements
- A List of Eligible Items with maximum amount of financial support allowable per item
- An Application Form
- An Information Leaflet detailing the location of the DARD offices and the date and arrangements for receipt of application forms.

These information packs will be available for 1-2 weeks before the Programme opens for receipt of application forms.

CULTURE, ARTS AND LEISURE

Maritime Industry Museum

Mr Newton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what plans his Department has to establish a maritime industry museum in the Titanic Quarter. (AQW 2796/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (Mr G Campbell): The Executive has recently announced their support for the Titanic Signature Project (TSP). The TSP will tell the story of the maritime and industrial heritage of Belfast and the wider region, focussed to a large extent around the Titanic story.

My Department, through National Museums Northern Ireland, is committed to reviewing the future interpretation of our maritime and industrial heritage collections. This includes the option of a national maritime and industrial heritage museum but will have to acknowledge other developments including the TSP offering and exhibitions.

In light of these developments I intend meeting with the Chair and Chief Executive of National Museums in the New Year to discuss how best this matter can be progressed.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what contribution his Department has made or will be making to the consultation by the UK Department of Work and Pensions on reservations to the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with disabilities. (AQW 3060/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: In January 2007, my Department was asked by OFMDFM to scrutinise its legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check their compatibility with the provisions of the Convention. In September 2008 we were also asked to confirm whether we had any difficulty with the areas of competency covered by the Convention. After consultation with our business areas and Arms Length Bodies (ALBs) we concluded that we had no concerns on being able to fulfil the requirements of the Convention.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what preparations his Department has made for the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. (AQW 3061/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: In preparation for the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure has scrutinised its legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check their compatibility with the provisions of the Convention.

Re-Imaging Communities Programme

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how much has been spent (i) in total; and (ii) for each scheme, on the Re-Imaging Communities Programme in the North Antrim area, in each of the last three years. (AQW 3170/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: Listed below is the total spent on the Re-Imaging Communities Programme in the North Antrim Area and amount spent on each scheme.

- (i) The total spent on the Re-Imaging Communities Programme in the North Antrim Area over the last three years is £131,295. There has been no spend to date in 2007/08 or 08/09.

Irish-Language Events

Mr Butler asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to his answer to AQW 771/09, how many Irish language events he has (i) been invited to; and (ii) attended, since becoming Minister; and (iii) declined invitations and the reasons why. (AQW 3203/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: Since becoming Minister I have received two invitations to Irish language events but have been unable to attend due to diary commitments.

Telephone Communication Masts

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the total revenue generated through his Department leasing its land or property to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts. (AQW 3262/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: The Department has received no revenue from leasing its land or property to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts during the past 5 years.

Executive Meetings

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what proposals he put forward, at the Executive Meeting on 27 November 2008 to help stimulate the economy. (AQW 3326/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: I am unable to discuss details of any proposals put to the Executive Committee as Executive business is confidential.

Soccer Advisory Panel

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to provide an update on the implementation of (i) the recommendations from the Soccer Advisory Panel; and (ii) the Soccer Strategy. (AQW 3384/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: Primary responsibility for implementing the recommendations from the Soccer Advisory Panel and the Soccer Strategy rests with the Irish Football Association (IFA). The IFA has made considerable progress over the past 4 years in this regard. Progress has included:

- The setting up of a new, more streamlined and competence based Executive Board;
- The merger of the IFA and Irish Football League;
- The appointment, by open recruitment, of external members to the Board to provide independent expertise;
- The appointment, by open recruitment, of a Chief Executive, accountable to the Board, with suitable business management acumen and skills. This post is currently vacant but will be filled again by open recruitment; and
- The development of youth and facilities strategies .

However, a number of issues relating to governance and accountability remain to be addressed. Work on these issues is ongoing.

Soccer Strategy

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (i) how much funding has been designated under the Soccer Strategy for the development of Junior Soccer; (ii) how much of that funding has been spent to date; and (iii) what proposals he has for future investment in Junior Soccer. (AQW 3385/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: No funding has been designated under the Soccer Strategy specifically for the development Junior Soccer. Football clubs can, however, seek financial assistance from Sport Northern Ireland through other funding programmes.

Efficiency Savings

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what policies and practices in his Department have changed in delivering the 3% efficiency savings required by the 2008-11 Budget. (AQW 3410/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: The Department has a target to deliver cash releasing efficiencies of £3.6m, £7.0m and £10.4m over the Comprehensive Spending Review (CSR) period 2008-09 to 2010-11.

It will do this by:

- Reducing administration costs both in the Department and in its sponsored bodies. This will be achieved through a variety of means including: reducing staff numbers through natural wastage; transferring staff to front line operations from back office support; market testing more services to drive down costs; and reducing the number of consultancy assignments. For instance, Museums Branch has made no spend on consultancy this year to date. The establishment of the Northern Ireland Library Authority will also deliver efficiency gains in administration costs by concentrating the public library functions of the five existing Education and Library Boards in one body.
- Reviewing funding requirements across a number of areas. Several of the Department's programmes are time-bounded - for example, the Smithsonian Festival - and do not require funding through the CSR period. In other cases, Ministerial commitments to funding have been delivered in full or in part by the start of the CSR period and so budgets can be reduced accordingly.

A further saving was planned to be generated through increasing trading receipts at Ordnance Survey NI (OSNI). In recent years OSNI has moved towards self sufficiency and so has required less budget support from this Department. At the point at which the efficiency savings for the CSR period were calculated and published, OSNI was still an agency of DCAL and so its anticipated savings were amalgamated with the Department's.

Since OSNI has now moved to the new Land and Properties Agency (LPA), subsequent to the CSR exercise, the savings will now be delivered through that Agency and its parent Department, DFP.

Ulster-Scots Language Society

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure if (i) Foras na Gaeilge; (ii) the Ulster-Scots Agency; (iii) Pobal; and (iv) the Ulster-Scots Language Society are included on the list of Departmental consultees. (AQW 3417/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: All of the above organisations are included on the Departmental consultation list.

Foras na Gaeilge

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure if he will ensure that the minutes of the Board of Foras na Gaeilge are placed on its website in English, within two weeks from when they were approved. (AQW 3418/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: In 2007 Minister Poots asked the Foras na Gaeilge Board to consider placing an English version of their Board minutes in the public domain. The proposal was rejected at a Foras na Gaeilge Board meeting in November 2007 on the basis that Irish is the working language of the agency.

Given the need for transparency and accountability in arms length bodies, which are in receipt of significant amounts of public funds, I intend to pursue this as a matter of urgency with the Department of Community, Rural and Gaeltacht Affairs in the Republic of Ireland.

Arm's-Length Bodies

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for a breakdown of the (i) reason for travel; (ii) class of air travel for each journey; and (iii) grade of the person travelling, for all foreign travel undertaken by his Department's arm's length bodies, in each of the last two years. (AQW 3420/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: I would refer the Member to the information provided in the tables attached. I also attach a glossary, explaining job titles, for the Member's convenience.

European Charter on Minority Languages

Mr Butler asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to demonstrate how his Department and its arms length bodies, have applied, in practice, the European Charter on Minority Languages in relation to the Irish language. (AQW 3459/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: Northern Ireland is currently in full compliance with the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages. The details of the steps taken by my Department to implement the Charter are contained in a paper, entitled 'Northern Ireland's input to the UK's Third Periodical Report to the Council of Europe', which is awaiting Executive consideration. Once the paper has Executive approval a copy will be laid in the Assembly's library.

Sport NI

Lord Browne asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure if mixed Martial Arts (Cage Fighting) is recognised by Sport NI as a legitimate sport. (AQW 3464/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: Sport Northern Ireland is responsible for the development of sport in Northern Ireland and has advised that it does not currently recognise mixed Martial Arts (Cage Fighting) as a sporting activity.

Minority Languages

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure if he asked the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency to include questions about minority languages in the 2011 Census. (AQW 3465/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: My Department has engaged with the Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency to include questions on minority languages in the 2011 Census.

Minority Languages

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure if he has figures for the number of (i) native speakers of all minority languages; and (ii) people using sign language; and to reference the sources for these figures. (AQW 3466/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: There are over 70 minority languages spoken in Northern Ireland (Holder, 2003). The Department does not have accurate contemporary statistic for the number of native speakers of each. The statistics available to the Department and the relevant sources are detailed in table format below:

1. ESTIMATED NUMBER OF SPEAKERS OF IRISH AND ULSTER-SCOTS:

Language	Speakers	Source and comments
Irish	106,844	Persons aged three and over (NI census, 2001). In total 167,490 persons have 'some knowledge' of Irish
Ulster-Scots	35,000	Estimate based on 2 per cent of population. (NI Life and Times Survey, 1999)

2. ESTIMATED NUMBERS OF PEOPLE USING SIGN LANGUAGE:

British Sign Language	5,000	Estimate: Sign Language Partnership (Deaf Organisations Represented)
Irish Sign Language	1,500	Estimate: Sign Language Partnership (Deaf Organisations Represented)

3. ESTIMATED NUMBERS OF SPEAKERS OF OTHER MINORITY LANGUAGE:

Language	Speakers	Source and comment
Chinese	4,200	Various dialects are spoken. NI census (2001) recorded 4,200 people of Chinese ethnic origin. Holder (2003) estimates 8,000
Cant/Shelta/Gammon	1,700	Oral languages of the Irish Traveller Community Holder (2003), Kirk and O Baoill (2002)
Arabic	1,000–1,500	Holder (2003), Modern Standard Arabic, also including speakers of Western and Eastern Arabic
Portuguese	1,000+	Holder (2003)
Tagalog	600	Holder (2003) (National Language of the Philippines)
Bengali	450–500	Holder (2003)
Hindi or Punjabi	1,700	Holder (2003)
Southern Indian Languages	500	Holder (2003) includes Tamil, Kannada, Kanta, Malay ala, Marati, Oriya and Telugu
Farsi	350	Holder (2003)

There are also speakers of other European, African and Asian languages in Northern Ireland not detailed above as figures are not available for these.

Ulster-Scots/Irish-Language Official Publications

Mr F McCann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the nine official publications drafted about Ulster-Scots and the Irish Language in the past five years, including (i) dates; (ii) subject matter; and (iii) where they can be accessed. (AQW 3561/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: The nine official publications drafted in relation to Ulster-Scots and the Irish Language in the past five years with relevant details are as shown in the table below:-

Sports Grounds

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what interaction his Department has had with local councils about health and safety training and specifications at local sports grounds. (AQW 3584/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: Sport Northern Ireland (SNI) is responsible for providing of advice and guidance on health and safety matters at sports grounds. Three years ago a working group was established involving representatives of the District Councils and SNI to consider how the Safety of Sports Grounds (Northern Ireland) Order 2006 should be implemented. It also discussed technical and administrative issues relating to safety at sporting venues.

District Councils were also represented on the working party (chaired by SNI) which drafted the first edition of the Northern Ireland Guide to Safety at Sports Grounds (the Red Guide), published by DCAL in July 2007. The representation included both Building Control and Environmental Health Officers and copies of the Red Guide were issued to all 26 District Councils.

More recently, the newly established overseeing body has met with the District Councils to discuss plans for the implementation of the certification scheme and the associated training needs of council staff.

Sports Stewards

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (i) how many sports stewards have completed safety training at each of the three levels in each sport; and (ii) how much money his Department has made available for steward training in each of those sports. (AQW 3585/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: The planned sports ground safety certification scheme, as detailed in the Safety of Sports Grounds (Northern Ireland) Order 2006 and related guidance, will require stewards to be trained to NVQ Level 2, 3 and 4. Sport Northern Ireland, which has responsibility for the safety of sports grounds overseeing function, is currently consulting with Skills Active, accrediting organisations and colleges of Higher and Further Education over the provision of this training which is expected to commence in the 2009/10 academic year.

Since the launch of its Safety Management Programme in 2000, SNI has awarded approximately £749,000 for safety management, which includes steward training, as follows:

Sport	Soccer	GAA	Rugby
Funding	£490,000	£212,000	£47,000

Public Record Office at Titanic Quarter

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, pursuant to the answer to AQW 2687/09 and AQW 2688/09, why his Department did not carry out a site specific flood risk assessment before deciding, in August 2007, to locate the new Public Record Office at Titanic Quarter. (AQW 3623/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: As part of the tender submission in June 2007, Titanic Quarter Ltd (TQL) provided details of a flood risk assessment carried out by RPS Consulting Engineers for Phase 2 of the Titanic Quarter development, covering an area of 39 acres in close proximity to the PRONI site. The information contained in this assessment provided sufficient assurance to allow TQL to be appointed as the preferred bidder in August 2007, which enabled TQL to develop their design proposals in greater detail. This appointment required TQL to obtain full Planning Permission, which included approval of a site specific flood risk assessment in accordance with Planning Policy Statement 15. The granting of Planning Permission for the Titanic Quarter site was a condition precedent to PRONI entering into the development and land purchase agreement in November 2008.

EDUCATION

School Maintenance Programme

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Education to detail the works that have been delayed in the Schools Maintenance Programme in (i) the Derry City Council area; and (ii) the Foyle constituency, broken down by school.

(AQW 2622/09)

The Minister of Education (Ms C Ruane): Tá sé socraithe agam go gcuirfear an t-eolas a iarradh i Leabharlann an Tionóil.

I have arranged for the information requested to be placed in the Assembly Library

School Maintenance Programme

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the works that have been delayed in the schools maintenance programme, broken down by schools, in the North Down constituency, (AQW 2671/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá sé socraithe agam go gcuirfear an t-eolas a iarradh i Leabharlann an Tionóil.

I have arranged for the information requested to be placed in the Assembly Library.

Capital Newbuild Schemes

Mr O'Dowd asked the Minister of Education if construction work for the capital newbuild schemes at St Mary's Primary School and St Patrick's College, Banbridge, are on schedule to proceed in the 2008-09 financial year; and when work will start. (AQW 2771/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá an Roinn fós ag fanacht ar iarrtais Chéim D (sracphleananna agus costais deiridh) don dá thionscadal ó na comhairleoirí deartha scoile faoi seach.

Stage D submissions (final sketch plans and costs) for both projects are still awaited by the department from the schools' respective design consultants. In light of this it is estimated that construction work on both projects will now start in 2009/10 rather than this year and complete in 2011/12. This is subject to all the necessary planning and building processes being completed satisfactorily, and the availability of resources in any particular year.

Overhead Power Cables: SELB Area

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education how many schools within the Southern Education and Library Board area are sited within 200 metres of overhead power cables. (AQW 2838/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá 3 scoil i limistéar Bhord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Deiscirt suite taobh istigh de 200 méadar ó cháblaí leictreachais lastuas.

3 schools within the Southern Education and Library Board are sited within 200 metres of overhead power cables.

Temporary Teaching Positions

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many teachers have taken early retirement and subsequently taken temporary teaching positions, in each of the last 3 years. (AQW 2889/09)

The Minister of Education: Seo a leanas líon na múinteoirí a chuaigh ar luathscor agus a chuaigh isteach i bpost sealadach teagaisc ina dhiaidh sin, i ngach bliain le 3 bliana anuas:

The number of teachers who have taken early retirement and subsequently taken temporary teaching positions, in each of the last 3 years is as follows:

Financial Year	Number of teachers retiring on grounds of redundancy or efficient discharge	Number of teachers who subsequently became re-employed
2005/06	581	384
2006/07	550	311
2007/08	557	277

The Department has advised employers that retired teachers should only be re-employed to provide short-term cover where newly qualified teachers or experienced non-retired teachers are unavailable.

Classroom Assistants

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Education what action she is taking to provide funding for the job evaluation of classroom assistants in the grant maintained integrated sector. (AQW 2920/09)

The Minister of Education: The recent agreement on the outcome of the Job Evaluation was for Classroom Assistants for whom the Education and Library Boards are the employing authorities, and in this context this agreement does not have a direct read across to employees of other employing authorities. Any decision within grant-maintained integrated or voluntary grammar schools to implement rates of pay in line with the outcome of the Job Evaluation process in the Education and Library Boards in respect of particular categories of staff is a matter for individual schools' Board of Governors as employing authorities to consider within the constraints of the total resources available to the school.

Cé gur saincheist í seo a bhaineann le Boird Gobharnóirí mar údaráis fostóra, d'éist mé leis na hábhair inní a d'ardaigh scoileanna faoi na himpleachtaí féideartha airgeadais do scoileanna imeasctha faoi chothabháil stáit agus do scoileanna deonacha gramadaí agus bhreathnaigh mé iad.

Although this is an issue for Boards of Governors as employing authorities, I have listened and taken on board the concerns raised by schools about the potential financial implications for grant-maintained integrated and voluntary grammar schools. I had sought additional resources in the September monitoring round to help alleviate the impact on school budgets, but in light of the overall constrained financial position at that time the bid was not successful. However, I have asked for this bid to be reconsidered as a part of the December monitoring round and I will continue to use my best endeavours to secure additional resources.

School Maintenance Programme

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Education what funding was allocated to each Education and Library Board for school maintenance in each of the last 3 financial years. (AQW 2974/09)

The Minister of Education: Tugtar blocdheontas do na Boird Oideachais agus Leabharlainne (ELBs) ag tús na bliana airgeadais lena thacú le soláthar réimse seirbhísí, cothabháil tiarna talaimh san áireamh.

The Education and Library Boards' (ELBs) are provided with a block grant at the beginning of the financial year to support the delivery of a range of services, including landlord maintenance. The ELBs have the discretion to determine the amount of the block grant they wish to attribute to their landlord maintenance budget, taking into consideration the level of backlog maintenance and health and safety risks in their Board area, along with other budgetary pressures.

The following additional allocations for maintenance were made to ELBs over and above their block grant allocation in each of the last three financial years:

	2005-06	2006-07	2007-08
Belfast Education and Library Board	334	100	1,222

School Maintenance Programme

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Education to detail the maintenance work carried out in schools, including the cost of the work, in each of the last 3 financial years, broken down by (i) school; and (ii) Education and Library Board area. (AQW 2975/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá socraithe agam go gcuirfear an t-eolas a iarradh i Leabharlann an Tionóil.

I have arranged for the information requested to be placed in the Assembly Library.

Capital Projects

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Education what actions her Department is taking to bring forward the delivery of capital projects, to help address the economic downturn. (AQW 3012/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá mé sásta gur tháinig an Coiste Feidhmiúcháin ar chomhaontú chun £4 mhilliún sa bhreis a chur ar fáil fá choinne cothabhála scoile mar chuid de phacáiste chun deileáil leis an mheathlú geilleagraich.

I am pleased that the Executive has agreed to provide an additional £4 million for school maintenance as part of a package to deal with the economic downturn.

I am fully aware of the importance of the construction industry to the local economy. Earlier this month, work commenced on a project to provide two new girls' colleges in Derry. This will provide much needed support for the local construction industry. In addition there are currently 23 major works projects currently on site.

In regard to future major school building projects the implications of the High Court judgement on the Major Works Framework is currently being assessed, and in the meantime my Department is drawing up an alternative procurement approach, outside the framework, to avoid prolonged delays in delivering projects which are ready to enter the procurement stage.

Special Needs Requirements

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Education if it is standard procedure that only two pupils per school be assessed for numeracy special needs requirements per year. (AQW 3029/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá curtha in iúl ag Príomhfheidhmeannaigh na mBord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne dom nach gnáthchleachtas é nach ndéantar measúnú ach ar bheirt daltaí in aghaidh na scoile le mhagaidh ceanglas a bhaineann le riachtanais speisialta uimhearthachta agus/nó litearthachta in aghaidh na bliana.

I have been advised by the Chief Executives of the Education and Library Boards that it is not standard procedure that only two pupils per school be assessed for numeracy and/or literacy special needs requirements per year. All Boards, with the exception of the South Eastern Education and Library Board (SEELB), use a Time Allocation model of service delivery which gives schools access to a fair allocation of educational psychology service time.

Using this system each school has its own waiting list of referrals to the Boards' educational psychology services. It is, therefore, the schools which prioritise the pupils whom they deem to be most in need of assessment, usually through discussion with the Boards' educational psychology services. This model allows schools to appraise the needs of pupils on their waiting lists on an ongoing basis including those pupils with literacy and/or numeracy needs.

In all Boards if information is presented to the educational psychologist (EP) during consultation that indicates that the pupil has exceptional circumstances such referrals will receive priority.

There is therefore no set limit throughout the north of Ireland to the number of referrals a school can make although the number of pupils who can be assessed by an educational psychologist may be limited within a given area due to the overall capacity of the service.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Education what contribution her Department has made or will be making to the consultation by the UK Department of Work and Pensions on reservations to the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with disabilities. (AQW 3062/09)

The Minister of Education: Faoin dlínse seo, bíonn príomh fhreagracht ag Oifig an Chéad - Aire agus an Leas Chéad Aire (OFMDFM) i leith breithnithe Choinbhinsiún na Náisiún Aontaithe ar Chearta Daoine faoi Mhíchumas (an Coinbhinsiún) a chur chun cinn.

Within this jurisdiction the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister (OFMDFM) has lead responsibility for progressing considerations on the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (the Convention).

On 2 January 2007 OFMDFM wrote to departments (on behalf of the Department of Work and Pensions) to ask them to scrutinise their legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check their compatibility with the provisions of the Convention.

The Department of Education is currently considering a proposed reservation for England, Scotland, Wales and ourselves in respect of Article 24 of the convention and will, after taking advice and having reached a considered view; contribute to the consultation process in relation to this reservation.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Education what preparations her Department has made for the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. (AQW 3191/09)

The Minister of Education: Since January 2007, officials within the Department of Education have scrutinised their legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check their compatibility with the provisions of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (the Convention) and to assess whether they had any difficulty with the areas of competency covered by the Convention and to confirm how they arrived at their policy position.

The Department's Disability Action Plan will be updated to reflect any new actions to be carried out under the terms of the Convention.

Thaispeáin an Tuarascáil Bhliantúil ar Dhul chun cinn na Roinne 2007/02, don Chomisiún Cothroime, gur thug an Roinn faoi bhearta gníomhaíochta de bhun a dualgais bainte leis an mhí chumas.

The Department's 2007/08 Annual Progress Report to the Equality Commission reflected action measures carried out in pursuance of its disability duties.

Rationalisation of Schools

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Education to report on the nature of the additional cost pressures of £22.7m and £19.5m anticipated in 2009/10 and 2010/11 respectively in relation to the rationalisation of schools.

(AQW 3220/09)

The Minister of Education: Éilíonn fostóirí na múinteoirí meicníocht chun luathscaoileadh na múinteoirí a éascú.

Teachers' employers require a mechanism to facilitate the early release of teachers. For example, they need to be able to:

- make necessary organisational changes in schools arising from curricular changes, rationalisation or falling enrolments;
- retire teachers whose performance and effectiveness have been significantly affected through not being able to cope with the demands of curricular, technological, or other changes; and
- facilitate the entry of young teachers into permanent full-time employment in local schools.

Having moved in 2008 to "hard charge" teachers' employers for the cost of discretionary "added years" enhancements, my Department plans to amend existing legislation in 2009 to make employers liable in addition for the cost of early payment of pension in cases where they have agreed to grant premature retirement, or to make an enhanced severance payment as an alternative.

The Teachers' Pension Scheme can no longer meet the costs associated with premature retirement as the Scheme's liabilities would otherwise continue to increase at a much faster rate than the current level of contributions can sustain. The resources are therefore required to enable teachers' employers to meet these costs in future.

Teaching Staff: Attacks in Lagan Valley

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Education how many attacks there have been on teaching staff in the Lagan Valley constituency in the last five years.

(AQW 3229/09)

The Minister of Education: Ní bhailíonn an Roinn Oideachais an t-eolas a iarradh.

The Department of Education does not collect the information requested.

However, statistics on the reasons for suspension and expulsion are gathered each school year from Education and Library Boards. The table below provides the number of occasions where pupils were suspended for physical attacks on staff, in Lagan Valley constituency schools, in the last five years.

School Year	No of occasions where pupils were suspended for physical attacks on staff
2002/03	15
2003/04	14
2004/05	8
2005/06	21

School Year	No of occasions where pupils were suspended for physical attacks on staff
2006/07	10

Notes:

Includes pupils at Key Stage 1 – 4 in primary, post-primary and special schools.

Teaching Posts: East Belfast

Mr Newton asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to answer AQW 2798/08, to detail the number of teaching posts being filled by substitute/temporary teachers in (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools, in the East Belfast constituency. (AQW 3241/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá an t-eolas a iarradh sa tábla thíos:

The information requested is detailed in the table below:

School Type	Daily Paid Temporary teachers	Hourly Paid Temporary Teachers	Total
Primary	146	19	165
Secondary	62	3	65
Total	208	22	230

Telephone Communication Masts

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Education to detail the total revenue generated through her Department leasing its land or property to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts. (AQW 3246/09)

The Minister of Education: Níl aon réadmhaoin ag an Roinn Oideachais agus mar sin de, ní shaothraíonn sí ioncam ó thalamh nó ó réadmhaoin a léasú d'fhonn tógáil crann cumarsáide teileafóin a éascú.

The Department of Education does not own any property and therefore does not generate any revenue from leasing land or property to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts.

Extended Schools Programmes

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education how many schools in the South Eastern Education and Library Board area operate extended schools programmes; and how many have had their funding cut in the last year. (AQW 3251/09)

The Minister of Education: Bíonn seirbhísí sínte ar fáil, thar an lá scoile tradisiúnta, ag formhór na scoileanna laistigh den limistéar SEELB agus bíonn an cumas orthu seo a dhéanamh mar gheall ar chónascadh idir iarrachtaí dheonacha, cistí scoile agus acmhainní a fritheadh ó eagraíochtaí a thugann deontais.

Most schools within the SEELB area offer extended services beyond the traditional school day and are able to do so through a combination of voluntary effort, school funds and resources raised from grant making organisations.

My Department supports extended activities in the most disadvantaged areas through the Extended Schools programme. As you know I have been highly supportive of this programme and have recently secured an additional £5m from the September monitoring round to restore previous funding levels.

In the current financial year 53 schools in the South Eastern Education and Library Board were allocated funding from the Extended Schools programme.

Of these schools

- 23 have had funding reduced when compared to 2007/08 allocations. This has been due to either a drop in pupil enrolment figures or because the school concerned decided to withdraw from a clustering arrangement (schools which cluster are entitled to an additional 15% allocation).

- A further 4 schools that were previously fully funded were allocated reduced funding because the percentage of pupils enrolled who are classified as disadvantaged or lived in disadvantaged areas fell just below the qualifying threshold.

There were 23 schools which were no longer eligible for the programme because the percentage of qualifying pupils enrolled fell short of the qualifying threshold. In those cases I was able to provide funding for the period April-June 2008 to see the schools through to the end of the last school year.

Educational Psychologists: SEELB Area

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education how many children are waiting to see an educational psychologist in each school, in the South Eastern Education and Library Board area. (AQW 3252/09)

The Minister of Education: I have been advised by the Chief Executive of the South-Eastern Education and Library Board that the number of children waiting to see an educational psychologist (EP) in the South Eastern Education and Library Board (SEELB) area is as detailed in the tables below. In line with the Statistics and Research Agency (NISRA) policy in cases where the number of pupils is 4 or less these have been suppressed and are listed separately.

It should also be noted that these figures do not include children waiting for reviews of their special educational needs (SEN) at Stage 3 of the Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs (COP), waiting for annual reviews of their statements of SEN at Stage 5 of the COP or assessments in relation to the Transfer Procedure.

I gcás na scoileanna ar fad i limistéar an SEELB nach bhfuil liostaithe, níl aon pháistí ag fanacht ar shíceolaí oideachais a fheiceáil faoi láthair.

For all schools in the SEELB not listed there are currently no children waiting to see an EP.

Energy for Schools

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Education to report on the nature of the additional cost of £8.8m for energy for schools in 2009/10, considering the changing global energy market. (AQW 3266/09)

The Minister of Education: Baineann an tairiscint fá choinne acmhainní breise de £8.8 milliún i leith costas fuinnimh agus fónais sa bhliain 2009 -10 do Bhoird, do scoileanna agus don earnáil ógra, baineann sí le brúnna boilscithe a bhaineann le táillí leictreachais, táillí gáis agus táillí tráchtála uisce.

The bid for additional resources of £8.8 million for energy and utility costs in 2009-10 for Boards, schools and the youth sector is in respect of inflationary pressures relating to electricity, gas and commercial water charges. The bid is based on the significant inflationary increases in the third quarter of the 2008-09 financial year.

St Malachy's Youth Centre

Mr A Maskey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to the answer to AQW 2769/09, if her Department received an economic appraisal for the proposed St Malachy's Youth Centre in November 2008. (AQW 3282/09)

The Minister of Education: Fuair an Roinn breithmheas leasaithe eacnamaíochta ar an 25 Meitheamh 2008.

The Department received a revised economic appraisal on the 25 June 2008. Comments and questions regarding the economic appraisal were sent back to St Malachy's for action and the Department is awaiting a response.

PEAG Places

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Education how she is going to ensure that every pre-school child has a PEAG place in the playgroup of their parents' choice. (AQW 3285/09)

The Minister of Education: Faoin Chlár um Leathnú ar Oideachas Réamh Scoile (PSEEP), bíonn áiteanna chistithe curtha ar fáil i meascán d'aonaid rialaithe, d'aonaid faoi chothabháil, d'aonaid imeasctha agus d'aonaid Ghaelscolaíochta san earnáil reachtúil, agus i naíolanna san earnáil dheonach agus san earnáil phríobháideach.

Under the Pre-School Education Expansion Programme (PSEEP) funded places have been provided in a mixture of controlled, maintained, integrated and Irish medium units in the statutory sector, and playgroups and day nurseries in the voluntary and private sector.

Since the start of the Programme (1998/99) the Department's view has been that all places are open to all children, though, in any given area, we try to provide choice through a mixture of providers.

For the 2008/09 school year my Department initially provided funding for 6,930 pre-school places in the voluntary/private playgroup sector.

At 30th September 2008, Education and Library Boards indicated an uptake of 6,880 funded pre-school places in the voluntary/private sector i.e. a reduced requirement of 50 places. This indicates that there are sufficient places available for every child in their final pre-school year. However, it should be noted that demand is not always geographically matched to supply.

PEAG Places

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Education (i) what stage has been reached in the allocation of PEAG places for 2009; and (ii) what criteria is used in assessing the number of PEAG places a playgroup is allocated per year. (AQW 3286/09)

The Minister of Education:

- (i) Thug mo Roinn an teolas do na Boird Oideachais agus Leabharlainne ar an 28ú Samhain 2008 maidir le líon na n-áiteanna mhaoinithe i naiscoileanna a leithdháileadh sna earnalacha dheonacha / phríobháideacha don bhliain acadúil 2009/10.
- (ii) My Department notified Education and Library Boards on 28th November 2008 of the number of funded places pre-school education places allocated in the voluntary/private sector for the 2009/10 academic year.

The Education and Library Boards are now in the process of advising individual voluntary playgroups of their allocation of places.

This process, over the five Education and Library Boards, will be completed by early to mid January 2009.

- (ii) The Education and Library Boards use a number of indicators in assessing the number of places individual playgroups are allocated each year. These include:-
- Current provision – uptake of places i.e. the number of places the playgroup received in the previous year.
  - Enrolment patterns i.e. the average number of places filled over the last few years.
  - Degree of shortfall/surplus in an area including specific requests for additional places due to local pressures.
  - Provision and uptake of places at neighbouring settings.

PEAG Places

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Education what consideration is given to fluctuating intakes at playgroups in the allocation of PEAG places. (AQW 3287/09)

The Minister of Education: Socraíonn PEAGanna leithdháileadh tosaigh na n-áiteanna cistithe chuig suíomhanna naíonraí deonacha bunaithe ar mheasúnú riachtanais a thugann aird ar leithdháiltí ó bhlianta roimhe agus ón bhliain reatha.

PEAG's determine the initial allocation of funded places to voluntary pre-school settings based on an assessment of need which takes account of previous and current year's allocations. They closely monitor admissions to identify surplus places for reallocation to areas of shortfall.

PEAG Places

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Education if she can confirm to playgroups the number of PEAG places they have been allocated, in January 2009. (AQW 3288/09)

The Minister of Education: My Department issued letters to the Education and Library Boards on 28th November 2008 informing them of the number of funded pre-school education places allocated in the voluntary/private sector for the 2009/10 academic year.

The Education and Library Boards are now in the process of advising individual voluntary playgroups of their allocation of places for the 2009/10 academic year.

Beidh an próiseas seo, a bhaineann leis an cúig Bhord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne, críochnaithe uair éigin go luath i mí Eanáir nó i lár na míosa sin.

This process, over the five Education and Library Boards, will be completed by early to mid January 2009.

Schools in Rural Areas

Mr Doherty asked the Minister of Education if she will liaise with the Department for Regional Development to develop and implement a strategy to ensure that schools located in rural areas remain accessible in inclement weather conditions. (AQW 3290/09)

The Minister of Education: Déanfaidh na Boird Oideachais agus Leabharlainne iarracht i gcónaí lena chinntiú go soláthraítear seirbhísí i rith tréimhsí drochaimsire.

The Education and Library Boards will always attempt to ensure that school transport services are provided during periods of inclement weather. However, children's safety is of the utmost concern, so it is possible vehicles may not be able to travel to schools under certain road conditions. In that instance, I would be happy to support any initiative to improve road conditions that my Ministerial colleague in the Department for Regional Development might bring forward.

School Maintenance Programme

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Education for her assessment of how many pupils are being taught in sub-standard accommodation due to the £217m backlog in school maintenance. (AQW 3291/09)

The Minister of Education: Ní thugann sé le tuiscint go mbíonn an chóiríocht scoile go hiomlán ina droch chóiríocht nuair a aithnítear go bhfuil oibreacha chothábhála de dhíth ar scoil.

The identification of maintenance works for a school does not imply that the overall accommodation is sub-standard. The required maintenance varies significantly from school to school. There has been significant under-investment in the education estate over many years and action is being taken to address the problem with around 100 major capital projects either currently on site or in planning.

Efficiency Savings

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Education which policies and practices within her Department have been changed to deliver the 3% efficiency savings required under the Budget 2008-11. (AQW 3294/09)

The Minister of Education: Caithfidh an Roinn coigiltí éifeachtachta den iomlán £372 milliún a sholáthar thar tréimhse trí bliana ó 2008/09 go dtí 2010/11.

The Department is required to deliver efficiency savings totalling almost £372million over the three year period 2008-09 to 2010-11. These savings will be delivered through a range of policies and practices many of which will be determined where the services are delivered at the front line. Key elements of the efficiency programme include the streamlining of administration and establishment of the Education and Skills Authority; the implementation of Special Education and Inclusion Review.

The Department has published a Summary Efficiency Delivery Plan on its website. This document sets out further details on each of the policy areas and practices which will be directly impacted by the requirement to deliver the Budget 2008-11 efficiencies. The plan can be accessed at the following website page:

Primary School Budget: SEELB 2004-05

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to provide the delegated schools budget for each primary school in the South Eastern Education and Library Board, for each financial year since 2004-5. (AQW 3307/09)

The Minister of Education: Leagtar amach sna táblaí thíos leithdháileadh cistithe fá choinne gach bunscoil agus gach iar-bhunscoil Bhord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Oirdheiscirt i ngach bliain airgeadais ó 2004-05.

Education and Skills Authority: Role and Remit

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education what discussions her Department intends to have with local councils about the role and remit of the Education and Skills Authority. (AQW 3311/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá mo Roinn réidh le bheith ag plé le comhairlí áitiúla agus le NILGA ar pholasaí an Athbreithnithe ar Riarachán Poiblí san Oideachas, chomh maith le plé a dhéanamh ar ról agus sainchúram an Údaráis um Oideachas agus Scileanna.

My Department is ready to engage with local councils and NILGA on policy on the Review of Public Administration in education, and the role and remit of the Education and Skills Authority.

The Chief Executive Designate of ESA has had several meetings with Councils and is to meet with NILGA in the near future about the operation of the ESA.

Education and Skills Authority: School Governor Selection

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the procedures to select school governors under the proposed new Education and Skills Authority. (AQW 3315/09)

The Minister of Education: Ní shocrófar na nósanna imeachta um ghobharnóirí scoile a roghnú faoin Údarás nua um Oideachas agus Scileanna go dtí go bhfaomhann an Tionól an chéad Bhille Oideachais RPA.

The procedures for the selection of school governors under the new Education and Skills Authority will not be finalised until the first RPA Education Bill is approved by the Assembly.

The current proposals are that the transferors and trustees of grant-aided schools will continue to nominate representatives to Boards of Governors and these appointments will be confirmed by ESA after completion of the necessary vetting under child protection legislation. The exact arrangements for making these nominations including the role that could be played by sectoral including church interests in bringing forward nominations is still under consideration.

The procedures for the recruitment and appointment of community governors to grant-aided schools will include public advertising to open up opportunities for service for all those in the community with an interest in making a positive contribution to education as a school governor. I am also open to consider the development of new procedures to enable local business and commerce to be involved in bringing forward candidates to act as school governors.

The procedures for the election of parent and teacher governors are handled at school level and detailed in the Department's circular 2005/20 on the DE website. This circular will be updated in due course to take account of the amendment proposed in the RPA Bill to enable part time teachers to participate in the procedures for the election of teacher governors.

Post-Primary Transfer Test

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Education what advice her Department is giving to primary school head teachers who have been asked by parents to prepare their children for the new post primary transfer test.

(AQW 3316/09)

The Minister of Education: Bíonn dualgas reachtúil ar bhunscoileanna an curaclam athbhreithnithe a sholáthar agus bíonn bunfhreagracht dhlíthiúil agus mhorálta orthu i leith a ndaltaí féin, gan aird ar aon bhrú a d'fhéadfaí a bheith orthu chun soláthairtí eile a dhéanamh.

Primary schools have a statutory duty to deliver the revised curriculum and have a legal and moral responsibility first and foremost towards their pupils, regardless of any pressure they may come under to make other provisions. No post-primary school can oblige a primary school to assist in the preparation of pupils for any particular feature of its admissions process.

My Department has issued 350,000 leaflets to schools across the North, providing details of the revised curriculum and associated assessment and reporting arrangements. These are going to every family which has a child in a primary or post-primary school.

Teaching Vacancies: Lagan Valley

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Education how many teaching vacancies there are in each school in Lagan Valley.

(AQW 3322/09)

The Minister of Education: Bíonn eolas ar fholúntais múinteoirí á lorg ag an Roinn ó gach scoil dheontaschúnta ar bhonn bliantúil.

The Department seeks information on teacher vacancies from all grant-aided schools on an annual basis. The information provides a "snapshot" of vacancies at a specific date each year. The latest information available identifies vacancies at 2 November 2007, and details for the Lagan Valley constituency are set out below:

No. of vacancies still to be filled during the 2007/08 academic year at 2nd November 2007 in schools in the Lagan Valley Parliamentary Constituency

Primary Schools: Parental Choice

Mr P J Bradley asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to the answer to AQO 1269/09, what recognition does she give to the right of parents to choose the primary school for their children. (AQW 3325/09)

The Minister of Education: B'fhéidir gur mhian le tuismitheoirí a bpáiste a chur chuig scoil a rogha féin seachas an pháiste a chur chuig an scoil is oiriúnaí agus is congaraí dóibh.

Parents may wish to send their child to a school of their choice, rather than the nearest suitable school. However, the fact that parents may regard a school as unsuitable because of their views on some specific aspect does not render it an unsuitable school for the purposes of the school transport arrangements. As such, parents should understand that if they do not seek a place in all suitable schools within statutory walking distance of their home, then they will not be entitled to transport assistance to a more distant school.

Grammar School Admissions: Moyle

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Education what percentage of children who sat their transfer test in 2007 from (i) Armoy; (ii) Glenshesk; (iii) Glendun; (iv) Glenarm; and (v) Glenariff areas of Moyle, were admitted to grammar schools. (AQW 3338/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá curtha in iúl ag Bord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Oirthuaiscirt (NEELB) don Roinn nach mbailítear eolas ar chéatadán na bpáistí a dhéanann an Teist Aistrithe miondealaithe de réir na gceantar geografach a iarradh.

The North Eastern Education and Library Board (NEELB) have advised the Department that they do not collect information on the percentage of children who sit the transfer test broken down by the geographical areas requested. ### Education Sector: Job Losses

Lord Browne asked the Minister of Education how many jobs will be lost in the education sector due to the proposed merger of the existing five Education and Library Boards. (AQW 3389/09)

The Minister of Education: Nuair a chruthófar an tÚdarás um Oideachas agus Scileanna ar 1 Eanáir 2010 tabharfar le chéile feidhmeanna tábhachtacha 12 comhlachas oideachais, mar atá na 5 Bord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne, Comhairle na Scoileanna Caitliceacha faoi Chothabháil, an Chomhairle Churaclaim Scrúdúcháin agus Mheasúnaithe, an Chomhairle Ógra, Staff Commission, an Roinn Oideachais, NICIE agus Comhairle na Gaelscolaíochta.

The creation of the Education and Skills Authority on 1 January 2010 will bring together the front-line functions of 12 education bodies, including the 5 Education and Library Boards, CCMS, CCEA, Youth Council, Staff Commission, DE, NICIE and CNaG. The key aim of the RPA in education is to improve education outcomes by creating a single organisation with the responsibility for raising standards in every school in every sector and with clear accountability to me and to the Assembly for doing so. This will be facilitated by streamlining administration and releasing resources for re-allocation to the classroom and frontline support services.

The Outline Business Case for ESA indicates that by the end of year 3 of ESA an additional £20m per annum will be released to directly support improved education outcomes and in subsequent phases I believe we can radically improve service delivery in a way which will release even further savings to enhance the quality of services available to schools and youth services. This will be achieved through a reduction of around 463 administrative and headquarter posts, with the main impact at senior and middle management levels. Data from the Education and Library Boards indicates that they currently employ 312 temporary/agency staff. I therefore expect that streamlining can be achieved through a combination of vacant posts, natural wastage and voluntary severance and that compulsory redundancies can be avoided.

Breakfast Clubs

Lord Browne asked the Minister of Education what percentage of secondary schools have breakfast clubs. (AQW 3392/09)

The Minister of Education: Ní chruinnítear an t-eolas seo go rialta ó scoileanna.

This information is not routinely collected from schools.

However you will be aware my Department's Extended Schools programme provides a recognised funding stream for those schools operating in the most deprived and disadvantaged areas to provide for a wide range of services and activities outside of the traditional school day including breakfast clubs. In the 2007/08 Extended Schools programme, funding issued to 66 post-primary schools (5 selective and 61 non-selective). Of these, 28 (42%) indicated in their last annual report that they had operated a breakfast club during the 2007/8 school year.

Grammar School Admissions: Ballymoney Area

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Education what percentage of children who sat the transfer test in 2007 from (i) Seacon; (ii) The Vow; (iii) Kiloquin Lower; (iv) Kiloquin Upper; (v) Dunloy; and (vi) Cloughmills areas in Ballymoney, were admitted to grammar schools. (AQW 3393/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá curtha in iúl ag Bord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Oirthuaiscirt (NEELB) don Roinn nach mbailíonn siad eolas ar chéatadán na bpáistí a dhéanann an teist aistrithe miondealaithe de réir na gceantar geografach a iarradh.

The North Eastern Education and Library Board (NEELB) have advised the Department that they do not collect information on the percentage of children who sit the transfer test broken down by the geographical areas requested. The information is, however, available broken down by Primary Schools in the Board area, and the 2007 figures for the primary schools that serve the geographical areas listed are provided in the table below.

Departmental Consultee List

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education if (i) Foras na Gaeilge; (ii) the Ulster-Scots Agency; (iii) Pobal; and (iv) the Ulster-Scots Language Society are included on the list of Departmental consultees.

(AQW 3421/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá roinnt liostaí comhairliúcháin ag mo Roinn, ag brath ar an réimse beartais agus ar na daioine aonair agus na grúpaí a d'fhéadfaí a mbeadh leas acu sna comhairliúcháin.

My Department has a number of consultation lists, depending on the policy area and the individuals or groups who may have an interest in the consultations.

The list used for consultation on equality matters includes the Ulster-Scots Agency, Pobal and the Ulster-Scots Language Society.

Foras na Gaeilge had been omitted from this list in error, but has now been added to it.

School Maintenance Programme

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Education what action her Department is taking to address the backlog in the school maintenance programme for schools in the Lisburn and Dromore area.

(AQW 3427/09)

The Minister of Education: Is iad Boird Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Oirdheiscirt agus an Deiscirt a bhíonn freagrach as cothabháil scoileanna rialaithe agus scoileanna faoi chothabháil i gceantar Lios na gCearrbhach agus Dhroim Mór.

The South Eastern and Southern Education and Library Boards have responsibility for the maintenance of controlled and maintained schools in the Lisburn and Dromore area. Whilst my Department determines the overall budget allocations for the Boards, it is for the Boards to determine, along with other services to be provided, how much funding they attribute to their maintenance budgets. My Department is also supportive of both Boards' bids for additional resources from the December monitoring round, to help address maintenance pressures in the current financial year.

Teaching Posts: North Down

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to the answer to AQW 2798/08, how many teaching posts are being filled by substitute or temporary teachers in (i) primary; and (ii) secondary schools, in the North Down constituency. (AQW 3444/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá an t-eolas a iarradh sa tábla seo thíos:

The information requested is detailed in the table below:

Primary	140	27	167
Secondary	42	4	46

Primary School in Broughshane

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Education if there are any plans to provide a new primary school in Broughshane, Ballymena. (AQW 3447/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá tugtha le fios ag Bord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Oirthuaiscirt nach bhfuil pleananna ar bith acu le bunscoil nua athsholáthair a chur ar fáil i mBruach Sheáin.

The North Eastern Education and Library Board has advised that there are currently no plans to provide a new replacement primary school in Broughshane.

Irish-Language Tutors

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Education how many Irish-Language tutors are available for primary schools in County Fermanagh, under the Primary Languages Project. (AQW 3463/09)

The Minister of Education: Dar leis an Ghrúpa Teangacha Bunscoile, a bhíonn ag comhordú soláthair an Chláir um Theangacha Bunscoile, bhí deacrachtaí móra acu teacht ar oidí Gaeilge i gceantar Fhear Manach agus mar sin de, go dtí seo, ní raibh siad ábalta oidi a chur ar fáil don chúig bhunscoil sa cheantar a bhí ag iarraidh Gaeilge a sholáthar tríd an Chlár.

The primary languages group, which is co-ordinating the delivery of the Primary Languages Programme, tells me that it has experienced real difficulties in recruiting Irish language tutors in the Fermanagh area and that, as a result, it has so far been unable to match tutors to the five primary schools in the area seeking to offer Irish via the Programme. I have impressed upon the group the need to take further action to close this gap in provision. Additionally, Foras na Gaeilge has also offered to do what it can to help encourage fluent Irish speakers to come forward to be considered as tutors. The Primary Languages Programme is an important and flourishing Programme and I am determined that we will do all that we can to match the demand from primary schools with suitable tutors able to deliver the Programme and foster in young people an interest in, and love for, learning another language.

Classroom Assistants

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister of Education if she will bring forward proposals to standardise the terms and conditions of classroom assistants in all schools, regardless of sector. (AQW 3467/09)

The Minister of Education: The recent agreement on the outcome of the Job Evaluation was for Classroom Assistants for whom the Education and Library Boards are the employing authorities, and in this context this agreement does not have a direct read across to employees of other employing authorities. Any decision within grant-maintained integrated or voluntary grammar schools to implement rates of pay in line with the outcome of the Job Evaluation process in the Education and Library Boards in respect of particular categories of staff is a matter for individual schools' Board of Governors as employing authorities to consider within the constraints of the total resources available to the school. I have however listened and taken on board concerns raised about this issue and to date have made bids for extra funding through the September and December monitoring rounds. Both bids have unfortunately been unsuccessful and I will resubmit my bid in February.

I should point out that the regrading of the 5 boards' Classroom Assistants was negotiated through the Joint Negotiating Council (JNC), which was established some years ago by the Staff Commission for Education and Library Boards as the negotiating machinery dealing with the pay and terms and conditions of non-teaching staff employed by the Education and Library Boards. The machinery includes management side representation from the 5 Education and Library Boards and from the 4 main unions representing the non-teaching staff. The machinery consists of: a. Joint Negotiating Council and Committees; and b. Executive Committee. The membership of the Joint Negotiating Council may not be extended to any other employing authorities.

Caithfear tabhairt faoi na nithe seo sa chomhthéacs gurb é an tÚdarás nua um Oideachas agus Scileanna atá freagrach as fostaíocht foirne neamh-mhúinteoireachta i gcás gach scoile deontaschúnta.

These matters will have to be addressed in the context of the new Education and Skills Authority having responsibility for the employment of non-teaching staff for all grant-aided schools.

Translation Services

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education if she is aware of the difficulties faced by playgroups that are required to pay for translation services from limited funds. (AQW 3502/09)

The Minister of Education: Tháinig méadú de 45% ar líon na ndaltaí ó thiortha eile inár scoileanna idir 2006 agus 2007 agus faoi mhí Dheireadh Fómhair 2007, bhí 5665 dalta ó thiortha eile inár mbunscoileanna, inár n-iarbhunscoileanna agus inár scoileanna speisialta.

The number of newcomer pupils in our schools increased by 45% between 2006 and 2007 and by October 2007 there were 5665 newcomer pupils in our primary, post primary and special schools. My Department does not collect data on newcomer children in pre-school provision. However, there are currently 112 newcomer children in government funded nursery schools and nursery classes within primary schools.

Playgroups need to communicate with newcomer parents and to do this they will wish to have key documents translated into various languages.

The priority for my Department has been to provide services to schools with newcomer pupils. It is for this reason that the Inclusion and Diversity Service (IDS) was set up as a regional service within the Education and Library Boards in April 2007, to strengthen and improve support to newcomer pupils and their parents, primarily working through schools. Part of its responsibilities include such services as interpreting and translating, an information website for newcomer parents and the provision of advice and guidance to schools via locally based Diversity Coordinators.

Due to the very rapid increase in the number of newcomer pupils, IDS has had to concentrate on the primary and the post primary sectors, as it is recognised that the needs of newcomer pupils are greater the older they are when entering the education system.

IDS provide an interpreting service to Department funded nursery schools and units for the following purposes: initial parent/teacher interviews; parent consultation interviews; critical incidents; and pastoral care issues. This service involves the provision of interpreters and is paid for by IDS.

Unfortunately, it has not been possible to provide direct support to community and voluntary playgroups, but a number of services which are accessible via the web, may be of some help to such groups.

Within the past year IDS has offered a translation of documents service, and access to many of these documents is now provided via a website. Schools have access to 10 generic school policies and a number of key letters translated into 15 languages for issue to parents in their own language. Whilst IDS is unable to fund interpreting and translation services for private and voluntary pre-school playgroups, I would encourage playgroups to utilise these generic documents, available on the following website www.education-support.org.uk, for example letters which concern parent/teacher meetings.

The Education Support website includes information about our education system in the north and community and volunteer playgroups could direct newcomer parents to the website as it will be of interest to them.

As part of the funding provided via the Common Funding Formula, schools receive an additional monetary payment for each full-time newcomer pupil in a nursery school/class. In 2008/09 this equates to £983 per pupil. Schools receive £491, again for 2008/09, for each part-time newcomer pupil in a nursery school/class. This funding is available only to government funded nursery schools and nursery classes within primary schools.

Breakfast Clubs

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education how many primary schools have breakfast clubs (i) in North Down; and (ii) in Northern Ireland. (AQW 3506/09)

The Minister of Education: Ní chruinnítear an t-eolas seo go rialta ó scoileanna.

This information is not routinely collected from schools.

However you will be aware my Department's Extended Schools programme provides a recognised funding stream for those schools operating in the most deprived and disadvantaged areas to provide for a wide range of services and activities outside of the traditional school day including breakfast clubs.

In the 2007/08 Extended Schools programme funding issued to 4 primary schools in the North Down parliamentary constituency area, all of which operated breakfast clubs as indicated in their annual reports for 2007/08.

A total of 321 primary schools across the north were funded in the 2007/08 Extended School programme. Of these, 125 schools (39%) indicated in their last annual report that they had operated a breakfast club during the 2007/08 school year.

Lurgan College/Portadown College: Newbuild Accomodation

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to the answer to AQW 2841/09, when the Southern Education and Library Board decided to make proposed changes, to the original recommended options for the new builds in both Lurgan College and Portadown College, were officially communicated to her Department. (AQW 3513/09)

The Minister of Education: Thug Bord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Deiscirt (SELB) breac-chuntas ar na hathruithe molta a bhain leis na bunscéimeanna caipitil formheasta fá choinne Lurgan College agus Portadown College do mo Roinn i mí Mheithimh agus i mí Aibreáin faoi seach.

Proposed changes to the original approved capital schemes for Lurgan and Portadown Colleges were outlined to my Department by the Southern Education and Library Board (SELB) in June and April 2007 respectively. The SELB advised that the Board and Lurgan College had decided it was important to retain a link with the existing listed building. In regard to Portadown College a new internal road layout meant that the capital scheme needed to be revisited. The changes as proposed necessitated revisions to the appraisals which were undertaken by the SELB. The Board and the department have been in contact on the work on both projects on a number of occasions. The latest revisions were received on 24 November 2008 for Portadown College and 10 November 2008 for Lurgan College. The appraisals need to be approved by the Department and the Department of Finance and Personnel. Subject to the appraisals satisfying the requirements it is anticipated that both schemes would be approved shortly.

Lurgan College

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to the answer to AQW 2841/09, when her Department received the revised appraisal for Lurgan College. (AQW 3514/09)

The Minister of Education: Thug Bord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Deiscirt (SELB) breac-chuntas ar na hathruithe molta a bhain leis na bunscéimeanna caipitil formheasta fá choinne Lurgan College agus Portadown College do mo Roinn i mí Mheithimh agus i mí Aibreáin faoi seach.

Neighbourhood Renewal

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to the answer to AQW 2000/09, for an update on the review of services for which her Department has responsibility under Neighbourhood Renewal, and when the findings will be made public. (AQW 3543/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá tuairisc críochnaithe anois ag m'oifigh de bhun athbhreithniú ar leithead na seirbhísí a d'aithin DSD go raibh mo Roinn freagrach astu.

My officials have now completed a report following a review of the breadth of services that DSD has identified as being the responsibility of my Department.

I have committed to meeting with Minister Ritchie to discuss the outcome of the assessment and gain agreement on the way forward. Following this meeting, the findings of the review will be made public.

Education and Skills Authority

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Education to detail, by constituency, where the reduction of 460 posts are anticipated to occur with the creation of the Education and Skills Authority. (AQW 3550/09)

The Minister of Education: Is é mar phríomhaidhm an RPA ná cúrsaí riaracháin a chuíchóiriú agus acmhainní a scaoileadh ionas gur féidir iad a leithdháileadh arís chuig seirbhísí duine le duine.

A key purpose of the RPA is to streamline administration and release resources for re-allocation to frontline services. The Outline Business Case for ESA indicates that by the end of year 3, an additional £20m per annum will be released to directly support improved education outcomes. This will be achieved through a reduction of around 463 administrative and headquarter posts, with the main impact at senior and middle management levels.

It is not possible at this time to say where, by constituency, those reductions will occur, as decisions on the location of services have not yet been taken. These decisions will be taken in line with Executive policy on the location of public sector jobs and will be informed by future Service Delivery Models which are presently being developed through an extensive programme of engagement with staff in the education sector.

Early Years Strategy

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Education if the development of communication skills will be addressed as a priority in the early years strategy under consideration. (AQW 3577/09)

The Minister of Education: Cé go mbeidh an straitéis ag amharc ar na tosca a chuireann chun cinn athléimneacht na bpáistí óga agus tugtar sainmhiniú ar 'athléimneacht' mar pháistí sláintiúla láidre, le scileanna cumarsáide acu agus iad ina bhfoghlaimoírí cruthaitheacha inniúla, ní mheastar go gcuirfidh an straitéis aon mholtaí ar leith san áireamh maidir le scileanna cumarsáide.

Whilst the strategy will be examining the factors that promote resilience in young children with resilience defined as healthy strong children, who are skilled communicators and creative competent learners, it is not anticipated the Strategy will specifically include any recommendations in relation to communication skills. This will be a matter for any action and implementation plan emanating from the Strategy to consider. At this stage recommendations from the Speech, Language and Communication Needs Report will be taken into consideration.

Part-time Special Needs Teachers

Mr Attwood asked the Minister of Education if her Department plans to continue funding the full time SENCO and part time special needs teachers at St. Kieran's Primary School, Poleglass; and will she consider increasing provisions of these services in the school. (AQW 3590/09)

The Minister of Education: Go ginearálta, maoinítear costais na mball foirne múinteoireachta laistigh de scoil dheontaschúnta ón leithdháileadh a tugadh don scoil tríd an Fhoirmle Cónaoinithe (CFF).

The costs of teaching staff within a grant-aided school are generally funded from the allocation made available to the school through the Common Funding Formula (CFF). It is then a matter for the Trustees of the school to determine how resources are spent within the school. In addition to the CFF allocation, the Department allocates a small amount of earmarked monies to each grant-aided school to help the school administer the special educational needs (SEN) framework as set out in the SEN Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs. Further to this an Education and Library Board may provide funding to a school for SEN classroom assistance or additional teaching hours, as set out in an individual child's statement of SEN, but this is determined by the individual SEN provision required. The staffing levels required within St Kieran's Primary School, Poleglass, is therefore a matter for the Trustees of the school in conjunction with the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS) and the South Eastern Education and Library Board in accordance with the needs of pupils enrolled in the school.

Primary Schools in North Antrim

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Education to list the number of pupils that attended each primary school in North Antrim, ranked in order of size with the school with the most pupils coming first, in each of the last five years. (AQW 3625/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá an t-eolas a iarradh cuimsithe sna táblaí thíos.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Education if the Department will provide extra capacity at Glenravel Primary School before September 2009 to ensure that the school can accommodate rising numbers. (AQW 3628/09)

The Minister of Education: D'fhaomh an Roinn soláthar breise cóiríochta sealadaí ag an scoil le tabhairt faoin easnamh áiseanna ó thaobh oifige/seomra foirne/acmhainní de.

The Department has approved the provision of additional temporary accommodation at the school to address a shortfall in office/staffroom/resource facilities. The school has not applied for additional teaching accommodation but should one be submitted it will be considered by the Department. The Department will also consider the provision of additional temporary teaching accommodation for September 2009 as the enrolment at the school increases.

Transport Policy

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Education if any of the Education and Library Boards approved exceptional cases that are not in line with their transport policy. (AQW 3629/09)

The Minister of Education: Is féidir liom a dheimhniú nár fhaomhadh aon chásanna eisceachtúla nach bhfuil clúdaithe sa pholasáí reatha maidir le cúrsaí iompair ó bhaile chuig scoil.

I can confirm that no exceptional cases have been approved that are outside of the current home to school transport policy. The Education and Library Boards may, however, consider applications for transport assistance in exceptional circumstances under the current school transport arrangements. This enables Boards to take account of non-standard issues such as road safety hazards. The Boards have advised that under the exceptional circumstances clause, 19 applications for transport assistance due to exceptional circumstances have been approved in the current academic year (2008/09).

School Maintenance Programme

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Education for her assessment of the possible health and safety risks as a result of the backlog on the school maintenance programme for schools in Lisburn and Dromore. (AQW 3655/09)

The Minister of Education: Is iad Boird Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Oirdheiscirt agus an Deiscirt a bhíonn freagrach as cothabháil scoileanna Rialaithe agus scoileanna faoi Chothabháil i gceantar Lios na gCearrbhach agus Dhroim Mór.

The South Eastern and Southern Education and Library Boards have responsibility for the maintenance of Controlled and Maintained schools in the Lisburn and Dromore area. The Boards carry out a rolling programme of condition surveys to identify maintenance requirements, with the highest priority being given to those that pose a health and safety risk. Additionally, possible health and safety issues are identified by regular site visits by Board officers and by school based staff. It is the Boards' policy to address health and safety issues as a matter of urgency.

Re-Integration of Former Prisoners

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what is he doing to reduce barriers to employment and enhance re-integration of former political prisoners. (AQW 3071/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: A comprehensive range of services is available through my Department's network of 35 Jobs & Benefits offices and JobCentres and through contracted Providers to help the unemployed find work. These services include provision such as Progress2Work (NI) which is specifically targeted at ex-prisoners, those who are homeless and those with substance misuse/abuse issues, and will run until March 2010. The Pathways to Work programme is open to clients with health conditions or disability, including ex-prisoners. The Department has introduced a more flexible, menu-based, modular approach to provision, better tailored to the individual's needs, with a clear emphasis on increasing the participants' employability prospects. Through this new initiative, 'Steps to Work', the Department has extended the availability of provision to other groups not previously targeted, including ex-prisoners. In addition to these services the Department's Careers Service provides an all age Careers Information, Advice and Guidance service to adults and young people, including former political prisoners.

Furthermore, the Department's ApprenticeshipsNI provision is open to people of all ages who are in employment, or are about to take up employment, including ex-prisoners. Under this provision, people can work towards the achievement of industry-approved qualifications, as well as developing Essential Skills where required. Whilst this provision is not specifically designed to reduce barriers to employment, it is generally accepted that continuous professional development and occupational training can act as a significant step towards reintegration.

Local Further Education Colleges also offer a wide range of curriculum through their main campuses and community outreach centres, which are accessible to everyone. Courses include essential skills, professional and technical training, leisure and hobby activities and, tailored courses for students with learning difficulties or disabilities.

Ex-Prisoner Groups

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what ex-prisoner groups his Department has met with to discuss employment for former political prisoners. (AQW 3074/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: My Department has not met with any ex-prisoner groups to discuss employment for former political prisoners since devolution in May 2007.

Apprentices

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning pursuant to the answer to AQW 2709/09, to list which major companies will be taking on apprentices who have been made redundant from their current employer. (AQW 3109/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: The Department has engaged with both the relevant Sector Skills Councils and Workforce Development Forums to begin identifying employers who will either "foster" apprentices who have been made redundant (i.e. take them on as additional employees), or provide work placements to allow apprentices to complete their NVQ training under the Steps to Work initiative.

I would emphasise that this work is ongoing and that contingency arrangements were only introduced on 1st December. It will require considerable coordination between the Department, Training Suppliers and employer organisations, to ensure that apprentices are appropriately matched to employers, according to geographical and occupational areas. It is likely, therefore, that a clearer picture will emerge over the next few weeks and into the New Year.

To date, however, the Department has received confirmation from Michelin that it will be prepared to facilitate work placements for 30 apprentices who have been made redundant. We also understand that NI Water and Phoenix Gas have been contacted by the appropriate Sector Skills Council in this regard, and that follow-up meetings are due to take place soon.

Prader-Willi Syndrome Sufferers

Mr Shannon asked the the Minister for Employment and Learning if services and support such as residential provision, training and employment opportunities are available to Prader-Willi Syndrome sufferers.

(AQW 3127/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: The Department for Employment and Learning provides a wide range of training, pre-vocational and vocational provision to assist people with disabilities, including people with Prader-Willi Syndrome, to prepare for and to find and keep a suitable job. The provision includes: Training for Success; Apprenticeships NI; Workable (NI); Access to Work (NI); the Job Introduction Scheme; New Deal for Disabled People; Residential Training; Occupational Psychology services, and; within the Pathways to Work initiative the Condition Management Programme and the Work Preparation Programme. Appropriate supports are available to assist individuals, where required.

The provision can be accessed through the Department's Personal Adviser or Careers Adviser networks.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what contribution his Department has made or will be making to the consultation by the UK Department of Work and Pensions on reservations to the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with disabilities.

(AQW 3217/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: In December 2006, officials from the Department of Work and Pensions contacted officials in the Office of the First and Deputy First Minister (OFMDFM) about the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (the Convention). OFMDFM assumed lead responsibility for progressing this issue and wrote to all Departments on 2 January 2007 requesting that they scrutinise their legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check their compatibility with the provisions of the Convention. This was to enable the UK Government to make an informed decision about the ratification of the Convention and to identify any need for reservations or interpretative declarations.

On the 26 September 2008, my Department was asked to confirm whether we had any difficulty with the areas of competency covered by the Convention and to confirm how we had arrived at our policy position. Officials concluded that, based on a working knowledge of the Department's policies, practices and legislation and our Departmental statutory duties and compliance with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, as amended, and Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998, the Convention was unlikely to impose any additional requirements. We will, therefore, not be entering any reservations.

Telephone Communication Masts

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the total revenue generated through his Department leasing its land or property to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts.

(AQW 3261/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: My Department does not generate any revenue in relation to leasing land or property to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts.

Efficiency Savings

Dr Farry asked the Minister for Employment and Learning which policies and practices within his Department have been changed to deliver the 3% efficiency savings required under the Budget 2008-11. (AQW 3293/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: The Department has a target to deliver cash releasing efficiencies of £20.3 million, £40.1 million and £59.2 million respectively over the period 2008-09 to 2010-11.

Savings are being achieved through a range of measures including reducing departmental staffing complements and administration expenditure; setting more challenging targets for external organisations with a view to achieving the same with less and pursuing more efficient procurement methods in terms of capital expenditure.

Further Education Awards System

Mrs McGill asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the management of, and processes involved in, the further education awards system. (AQW 3350/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: Further Education Awards are funded by the Department for Employment and Learning, and administered by the Western Education and Library Board (WELB) on behalf of the five Education and Library Boards. In the 2008/09 academic year £3.25m is available for this purpose.

Full eligibility criteria and detail of how the Awards are managed are set out in the document “Further Education Awards 2008/09 - A Guide to Financial Support for Further Education” which is available on the WELB website at www.welbni.org/uploads/File/A\_guide\_to\_fin\_support\(2\).pdf.pdf)

European Charter on Minority Languages

Mr Butler asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to demonstrate how his Department and its arms length bodies, have applied, in practice, the European Charter on Minority Languages in relation to the Irish language. (AQW 3520/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: DEL fully recognises the importance of the use of Irish as an expression of cultural wealth and this is evidenced by the Codes of Courtesy in place for the conduct of business and efforts to date in relation to Irish, in particular in education and training. In recognising its responsibilities, after consultation with its delivery partners, DEL has contributed, in detail, to the compliance report that the UK is obliged to make to the Committee of Experts that oversees compliance with the articles of the European Charter on Regional and Minority Languages. Actions include:-

- Highlighting the provisions of the European Charter to organisations delivering Training for Success and ApprenticeshipsNI.
- Commissioning of research in the sphere of linguistic diversity marketing and administration within FE Colleges.
- A commitment to re-examining the language issue with a view to publishing a policy that will be available on the Department’s website.
- Making any printed document available in any language - the Department has in place a facility for replying to correspondents in their preferred language, e.g. Irish.. A range of key documents have already been translated into Irish and are available on the DEL website. Also, application forms for Student Support and Steps to Work promotional material are made available in Irish, and forms for Education Maintenance Allowance are available on the DEL website in Irish for 2008/09; .
- If a person presents to a Jobs and Benefits Office/JobCentre wishing to conduct business in Irish, arrangements can be made to commission an interpreter. Any requests to the Department’s “Helpline” would be dealt with in accordance with the Departmental Codes of Courtesy.
- Eligible Higher Education students from Northern Ireland who wish to be educated in the medium of Irish can attend courses in the Republic of Ireland and have their registration fees paid by DEL, provided they are designated under the Student Support Regulations.
- The two universities in Northern Ireland have facilities for studying Irish at undergraduate and postgraduate levels.
- DEL provides funding to St Mary’s University College for the additional costs involved in delivery of an Irish Medium Post-Graduate Certificate in Education.
- DE and DEL work jointly to take forward the further development of Irish Medium primary and post-primary Initial Teacher Education in the Higher Education Institutions.
- A module of the former Jobskills programme (now Training for Success) developed in Irish language jointly by Belfast Metropolitan College and Forbairt Feirste. This has now been made available for use across the FE sector, subject to demand.

Irish language provision in, for example, further and higher education is determined by the institutions themselves as autonomous bodies and a range of measures and provision is available in response to demand.

Lone Parent Benefits

Mr F McCann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many focus advisors have been trained to deal with the proposed changes to incapacity and lone parent benefits. (AQW 3547/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: All of the Department for Employment and Learning's Pathways Personal Advisers are receiving training to deal with the change from Incapacity Benefit to Employment and Support Allowance. To date 135 Advisers and 31 Team Leaders have received the first element of training which deals with Employment and Support processes. Twenty-four Advisers, 23 Team Leaders and 24 Managers have received the second element of training which deals with clients Mental Health conditions and learning difficulties and is delivered by the Department's Occupational Psychology Service. The remainder of the Advisers will be trained in early part of 2009. It is expected that the changes to Lone Parent conditionality will result in Lone Parents claiming Jobseekers Allowance and these clients will be dealt with by the Department's existing Jobseekers Allowance Personal Advisers.

Unemployment Numbers

Mr McClarty asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what plans his Department has to address rising unemployment numbers and significant job losses in the Coleraine area. (AQW 3554/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: A comprehensive range of services is available through my Department's network of 35 Jobs & Benefits Offices and JobCentres and with contracted Providers to help the unemployed find work, including those who have suffered as a result of recent job losses in Coleraine and elsewhere. The services include mandatory work-focused interviews, action planning for certain clients and a range of measures designed to improve their job prospects. Also, from 22nd December the Department's Steps to Work initiative will be rolled out in the Coleraine area. This will provide a more flexible approach to the use of adult return to work provision, and offer individual training assistance as appropriate following discussions with our Personal Adviser service.

My colleague the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment has also confirmed that during the six year period 2002-03 to 2007-08, there were 595 offers of support made to Invest NI Clients in the East Londonderry Parliamentary Constituency area. This comprised assistance of just over £30m, which contributed towards a total planned investment of almost £98m. Some 50% of Invest NI assistance in the area related to locally-owned businesses (both existing and new starts). In addition, six inward investment projects were offered almost £12m of assistance, contributing towards projects planning to invest almost £35m and create 585 new jobs.

University Fees

Mr McClarty asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what plans he has for a review of university fees and student support; and for his assessment of the issues to be highlighted as a result of this review. (AQW 3555/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: My plans have always been that an independent review of variable fees and student support arrangements will commence in this current academic year. The review is underway but at this stage I would not wish to pre-empt the issues that it might highlight. The review will look at three main areas:

- The impact of the current arrangements on higher education institutions
- The impact of the current arrangements on students and prospective students
- Future student support policy for Northern Ireland

University Funds and Endowments

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning if he has made an assessment of the damage to funds and endowments of the two Universities during the present economic downturn and stock market crisis. (AQW 3576/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: I have not made an assessment of the damage to funds and endowments of the two Northern Ireland universities. As autonomous bodies both institutions are responsible for the management of their own financial affairs and funds.

However, under the terms of their Financial Memorandum with my Department, each University must ensure that it has a sound system of internal financial management and control in place. It is also required to plan and conduct its financial and academic affairs to ensure that it remains solvent. The Department must be notified of any event that has, or is likely to have, a material adverse impact on the financial position of the University, as soon as this becomes apparent. I can confirm that neither university has brought any such concerns to the attention of the Department during the present economic downturn.

In addition, the universities are required to submit annual accounts and other assurance documentation to the Department. This information is examined by the Higher Education Funding Council for England's (HEFCE) Assurance Service which then reports its findings to the Department. In the last such report, issued in February 2008, both universities were found to be 'not at higher risk'. A further report will issue in February 2009.

ENTERPRISE, TRADE AND INVESTMENT

Capital Projects

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what actions her Department is taking to bring forward the delivery of capital projects, to help address the economic downturn. (AQW 3013/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (Mrs A Foster): The majority of DETI's Capital budget relates to the provision of grant funding by Invest NI to businesses in support of their Capital investment plans. Invest NI has been working closely with its client base to encourage the submission of such Capital investment proposals.

DETI and NITB have also been actively encouraging the progression of Capital investment in the Tourism, Energy and Telecoms sectors, and on 27 November 2008, DETI secured agreement for the Executive to offer up to £43.5million toward the £97million Titanic Quarter Limited proposal for a Titanic Signature project.

Cultural Tourism Sector

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of Economusees/Economuseums including their potential to contribute to the cultural tourism sector and if she will support efforts to develop them. (AQW 3075/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) officials attended the launch of the first United Kingdom Economusees/Economuseums project in Ballymena on Monday 8th December 2008. Following this NITB will be able to assess its potential and how it can be integrated into the work NITB is doing with this sector.

Craft has been selected as one of the key products within NITB's product portfolio. NITB has established a collaborative relationship with Craft NI in order to help this sector respond to the opportunities offered by tourism. NITB sponsored two seminars for the craft sector in 2008, one focusing on the range of grants available and how to access them, and the other on the developing trend for creative tourism.

Energy Bills

Ms Ni Chuilín asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what discussions she has had with energy providers on the potential of excluding V.A.T. from household energy bills. (AQW 3080/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: My Department has not engaged in discussions with any of the energy providers in Northern Ireland regarding the potential for excluding V.A.T. from household energy bills.

Taxation, including V.A.T., is a Reserved Matter for HM Treasury to determine and is therefore outside the remit of the devolved responsibilities of the Northern Ireland Assembly.

Lending Practices

Mr Poots asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what meetings have taken place or been arranged with the banks to discuss their lending practices to businesses. (AQW 3085/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: I, along with the First and deputy First Ministers and the Minister for Finance and Personnel are due to meet with representatives of the four main banks in Northern Ireland on 16 December to explore the wider banking sector views on local business prospects for 2009 and discuss with the local banks their lending policies to consumers and businesses. This meeting is an opportunity to encourage the banks to avail of the recent funding measures for business announced by the Chancellor in his Pre-Budget Report.

Invest NI's senior management has engaged proactively with the main Northern Ireland banks – Ulster Bank, Northern Bank, First Trust and Bank of Ireland – to discuss how businesses can continue to access finance in the current economic environment. These meetings began last year when Invest NI identified that some of its client companies were beginning to face cash flow problems. More than 30 meetings have taken place so far, both at headquarters and regional levels, and many more are scheduled over the coming months.

Officials from DETI have also had discussions with local banks in relation to the development of an Enterprise Strategy, an important component of which will be access to finance.

A significant feature of these discussions has been how banks might make more use of the UK wide Small Firm Loan Guarantee Scheme, which has always been under-utilised in Northern Ireland. DETI and Invest NI will continue to work with the UK Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform, the banks and businesses to ensure that Northern Ireland takes full advantage of the scheme.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what preparations her Department has made for the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. (AQW 3192/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: In July 2007, DETI carried out an exercise to scrutinise all of its legislation, policies, practices and procedures to ensure that they were compatible with the provisions of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. In a further update in September 2008, DETI re-checked its position and confirmed that there were no areas of difficulty which would be likely to compromise the Department's ability to meet the requirements of the Convention.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what contribution her Department has made or will be making to the consultation by the UK Department of Work and Pensions on reservations to the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with disabilities. (AQW 3194/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: DETI undertook an exercise in July 2007 to scrutinize its legislation, policies, practices and procedures for compatibility with the provisions of the Convention. DETI did not identify any particular difficulties and did not raise any potential reservations to the Convention. This position was confirmed in a follow-up exercise in September 2008.

Invest NI

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to report on the impact of the economic downturn on the number of projects with which Invest NI is engaged. (AQW 3215/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: In the year to date, Invest NI activity has been encouraging when compared to that in recent years. Thus far, 1st April to 30th November 2008, it has approved offers of financial assistance totalling £113 million to almost 1,400 projects. The comparable performance for the same period in 2007/08 was £56 million and 1,200 projects. Great care needs to be taken in interpreting this performance as it reflects a “lag” effect, as projects that have been in the pipeline for some time have been finalised, and also some evidence that clients are “banking” offers and preparing for a medium term economic upturn.

Invest NI anticipates that its PSA and Operating Plan activity targets for 2008/09 will largely be achieved. However, looking longer term, into 2009/10 and 2010/11, the early stage pipeline of projects from locally-owned and externally-owned clients, and prospective new Foreign Direct Investment clients, is not favourable. It shows a 45% reduction in project numbers compared to the same point in 2007/08.

This correlates to feedback received from the National Business Survey which shows a general deterioration in business confidence. As these projects would have been due to be delivered during 2009/10, this forecasted downturn is likely to have a negative impact on my Department’s ability to deliver its PSA targets.

Invest NI has also experienced a significant drop in the number of industrial land sites it has sold to its client companies to undertake development projects. At this stage last year, Invest NI had sold leases to client companies for 27 sites, and 2 factories. In the year to date, 4 sites have been sold. This is clear evidence that clients are at best delaying future investment projects.

The level of grant claims being processed by Invest NI each month is running at unprecedented levels. 255 claims per month are being processed compared to 233 in 2007/08 and 200 in 2006/07. This demonstrates clear evidence that Invest NI’s clients are being much more expeditious in submitting claims in order to assist in managing cash flow pressures. It is worth noting that Invest NI is responsive to the needs of its clients and on average clears claims for payment within 5 days after checking and approval.

On a more positive note, there has been an increase in those companies undertaking Research and Development, business improvement and cost reduction projects. Research & Development assistance offered has increased by 176% compared with the same point in 2007/08. Again, this is a clear sign that many Invest NI clients are moving to increase their competitiveness and position themselves to take advantage of any future economic upturn.

Telephone Communication Masts

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the total revenue generated through her Department leasing its land or property to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts. (AQW 3244/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: The Department has no leasing arrangements in respect of its land and property to facilitate the erection of telephone communications masts.

Invest NI has entered into a 10 year (minimum) agreement, commencing on 23 July 2008, with Orange Personal Communications Services Limited for the placement of a telecommunications equipment mast on an approximately 36 square metre plot at Springbank Industrial Estate, Poleglass.

This agreement generates rental income of £4,000.00 + VAT per annum.

3% Efficiency Savings

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment which policies and practices within her Department have been changed to deliver the 3% efficiency savings required under the Budget 2008-11. (AQW 3295/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: The 3% efficiency savings required under the Budget 2008-11 will be delivered through a 5% reduction year on year in DETI’s Administration budget and withdrawal from the electricity Contract Buy Out (CBO) Policy. Further details are set out in the Department’s Efficiency Delivery Programme at <http://www.detini.gov.uk/cgi-bin/downutildoc?id=2141>.

Tourism Partnerships

Mrs McGill asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how much funding has each of the regional Tourism Partnerships received in 2008-09. (AQW 3349/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: NITB has established Service Level Agreements with the Regional Tourism Partnerships (RTPs) for 2008/09. Payments are made on the fulfilment of targets established within the Service Level Agreements.

To date the following funds have been released:

Causeway Coast and Glens RTP	ArmaghDown RTP	Belfast Visitor and Convention Bureau	Western RTP
£41,125	£41,125	£46,250	£ nil to date

The Western RTP Service Level Agreement was only signed recently and a payment claim is yet to be submitted.

NITB also administers International Fund for Ireland funding to RTPs. In 2008-09 the following payments were made:

Causeway Coast and Glens RTP	Armaghdown RTP	Belfast Visitor and Convention Bureau	Western RTP

LEDU Retirement and Death Benefits Plan

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the impact, of the decision to wind-up the LEDU retirement and death benefit plan, on existing pensioners receiving benefits from this pension scheme. (AQW 3363/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: Wind-up means that the Plan's assets will be used to secure members' benefit entitlements under the Plan through alternative pension arrangements. Once this is done, members will cease to have any entitlement to benefits under the Plan.

The wind up arrangements are as follows:

Benefits in respect of all pensioner members will be secured by means of immediate annuity policies with an insurance company. Similarly, benefits in respect of deferred members (i.e. any member who is not yet in receipt of a pension from the Plan) will be secured by means of deferred annuity policies with an insurance company.

On wind-up, the Trustees will purchase insurance policies in members' own names that will provide their full benefit entitlement, including any spouse's pension payable following their death and full pension increases on both their pension and their spouse's pension for the remainder of their lifetimes.

It is possible that the insurance policy cannot exactly replicate some of the more minor features of members' benefits. However, where this is the case, the Trustees will ensure that the benefit bought for individuals is at least of equivalent value to their benefit entitlement.

Deferred members have the right to transfer their benefits to an alternative pension arrangement, either with their current employer or a personal pension policy. This right applies prior to the Plan wind-up being completed and extends until the member actually retires and starts to draw their pension benefits.

LEDU Retirement and Death Benefits Plan

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to provide the names and contact details of the trustees of the LEDU retirement and death benefits plan. (AQW 3372/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: The names and contact details of the Trustees of the LEDU Retirement and Death Benefits Plan are:

Chairperson: Anna Cooper, c/o Departmental HR, Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, Netherleigh, Massey Avenue, Belfast BT4 2JP;

Member: Liam Hagan, c/o Invest Northern Ireland, Bedford Square, Bedford Street, Belfast, BT2 7ES; and Member: Fiona White, c/o Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, Netherleigh, Massey Avenue, Belfast BT4 2JP.

LEDU Retirement and Death Benefits Plan

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to provide the reasons for the winding-up of the LEDU retirement and death benefits plan. (AQW 3373/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: LEDU ceased operating as a company on 31 March 2002 and, as a result, all employees ceased to earn benefits in the LEDU Retirement and Death Benefits Plan at that date. The rules of the Principal Civil Service Pension Scheme (NI) would only permit those employees who transferred to Invest Northern Ireland to transfer their benefits to the PCSPS(NI). As such, the possibility of transferring deferred members and pensioners to PCSPS(NI) was not an option.

A number of alternative options as to how the benefits payable to deferred and pensioner members (approximately 155) of the Plan may be secured was considered at the time. Having considered all of the potential options available, it was decided that the only viable option was for the Trustees to wind up the Plan. However, in view of the significant funding shortfall at the time (a position not uncommon in retirement plans) it was agreed that, rather than commencing wind up immediately, the winding up of the Plan should be deferred until such time as the necessary funds were available to secure members' benefits in full. Therefore on 1 April 2002, to ensure, in the interim, the continued provision of the benefits specified in the Plan, the Department, by Deed of Novation, assumed the liabilities of the Plan and roles/responsibilities as Principal Employer. At the same time, since none of the existing Trustees wished to continue in post, the Department appointed a Board of three Trustees to manage the scheme until wind up.

As the Principal Employer, in accordance with the Plan's rules, DETI is required to pay such contributions as the Trustees require to provide the benefits specified in the rules. Between 2003 and 2007, the Plan's investments have increased significantly as a result of good investment returns. In addition, over this period, the Department has provided the necessary additional funding to enable the Trustees to now secure members' benefit entitlements in full. Wind up would be achieved by purchasing insurance policies which would replicate the benefits provided under the Plan. The opinion of the Plan's actuary is that the current assets and investments will enable the members' benefit entitlement in full to be secured on wind up.

As the circumstances are now favourable to enable the Trustees to secure members benefits in full, the Trustees are undertaking the necessary preparatory tasks to enable the Scheme to be wound up.

Northern Ireland Tourist Board

Ms Anderson asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how much money has been invested by the Northern Ireland Tourist Board, in each parliamentary constituency, in each of the past five years. (AQW 3430/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: The total financial assistance paid to tourism projects by the Northern Ireland Tourist Board in each of the last five financial years and the current year to date, broken down by parliamentary constituency is detailed in the table below.

PAYMENTS OF FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE TO ALL TOURISM PROJECTS BY CONSTITUENCY OVER THE PAST 5 YEARS AND DURING THE CURRENT YEAR TO DATE

* Across all constituencies and cross border relates to projects which straddle more than one Parliamentary Constituency

While the investment is shown on a Constituency basis the economic and tourism benefits that this brings have a much wider effect. For example, investment in the five Signature Projects will bring benefits across all of Northern Ireland.

In addition financial assistance has been committed to projects that were implemented over several Constituencies. These amounts have been shown separately.

Irish in Public Life

Mr Butler asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to demonstrate how her Department, and its arms length bodies, have applied, in practice, the European Charter on Minority Languages in relation to the Irish language. (AQW 3460/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: In line with their obligations under the European Charter for Regional and Minority Languages, DETI and its NDPBs – Invest Northern Ireland, Northern Ireland Tourist Board, Consumer Council for Northern Ireland and Health and Safety Executive for Northern Ireland – have made the following provisions for people who wish to use Irish in public life:

To accept written correspondence in Irish. Such correspondence is translated into English through DCAL's central translation service and a response is issued in English. Interpreters can also be provided through the central translation service if required;

To accept telephone calls in Irish. To handle such calls, customers are referred to a central voice mail service operated by DCAL;

To respect the wishes of anyone who wishes to be known by the Irish version of his or her name, and to use an Irish street name, if legally adopted, when a customer wishes; and

To consider the translation of executive summaries of key publications into Irish upon request subject to cost.

Tourism Ireland Offices

Ms Purvis asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to (i) outline the salary scales for posts in similar grades in Tourism Ireland's offices in (a) Coleraine; and (b) Dublin; and (ii) explain any significant inequalities in salaries between equivalent positions in the two offices. (AQW 3494/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: The salary scales for 2 posts in similar grades in Tourism Ireland Offices in Coleraine and Dublin are listed below.

GRADE E

	Dublin	Coleraine
Band Min	€53902	£30142
	€56229	£31393

	€61083	£30520
	€63341
	€65622

Whilst the grades are similar in nature a direct comparison cannot be made and would be misleading.

Earlier this year, both Finance Ministers considered, at the request of NSMC, a case put by the Chief Executives of North/South Bodies which highlighted, inter alia, the differences in pay between their staff employed in Northern Ireland whose pay is, in the main, linked to the Northern Ireland Civil Service and their staff in the Irish Republic whose pay is linked, in the main, to the Irish Civil Service.

The conclusion was that paying the going rate for the jurisdiction was the only defensible position. The main driver in this process is the national pay policy for the public sector in each jurisdiction. If there were harmonisation of the monetary value of salaries North and South, this would entail a sharp upward turn in the salaries of Northern Ireland staff, even if the salaries in the Irish Republic remained the same. In other words this cadre of staff in the bodies would be singled out to receive higher than the going rate for the public sector in Northern Ireland. Not only would this be invidious for the public sector at large in Northern Ireland but it would seem inequitable for those staff based in the Republic of Ireland who are expected, in these circumstances, to be satisfied with the going rate in that jurisdiction and nothing more.

Northern Ireland Science Park

Ms Anderson asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment if the Northern Ireland Science Park intends to create a linked development in Derry/Londonderry, as originally committed to when the Park was established in 1999. (AQW 3532/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: It has always been intended that Northern Ireland Science Park (NISP) would develop facilities outside Belfast, as outlined in the vision document: 'Towards a Prosperous Future' which stated that the main physical development of the Science Park would be in the Belfast area with linked sites in the North West. Experience would indicate that Science Parks usually need some two decades to establish a hub which is both financially and organisationally strong enough to sustain linked development investment.

NISP continues to keep the issue of expansion outside Belfast under review and is currently in discussion with a number of interested parties to explore options for a linked development in Londonderry, as per the original vision.

Banks Lending Policies

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what representations have been made by her Department to local banks to ensure that interest rate cuts are passed on to customers and support given to local businesses. (AQW 3613/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: Together with the First and deputy First Ministers and the Minister for Finance and Personnel I met the Chief Executives of the four main banks in Northern Ireland on 16 December 2008 to discuss the general state of the local financial sector and the banks' lending policies to consumers and businesses. In our discussions, we raised with banks recent cuts in interest rates as well as the liquidity pumped into the market, which should make a significant impact on the cost of borrowing for both householders and business.

Invest NI's senior management has engaged proactively with the main Northern Ireland banks to discuss how businesses can continue to access finance in the current economic environment. These meetings began last year when Invest NI identified that some of its client companies were beginning to face cash flow problems. More than 30 meetings have taken place so far, both at headquarters and regional levels, and many more are scheduled over the coming months.

Invest NI

Mr Doherty asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail all requests made to Invest NI to make suitable land and/or premises available for (i) business start-up projects; (ii) business expansion projects; and (iii) inward investment projects in Strabane District Council area, in the last five years and how many projects have been accommodated. (AQW 3631/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: Invest NI holds land for the use of its client companies that have a supported business case and can demonstrate an immediate property need. It only records interests on its own sites.

A company must meet minimum turnover and export thresholds to become an Invest NI client and, accordingly many start-ups fall outside the Invest NI remit in their early years and come under the responsibility of the Local Enterprise Agencies. Requests for property needs from such companies are not recorded by Invest NI.

Invest NI's landholding in Strabane is at Orchard Road. In the last five years Frylite purchased a 1.8 acre site at Orchard Road. In addition to this local company, two inward investment projects were successfully brought to the estate. In November 2004, Allstate Northern Ireland established a presence on the estate and in January 2007, FabPlus added to their 4.9 acre landholding by acquiring an additional 3.6 acres.

Invest NI has identified a shortage of land for the needs of its clients in the Strabane District Council Area and, in its 2005 response to the West Tyrone Area Plan Issues Paper suggested that approximately 30 acres would be required for that demand in the medium term. It is currently in discussions with a number of landowners with a view to acquiring land in the town for its clients needs.

Invest NI records property search information by client rather than any geographic reference. As a result it cannot provide any data on the number of requests for any particular location. However, the organisation has 79 client companies operating in the Strabane District Council Area. Thirty-three of these companies currently have growth plans.

Mr Doherty asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number and description of (i) business start-up projects; (ii) business expansion projects; and (iii) inward investment projects in Strabane District Council area, that has sought suitable land and/or premises from Invest NI, in the last five years that have been offered alternative land and/or premises instead for their projects in other Council districts. (AQW 3632/09)

Requests for property needs from such companies are not recorded by Invest NI.

Invest NI holds 29.2 acres of land in the Strabane District Council Area. Most of this land is already developed and leased to Client companies leaving only 2.1 acres, at Orchard Road Industrial Estate, remaining for future industrial development. In recent years, as remaining Invest NI land has become scarcer, four locally owned client companies with expansion projects could not be accommodated within Orchard Road.

Of these, one has purchased premises in the Derry City Council Area and one has relocated elsewhere in the Strabane Council District whilst the other two projects have been delayed while these clients continue to seek land in Strabane. There are currently four interests recorded for a total of eight acres of land in Strabane.

Invest NI is unaware of any potential inward investment projects that have specifically wished to come to Strabane but were unable to because of a lack of property options.

Business Projects: Strabane Area

Mr Doherty asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number and description of (i) business start-up projects; (ii) business expansion projects; and (iii) inward investment projects in Strabane District Council area, in the last five years. (AQW 3634/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: Although the request relates to the last 5 years, information is more readily available for the 6 year period since the inception of Invest NI. Details are provided as follows:

- (i) Business Start Up Projects: Invest NI made 439 offers to support the formation of new businesses in the Strabane District Council area over the last six years.
- (ii) Business Expansion Projects: Invest NI made 54 offers to existing locally-owned businesses in the Strabane District Council area through a range of schemes and programmes to help expand their operations. In addition, Invest NI also offered support to 123 specific business innovation activities (12 externally-owned and 111 locally-owned) including R&D, trade development, training, and technology and process development projects.
- (iii) Inward Investment Projects: Support was offered to 9 inward investment projects in the Strabane District Council area, including 3 new and 6 reinvestment projects.

Lagan Valley: Potential Investors

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many potential investors have visited the Lagan Valley constituency in the last two years; and what future visits are planned by potential investors.

(AQW 3656/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: One potential investor visited Lagan Valley constituency between 1st April 2006 and 31st March 2008.

To date the number of inward visits by potential investors to Northern Ireland is significantly higher than this time last year however, in order not to prejudice commercial interests and to protect the confidentiality of potential investors, Invest Northern Ireland is unable to release details of further visits.

ENVIRONMENT

Permeable Paving

Mr Ross asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of permeable paving; and what plans he has to introduce legislation that requires this type of paving to be used on developments on existing flood plains.

(AQW 2972/09)

The Minister of the Environment (Mr S Wilson): Permeable paving is intended to reduce storm water flows and assist the infiltration of water into the ground. While it may assist in reducing the risk of flooding in some circumstances, current UK construction industry guidance and advice is that such products should not be used in flood plains as their operation will be compromised in a flood event.

Beyond flood plains the use of permeable paving may however help control storm water flows where its use is not constrained by limited soil permeability and ground water quality concerns.

My officials are currently preparing an addendum to PPS 7 Quality Residential Developments for public consultation. This work will include consideration of enhanced use of permeable paving and other sustainable drainage techniques specifically in new housing developments. In addition the Northern Ireland Environment Agency will be issuing a consultation document early in 2009 on the use of sustainable drainage systems in Northern Ireland.

My Department is also engaged in a review of householder permitted development rights which will consider the use of permeable surfaces. Public consultation on this matter will also take place during 2009.

Planning Service

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister of the Environment (i) when the 'Area of Character' study of the Sandy Bay/ Larne Harbour will be finalised; and (ii) how much weight the study will be afforded by the Planning Service when making its assessment of applications. (AQW 3019/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Due to competing work priorities and resource problems, members of staff of the Antrim, Ballymena and Larne (ABL) Area Plan 2016 team, whose duties include the preparation of the Sandy Bay and Larne Harbour Character Study, have been redeployed, within Ballymena Divisional Planning Office, to assist the Magherafelt Area Plan 2015 to reach the Independent Examination stage of the area plan process. As a consequence, work on the study has ceased and it is difficult at present to provide a definitive date for finalisation of the study. I do however assure you that you will be advised by my Department of any change in these circumstances as soon as it is practicable to do so.

The study, when completed, would be only one of a number of material considerations, including other prevailing planning policies, which will be considered by the Department in determining development proposals in the Sandy Bay/Larne Harbour Area.

Northern Ireland Environment Agency

Mr P J Bradley asked the Minister of the Environment what assessment he has made of the initial threat to the environment caused by the materials used in the 11 July bonfire at the Rathfriland Road/Glenvale Road junction outside Newry, and the continued impact this is having. (AQW 3046/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) will investigate bonfires when commercial waste (most frequently tyres) is reported to have been used. This particular bonfire was not reported to the Agency and as a consequence was not investigated. It is not therefore possible to comment on the environmental threat, or the continued impact, from the materials used. In cases where the dumping of commercial waste is reported, NIEA will seek to find the source and take enforcement measures against the business or businesses concerned.

Deer Poaching

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of the Environment what he is doing to tackle the rise in deer poaching. (AQW 3049/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Deer poaching is a criminal offence under the Wildlife (Northern Ireland) Order 1985.

The investigation and prosecution of any offences of this nature are the responsibility of the PSNI.

When requested, the Northern Ireland Environment Agency works closely with the PSNI Wildlife Liaison officer and advises on deer ecology and wildlife law.

Parking Laws

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment if cars with trade registration plates may park on public footpaths. (AQW 3051/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Trade licences can be used by motor traders, testers and others for specifically limited purposes such as testing, delivery and demonstration. Section 12 of the Vehicle Excise and Registration Act 1994 specifically states that a trade licence does not entitle the holder to keep (that is to say, to park) any vehicle on a road if it is not being used on the road. A trade licence does not, of course, give any exemption to ordinary parking laws.

Signage at Road Works

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the role of his Department in the enforcement of effective signage at road works. (AQW 3099/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Enforcement of effective signage at road works is the responsibility of the Police Service of Northern Ireland. My Department has no role in this matter.

Capital Projects

Dr Farry asked the Minister of the Environment what actions his Department is taking to bring forward the delivery of capital projects to help redress the economic downturn. (AQW 3105/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The Strategic Waste Infrastructure Fund (SWIF) is available to the three Waste Management Groups (arc21, the Southern Waste Management Partnership2008 and the North West Region Waste Management Group) to assist local government with the significant costs of delivering the new waste infrastructure required to meet the landfill diversion targets in the EU Landfill Directive (1999/31/EC).

SWIF will provide up to £200m or 50% of the cost of the capital investment for Northern Ireland as a whole, whichever is the lower. This will reduce the impact of the cost to ratepayers of providing the new residual waste services.

The procurement of the strategic waste infrastructure is a local government responsibility and is being taken forward through the Waste Management Groups. The competitive procurement process is already underway in the arc21 region and due to commence in the near future in the NWRWMG and SWaMP2008. Given the pace of delivery which the Waste Management Groups are already achieving it is not possible to bring forward these procurements. However, the existing capital expenditure profile for these projects already anticipates £75.2m of capital investment over the next 3 years, with the potential to create and support a significant number of construction and engineering jobs.

Cycling Proficiency Scheme

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of the Environment if his Department plans to develop the Cycling Proficiency Scheme to provide a higher level of on road cycle training, and will he support the Department of Regional Development's efforts to encourage more children to cycle to school. (AQW 3137/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Although I recognise that environmental, public health and wider transport considerations are relevant to this issue, my Department's responsibility in this area, and its statutory responsibility, is primarily for road safety. The main purpose of the Cycling Proficiency Scheme is to instil good road user attitudes and behaviours from an early age with the ultimate aim of reducing road traffic casualties.

The current Cycling Proficiency Scheme is well established, with 596 primary schools participating in 2007 and with almost 8,000 children passing the test. The number of schools involved in the scheme has also been growing. On-road training is offered to all primary schools participating in the Cycling Proficiency Scheme.

Cycling casualties have been falling for a number of years. Figures for the period up to 4 December 2008 show that two pedal cyclists have been killed so far this year compared with two for the same period in 2007 and none in 2006. There have been no child cyclist fatalities since 2005. Over the last three years, on average, 10 children have been seriously injured on bikes. This represents a reduction of over 64% on the average of 28 for the baseline period of 1996-2000. The figures suggest that while there is no room for complacency, and while efforts to drive the figures down even further must continue, the existing strategy is working.

Since proper training should help children to have the confidence to cycle to school, and encourage parents to allow them to do so, my Department's efforts should therefore complement those of the Department for Regional Development.

Environment Liability Directive

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister of the Environment what progress his Department has made in implementing the Environment Liability Directive (2204/35/EC). (AQW 3159/09)

The Minister of the Environment: My Department is finalising draft Regulations to implement the Environmental Liability Directive (2004/35/EC) and aims to issue a public consultation on the draft Regulations, Guidance and partial Regulatory Impact Assessment early in 2009.

Domestic Glass Recycling

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment for his plans to increase domestic recycling of glass. (AQW 3171/09)

The Minister of the Environment: District Councils are the statutory authorities in Northern Ireland with responsibility for providing suitable receptacles and for collecting controlled wastes in their districts. Currently there are 8 District Councils who operate the “box” facility which collects domestic glass at the kerbside, whilst the remaining 18 Councils operate the “blue bin” facility which does not collect domestic glass. However, in these Council areas domestic glass can be taken to a local civic amenity site operated by the relevant District Council or a bring site such as those found at supermarket car parks. In 2007/8, 19,595 tonnes of waste glass were collected for recycling, a 21.9% increase from the previous year.

Landfill Allowances Scheme

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the difficulties that each District Council faces in meeting targets set by the Northern Ireland Landfill Allowance Scheme. (AQW 3172/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The main difficulty that District Councils face in meeting targets set by the Northern Ireland Landfill Allowances Scheme (NILAS) is the lack of waste infrastructure to facilitate compliance with Landfill Directive targets. This difficulty is compounded by political opposition to the use of some technologies, such as energy from waste plants, and the significant costs associated with the scale of the overall infrastructure procurement required. The Executive has made a capital grant of £196.9m available for waste management infrastructure, which will help alleviate the cost to Northern Ireland ratepayers generally of compliance with EU landfill diversion targets.

Waste Issues

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment what his Department is doing to address waste issues and prevent the growth of waste. (AQW 3173/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Waste management is a top priority for my Department in protecting and enhancing Northern Ireland’s environment. A key action under the Programme for Government is to implement the Waste Management Strategy to ensure that we meet the requirements of the European Commission in terms of reducing waste.

My Department has been active in a number of areas in supporting and taking forward the challenges that face Northern Ireland on waste. Together with the Strategic Investment Board we established the Programme Delivery Support Unit to provide planning, procurement and communication support to the three waste management groups. We have also established governance arrangements to oversee the implementation of the current Waste Management Strategy.

In January 2008 the Executive approved £200m of capital funding for the Waste Infrastructure Programme and we are working with the three Waste Management Groups to use this money to reduce the burden on ratepayers as far as possible.

In addition to the important work already under way in relation to the Waste Infrastructure Programme we are also beginning to move forward with work on other critical strands of the Waste Management Strategy including Learning & Communications and Waste Prevention. This will help to bring about a fundamental change in our attitude and behaviour towards waste, how we can prevent it, recycle it and dispose of it in ways that are environmentally responsible and economically sensible.

I appreciate that much good work is already taking place within Councils and through organisations such as Bryson House for example to encourage behaviour change to reduce waste going to landfill. However, I know that more needs to be done and I am determined to ensure that we, through our ongoing programme to implement the Waste Management Strategy, will bring about significant reductions in waste in Northern Ireland.

Penalty Points

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of motorists who have had their licences endorsed with penalty points over the last five years. (AQW 3176/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The attached table indicates the number of individual motorists who have had their licences endorsed by the Fixed Penalty Office, as the result of a fixed penalty notice, and following prosecution in Northern Ireland courts.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of the Environment what preparations his Department has made for the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. (AQW 3193/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Since January 2007, officials within OFMDFM have taken the lead in preparing for implementation here of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (the Convention). These preparations have included asking Departments to scrutinise their legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check their compatibility with the provisions of the Convention and to confirm whether they had any difficulty with the areas of competency covered by the Convention and to confirm how they had arrived at their policy position.

My officials concluded that, based on a working knowledge of my Department's policies, practices and legislation and the Department's statutory duties and compliance with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, as amended, and Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998, the Convention was unlikely to impose any additional requirements.

Officials in OFMDFM are intending to organise an event, in conjunction with Disability Action and the Office of Disability Issues (which is within the Department of Work and Pensions), early in the New Year to discuss the Convention with interested parties. Officials from my Department will attend that event and will continue to ensure that my Department is fully informed of progress on the implementation of the Convention.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of the Environment what contribution his Department has made or will be making to the consultation by the UK Department of Work and Pensions on reservations to the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with disabilities. (AQW 3195/09)

The Minister of the Environment: In December 2006, officials from the Department of Work and Pensions contacted OFMDFM officials about the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (the Convention).

OFMDFM which had assumed lead responsibility for progressing this issue, wrote to Departments on 2 January 2007 to ask them to scrutinise their legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check their compatibility with the provisions of the Convention. This was to enable the UK Government to make an informed decision about the ratification of the Convention and to identify any need for reservations or interpretative declarations.

Further, on 26 September 2008 Departments were asked to confirm whether they had any difficulty with the areas of competency covered by the Convention and to confirm how they had arrived at their policy position. My officials, in common with those in other Departments, concluded that, based on a working knowledge of my Department's policies, practices and legislation and the Department's statutory duties and compliance with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, as amended, and Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998, the Convention was unlikely to impose any additional requirements.

Ulster Farm By-Products

Mr Burns asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to the answer to AQW 2537/09, who is responsible for the enforcement of legislation on offensive odours emanating from transport vehicles travelling to, and from, the Ulster Farm By-Products site. (AQW 3197/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development is responsible for enforcement of the Animal By-Products Regulations (NI) 2003. These require vehicles and containers used to transport animal by-products to be covered, leak proof and clean before use. They also require material to be disposed of without undue delay. These measures are designed to protect public and animal health and while they will not eliminate odours, they may have an indirect impact on reducing them.

Review of Public Administration

Mr Brady asked the Minister of the Environment (i) how many staff are employed by the Boundary Commission; and (ii) how much funding was set aside for the completion of the work in regard to the Review of Public Administration. (AQW 3198/09)

The Minister of the Environment:

- (i) The Local Government Boundaries Commissioner is supported by a Secretary, 3 full time secretariat staff and one temporary administrative officer;

Professional staff from Land and Property Services provide technical support in delineating the proposed boundaries and at the public hearings;

11 Assistant Commissioners, who are employed on a part-time basis by the Department of the Environment, were appointed on 5 November 2008 to preside over the public hearings in each district and to report to the Commissioner.
- (ii) Estimated provision for the Office of the Boundary Commission is £562,000 for 2008/2009. It is anticipated that a further £125,000 will be required in 2009/2010, to complete the review.

John Lewis Planning Application

Mr Butler asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the progress to date in processing the John Lewis planning application for Sprucefield, and when his Department will be making a decision. (AQW 3206/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The application, accompanied by an Environmental Statement, was received by the Planning Service on 28 August 2008 and designated as one of major importance under Article 31 of the Planning (NI) Order 1991 on 8 October 2008.

The statutory consultation process is ongoing and, following its completion, all responses will be analysed and taken into consideration. The outcome of stage 1 retail issues, including Sprucefield following the BMAP Inquiry, will also need to be taken into consideration. The Planning Appeals Commission (PAC), in response to a request from the Planning Service, has advised that the early release of stage 1 retail issues is now feasible and that the reporting Commissioners will direct their efforts to provide this section of the report to the Planning Service early in 2009, hopefully January.

Dependant on the PAC's assurance, the Planning Service hopes to be in a position to submit a report to me in January 2009.

George Best Belfast City Airport

Dr Farry asked the Minister of the Environment, following the recently concluded planning agreement in relation to George Best Belfast City Airport, how the proceeds of the community fund arising out of penalties for late flights, will be distributed to the Belfast City Council and North Down Borough Council areas.

(AQW 3212/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The Department has no legal powers to set up a Community Fund nor impose levels of fines for delayed aircraft using the airport during 'extended hours', that is between 9:31pm and 11:59pm. George Best Belfast City Airport has agreed to voluntarily introduce a scheme in which it proposes to make payments into the Energy for Children registered charity.

The amount of penalties and their distribution through the Community Fund to projects in the Belfast City and North Down Borough Council areas is a matter for the Airport.

George Best Belfast City Airport

Dr Farry asked the Minister of the Environment to report on the amount of penalties to be paid to the community fund for late flights occurring at George Best Belfast City Airport.

(AQW 3213/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The Department has no legal powers to set up a Community Fund nor impose levels of fines for delayed aircraft using the airport during 'extended hours', that is between 9:31pm and 11:59pm. George Best Belfast City Airport has agreed to voluntarily introduce a scheme in which it proposes to make payments into the Energy for Children registered charity.

Planning Regulations

Mr Craig asked the Minister of the Environment how many planning enforcement notices have been served for breaches of planning regulations in the Lisburn area, in the last five years.

(AQW 3225/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The Division has served the following enforcement notices within:

Year	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	Total
Lisburn Number of Notices Served	5	2	7	4	3	21

Noise Nuisance

Mr Craig asked the Minister of the Environment how many prosecutions there have been for noise nuisance in Lisburn city, in the last five years.

(AQW 3228/09)

The Minister of the Environment: There are no separate figures available for Lisburn City, however figures available for the Lisburn City Council area show there have been no prosecutions for noise nuisance in that area in the last 5 years.

Review of Public Administration

Mr Brady asked the Minister of the Environment when the Boundary Commissioners will complete the work that falls under its remit on the Review of Public Administration.

(AQW 3230/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The Local Government Boundaries Commissioner is scheduled to submit his final report to my Department on 30 June 2009.

Banbridge/Newry and Mourne Area Plan 2015

Mr P J Bradley asked the Minister of the Environment to confirm the date for the final publication and launch of the Draft Banbridge/Newry and Mourne Area Plan 2015. (AQW 3231/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The Draft Banbridge/Newry & Mourne Area Plan 2015 was published on 22 August 2006 and contains the Plan Strategy, allocations, designations, policies, proposals and zonings for the Banbridge and Newry & Mourne District Council Areas.

On 27 November 2008, the Department formally requested the Planning Appeals Commission to undertake an Independent Examination into objections to the Draft Plan and report its findings to the Department.

The Department will consider the report and the recommendations of the Commission before deciding whether to adopt the plan, in whole or in part, with or without modification.

My Department is currently not in a position to advise as to when the Banbridge/Newry and Mourne Area Plan will be adopted as this will be dependant on both the timetable for the Examination, which will be set by the Commission, and the content of the Commission's report.

Planning Service in Craigavon

Mr P J Bradley asked the Minister of the Environment what action he will take on those planning applications that were withheld or refused by Planning Service in Craigavon on the basis of being premature to the outcome of Draft Banbridge/Newry and Mourne Area Plan 2015. (AQW 3232/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Refusal on the grounds of 'prematurity' currently affects a limited number of applications within the draft Banbridge/Newry & Mourne Plan Area. These can be classified into two groups:

- (i) Those current planning applications for development in the countryside received by the Planning Service on or before 16 March 2006, prior to the publication of draft PPS14. The policy context for these applications remains 'A Planning Strategy for Rural Northern Ireland' and the draft Area Plan. In arriving at a final decision on these applications, however, draft PPS 21 will be a material consideration because draft PPS 21 takes precedence over the greenbelt and Countryside Policy Area proposals in the draft Plan. Applications will be reconsidered and any approvals issued. Refusals will continue to be held until after the consultation period expires similar to the agreed handling arrangements for deferred PPS 14/21 cases.
- (ii) Those applications for development in urban areas or which impact on proposed development limits of settlements and which are considered prejudicial to the outcome of the draft Area Plan. Draft PPS 21 is not a material consideration in these cases and where appropriate refusal on the grounds of 'prematurity' will continue to be used.

Any application refused on the basis of 'prematurity' will not be held pending the outcome of draft Banbridge/Newry & Mourne Area Plan.

Planning Service

Mr P J Bradley asked the Minister of the Environment, given publication of the draft PPS 21 statement, if he will end the use of the prematurity clause by Planning Service in relation to planning applications being refused or put on hold pending the outcome of the Draft Banbridge/Newry and Mourne Area Plan 2015. (AQW 3233/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Refusal on the grounds of 'prematurity' currently affects a limited number of applications within the draft Banbridge/Newry & Mourne Plan Area. These can be classified into two groups:

Telephone Communication Masts

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the total revenue generated through his Department leasing its land or property to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts. (AQW 3245/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The total revenue generated through the Department of the Environment leasing its land or property to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts is nil.

Biodegradable Municipal Waste

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment what Councils are expected to meet their NILAS target of reducing the amount of Biodegradable Municipal Waste sent to landfill to 75% of the 1995 level by 2010. (AQW 3248/09)

The Minister of the Environment: While we cannot be certain, current trends would suggest that all Councils will meet their 2010 NILAS targets although a few Councils may require a transfer of allowances from other Councils who have a surplus in 2010. It is not known at this stage which councils, if any, would require a transfer of allowances.

Nuclear Power Facilities

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment, in light of his comments during Question Time on 1 December that nuclear power must be considered to help meet targets to reduce CO<sub>2</sub> emissions, would planning applications presented to Planning Service for nuclear power facilities in East Antrim be given consideration. (AQW 3249/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Under Article 25 of the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991, my Department has a statutory duty to determine all new applications which are submitted.

Were a planning application for a nuclear power station submitted anywhere in Northern Ireland my Department would be required to process it in accordance with current procedures and to consider the application in light of relevant planning policies.

Waste Incineration

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of incineration as a means of managing waste and what action he has taken to encourage groups to consider this method in their waste management policy. (AQW 3258/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Incineration is one of a suite of available thermal treatment technologies, others of which include pyrolysis and gasification, and all of which offer the potential to generate energy from waste. The appropriateness of any one of these to a particular Waste Management Group's area is determined by a range of factors, including capacity, environmental impact, technological novelty and risk, cost and compliance with the BPEO (Best Practicable Environmental Option) requirement to provide a balanced mix of technologies across the whole of Northern Ireland.

My main objective is to ensure that Northern Ireland as a whole manages its waste in accordance with my Department's aim to build a better and safer environment. While it is my belief that energy from waste, including incineration, will be a necessary component of the Groups' preferred infrastructure, it is not for me to encourage or favour any particular option. It is my role to ensure that my Department provides effective support to the Groups in taking forward the procurements essential to enable their constituent councils to comply with their legal obligations in a manner that represents the best possible and practicable balance of social, economic and environmental impacts.

Fly-Tipping

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of the Environment how many incidents of fly-tipping have occurred in each of the last five years, broken down by (i) local government area; and (ii) parliamentary constituency; and how many people have been prosecuted in each year for this offence. (AQW 3300/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Since March 2006, the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) has been provided with details of fly-tipping, on a District Council basis, through the Flycapture online database; figures are not available prior to that time. Any prosecutions taken directly by NIEA relate to large-scale, commercial illegal dumping, rather than the smaller amounts, dumped on a more random basis, that are commonly regarded as fly-tipping.

There has been no universal agreement that NI Councils would use this system. Only 7 District Councils are inputting information on to Flycapture on a consistent basis, rendering the information NIEA holds essentially unrepresentative in determining the nature and scale of fly-tipping within Northern Ireland. My officials are involved in ongoing discussions about recording incidences of fly-tipping and associated legislative changes giving Councils more powers to deal with fly-tipped waste.

The attached table sets out the information requested from the seven District Councils that have provided information via Flycapture.

District Council	2006/07		2007/08		2008/09 (to end October 2008)
	Number of incidents	Number of fines	Number of incidents	Number of fines	Number of incidents	Number of fines
Ards	19	1	165	23	137	2
Armagh	22	0	125	2	45	4

Larne	184	17	147	22	55	18

PPS 21 Consultation

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of the Environment what consultation events will his Department be facilitating on PPS21 to provide an opportunity for input from rural dwellers. (AQW 3340/09)

The Minister of the Environment: As part of the public consultation process on Draft PPS21, officials from my Department will be holding a series of information days in rural communities across Northern Ireland during January and February 2009.

These are intended to provide people with the background they may need to reach an informed opinion on the new policy provisions.

Notice of these events will appear in the local press in due course.

Cycle Proficiency Scheme

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the Cycle Proficiency Scheme for providing training that enables children to cycle safely to and from their home. (AQW 3345/09)

The Minister of the Environment: My Department's statutory duty is to promote road safety in order to reduce the number of people killed and seriously injured on Northern Ireland's roads, and resources are therefore targeted primarily at addressing the main causes of road traffic casualties. The Department has no statutory obligation to train road users, be they cyclists, pedestrians, drivers or motorcyclists, or to promote cycling as an activity for health, environmental or other reasons.

The Cycling Proficiency Scheme is one of a range of road safety initiatives for children and young people and its purpose, along with other road safety education work, is to instil good road user attitudes and behaviours from an early age with the ultimate aim of reducing road traffic casualties. The scheme is well established and has been operating successfully for over 30 years.

Cycling casualties have been falling for a number of years. Figures for the period up to 9 December 2008 show that two pedal cyclists have been killed so far this year compared with two for the same period in 2007 and none in 2006. There have been no child cyclist fatalities since 2005. Over the last three years, 10 children, on average, have been seriously injured on bikes. This represents a reduction of over 64% on the average of 28 for the baseline period of 1996-2000. These figures are relatively low in comparison with other categories of road users and suggest that while there is no room for complacency the current approach to the delivery of cycle training for children as a road safety initiative is working.

Councillor Vacancies

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of the Environment to provide an update on the expected timeframes that will allow opportunities for those councillors wishing to leave local government to be replaced by co-optees. (AQW 3351/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Elections, in respect of the Northern Ireland Assembly and district councils, are an excepted matter, under the Northern Ireland Act 1998, and responsibility for legislation relating to elections rests with the Secretary of State.

The procedure for filling vacancies on councils in the period between local government elections without requiring mid-term elections, sometimes referred to as co-option, is outlined in the Electoral Law Act (Northern Ireland) 1962.

As this arrangement constitutes part of electoral law, responsibility for any changes to this legislation lies with the Secretary of State.

I have raised this issue with the Secretary of State and a meeting has been arranged in the New Year to discuss it.

Pollution Prevention and Control Permit

Mr Butler asked the Minister of the Environment to provide a copy of the Pollution Prevention and Control (PPC) Permit relating to Planning Reference: S/1998/0162 at 29 Ballyvannon Road, Glenavy. (AQW 3355/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland did not receive an application for an authorisation under the Industrial Pollution Control (NI) Order 1997 or a permit under the Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations (NI) 2003 for the development covered by Planning Reference S/1998/0162. No permit therefore exists.

Mullaghglass Landfill Site

Mr Butler asked the Minister of the Environment (i) the number of complaints that his Department has received about Mullaghglass landfill site; and (ii) the nature of these complaints. (AQW 3397/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Over the last 12 months the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) has received 207 complaints about the Mullaghglass landfill site, mostly in relation to odour.

NIEA's regular audits of this facility and inspections in response to complaints have not detected a recurring odour nuisance but found that the operation meets the high standard of the Integrated Pollution Prevention and Control permit conditions in place.

Efficiency Savings

Dr Farry asked the Minister of the Environment what policies and practices in his Department have changed in delivering the 3% efficiency savings required by the 2008-11 Budget. (AQW 3411/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Budget 2008-11, which covers the three financial years 2008/09 to 2010/11, requires my Department to deliver cash efficiency savings of £3.92m (2008-09), £7.73m (2009-10) and £11.42m (2010-11). The table below shows these overall efficiency savings split between the DFP budget categories - Administration costs and Other Resource/Capital.

	2008-09 £m	2009-10 £m	2010-11 £m
Total DEL required 3% cumulative	3.92	7.73	11.42
Split between
Administration costs (2.8%)	0.6	2.28	3.9
Other Resource/Capital	3.32	5.45	7.52

DELIVERY OF SAVINGS

Other Resource/Capital (£7.52m by 2010-11):-

To deliver the Other Resource/Capital savings my Department has undertaken a number of measures which in the main include reductions in:

- the level of grant schemes which offer financial assistance for various environmental protection and heritage activities including grants towards the preservation of the stock of listed buildings in Northern Ireland. This has included the cessation of the waste management grant scheme which has contributed £3m per year to the efficiencies but has been replaced by the Strategic Waste Infrastructure Fund (circa £200m) to be disbursed to the three Waste Management Groups tasked with the progressing the waste management plans of the councils.
- the level of resources grant paid to district councils (£1.5m in 2010-11) as it is anticipated that the level of resources grant currently paid to the less affluent councils could diminish once the 26 district councils merge into 11 under the RPA initiative; and
- consultancy spend (£0.5m in 2010-11).

Administration (£3.9m by 2010-11)

Key actions to deliver these savings will involve the suppression of low priority posts, the cessation of automatic backfilling of posts and the rationalisation of administrative structures to achieve economies of scale. Also, non-salary running costs have been reduced by 15%.

Details of the level of the overall efficiency savings together with the actions required to achieve the savings are detailed in the DOE Efficiency Delivery Plan (EDP) which is included in the Department's website.

Ballycarry Wastewater Treatment Works

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of the Environment (i) if the sewage and wastewater treatment plant at Ballycarry complies with Northern Ireland Environment Agency consent standards for discharges into Larne Lough; (ii) what the level of treatment is provided; and (iii) what are the levels of discharge. (AQW 3436/09)

The Minister of the Environment:

- (i) The Ballycarry Waste Water Treatment Works (WWTW) was compliant, in 2007 and 2008 (1 January to 29 October 2008), with the standards set by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency under the terms of the Water Order discharge consent.

- (ii) Ballycarry WWTW currently provides secondary treatment. Discharges in storm conditions are currently screened and/or settled before discharge to Larne Lough.
- (iii) The volume of secondary treated waste water discharged to Larne Lough should not exceed 1282m<sup>3</sup>/day.

Northern Ireland Environment Agency

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of the Environment (i) if the sewage and wastewater treatment plant at Whitehead complies with Northern Ireland Environment Agency consent standards for discharges into Larne Lough; (ii) what level of treatment is provided; and (iii) what are the levels of discharge. (AQW 3440/09)

The Minister of the Environment: (i) Untreated sewage is discharged to the North Channel via a sea outfall at Whitehead. A condition of the Water Order discharge consent, set by Northern Ireland Environment Agency, is that the discharge should be finely screened and therefore it is not currently compliant.

- (ii) The current outfall discharges untreated waste water from a population equivalent of approximately 4500.
- (iii) The volume of untreated waste water discharged to the North Channel should not exceed 700 m<sup>3</sup>/day.

Planning Enforcement Notices

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Environment how many planning enforcement notices have been served for breaching planning regulations in the North Down area, in each of the last five years. (AQW 3458/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The Division has served the following enforcement notices within:

Year	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	Total
North Down Number of Notices Served	2	0	6	2	0	10

Public Appointments

Ms Purvis asked the Minister of the Environment (i) to list all public appointments filled (a) by his Department and (b) still outstanding; (ii) on what grounds were some appointments not made; (iii) to assess the process adopted for appointments including the OPCA guidance; and (iv) his plans for ensuring a more efficient application of the procedures. (AQW 3497/09)

The Minister of the Environment:

- (i) (a) Set out at Annex A is a schedule detailing all public appointments filled by my Department during each of the last 3 financial years.
- (b) The reconstitution of Northern Ireland Local Government Officers' Superannuation Committee (NILGOSC) was begun on 2 March 2007. The intention was to publicly appoint a Chairperson and five new committee members to NILGOSC. The public appointments were not completed.
- (ii) The NILGOSC public appointments competition launched in March 2007 was subject to the coming into operation of the Local Government Pension Scheme (Amendment No.2) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2007, which were made on August 2007, with a commencement date of 1 October 2007 (subject to the Assembly not praying against them). The amending Regulations removed the statutory right of both employer and employee representative bodies to be members of NILGOSC.

Trade Unions were opposed to the Regulations, on the basis that it could result in a loss of representation for the two groups that contribute to the fund, namely employers and employees. They also objected to the fact that the competition had commenced prior to the consultation on the draft Regulations.

The Environment Committee supported the view of the Trade Unions, in that it considered that those with an interest in the pension scheme should be represented on NILGOSC. On 1 October 2007, the Assembly debated a motion to annul the Local Government Pension Scheme (Amendment No.2) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2007. The motion was carried, annulling the Regulations.

- (iii) DOE public appointments are either regulated or monitored by the Commissioner for Public Appointments and as such are made in accordance with the Code of Practice published by the Commissioner's office. For those appointments not regulated by the Commissioner for Public Appointments my Department will, as far as is practicable and in line with the principle of proportionality, apply the principles and procedures set out in the Commissioner's Code of Practice.
- (iv) The Commissioner for Public Appointments has a statutory responsibility to prescribe and publish a Code of Practice; to carry out an audit to establish whether the Code of Practice is being observed; and to publish an Annual Report which includes both information as to the observance of the Code of Practice and an account of the audit process. When making public appointments my Department normally follows the principles and procedures set out in the Commissioner's Code of Practice and takes careful note of any and all recommendations contained in the aforementioned Annual Report and Audit Reports that would ensure the more efficient application of appointment procedures.

Wind Turbines

Mr Butler asked the Minister of the Environment to detail all (i) wind turbines and (ii) wind farms, in the Lagan Valley constituency and to list the planning applications for wind turbines that are with the Planning Service. (AQW 3521/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Since 2002 there have been 47 applications for domestic wind turbines in the Lagan Valley Constituency Area, 5 of which have yet to be determined.

The wind turbine applications to be determined are Q/2008/0217/F, S/2008/0274/F, S/2008/0494/F, S/2008/0524/F and S/2008/0701/F.

There have been no applications for wind farms within the Lagan Valley Constituency Area.

Ulster Farm By-Products

Mr Burns asked the Minister of the Environment if he will place in the Assembly Library, a copy of the (i) plume modelling data; and (ii) resultant analysis, submitted to Planning Service/Northern Ireland Environment Agency for planning application S/2008/0488/F (extension of chimney stack, Ulster Farm By-products). (AQW 3523/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The planning application to replace an existing 30 metre high chimney with a 54 metre high chimney at the Ulster Farm Byproducts site, Glenavy was submitted to Planning Service on 2 June 2008.

The plume modelling data and resultant analysis have not yet been submitted to Planning Service/Northern Ireland Environment Agency.

I will not be making a copy of the material available in the Assembly Library. When the information is submitted it will be available for viewing at the offices of Planning Service Headquarters, Millennium House, 17-25 Great Victoria Street Belfast and at the Divisional Planning Office in Downpatrick.

Should anyone wish to view the working planning application file they can do so through the Planning Service open file policy. An appointment is necessary to view the working file and can be made through Planning Service Headquarters where the application is being processed.

Glenavy River

Mr Burns asked the Minister of the Environment, in relation to the Glenavy River, (i) who is responsible for monitoring compliance with the Surface Waters (Fishlife) (Classification) (Amendment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1997; (ii) if the river is considered compliant with the regulations and; (iii) the frequency of monitoring compliance with the regulations. (AQW 3528/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) is responsible for monitoring compliance with the Surface Waters (Fishlife) (Classification) (Amendment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1997, which is more commonly known as the Freshwater Fish Directive (FFD).

NIEA monitors compliance with the FFD at two locations on the Glenavy River; at Ballydonagh Bridge and at Leap Bridge.

Both sample stations have complied fully with the requirements of the FFD for the past four years.

Table A below details the frequency of compliance monitoring against the mandatory parameters contained in the FFD.

TABLE A

Parameter	Dissolved Oxygen	Ammonia	pH (measure of acidity)	Zinc
Frequency	Monthly	Monthly	Monthly	Quarterly

Food Waste

Mr Burns asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to his answer to AQW 7431/08, to detail (i) where the food waste from Belfast households was taken after kerbside collection; and (ii) how the food waste was processed, recycled or disposed. (AQW 3533/09)

The Minister of the Environment: As advised in my response of 2 June 2008 to AQW 7431/08, my Department has no regulatory authority over this project. The destination of Belfast's household food waste and the way in which it is treated is a matter for Belfast City Council.

George Best Belfast City Airport

Dr Farry asked the Minister of the Environment what is the timescale for a decision on a public inquiry into the planning application for the runway extension at Belfast City Airport. (AQW 3536/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Public Inquiries are normally only called in association with applications designated as being of major importance under Article 31 of the Planning (NI) Order 1991. My Department anticipates being in a position, within the next few weeks, to confirm that the application, for the extension to the runway, will be designated under the Article 31 procedure. A decision on whether there is a need for a public inquiry will be made shortly thereafter.

George Best Belfast City Airport

Dr Farry asked the Minister of the Environment what is the criteria to determine if there will be a public inquiry with the planning application for the runway at Belfast City Airport. (AQW 3537/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The key test in deciding the process route is whether a public inquiry is necessary to provide a forum for the presentation and consideration of issues arising from representations received and which need to be assessed to allow the Department to determine the application.

George Best Belfast City Airport

Dr Farry asked the Minister of the Environment if he will take into account the (i) number of objections; and (ii) calls for a public inquiry received by the Planning Service, before making a decision with the planning application for the runway extension at the Belfast City Airport. (AQW 3539/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Public Inquiries are normally only called in association with applications designated as being of major importance under Article 31 of the Planning (NI) Order 1991. My Department anticipates being in a position, within the next few weeks, to confirm that the application, for the extension to the runway, will be designated under the Article 31 procedure. A decision on whether there is a need for a public inquiry will be made shortly thereafter.

George Best Belfast City Airport

Mr Butler asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment on the impact the proposed plans to extend the George Best Belfast City Airport runway will have on Belfast International Airport. (AQW 3605/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Article 25(1) of the Planning (NI) Order 1991 provides that in dealing with an application for planning permission my Department shall have regard to the development plan, in so far as it is material to the application, and to any other material considerations. These material considerations must be considerations of a planning nature.

The application to extend the runway is at an early stage and the assessment of its potential impacts has not yet been concluded.

Powers to Search and Seize Vehicles

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister of the Environment when he proposes to use the powers to search and seize vehicles in accordance with Article 5E of the Waste (amendment) (Northern Ireland) Order 2007. (AQW 3607/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The enabling powers for the searching and seizure of vehicles provide that seized vehicles must be dealt with in accordance with regulations made by the Department. The powers can not therefore be used until such regulations are in place. I hope to consult on draft seizure of property regulations in early 2009. I anticipate that the regulations will be made by summer 2009, depending on the outcome of the consultation process.

Forfeiture of Vehicles

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister of the Environment when he proposes to introduce forfeiture of vehicles under section 5D of the Waste (Amendment) (Northern Ireland) Order 2007. (AQW 3608/09)

The Minister of the Environment: Decisions on vehicle forfeiture must be taken by a court, and the enabling legislation is already in place. The provision enables a court to make an order depriving an offender of his rights to a vehicle, and vesting those rights in the Department. The court must be satisfied that the vehicle was used in connection with the offence, and the legislation stipulates a number of factors which must be considered in reaching a decision. These include the value of the vehicle, the financial implications of forfeiture on the offender and his need to use the vehicle for lawful purposes.

Construction Industry

Mr McKay asked the Minister of the Environment if his Department will publish an information leaflet informing the construction industry of the requirement to ensure that passengers being carried in the rear of vans are transported in a safe manner. (AQW 3626/09)

The Minister of the Environment: My Department has provided the PSNI with new information leaflets which explain the law in relation to the safe carriage of passengers in work vans. The leaflet also highlights that the police will be stepping up enforcement to discourage employers or drivers from carrying van passengers in an unsafe manner.

The Department and the police will announce the campaign in the New Year, and for a short time advice and warnings will be issued in advance of the commencement of enforcement.

Copies of the leaflet will be available from my Department's Road Safety Division headquarters and from regional road safety education offices, and may be downloaded from Road Safety Division's website at www.roadsafetyni.gov.uk.

Industrial Zoned Land

Mr Doherty asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the size and location of industrial zoned land available in each District Council area. (AQW 3633/09)

The Minister of the Environment: I regret that the information you have requested is not currently available. Officials within my Department are presently carrying out an industrial monitor which will cover all district council areas in Northern Ireland. It is however, not anticipated that the information will be available before summer 2009. When complete the information will be made available on the Planning Service website.

Victoria Park, Belfast

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister of the Environment if the proposed cull of birds at Victoria Park Belfast requires Departmental approval; and if so, whether such approval will be given. (AQW 3664/09)

The Minister of the Environment: There has been no application to the Department to cull birds in Victoria Park in 2009.

The control of wildlife for the preservation of air safety would require a licence under the Wildlife (Northern Ireland) Order 1985.

If an application is made to the Department it will be assessed by officials and may be granted if it is agreed that the birds pose a significant threat to public safety through the risk of air strike.

FINANCE AND PERSONNEL

Capital Projects

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what actions his Department is taking to bring forward the delivery of capital projects, to help address the economic downturn. (AQW 3014/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel (Mr N Dodds): My department is engaged in a number of significant capital programmes which directly benefit the economy through civil service reform projects and a range of construction and energy improvement projects. Consideration has also been given to whether additional investment, which might have a further positive impact on the economy, could be progressed any faster. However, taking account of the significant investment already planned, my department has concluded that no additional initiatives could be progressed in the short to medium term without increasing the risk of underspending. My department therefore remains committed to delivering its planned investment, which is playing a considerable part in helping the ICT and construction sectors in particular.

Small Business Finance Scheme

Mr Poots asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how the (i) £1bn Small Business Finance Scheme; (ii) £1bn guarantee facility to support bank lending to small exporters; (iii) £50m fund to convert businesses' debt into equity; and (iv) £25m regional loan transition fund, announced in the pre-budget report, is to be applied and accessed by small business. (AQW 3079/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: The economic shocks that have impacted on the global economy have created an exceptionally challenging environment for small businesses. In the Pre-Budget Report the UK Government announced a number of UK-wide initiatives to assist small and medium-sized businesses facing credit constraints. I understand that HM Treasury are still clarifying the detail of these schemes. The central aim of the initiatives is to help provide credit guarantees to businesses.

These schemes will help small businesses by improving the availability of finance and provide working capital to meet investment needs and export credits. When the final details are made available, appropriate agencies such as Invest NI will disseminate information to the business sector.

Lending Practices

Mr Poots asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what meetings have been arranged with the banks to discuss their lending practices to businesses. (AQW 3083/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: I am particularly concerned about the current lending practices of our local banks. While I appreciate the desire to strengthen their balance sheets in terms of retained capital, it must not be at the expense of local businesses.

The UK Government has invested considerable sums of taxpayers' money into maintaining the integrity of the banking sector. The banks must now fulfil their responsibilities in terms of assisting businesses and consumers through this period of economic instability.

I have now initiated a series of meetings with the chief executives of the leading local banks. At these meetings I will impress upon the banks the need to assist local businesses through this period of financial turmoil.

eHR Contract

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to list the numbers and grades of staff employed by his Department in the management of the eHR contract; and to detail the total cost of these staff in each financial year from 2005-06. (AQW 3089/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: The number, grades and cost of staff employed by the Department in the management of the eHR contract in each financial year from 2005/6 is as follows

	2005/6	2006/7	2007/8	2008/9
Grade 5	1	1	1	1
Grade 6	2	2	1	1
Grade 7	1	1	1	1

Cost	£291,000	£305,000	£367,000	£380,000

The costs are covered from a dedicated eHR Programme budget allocation which is in addition to the normal running costs of the Department.

eHR Contract

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the costs of staff employed by his Department, not directly involved in the management of the eHR contract, who have contributed to the planning and implementation of services which will be delivered under this contract, for each financial year from 2005-06. (AQW 3091/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: The costs of staff employed by the Department (including GAE), not directly involved in the management of the eHR contract, who have contributed to the planning and implementation of services which will be delivered under this contract, for each financial year from 2005-06 are:

2005/06	2006/07	2007/08	2008/09
£1,657,000	£777,000	£1,231,000	£1,438,000

The costs are covered from a dedicated eHR Programme budget allocation which is in addition to the normal running costs of the Department.

Civil Servants: Air Fare Expenditure

Mr Burns asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to the answers to AQW 1810/09, AQW 1811/09, AQW 1817/09, AQW 1818/09 to detail what action he intends to take to reduce the amount of money spent by civil servants on air fares. (AQW 3148/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: It is not within the Department of Finance and Personnel's remit to police how all public servants use air travel. As stated within the NICS Handbook, it is an individual responsibility for each Northern Ireland Civil Service Department to consider alternatives to the cheapest method and to justify it.

Civil Service Vacancies

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the (i) location; and (ii) number of vacancies in the Northern Ireland Civil Service at (a) Administrative Officer; (b) Executive Officer II; (c) Executive Officer I; and (d) Staff Officer, in each Government Department. (AQW 3190/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: The location and number of vacancies in permanent posts in each Northern Ireland Civil Service department at the grades of (a) Administrative Officer; (b) Executive Officer 2; (c) Executive Officer 1; and (d) Staff Officer are set out in the attached table.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what contribution his Department has made or will be making to the consultation by the UK Department of Work and Pensions on reservations to the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with disabilities. (AQW 3214/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: In December 2006, officials from the Department of Work and Pensions contacted OFMDFM officials about the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (the Convention). OFMDFM assumed lead responsibility for progressing this issue and asked all Departments to scrutinise their legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check their compatibility with the provisions of the Convention. This was to enable the UK Government to make an informed decision about the ratification of the Convention and to identify any need for reservations or interpretative declarations.

Departments were also asked to confirm whether they had any difficulty with the areas of competency covered by the Convention. My officials concluded that, based on a working knowledge of the Department's policies, practices and legislation and statutory duties and compliance with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, as amended, and Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998, the Convention was unlikely to impose any additional requirements.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what preparations her Department has made for the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. (AQW 3218/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: As requested by the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister, which has taken lead responsibility in preparing for implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of People with Disabilities, my Department has scrutinised its legislation, policies and practices and procedures to check their compatibility with the provisions of the Convention and has confirmed that we have no difficulty with the areas of competency covered by the Convention.

We will also be taking part in an event organised by the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister, early in the New Year to discuss the Convention with interested parties.

Telephone Communication Masts

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the total revenue generated through his Department leasing its land or property to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts. (AQW 3260/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: The Department of Finance and Personnel generates £6,000 per annum through the leasing of land and property to facilitate the erection of telecoms equipment.

Tesco Unit at Springhill Retail Park

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to report on progress in placing the Tesco unit at Springhill Retail Park in Bangor, on the valuation list.[R] (AQW 3268/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: The new Tesco Unit at Springhill Retail Park in Bangor was placed in the Valuation List by District Valuer's Certificate dated 10 September 2008.

Bloomfield Centre

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to report on progress in placing all of the new units at the Bloomfield Centre in Bangor on the valuation list.[R] (AQW 3269/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: There have been 2 phases of new development at the Bloomfield Centre. The first phase, comprising 3 new retail warehouse units, was completed and occupied earlier this year. All the units have been valued and entered in the Valuation List.

The second phase consists of the split up of a former unit into 2 units. One unit is almost ready for occupation and will be valued this month. Work at the other unit is not as far advanced, but it will be valued upon completion.

Efficiency Savings

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel which policies and practices within his Department have been changed to deliver the 3% efficiency savings required under the Budget 2008-11. (AQW 3296/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: As part of the Budget 2008-11 process the Department reviewed its policies and practices and, as a result, targeted a range of areas to deliver efficiency savings. These include:

- recognition of costs recovered in respect of rate collection;
- maximising receipts and extending charging in respect of services provided by DFP particularly to non NICS customers;
- realising potential savings from the release of accommodation following 'Fit for Purpose' staff reductions (target of 2,300 posts) across the NICS;
- efficiency targets for the new Land and Property Services Agency; and
- targeted GAE and staffing reviews across the department.

Construction Industry

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what action he has taken to (i) address the concerns of the construction industry that major projects in the Investment Strategy are not being rolled out as scheduled; and (ii) ensure that the industry is fully involved in discussions on the progress of the strategy. (AQW 3312/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: In order to hear at first hand the difficulties facing the construction industry, I met the Construction Employers Federation and the Northern Ireland Federation of Housing Associations over recent weeks. The Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) has also been involved in meetings with a wide range of key industry stakeholders.

This level of direct engagement has been essential in order to fully understand the issues and how Government can help to alleviate some of the problems. The key message from all industry stakeholders has been the need for the Investment Strategy to be delivered to the market place as quickly as possible.

Unfortunately, the litigation brought by unsuccessful contractors against both the Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) and Department of Education framework agreements has not helped in this regard.

These legal issues will take time to fully resolve, but as I announced in the Assembly on 15 December, I am determined to ensure that the planned construction of schools and other public sector infrastructure projects that were to be delivered using the framework agreements will not be stopped. My Department will be working with a wide range of Government Construction Clients, including the Department of Education, to move the procurement of projects forward as quickly as possible on a project-by-project basis.

As a result of this, contracts worth some £115 million, that were to be delivered by the frameworks, will move ahead, avoiding unnecessary delay and allowing them to go to the market place this financial year. Crucially, this means that no construction project will be held up pending the outcome of legal proceedings. The projects include, amongst others, major projects relating to schools and colleges.

Other Departments have also indicated that they are progressing a further range of schemes. This means that projects with a total value in excess of £400 million are scheduled to go to the market place before the end of this financial year.

Major infrastructure projects with an estimated value of almost £1.3 billion are already under construction and the latest forecasts from departments indicate that total capital investment this year will be around £1.5 billion. In addition, Public Sector investment in infrastructure is set to continue to increase over the remaining years of the Investment Strategy and will be in the order of £5 billion for the first three years.

These ambitious plans need to be delivered and this challenge requires effective strategic management, oversight and robust monitoring. To this end Strategic Investment Board (SIB), with input from CPD, is introducing a new Investment Strategy Delivery Tracking System (DTS) to capture the status of all major capital procurements.

Given the wide-ranging stakeholder interests represented at the Construction Industry Forum for Northern Ireland (CIFNI), it is already recognised and established as the appropriate forum for the construction industry to discuss with Government the roll-out of Investment Strategy projects. Once the project data contained within the DTS has been fully validated, SIB plan to provide the construction industry with appropriate reports through the Forum.

An update on the Investment Strategy will continue to be a standing item for discussion at CIFNI meetings and I will continue to work closely with my Ministerial colleagues to ensure that Government works in partnership with the industry at all levels to deliver the Investment Strategy effectively and to keep the industry fully informed of progress.

Civil Service Sickness Levels

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to give an update on sickness levels in the Civil Service; and what progress has been made in reducing these levels. (AQW 3313/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: The Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency (NISRA) recently published its Annual Report on Sickness Absence for the 2007/2008 financial year. This report confirmed that an average of 12.9 days per staff year were lost as a result of sickness absence in 2007/2008, down from 13.7 in the previous year and from a high of 15.5 days in 2003/04.

According to NISRA's latest statistics for 2008/09 (April – October), this downward trend has continued. NISRA has indicated that if these trends continue and are confirmed when the final year analysis is completed, the estimated outturn for 2008/09 could be around 11.5 days. While this improvement is encouraging, more work is required if we are to achieve the target of 10.2 days for 2008/09.

A substantial programme of work aimed at addressing the high levels of sickness absence in the NICS is underway following the publication of the Northern Ireland Audit Office (NIAO) report on sickness absence and the subsequent Public Accounts Committee (PAC) report. DFP in its Memorandum of Reply, which was published on 4 November 2008, has accepted the PAC recommendations and work on implementation has commenced. A group of HR Directors, including officials from NISRA and OHS, has been tasked with overseeing the implementation of the NIAO and PAC recommendations.

Public Appointments

Ms Purvis asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel (i) to list all public appointments filled (a) by his Department; and (b) still outstanding, in the last 12 months; (ii) on what grounds were some appointments not made; (iii) to assess the process adopted for appointments including the OPCA guidance; and (iv) his plans for ensuring a more efficient application of the procedures. (AQW 3504/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: In answering this question it has been assumed that public appointments relate only to appointments made through the Public Appointments Process which is regulated and monitored by the Commissioner for Public Appointments. Appointments made to Monitoring Bodies and Review groups have not therefore been included.

The Department of Finance and Personnel has not made any appointments to any of its 3 sponsored bodies in the last 12 months and there are no outstanding appointments.

Future appointments will be regulated by the Commissioner for Public Appointments who has a statutory responsibility to prescribe and publish a Code of Practice, to carry out an audit to establish whether this Code is being observed and to publish an annual report which includes information as to the observance of the code and an account of the audit process.

This will ensure the efficient application of the appointment process.

Homeowners

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what action he has asked the banks to take to assist homeowners and small and medium sized enterprises during the present economic downturn. (AQW 3573/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: At recent meetings with senior banking officials I have stressed the need to provide local homeowners and businesses with all assistance possible. I have highlighted the need to fully utilise schemes such as the Small Firm Loan Guarantee Scheme, the European Investment Bank Loan Fund, and existing mortgage interest relief measures.

During these meetings with the banks I have also stressed the important role that the local banks need to fulfil in terms of creating confidence in sectors such as construction. This can be achieved by taking a long term view of business investments and project returns.

Business Credit Insurance Providers

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel if he has had (i) any meetings with business credit insurance providers; and (ii) any plans to take action to offset the downward valuation and credit worthiness of local companies. (AQW 3574/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: I have not had any meetings with business credit insurance providers.

In relation to the downward valuation and credit worthiness of local companies, I have had meetings with all our leading banks to explore how to best to maintain business stability. Any measures from the banks which enhance the credit worthiness of our companies should be welcome.

Energy Performance Certificates

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel who is the lead body in enforcing energy performance certificates on properties. (AQW 3583/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: The Energy Performance of Buildings (Certificates and Inspections) Regulations (NI) 2008 identifies the Department of Finance and Personnel as the enforcement authority for energy performance certificates. The Department is currently finalising discussions to assign this function to district councils in the New Year.

Interest Rates

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what representations have been made by his Department to local banks to ensure that interest rates cuts are passed on to customers. (AQW 3610/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: I have, on several occasions, met with local banks to discuss how we can jointly improve the performance of the local economy. These discussions have also considered the impact of the banks recent interest rate setting behaviour on local businesses and consumers.

On the 16th December I chaired a meeting involving the chief executives from the four local leading banks. The First Minister and deputy First Minister, as well as the Enterprise Minister, also attended this meeting. During the meeting I pressed the local banks to pass on, in full, the recent Bank of England interest rate cuts to both consumers and businesses.

HEALTH, SOCIAL SERVICES AND PUBLIC SAFETY

Foetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action he has taken, since the Assembly debate in September 2008 on Foetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders (FASD), to reduce the incidence of FASD. (AQW 3015/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (Mr M McGimpsey): I have ensured that the next phase of the binge drinking campaign will specifically target females, and will include information on alcohol and pregnancy. I am also continuing to work with UK colleagues to ensure that alcohol containers have a clear health message relating to recommended levels of alcohol consumption, and that this should include the advice on alcohol use during pregnancy.

Orthopaedic Patients

Mr A Maskey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety pursuant to the answer to AQW 2344/09, to detail the total cost incurred by the referral of 12,368 orthopaedic patients to the independent sector for treatment by the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust; and the cost incurred by the referral of 2,736 orthopaedic patients to the independent sector for treatment by the Western Health and Social Care Trust. (AQW 3034/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I am advised that a total of approximately £7.6 million in 2006/07 and £11.8 million in 2007/08 has been paid to the independent sector for orthopaedic treatments procured as part of the waiting initiatives. However, it should be noted that these figures include the cost of a small number of treatments provided in 2005/06 and exclude some costs for 2007/08 for which invoices have not yet been received.

To meet current access targets it has been necessary to use the independent sector to supplement health service capacity to deliver the reductions in waiting times seen over the last few years.

Orthopaedic Patients

Mr A Maskey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the difference in cost of an orthopaedic patient being treated by the Health Service in comparison to treatment provided by the independent sector. (AQW 3035/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: It is not possible to make a direct cost comparison between treating an orthopaedic patient in the NHS or through the Independent Sector. Within the NHS a patient's management will encompass treatment within Primary and Secondary care and will include physiotherapy, management and support of any related disability including domiciliary care and pain management.

Only outpatient assessments and surgery are procured from the independent sector

We have achieved significant reductions in waiting times for patients in Northern Ireland through a number of initiatives, including supplementing capacity through use of the independent sector. It is my view that this is an appropriate measure which will reduce waiting times to a level at which they can be stabilised and maintained

Nursing/Residential Care: Mid-Ulster

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if there is a shortage of nursing or residential care in the Mid-Ulster constituency. (AQW 3054/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that, of the 691 people currently with an assessed need for residential or nursing home care in the Mid Ulster area, only one person has not been placed.

Nursing/Residential Care: Mid-Ulster

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many nursing homes there are in the Mid Ulster constituency. (AQW 3055/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: At 30 June 2008, there were 12 nursing homes in the Mid-Ulster constituency.

Slieve Roe Residential Home, Kilkeel

Mr Wells asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if an equality impact assessment was carried out on the proposed closure of Slieve Roe Residential Home in Kilkeel. (AQW 3057/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Southern Health and Social Care Trust has undertaken an equality impact assessment of its proposal for the future of Slieve Roe House in Kilkeel. This equality impact assessment was carried out in accordance with guidance issued by the Equality Commission in April 2001. The Trust wishes to consult as widely as possible on the proposed service changes for statutory residential care for older people and the associated EQIA. The Trust is planning to commence a 12 week period of consultation with all interested persons from Monday, 15 December 2008 until Friday, 6th March 2009. In doing so, it will conform to the guiding principles governing consultation contained in section 6 of its Equality Scheme and the Equality Commission's Guide to the Statutory Duties. The Trust will then consider the responses received from this consultation process before any decision is made.

Psychiatric Units

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many young people have been sent to psychiatric units for inpatient treatment in the last year, broken down by the (i) unit attended; and (ii) age of young person. (AQW 3076/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: During the financial year 2007/08, 48 young people aged under 14, and 120 aged between 14 and 18 were admitted by the HSC in Northern Ireland to psychiatric units. These figures are further broken down by admitting unit as below:

Unit	No. of Admissions	Age
Minnowburn, South Belfast	48	Under 14
Regional Adolescent Unit, Forster Green Hospital	43	14-18
Holywell Hospital	11	14-18
Fermanagh & Tyrone Hospital	8	14-18
Craigavon Hospital	10	14-18
Gransha Hospital	15	14-18
Ards Hospital	7	14-18
Downshire Hospital	1	14-18
Lagan Valley Hospital	2	14-18
Mater Hospital	7	14-18
Belfast City Hospital	3	14-18
Extra Contractual Referral (ECR) to UK facilities	13	14-18

While Trusts endeavour to admit children and young people to age appropriate facilities, there can be exceptional circumstances necessitating admission to an adult facility. Such admissions require a risk assessment to be carried out and admission must comply with Departmental guidance covering the admission of a young person to an adult ward. This requires such admissions to be located in a side ward with an appropriate observation regime.

The expansion of community based Child and Adolescent Mental Health Teams is helping to reduce inappropriate admissions to hospital by providing alternative treatments enabling young people to be supported at home.

Residential Tier 4 Treatment

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people under 18 years of age, with complex substance abuse problems, have been referred for residential tier 4 treatment in (i) England; (ii) Republic of Ireland; (iii) Scotland; and (iv) Wales, in the last year, providing details of (a) the unit they were referred to; (b) the reason for referral; and (c) cost associated with each referral. (AQW 3078/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: In Northern Ireland during 2007/08 there was only one referral for Tier 4 Residential Treatment for a person aged under 18. The patient was referred to the Ashlinn Adolescent Unit in the Republic of Ireland for manic depression and addictive disorder. The referral lasted 19 days at a cost of £10,374.

Health and Social Care Trusts: Hospitality Spend

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much each Health and Social Care Trust has spent on hospitality since May 2007. (AQW 3084/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Figures provided by the Health and Social Care Trusts are set out in the table below:

Health and Social Care Trust	1 May 2007 to 31 October 2008
Belfast	£45,845
Northern	£168,144
Northern Ireland Ambulance Service	£10,025
Southern	£128,000

Clinical Trials

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the cost of clinical trials in the Health Service, for the last three years. (AQW 3113/09)

Private Finance Initiative Projects

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the increase in costs of Private Finance Initiative projects. (AQW 3118/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I am not sure what increasing costs are being referred to in the question. However, in line with Treasury guidance, PFI has only been used as a procurement route in health infrastructure projects where they have demonstrated value for money and have been confirmed as being affordable.

Prader-Willi Syndrome

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people have Prader-Willi Syndrome, and what is their age profile. (AQW 3124/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Information on the number of people who have Prader-Willi Syndrome is not available.

Prader-Willi Syndrome

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) how many; and (ii) are there any plans for, residential homes for Prader-Willi Syndrome sufferers. (AQW 3130/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: There are no residential homes specifically for sufferers of Prader-Willi Syndrome in Northern Ireland and there are currently no plans to commission specialist residential homes for this condition.

The five Health and Social Care Trusts provide person centred care assessments which address the specific needs of all users of their services, including those with Prader-Willi Syndrome.

Prader-Willi Syndrome

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if his Department will ensure that appropriate care is available to all Prader-Willi Syndrome sufferers. (AQW 3131/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The five HSC Trusts provide a broad range of appropriate care and services to people with a diagnosis of Prader-Willi Syndrome and their family/carers. The Trusts focus on providing a person centred care assessment involving multi disciplinary health and social care staff, as appropriate. The assessment is dependent on the specific needs of the individual and the assessed needs of the family/carers.

Prader-Willi Syndrome

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, since funding is due to end in April 2009, will he continue to offer financial assistance to employ a Prader-Willi Syndrome Outreach Worker (AQW 3132/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: My Department currently does not provide funding for a Prader Willi Syndrome Outreach Worker.

In accordance with normal auditing arrangements all organisations which seek funding from my Department should submit applications through the normal Departmental funding application routes.

Walking and Cycling Initiatives

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) what role walking and cycling initiatives play in his Department's strategy to increase active lifestyles among children; and (ii) what steps his Department is taking to encourage this activity. (AQW 3138/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: (i) All physical activity, including walking and cycling, plays an important role in my Department's strategy to increase and promote active lifestyles among children. Regular physical activity contributes to maintaining a healthy weight which lowers the risk of a child developing weight problems and suffering related adverse health conditions during their lifetime.

(ii) I have established a cross-sectoral Obesity Prevention Steering Group (OPSG) which will advise on the delivery of over 70 key recommendations aimed at preventing and reducing childhood obesity identified in Fit Futures: Focus on Food, Activity and Young People. Associated advisory groups will provide advice on specific areas of work, one of which is the Promoting Physical Activity Advisory Group. This group, made up of a cross-section of representatives who specialise in physical activity issues will consider the wide range of associated activities including walking and cycling, and thus inform the development of the overarching obesity strategy to be developed through the OPSG.

Clinical Dress Codes

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to answer AQW 2531/09, if he is (i) maintaining regular spot-checks to ensure clinical dress codes for medical staff are being adhered to; and (ii) taking, or planning to take, disciplinary action against those Health and Social Care Trusts and individuals who are in breach of dress code policy. (AQW 3149/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: In February 2008 I announced that my department had issued a Regional Dress Code Policy as part of a package of measures to improve patient safety and reduce the spread of healthcare associated infection, and that all HSC Trusts were required to implement the Dress Code Policy with immediate effect.

I am firmly committed to a sustained approach, to promote the continued and effective implementation of measures which reduce the spread of healthcare associated infection, and my department therefore places great importance on monitoring compliance with these important measures.

For this reason my department requires that each HSC Trust must monitor compliance with the Regional Dress Code Policy, within their existent arrangements and report back on their individual compliance with the Regional Dress Code Policy to my department on an annual basis.

National Appeal Panel

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety the average time taken by the National Appeal Panel to process an appeal of an application to join the Pharmaceutical List, where that appeal was received (i) in 2007; and (ii) in 2008. (AQW 3155/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety:

- (i) The average waiting time for appeals received in 2007 was approximately 18 months, and that remains current.
- (ii) It is anticipated that by March 2009 the average waiting time for appeals received in 2008 will be approximately 12 months.

National Appeal Panel

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the current waiting period between receipt by the National Appeal Panel of an appeal to an application to join the Pharmaceutical List, and a decision on the appeal. (AQW 3157/09)

- (ii) It is anticipated that by March 2009 the average waiting time for appeals received in 2008 will be approximately 12 months.

Health Service: Cost of Reviews

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the total costs of all reviews on Health Service issues, announced by the Minister, since taking office. (AQW 3183/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Information on the total costs of all reviews on Health Service issues is not available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Health Service: Surgical Appliances

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the cost to the Health Service of surgical appliances, over the last three years. (AQW 3186/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Information on the specific costs of surgical appliances is not held.

Clinical Coders

Mr Burns asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many clinical coders are employed in the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust; and their respective pay bands. (AQW 3187/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: There are 21 clinical coders, both full-time and part-time, currently employed in the Belfast HSC Trust; 19 of these are in the Agenda for Change band 4 pay band and 2 are in the band 3 pay band.

General Pharmaceutical Council

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to give an update on the formation of the General Pharmaceutical Council, and to make a statement on the future of the regulation of pharmacy. (AQW 3188/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The General Pharmaceutical Council is due to be established in 2010. This work is being taken forward by an oversight group appointed by the Department of Health in England and known as the Pharmacy Regulation and Leadership Group (PRLOG).

I postponed taking a decision on whether pharmacy regulation in N Ireland should be carried out by the General Pharmaceutical Council until the Council has been established.

In the meantime the Pharmaceutical Society of Northern Ireland continues to regulate the pharmacy profession here and officials in my Department are updating the legislative framework under which this regulatory body operates.

Community Pharmacy Contracts

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to provide an update on the conclusion of the new Community Pharmacy contracts. (AQW 3189/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Department's community pharmacy contract negotiating team has been negotiating a new contract with the Pharmaceutical Contractors Committee (PCC), the representative body for community pharmacy, since April 2004. To date a total of 11 formal contract meetings have been held.

The main developments have been a jointly agreed framework for the new contract, preparation by the departmental team of detailed service specifications and standards for the services to be provided, a survey commissioned jointly by the Department and PCC into the costs of running pharmacies in Northern Ireland and some discussion on introducing certain services as the first part of a phased approach to implementing the new contract.

One of the key initiatives of the new contract is the provision of a Minor Ailments Scheme. The Department has recently had constructive discussions with PCC in relation to provision of this service.

Clearly the rate of progress on the new pharmacy contract has been disappointing; however, it is hoped that real progress is now possible. I see a key role for community pharmacy in providing a range of services for local people and I will be looking to the profession to return to the negotiation process to ensure that patients in Northern Ireland benefit from the services that the rest of the UK enjoy. I firmly believe that the new contract is the way ahead for community pharmacy and I believe that, with willingness on both sides, real progress can be made in the coming months.

Health and Social Care Trust Managers

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many managers there are per department, in each Health and Social Care Trust. (AQW 3209/09)

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what contribution his Department has made or will be making to the consultation by the UK Department of Work and Pensions on reservations to the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with disabilities. (AQW 3216/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: In January 2007, OFMdFM asked all departments, including DHSSPS, to scrutinize their legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check their compatibility with the provisions of the Convention to enable the UK Government to make an informed decision about ratification.

In September 2008, OFMdFM sought further confirmation and the department responded that given statutory duties and compliance with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, as amended, and Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998, the Convention was unlikely to impose any additional requirements. My Department has made no specific input with regard to reservations.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what preparations his Department has made for the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. (AQW 3219/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: In line with the standards set out in the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, my Department has completed a scrutiny of its legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check their compatibility with the provisions of the Convention. In addition, in July this year, my Department submitted a revised Disability Action Plan to the Equality Commission containing a series of planned actions for the period June 2007 to May 2010. In order to ensure that policies currently under development incorporate the standards set out in the Convention, establish equitable health care provision, promote positive attitudes and inclusion for people with disabilities, my Department is working with relevant stakeholders, including disability interests, and this process will be extended as appropriate to future policy development.

Learning Disabilities

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust area have a (i) learning disability; and (ii) severe learning disability.

(AQW 3278/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: For the financial years 2005/06 and 2006/07 total expenditure on caesarean sections in an inpatient setting in Northern Ireland, broken down by parliamentary constituency, was as follows:

Clostridium Difficile

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why some patients, suspected of contracting clostridium difficile in hospital and infection isolation wards, are refused re-entry to their original ward after testing negative for the infection. (AQW 3302/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Patients who have diarrhoeal symptoms are isolated as soon as they develop the symptoms. The diarrhoea may be caused by a number of pathogens (germs) therefore a negative C. difficile result by itself is inconclusive as the patient may have any number of other infectious causes for their diarrhoea.

The patient would therefore remain in isolation (which may be in a different ward) unless a non-infectious cause is identified and documented by medical staff in the patient's notes.

The patient should be able to move back to their original ward (provided there are beds available) when they are 48 – 72 hours free from diarrhoeal symptoms and have had at least one 'normal' stool.

Care Homes

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if the Northern Health and Social Care Trust is involved in a process that will lead to the (i) closure or 'repurposing' of five of the nine care homes managed by the Trust; and (ii) moving elderly and vulnerable residents to unfamiliar surroundings. (AQW 3309/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust (NHSCT) proposes to replace 5 of the 9 statutory residential homes within its area with supported living schemes or other support suitable to the needs of the residents. The NHSCT has not identified the locations of the 5 specific homes yet; however, Trust officials will discuss the proposals with the residents, their families and staff in the homes concerned, before a public consultation period commences on 7th January 2009. As part of their older people's strategy, "Living Well, Ageing Better", the NHSCT sought the views of older people, who expressed their wish to live at home for as long as possible with appropriate support. Supported living schemes such as Barnhalt Cottages, Carrickfergus, provide evidence that such schemes are successful and an appropriate alternative to residential care for many people. However, in taking decisions on the way forward, the wellbeing and future care of existing residents, as well as the outcomes of the consultation, will be of paramount importance in the Trust's deliberations.

Adult Training Centres

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people with a learning disability are attending adult training centres in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust area. (AQW 3310/09)

(AQW 3318/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety:

- (i) There has been no decision made to demolish the Wakehurst Building at the Belfast City Hospital. Therefore, the Belfast Trust is retaining the Cardiac Rehabilitation Unit in the Wakehurst building.
- (ii) In the last few years, £200,000 was spent on refurbishing the Wakehurst Building. This refurbishment was for redecoration and the upgrade of patient areas in the Cardiac Rehabilitation Unit.

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what are the voluntary groups that the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust works with to provide supported living for persons with learning disabilities, in the Lagan Valley area. (AQW 3321/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has advised me that it works with Positive Futures, Prospects, Autism Initiatives and Oaklee Housing Association in providing supported living for persons with learning disabilities in the Lagan Valley area.

Cardiovascular Services

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the budget for cardiac rehabilitation for (i) adults; and (ii) children, for the 2009/10 financial year; and for his assessment of this amount being appropriate for the delivery of necessary training in this area. (AQW 3327/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I have allocated £3 million to Health and Social Services Boards for expenditure on cardiovascular services in 2009/10.

Part of this allocation is to provide for improved community rehabilitation services so that all patients with heart disease who could benefit from rehabilitation have the opportunity to participate in a suitable programme. The breakdown of funding available to adults and children is not held.

It is the responsibility of the Health and Social Services Boards to plan and allocate resources to meet the needs of their local population, including those with heart disease. In determining their priorities for funding, Boards will take into account local circumstances, the strategic objectives established for the HSC and competing demands and pressures for a wide range of health and social care services generally. To date, Boards have not identified financial pressures for the delivery of necessary training in this area and consequently, my Department has not made any bids for additional funding.

Newtownards Minor Injuries Unit

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the savings to be made with the proposed closure of the Newtownards Minor Injuries Unit at weekends. (AQW 3331/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Weekend closure of the Ards MIU could deliver an estimated efficiency of £56k. This proposal is subject to public consultation and a final decision will be made in due course.

Nursing Posts

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the savings to be made through the reduction of 700 nursing posts. (AQW 3332/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Trust proposals that require any reduction in posts, including nursing posts, to allow the reconfiguration of services are currently subject to a public consultation process. Funding that may be released as a result of the efficiencies will be re-invested in service development.

Lagan Valley Obstetrics Services

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the savings to be made through the proposed closure of obstetrics services at Lagan Valley. (AQW 3334/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust's consultation on the proposal to transfer consultant-led inpatient obstetric services from Lagan Valley Hospital is currently ongoing and it would not be appropriate for me to provide an assessment of the proposal until that process is complete. The Trust has estimated that the savings associated with the proposal would be approximately £1 million.

Smoking Cessation

Mr Paisley Jnr asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many of the 7,681 people who claim to have ceased smoking this year indicated that tobacco duty had a positive effect on their decision. (AQW 3348/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The 7,681 figure quoted was the increase in the number of people who set a quit date through smoking cessation services during 2007/08 year, compared to the previous year. In 2007/08, which is the latest year for which statistics are available, the total number of people who set a quit date was actually 21,571.

Information on smoking cessation is collected via the four Health & Social Services Boards who submit data to the Department. There have been no indications from people who reported to Board cessation services that tobacco duty had any bearing on their individual decisions to quit, though a significant number cited cost as a factor.

Greenfield Residential Care Home

Mrs McGill asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the amount of funding that has gone into Greenfield Residential Care Home, Strabane for (i) physical improvement; and (ii) maintenance, in the last ten years. (AQW 3352/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Western Health and Social Care Trust have advised that over the past ten years £255,534 has been spent on maintenance and £274,839 on physical improvements for Greenfield Residential Home. The physical improvements included safety glazing, kitchen improvements, radiator replacement, installation of TV aerials, window anti-glare screens and various statutory improvements.

Budget Underspends

Ms Ní Chuilín asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) all budget under spends; and (ii) the bids that have yet to be met for which money is available. (AQW 3357/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety:

- (i) The Department has no budget under spends in 2008-09.
- (ii) Under the terms of Budget 2008-11 Settlement it was agreed that DHSSPS would have first call on available in year monies of up to £20m. To date the Department has received some £10m and has submitted a bid for a further £10m in the recent December Monitoring round.

Learning Disabilities

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action his Department is taking to ensure that learning disability in the Western Health and Social Care Trust is funded on a par with all Health and Social Care Trusts. (AQW 3358/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Department uses the Regional Capitation Formula to ensure that funds are distributed to commissioners on an equitable basis and in line with need. It is made up of a number of smaller formulae, one of which specifically deals with Learning Disability Services.

Ultimately however it is for commissioners to decide how these funds are spent with HSC Trusts.

Western Health and Social Care Trust

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps his Department is taking to address the severe shortage of (i) Speech Therapists; (ii) Occupational Therapists; (iii) Community Nurses; (iv) Social Workers; and (v) Domiciliary Care Nurses, in the Western Health and Social Care Trust area. (AQW 3359/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Western Trust currently has 9 vacant posts (headcount) over the professions listed above, (6.5WTE).

Recruitment and retention of staff is a matter for individual health and social care trusts and the Western Trust has assured me that they are taking appropriate measures to address the vacant posts.

Western Health and Social Care Trust

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many vacancies exist for (i) Speech Therapists; (ii) Occupational Therapists; (iii) Community Nurses; (iv) Social Workers; and (v) Domiciliary Care Nurses, in the Western Health and Social Care Trust area. (AQW 3360/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Information on the number of vacant posts for the above selected grades in the Western Health and Social Care Trust area is given in the table below.

TABLE 1: NUMBER OF CURRENT VACANCIES, BY GRADE, IN THE WESTERN HEALTH AND SOCIAL CARE TRUST AREA AS AT 9TH DECEMBER 2008.

Source: Western Health & Social Care Trust

Notes:

1. WTE = Whole-Time Equivalent.
2. A current vacancy is an unoccupied post, which at 9th December 2008 was vacant and which the organisation was actively trying to fill.
3. None of the above vacancies are long-term (i.e. Vacant for 3 or more months).

Learning Disabilities: Strabane

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people from the Strabane area with learning disabilities are living in other areas because there are no residential places available in Strabane. (AQW 3361/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: There are currently 10 adults with learning disabilities from the Strabane area who have been placed in Residential/Nursing Homes outside of the area.

The main reason for this is that suitable vacant places are not available within the area. Three of the clients affected required specialised placements to deal with challenging behaviour, and this type of accommodation is presently not available within Strabane. One client also preferred to be placed outside of the area.

Iona House, Strabane

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action his Department has taken to bring forward the replacement for Iona House in Strabane. (AQW 3362/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Western Health and Social Care Trust input to the recently completed Review of Capital Priorities identified Iona House as one of the priority schemes within its Learning Disability programme of care. However, the Trust also indicated that the capital funding required would be sought from the Department of Social Development.

Pulmonary Arterial Hypertension

Mr Durkan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people have been diagnosed with Pulmonary Arterial Hypertension, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust area. (AQW 3365/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The number of people diagnosed with Pulmonary Arterial Hypertension is not available.

Management and Administration Reductions

Mr Poots asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what percentage of the total budget has been identified as available through reductions and proposed reductions in management and administration. (AQW 3368/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: My Department will deliver £53m of management and administration savings from Health and Social Care organisations as a result of RPA.

These planned savings on management and administration equate to approximately 19.4% of the actual employer's payroll spend on these organisation's administration, clerical, board and director's salaries and wages in 2007/08.

Residential Home Closures

Mr Poots asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what consideration is given to the personal and individual needs of residents in care, and if this is given priority over financial savings when considering the closure of residential homes. (AQW 3369/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Health and Social Care are reforming and modernising the way in which older peoples services are delivered across Northern Ireland. This is in response to a growing elderly population who have made known their wish to be able to remain living at home in their own communities, with proper support and care packages, for as long as it is safe to do so. This desire to remain at home has resulted in a reduction in the number of admissions to residential care homes. Several Health and Social Care trusts are in the process of carrying out public consultations on proposals to reform and modernise older peoples services in their areas. However, in taking decisions on the way forward, the wellbeing and future care of existing residents, as well as the outcomes of the consultation, will be of paramount importance in the Trust's deliberations.

Gregg House, Lisburn

Mr Poots asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what role has his Department taken in supporting the residents of Gregg House in Lisburn. (AQW 3370/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Gregg House in Lisburn is a former sheltered housing facility, which has been re-designated as mainstream housing and leased to Northern Ireland Housing Executive. The residents therefore, are not placed in Gregg House on the basis of having a particular health or social care need. Subsequently, if a resident requires support or domiciliary care the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust carry out a full needs assessment and health and social services are provided on the basis of that assessment. There are currently 29 residents in Gregg House with 10 of these residents receiving a domiciliary care package.

Pork Sales

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what discussions have taken place with the Food Standards Agency in Great Britain to ensure the continued sale of pork products in Northern Ireland. (AQW 3375/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I am in close contact with the Food Standards Agency, which is a UK-wide non-Ministerial Government Department. The Food Standards Agency office in Belfast is providing the Minister with daily updates on the situation concerning dioxin and dioxin-like PCBs in pork and pork products from Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland. The FSANI is in continuous contact with the FSA office in London, availing of its scientific expertise to ensure that pork products in Northern Ireland pose no immediate risk to public health.

Erne Hospital

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many operations have been carried out at the Erne Hospital, Enniskillen, in each of the last five years. (AQW 3381/09)

Agency for Public Health and Well-Being

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much the new Agency for Public Health and Well Being will cost his Department, on an annual basis. (AQW 3382/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Department is currently completing a staff mapping exercise to identify staff moving to the Regional Agency for Public Health and Social Well-Being with effect from 1 April 2009, and a business case which will determine the costs of the new Agency. The annual cost of the Agency cannot be confirmed until these exercises are completed.

Nursing Vacancies: Omagh/Enniskillen

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many nursing vacancies currently exist in (i) Tyrone County Hospital, Omagh; and (ii) Erne Hospital, Enniskillen. (AQW 3383/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Information on the number of vacant posts for Nursing & Midwifery staff in the selected hospitals in the Western Health and Social Care Trust area is given below.

As at 30th September 2008, Tyrone County Hospital, Omagh, had 2 (2.0 Whole-Time Equivalent) current vacancies for Qualified Nursing Staff. A current vacancy is defined as an unoccupied post, which at 30th September 2008 was vacant and which the organisation was actively trying to fill. Neither of these vacancies were long-term (i.e. vacant for 3 or more months).

As at 30th September 2008, Erne Hospital, Enniskillen, had 3 (2.5 Whole-Time Equivalent) current vacancies for Qualified Nursing Staff. None of these vacancies were long-term.

There were no vacancies for Nurse Support Staff in either hospital.

Pharmaceutical Product Suppliers

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans his Department has to limit the number of suppliers of pharmaceutical product. (AQW 3387/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The pharmaceutical clinical effectiveness programme (PCEP) has promoted a rationalised and transparent approach to the selection of pharmaceutical products from those suppliers who can provide the highest standard of evidence for the quality, safety and cost-effectiveness of their products.

Regional contracts have been established with selected suppliers identified through EU tendering mechanisms for influenza vaccinations, wound care products and hospital generic medicines. These arrangements have delivered demonstrable improvements in quality and risk management of services in addition to delivering significant cash efficiencies for reinvestment in HSC.

You will also be aware that over the CSR 2008-11 period, I have set challenging targets to improve generic dispensing rates in order to achieve greater convergence with equivalent generic dispensing rates across the rest of the UK. With these objectives in mind, I will be considering the extension of the above PCE procurement approach to generic medicines for the primary care sector. I expect to review the findings of this latter exercise by the end of 2008 before any options for implementation are considered.

‘Love for Life’

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the total funding awarded to ‘Love for Life’ by (i) the Northern Health and Social Services Board; and (ii) the Northern Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last five years. (AQW 3388/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Funding to Love for Life has been awarded by (i) the Northern Health and Social Services Board; and (ii) the Northern Health and Social Care Trust for each of the last 5 years as follows:

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much money his Department has provided to learning disability in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust area, in each of the last five years. (AQW 3390/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: My Department makes funding allocations to Health and Social Services Boards rather than Health and Social Care Trusts, therefore the information is not available in the format requested. However, Trust expenditure costs for learning disability services are held centrally. The latest figures my Department holds are for the financial year 2007/08. The table below provides the latest information available on the total amount of money spent by the Northern Health and Social Care Trust on learning disability between 2003/04 and 2007/08.

Northern HSC Trust Total Learning Disability Expenditure 2003/04 to 2007/08

Dampness in Homes

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to list the public health effects of a house with (i) damp; and (ii) serious condensation. (AQW 3396/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The World Health Organisation has concluded that the strongest evidence exists for the association of dampness in homes with cough, wheeze and asthma. Other illnesses associated with exposure to indoor damp include bronchial obstruction, bronchitis, persistent allergic rhinitis and eczema. It has been suggested that dampness can also affect mental health, for example, by causing stress to people worried about high heating bills and the destruction of belongings.

Health and Social Care Trusts

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans have the Health and Social Care Trusts to become more energy efficient. (AQW 3402/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Currently, all Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts are working toward achieving targets for energy efficiency contained in EnCO2de, the primary guidance on energy efficiency in both new and existing HSS Board facilities, issued on 30 May 2006.

Further plans for Health and Social Care bodies to become more energy efficient are contained in the draft Action Plan for Sustainable Operations on the Health and Social Care Estate. The Action Plan running from 2009 to 2011 covers 6 topic areas and will be issued for consultation in the near future.

Health and Social Services Board

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans have the Health and Social Services Board to become more energy efficient. (AQW 3403/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Currently, all Health and Social Services (HSS) Boards are working toward achieving targets for energy efficiency contained in EnCO2de, the primary guidance on energy efficiency in both new and existing HSS Board facilities, issued on 30 May 2006.

Further plans for Health and Social Care bodies to become more energy efficient are contained in the draft Action Plan for Sustainable Operations on the Health and Social Care Estate. ## Energy Efficiency

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans his Department has to become more energy efficient. (AQW 3404/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Responsibility for the management, including energy efficiency, of the buildings occupied by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety rests with the Department of Finance and Personnel and private landlords.

However, plans for the DHSSPS to become more energy efficient in areas within its influence are contained in the DHSSPS Action Plan for Sustainable Operations on the Government Estate 2006 -2008 and is available on line at http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/dhssps\_green\_sd\_action\_plan.pdf

The Action Plan covers the period from 2006 to 2008 and it is currently under review.

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: In 2006/07, there were 348 admissions to the Mid Ulster Hospital where an alcohol related diagnosis was recorded.

Deaths and discharges are used as an approximation of admissions. These figures should not be used to denote individuals as a person may be admitted to hospital more than once in a year.

Efficiency Savings

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what policies and practices in his Department have changed in delivering the 3% efficiency savings required by the 2008-11 Budget. (AQW 3407/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Trusts and other organisations must produce efficiency proposals that are in line with existing policies and the Department's strategic direction and are deliverable alongside service modernisation. This includes implementing policies and practices, for example, to increase daycase rates, to decrease inappropriate length of stay, to improve procurement, to treat people in the community instead of hospital where that is the best care for them, to improve preventative measures, to extend generic prescribing of drugs and reduce administration.

Carers

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people have (i) family members; and (ii) Trust appointed carers to look after them, in each constituency, in each of the last two years. (AQW 3412/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I can confirm that no final decision has been made on the closure of Loch Cuan House. The proposals are now subject of a planning process, the current stage of which is a full public consultation period, which has been running from November 20 2008 and continues until February 12 2009. The South Eastern Trust are making significant efforts to engage with all interested parties through a series of meetings with residents in Loch Cuan and their families, and a public meeting was held in the Strangford Arms Hotel on December 8 2008. The Trust also proposes to engage with all political parties and Ards District Council during the consultation period. No decision will be taken by the Trust until such times as it has given full and proper consideration to the response to the public consultation.

(AQW 3415/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I can confirm that no final decision has been made on the closure of Loch Cuan House. The proposals are now subject of a planning process, the current stage of which is a full public consultation period, which has been running from November 20 2008 and continues until February 12 2009. The South Eastern Trust are making significant efforts to engage with all interested parties through a series of meetings with residents in Loch Cuan and their families, and a public meeting was held in the Strangford Arms Hotel on December 8 2008. (AQW 3422/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The number of physical and verbal attacks over the previous two years.

* Figures are collected by the Department on a six monthly basis. The figures for 2008/2009 reflect the period from 1st April 2008 to 30 September 2008

Prosecution statistics collected by the Public Prosecution Service do not distinguish healthcare workers as a specific category. Trusts have Zero Tolerance policies in place that indicate that support will be provided by line management following the report of an assault. Similar arrangements are in place to support staff in the event that a prosecution is appropriate.

Mental-Health Promotion Strategy

Ms Anderson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if his Department plans to amalgamate the existing suicide strategy within the new Mental Health Promotion Strategy, and if so (i) to outline his assessment of the impact of this measure with reference to the World Health Organisation recommendations on suicide prevention; and (ii) to detail any consultations his Department held with families bereaved by suicide and other stakeholders prior to making this decision. (AQW 3428/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Department is currently revising its strategy for the promotion of mental health. I have not made a decision to amalgamate the Protect Life strategy with any future promoting mental health strategy, but I recognise that interventions that improve the levels of mental wellbeing in the population have the potential to contribute significantly to reducing the risk of suicide.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people suffer from (i) Myalgic Encephalomyelitis, (ii) Fibromyalgia and (iii) Chronic Fatigue Syndrome. (AQW 3429/09)

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why all works at the acute hospital for the South West in Enniskillen have stopped. (AQW 3453/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Work on the site for the new South West acute hospital has not stopped. In September 2006 my Department approved the OBC2 for the acute hospital in Enniskillen. This gave approval for enabling works to commence on the site of the new hospital. These works were completed in August this year at a cost of £5.3 million. Work on the construction phase, including the foundations, of the new hospital will commence in Spring 2009.

Acute Hospital for the South-West in Enniskillen

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what help is available for families caring for a Myalgic Encephalomyelitis sufferer at home. (AQW 3455/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: People with Myalgic Encephalomyelitis (ME) and their families are supported through access to a range of health and social care services which include respite care, domiciliary care, occupational therapy, physiotherapy, mental health services, nursing and social work. Direct Payments are also promoted by Health & Social Care Trusts as a means by which traditional domiciliary care resources can be utilised in a more flexible, supportive and person centred manner.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what provision his Department has in place to diagnose and offer treatment options for patients with Myalgic Encephalomyelitis. (AQW 3456/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: On 31 January 2008, the Department officially endorsed the NICE guideline on the diagnosis and management of Myalgic Encephalomyelitis (ME) / Chronic Fatigue Syndrome (CFS) in adults and children as applicable to Northern Ireland. This guideline states that ME / CFS cannot be diagnosed by any test currently available, but that clinicians should make a diagnosis following the exclusion of other known causes for the symptoms, and where symptoms are causing functional impairment.

A range of treatment and support options are available for people with ME. Patient care is for the most part provided by general practitioners. Patients may also access other disciplines of the HSC including community care and support, neurology services and mental health services which can provide treatment like cognitive behaviour therapy, which is thought to help manage the illness.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much funding his Department has provided for biomedical research into Myalgic Encephalomyelitis, in each of the last five years. (AQW 3457/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Department has not provided any funding for biomedical research into Myalgic Encephalomyelitis in the last five years.

Pioneering research into diseases like Myalgic Encephalomyelitis needs to be undertaken in specialised centres of excellence which can best contribute to a global research effort.

Hospital Admissions

Mr Burns asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of admissions to hospitals for injuries caused by falls related to the cold weather, in the month of December 2008. (AQW 3477/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Information is not available on the number of admissions to hospitals for injuries caused by falls related to the cold weather, in the month of December 2008.

Health Service Workers

Mr Burns asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of Health Service workers who are owed pay due to errors. (AQW 3479/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: My Department does not hold this information. Once an error in pay comes to light HSC employers make every effort to rectify that error as soon as possible.

Interface Violence

Mr A Maskey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the programmes his Department funds in relation to direct intervention and prevention of interface violence; and (ii) the cost of these programmes. (AQW 3487/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: My Department does not provide such direct funding.

Reviews Announced by Minister

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many reviews he has announced since coming into office. (AQW 3488/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I have announced 14 reviews since taking up office in May 2007. I have also jointly announced a review with the DSD Minister on Support Provisions for Carers.

Departmental Public Appointments

Ms Purvis asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) to list all public appointments (a) filled by his Department and (b) still outstanding; (ii) on what grounds were some appointments not made; (iii) to assess the process adopted for appointments including the OPCA guidance; and (iv) his plans for ensuring a more efficient application of the procedures. (AQW 3495/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety:

- (i) (a) The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety has made a total of 377 public Appointments over the last three financial years. The attached table at Annex A details all the public Appointments made by my Department during each of the last three financial years.

- (ii) The majority of the vacancies (29 in total) are within organisations which will cease to exist from 1 April 2009, due the Review of Public Administration. These organisations include the four Health and Social Services (HSS) Boards; HSS Councils; HCS Trusts; the Health Promotion Agency and the Mental Health Commission. To that end, the Department decided that no new public appointments would be made to these organisations in the interim period.

There is currently one vacancy in the NI Ambulance Service Health and Social Care Trust and the Department is currently running an appointment competition to fill the vacancy. In addition, there are two vacancies in the NI Practice & Education Council for Nursing & Midwifery Council. The Department intends to run a competition to fill these two vacancies in the New Year. Both of these organisations are unaffected by RPA.

- (iii) All appointments made to DHSSPS public bodies are regulated by the Commissioner for Public Appointments for Northern Ireland, and as such are made in accordance with the Code of Practice issued by the Commissioner's office.

The Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety adheres to the principles and procedures as set out in the Commissioner's Code of Practice and ensures that all recommendations contained in the audit report are implemented to ensure more efficient application of the appointment procedures.

GCSEs

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what percentage of children in care, who are in the age range to sit examinations, achieved; (i) one or more GCSEs at grade C or above; (ii) two or more GCSEs at grade C or above; (iii) three or more GCSEs at grade C or above; (iv) four or more GCSEs at grade C or above; and (v) five or more GCSEs at grade C or above, in each of the last five years. (AQW 3496/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The information is not available in the format requested.

Children in Care

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many children have gone missing from care in each of the last five years, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust. (AQW 3498/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The information requested is not available in the format requested, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Pork Industry

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assessment he has made of scientific advice in the news media that dioxins are not harmful and that the consumption of pork at meal times over a lengthy period would not lead to health problems. (AQW 3501/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Food Standards Agency provides me with scientific advice and appropriate risk assessment on the effects on human health in relation to the consumption of food.

The FSA is a science and evidence based organisation, and in addition to its own scientific expertise, the Agency takes account of the European Food Safety Authority (EFSA) assessments.

Scientific evidence shows that, concerning this single incident, consumption of even a large amount of contaminated pork is not likely to lead to adverse health effects.

Ravara House

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what scoring the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust used to propose the closure of Ravara House in Bangor. (AQW 3510/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The scoring system used by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust in its proposal to close Ravara House is detailed in the consultation document available on the Trust's website: <<http://www.setrust.hscni.net>> and clicking on 'Involving You'.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many people have been diagnosed and currently suffering from Myalgic Encephalomyelitis in the Western Health and Social Care Trust area. (AQW 3512/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Information is not available on how many people have been diagnosed and are currently suffering from Myalgic Encephalomyelitis.

Public Consultations

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the cost of all public consultations undertaken on health issues, in the last three years. (AQW 3527/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The latest information held by my department on the cost of all public consultations in the last three years was provided to the Member in AQW 6118/08.

Equality Impact Assessments

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to breakdown the cost of all equality impact assessments carried out within the Health Service, in the last three years. (AQW 3529/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Information on the breakdown of the costs of all Equality Impact Assessments carried out across the Health Service is not maintained nor readily available.

Cleft Palate

Mr Shannon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the cost for surgery for those born with a cleft palate, broken down by parliamentary constituency, in each of the last two years. (AQW 3544/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The last two financial years for which costs are available are 2005/06 and 2006/07. For the financial years 2005/06 and 2006/07 total expenditure on operations for the correction of a cleft palate in an inpatient setting in Northern Ireland, broken down by parliamentary constituency, was as follows:

Source: Trust Annual Costing Returns and Hospital Inpatient System

A waiting list initiative was carried out during 2006/07 which led to an increase in activity in this year.

Minor Ailments Scheme

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what developments have been made on the Minor Ailments Scheme following its suspension in July 2008. (AQW 3551/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Minor Ailments Scheme was not suspended but was enhanced in August 2008 to provide a greater range of services to patients.

Following negotiations I met with the Pharmaceutical Contractors Committee on 19 November and am pleased to report that a negotiated settlement has been agreed. I intend to issue a statement outlining the terms of a new service shortly.

Car Parking Charges

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline his plans for potential car parking charges at the Causeway Hospital. (AQW 3553/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The decision to apply car park charging and the level of charging to be applied remains with the individual discretion of each Trust. This allows each Trust to strike a reasonable balance between local needs and the costs of providing car parking facilities. The provision and management of car parking at the Causeway Hospital is therefore an operational matter for the Northern Trust, not the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety.

Unattended Child in Care

Mr McClarty asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action he is taking to investigate why a child was left behind under the care of social services at a Coleraine restaurant in early December 2008. (AQW 3557/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: This is a very regrettable incident which the Western Health and Social Care Trust is currently investigating. The Trust has advised that they will consider the circumstances of the incident under their normal disciplinary procedures before deciding what action will be taken. My Department will wish to consider the outcome of the Trust's investigations to ensure that lessons learned are shared across all five Trust areas.

Speech and Language Therapy

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what public health initiatives are being taken to address the increasing number of children entering school with significant speech and language difficulties. (AQW 3579/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: My Department published the Health for All Children Report in October 2006. This is a guide for health professionals in supporting children and young people's health and development in the early years and beyond. The Report sets out a screening programme for children from the antenatal period to four years and beyond.

Screening plays a vital role in the diagnosis of a speech and language difficulty, with the premise that preventative health care can be administered as soon as the difficulty is detected. Speech & language therapists work in partnership with health visitors to help ensure early identification of speech and language problems. Children suspected of having special education needs may be referred to a community paediatrician or another relevant health professional.

Speech and Language Therapy

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what Speech and Language Therapy (SLT) is available for (i) young people; and (ii) adults, with speech, language and communications difficulties, in the justice system. (AQW 3580/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: While there is no dedicated provision for young people or adults with speech, language or communication difficulties within the juvenile or adult justice system, Her Majesty's Prisons may request such services from the local Health and Social Care Trust after a clinical assessment of the individual's need has been made. Speech & Language Therapy services may then be provided by a community-based team.

Augmentative and Alternative Communications (AAC)

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps are being taken to develop a regional strategy for Augmentative and Alternative Communications (AAC) for (i) assessment of appropriate systems; (ii) funding of recommended AAC equipment; and (iii) support for clients and patients learning and using AAC systems. (AQW 3581/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Criteria for access to the regional Communication Advice Centre (CAC) within the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust (BHSCT) are being developed. BHSCT has initiated a discussion with Speech and Language Therapy (SLT) managers within the Health and Social Care Trusts to examine what Augmentative and Alternative Communications (AAC) services exist across Northern Ireland. Representatives from SLT services will meet in early 2009 to map currently available AAC assessment and support services in both the CAC and in local Trusts.

The CAC does not fund devices for individual long term use. Loan of equipment may be arranged as part of the assessment procedure. When an appropriate system has been identified the details are sent to the Speech & Language Therapy (SLT) manager in the referring Trust.

The CAC service recognises the need to support users, families, and Speech and Language Therapists during assessment and in the long term use of AAC systems. The CAC has planned a programme of SLT training in 2009 to support local SLT services.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr Newton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many staff are dedicated to providing treatment to persons suffering from Chronic Fatigue Syndrome/Myalgic Encephalomyelitis, broken down by Health and Social Services Board area. (AQW 3621/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Belfast Health and Social Care Trust provide a consultant-led specialist service for Chronic Fatigue Syndrome/Myalgic Encephalomyelitis. This service currently has one (0.5 Whole-Time Equivalent) person employed solely to provide Chronic Fatigue Syndrome/ Myalgic Encephalomyelitis services. At this time referrals to this service are from the Belfast area only.

As Chronic Fatigue Syndrome/ Myalgic Encephalomyelitis may involve a range of symptoms and disabilities, people suffering from this condition may be treated by a number of different health and social care professionals, including GPs, community care, neurology, mental health and allied health professionals. These staff are not employed solely to provide services to people with Chronic Fatigue Syndrome/ Myalgic Encephalomyelitis and it is not possible to identify separately the proportion of their time spent treating patients with this individual condition.

Medical Cards

Mr O'Dowd asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when an answer to AQW 1981/09 will be provided. (AQW 3624/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The member will receive an answer to AQW 1981/09 when the information requested is available.

December Monitoring Round

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how he intends to use the extra £5m announced for his Department in the December monitoring round. (AQW 3645/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety:

- (i) Under the terms of Budget 2008-11 Settlement it was agreed that DHSSPS would have first call on available in year monies of up to £20m. On the basis of this commitment, the Department drew in its initial spending plans assuming these monies would be made available to bring forward improvements to cardiac, elective and long term care services and enhance services to children.
- (ii) The additional £5m awarded in December means that to date DHSSPS has received some £15m of the promised £20m. The Department will bid for the remaining balance in the February monitoring round to ensure the requisite resources are available to meet existing commitments.

Obesity

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps he is taking to reduce the prevalence of obesity. (AQW 3654/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Tackling obesity in Northern Ireland is a high priority for my Department. To this end I have established a cross-sectoral Obesity Prevention Steering Group (OPSG) with responsibility for taking forward the recommendations in the Fit Futures Implementation Plan. During the coming year we shall be developing a life course approach to improve participation in physical activity, increasing awareness of healthy eating and promoting healthy weight within an over-arching Obesity Strategic Framework.

Preventing the rise of obesity will have a positive impact on the health of our communities in the future and whilst I acknowledge appropriate clinical interventions have a role to play, I believe we need to place particular emphasis on the prevention of obesity which can help reduce related health issues such as diabetes, cancer and heart disease.

Hospital Appointments

Mr Craig asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the procedures, including timeframes, for hospitals to cancel appointments and provide new appointment dates. (AQW 3658/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I refer you to the answer I gave to AQW 4307/08 on 5 March 2008.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Northern Ireland Water

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the proposed sea outfall being of sufficient length to disperse effluent away from the still waters of Cloughfin Bay. (AQW 2724/09)

The Minister for Regional Development (Mr C Murphy): I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that it is currently liaising with the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) regarding the proposal to provide appropriate treatment of wastewater from Whitehead, Ballycarry and Ballystrudder and the discharge of effluent through a sea outfall pipe at Cloughfin Bay. Alternative treatment solutions are currently being modelled in order to provide satisfactory dilution and dispersion of effluent in the Irish Sea and along the coast, including Cloughfin Bay. The proposal will remove existing continuous discharges in these areas and lead to an improvement in water quality in Belfast and Larne Loughs and off the coastline north of Whitehead.

NIEA will assess the results of the modelling and will take into account any impact on puffin feeding grounds and the habitat that supports sand eels in its consideration for the granting of a Food & Environment Protection Act license and consent to discharge.

Northern Ireland Water

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the environmental damage of Northern Ireland Water's sewage disposal proposals on initiatives to enhance the tourist potential of the (i) Gobbins; and (ii) adjacent areas of Larne and Belfast Loughs. (AQW 2726/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that it is currently liaising with the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) regarding the proposal to provide appropriate treatment of wastewater from Whitehead, Ballycarry and Ballystrudder and the discharge of effluent through a sea outfall pipe at Cloughfin Bay. Alternative treatment solutions are currently being modelled in order to provide satisfactory dilution and dispersion of effluent in the Irish Sea and along the coast, including Cloughfin Bay. NIEA will assess the results of the modelling and will take into account any impact on puffin feeding grounds and the habitat that supports sand eels in its consideration for the granting of a Food & Environment Protection Act license and consent to discharge.

Northern Ireland Water

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development if he will revisit the current proposals for sewage and waste water treatment for the areas including (i) Whitehead; (ii) Ballystrudder; and (iii) Ballycarry, given the environmental sensitivities of Larne Lough and the Gobbins. (AQW 2727/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that it is currently liaising with the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) regarding the proposal to provide appropriate treatment of wastewater from Whitehead, Ballycarry and Ballystrudder and the discharge of effluent through a sea outfall pipe at Cloughfin Bay. Alternative treatment solutions are currently being modelled in order to provide satisfactory dilution and dispersion of effluent in the Irish Sea and along the coast, including Cloughfin Bay. The proposal will remove existing continuous discharges in these areas and lead to an improvement in water quality in Belfast and Larne Loughs and off the coastline north of Whitehead.

NIEA will assess the results of the modelling and will take into account any impact on puffin feeding grounds and the habitat that supports sand eels in its consideration for the granting of a Food & Environment Protection Act license and consent to discharge.

Northern Ireland Water

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development if the current proposal to provide a sewage outfall pipe, located at Cloughfin Bay, will also ensure that no damage will come to the (i) puffin feeding grounds; and (ii) the habitat that supports sand eels. (AQW 2728/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that it is currently liaising with the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) regarding the proposal to provide appropriate treatment of wastewater from Whitehead, Ballycarry and Ballystrudder and the discharge of effluent through a sea outfall pipe at Cloughfin Bay. Alternative treatment solutions are currently being modelled in order to provide satisfactory dilution and dispersion of effluent in the Irish Sea and along the coast, including Cloughfin Bay. NIEA will assess the results of the modelling and will take into account any impact on puffin feeding grounds and the habitat that supports sand eels in its consideration for the granting of a Food & Environment Protection Act license and consent to discharge.

Belfast Metro Bus Drivers

Mr Wells asked the Minister for Regional Development the length of time for meal breaks allocated to Belfast Metro bus drivers. (AQW 2872/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: Translink has advised me that the length of meal breaks for a Metro bus driver can vary as a result of scheduling but the minimum break is 30 minutes.

Bus Tickets

Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans he has to meet with (i) the Minister for Transport and the Marine; and (ii) representatives from Bus Éireann; to ensure that customers living in Northern Ireland can book bus tickets online at the same price available to customers living in the Republic of Ireland. (AQW 2908/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have no plans at present to meet either with Ministerial counterparts in the South or with Bus Éireann to discuss this matter. I am informed that people living in the North may buy tickets online from Bus Éireann for the same price in Euro as people in the South.

Northern Ireland Water

Mr P J Bradley asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the commencement of anti-flooding measures at Carrickdesland, Warrenpoint, as agreed at a meeting between the residents and NI Water that was held on site on 11 September 2008. (AQW 3044/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that it has agreed to fund the upgrading of the storm drainage outlet that was contributing to the flooding. Replacement of the first section of pipework will commence as soon as the contractor has all of the necessary fittings and it is expected it will be completed before the Christmas holidays. It has not yet been possible to agree terms with the owner of the land through which the second section of pipe passes and it may be necessary to serve a notice on the landowner to obtain access to permit replacement of the pipe.

Road Safety

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline what action his Department is taking to ensure that there is proper and effective road safety measures outside schools. (AQW 3098/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has been very active in addressing road safety concerns around schools and continues to develop and implement initiatives to further reduce the number of children involved in accidents at all locations.

Roads Service works closely with the Department of Education and other Departments on the Safer Routes to School Programme. The Programme seeks to make the school journeys safer and more sustainable through a range of road engineering measures outside schools, so that drivers are made aware of the presence of children. These measures include flashing warning signs, pedestrian facilities, bus bays and enhanced road markings. Schools that encourage school children to walk or cycle to school, will have additional safety measures, such as traffic calming, to improve the safety for school journeys.

In addition, you may be aware that Roads Service is currently piloting variable speed limit schemes at two schools. Roads Service will continue to monitor and assess these pilot schemes to determine their effectiveness in reducing traffic speeds at schools, before consideration is given to introducing a more widespread programme.

I can also advise that a review of our whole approach to speed management has been completed. This incorporated addressing speed limits outside schools and full public consultation of the policy proposals will be sought very shortly.

In response to your question, Minister Wilson has advised that his Department's Road Safety Education Officers (RSEOs) promote and deliver road safety education for children and young people, in line with Best Practice Guidelines. The guidelines are based on research which recommends that road safety education of children and young people is best carried out by professional teachers on a regular structured basis with RSEOs providing appropriate teaching resources, expertise, teacher training and support.

In line with Best Practice, the Department of the Environment provides teaching materials and resources to schools. RSEOs meet regularly with teachers and, when appropriate, deliver interactive road safety sessions to supplement and reinforce the teacher's work. A range of specific road safety initiatives are delivered in schools targeted at appropriate age groups and a road safety education website has also been developed.

Noise Monitoring

Mr Newton asked the Minister for Regional Development if (i) the monitoring of noise and other quality of life matters is constantly being carried out; and (ii) other monitoring information collected by other statutory bodies, such as DHSSPS and Belfast City Council is made available to his Department. (AQW 3106/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I can advise that my Department provides the Department of the Environment with strategic noise mapping for road noise. Noise contour monitoring is also carried out by Belfast City Airport and the results are submitted to my Department for consideration, in the application of its responsibilities under Article 22 of the Airports (Northern Ireland) Order 1994.

My Department does monitor the contribution of transportation to society through the Regional Transportation Strategy (RTS) monitoring report, which includes road safety, accessibility and performance targets Minister Wilson has advised that while his Department of the Environment does not monitor noise, it does record the number of noise complaints that all twenty six District Councils receive. These are published by the Department of the Environment annually, in the form of the Noise Complaint Statistics for Northern Ireland report. These reports are available to view at http://www.doeni.gov.uk/index/protect\_the\_environment/local\_environmental\_issues/noise/complaint\_statistics\_for\_ni.htm.

Similarly, the Department of the Environment does not monitor air quality, but oversees the review and assessment of air quality carried out by District Councils. An annual Air Quality Monitoring Summary Report is issued each year by that Department. The Chief Environmental Health Officers Group and District Councils assist the report's publication by providing air quality monitoring data. These reports are available to view via the dedicated NI Air Quality web site at <http://www.airqualityni.co.uk/>

I can confirm that my Department has access to statistics prepared by other Departments and statutory bodies that reflect quality of life issues.

George Best Belfast City Airport

Mr Newton asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the potential benefits of an extension to the George Best, Belfast City Airport, to the economy. (AQW 3123/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have not carried out such an assessment but I am keen to see the airports of the North develop and increase business, within any constraints that the planning system may impose to limit local environmental disbenefits. As with the other commercial airports, Belfast City Airport is an important transport gateway to help growth of the local economy.

Roads Service

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development when funding will be made available to carry out urgent repairs to roads and footpaths in Coleshill, Enniskillen. (AQW 3126/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that the roads and footpaths in Coleshill, Enniskillen, are not considered to be in need of urgent repairs. The maintenance and safety needs are considered to be adequately met by the cyclic inspection and repair arrangements currently in place, in accordance with the provisions of my Department's Road Maintenance Standards.

However, Roads Service officials have been liaising with local residents in the area, and hope to include some footpath resurfacing in Coleshill Crescent in future programmes.

School Walking and Cycling Initiative

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) for an assessment of the school walking and cycling initiative; and (ii) to detail the role that this plays in his Department's strategy to reduce traffic congestion. (AQW 3139/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service is involved in promoting walking and cycling to school through its Travelwise NI Safer Routes to Schools Programme. Since launching in 2004, Travelwise NI and its partners have worked in 151 schools, involving over 45,000 pupils and their parents, to promote walking, cycling and the greater use of public transport for the journey to school. The programme is assisted by the provision of safety zones outside schools and the installation of cycle shelters.

Roads Service's most recent evaluation of the Safer Routes to School initiative is for the academic year 2007/08. Of the schools that participated in the survey, 50% have indicated that they have observed more children walking to and from school. In addition, approximately 41,000 participants took part in last year's annual 'Walk to School Week' event.

Roads Service is currently introducing a new approach to Safer Routes to Schools surveying, which will allow for a more detailed assessment of any change in children's mode of travel.

The Travelwise NI Safer Routes to School Programme has been developed to support the objectives of the Regional Transportation Strategy, which aims to provide a safe, modern and sustainable transportation network here. Roads Service has promoted the Safer Routes to Schools initiative, since 2004. This initiative aims to tackle the problems caused by the 'School Run' by car, by raising awareness of the major issues related to increasing congestion, including the detrimental impact on road safety, health and the environment through the promotion of alternative, more sustainable modes of travel including walking and cycling for the journey to and from school.

Rural Safe Routes to School Project

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail his Department's plans to develop the Rural Safe Routes to School project in conjunction with local schools.[R] (AQW 3140/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I can advise the Member that the Rural Safer Routes to Schools project is led by the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development. However, my Department is responsible for rolling out a range of measures under the initiative. The Rural Safer Routes to Schools initiative promotes sustainable travel for the rural school run, with a total of 18 rural primary schools selected to participate in the initiative across the North. The Rural Safer Routes to Schools initiative has resulted in a 27% reduction in car journeys to and from school, while walking and cycling has increased by 58%.

My Department has no plans to further develop this project at this time.

Northern Ireland Water

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister for Regional Development what steps he is taking to address the mal odour problem at Seaport Avenue, Portballintrae. (AQW 3147/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that it has sealed all the manholes in the Seaport Avenue area and is proposing to install anti-flood devices on connections to the public sewer. It is expected that these measures will resolve the malodour problem in the area and NIW will continue to monitor the situation closely.

George Best Belfast City Airport

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister for Regional Development, in light of the Environmental Noise Directive, what plans he has to submit evidence on the planning application for the expansion of the runway at George Best Belfast City Airport; and for his assessment of a public inquiry to consider this issue. (AQW 3152/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department has no statutory responsibilities in relation to noise management measures proposed by George Best Belfast City Airport under the requirements of the Environmental Noise Directive.

My Department is being consulted about the planning application for the expansion of the runway and will respond in relation to matters that are its responsibility. Whether a public inquiry should be held is a matter for the Department of the Environment.

Roads Service

Mr Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail all the work being carried out by Roads Service and Northern Ireland Water, in the South Antrim constituency, during December 2008. (AQW 3154/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that during December 2008 work will continue on the M2 Improvement Scheme between Sandyknowes and Greencastle junctions. During this time the new traffic signals for the bus gate at the bottom of the M2 city-bound off-slip at Sandyknowes Junction will be activated.

Resurfacing on Ballytromery Road, Crumlin will be completed during December 2008 and structural repairs will also be undertaken to Templepatrick Bridge over the M2.

Routine maintenance work will continue to be undertaken on roads in the South Antrim constituency throughout this period.

I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that in the South Antrim constituency during December 2008 the following works are being carried out:

Location	Type Of Works
Castle Road, Antrim	Placing of watermain to serve Randalstown.
Clonkeen, Randalstown	Replacement of watermain.
Rashee Service Reservoir	Reservoir rehabilitation.
Antrim & Newtownabbey	Service reservoir enhanced security work – Divisional sites.
Hightown Road, Newtownabbey	Replacement of watermain.
Hydepark Service Reservoir	Replacement of joints.
Ballyvaston Service Reservoir	Reservoir rehabilitation.

Location	Type Of Works
Antrim Road, Aldergrove	Foul sewer upgrade.
Milltown Wastewater Treatment Works, Antrim	Upgrade of existing works.
Various small wastewater treatment works	Priority upgrades.

Official Engagements

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development how many official engagements (i) he has carried out; and (ii) he has travelled to using (a) the Ministerial car; and (b) public transport since May 2007. (AQW 3175/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have carried out 118 official engagements in the period 8 May 2007 to 3 December 2008. I have travelled to 102 of the engagements using the Ministerial car. Public transport was used to travel to 12 engagements and I walked to the other four.

Footway Reconstruction Schemes

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans his Department has to re-pave any areas of the North Down constituency, in the next three years. (AQW 3180/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I can confirm that my Department's Roads Service has programmed footway reconstruction schemes at the following locations, within the North Down Constituency, to be carried out in the next three years.

Financial year 2009/10

- East Circular Road, Bangor
- Donaghadee Road, Bangor

Financial year 2010/11

- Beverley Drive, Bangor
- Beverley Hills, Bangor

Financial year 2011/12

- Balloo Drive, Bangor
- Shandon Drive, Bangor

However, I should advise that these schemes are kept under constant review, and that the commencement of the works will be dependent upon the availability of funding at that time and other competing priorities.

Road-Calming Schemes

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the road calming schemes to be introduced to the North Antrim constituency, over the next three years. (AQW 3200/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: As I advised the Member, in response to his recent Assembly Question AQW 621/09, a traffic calming scheme for Martinstown and Cargan has been included in a programme of works for the current financial year. Roads Service officials are considering the most appropriate traffic calming measures for both villages and anticipate that the works will be carried out at Cargan in the current financial year and completed in Martinstown during financial year 2009/10. At present there are no other traffic calming schemes programmed for the North Antrim Constituency.

Speed Limits

Mr Butler asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the merits of having speed limits changed from miles to kilometres, as is the practice throughout Europe. (AQW 3205/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has no plans at this time to introduce road signs displaying speed limits in kilometres since this is a reserved matter.

Telephone Communication Masts

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the total revenue generated through his Department leasing its land or property to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts.

(AQW 3263/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that utility companies, including telecommunication providers, licensed by the Department of Trade and Industry, have a statutory right to place and maintain apparatus within public road boundaries. Therefore, the Department for Regional Development does not generate any revenue from the erection of such telephone masts.

Street Lighting

Dr Farry asked the Minister for Regional Development to report on the nature of the additional costs of £4.5m in 2009/10 and £4.7m in 2010/11, for street lighting, considering the changing global energy market.

(AQW 3267/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: The additional costs of £4.5 million in 2009/10 and £4.7 million in 2010/11 are estimates of the increased funding required for rising electricity costs for public lighting, based on the latest tariff information and predicted growth in the public lighting stock. The estimates will be reviewed when further information on electricity prices becomes available.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Regional Development what contribution his Department has made or will be making to the consultation by the UK Department of Work and Pensions on reservations to the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with disabilities.

(AQW 3270/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: OFMdFM have assumed the lead responsibility for progressing this issue. In response to a request from OFMdFM, the Department has scrutinised its legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check compatibility with the provisions of the Convention.

The Department has also confirmed that it has no difficulty with the areas of competency covered by the Convention. This conclusion was based on a working knowledge of the Department's policies, practices and legislation and the Department's statutory duties and compliance with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, as amended, and Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998. The Department did not identify any need for reservations or interpretative declarations.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Regional Development what preparations his Department has made for the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

(AQW 3273/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: OFMdFM are in the lead in preparing for implementation here of the UN convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (the Convention). At the request of OFMdFM the Department has scrutinised its legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check their compatibility with the provisions of the Convention. The Department has also confirmed that it has no difficulty with the areas of competency covered by the Convention. This conclusion was based on a working knowledge of the Department's policies, practices and legislation and the Department's Statutory Duties and compliance with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, as amended, and Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998.

Water Supply

Mr P J Bradley asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans there are to deliver a mains water supply to the seven dwellings on Carrick Road, Warrenpoint. (AQW 3280/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that it is required under Article 76 of the Water and Sewerage Services (NI) Order 2006 to provide a requisitioned water main for domestic purposes subject to certain conditions. One of the conditions, set out in Article 77, requires the persons making the requisition to pay the reasonable costs of providing the water main as determined in accordance with NIW's charges scheme. Under Regulation 7 of the Water and Sewerage Charges Scheme (No. 2) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2007, NIW is empowered to provide an allowance against the cost of complying with a water main requisition and details are set out in the charges scheme.

My Department has provided additional assistance in respect of existing properties constructed before 1 January 2000 to make it more affordable for householders in rural areas to have their properties connected to the mains water supply. This assistance has raised the allowance from £5,000 to £6,500 per property from 1 April 2007. It is my intention that the level of this assistance will be kept under review.

NIW is currently determining an appropriate route for a watermain to serve homes on Carrick Road, Warrenpoint and this will enable the estimated cost of the scheme to be assessed. Following this, NIW expects to be in a position to notify the applicants of the contribution required from them (if any) to enable the watermain extension to proceed.

Gritting Schedule

Mr Doherty asked the Minister for Regional Development if he will review current winter gritting policies with a view to developing and implementing a strategy, either directly or in conjunction with the Department of Education and the Education and Library Boards, to ensure that schools located in rural areas remain accessible during inclement weather conditions. (AQW 3289/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that the salting of school bus routes was considered in the 2001 review of its Winter Service procedures. One of the key outcomes of that review, which was fully debated and accepted by the Assembly, was that the practice of targeting the limited resources available for this service, on the busier main through routes, should continue.

The review also recognised that to include all school bus routes, would more than double the cost of the salting operation, and would involve the treatment of some very minor rural roads. Apart from the substantial initial capital investment that would be required, it would also cost over £5 million extra each year.

However, the review did recommend that buses in service, including school buses, should receive special consideration. A 40-seater bus is now counted as 40 vehicles, when determining whether a road should be included on the salting schedule, regardless of the number of passengers on the bus. In addition, small settlements containing 100 dwellings or more should have a salted link to the nearest part of the existing salted network.

As the Member will appreciate, there is a fine balance to be drawn between putting even more funds into salting, or continuing to spend it on the many other worthwhile demands on Roads Service's limited resources. I can, however, advise that officials have agreed to examine the Roads Service operational response to areas around schools, which are regularly affected by adverse weather conditions.

Translink

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development, given the cancellation of the 5.35am train from Derry/Londonderry to Dublin from 14 December onwards, what early service will be available to passengers wishing to travel from Derry/Londonderry to Dublin. (AQW 3301/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: Translink have informed me that the Derry-Belfast 05.33 departure is being rescheduled to a 06.35 departure due to consistently low passenger numbers. It is anticipated that the 06.35 will attract higher passenger numbers making this service more viable. The 06.17 Coleraine to Belfast service is being retained.

Translink have informed me that the following Goldline services are available: the 212 service leaves Foyle Street, Derry every 15 minutes from 05.30 in the morning. The 05.30 and 05.45 departures arrive in Belfast at 07.20 and 07.35 hours and provide connection opportunities with the 08.00 Enterprise. Alternatively, Ulsterbus operate a 24/7 direct Derry to Dublin coach service No. 274 with early morning departures at 00.45, 04.15 and 06.15 with arrival times in Dublin at 04.10, 08.15 and 10.15 hours respectively.

Gritting Schedule

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans his Department has to include the Ballymoyer Road, Whitecross, Co. Armagh on the gritting schedule, given the road is a school bus route to two secondary schools and two primary schools, and the location of two churches. (AQW 3323/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that the Ballymoyer Road has not previously met the criteria for inclusion in its winter gritting schedule. Officials have, however, arranged for an assessment to be carried out, to ascertain whether this route now meets the criteria.

This assessment will be undertaken at the earliest opportunity and I have asked the Divisional Roads Manager to write to you to advise you of the results, in due course.

I can also advise that officials have agreed to examine the Roads Service operational response to areas around schools, which are regularly affected by adverse weather conditions.

Aer Lingus Flights

Mr Burnside asked the Minister for Regional Development what representations he has made to the Government of the Republic of Ireland to retain Aer Lingus flights between Belfast International and Heathrow airports to ensure the slot allocation. (AQW 3329/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have not made such representations. Decisions about routes are a commercial matter for the airlines. I recognise the importance of maintaining slots at Heathrow for services to and from Belfast airports and the Department for Transport (London) is aware of our concerns.

Translink

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development what consideration he will give to ensuring that the 5.35am Northern Ireland Railways service from Londonderry/Derry connecting to the Enterprise service, will run during summer. (AQW 3336/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: Translink have informed me that the Derry-Belfast 05.33 departure is being rescheduled to a 06.35 departure due to consistently low passenger numbers. It is anticipated that the 06.35 will attract higher passenger numbers making this service more viable. The 06.17 Coleraine to Belfast service is being retained.

This is an operational matter for Translink. Translink have informed me that only one or two people per week use the 05.35 train to connect with the 08.00 Enterprise service to Dublin. It appears that there are also suitable, alternative options as outlined above. Translink will keep these issues under review but there are no plans currently to re-instate this service.

Water Charges

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Regional Development, in light of the Executive's announcement of the deferral of water charges, when was the introduction of water charges (i) agreed at Executive level; and (ii) approved by the Assembly. (AQW 3343/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: At its first meeting on 10 May 2007 the Executive decided not to impose new annual charges for water and sewerage and agreed to appoint an Independent Panel to carry out a comprehensive review of water and sewerage services.

Following the publication of the Panel's first report in October 2007 the Executive unanimously agreed its recommendation that households should make additional contributions for water and sewerage and that these would be phased in from April 2009. I announced the Executive's decision to the Assembly in my statement on 22 October 2007.

School Travel Advisers

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans he has to employ school travel advisors and to introduce a structure to support walking and cycling to school. (AQW 3346/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has two School Travel Plan Co-ordinators, who develop the Travelwise Safer Routes to Schools initiative in schools across the North. This initiative aims to tackle the problems associated with the 'School Run' by promoting more sustainable modes of travel, including walking and cycling, for the journey to and from school.

Roads Service

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) what measures will be taken to repair; and (ii) for a timescale for completion of repairs, to the severe deterioration of the road surface at (a) Ballyronan Village; (b) Shore Road, Ballyronan; and (c) Dunmenny Road, Ballinderry Bridge. (AQW 3347/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that the road in Ballyronan village has been affected by utility work associated with new developments. The road surface has not been reinstated to the required standard and Roads Service served notice on the developer to have appropriate remedial measures undertaken by him. Unfortunately, the developer has not responded in a satisfactory manner, within the time frame allowed in the notice. Roads Service is currently in the process of securing the remedial work, through an external contractor, and will recover costs from the developer, as provided for in the notice.

Roads Service is also aware of additional development that will require further utility work within the village. Resurfacing of the road in Ballyronan Village will be considered, when these works have been completed.

With regard to the Shore Road, Ballyronan, Roads Service has no plans to carry out resurfacing along this road. Some sections of the Shore Road are in a provisional programme for edge strengthening in 2009/10, and similar works are expected to be required in later years. However, the majority of the carriageway surface is considered to be in reasonable condition.

Finally, with regard to the Drumenny Road, Ballinderry Bridge, substantial edge strengthening work, at a cost of £80,000, was undertaken on this road earlier this year. This will enable a more durable surfacing scheme to be undertaken at a later date. The final surfacing scheme is programmed for completion in the 2009/10 financial year, or earlier, should additional funding become available.

Gritting Schedule

Mrs McGill asked the Minister for Regional Development if his Department will review the criteria for gritting and salting roads to ensure that rural communities are not disadvantaged. (AQW 3353/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that the salting of rural roads was considered in the 2001 review of its Winter Service procedures. One of the key outcomes of that review, which was fully debated and accepted by the Assembly, was that the practice of targeting the limited resources available for this service, on the busier main through routes, should continue.

As a result of the review, the salting schedule has been increased by some 4%, with additional routes being determined by:

- ensuring that small settlements containing 100 dwellings or more should have a salted link to the nearest part of the existing salted network.
- allowing other busy routes with special difficulties, for example hilly areas, carrying between 1,000 - 1,500 vehicles per day, to be considered, if there are no nearby/parallel alternative salted routes; and

- using an increased weighting for buses, so that a 40-seater bus is now counted as 40 vehicles, regardless of the actual number of passengers.

On more lightly trafficked routes, salt bins or grit piles may be provided for use by the public, on a self help basis.

As the Member will appreciate, there is a fine balance to be drawn between putting even more funds into salting, or continuing to spend it on the many other worthwhile demands on Roads Service's limited resources. I can, however, advise that officials have agreed to examine the Roads Service operational response to areas around schools, which are regularly affected by adverse weather conditions.

Northern Ireland Water

Mrs McGill asked the Minister for Regional Development if he believes that the water bills issued to residents are easy to understand. (AQW 3354/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: As the Executive has deferred household water and sewerage payments no domestic bills have been issued. I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that the current non-domestic water bill format was designed in consultation with the Consumer Council for Northern Ireland (CCNI). In the course of continuous customer service improvement and following customer feedback, NIW is currently reviewing the bill format to simplify its layout and content and will consult with CCNI and other key stakeholders during this process.

Traffic-Calming Measures

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline (i) the reasons for the delay in placing traffic-calming measures in the vicinity of Florencecourt Primary School, County Fermanagh; and (ii) when the work will be completed. (AQW 3366/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that Florencecourt Primary School was assessed, in February 2008, for inclusion in the Travelwise Safer Routes to Schools initiative. Under this initiative, Roads Service proposed providing enhanced warning signs, incorporating flashing lights, for the school and red coloured surfacing on the approaches. These works were programmed for the current financial year, with a proposed completion date of October 2008. Unfortunately, due to additional works in connection with the trial of 20 mph school zones in the North, the completion of some schemes have been delayed beyond their proposed completion date.

Roads Service has advised that, the warning signs for Florencecourt Primary School were erected and commissioned for use at the site on Tuesday 16 December 2008. The red surfacing material needs to be applied onto a dry road surface and consequently it is more difficult to give an exact date for completion. However, it is anticipated that this surfacing will be completed before the end of January 2009.

Efficiency Savings

Dr Farry asked the Minister for Regional Development what policies and practices in his Department have changed in delivering the 3% efficiency savings required by the 2008-11 Budget. (AQW 3408/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: The Department has a target to deliver 3% efficiencies of some £22 / £44 / £65 million (of which £0.8 / £3.1 / £5.4 million is Admin) over the Budget period 2008-11.

The Department is delivering these efficiencies within the roads, rail and capital programmes and through reductions in its corporate service functions. Also, some £9 / £18 / £26 million will be saved through efficiencies incorporated within the Northern Ireland Water subsidy requirement. Further, the Department is also scoring the generation of additional income and receipts from asset disposals as efficiency savings. The table at Annex A sets these savings out in detail.

ANNEX A

The Department identified, at a high level, 3% efficiency reductions within the roads rail and bus capital programmes, corporate service functions and through efficiencies incorporated within the Northern Ireland Water subsidy requirement, as set out in the table below.

Parking Tickets

Mr Craig asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the number of parking tickets issued by NCP from the start of on street parking; and (ii) the revenue generated. (AQW 3431/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that since taking responsibility for parking enforcement at the end of October 2006, a total of 314,701 Penalty Charge Notices have been issued to the period ending November 2008.

The revenue received by Roads Service, as a result of these Notices, is £8,560,000.

City of Derry Airport

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) what category standard of dual carriageway is planned for the A2 Maydown to City of Derry Airport upgrade scheme; (ii) to detail the current timescale; (iii) to provide an update on progress; and (iv) when the scheme will be completed. (AQW 3434/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that the A2 Maydown to City of Derry Airport road improvement, will be a Category 5 all purpose dual carriageway with roundabouts at the main junctions and no central reserve cross-overs. Tenders for the works are due to be returned by mid February 2009. Subject to satisfactory progression through this last stage of the procurement process and the availability of finance, construction is planned to commence in April/May 2009. The scheme has a contract period of 18 months and is expected to be completed in late 2010.

City of Derry Airport

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Regional Development how many vehicles visited the City of Derry Airport, in each of the last three years. (AQW 3435/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department does not hold the information requested.

Roads Service

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Regional Development what changes have been made to gritting routes maintained by Roads Service in the East Antrim constituency, over the past ten years. (AQW 3439/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: Roads Service salts main through routes carrying more than 1,500 vehicles per day and, in exceptional circumstances, roads with difficult topography carrying between 1,000 and 1,500 vehicles per day. The application of this policy ensures that 28% of the total road network, which carries around 80% of traffic, is salted, at an annual cost of approximately £5million.

Roads Service does not maintain a record of specific changes made to its schedule of salted routes over the past 10 years. However, arising from a review carried out in 2001, the salting schedule was increased by about 4% across the North. The additional routes were determined by an increased weighting for buses. In addition, small settlements containing 100 dwellings or more now have salted links to roads on the main salted network. Also, as new sections of road were constructed, they were included onto the salting schedule, if the above criteria were met.

Translink Bus Drivers

Mr Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development how many Translink bus drivers have been absent from work because of stress related illness, in each of the last five years. (AQW 3476/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: Translink has informed me that it does not hold the information in the form requested and is, moreover, unable to provide details of the reasons for absences prior to 2006.

The attached table sets out the number periods of absence incurred by drivers during 2006, 2007 and 2008 where the recorded reason was “anxiety” or “clinical depression”. The category “anxiety” includes symptoms such as stress and fatigue. A period of absence is recorded only once in the year in which it commenced.

Year	Ulsterbus	Citybus (Metro)
2008	41	103
2007	61	87

Gritting Schedule

Mr Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) what gritting arrangements are in place for roads and pavements in the Rathenraw Estate, Antrim; and (ii) if he has any plans to revise these arrangements in light of the extreme difficulties being faced by traffic and pedestrians in this area in recent days. (AQW 3480/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department’s Roads Service has advised that the roads within the Rathenraw Estate do not meet the criteria for inclusion on its winter salting schedule. I must also advise you that it has never been Roads Service’s policy to salt footways.

As the Member will appreciate, there is a fine balance to be drawn between putting even more funds into salting, or continuing to spend it on the many other worthwhile demands on Roads Service’s limited resources. The main criteria for roads to be included in the winter salting schedule is that they are main through routes carrying in excess of 1,500 vehicles per day, or busy through routes carrying in excess of 1,000 vehicles per day, where difficult factors are present, such as steep gradients, sharp bends, etc.

Following the recent severe icy conditions, Roads Service considered requests for salt boxes to be provided within the Rathenraw Estate, against criteria set out in its Winter Service policy. I understand that Roads Service is arranging for a number of salt boxes to be located as soon as possible in the Rathenraw Estate.

Department Staff

Mr Wells asked the Minister for Regional Development what instructions have been given to his staff on the use of the specific terms (i) 'Northern Ireland'; (ii) 'Londonderry'; and (iii) 'United Kingdom', in written documents. (AQW 3481/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have not given any instruction to staff in respect of the references listed by the Member. However, I have advised that, in any correspondence to be signed by me, or speeches that I deliver, I prefer to use the terms the North, Derry and Britain.

Rathlin Ferry Service

Mr Wells asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the total cost of the investigation into the procurement of Rathlin ferry service. (AQW 3482/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I consider it important to put on record that the overall conclusion of the investigation is that there was nothing untoward in the Department's approach and decision-making.

Specifically, the report concludes that there is absolutely no evidence to suggest that the Department or Central Procurement Directorate in DFP sought to manipulate the outcome of this tender.

Secondly, the objective of a tender competition is to achieve better value for money. In this instance we also wanted an improved level of service for the islanders and visitors. This competition achieved those objectives. We now have better value for money for the taxpayer and a much improved level of service which, I understand, is a view held by many of the islanders.

Thirdly, the report concludes that there was no manifest error in the award of the contract to the new service provider. The report does find that there were some errors in relation to administration of the tender. However, these errors did not affect the overall outcome of the tender competition.

The report is also very clear in its conclusion about the serious allegations made about the conduct of DRD staff. The report concludes that there is no substance to the allegations that DRD officials undermined, harassed or bullied complainants. The report did find errors in the judgement exercised by an official in the handling of information from people who considered themselves to be 'whistleblowers'.

This was a complex and delicate investigation the total cost of which is estimated to be £55,000. Contained in the aforementioned figure is an amount of £20,000 for services provided by the Department's Internal Audit Branch, which was not an additional cost to the Department.

Public Appointments

Ms Purvis asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) to list all public appointments (a) filled by his Department and (b) still outstanding; (ii) on what grounds were some appointments not made; (iii) to assess the process adopted for appointments including the OPCA guidance; and (iv) his plans for ensuring a more efficient application of the procedures. (AQW 3499/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: (i) (a) The public appointments filled by my Department in the past 3 financial years are as follows:

Financial Year	Public Appointments Filled	Number
2005/06	Belfast Harbour Commissioners	4
	Londonderry Port and Harbour Commissioners	1
	Warrenpoint Harbour Authority	3
	Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company	9

Financial Year	Public Appointments Filled	Number
2006/07	Belfast Harbour Commissioners	2
	Londonderry Port and Harbour Commissioners	8
	Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company	1
	Board of Northern Ireland Water	4
2007/08	Belfast Harbour Commissioners	15
	Warrenpoint Harbour Authority	8
	Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company	1

- (i) (b) There are no appointments outstanding.
- (ii) There was one non executive appointment not made to the Board of Northern Ireland Water in 2006/07 as I wanted to retain flexibility to strengthen the Board with a further appointment at a later date.
- (iii) Most of my Department's public appointments are either regulated or monitored by the Commissioner for Public Appointments and as such are made in accordance with the Code of Practice published by the Commissioner's office. For those appointments not regulated by the Commissioner my Department will, as far as is practicable and in line with the principle of proportionality, apply the principles and procedures set out in the Commissioner's Code of Practice. An audit is carried out to establish whether the Code of Practice is being observed. The Commissioner publishes an Annual Report which includes information as to the observance of the Code of Practice and an account of the audit process.
- (iv) When making public appointments my Department aims to follow the principles and procedures set out in the Commissioner's Code of Practice, taking careful note of any and all recommendations contained in the Annual Report and Audit reports, ensuring the more efficient application of appointment procedures.

Roads Service

Mr Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development what changes have been made to the gritting routes maintained by Roads Service in the East Antrim constituency, in the past five years. (AQW 3524/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: Roads Service salts main through routes carrying more than 1,500 vehicles per day and, in exceptional circumstances, roads with difficult topography carrying between 1,000 and 1,500 vehicles per day. The application of this policy ensures that 28% of the total road network, which carries around 80% of traffic, is salted, at an annual cost of approximately £5 million.

Roads Service does not maintain a record of specific changes made to its schedule of salted routes over the past 5 years. However, arising from a review carried out in 2001, the salting schedule was increased by about 4% across the North. The additional routes were determined by an increased weighting for buses. In addition, small settlements containing 100 dwellings or more now have salted links to roads on the main salted network. Also, as new sections of road were constructed, they were included onto the salting schedule, if the above criteria were met.

Gritting Schedule

Mr Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development for a list of all roads on the gritting schedule in the South Antrim constituency. (AQW 3525/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service does not maintain the information that you have requested on a constituency basis.

The South Antrim constituency is covered by areas of both Roads Service Northern and Eastern Divisions, and the following table lists those roads included in the salting schedule that are located within Eastern Division.

Officials from Roads Service, Northern Division, are currently updating their salting schedule database and it is not possible to provide this information in a similar table format. However, a map showing these roads is available and has been placed in the Library.

I have been advised that a copy of this map was also included in a recent report that Roads Service officials presented to Antrim Council members in November 2008. I have asked the Northern Divisional Roads Manager to write to you with a list of all the roads included in the salting schedule for Antrim Section, which are located within South Antrim constituency, once this information becomes available.

In addition to these routes, the M2, M22 and their associated slip roads are salted by Highway Management Maintenance, as part of a Public Private Partnership contract.

Public Transport

Dr Farry asked the Minister for Regional Development what consideration has been given to providing and promoting free public transport on Saturdays and evenings in the run up to Christmas. (AQW 3535/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: I have not considered supporting free public transport on Saturdays and evenings in the run up to Christmas.

‘B’ Class Road Upgrading

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline his Department’s criteria for upgrading a ‘C’ class road to a ‘B’ class road. (AQW 3558/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department’s Roads Service has advised that, road classification dates back a very considerable time (pre Local Government Reorganisation), and its use today is limited to route identification. Any new route, outside of a motorway, would be classified on the basis of the comparable route classification in the area.

Roads Service has been unable to find any historic record of how the classification system was determined originally, but officials have pointed out that it has no relevance to current funding allocations.

Gritting Schedule

Mr Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline his Departments' policy on gritting pavements. (AQW 3595/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: It is not my Department's Roads Service's policy to carry out gritting of footways. However, Roads Service does provide salt boxes at strategic locations. These salt boxes can be used by the general public, on a self help basis, to help prevent the formation of snow and ice on footways and roads.

Gritting Schedule

Mr Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development what criteria his Department applies when determining whether a road gets added to the gritting schedule. (AQW 3596/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: The criterion for inclusion of roads on the gritting schedule is as follows:-

- all Motorways and Trunk roads shall be treated;
- main through routes which carry more than 1,500 vehicles per day shall be treated;
- other busy through routes with special difficulties which carry more than 1,000 vehicles per day shall be considered. Special difficulties which are considered include the severity, frequency and extent of gradients, frequency of bends, the height above sea level, railway level crossings on the road and abnormally high junction frequencies. It should be noted that in relation to this category, consideration will be given to the availability of alternative or parallel routes which are on the treated network. Where such parallel or alternative routes are available, the routes qualifying under this criteria need not necessarily be salted; and
- small settlements containing 100 dwellings or more shall have a salted link to the nearest part of the existing salted network.

Routes which are used by buses are given special consideration, in that buses are counted according to the number of seats on the bus, regardless of the number of passengers on the bus, that is, a 40-seater bus is counted as 40 vehicles.

Gritting Schedule

Mr Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development what percentage of the total public road network is on the gritting schedule. (AQW 3597/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: The total length of public road network within the North, at 1 April 2008 was 25,455 kilometres. During the 2008/2009 Winter Service season, the total length of the network on the gritting schedule is 7,072 kilometres. This is approximately 28% of the entire network.

Roads Service Alleygating Scheme

Mr Butler asked the Minister for Regional Development if he will make changes to the Roads Service alleygating scheme to ensure that schemes are not unduly delayed because of the amount of bureaucracy associated with alleygating schemes. (AQW 3609/09)

The Minister for Regional Development: Alleygating schemes are brought forward by promoters, usually a community safety partnership involving a district council. My Department endeavours to make every effort to ensure that schemes are processed without any undue delay. However, my Department must ensure that full consultation with the local community has been completed and that any scheme presented to the Department has the clear overall support of the local community. It is also important that human rights, equality and amenity impact assessments are carried out and that there is strict adherence to the procedural requirements laid down in the Road Traffic Regulations (Northern Ireland) Order 1997.

In view of the above points, I do not believe that changes could reasonably be made, that would speed up the current process.

SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT

Capital Projects

Dr Farry asked the Minister for Social Development what actions her Department is taking to bring forward the delivery of capital projects to help redress the economic downturn. (AQW 3103/09)

The Minister for Social Development (Ms M Ritchie): The Social Housing Development Programme, the Social Housing Maintenance & Repairs Programme and Urban Regeneration are the main avenues for advancing capital works in this Department and I am pursuing this as part of December Monitoring. While the extent of work possible will depend on the level of any additional funding allocated, I believe that an increased investment in social housing can have a profoundly beneficial effect on the economy in a relatively short period of time.

Furthermore, in the Department's current Public Service Agreement, I have committed to delivering 5,250 new social homes over the next 3 years. Whilst these are very challenging times for the Construction Industry, there is a tremendous opportunity for them to work with me in delivering these new social homes.

Homeless Support

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the charitable organisations funded by her Department who provide support for the homeless. (AQW 3114/09)

The Minister for Social Development: During 2007/08 my Department provided £2.23m through the Housing Executive to service providers (registered as charities) for the provision of services to support homeless people.

The service providers were as follows:

- Daughters of Charity,
- Sisters of Mercy,
- Council for the Homeless
- Extern Organisation,
- First Housing Aid and Support Services,
- Foyle Haven Association for the Care and Resettlement of Offenders,
- Housing Rights Service,
- Link (Newtownards),
- Mid Ulster & South Tyrone Association for the Single Homeless (MUST),
- NI Association (NIACRO),
- Simon Community,
- Welcome Organisation,
- Women's Aid.

Additionally, through the Supporting People programme, the Housing Executive will also provide £10.43m funding to a number of such service providers during 2008/09 (See Table A). Housing Associations will provide a further £1.3m for the provision of these services (See Table B).

Social Security Agency

Mr Durkan asked the Minister for Social Development what arrangements will be put in place for Social Security Agency staff in the Foyle constituency as part of the Strategic Business Review, including (i) relocation; (ii) retraining, and to make a statement. (AQW 3238/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Strategic Business Review proposals have recently been issued for public consultation. Foyle constituency forms part of the Social Security Agency's West District. In West District, the proposed changes would see Income Support processing centralised in Derry, Social Fund processing centralised in Omagh and Jobseekers Allowance processing centralised in Enniskillen. All frontline office activity would continue as at present, no offices would be closing and there would be no staff redundancies.

In order to protect service delivery, it would be imperative that each new benefit processing centre has the required level of skilled staff. Consequently, under the current proposals, staff with the requisite experience would travel to their new processing centres, within their existing District structures, subject to the reasonable travel provisions within their NICS employment contracts. Where this would not be possible the Social Security Agency will look at other alternatives which may include possible retraining.

It is not possible at this stage to predict exactly which staff would move where as the relocation process would need to be fully worked through. Implementation of the proposed changes would take approximately 4 years to rollout across Northern Ireland.

Arrangements for staff in Foyle and elsewhere in Northern Ireland will be assessed as part of the consideration of the findings of the consultation exercise. The consultation runs until late April 2009.

Purchase of Properties

Mr F McCann asked the Minister for Social Development to provide details of the developers and individuals from whom her Department, including the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, purchased properties 'off the shelf' in the last 2 years. (AQW 3239/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Neither my Department nor the Northern Ireland Housing Executive purchase properties 'off the shelf' or from individuals as 'Existing Satisfactory Purchases'. Properties are acquired by Housing Associations subject to approval by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. Where properties are acquired by this method the contractual relationship exists between the Housing Association and the vendor and the Northern Ireland Housing Executive does not collate information on those contracts.

Telephone Communication Masts

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the total revenue generated through her Department leasing its land or property to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts. (AQW 3247/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The total revenue generated in this way amounts to £76,750 per annum.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development what contribution her Department has made or will be making to the consultation by the UK Department of Work and Pensions on reservations to the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with disabilities. (AQW 3271/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister has lead responsibility for contributing, on behalf of the Northern Ireland Civil Service, to the UK Department of Work and Pensions' consultation on reservations to the UN Convention on the rights of persons with disabilities.

In order to contribute to the OFMDFM response, my Department has undertaken scrutiny of legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check their compatibility with the provisions of the Convention and identify any difficulties with the areas of competency covered by the Convention.

In addition, my Department has been and will continue to be in contact with the Department of Work and Pensions regarding the Convention and Social Security related matters.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development what preparations her Department has made for the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. (AQW 3272/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Since January 2007, officials within OFMDFM have taken the lead in preparing for implementation, in Northern Ireland, of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (the Convention).

As requested by OFMDFM, my Department has been scrutinising legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check for compatibility with the provisions of the Convention and to confirm whether we had any difficulty with the areas of competency covered by the Convention.

Based on a working knowledge of the Department's policies, practices and legislation and our Departmental statutory duties, and compliance with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995, as amended, and Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998, officials concluded that the Convention was unlikely to impose any additional requirements.

UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development what preparations her Department has made for the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities. (AQW 3274/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister has taken the lead in preparing for the implementation of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (the Convention) in Northern Ireland and in identifying reservations to be brought forward.

In cooperation with their plans, my Department has undertaken scrutiny of legislation, policies, practices and procedures to check their compatibility with the provisions of the Convention and identify any difficulties with the areas of competency covered by the Convention.

My officials have advised OFMDFM that aside from an issue regarding benefit appointees, about which they are liaising with colleagues in the Department for Work and Pensions, the convention is unlikely to impose any additional requirements on the Department.

Satisfactory Housing Scheme

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Social Development to give the criteria used by the Housing Executive and Housing Associations to purchase property under the acquisition of satisfactory housing scheme. (AQW 3304/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Houses purchased under the Acquisition of Satisfactory Housing Scheme must fulfil the following eligibility criteria:

- Properties are immediately available for letting
- Properties do not require extensive repairs or rehabilitation.
- Properties should generally be former Housing Executive dwellings.
- Properties situated in exclusively owner occupied areas should not be considered.
- There is an established long term housing demand and need for that type of property and no existing Social house is available.
- Properties must meet the current Total Cost Indicators. Allowances should include additional costs such as pre letting repairs and or professional fees.
- Properties recommended for purchase at a valuation exceeding the Total Cost Indicator allowance require the approval of the Department for Social Development.
- Properties subject to an offer will not be considered under the Acquisition of Satisfactory Housing scheme.

Regulation of Charities

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development for a progress report on work to ensure the better regulation of charities. (AQW 3317/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Charities Act (NI) 2008 received Royal Assent on 9 September 2008. This legislation will introduce a new regulatory framework for charities in Northern Ireland and will increase public confidence in charitable giving. The provisions in the primary legislation will be phased in over the next 2-3 years through a series of Commencement Orders. The first Order is scheduled to be made in March 2009 and this will allow for the establishment of the Charity Commission, appointment of Commissioners and staff and consultation on the public benefit test.

Officials in my Department have been working with other charity regulators in the UK and Ireland to ensure that the Charity Commission will be in a position to begin its programme of work in 2009/2010. This will include the transfer of approximately 5,500 charity records from HM Revenue and Customs to populate an interim charity register. It is also important to note that new charity regulations are being progressed in both parts of this island. I welcome the fact that the Charities Bill 2007 has been passed in the Dail and cleared its Second Stage in Seanad Éireann on the 27th November 2008. This will be particularly important in dealing with regulation of cross-border charities.

I am pleased at the progress made to date in taking forward this important work to regulate local charities. An information website has been developed to provide advice and guidance to local charities and other interested parties. This can be accessed at www.charitycommissionni.org.uk and the site went live on 10 December 2008.

Gregg House, Lisburn

Mr Poots asked the Minister for Social Development what role her Department has taken in supporting the residents of Gregg House in Lisburn. (AQW 3371/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Northern Ireland Housing Executive held a meeting in September 2008 which was attended by public representatives along with staff from the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust. It was agreed that the Housing Executive and the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust would jointly survey the tenants of Gregg House to establish their needs and identify problems they were having. A further meeting between the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust, and Housing Executive staff from the Lisburn District Office has been arranged for 7 January 2009 to review the findings of the surveys, and determine the most appropriate course of action in relation to the Gregg House accommodation.

Carbon Monoxide Alarms

Mr Butler asked the Minister for Social Development how many NIHE dwellings with gas heating systems have carbon monoxide alarms installed. (AQW 3391/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Carbon monoxide alarms are not part of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's specification for any of its dwellings and consequentially none are fitted by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive.

Housing Executive

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Social Development what definition the Housing Executive uses in relation to (i) damp; and (ii) condensation. (AQW 3394/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Damp in relation to Northern Ireland Housing Executive homes is defined as excessive moisture in building fabric arising as a consequence of capillary attraction from ground water rising through walls or floors in contact with the ground, or by penetrating through superstructures and roofs by the (weather) elements.

Condensation relates to internal moisture created as a consequence of the lifestyle of the occupants of a dwelling. Moisture created in the home condenses on cold surfaces leading to the formation of black mould.

House Sales

Mr Butler asked the Minister for Social Development to provide details of the number of NIHE house sales in each of the last five years. (AQW 3398/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The table below details the Northern Ireland Housing Executives house sales for the last five years and the position for the current year.

	2003/04	2004 /05	2005/06	2006/07	2007/08	2008/09 To date
Total	5652	3053	2522	2201	808	34

Maintenance Schemes

Mr Butler asked the Minister for Social Development (i) the number of NIHE improvement and maintenance schemes that were planned for the Dairyfarm and Lisburn districts that have now been postponed; (ii) the number of schemes that will be carried out as planned; and (iii) the costs of all schemes in both areas. (AQW 3399/09)

The Minister for Social Development: As a result of the December monitoring round all Northern Ireland Housing Executive programmes are currently under review. The Northern Ireland Housing Executive will work to formulate a revised programme as a matter of urgency over the coming weeks.

Efficiency Savings

Dr Farry asked the Minister for Social Development what policies and practices in her Department have changed in delivering the 3% efficiency savings required by the 2008-11 Budget. (AQW 3409/09)

The Minister for Social Development: My Department has a continuous emphasis on achieving efficiency which is continually reflected in new policies and practices. For example in terms of policy changes, the Child Support Reforms will create more efficient Child Support services as these are implemented over the Budget period. Practices that have changed include the continuing standardisation of operating models and changes to the Social Security Agency's service delivery model through the establishment of centralised processing centres. There is a continuing emphasis on streamlining back office and administrative support activities and ensuring that process waste and inefficiency is minimised. A number of reform and modernisation programmes have also been implemented which will deliver efficiencies, such as the Operational Improvement Project in my Department's Child Maintenance and Enforcement Division which is designed to stabilise and improve the Division's performance. A further example is in my Department's Urban regeneration and Community Development Group where funding mechanisms have been rationalised and emphasis has been placed on leveraging in funds from other sources for regeneration purposes.

Housing Benefit Payments

Mr McLaughlin asked the Minister for Social Development to breakdown the amount of housing benefit payments paid to private landlords in the South Antrim constituency, broken down by electoral districts. (AQW 3445/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The information is not available in the form requested. The table below details Housing Benefit payments for Northern Ireland Housing Executive District Offices in South Antrim for 2007/08. It should be noted that the payments include Housing Benefit paid to Housing Associations, as the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's accounting procedures do not differentiate between Housing Associations and Private Landlords.

District	Payment £
Antrim District	3,242,596.18
Newtownabbey 1	3,104,870.01
Newtownabbey 2	3,529,466.17
Carrickfergus	3,776,579.93
Total	13,653,512.29

Community Development Programmes

Mr McLaughlin asked the Minister for Social Development in relation to the Crumlin area, (i) to identify the community development programmes; (ii) to give an assessment of the impact these programmes have had on the social infrastructure; and (iii) what programmes are planned to address the deficit in social development, (AQW 3446/09)

The Minister for Social Development: My Department provides financial assistance to District Councils through the Community Support Programme. In return for funding, the Department requires Councils to submit Community Support Plans which cover a three year period (2006-09). Antrim Borough Council have been offered £98,810 during this financial year. Their plan indicates that a total of seven community centres are supported across the Borough. Of the seven, Crumlin Community Centre attracts the highest level of community centre expenditure from Council with an average yearly expenditure of £146,011. The Community Support Plan is developed at Council level and it would be the responsibility of Antrim Council to advise on the full impact the programme has had on their area.

In addition my Department is currently considering an application for funding for a community group "Crumlin Together" under the Modernisation Fund which will be jointly funded by the International Fund for Ireland and others.

New Start Homes

Mr Newton asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to her answer to AQW 7169/08, if her Department still intends to build the 145 new start homes in 2008-09, 87 in 2009-10 and 107 in 2010-11, in the East Belfast constituency. (AQW 3469/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The figures quoted in this question refer to the Social Housing Development Programme for East Belfast Programme at May 2008. However, the Social Housing Development Programme is continually subject to change, as some schemes slip or are lost from the Programme due to planning or acquisition difficulties and new schemes are brought forward. The Social Housing Development Programme for East Belfast currently indicates 175 starts for 2008/09, 117 starts for 2009/10, and 112 starts for 2010/11. The new Social Housing Development Programme for 2009/10 – 2013/14 is currently being formulated and will be published on the Housing Executive's website in February 2009 and will reflect the current housing needs assessment.

Departmental Public Appointments

Ms Purvis asked the Minister for Social Development (i) to list all public appointments (a) filled by her Department and (b) still outstanding; (ii) on what grounds were some appointments not made; (iii) to assess the process adopted for appointments including the OPCA guidance; and (iv) her plans for ensuring a more efficient application of the procedures. (AQW 3500/09)

The Minister for Social Development: : I have set out below all public appointments filled by my Department during each of the last 3 financial years.

My Department is currently running a competition to fill 7 positions on the new Charity Commission for Northern Ireland. Plans are in place to fill 2 vacancies to the Charities Advisory Committee, one current vacancy at present with a further vacancy arising in March 2009.

The Disability Living Allowance Board for Northern Ireland currently has 1 vacancy, but as this body is due to be abolished under the Public Authorities Reform Bill in January, there are no plans to fill this vacancy.

The principles set out in the Commissioner for Public Appointment's Code of Practice on Public Appointments are routinely applied to public appointments made by my Department.

Social Housing Development Programme

Mr Cree asked the Minister for Social Development (i) when the five year Social Housing Development Programme for 2009-2014 will be released; (ii) why this programme has been delayed; and (iii) when she will be bringing her proposals to the Executive for a decision. (AQW 3505/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Social Housing Development Programme for 2009 -2014 is currently being finalised and will be published as expected in February 2009. It has not been subjected to delay and is entirely within my Departmental responsibilities, therefore not requiring Executive approval.

Regeneration Schemes

Mr McClarty asked the Minister for Social Development to provide an update on any developments on the proposed regeneration schemes for Coleraine town centre. (AQW 3552/09)

The Minister for Social Development: I regret that the proposed development schemes on the Abbey Street and Mall car parks in Coleraine town centre have been delayed by some months. This has been due to unforeseen complications in the transfer of the Abbey Street site to my Department from the Department for Regional Development, which is necessary to allow the scheme to be delivered. It is now anticipated that construction work will commence on the first of the schemes no later than the first half of 2010.

Creche Facilities in Benefits Office

Mr F McCann asked the Minister for Social Development what arrangements will be put in place to provide creche facilities for lone parents who come into Benefits Offices for interviews about Job Seekers Allowance. (AQW 3562/09)

The Minister for Social Development: There are no plans to provide crèche facilities for lone parents who come into Benefits Offices for interviews about Job Seekers Allowance.

North and West Housing Association

Mr F McCann asked the Minister for Social Development was the £4m investment by the North and West Housing Association into affordable housing taken from its social housing allocation. (AQW 3564/09)

The Minister for Social Development: This £4m proposed commitment by the North and West Housing Association does not include any public money but comes from a tranche of private funding independently secured by the Housing Association.

Energy Performance Certificates

Mr Shannon asked the Minister for Social Development if the Housing Executive will carry out the enforcement of energy performance certificates when a change of tenant occurs (i) through its local offices; (ii) centrally; or (iii) through external bodies. (AQW 3587/09)

The Minister for Social Development: From 30 December 2008 all Northern Ireland Housing Executive dwellings being relet will require an energy performance certificate. The Northern Ireland Housing Executive will carry out this requirement centrally when the change of tenancy takes place.

Own A Home Partnership Scheme

Mr F McCann asked the Minister for Social Development how much funding has (i) Clanmil; and (ii) South Ulster Housing Associations, contributed to the Own a Home partnership scheme that was announced in Portadown; and to confirm if this money was taken from their social housing budget. (AQW 3617/09)

The Minister for Social Development: No money from the Social Housing Development Programme has been used to support this Own a Home scheme. The contribution from both Housing Associations involved in this scheme comes entirely from their private funding which is completely independent of the Department.

Rathenraw Resource Centre Project

Mr Burns asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to her answer to AQW 592/09, to provide an update on the Rathenraw resource centre project. (AQW 3640/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Work on the community and business centre project in Rathenraw, Antrim, commenced in May and had been progressing well with an expected completion date of June 2009. Unfortunately, the contractor went into liquidation in September 2008. The project architect and the group explored all other options and agreed to approach the second placed contractor on the tender list. This contractor (P & K Mc Kaigue) has now been appointed by the Group and the relevant contract documents were signed on the 15th December 2008. Work is scheduled to re-commence on site on Monday 5th January 2009.

Benefit Fraud

Mr Elliott asked the Minister for Social Development, for each of the last five years, how many incidents of benefit fraud have occurred, broken down by (i) local council area; and (ii) parliamentary constituency; and how many people were prosecuted in each year. (AQW 3651/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The tables below show the number of 'incidents of benefit fraud' and the number of people prosecuted for each of the last 5 years, by local council area and parliamentary constituency.

For the purposes of this reply 'incidents of benefit fraud' are those cases where individuals have been convicted in court, or have accepted either a formal caution or an administrative penalty.

Protection for Household Tenants

Mr Elliott asked the Minister for Social Development what recent steps her Department has taken to increase the protection for household tenants in the private rented sector. (AQW 3653/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Private Tenancies (Northern Ireland) Order 2006, which became operative in April 2007, gave tenants new rights and placed new obligations on landlords. A review of this Order is underway and proposals for a new strategic framework for the private rented sector will be issued for public consultation in April 2009.

Warm Homes Scheme

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister for Social Development if she has any proposals to promote the installation of wood pellet boilers as part of the Warm Homes Scheme. (AQW 3662/09)

The Minister for Social Development: I have proposed a number of changes to the Warm Homes Scheme following a report by the Northern Ireland Audit Office and subsequent Public Accounts Committee hearing. Public consultation on the proposed changes to the Scheme finished on the 19 December and my officials are working through the responses. One of the proposed changes is to include renewable technologies, including wood pellet boilers, for hard-to-treat homes where there is currently no alternative to oil.

ASSEMBLY COMMISSION

Assembly Email System

Mr McKay asked the Assembly Commission what measures it is taking to ensure that Members can access their external email accounts and attachments other than those sent to their internal Assembly email account. (AQW 3199/09)

The Representative of the Assembly Commission (Rev Dr R Coulter): The Assembly Commission seeks to provide all Members with safe, secure access to all external information sources. In some instances access to web based files may be refused on the grounds that they are of a type commonly used by malicious software. Security systems that carry out this work are reviewed and upgraded on a regular basis to cope with new security threats and to respond to changes in external systems.

The computer system managing Internet access & security (including access to web based email accounts) is currently under review and an update is scheduled for the Christmas period.

Solar Technology

Mr McKay asked the Assembly Commission if it will introduce solar technology in Parliament Buildings and if it has completed any research in this technology. (AQW 3448/09)

The Representative of the Assembly Commission (Rev Dr R Coulter): The Assembly Commission is very aware of the need to become more energy efficient and has been participating in the Public Sector Energy Campaign since 1999.

Earlier this year the Carbon Trust were appointed to carry out a carbon survey of Parliament Buildings and a range of measures were recommended that would represent a 12.5% reduction in energy consumption and 10% reduction in costs.

In November 2006 a bid was made to the Central Energy Efficiency Fund (CEEF), to install solar panels on the roof of Parliament Buildings. That particular bid was unsuccessful due to the high installation costs and the predicted payback period of 136 years.

However, the Assembly Commission will continue to work closely with the Department of Finance and Personnel's Engineering Services & Energy Unit and the Carbon Trust to consider all possible energy saving initiatives, including solar technology.

Radiators in Parliament Buildings

Mr McKay asked the Assembly Commission what measures it will take to ensure that radiators are not switched on in Parliament Buildings when they are clearly not needed. (AQW 3450/09)

The Representative of the Assembly Commission (Rev Dr R Coulter): Heating and cooling in Parliament Buildings is controlled by the Building Energy Management System (BEMS). This system was installed in 2002 following an audit by the Carbon Trust, and it allows staff in Building Management Branch to adjust the heating schedules to meet the needs of all building users. The heating is maintained at a reasonable set level, approximately 21oC; however it is the responsibility of individual room occupiers to turn off radiators when they are not required.

The BEMS system works on a vertical zoning system and currently the heating can only be adjusted in large 'blocks' of accommodation simultaneously. Properties Directorate is currently exploring proposals to upgrade the BEMS and it is anticipated that this will improve the flexibility and efficiency of the heating and cooling system.

Properties Directorate will issue a building wide e-mail in advance of Christmas recess reminding all building users to turn off unnecessary heating.

It might be helpful for you to note that Building Management Branch staff continually monitor the heating schedules and that these will be adjusted to reflect the fact that the building is closed.

Wind Turbines

Mr McKay asked the Assembly Commission if it has explored the possibility of erecting wind turbines in the Stormont estate. (AQW 3451/09)

The Representative of the Assembly Commission (Rev Dr R Coulter): The Stormont Estate is currently controlled and managed by the Department of Finance and Personnel (DFP), and the Assembly Commission has responsibility only for Parliament Buildings and its immediate environs.

Properties Directorate works closely with DFP, their Engineering Services & Energy Unit and the Carbon Trust on all matters relating to energy efficiency.

The most recent advice from the Carbon Trust is that we should continue to concentrate our efforts on reducing our direct and indirect emissions and then give further consideration to renewable technologies.

Pork Industry

Mr Shannon asked the Assembly Commission what it is doing to encourage caterers in Parliament Buildings to source their pork from local suppliers rather than purchase it from Scotland. (AQW 3474/09)

The Representative of the Assembly Commission (Rev Dr R Coulter): The Northern Ireland Assembly Support Services contract is currently operated by Eurest. This includes all catering services. Eurest have confirmed that since the commencement of the contract in March 2007 and up to Monday 8th December 2008, 100% of the fresh pork was sourced from farms within Northern Ireland. Due to the recent health scare with pork produce however, the Eurest supplier of pork supplied the Northern Ireland Assembly with Scottish bacon in order to provide a continuous and seamless service on an interim, emergency basis only.

However, the over-riding Eurest commitment on a daily basis is to provide the Assembly with produce sourced from farms within Northern Ireland only. Facilities Branch reserve the right at any time to carry out an audit of Eurest produce supplied to the Assembly to ensure compliance with the contract. For their part, the Eurest purchasing management team ensures compliance with their contractual obligations by purchasing Northern Ireland pork produce only.

The Food Standards Agency (FSA) reinstated Northern Irish pork produce on Tuesday 9th December 2008, Eurest are once again sourcing all pork produce from farms within Northern Ireland.

Water Supply

Mr McKay asked the Assembly Commission what action it has taken, and plans to take, to ensure the efficient use of the water supply in Parliament Buildings and to reduce the overall amount used. (AQW 3507/09)

The Representative of the Assembly Commission (Rev Dr R Coulter): The Assembly Commission works closely with the DFP Engineering Services and Energy Unit and the Carbon Trust to improve all aspects of energy and utility efficiency within Parliament Buildings. As such water saving flush systems for urinals have been fitted in the following locations.

- 4th floor east
- 3rd floor east and west
- 2nd floor east and west
- 1st floor east and west

- Ground floor (3 sets)
- Basement (2 sets)

In addition to this 'Hippo Bags', cistern dams which limit the amount of water used per flush, are being tested in various toilets to ensure they do not have an adverse effect before installing them in all toilets. The 'Hippo Bags' had to be removed in some public sector buildings as they did not flush the WC pan adequately.

Consideration is also being given to installing suitable percussion taps within the bathrooms to ensure that taps are not left running when not in use.

In addition, Central Procurement Directorate are currently investigating problems relating to the dispersal of water from the roofs of Parliament Buildings and it is anticipated that the proposed solution will include rainwater harvesting for use in toilets etc.

TSO

Mr McCausland asked the Assembly Commission to explain the basis and nature of the relationship with The Stationery Office under which they are responsible for the printing and publication of Assembly reports.

(AQW 3534/09)

The Representative of the Assembly Commission (Rev Dr R Coulter): The Stationery Office was awarded the contract for the Assembly's Printing, Publication and Related Services in March 2002 following a tendering exercise run by the Government Purchasing Agency (now known as Central Procurement Directorate). The current contract is due to expire on 23 July 2009. The Stationery Office as part of their contractual obligation undertakes any printing and publishing as requested by the Assembly through the Assembly's Printed Paper Office. They also undertake the distribution of Assembly publications through their retail premises in Belfast and online services.

Constituency Offices

Mr Hilditch asked the Assembly Commission if it will consider introducing a standard computerised database for constituency offices of all Parties.

(AQW 3575/09)

The Representative of the Assembly Commission (Rev Dr R Coulter): The Assembly Commission does not currently provide centrally funded software to enable Members to track Constituency Office cases, as each Party has adopted different approaches to the issue.

The Commission is aware of growing interest amongst the Devolved Legislatures and at Westminster for a common approach to managing such information. The Assembly's Information Systems Office is representing the Commission in these initial discussions.

The Information Systems Office maintains a Constituency Office Helpdesk service to assist Members and their staff in ICT related matters. It can be contacted on 028 905 21755.

Electrical Appliances

Mr Wells asked the Assembly Commission if it will ensure that all non-essential electrical appliances will be turned off in Parliament buildings when it is closed for the Christmas/ New Year holidays.

(AQW 3636/09)

The Representative of the Assembly Commission (Rev Dr R Coulter): The Assembly Commission is committed to adopting a proactive approach to energy management and as such encourages all staff when leaving the office to turn off lights, TVs, computers, monitors, and shredders situated in the office.

The Security Officers from the Control Room carry out a patrol at last light and first light, in which they complete a full check of the building, inclusive of switching off lights/ photocopiers, closing windows/ doors and ensuring that the building is secure. Stairwell lights are left on in the event that the building would need to be evacuated during hours of darkness, and to assist the Emergency Services should they require a lighted area if they are responding to an emergency. Security Officers do not, however, enter locked offices to turn off lights and appliances.

In addition to this the Support Services contractor, as part of the nightly (and recess) close down procedure, ensures that all lights and non-essential electrical items are turned off in all catering areas.

Properties Directorate will be issuing a building wide email in advance of the Christmas recess, reminding all building users to switch off lights, TVs, computers, monitors, shredders and other associated electrical equipment.

Weekly Answer Booklet

Mr Wells asked the Assembly Commission why it is necessary to distribute the Weekly Answer Booklet dated 12 December 2008 in a sealed addressed envelope. (AQW 3639/09)

The Representative of the Assembly Commission (Rev Dr R Coulter): In August 2008 a questionnaire was issued to each Member by the Assembly's Printed Paper Office, requesting information on their preferred format for core Assembly documents.

The results of the survey lead to a reduction in the print run of various publications. For example instead of printing and delivering 324 documents (i.e. 108 copies each of the Weekly Information Bulletin, Written Answer Booklet and Questions for Written Answer) to Members' pigeon holes on Monday mornings (as was the case prior to the survey) a total of 210 documents are now printed for Members and delivered (i.e. 60 copies of the Weekly Information Bulletin, 73 copies of the Written Answer Booklet and 77 copies of Questions for Written Answer).

As Members had differing requirements, it became necessary for the Printed Paper Office to devise a system which ensured Members received only the hardcopies of the documents they had requested. The current system of placing documents in a labelled envelope together with a list of the documents they require was adopted and put in place at the end of September 2008.

As a result of your feedback, the Printed Paper Office is considering an alternative method of managing and distributing documents which would negate the use of labelled envelopes.

Road Racing

Mr Poots asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what contribution road racing makes to the economy and the tourism industry. (AQW 3367/09)

The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (Mr G Campbell): I am aware that this Question was due for Answer on 22 December 2007 and I apologise to the Member for the delay.

Road racing, through major international events such as the North West 200 and the Ulster Grand Prix, makes a considerable contribution to the economy and tourism industry here both in terms of attracting visitors that may not otherwise have come to Northern Ireland and raising our international profile as a venue for world class events.

The Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) recognises the importance of such unique road racing events and promotes these on its consumer website www.discovernorthernireland.com. Both NITB and Tourism Ireland feature links to the Motor Cycle Union of Ireland website www.realroadracing.com, which is the governing body of motor cycle sports and responsible for the promotion of the sport.

Additional Fuel Costs

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education for her assessment of the impact of additional fuel costs on (i) schools; and (ii) Education and Library Boards, in this financial year. (AQW 3442/09)

The Minister of Education: B'éigean éifeacht na gcostas breise breosla ar scoileanna agus ar bhoird oideachais agus leabharlainne sa bhliain airgeadais seo a bhainistiú laistigh d'acmhainní reatha.

The impact of the additional fuel costs on schools and education and library boards in this financial year has had to be managed from within existing resources. I have sought additional funding in each of the In-Year Monitoring rounds to alleviate the unprecedented increases, however, no additional resources have been made available. As a consequence of the significant increases in costs, schools and education and library boards have had to reprioritise their activities to absorb these costs in the short-term.

Whilst there have been some reductions in the cost of fuel, particularly in relation to oil, unless there are further decreases, it will not be possible for schools and education and library boards to continue to absorb these costs without an impact on front line services. As part of the Executive's Strategic Stocktake, I have highlighted this issue and sought additional resources to protect the delivery of educational services and will continue to do so.

European Charter on Minority Languages

Mr Butler asked the Minister of Education to demonstrate how her Department and its arms length bodies, have applied, in practice, the European Charter on Minority Languages in relation to the Irish language. (AQW 3461/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá Cairt na hEorpa do Theangacha Réigiúnda nó Mionlaigh curtha i bhfeidhm ag an Roinn Oideachais i dtaca leis an Ghaeilge de, tríd na bearta seo a leanas:-

The Department of Education has applied the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages in relation to the Irish language through the following activities:-

- Letters received in Irish are replied to in Irish;
- Irish is included in my Department's letter head;
- Telephone calls and meetings in Irish are facilitated;
- Consultation documents and school circulars are issued in Irish and English;
- Irish versions of documents, such as those above, are available on the Department's website;
- Irish is incorporated into my answers to Assembly questions, speeches and Assembly statements and is frequently used in press releases;

- Internal guidance on complying with the Charter and a Code of Courtesy on Irish are available to assist staff.

This year my Department appointed two Irish Language Officers. As part of their role these officers carry out many of the tasks listed above, particularly the provision of urgent translations and facilitation of the use of Irish in telephone calls and at meetings or other events. Indeed, they are attending the current series of consultation events relating to the report on the Review of Irish medium Education.

With regard to facilitating Irish medium education, Irish-medium pre-school settings are eligible for funding in the same way as other voluntary and private pre-school playgroups. 521 places were funded including 104 places in the statutory sector in 2007/08.

The Department has approved grant-aided status for 23 Irish-medium schools. In addition there are 11 funded Irish-medium units attached to English medium schools. In 2007/08 there were 2,878 pupils in funded Irish-medium education.

The Department of Education provides core funding to Comhairle na Gaelscolaíochta, the Irish-medium Education Council. One of its roles is to provide advice, assistance and information to groups setting up schools and units.

In addition, the Department has provided significant funding to Iontaobhas na Gaelscolaíochta, the Irish-medium Education Trust-fund, for the purpose of developing and supporting Irish-medium pre-school provision.

The statutory revised curriculum provides opportunities for teaching Irish language, literature, culture and history through areas such as Language & Literacy, Environment & Society and the new strand of Citizenship Education, where young people will be able to explore cultural identity, heritage and diversity.

In the 2007/08 school year I introduced a Primary Languages Programme to provide support for those primary schools who wish to introduce teaching of certain modern languages, including Irish. In addition, within the provisions of the statutory curriculum, schools can choose to make provision for the teaching of Irish at Key Stage 3.

The Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment (CCEA) now has an increased Irish translation facility and provides curriculum support, examination and assessment materials in Irish. CCEA is specifically providing translated materials to support Irish-medium schools in the roll-out of the revised curriculum.

My Department is awaiting recommendations from the joint Queen's University-University of Ulster Subject Centre for Languages, Linguistics and Area Studies on a strategic approach to language learning at all levels for the north of Ireland. This will address language learning at primary and post-primary for a range of languages, including Irish.

Interface Violence

Mr A Maskey asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the programmes her Department funds, in relation to direct intervention and prevention of interface violence; and (ii) the cost of these programmes. (AQW 3483/09)

The Minister of Education: Níl mo Roinn ag tabhairt cistiú d'aon chlár tacaíochta ó thaobh scoileanna atá lonnaithe cois líne síochána de.

My Department is no longer funding any school interface support programmes.

The last Interface School Support Programme ended in March 2008 and was always intended to be a short-term measure, to assist a very small number of the worst affected schools to operate in the midst of community conflict in certain areas of Belfast.

My Department continues to foster and promote better educational opportunities for all our young people, in accordance with its budget priorities.

Through the Department's Extended Schools programme schools can become the hubs of their local communities offering a range of activities beyond the traditional school day engaging with their local community, connecting local people with local services. Extended Schools can make a significant contribution to reducing differentials and improving the quality of life for children and young people particularly from disadvantaged and deprived areas and can build still further on what has been achieved by securing the active engagement of their communities.

Catholic Maintained Schools

Miss McIlveen asked the Minister of Education what steps she is taking to ensure the removal of the requirement to hold a Catholic certificate to teach in Catholic maintained schools. (AQW 3491/09)

The Minister of Education: The recruitment of teachers is exempt from the provisions of the Fair Employment and Treatment (NI) Order 1998. Any changes to this legislation would be a matter for the Office of the First Minister and Deputy First Minister.

Tá beartaithe agam athbhreithniú a dhéanamh ar dheiseanna earcaíochta anois agus san am atá romhainn in earnáil na Múinteoireachta.

I have decided to conduct a review of current and future recruitment opportunities in the Teaching sector. The review will be conducted by my officials working closely with, and involving, key stakeholders. The review will be completed by January 2010.

Community and Volunteer Playgroups

Mr Storey asked the Minister of Education what support is available for community and volunteer playgroups that need to employ a translator to meet the needs of children for whom English is not their first language. (AQW 3503/09)

The Minister of Education: Tháinig méadú de 45% ar líon na ndaltaí ó thíortha eile inár scoileanna idir 2006 agus 2007 agus faoi mhí Dheireadh Fómhair 2007, bhí 5665 dalta ó thíortha eile inár mbunscoileanna, inár n-iarbhunscoileanna agus inár scoileanna speisialta.

The number of newcomer pupils in our schools increased by 45% between 2006 and 2007 and by October 2007 there were 5665 newcomer pupils in our primary, post primary and special schools. My Department does not collect data on newcomer children in pre-school provision. However, there are currently 112 newcomer children in government funded nursery schools and nursery classes within primary schools.

Playgroups need to communicate with newcomer parents and to do this they will wish to have key documents translated into various languages.

The priority for my Department has been to provide services to schools with newcomer pupils. It is for this reason that the Inclusion and Diversity Service (IDS) was set up as a regional service within the Education and Library Boards in April 2007, to strengthen and improve support to newcomer pupils and their parents, primarily working through schools. Part of its responsibilities include such services as interpreting and translating, an information website for newcomer parents and the provision of advice and guidance to schools via locally based Diversity Coordinators.

Due to the very rapid increase in the number of newcomer pupils, IDS has had to concentrate on the primary and the post primary sectors, as it is recognised that the needs of newcomer pupils are greater the older they are when entering the education system.

IDS provide an interpreting service to Department funded nursery schools and units for the following purposes: initial parent/teacher interviews; parent consultation interviews; critical incidents; and pastoral care issues. This service involves the provision of interpreters and is paid for by IDS.

Unfortunately, it has not been possible to provide direct support to community and voluntary playgroups, but a number of services which are accessible via the web, may be of some help to such groups.

Within the past year IDS has offered a translation of documents service, and access to many of these documents is now provided via a website. Schools have access to 10 generic school policies and a number of key letters translated into 15 languages for issue to parents in their own language. Whilst IDS is unable to fund interpreting and translation services for private and voluntary pre-school playgroups, I would encourage playgroups to utilise these generic documents, available on the following website www.education-support.org.uk, for example letters which concern parent/teacher meetings.

The Education Support website includes information about our education system in the north and community and volunteer playgroups could direct newcomer parents to the website as it will be of interest to them.

As part of the funding provided via the Common Funding Formula, schools receive an additional monetary payment for each full-time newcomer pupil in a nursery school/class. In 2008/09 this equates to £983 per pupil. Schools receive £491, again for 2008/09, for each part-time newcomer pupil in a nursery school/class. This funding is available only to government funded nursery schools and nursery classes within primary schools.

Portadown College

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to the answer to AQW 2841/09, when her Department received the submission to the revised appraisal for Portadown College. (AQW 3515/09)

The Minister of Education: Thug Bord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Deiscirt (SELB) breac-chuntas ar na hathruithe molta a bhain leis na bunscéimeanna caipitil formheasta fá choinne Lurgan College agus Portadown College do mo Roinn i mí Mheithimh agus i mí Aibreáin faoi seach.

Proposed changes to the original approved capital schemes for Lurgan and Portadown Colleges were outlined to my Department by the Southern Education and Library Board (SELB) in June and April 2007 respectively. The SELB advised that the Board and Lurgan College had decided it was important to retain a link with the existing listed building. In regard to Portadown College a new internal road layout meant that the capital scheme needed to be revisited. The changes as proposed necessitated revisions to the appraisals which were undertaken by the SELB. The Board and the department have been in contact on the work on both projects on a number of occasions. The latest revisions were received on 24 November 2008 for Portadown College and 10 November 2008 for Lurgan College. The appraisals need to be approved by the Department and the Department of Finance and Personnel. Subject to the appraisals satisfying the requirements it is anticipated that both schemes would be approved shortly.

Lurgan College Scheme

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to the answer to AQW 2841/09, when she anticipates approving the revised Lurgan College scheme. (AQW 3516/09)

Lurgan College Scheme

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to her answer to AQW 2841/09, for the reasons given by the Southern Education and Library Board for submitting the original Lurgan College scheme in a form that required revision. (AQW 3565/09)

Controlled Schools Estate

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Education what plans she has for the future of the controlled schools estate in the Craigavon area. (AQW 3588/09)

The Minister of Education: Is ábhar a bhaineann le Bord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Deiscirt é planáil eastáit na scoileanna rialaithe i gceantair Craigavon.

The planning of the controlled schools estate in the Craigavon area is a matter for the Southern Education and Library Board (SELB) in the first instance.

The SELB has advised that capital schemes are progressing for Portadown College and Lurgan College. The Board has also projects for King's Park and Hart Memorial Primary Schools at the appraisal stage. The Board has advised that discussions are ongoing with a variety of parties on the further development of the controlled schools' estate in the area.

Ulster-Scots Language

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education what action her Department is taking to carry out the obligations of Part 2 of the Council of Europe Charter for Regional or Minority Languages, in relation to the Ulster-Scots language. (AQW 3622/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá Cuid II de Chairt na hEorpa do Theangacha Réigiúnda nó Mionlaigh curtha i bhfeidhm ag an Roinn Oideachais i dtaca le hAlbainis-Uladh de, tríd na gealltanais seo a leanas:-

The Department of Education has applied Part II of the European Charter for Regional or Minority languages in relation to the Ulster-Scots language through the following commitments:-

- Letters received in Ulster-Scots are replied to in Ulster-Scots;
- Ulster-Scots is included in my Department's letter head;
- Telephone calls and meetings in Ulster-Scots can be facilitated.

The Department of Education also supports the implementation of Part II of the Charter in respect of the Ulster-Scots language through provision within the statutory revised curriculum, which is being introduced on a phased basis from September 2007 to June 2010. The revised curriculum provides opportunities for teaching Ulster-Scots literature, culture and history through areas such as Language & Literacy, Environment & Society and the new strand of Citizenship Education, where young people will be able to explore cultural identity, heritage and diversity.

The Department has provided funding for the production of Ulster-Scots primary resource materials, which were made available in December 2007. It has also committed to providing similar support in relation to post-primary materials on their completion and is awaiting engagement in relation to this with the Ulster-Scots Academy Implementation Group.

The Department is awaiting recommendations from the joint Queen's University-University of Ulster Subject Centre for Languages, Linguistics and Area Studies on a strategic approach to language learning at all levels for the north of Ireland.

Devenish College in County Fermanagh

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Education, following recent remarks from her Department that some capital projects may have to 'slow down or temporarily halt', what impact this course of action, if implemented, will have on the proposed new build for Devenish College in County Fermanagh. (AQW 3647/09)

The Minister of Education: Tá athbhreithniú déanta ag Bord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Iarthair ar sholáthar iarbhunscolaíochta rialaithe agus deonacha i bhFear Manach agus an cuspóir acu go mbeidh soláthar inbhuanaithe ann le riachtanais oideachasúla na toadhchá a chomhlíonadh.

The Western Education and Library Board has undertaken a review of controlled and voluntary post primary provision in Fermanagh with the objective of having sustainable provision to meet future educational needs. There is a need for new accommodation for Devenish College and the building project will move forward informed by an agreed strategic approach to future development for the area, and the Board's feasibility study on site options for the College.

EMPLOYMENT AND LEARNING

Survey of 16-25 Year Olds

Mr Shannon asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what steps he is taking to address the findings of the survey of 16-25 year olds, by the Prince's Trust, that suggests this group feels they have minimum contribution to make to society, especially those not in education, work or training. (AQW 3690/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning (Sir Reg Empey): I am aware of the survey undertaken by the Prince's Trust.

As you are aware there was a debate in the Assembly on 18 November about young people not in education, employment or training (NEET), and I committed to take the lead in a scoping study to research further data on the NEET group in Northern Ireland, to identify the relevant actions currently in place across all departments and to recommend whether a cross departmental strategy could achieve better outcomes for this group of young people.

The information from the Prince's Trust survey will be used to inform the study.

Education Maintenance Allowance

Mr Shannon asked the Minister for Employment and Learning (i) why the Education Maintenance Allowance was not paid for the first school term of 2008/9 to the South Eastern Regional College; and (ii) when it will be paid. (AQW 3739/09)

The Minister for Employment and Learning: Education Maintenance Allowance (EMA) payments are made to individual students. My officials have contacted the EMA Customer Services team which has confirmed that EMA payments have been paid to a substantial number of students in the first school term of academic year 2008/09. These include payments to students where applications had been approved and attendance confirmed for the first week in the academic year for the three campuses within the South Eastern Regional College as follows:

- Lisburn campus - 223 students;
- East Down campus - 160 students; and
- North Down and Ards campus – 386 students.

ENTERPRISE, TRADE AND INVESTMENT

Invest NI

Mr Doherty asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the amount of financial assistance provided by Invest NI towards (i) business start-up; (ii) business expansion; and (iii) inward investment projects, in the Strabane District Council area, in the last five years, compared to the overall amount that had been applied for during this period. (AQW 3667/09)

The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (Mrs A Foster): Although the request relates to the last 5 years, information on assistance provided within the Strabane District Council area is more readily available for the 6 year period since the inception of Invest NI. Details are therefore provided as follows:

- (i) Business Start Up Projects: Invest NI made 439 offers to support the formation of new businesses in the Strabane District Council area over the last six years.
- (ii) Business Expansion Projects: Invest NI made 54 offers to existing locally-owned businesses in the Strabane District Council area through a range of schemes and programmes to help expand their operations. In addition, Invest NI also offered support to 123 specific business innovation activities (12 externally-owned and 111 locally-owned) including research and development, trade development, training, and technology and process development projects.
- (iii) Inward Investment Projects: Support was offered to 9 inward investment projects in the Strabane District Council area, including 3 new and 6 reinvestment projects.

Unfortunately, no comparison can be made with the overall amount of assistance applied for as such figures do not exist. This is because Invest NI's client companies do not apply for a pre-determined level of financial assistance in relation to their investment projects. The agency requires clients to prepare comprehensive business plans in relation to investment proposals and these must meet its strict intervention criteria. Invest NI then negotiates and agrees bespoke financial assistance packages individually with the companies concerned with the aim of offering the minimum funding necessary to enable a project to proceed at a given location and within a pre-determined timeframe.

ENVIRONMENT

District Electoral Area Commissioner for Local Government

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment (i) what discussions have been held with the Northern Ireland Office about the timescale for the proposed work programme of the District Electoral Area Commissioner for Local Government; and (ii) what other information has emerged from these discussions. (AQW 3443/09)

The Minister of the Environment (Mr S Wilson): I have had no discussions with the Northern Ireland Office about the timescale for the proposed work programme of the District Electoral Areas Commissioner.

My predecessor, Arlene Foster, wrote to the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on 6 May 2008, informing him of her intention to appoint a Local Government Boundaries Commissioner in early July, and indicating that it would be helpful if a District Electoral Areas Commissioner could be appointed at the earliest opportunity.

The Local Government Boundaries Commissioner was appointed on 1 July 2008, and is due to submit the report on his final recommendations for local government wards and districts on 30 June 2009. In autumn 2009, I will lay the Local Government Boundaries Commissioner's Report before the Assembly, together with draft subordinate legislation giving effect to the recommendations in the report.

The task of the District Electoral Areas Commissioner is to review and make recommendations for grouping together the wards drawn up by the Local Government Boundaries Commissioner into district electoral areas for the purpose of holding local government elections.

The District Electoral Areas Commissioner (Northern Ireland) (Amendment) Order 2007 provides for the appointment of a District Electoral Areas Commissioner as soon as practicable after the appointment of the Local Government Boundaries Commissioner.

Peace III Allocation

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what legal powers allow local councils to distribute or spend money allocated to council clusters as part of the Peace III allocation. (AQW 3511/09)

The Minister of the Environment: The PEACE III Programme is a source of funding. It is not an activity in itself. The legal powers for the involvement of local government in PEACE III derive from local government's general legislative remit, notably the Local Government Act (NI) 1972.

FINANCE AND PERSONNEL

Recruitment Services

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many staff were employed in the delivery of recruitment services and human resource services at the start of the 2008-09 financial year; and to detail the number of staff, broken down by grade, that are required by his Department to deliver retained services over the period of the eHR contract. ### Consultants Employed by Departments

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to provide details, including costs, of all consultants employed by Departments and their agencies, in the last financial year. (AQW 3160/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: The information, including costs of all consultants employed by Departments and their agencies in the last financial year have been provided by departments in annual returns to DFP. Tables setting out the information have been placed in the library.

Wood Chip Energy Production

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how much wood chip energy production will be used by Departments over the next five years. (AQW 3265/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: The amount of wood chip energy production that is proposed to be used by Departments over the next five years is shown below.

	2008/2009	2009/2010	2010/2011	2011/2012	2012/2013	2013/2014

Wood pellet	0	144.5	344.5	464.5	464.5	464.5

European Charter on Minority Languages

Mr Butler asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to demonstrate how his Department and its arms length bodies, have applied, in practice, the European Charter on Minority Languages in relation to the Irish language. (AQW 3462/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: My Department has recently provided input to the 3rd UK report on the implementation of the European Charter on Regional or Minority Languages.

This report, detailing the actions which Departments have taken to fulfil their obligations under the Charter, will be presented to the Executive for approval as soon as possible.

Empty Properties

Dr Farry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what consideration is being given to deferring the introduction of the rating of empty properties in light of the economic downturn and its effects upon the property market. (AQW 3635/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: I recently announced my decision to introduce the rating of empty homes, at 100% liability, from April 2010. I believe this will encourage people to live in homes that are lying empty. It will also raise additional revenue for the Assembly and local councils to help fund public services. However, I am all too aware of the downturn in the property market and if it has not recovered by early 2010 I will consider delaying the introduction of the measure.

You will be aware that the rating of empty commercial property has been in place since April 2004.

Lone Pensioner Allowance Scheme

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many applications have been received for the lone pensioner allowance scheme, broken down by parliamentary constituency. (AQW 3660/09)

Dormant Bank Accounts

Ms J McCann asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel if he will bring forward the necessary measures to use the money from dormant bank accounts to alleviate the financial difficulties facing people in the community. (AQW 3677/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: Under the terms of the current legislation, the Scheme provides a general definition of “social or environmental purposes” on which the unclaimed assets may be spent. I believe that it is important that all interested parties should have the opportunity to be involved in the setting of local priorities for the distribution of funds currently locked in dormant bank and building society accounts for the benefit of the community.

Therefore, subject to Executive agreement, I am proposing the launch of a 12 week consultation on the Dormant Accounts Scheme during February.

Dormant Bank Accounts

Mr McCartney asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel if he is aware of the Dormant Bank and Building Society Act 2008; and to outline how much money will be made available to target the need for youth facilities in the most deprived areas. (AQW 3683/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: On the 27 November 2007, the Assembly passed a Legislative Consent Motion agreeing that the provisions in the Dormant Bank and Building Society Accounts Bill relating to the distribution in Northern Ireland of sums released from dormant bank and building society accounts should be considered by the UK Parliament. The Dormant Bank and Building Society Act 2008 received Royal Assent on 26 November 2008.

Under the terms of the current legislation, the Scheme provides a general definition of “social or environmental purposes” on which the unclaimed assets may be spent. I believe that it is important that all interested parties should have the opportunity to be involved in the setting of local priorities for the distribution of funds currently locked in dormant bank and building society accounts for the benefit of the community.

Therefore, subject to Executive agreement, I am proposing the launch of a 12 week consultation on the Dormant Accounts Scheme during February.

Dormant Bank Accounts

Mr McCartney asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel (i) how much; (ii) when; and (iii) how, money from the Dormant Bank and Building Society Act 2008 will be made available. (AQW 3684/09)

The Minister of Finance and Personnel: At present it is estimated the Northern Ireland share for investment will be between £10-20 million in the first year and then tail off rapidly in future years with estimates of a few hundreds of thousands per year thereafter.

It will be mid 2009 before the Dormant Accounts Scheme will be launched and funds from identified dormant accounts will begin to be transferred to the Reclaim Fund.

It will be early 2010 before the funds are transferred from the Reclaim Fund to BIG Lottery Fund for distribution through the Dormant Accounts Scheme. The Dormant Accounts Scheme will be a separate and distinct funding stream from lottery funding with its own branding.

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (Mr M McGimpsey): It should be noted that the number and rate of bonus payments which can be paid to senior officials in DHSSPS and in all NI Departments is set by the Department of Finance and Personnel. ### Ravara House, Bangor

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the savings to be made through the proposed closure of Ravara House, Bangor. (AQW 3333/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Full public consultation, which is running from November 20th 2008 to February 12th 2009, is currently ongoing on the South Eastern Trust's proposals and therefore it is not yet decided whether this establishment will close, or how precisely services would be reconfigured. No decision will be taken by the Trust until such times as it has given full and proper consideration to the response to the consultation. It is therefore not possible to make a reliable estimate of the savings to be achieved from this specific site at the present time.

South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the savings to be made through the reduction of the use of (i) agency staff; (ii) locums; and (iii) bank staff, by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust. (AQW 3335/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I have asked all Trusts to reduce reliance upon temporary staff and absence management and productivity targets have been put in place. A full assessment of the anticipated savings cannot be made until the consultation process on the efficiency proposals is complete.

Child Protection Services

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action his Department has taken to ensure lessons are learned from the failures of the 'baby P' case in England. (AQW 3374/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: My staff are considering this case very carefully to see if there are any lessons which can be learned to improve further child protection services in Northern Ireland. My officials are currently seeking an update from Trusts on current compliance with Laming recommendations. The Regulation and Quality Improvement Authority (RQIA) RQIA will as part of their review of child protection services within HSC Trusts and HSS Boards also consider Trust compliance with Laming recommendations. The RQIA, will also consider what good practice has been successfully achieved in safeguarding children since the Climbié Report, along with key features of good practice and whether these are universally applied in relation to effective implementation of safeguarding systems and procedures. RQIA has also been asked to report on interagency working, development and deployment of professional workforce capacity and effective systems of public accountability.

In addition, we have invested heavily in child protection services and family support. This includes a reform of front line child protection services which involves the introduction of a uniform assessment model to be used by professionals when assessing the needs of individual children and their families. We have also reviewed child protection structures and established Gateway Teams within each of the HSC Trusts to deal with child protection cases. Measures have been taken to improve supervision, recording and information exchange within child protection services in HSC Trusts and we have also invested heavily to improve Trust IT facilities.

Work is underway to establish an independently-chaired regional statutory Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland which will make arrangements here amongst the strongest, robust and effective anywhere in the world. The new Safeguarding Board will, for example, include a duty on relevant agencies to co-operate to safeguard children.

Bamford Review

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps he is taking to have the recommendations in the Bamford Review actioned for existing services in the Western Health and Social Care Trust. (AQW 3379/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Reviews of adult mental health services in the Western Trust area in recent years will lead to a significant move away from inpatient care towards a range of alternative community based services, in line with the Bamford vision. The Trust is redesigning its community mental health team service to provide more specialised services to include primary care liaison, home treatment, rehabilitation and recovery, psychological therapies and acute day care services.

As a result of the shift to community based services, the Trust is planning to replace existing mental health inpatient facilities with two new inpatient facilities, one at Gransha due for completion by 2011 and the other at the new Omagh hospital site, due for completion in 2014.

Other mental health service developments being funded over the current and next two years are personality disorder services and advocacy and support partnerships with service users and their carers. Work to resettle long stay inpatients continues.

Within learning disability services, resettlement of long stay inpatients and tackling delayed discharges from hospital are priorities. Additional investment is also being directed towards crisis intervention services, day services, respite, advocacy and domiciliary care.

(AQW 3692/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The various forms of information requested in this question either do not exist or could not be captured without incurring disproportionate costs.

Viruses cannot be eradicated: they are found wherever there is life and are thought to have existed since living cells first evolved. In a hospital environment effective infection control measures such as good hand hygiene practice, the use of personal protective equipment, environmental cleaning, and the use of isolation rooms all help to control the spread of infection, including infections caused by viruses.

Patient Satisfaction Survey

Dr McDonnell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the total cost of the patient satisfaction survey being conducted by MORI. (AQW 3731/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Patient Experience Survey, which has been introduced in Northern Ireland this year as part of the UK Wide General Medical Services (GMS) Contract will, for the first time, provide data on patient satisfaction with the services they receive from their GP practices and specifically under the General Medical Services (GMS) Contract.

It will provide the Department, Boards and the new Regional HSC Board with better information than ever before on patients' experiences of the delivery of services in primary care. Practices will also be able to use the results of the survey as a tool for implementing changes to improve services for their patients

The total cost of the GP Patient Survey is £479,200, which represents approximately 0.2% of the total cost of the GMS budget.

Eating Disorders

Mr Doherty asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in relation to people who have an eating disorder, to provide by Health and Social Care Trust area (i) the number of people diagnosed, in each of the last five years; (ii) the gender and age of people diagnosed, in each of the last five years; (iii) the services available; and (iv) plans he has to build on the existing services. (AQW 3758/09)

The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The information requested is attached (tab 1)

I am committed to the development of specialist eating disorder services. I have secured an additional £1 million over the next three years to enhance access to these services and my expert advice indicates that investment should continue to be used to develop the range of specific specialist services. I have however also agreed to the development of inpatient capacity for those with complex needs.

This will be supported by specialist community based staff on an in-reach basis.

Services Provided by Each Trust:

Northern HSC Trust

Adult Services

In the last 2 years, a Specialist Eating Disorder Team has been established which provides out-patient appointments throughout the Northern Trust Area.

The Northern Trust Eating Disorder Service has input from the Regional Specialist Consultant Psychiatrist one day a month and from the Regional Specialist Dietician one day every fortnight. Both these specialists can be accessed at any time with urgent queries.

Where a person is assessed as needing specialist in-patient treatment, an ECR (Extra-Contractual Referral) can be made to Specialist Units in the UK and Dublin, with follow-up provided upon discharge.

Child and Adolescent Services

The Trust has recently appointed a dedicated staff team to respond to the treatment needs of young people under the age of 18 with eating disorders. Team members are Nurse Practitioners, who have particular expertise in the area of eating disorders.

In addition to this, there is a consultation service once per month offering services to other professionals. There is also a telephone helpline, which operates daily from 12noon to 1pm, again providing a service to other professionals.

Belfast and South Eastern HSC Trusts*Adult Services

The Eastern Board Adult Eating Disorders Service has been operating since April 2006. It offers Specialist Tier 3 outpatient treatment to people with Eating Disorders in the Belfast Trust and South Eastern Trust. It also acts as the regional triage to Specialist inpatient provision currently provided in England and the Republic of Ireland.

Child and Adolescent Services

The Trust is in the process of developing a specialist Eating Disorder Service specifically for children and young people (0-18) which should be fully operational by early 2010.

The Trust is currently not commissioned to provide a specialist inpatient Eating Disorder Service and arrangements are made for children/ young people requiring such services to access inpatient care in Great Britain. Inpatient care can however be provided locally for less complex cases.

Southern HSC Trust*Adult Services

The Southern Trust Adult Eating Disorder Team is a community/outpatient service. Treatment offered includes structured psychological therapies, dietetic input and the involvement of families and carers.

In addition to the statutory service provision for eating disorders, valuable support is also provided by voluntary agencies.

Children and Young People With An Eating Disorder

The Child and Adolescent Eating Disorder Service is a newly established multi-disciplinary team, who provide prompt, comprehensive assessment and treatment of young people and their families, who present on referral with eating difficulties in the form of Anorexia Nervosa, Bulimia Nervosa and EDNOS (Eating Disorder Not Otherwise Specified) up to the age of 18.

The CAMHS Eating Disorder Service has currently no dedicated in-patient provision. Should a young person require a hospital admission this is arranged in joint collaboration with the Lead Consultant and the Eating Disorder Service.

Western HSC Trust*Adult Services

In the Western Trust area there is a Trust wide dedicated Eating Disorders Team, within the Psychological Therapies Team, who are specialist trained. There is also sessional input into the Eating Disorder Team from a Consultant in this field.

Where a person is assessed as needing specialist in-patient treatment, an ECR (Extra-Contractual Referral) can be made to Specialist Unit, with follow-up provided upon discharge.

Child Services

Any child under the age of 16 years who has an eating disorder will be supported by the CAMHS service. The CAMHS service is currently recruiting to fill two specialist Eating Disorder practitioners and two specialist dietician posts.

REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT*M2 Widening Scheme

Mr Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development to confirm if the M2 widening scheme will be completed in March 2009; and to state the completion date scheduled in the original proposals. (AQW 3697/09)

The Minister for Regional Development (Mr C Murphy): My Department's Roads Service has advised that the M2 improvement scheme is currently programmed by the contractor for completion in March 2009, some five months ahead of the contractor's original programmed completion date of 28 August 2009.

The Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that there are three salt boxes in Rathenraw. These are located at Devon Court, Dorset Close and Somerset Park. However, the salt box at Somerset Park has been removed, due to vandalism, but will be replaced.

There are plans for two additional boxes at Norfolk Square and Sussex Square. It is intended that these will be provided before 9 January 2009.

Public-Sector Housing

Mr Newton asked the Minister for Social Development what action her Department is taking to identify potential sites for public-sector housing, in the East Belfast constituency.

(AQW 3468/09)

The Minister for Social Development: A total of 987 new homes have already been identified across 64 separate sites in East Belfast over the next 5 years. The Northern Ireland Housing Executive continues to work closely with the Housing Association movement to find additional sites where the need is clearly identified and resources are available.

Housing Build

Mr Newton asked the Minister for Social Development if she still intends to deliver the (i) 5,250 houses by 2011; and (ii) 10,000 houses by 2013, as stated in the Assembly on 26 February 2008.

(AQW 3470/09)

The Minister for Social Development: I am committed to delivering a New Housing Agenda that can start to address the growing housing need across Northern Ireland. Central to this must be an increased provision in the supply of social and affordable housing and if I am given the resources I will deliver these much needed houses.

European Charter on Minority Languages

Mr Butler asked the Minister for Social Development to demonstrate how his Department and its arms length bodies, have applied, in practice, the European Charter on Minority Languages in relation to the Irish language. (AQW 3518/09)

The Minister for Social Development: My Department is represented on the Inter Departmental Charter Implementation Group, which is currently developing a strategy for indigenous languages. The Department is meeting its commitments under the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages in respect of Irish and Ulster-Scots and has issued guidance to all staff on this subject. A Code of Courtesy has been developed to enable staff to deal with customers wishing to conduct their business in Irish as well as Ulster-Scots. Both the guidance and Code of Courtesy are available on the Department's internet site in English, Irish and Ulster-Scots. Information on the Code of Courtesy is also included as part of the induction package for all staff joining the Department. In addition, as required under the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages, documents can be made available in Irish upon request where there is an identified need.

Adaption Grants

Mr Shannon asked the Minister for Social Development what is the adaption budget for the Housing Executive in the Strangford constituency. (AQW 3538/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The information is not available in the format requested. The Northern Ireland Housing Executive record adaptation grants are based on the local District Council boundaries. The Strangford constituency takes in parts of the District Council areas of Ards, Castlereagh and Down.

The adaptation budget for 2008/2009 for the Ards, Castlereagh and Down Councils is £2,084,000.

Social Housing

Mr F McCann asked the Minister for Social Development (i) how many people have been evicted from social housing; (ii) the reasons for these evictions; and (ii) the areas where they took place, in each of the past five years. (AQW 3549/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Details and the reasons for evictions secured by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and Housing Associations from 2004/2005 onwards are set out in the following 4 tables.

In addition, one Housing Association tenant was evicted from Belfast (City Centre area) in 2007/2008 for not using their home as their principle residence.

Monitoring Rounds

Mr F McCann asked the Minister for Social Development has any of the budget allocation over the last two monitoring rounds been redirected to other programmes and if so, (i) what is the amount; (ii) to where was it redirected; and (iii) what the impact on the programmes will be that lost this resource. (AQW 3560/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The information requested, as it relates to the June & September monitoring round re-allocations, is in the table below. The implications of the December monitoring round are still being considered by the Department.

JUNE & SEPTEMBER 2008 MONITORING ROUNDS

Amount £m	Expenditure Type	Movement		Impact on donor area programmes
June 2008
50.00	Capital	From Social Security Agency	To Housing	No in-year consequences, as the Jobs & Benefits Office rollout has been re-phased to later years.

Amount £m	Expenditure Type	Movement		Impact on donor area programmes
September 2008
0.080	Capital	From Social Security Agency	To Child Maintenance & Enforcement Division	No impact, as year end easement still anticipated in Social Security Agency capital programme.
15.499	Capital / Capital Grant	From Urban Regeneration & Community Development Group	To Housing	The funding transferred came from a combination of additional receipts, easements in other areas and re-phasing of certain projects and programmes. As some of the Urban Regeneration work has been re-phased, none of the Programmes will be adversely affected by the transfers to Housing.

Employment and Support Allowances

Mr F McCann asked the Minister for Social Development (i) why people who make a claim for Employment and Support Allowances without a BT phone line have to pay; and (ii) what percentage of claimants have made contact by a BT phone line. (AQW 3563/09)

The Minister for Social Development: New claims for Employment and Support Allowance can be made on a BT 0800 provided number. BT do not charge for the call, instead these costs are met by my Department. Customers ringing from a non BT landline or mobile may be charged by their network provider for the connection onto the BT number. However, to minimise the impact of this, customers are alerted to the position at the outset of their call and, on request, my Department will call the customer back in order to take their claim.

The information to determine the percentage of customers making contact by BT landline is not captured by our service provider. To gather this information from other sources would be at disproportionate cost.

Glenavy Village

Mr Butler asked the Minister for Social Development to detail when the social housing scheme proposed by the Housing Executive for Glenavy Village, will commence. (AQW 3606/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Northern Ireland Housing Executive has received a bid from a Housing Association to deliver a new build scheme for 21 units at Pigeontown Road, Glenavy during 2010/11 and this is currently being considered as part of the new draft Social Housing Development Programme 2009/10 – 2013/14.

The new five year Social Housing Development Programme is currently being formulated and subject to approval will be published in February 2009.

Public-Sector Housing

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development what action her Department is taking to identify potential sites for public-sector housing, in the North Down constituency. (AQW 3611/09)

The Minister for Social Development: During the next three years, 16 sites with the potential to deliver 328 new homes have already been identified across North Down. The Northern Ireland Housing Executive continues to work closely with the Housing Association movement to find additional sites where the need is clearly identified and resources available.

Department Restructuring

Mr F McCann asked the Minister for Social Development how many jobs will be lost in her Department and how many Social Security offices will close as a result of restructuring; and for her assessment of the impact of these changes on her Department. (AQW 3615/09)

The Minister for Social Development: There will be no Social Security Offices closed as a result of restructuring proposals. With regards to jobs, as the recently published consultation documents make clear, no staff will lose their employment.

Social Housing

Mr F McCann asked the Minister for Social Development (i) what social clauses have been included in the social housing procurement strategy to guarantee that local developers and construction workers will benefit; and (ii) what provision has been made for apprentice places in the strategy. (AQW 3616/09)

The Minister for Social Development: One of the reasons for the introduction of the Social Housing Development Programme Procurement Strategy is to achieve full compliance with all aspects of public procurement policy such as those set out in the publication 'Equality of Opportunity and Sustainable Development in Public Procurement' relating to long-term unemployed and apprentices. There is a range of possibilities which make it possible to use public procurement to assist in attaining desired social objectives. Whilst it is not possible or legal to guarantee work to local developers and contractors, social clauses (including provision of apprentices) will be introduced into construction contracts for social housing during the implementation of this Strategy.

Carrickfergus Housing

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister for Social Development how many houses and flats the Housing Executive has allocated in the Carrickfergus area, since January 2007. (AQW 3619/09)

The Minister for Social Development: Since January 2007 there have been a total of 286 properties allocated in the Carrickfergus area. This is broken down as follows; 116 flats, 95 houses, 73 bungalows, and 2 maisonettes.

Hospital Lane in Limavady

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Social Development what consideration she has given to using any underspend in her budget to fund the multi element improvement scheme at Hospital Lane in Limavady. (AQW 3642/09)

The Minister for Social Development: There is no underspend in my budget and following the outcome of the December Monitoring round an urgent review of all Improvement Schemes such as this is underway. Whilst the scheme design for the first phase of the strategy has been approved, a revised programme is now being prepared based on the resources available to me and it will be published as soon as possible.

Pensioner Bungalows Scheme

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development if funding is now available for the commencement of the pensioner bungalows scheme at Ballyree Drive, Bangor, scheduled for May 2009. (AQW 3646/09)

The Minister for Social Development: An improvement scheme for the Ballyree bungalows is currently planned involving improvement works to 44 dwellings at an estimated cost of £2.4m. However, all Northern Ireland Housing Executive programmes are currently under review. The Northern Ireland Housing Executive will work to formulate a revised programme as a matter of urgency over the coming weeks.

Economic Downturn

Mr Craig asked the Minister for Social Development to outline what plans her Department has to help the most vulnerable in society due to the economic downturn. (AQW 3657/09)

The Minister for Social Development: My Department has put in place a range of measures to help people in Northern Ireland to cope with the economic downturn.

From 5th January 2009 a package of measures to support vulnerable home owners will be introduced to alleviate the financial strain on those who may face having their homes repossessed. The measures include shortening the waiting period in Income Support, income-based Jobseeker's Allowance and income-related Employment and Support Allowance for assistance with mortgage interest payments. There will also be an increase in the capital limit on loans from £100,000 to £200,000 for which assistance is available for new working age and certain Pension Credit claims.

These measures should go some way in helping to prevent the rise in repossessions.

On 25 November 2008 I announced a one-off increase in this year's Christmas Bonus payment from £10 to £70. The £60 increase is equivalent to bringing forward the up-rating of the basic State Pension from April to January. The traditional £10 Bonus was paid as usual in December and the remaining £60 will be paid in the New Year.

For 2008/2009 there will be a one-off increased payment of the Winter Fuel Payment from £200 to £250 for those aged 60 or over and from £300 to £400 for those aged 80 and over.

There will be a one-off increased payment of the Cold Weather Payment from £8.50 to £25 for each period of cold weather for the winter of 2008/09.

In May 2008 I launched the 2008/09 Benefit Uptake Programme to increase awareness of social security benefits. This year's Programme will see over 115,000 people contacted about possible benefit entitlement. In addition the Social Security Agency has a comprehensive system of reviews to ensure people are receiving their full entitlement. Since April 2008, over 5,000 cases have been adjusted upwards resulting in extra benefit payments of approximately £12.8m.

Wood Pellet Boilers

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister for Social Development how many wood pellet boilers have been installed by the Housing Executive; and how this compares in cost and efficiency with other forms of heating. (AQW 3663/09)

The Minister for Social Development: To date the Northern Ireland Housing Executive has installed 26 wood pellet boilers in pilot schemes. The average cost to install a wood pellet boiler is £720 more expensive than installing a full oil heating system with condensing boiler and oil tank and £1920 more expensive than a full gas heating system with condensing boiler.

With regard to the efficiency of the units, wood pellet boilers are 84.4% efficient, compared to gas condensing boilers which are 90-91.3% efficient and oil condensing boilers which are 92.2% efficient.

Social Security Social Fund Loans

Ms J McCann asked the Minister for Social Development if she will widen the scope of Social Security Social Fund loans so that people can access loans to pay for utilities bills such as gas, electricity and oil. (AQW 3676/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The aim of the Budgeting Loan scheme is to enable people, who are most likely to need help with budgeting for one-off expenses, to have access to interest-free credit. The Budgeting Loan scheme has a fixed amount of money and must be prioritised accordingly. There are no plans to widen the scope of the scheme.

Crisis loans are interest-free loans which are intended to help meet an immediate short-term need in an emergency if there is serious damage or risk to health and safety. Crisis loans are decided on individual circumstances and subject to budgetary constraints.

Energy Performance Certificates

Mr Shannon asked the Minister for Social Development if the Housing Executive will sub-contract out the Energy Performance certificate for the Housing Executive Tenancy Re-lets. (AQW 3693/09)

The Minister for Social Development: The Northern Ireland Housing Executive provides Energy Performance Certificates using in-house resources and has no plans to sub-contract this work.

Strategic Business Review

Mr Doherty asked the Minister for Social Development if she (i) will ensure that employees in the Income Support section of the Omagh Jobs and Benefits Office will not be relocated to Derry/Londonderry under the ongoing Strategic Business Review; and (ii) will consider the equality impact of proposals to relocate jobs from the Omagh Jobs and Benefits Office to Derry/Londonderry. (AQW 3756/09)

The Minister for Social Development: All of the proposals under the Strategic Business Review are currently the subject of a public consultation exercise which started on the 27 November 2008 and is due to end in late April 2009. The consultation process will include the completion of an Equality Impact Assessment. I will not be making any final decisions until the consultation process, including consideration of the equality impact of proposals, has been completed.

In line with this, no decisions have been made for any office as to which individual employees would be relocated or to where. However all of the proposals are based on the principle that any relocation of staff would be within reasonable daily travel provisions contained within their terms and conditions of employment.

ASSEMBLY COMMISSION

Assembly Commission Staff Transport

Mr McKay asked the Assembly Commission what percentage of its staff (i) take part in car-sharing schemes; (ii) use public transport; and (iii) take single-person car journeys to work every day. (AQW 3449/09)

The Representative of the Assembly Commission (Rev Dr R Coulter): Northern Ireland Assembly has been working in partnership with a consortium of other Stormont Estate users (OFMDFM, DFP, DARD, DHSSPS, DETI and NIO) in developing a Workplace Travel Plan (WTP).

The main objective of the WTP is to encourage staff to travel by sustainable modes to and from work as well as for business trips. As part of the WTP a staff travel study was undertaken of Assembly staff to establish workplace travel behaviours. A total of 92% of Assembly staff responded to the survey.

Figures obtained show that 9% of staff take part in a car sharing scheme; 15% use public transport whilst 63% of staff surveyed make single person car journeys. As a consequence of this survey a number of travel plan targets have been set for the whole of the Stormont Estate for a two year period as follows;

- Increase cycle modal share to 2% (2009) and 4% (2010)
- Increase walking from 1.4% to 2.5% (2009) and 3.5% (2010)
- Increase car sharing from 18.5% to 24% (2009) and 30% by (2010)
- Increase bus users to 12% (2009) and 15% (2010).

Written Answers to Questions

OFFICE OF THE FIRST MINISTER AND DEPUTY FIRST MINISTER

European Charter on Minority Languages

Mr P Butler asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister to demonstrate how its Department and its arms length bodies, have applied, in practice, the European Charter on Minority Languages in relation to the Irish language. (AQW 3522/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister (Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness): The Department and its arms length bodies comply with the European Charter for Regional or Minority Languages in respect of the Irish Language and Ulster Scots. The Guidance and Codes of Courtesy for Irish and Ulster Scots, developed by an Inter-Departmental Charter Implementation Group (ICIG), was adopted by OFMDFM in February 2004 to assist staff to apply the principles of the Charter, as may be required by users of the services provided by the Department and its arms length bodies.

OFMDFM has published a number of documents aimed at children and young people which have been translated into Irish to be provided to the Irish medium primary schools and Irish medium units within primary schools.

The Children and Young People's Unit is currently producing, in Irish, awareness raising material, including a document called Spin Wheel, on children's rights under the UNCRC for primary school children which will be distributed to Irish medium primary schools and Irish medium units within primary schools.

As part of the Community Relations Council's overall responsibilities under Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act, it has made a commitment to make available, on request, translated summaries of its main documents.

The North South Ministerial Council (NSMC) Joint Secretariat (North) deals with written correspondence and telephone queries in line with the guidance on meeting UK Government Commitments in respect of the Irish Language. The NSMC Joint Secretariat Annual Report is available in Irish on the NSMC Website, which has a link from the OFMDFM website.

In the context of a public consultation on the Review of the Civic Forum, OFMDFM received a consultation submission in the Irish language from POBAL, the Irish language umbrella group. The Department has published the submission in full on its Civic Forum review website, together with an English translation commissioned by the Department. The Review Team subsequently met the Director of POBAL.

Mortgage Market

Mr F Brolly asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail its efforts to persuade banks and financial institutions to re-introduce liquidity to the mortgage market. (AQO 1734/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: We met with the banks in July and December last year to discuss liquidity, lending, interest rates, housing and mortgages.

We urged banks to pass on interest rate cuts and we discussed measures to ease credit to business by considering how we might simplify existing loan guarantee schemes. We were encouraged by the positive attitude taken by the banks towards working with property developers in considering greater use of co-ownership arrangements.

Banking is, of course, a reserved matter and there are limits on what the Executive can do. It is also a complex area, influenced by a great many factors such as interbank lending, capitalisation, margins between loans and deposits, and the need to protect savers and depositors as well as maintain credit to borrowers.

Looking ahead, we will maintain the dialogue we have started with the local banks and financial institutions. We will use our influence to protect and support business and households in Northern Ireland. We remain keen to see the benefits of lower base rates feeding through to lower mortgage payments, lower financing and borrowing costs, and increased credit for local business and people.

Gender Equality

Mrs D Kelly asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister to set out a timescale for the publication of the Gender Equality Strategy. (AQO 1654/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: The Executive adopted the 10-year Gender Equality Strategy in the Programme for Government 2008-2011.

Cross-departmental gender equality action plans, one for men and one for women, will be included in a report to Ministers early this year. This will provide an opportunity for Ministers to consider the continuing relevance of the Strategy.

Programme for Government

Mr S Moutray asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister how it is delivering against its Programme for Government targets. (AQO 1635/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: The Office of the First and deputy First Minister continues to make good progress in the delivery of its Programme for Government, targets and we remain on track for the achievement of our PfG commitments and outcomes.

In the last few months we have achieved the following PfG outcomes:

- An additional 3 Bills have been introduced to the Assembly, including the Financial Assistance Bill introduced this morning.
- In October 2008, the Concluding Observations of the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child were sent to all Ministers, MLAs and the Committee for OFMDFM to raise awareness of these issues. Executive Ministers have been asked to consider how they can address the Concluding Observations in the three year Strategy Action Plan for children and young people currently under development.
- In December 2008, Lifetime Opportunities was formally adopted by the Executive.
- On 1 December 2008, Dame Joan Harbison was appointed as the Advocate for Older People.
- A new honorary consul for Poland has been appointed.

We also continue to make significant progress in delivering the 10-year Investment Strategy to renew our vital infrastructure, and in taking forward a range of cross-cutting issues in conjunction with DSD and DHSSPS in the delivery of our commitments under PSA 7, Making People's Lives Better.

Executive Meetings

Mrs N Long asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister for its assessment of the timescale required to catch up on work not progressed during the suspension of Executive meetings. (AQO 1744/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: Since meetings resumed on 20 November, the Executive has met five times, and once in sub-group format. It has agreed 41 papers dealing with a broad range of issues across all aspects of Government. These bald statistics alone cannot, of course, convey the significant effort which the Ministers of the Executive, both inside and outside its meetings, devoted during this time to preparing its response to the economic downturn, as presented to the Assembly on 15 December.

We must, also, re-emphasise the point made to the Member in our answer to her question of 8 December. Executive business is a continuous process of consultation and agreement on draft papers circulated by individual Ministers. There will, therefore, always be draft papers at various stages of consideration and awaiting inclusion on the agenda of future Executive meetings.

The length of that consideration is not determined solely by the frequency of Executive meetings, but also by the time needed by Ministers to consider the often complex and sensitive issues and proposals being put forward, before they can be referred to the Executive for its formal agreement.

The Executive will meet again on 15 January and a schedule of future meetings has been agreed. We are now in a position where all agreed papers can proceed routinely to the next appropriate meeting.

Gender Equality

Mrs C Hanna asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister when action plans to promote gender equality will be agreed and published. (AQO 1655/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: Officials are currently finalising cross-departmental gender equality action plans and will shortly report to us on implementing the Gender Equality Strategy. We will, of course, consult the OFMDFM Committee on the actions plans before they are submitted to the Executive for consideration. The intention is that, following agreement by the Executive, cross-departmental gender equality action plans will be published on the OFMDFM website.

Programme for Government

Dr S Farry asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister to report on plans to revise the Programme for Government in light of the global economic downturn. (AQO 1742/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: In recent months the Executive has focused on the challenges presented by the global economic downturn. In this period we have also re-affirmed that improving our economy remains our top priority as set out in the Programme for Government (PfG). In this context we are committed to the ongoing review of the PfG to take account of changing circumstances and ensure we are clearly focused on addressing the key challenges we face.

We recognise that economic conditions have changed remarkably since our programme for government was first set. Notwithstanding this, our decision to prioritise the economy remains valid and it is more important than ever that we deliver on the PfG commitments. We regularly review our targets to ensure they remain relevant and focused on addressing the key challenges we face in the medium to longer term, and we are currently considering the possibility of a more formal stock-take of PfG.

USA Visit

Mr A Easton asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister for its assessment of the outcomes of the recent visit to the United States of America. (AQO 1628/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: The key purpose of our visit last month to Washington, D.C., Annapolis and New York was to promote investment opportunities in Northern Ireland and to support InvestNI in its negotiations with potential investors.

We were received at the highest levels and had meetings with President Bush, the Governor of Maryland, and the Mayor of New York. In Washington we were the keynote speakers at the Fortune 500 Dinner. We were able to use that platform to deliver the Northern Ireland business message to over 250 senior executives from America's top companies.

In New York we met with representatives from the stock exchange and we undertook a separate briefing session on investment opportunities with a group of Wall Street executives.

It was clear from all our discussions that, despite the economic downturn, Northern Ireland continues to attract interest from American companies looking for a foothold in Europe. We were greatly encouraged by ongoing support for Northern Ireland and we intend to build on that support during future visits to the United States.

Meeting with Bank Representatives

Mr D O'Loan asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister to report on its meeting with Chief Executives of Northern Ireland banks. (AQO 1652/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: We had a very informative meeting with the four main local banks on 16 December 2008 to discuss liquidity, lending, interest rates, housing and mortgages. In particular, we urged banks to pass on interest rate cuts to local customers to ensure that the benefits continue to feed through to lower mortgage payments, lower financing and borrowing costs, and increased credit for local business and households.

European Charter on Minority Languages

Mr P Butler asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister to demonstrate how its Department and its arms length bodies, have applied, in practice, the European Charter on Minority Languages in relation to the Irish language. (AQO 1793/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: We refer the Member to our answer to AQW 3522/09 dated 12 January 2009.

Executive's Financial Package

Miss M McIlveen asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister if any Minister voted against the Executive's financial package announced in December 2008. (AQO 1651/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: In accordance with Section 28A (8) of the Northern Ireland Act, it is the duty of the Chairmen of the Executive Committee to seek to secure that decisions of the Executive Committee are reached by consensus wherever possible: If consensus cannot be reached, a vote may be taken.

No vote was required in relation to the Executive's consideration of the financial package announced on 15 December.

Departmental Underspend

Mr W Irwin asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the anticipated level of departmental underspend this year. (AQO 1627/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: The Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister is forecasting a year end underspend of 0.9% (£0.649m) for the 2008/09 financial year.

This comprises a forecast administration cost underspend of 1.1% (£0.177m), a forecast resource underspend of 0.9% (£0.472m), and a forecast capital underspend of £nil.

These forecasts are based on outturn data to 30 November 2008.

Programme for Government

Mr N McCausland asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister what arrangements are in place to monitor the delivery of the Programme for Government. (AQO 1727/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: The Programme for Government is framed under five priority areas which set out a range of key goals and commitments for the Executive collectively to deliver. These are in turn supported by a detailed framework of 23 cross-cutting Public Service Agreements (PSAs) which confirm the key actions and targets departments will take forward over the next three years in support of the Executive's priorities.

The Executive is determined to deliver on those targets and key goals. In that context, departments have worked together to develop detailed Delivery Agreements for each PSA. These Delivery Agreements set out in more detail how departments intend to ensure delivery of the targets and actions set out in the Programme for Government and provide the basis upon which the Executive will monitor delivery of the Programme for Government. At present, that information is provided by departments as part of the in-year monitoring rounds.

Meeting with Bank Representatives

Mr D Burnside asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the specific commitments it sought from banks and what guarantees were given by bank representatives, at the meeting on 16 December 2008. (AQO 1646/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: We met with the banks in July and December last year to discuss liquidity, lending, interest rates, housing and mortgages.

Banking is, of course, a reserved matter. Nevertheless, we urged the banks to pass on interest rate cuts and discussed how we might improve access to credit for businesses. We were encouraged by the positive attitude taken by the banks towards working with property developers and considering greater use of co-ownership arrangements where possible. We do plan to have further meetings with the banks.

Ministerial Code

Mr R Beggs asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the process for assessing a potential breach of the Ministerial Code. (AQO 1705/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: The Ministerial Code does not specify any procedure to be followed in relation to the determination of any complaint in relation to its provisions. Section 28A of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 requires Ministers to act in accordance with the provisions of the Ministerial Code and any alleged breach of the Code could be decided as a matter of law.

In addition, questions of confidence in Ministers relating to their observance of the Pledge of Office are specifically a matter for the Assembly under Section 30 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE AND RURAL DEVELOPMENT

Reducing Paperwork

Dr A McDonnell asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what steps she is taking to significantly reduce the amount of paperwork she sends to constituency offices and other organisations throughout 2009. (AQW 3733/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development (Ms M Gildernew): My Department has a statutory responsibility to consult with a range of stakeholders, including political representatives and other interested parties on a range of policy and legislative proposals. In doing so, my Department has an obligation in certain circumstances to provide hard copies of documents. However we are proactive in advising stakeholders and other interested parties about forthcoming consultations, including their availability in electronic media and other formats. We are keen to provide the document in the format requested by any particular organisation or individual, wherever practicable, in keeping with departmental policy.

Ulster Farm By-Products

Mr T Burns asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to the answer to AQW 3197/09, what discussions her officials have had with the Department of the Environment about these complaints; and to outline what action is being taken to address the problem. (AQW 3744/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My Department is responsible for implementation of the EU Animal By-Products Regulation No. 1774/2002. The scope of this legislation does not extend to odours.

However, it does require vehicles used to transport animal by-products to be covered, leakproof and clean and dry before use.

My officials conduct regular monthly inspections of rendering plants, including Ulster Farm By-Products, to ensure compliance with the above requirements and this includes a visual inspection of any vehicles present.

My officials also carry out specific exercises on a regular basis to inspect all vehicles delivering animal by-products to rendering plants. A week long exercise was conducted recently to inspect all vehicles arriving at Ulster Farm By-Products. The level of compliance with the above legislation was found to be generally satisfactory, with minor infringements by some transporters noted. These will be followed up in line with normal procedure and corrective action will be taken to ensure compliance.

Individual complaints in relation to any transporter of animal by-products are investigated by my officials with a view to action being taken to ensure compliance.

My officials liaise with Department of Environment officials on such cases as is necessary.

Woodland Grant Scheme

Mr T Elliott asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update of the non-farmer/farmer definition in the Woodland Grant Scheme of the Northern Ireland Rural Development Programme 2007-2013. (AQW 3784/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My Department submitted an informal proposal to the European Commission to amend the current definition of a farmer on 6th August 2008. We then made a formal submission to the Commission at the end of September 2008, which contained all the proposed amendments to the Rural Development Programme.

In reply, the Commission advised that it wished to clear the amendment relating to Voluntary Modulation (VM) first and on its own. This meant that all other amendments, including that of the farmer definition, had to be put on hold. The Commission issued their decision on Voluntary Modulation in December 2008.

The farmer definition amendment was then re-submitted to the Commission, along with other changes to the Programme, at the end of December 2008 and we await their decision.

Contaminated Animal Feed

Dr A McDonnell asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how the recent problem with dioxins in animal feed, pig meat and pig fat was discovered; and if it was a result of the normal surveillance carried out by various local authorities. (AQW 3834/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Elevated levels of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) in pig meat indicating a dioxin contamination was discovered by routine monitoring of the food chain for a range of contaminants and was carried out by Southern authorities. When the source of contamination was identified the Southern Authorities advised my Department which Northern businesses had been supplied with potentially contaminated animal feed. On-farm investigations by DARD officials determined the extent of possible contamination in the north.

Contaminated Animal Feed

Mr J McCallister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what proposals her Department is considering for recommendation to the Executive, in relation to providing compensation for farmers affected by the dioxin crisis. (AQW 3935/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The Executive continues to press for assistance to the industry from schemes in the south to be extended to the industry in the north and, following my initial approaches to the DAFF Minister Brendan Smith, the Minister for Enterprise, Trade and Investment and I issued a joint letter to Minister Smith requesting access to the Southern arrangements. The Deputy First Minister has also spoken and written to the Taoiseach in similar terms. Additionally, all those affected are being encouraged to pursue all appropriate sources of recompense including insurance, the submission of applications to the DAFF scheme and the consideration of legal action against providers of contaminated animals, product or feed.

I understand the difficulties facing the affected farmers as a result of the restrictions imposed by the Food Standards Agency on cattle potentially exposed to dioxin-contaminated feed. Meat from such cattle cannot enter the food chain. The Executive is considering the need for further action at its meeting on 15 January.

Contaminated Animal Feed

Mr T Elliott asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what advice has been given to farmers affected by the dioxin crisis on (i) animal welfare: and (ii) compensation. (AQW 3936/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development:

- (i) DARD officials have been in regular contact with those farmers affected by the contaminated animal feed incident. They have emphasised that the farmers are responsible for the welfare of animals under their care, and should seek guidance from their private veterinary practitioner if they are concerned about the condition of an animal. Where welfare issues have arisen, such as a broken leg, DARD officials have given the veterinarian permission to euthanise the animal.
- (ii) Farmers have been advised that DARD does not have the legal powers to require the slaughter of animals in restricted herds or to pay compensation. They have been advised to consider making application under the compensation arrangements introduced by the government in the south and to consider if there is scope for any appropriate actions which can be pursued against third parties.

In addition, they have been advised that I intend to bring their concerns about their financial position to the attention of my Executive colleagues.

Badger Prevalence Study

Mr C Boylan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the benefits of conducting a badger prevalence study in establishing a link between the spread of tuberculosis and badgers; and for her assessment of this disease being spread by other forms of wildlife. (AQO 1769/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: In December, I outlined a new strategic approach to deal with TB in the North. This will be a holistic approach that addresses three key strands together – real partnership between government and industry, controlling the spread of TB cattle to cattle, and addressing the wildlife factor. All three are priority areas for action.

On the badger aspect, the key question we are seeking to address is whether badger intervention would help to achieve a cost-effective reduction in TB incidence in cattle. The issue is that we do not have the evidence to make an informed decision about that at present. Our priority in the first phase of the strategy therefore will be to build the evidence we need to make informed policy decisions about wildlife intervention.

The proposed badger prevalence study is one of the actions that I believe are necessary to inform decisions. The study will provide baseline knowledge of the level and distribution of disease in badgers across the North. It will let us see if there are differences in the prevalence of TB in badgers across the North and allow a broad picture of the disease in badgers to be established. It will help to inform the design of any future intervention in badger populations, and where any intervention may be most effectively targeted.

The other badger-related information gathering actions that I announced for the first phase of the strategy will also help build the evidence we need. For example the case control study in a TB high incidence area, the development of plans for a badger removal trial, and looking at how best we can contribute to the development of a vaccine for badgers.

We will progress these actions, subject to the agreement of the DOE Minister where necessary, and subject to bids for the significant additional funding that will be needed. I will review the evidence the actions produce to inform my decision about what we do to reduce the transmission of TB between wildlife and cattle and to help shape the next phase of the strategy.

As regards the risk of TB being spread by other forms of wildlife, we know that wild deer may become infected with bovine TB. This is of interest because wild deer can live in close proximity to cattle. My Department is currently undertaking background surveillance to ascertain the prevalence of bovine TB in wild deer. This study will add to our knowledge of the dynamics of TB infection in wild deer and of the role of deer in TB in cattle.

Whilst TB has also been recorded in several other wildlife species, the role of these species in the disease within the cattle population in the North has not been considered a significant risk to date.

Fishing Industry

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what plans she has to counteract the losses that will occur in the local fishing industry as a result of the EU cutbacks in days at sea and quota reductions in cod and whiting. (AQO 1701/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My Department is currently in discussion with the English, Scottish and Welsh administrations and the fishing industry here to agree the detailed implementation of the new fishing effort system, formerly known as “days at sea”. My initial estimate is that on average there will 10% less fishing time available in 2009. However, if vessels adopt management and technical measures that reduce cod mortality, more fishing effort can be made available. We hope to agree appropriate measures for the Irish Sea with our industry by 1 February.

The quota for cod in the Irish Sea was cut by 25% in response to continuing scientific advice that the stock is in a poor state. I am currently exploring all opportunities to secure additional quota through quota swaps but the reality is that cod quota will continue to be in short supply until the stock recovers. It is worth noting that our fleet has landed just under 530 tonnes of cod from the Irish Sea so far this year, compared to almost 8,200 tonnes of Nephrops.

Irish Sea whiting has no commercial importance to our fleet and only 10% of the available quota has been taken this year.

Labelling of Local Foods

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what steps she is taking to ensure that foods sourced locally are clearly labelled and that a distinction is made between products sourced outside Northern Ireland but packed locally. (AQO 1631/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Responsibility for general food labelling rests with the Food Standards Agency. My Department is responsible only for the EU-wide Beef Labelling Regulations which require all operators in the supply chain, down to retail level but excluding food service, to label their beef with traceability and origin information. The legislation in this area is enforced by DARD inspectors in meat plants and by local authority Environmental Health Officers in retail outlets.

Fuel Poverty

Mr D Ford asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what discussions she has had with the Minister for Social Development regarding support for people in fuel poverty in rural areas. (AQO 1750/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: I have been very active in ensuring that rural fuel poverty is a priority within the Executive. I met with my colleague Margaret Ritchie on 16 September 2008 to explore opportunities to tackle rural fuel poverty which could arise from DARD's Rural Anti Poverty and Social Inclusion Framework. As a result of these discussions we both agreed to collaborate on DSD's Warm Homes Scheme to ensure that over 600 rural homes earmarked for improvements this Winter received the necessary support. We also agreed that our officials would continue to work together to exploit other joint opportunities for addressing fuel poverty in rural areas.

Winter Gritting Policy

Mr B McElduff asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development if she is involved in any review of winter gritting policy aimed at keeping winter traffic on the move in rural areas and at overcoming rural isolation in icy conditions. (AQO 1766/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: I have not been involved in any review of winter gritting policy nor have I had any discussions with my colleague Conor Murphy on this subject.

However, this is potentially the type of issue that could be considered in the development of the Rural White Paper.

Electronic Tagging for Cattle

Mr D McClarty asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what progress has been made on electronic tagging for cattle. (AQO 1718/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: I warmly welcome the Industry led initiative for the electronic tagging of cattle. My officials sit on the Industry Working Group and continue to provide technical advice and support. The APHIS computer database has been enhanced to facilitate electronic identification of cattle. The Working Group has made a case to my Department seeking financial assistance. As part of the Farm Modernisation Programme, Electronic Tag Readers and other similar equipment are eligible for support. This Programme will open on 28 January 2009.

Pig Industry

Mr K McCarthy asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to provide an update on her Department's assessment of the pig industry. (AQO 1751/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: I am pleased to report that prices for finished pigs in the north of Ireland are improving although some producers received lower prices in the week immediately following the discovery of the contaminated feed. I am all too aware of the damage caused to consumer and customer confidence following the initial advice given by the FSA for retailers and caterers to remove our pork products from sale, but the improving prices would seem to indicate that the damage has been short-lived.

I recognise the need to send a clear signal to our customers that the Executive is determined to protect the quality of agri-food products from the North and I am confident that the Private Storage Aid for pigmeat, which I was successful in having introduced here, will also help the industry. Its potential value has been put at around £6m. Defra's Chief Veterinary Officer has also written to the CVOs of all the Member States to remind them that there is no risk from pork derived from pigs born and bred here.

Despite these efforts, I am very much aware of the continuing problems faced by the sector due to the vulnerability of the market and would like to reassure producers and processors that my Department will continue to provide whatever advice and assistance it can. The Minister for Enterprise, Trade and Investment and I have written jointly to Minister Brendan Smyth requesting access to the DAFF arrangements. The Deputy First Minister has also written to the Taoiseach in similar terms. We will continue to press this case strongly with the Southern Government.

Meantime I would encourage all those who have incurred losses due to the dioxin contamination to pursue all appropriate sources of recompense including insurance, to submit applications to the DAFF scheme and to consider taking legal action against providers of contaminated animals, product or feed.

Dairy Sector

Mr G Savage asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what financial support is available for the dairy sector. (AQO 1719/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: I can advise that Government provides a considerable amount of financial support to the dairy industry. In particular my Department provides assistance under Axis 1 of the Rural Development Programme which has a budget of £45m. Included in this are Focus Farms and Benchmarking both of which have dairy sector representation; there are a number of items directly targeting this sector on the list for Farm Modernisation and it also includes the Agricultural and Forestry Processing and Marketing Grant Schemes which are open to the sector to apply. Supply Chain Development and Farm Family Options, which will open in the Spring, will also include this sector.

Grant aid of around £120m under the Farm Nutrient Management Scheme is available to producers including dairy farmers. This scheme closed on 31 December 2008 at which stage around 4,000 farmers had submitted claims.

Under the Regional Food Programme the Dairy Council has received significant financial support. In 2007/08 it was awarded £162,500 for generic promotional and market research activities here and in Britain. Recently the Dairy Council benefitted from EU support of circa £200,000 for a marketing campaign entitled "Morning Milk".

My Department also carries out a wide range of activities aimed at supporting the dairy sector. These include the provision of technical support to producers and processors, the provision of knowledge and technology transfer programmes and benchmarking, services which enables farmers to identify the strengths and weaknesses of their farm business. The industry also receives significant support from Government through AFBI and CAFRE, including dedicated dairy technologists.

Dairy Sector

Mrs M O'Neill asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what efforts she has made to secure export refunds for the dairy sector following the free fall in milk prices; and for her assessment of the way forward for this sector. (AQO 1735/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: In recognition of the deteriorating market situation I have been working hard to try and achieve a re-introduction of export refunds for dairy products. Following the sharp drop in prices at the October United Dairy Farmers' milk auction I immediately spoke to the DEFRA Secretary of State to seek his support on the matter. Subsequently the Minister for Enterprise Trade and Investment and I issued a joint letter to Hilary Benn pressing the case for the local dairy industry and making clear our view that Britain should be taking the initiative within the EU by requesting early re-introduction of export refunds. I, along with the First Minister and Deputy First Minister will be meeting with the European Commissioner, Marianne Fischer Boel on 11 February, to ensure that she is aware of the seriousness of the situation. In addition the First Minister and Deputy First Minister, at my request, have written to the Prime Minister to lobby his support on the matter. The Finance Minister, Nigel Dodds, and I subsequently had a meeting with Hilary Benn to impress upon him further the challenges being faced by the sector. This followed a meeting I had with industry representatives when they outlined the case for export refunds to be re-introduced. I will continue to do what I can to support the dairy industry in these difficult times.

We all want to see less volatile prices and this unlikely to be achieved unless industry follows a market led approach. To succeed, the industry needs a higher level of product innovation and to improve the overall levels of efficiency. It must reduce its dependency on commodity-type products such as milk powders and move to the processing of higher added value products. I welcome the steps that have already been taken in this direction.

Hardship Package

Mr J O'Dowd asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the details of the hardship package for the fishing industry and how it will help this sector. (AQO 1731/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The hardship package announced for the fishing industry includes assistance for harbour dues, landing fees, and light dues. These charges vary from vessel to vessel depending on the size of the vessel and in the case of landing fees, the size of the catch. Harbour dues range from £65 per year for vessels under six metres to £150 per year for vessels over 18 metres long. Landing fees are 2.2% of the value of the catch. Light dues apply only to over 10 metre vessels and the annual cost is £190 plus £20 per metre above 10 metres.

As an example, a 17 metre prawn trawler landing fish worth £170,000 per year would save:-

- Harbour dues of £130,
- Landing fees of £3,740; and
- Light dues of £310.

This package will provide valuable assistance that will help to buffer the effects of a difficult year in which the industry has struggled with record fuel costs.

Dogs Legislation

Mr T Lunn asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to provide an update on the review of dangerous dogs legislation. (AQO 1748/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Since I announced my Review of dangerous dogs and dog fighting legislation, I have met a number of key stakeholders.

I am pleased to say that my Review is now drawing to a close. I will shortly examine all the evidence presented to me and will then consider how existing legislation and practices might be improved. At that stage I will make a Statement to the Assembly.

With regard to enforcement of current legislation, and the concerns raised during my Review, regarding the safety of Council officials in carrying out their duties, the PSNI/Council/DARD Working Group has completed a draft Memorandum of Understanding (MOU). This will provide a mechanism for co-operation in the enforcement of current legislation. The draft MOU is currently being considered by Local Councils, and I am hopeful that it will be ratified by all Councils shortly.

DEPARTMENT OF CULTURE, ARTS AND LEISURE

Foras na Gaeilge

Mr N McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure if Foras na Gaeilge provides his Department with an English translation of the minutes of its board meetings. (AQW 3419/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (Mr G Campbell): Foras na Gaeilge does not provide my Department with an English translation of the minutes of its board meetings. The Department receives the minutes in Irish and they are translated into English using the Northern Ireland Civil Service Translation Service contract.

Centenary of the Ulster Covenant

Mr A Bresland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how he intends to commemorate the centenary of the Ulster Covenant in 2012. (AQW 3599/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: Organisations supported by my Department will be planning events to commemorate the centenary of the Ulster Covenant in 2012. At this time, however, it is not possible to provide any specific details.

I personally would support appropriate events to mark this significant anniversary of the Ulster Covenant.

Reception for Tyrone GAA

Mr D McKay asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (i) how long the request has been under consideration; and (ii) when will he make a final decision about a reception for the All-Ireland winning Tyrone football team. (AQW 3728/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: I wrote to the Secretary of the Tyrone County Board on 28 October 2008 offering my congratulations and advising of my intention to host a reception for the Tyrone GAA Senior and Minor Teams to acknowledge their success.

My officials liaised with Tyrone GAA officials in an effort to reach a satisfactory date. Several dates were suggested and none were suitable but following consultation with the GAA Ulster Council and Tyrone GAA, it has been agreed that I will host a reception on Friday 6th February 2009 at 6.30pm in Parliament Buildings.

Water-Based Tourism

Mr D Burnside asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what plans he has, in co-operation with the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, to develop facilities for water-based tourism. (AQO 1639/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: Waterways Ireland has invested significantly in water and land based infrastructure in line with its remit to manage, maintain, develop and restore the inland navigable waterways principally for recreational purposes

My Department continues to explore scope for developing the recreational or navigational potential of inland waterways, including the provision of water recreation facilities. We are also committed to providing quality angling facilities in Northern Ireland through provision of the public angling estate which includes a total of 64 fisheries available to local and tourist anglers for all types of angling on payment of a small permit fee.

Safety at Sports Grounds

Mr R McCartney asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what action his Department is taking to improve safety at sports grounds. (AQO 1760/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: Responsibility for improving safety at sports grounds in Northern Ireland rests, in the first instance, with the owners and operators of those venues. However, the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure (DCAL) is currently taking forward a safety at sports grounds initiative. The aim of this initiative is to assist owners and operators of major sports facilities to improve public safety at their grounds in the long term.

As part of that process, the Department is currently implementing new legislation on safety at sports grounds, the Safety of Sports Grounds (Northern Ireland) Order 2006. In addition, Sport Northern Ireland, which is responsible for the development of sport including the distribution of funding, has been running a number of funding programmes that are designed to assist owners and operators of venues to improve public safety at their venues. These include a Stadia Safety Programme and a previous Interim Safe Sports Grounds Scheme.

I am aware that in December 2008, the BBC's Newsline programme reported on a letter from me to the CAL Committee in which I said that all grounds within the top two tiers of the Irish League, the six GAA County Grounds and Ravenhill fail, to varying degrees, to meet the safety criteria as set out in the Northern Ireland Guide to Safety at Sports Grounds (the Red Guide). I should like to clarify that defects at some grounds may be minor such as inadequate toilet facilities or a lack of directional signage. My point at the time was to ensure that the owners of these venues and governing bodies were aware that, in order for them to meet the safety standards which will be applied by District Councils in the new safety certification scheme, these minor defects, as well as any major ones, will have to be addressed.

Financial Assistance for Football Clubs

Mr M Durkan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what consideration is being given to providing financial assistance to Institute FC and Derry City FC for capital investment. (AQO 1663/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: Sport Northern Ireland (SNI) is responsible for the development of sport in Northern Ireland including the distribution of funding. SNI has received an application from Institute FC under its Stadia Safety Programme for development work at its Riverside Stadium. This will include the provision of seating in the North and South stands, additional toilet facilities, a crowd control point, new dug-outs and new turnstiles. The business case for this project is currently under consideration by SNI.

In the case of Derry City FC, I responded to Members through Written Questions and correspondence cases in June 2008 to advise that DCAL was considering a draft economic appraisal from Brandywell Properties Trust Limited for the re-development of the Brandywell ground. As recently as last week, officials from my Department met with the Trust's consultants to discuss the economic appraisal and consider how this could be progressed to a final draft.

Public Record Office

Mr S Neeson asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the relocation of the Public Record Office. (AQO 1781/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: The construction phase of the new Public Record Office for Northern Ireland, which will be located in the Titanic Quarter, Belfast, commenced on 24 November 2008. I on that occasion, accompanied by the Finance Minister, visited the site.

The building which is scheduled to open to the public in late 2010 will provide state of the art, larger and better facilities for the access of PRONI's records.

The preparation of the records for the move to the new building has already commenced. It is intended that PRONI will remain open to the public for as long as possible. New electronic databases are currently being developed for on-line access and I will be launching the on-line version of PRONI's 'records' catalogue on 2 February 2009.

Multi-Sports Stadium

Ms C Ní Chuilín asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail how he intends to allocate the £70 million in the current budget period of 2008/09 to 2010/11 for the proposed multi-sports stadium. (AQO 1758/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: An indicative allocation of £70m was made available in the current budget period of 2008/09 to 2010/11 for the proposed multi-sports stadium. The allocation of £10m in the current financial year has been surrendered to the Department of Finance and Personnel.

Construction Industry

Mr B McElduff asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what measures his Department is introducing when implementing the Department's capital programme to mitigate, where possible, the current economic downturn affecting the construction industry. (AQO 1762/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: The Department's capital budget is focused on the construction sector and so its various programmes already have a direct effect on that industry.

Work is currently progressing or planned to begin in the near future on a number of key projects with a combined cost of over £90m. Work on the Ulster Museum refurbishment and the Crescent Arts Centre (Botanic area) is already well underway. There are also a number of major projects coming forward later in this financial year: Lyric Players' Theatre, the Metropolitan Arts Centre and redevelopment of Tollymore Mountain Centre near Newcastle. I am also pleased to report that site work on the new PRONI Headquarters building in Titanic quarter commenced on 24 November last: this construction project alone represents a £30m investment.

In addition, my Department has robust systems in place to ensure that its capital programmes proceed on time and according to plan and, where this has not happened, to identify any reduced requirements promptly so that capital funding can be redirected centrally to areas where it can be of more immediate benefit.

In answer to a call from the Executive to identify additional funding which could be immediately directed towards the construction sector, my Department has already released a total of £2.85m from its capital budget.

Written Responses from Minister

Mr D McKay asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how long it takes him to respond in writing to an MLA or a member of the public who has written to him. (AQO 1755/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: I aim to respond to written correspondence from MLAs, as well as other elected representatives, within 10 working days.

Correspondence from members of the public are dealt with by my private secretary or by officials within 15 working days.

However, where written requests relate to official receptions or my participation in particular events, it is not always possible to respond within those timescales.

Missing Library Books

Mr S Gardiner asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what action he proposes to take to tackle the £566,000 lost through missing library books, across all Education and Library Board areas in the last three years. (AQO 1641/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: The Education and Library Boards take the issue of stock recovery very seriously and report annually on losses from non-return of borrowed items.

The Boards have a range of measures in place to reduce stock losses. These include a system which prevents users who have not returned library books from borrowing additional books or from using library computers. These measures will remain in place when the Northern Ireland Library Authority (NILA) becomes operational on 1 April 2009. NILA will eventually be able to operate the measures on a regional basis.

The Chief Librarians of the Education and Library Boards have set up a working group to consider what further measures could be put in place to reduce stock losses. A report from this working group is currently being considered by the Association of Chief Librarians and will form the basis of recommendations for NILA.

Craft Industry

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what steps are being taken to ensure that the Craft Industry can take advantage of the Creation Innovation Fund. (AQO 1689/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: I launched the £5m Creative Industries Innovation Fund on 17 October 2008 to support Northern Ireland's creative sector and am committed to ensuring that all creative businesses, including those within the craft sector, benefit from the Fund.

A number of sectoral bodies, including Craft NI - the lead body for the development of the contemporary craft and applied arts sector in Northern Ireland - have applied for funding through the Innovation Fund. The outcome of the first call will be announced later this month.

In establishing the Fund my Department and the Arts Council have recognised that businesses will need support and advice to apply for and secure funding. Therefore, it has been agreed that sectoral development bodies, including Craft NI, will assist businesses within their sector by offering additional support to apply to the fund for assistance. The second call opened on 5 January and I understand that Craft NI is also promoting this call on its website.

Events Units

Mr J Craig asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline what events have been supported by the Events Units in the past year. (AQO 1775/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: The DCAL Events Unit has made offers of grant to the following organisations under its Events Growth Fund (EGF) and the Major Events Fund (MEF).

Share of Funding to North/South Bodies

Mr N McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how the decreasing value of sterling is affecting Northern Ireland's share of funding to North/South bodies. (AQO 1753/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: The 2008 budgets for the North/South Bodies funded by my Department are based on approved actions as defined in their respective business plans. The DCAL contribution to the North South Language Body for 2008 was £ 5,955m. The contribution due to exchange rate pressures is expected to increase to £ 6.5m. The comparable figure for Waterways Ireland as agreed in the 2008 Business plan was £8.8m. There was minimal impact from the exchange rate fluctuations as all of this budget is paid out by Waterways Ireland in sterling.

Public Money Spent on the Arts

Mr D O'Loan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for his Department's assessment of the percentage economic return to the economy per pound of public money spent on the arts. (AQO 1665/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: There are no current estimates available of the economic return to the economy of public sector funding in the arts. The Arts Council of Northern Ireland has, however, commissioned research which found that every £1 of public money invested by the Arts Council leveraged £3.62 in additional funds available to the Arts sector.

Departmental Underspend

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, given the demands by both the arts and sporting sectors, why the Department has underspent by £8.9m to December 2008; and to outline what measures are in place to ensure that money committed to his Department is fully spent to ensure the maximum benefit for citizens. (AQO 1662/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: The reference is to a return of £8.9m from my Department's capital budget for the current financial year following the December monitoring round. There are two main reasons for the return of this amount.

Firstly, despite our best efforts, capital programmes are traditionally difficult to manage against timetables because of the number of variables which exist outside the Department's direct control.

In such cases it makes good business sense to recognise that all of the capital budget will not be needed in the current year and to release amounts which can then be used elsewhere to benefit the citizens of Northern Ireland. The risk otherwise is that unspent capital is lost to us completely.

Secondly, my Department responded positively to the Executive's call for additional funding which could be immediately directed towards the construction sector following the economic downturn. In this instance, projects were identified where there was a risk of underspend in this financial year or where deferral could take place until next year and the related funding was released to the Executive so that jobs in construction could be protected.

Nevertheless, I can assure the Member that my Department and I are determined that capital budgets should be fully spent where this makes sound financial sense and gives us value for money.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Schools Sited Near Overhead Power Cables

Mr S Gardiner asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to her answer to AQW 2828/09, to name the three schools in the Southern Education and Library Board area, that are sited within 200 metres of overhead power cables. (AQW 3682/09)

Minister of Education (Ms C Ruane): Is iad na 3 scoil i limistéar Bhord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Deiscirt atá suite taobh istigh de 200 méadar ó cháblaí leictreachais lastuas ná:

The 3 schools in the Southern Education and Library Board area sited within 200 metres of overhead power cables are:

- 5011602 Bleary Primary School, Lurgan
- 5032592 St Mary's Primary School, Dungannon
- 5046637 Gaelscoil Uí Néill, Coalisland

Management of Schools Budgets

Mrs M Bradley asked the Minister of Education if staff salary costs will remain as part of the schools' Local Management of Schools budgets and be under the control of the individual Boards of Governors, when the Education and Skills Authority is set up. (AQW 3707/09)

Minister of Education: Tá beartaithe agam go mbeidh costais thuarastail na foirne fós mar chuid de bhuiséad LMS na scoile.

It is my intention that staff salary costs will remain part of the schools' LMS budget. The Education Bill will require an amendment to give effect to this intention for all schools. My officials are currently liaising with the Office of Legislative Counsel on this amendment which I will bring to the Education Committee during the Committee Stage of the Bill, and to the Assembly at Consideration Stage.

Bookstart Programmes

Dr W McCrea asked the Minister of Education for her assessment of the benefits that Bookstart Programmes have on improving literacy. (AQW 3711/09)

Minister of Education: Tá an Bookstart Programme tairbheach agus aidhm aige dúil sa léamh a spreagadh i measc páistí ó aois óg agus bainteacht tuismitheoirí in oideachas a bpáistí a chothú, rudaí is cúis le leasa soiléire ó thaobh ghnóthachtáil oideachasúil an pháiste de, mar a tháispeántar i dtaighde.

The Bookstart Programme is beneficial as it aims to stimulate a love of reading among children from an early age and encourage parental involvement in their child's education, which research shows to have clear benefits on a child's educational attainment.

Further to the support provided for Bookstart in recent years, in the 2008/09 financial year the Department has allocated £200,000 through the literacy action plan in support of Bookstart across the north. This plan is based on the direction of travel outlined in the revised literacy and numeracy strategy and will cover the transition year prior to the establishment of ESA.

Support for parental involvement in education, including through schemes such as Bookstart, is a key element of the revised literacy and numeracy strategy, which issued for consultation from 23rd June to 30th November. My Department is currently analysing the responses to the consultation to inform the final strategy. We are unable to make any decision on the long term arrangements for the Bookstart programme until the outcomes of the consultation have been fully considered and the way forward agreed.

Bookstart Programmes

Dr W McCrea asked the Minister of Education what consideration has been given to introducing or contributing to a Bookstart Programme. (AQW 3712/09)

Minister of Education: Tá an Bookstart Programme tairbheach agus aidhm aige dúil sa léamh a spreagadh i measc páistí ó aois óg agus bainteacht tuismitheoirí in oideachas a bpáistí a chothú, rudaí is cúis le leasa soiléire ó thaobh ghnóthachtáil oideachasúil an pháiste de, mar a tháisceántar i dtaighde.

Post-Primary Transfer

Mr D McKay asked the Minister of Education if she has received any detailed proposals from the SDLP concerning the ending of academic selection and post-primary transfer. (AQW 3725/09)

Minister of Education: Chuir an SDLP an seasamh atá acu i leith ceist an aistrithe iarbhunscóile in iúl dom trí chomhfhreagras a fuair mé ón Choiste Oideachais.

The SDLP have communicated to me their position on the issue of post-primary transfer in correspondence received via the Education Committee. Whilst this cites the Party's opposition to academic selection, it contains no specific proposals.

DEPARTMENT OF THE ENVIRONMENT

Active Farming

Mr P McGlone asked the Minister of the Environment to define the policy criteria for 'active farming' under CTY10 (Dwellings on Farms) of PPS21. (AQW 3077/09)

Minister of the Environment (Mr S Wilson): “Active farming” under CTY 10 of PPS21 refers to the production, rearing or growing of agricultural products including harvesting, milking, breeding animals and keeping animals for farming purposes, or maintaining the land in good agricultural and environmental condition. This is in line with EU and DARD legislation.

Winter Tyres

Mr D Hilditch asked the Minister of the Environment would he consider introducing legislation to make the use of winter tyres compulsory. (AQW 3582/09)

Minister of the Environment: The levels of snow and ice regularly experienced in Northern Ireland are relatively low compared with other European countries, such as Finland and Norway, where fitment of winter tyres is legally required during winter months. In view of this, and the associated burden, in terms of cost and time, that such mandatory fitment would have on motorists here, it has not been considered appropriate to make winter tyres compulsory in Northern Ireland.

Motorists are nonetheless advised to maintain tyres in good condition and to regularly check them to ensure they are inflated to the correct pressure. They should also take great care in icy and snowy weather and allow more time for their journey.

Red Grouse

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister of the Environment if he would consider contacting the Langholm Buccleuch Estate on the Scottish Borders to gain information on how to increase the stock of Red Grouse. (AQW 3666/09)

Minister of the Environment: The Northern Ireland Environment Agency has been aware of the Langholm Moor Demonstration Project in Dumfriesshire since its inception in 2007. The Project is a partnership between the Buccleuch Estate, shooting interests and conservationists who are seeking to establish a productive grouse moor while accommodating species of high nature conservation value. The Project has a budget of over £3 million and will be reviewed after three years.

In 2008 my Department published a Red Grouse Species Action Plan and a workshop has been arranged for 18 March 2009 to progress actions in the plan. A member of the Langholm Moor Project Advisory Group has been invited to attend the workshop and will be available to provide an update on the Project and its successes to date.

Bokashi Composters

Mr D McKay asked the Minister of the Environment if any Councils provide or sell Bokashi Composters to members of the public. (AQW 3672/09)

Minister of the Environment: The Northern Ireland Environment Agency does not hold this information as the Department has no regulatory authority over Councils' provision of recycling receptacles to householders.

GM Food and Farming

Dr A McDonnell asked the Minister of the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure that the final ‘coexistence’ regulations in relation to GM food and farming comply with European Union law. (AQW 3708/09)

Minister of the Environment: My Department is awaiting receipt of scientific reports, commissioned at UK and EC level, relating to coexistence matters and for an announcement from the European Commission on specific thresholds for labelling adventitious GM presence in conventional seeds before taking our coexistence plans any further.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE AND PERSONNEL

Civil Service: Early Retirement/Consultancy Services

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of civil servants by (i) age; (ii) gender; and (iii) religious background, who retired or took early retirement and were subsequently contracted to provide consultancy services to the Civil Service; and, how much was paid for these services, in each of the last five years. (AQW 2599/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel (Mr N Dodds): The number of civil servants, by age and gender, who retired or took early retirement and were subsequently contracted to provide consultancy services to the Northern Ireland Civil Service during the last five financial years is set out in Table 1.

The religious background of the individuals has not been provided. The purpose for collecting community background information of these individuals during their employment as civil servants was to enable the Northern Ireland Civil Service to monitor within its workforce the effectiveness of its policies on equality of opportunity. The examination of the provision of consultancy services to the Civil Service by community background is not relevant to this stated purpose. Consequently the further processing of community background data would not be consistent with the data protection principles.

The total costs for the services provided in each of the last five financial years is set out in Table 2.

TABLE 1: NUMBER OF NORTHERN IRELAND CIVIL SERVANTS CONTRACTED TO PROVIDE CONSULTANCY SERVICES POST-RETIREMENT /EARLY RETIREMENT BY AGE AND GENDER

Capital Building and Infrastructural Projects

Mr D McNarry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many capital building and infrastructural project starts have been postponed from this financial year into the next one. (AQW 3572/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel: I have been advised by Departments that 29 capital building and infrastructural projects have been postponed from this financial year (2008-09) into the next (2009-10) at a total aggregated value of £66.92 million.

Large construction projects have lengthy lead-in times involving careful planning, procurement and management. Delay or postponement may be caused by various factors including the need for revisions to project requirements, business cases, planning applications and/or challenges to the procurement process.

You should note, however, that during 2008-09 it is expected that total capital investment by Government will be £1.5bn.

Parliamentary Constituencies

Mr G Adams asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to provide the most recent estimates of the number of citizens in each parliamentary constituency, who are eligible to register to vote, as of 1 December 2008.

(AQW 3686/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel: It is not possible to produce a population estimate by Parliamentary Constituency level for 1 December 2008 as population migration estimates up to that period are not yet available.

The attached table gives an estimate of the population eligible to be included on the 2007 electoral register by Parliamentary Constituency as at 30 June 2007.

Population estimates for 2008 will be published later this year.

However the figures include a small number of others who may be ineligible to register (prisoners and mental health patients).

Credit Unions and Industrial and Provident Societies

Mr J Spratt asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what the terms of reference were for Her Majesty's Treasury recent review of Credit Unions and Industrial and Provident Societies. (AQW 3764/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel: Both the DFP and DETI Minister have agreed the terms of reference for the Review of the Regulatory Framework for Credit Unions and Industrial and Provident Societies in Northern Ireland with HM Treasury. The key issues to be covered by the Review include depositor protection arrangements; type of services offered; and consumer information.

I understand that HM Treasury will publish the full terms of reference in the coming days.

Paperwork Reduction

Dr A McDonnell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what steps he is taking to significantly reduce the amount of paperwork he sends to constituency offices and other organisations throughout 2009. (AQW 3794/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel: My Department adheres to the OFMDFM guidance on Distribution of Department Publications and Consultation Documents.

This guidance outlines that it is a matter of choice for recipients how they receive Government publications. The opportunity to receive publications by electronic means is available if requested.

Rates Relief Scheme

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel if has considered or will consider a rate relief scheme for sub post masters similar to that in place in Scotland and Wales. (AQW 3818/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel: The Member will be aware of my announcement in the Assembly on 15 December 2008 when I said that I would bring forward a small business rate relief scheme. That scheme will draw on elements of the Welsh small business rate relief scheme, including its provision for significantly enhanced relief for post offices, which includes full exemption for the smaller ones. The earliest such a scheme could be in place is April 2010.

Civil Service Staff

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to confirm that his Department has received additional finance from the UK Treasury to fund outstanding claims for equal pay for Civil Service staff; and when and how it will be received. (AQW 3864/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel: Following extensive negotiations, in November 2008 the Prime Minister agreed an approach which will provide the Northern Executive with access to £100 million of additional current expenditure.

This approach is aimed at helping to address a range of spending pressures faced by the Executive and provides welcome flexibility to reduce the impact that dealing with those spending pressures will have on the delivery of public services in Northern Ireland, including the impact of the costs associated with the Northern Ireland Civil Service Equal Pay Claim.

However, it is important to stress that the eventual costs of the Equal Pay Claim and other pressures, over and above the amounts made available in the funding package, will fall to the Northern Ireland Executive to be funded. Therefore, it is important that the Executive seeks to further minimise the potential burden on public services.

Consultancy Posts

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many consultancy posts are vacant in (i) Tyrone County Hospital, Omagh; and (ii) Erne Hospital, Enniskillen; and to outline the nature of all vacancies. (AQW 3380/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Information on the number and specialty of vacant posts for Consultants in the selected hospitals in the Western Health and Social Care Trust area is given below.

As at 30th September 2008, Tyrone County Hospital, Omagh, had one (1.0 Whole-Time Equivalent) current vacancy for a Consultant in Respiratory Medicine & General Internal Medicine. A current vacancy is defined as an unoccupied post, which at 30th September 2008 was vacant and which the organisation was actively trying to fill. This vacancy was not long-term (i.e. vacant for 3 or more months).

As at 30th September 2008, Erne Hospital, Enniskillen, had no vacancies for Consultants.

The Trust have advised that the process to fill vacant posts commences as soon as it is alerted to retirements/resignations or when developments in services require new posts to be created. When posts are being replaced in exactly the same way this is a straight forward and routine process however, if new posts are being created or existing posts redesigned, this requires further work. In the case of medical posts, approval of the relevant Royal Colleges is required. Advertisements are placed in the relevant publications to invite applications and the Trust's Selection and Appointments Policy is applied.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what criteria are used in the decisions to allocate performance related bonus payments for the Chief Executives of Health and Social Care Trusts.

(AQW 3713/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Chief Executives' performance related payments must be based on an assessment of performance against the agreed strategic aims and objectives in the Trust's business or development plan. These will reflect all of the key responsibilities of the organisation, including those stemming from the policy priorities and the key commitments being made by the Executive and by my Department.

Ambulance Station, Knockbracken Healthcare Park

Mr J Spratt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to make a statement about the future of the Northern Ireland Ambulance station at Knockbracken Healthcare Park, South Belfast.

(AQW 3982/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: There are no plans at present to close the ambulance station at Knockbracken Healthcare Park. Ambulance services in the South Belfast area continue to operate from Knockbracken ambulance station and deployment points at Forster Green Hospital and Carryduff.

On 1 October 2008, I announced an investment of some £100 million capital funding over the next 10 years to modernise the ambulance fleet, ambulance estate infrastructure, IT and vital equipment.

Ambulance Station, Knockbracken Healthcare Park

Mr J Spratt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to how many emergency incidents the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service ambulances based at Knockbracken Healthcare Park have responded, in each of the last five years.

(AQW 3983/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The table below details the number of emergency calls to which a vehicle based at Knockbracken Healthcare Park responded. It should be noted that the vehicle may not have been at base when the call was received or responded to.

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The ambulance service operates from stations or deployment points. A deployment point is located in Carryduff itself. The nearest deployment point to Ballygowan is in Comber; an emergency response vehicle from the Comber deployment point could reach Ballygowan in an estimated 6-8 minutes subject to driving conditions and other factors.

DEPARTMENT FOR REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Traffic-Calming Measures in Dunloy

Mr D McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the traffic-calming measures that Roads Service is considering for Dunloy. (AQW 3668/09)

Minister for Regional Development (Mr C Murphy): My Department's Roads Service has no current plans to introduce traffic-calming measures in Dunloy.

As you may be aware, Roads Service receives many requests for the introduction of traffic calming measures. All requests for schemes are assessed taking into account factors, such as collision history, traffic speeds, traffic volumes and composition, and environmental factors, for example, the presence of schools and playgrounds. However, only those schemes that score highest following the assessment procedure are included in the Traffic Calming Programme.

Roads Service is currently developing its Traffic Calming Programme for the next financial year, and an assessment of Dunloy will be carried out to determine whether a scheme here can be included in the programme. I have asked the Divisional Roads Manager to write to you when this assessment has been completed.

Underpass at the Larne Road Roundabout

Rev Dr R Coulter asked the Minister for Regional Development when work will commence on the underpass at the Larne Road roundabout at Ballymena, which will connect the M2 by-pass with the dual carriageway. (AQW 3689/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that tenders are currently being sought for a scheme to provide a 2.1 kilometre dual carriageway, which will connect Ballee Road East to the M2 Ballymena Bypass dual carriageway. It is anticipated that construction of this new road will start in April 2009 and take approximately ten months to complete.

Roads Service and Northern Ireland Water: Work in South Antrim

Mr T Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail all work being carried out by Roads Service and Northern Ireland Water in the South Antrim constituency, during January 2009. (AQW 3698/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that, in addition to the ongoing M2 Improvements Scheme, between Sandyknowes and Greencastle junctions, the following work will be undertaken in the South Antrim Constituency during January 2009:

- upgrade of traffic signals at the Antrim Road / Ballyclare Road junction;
- upgrade of two Pelican Crossings in association with a footway paving scheme at Market Square, Ballyclare;
- collision remedial scheme at Ballymena Road/Dublin Road, Antrim; and
- footway improvements in the Diamond Road area of Crumlin.

Routine maintenance work will also be carried out on roads in the South Antrim constituency, including replacing the bridge joint of the M2 Templepatrick Bridge during January 2009.

Northern Ireland Water has advised that the following work is being carried out in the South Antrim constituency during January 2009:

Belfast to Limavady Bus Service

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development if the bus service from Limavady to Belfast will be retained after April 2009. (AQW 3714/09)

Minister for Regional Development: This is an operational matter for Translink. However, I have been informed that Translink, as part of an on-going review of patronage on service 246 operating between Limavady and Belfast, intends to replace the morning and afternoon peak hour direct services with services connecting to the Derry / Belfast 212 service. This will mean that journeys from Limavady to Belfast can be completed but with a change of vehicles en route at Dungiven.

Travelwise Safer Routes to School Programme

Mrs N Long asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans he has to fund locally based support to ensure children can walk and cycle safely to their school, similar to the Local Authority School Travel Co-ordinators that are appointed by local authorities in the rest of the UK. (AQW 3721/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has two School Travel Plan Co-ordinators, who develop the Travelwise Safer Routes to Schools initiative in schools across the North. This initiative aims to tackle the problems associated with the 'School Run' by promoting more sustainable modes of travel, including walking and cycling, for the journey to and from school. The Travelwise Safer Routes to School Programme is assisted by the provision of safety zones outside schools and the installation of cycle shelters.

Since 2004, the Safer Routes to Schools message has been promoted to some 151 schools involving approximately 45,000 pupils and their parents.

Ballycastle to Rathlin Ferry

Mr D Ford asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of whether the timetable for the Ballycastle-Rathlin ferry in September, October, November and December 2008 satisfied the requirements of the tender process; and how it compared to the previous year's timetable. (AQW 3736/09)

Minister for Regional Development: I am content that the timetable of services provided by the operator during this period satisfied the requirements of the contract. Timetable variations are permitted subject to prior consultation with Moyle District Council and the Rathlin islanders and the approval of the Department for Regional Development.

When compared to the timetable for the same period in 2007 the operator has delivered an enhanced service with more than twice the number of sailings each day.

Level Crossing Barriers at Jordanstown

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development how long the level crossing barriers at Jordanstown are activated prior to the arrival of a train at the platform travelling from (i) Greenisland; and (ii) Belfast, and to confirm that these barriers are controlled by an operator based in Belfast. (AQW 3761/09)

Minister for Regional Development: For a stopping train travelling from the Greenisland direction it takes the train an average of 3.5 minutes to clear the Jordanstown crossing.

For a stopping train travelling from the Belfast direction it takes the train an average of 4 minutes to clear the Jordanstown crossing. This additional time is the result of slower approach speeds as the train passes through Bleach Green Junction and the requirement to stop at Jordanstown station before clearing the crossing.

Non-stopping (Express) trains can pass through the level crossing in less time than stoppers. If two trains approach the level crossing in close proximity to each other the level crossing cannot be opened until both trains have passed through. Depending on where the trains are as they approach the Jordanstown Crossing the road closure times can vary.

The Jordanstown level crossing manually controlled barrier is controlled by a signaller from Belfast Central Signal Cabin.

Greyabbey Wastewater Station

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister for Regional Development why landscaping work at Greyabbey Waste Water Station has not been completed even though it was agreed it would be carried out by Northern Ireland Water. (AQW 3787/09)

Minister for Regional Development: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that the landscaping at Greyabbey Wastewater Treatment Works was completed in September 2007. The area was planted with a grass and wild flower mix to align with the natural environment.

Derry/Londonderry to Belfast Rail Line

Mr T Clarke asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans his Department has to increase accommodation on the Derry/Londonderry to Belfast rail line, to facilitate passenger growth. (AQW 3801/09)

Minister for Regional Development: Funding provision has been made in the investment strategy for the upgrade of the Coleraine to Derry line costing in the region of £64m. Translink is aiming to start work on site in 2011 and to be finished by 2013 which will coincide with the timing of the next batch of new trains entering into passenger service on the railways network. Two additional trains will be deployed on the Derry line to enable increased services and capacity. In the meantime a £12m project to extend the track life of the line between Ballymena and Coleraine has just started and is expected to be completed by 2010. These enhancements will provide a faster, more frequent train service with journey times to Belfast expected to reduce by half an hour. They will also enable a commuter service to reach Derry before 9am for the first time and facilitate passenger growth.

B18 Whiteside Road Resurfacing

Mr T Clarke asked the Minister for Regional Development how much was spent on repairs and resurfacing on the B18 Whiteside Road, in each of the last five years. (AQW 3802/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service does not record details of the total annual expenditure on individual roads. I am, therefore, unable to provide the requested information.

Road Traffic Delays

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the road traffic delays on the Jordanstown Road and adjoining roads when the level crossing barriers are activated; and if he will take steps to ensure that, while complying with the safety levels, no unnecessary delays to road traffic occur in the future, (AQW 3836/09)

Minister for Regional Development: The safety of the public at level crossings is paramount and is discussed at the regular meetings between my Department's Roads Service and Translink.

Translink has advised that safety is the primary factor affecting the length of time for which the level crossing gates are closed. The level crossing on the Jordanstown Road has been assessed as one with a high risk of user violation, and is therefore, subject to an increased level of protection.

While the operation of the barriers on the level crossing at Jordanstown can lead to considerable traffic delays at peak times, leading to driver frustration, I can assure the Member that delays are kept to the minimum necessary to ensure that safety standards are met.

Rail Network Halts

Mr T Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the development of a railway station at Woodbrook Eco-Village in Lisburn; and the implications of such a development for the Knockmore railway line. (AQW 3854/09)

Minister for Regional Development: Translink currently have no plans to develop any additional halts or stations on the rail network.

Northern Ireland Railways: Rolling Stock

Mr T Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development to provide an update on the procurement of new rolling stock for Northern Ireland Railways. (AQW 3856/09)

Minister for Regional Development: Negotiations with the proposed supplier are nearing completion. Subject to all end stage procurement and economic appraisal requirements being in place NIR hope to be in a position to sign a contract for the purchase of the 20 new trains before the end of March this year.

Signalmen

Minister for Social Development (Ms M Ritchie): The table below sets out the information requested for part (i) and (ii) which is based on a data extract at December 2008. ### Housing Benefit Payments

Mr P Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the amount of housing benefit payments paid to landlords in the North Down constituency, broken down by electoral district. (AQW 3699/09)

Minister for Social Development: The information is not available in the format requested as the Northern Ireland Housing Executive does not record the information by parliamentary constituency and consequently it is also not available for electoral district areas. Housing Benefit payments totalling £7,304,767.17 were made in respect of Housing Benefit claims during 2007/2008, within the area covered by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's Bangor District Office, which most closely matches the North Down constituency. Payments include those to Housing Associations and private landlords.

Liquor Licensing Legislation

Ms A Lo asked the Minister for Social Development to provide an update on the progress of the review of liquor licensing legislation in relation to opening hours, late extensions and changes to the accounts regulations for private member sports, social and recreational clubs. (AQW 3723/09)

Minister for Social Development: Following my review of liquor licensing legislation in Northern Ireland, I submitted in September 2008 a Bid Memorandum for a Bill in the current session which would modernise clubs' accounting requirements. I sent a related Policy Memorandum to the Executive for consideration in October. I await an Executive decision on my legislative proposal. I have no plans to amend current legislation regarding opening hours and late extensions for licensed premises.

Housing Executive Properties

Mr A Maskey asked the Minister for Social Development how many Housing Executive properties in the Short Strand area are unoccupied; and for how long they have been unoccupied. (AQW 3737/09)

Minister for Social Development: The Northern Ireland Housing Executive has one vacant property in the Short Strand area. It has been unoccupied since 20 October 2008.

NORTHERN IRELAND ASSEMBLY

Friday 23 January 2009

Written Answers to Questions

OFFICE OF THE FIRST MINISTER AND DEPUTY FIRST MINISTER

Rainbow Project

Ms C Ní Chuilín asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister what funding it has given to the Rainbow Project and to the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Community; and what plans it has to allocate future funding to this Section 75 group. (AQW 2964/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister (Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness): In July 2006, the then Secretary of State, Peter Hain MP, announced the award of a short-term fund to the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender (LGBT) sector. This has been administered by the Coalition on Sexual Orientation (CoSO). Actual funding to November 2008 amounted to £200,000.00. The remaining budget provision of £30,000.00 will be allocated by March 2009.

The Rainbow Project received £2,000.00 in November 2008 from this fund which contributed to the replacement of computer equipment for the organisation.

Decisions on future funding plans have not yet been taken.

Interface Violence

Mr A Maskey asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail (i) the programmes it funds, in relation to direct intervention and prevention of interface violence; and (ii) the cost of these programmes. (AQW 3485/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: We remain fully committed to addressing the divisions in our society. Our priority is to build relationships which will be the basis for sustaining the developing peace which people living in interface areas as elsewhere are entitled to expect. We recognise the invaluable work which communities have undertaken to build sustainable relationships which have been the foundation for the relatively peaceful summers over recent years.

Our department works closely with a range of partners to deliver diversionary programmes focusing on young people at risk of becoming involved in interface violence over the summer months.

Our department also operated other initiatives including bonfire initiatives, and we also support a large number of initiatives targeted at challenging sectarian behaviours, youth-based activities targeting issues around sectarianism and racism, and integration of minority ethnic people into host communities. Our department's sponsorship of the Community Relations Council enables it to fund a broad range of regional and local activities and initiatives including the core-funding of interface workers and programmes; small grants for cross-community events; and research on good relations issues. We also fund all 26 District Councils to operate community relations based programmes such as small grants schemes for community groups engaged in cross-community activities.

Funding of £400,000 per annum is provided by OFMDFM to the Department of Education for the provision of a range of Summer Intervention Programmes, which are delivered by the Education and Library Boards. These Programmes are targeted at supporting work at interface areas and challenging those behaviours associated with interface violence. A further £100,000 was specifically used this year to address such issues in North Belfast.

Social Security Legislation

Mr R Beggs asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister if the Executive's Children's Sub Committee has discussed the need for additional child care services given the impact that new Social Security legislation will have, particularly on lone parents; and if there are proposals to address this issue. (AQW 3715/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: Childcare is an issue which cuts across the remit of a number of departments. At the meeting of the Ministerial Sub-Committee on Children and Young People in September, childcare was identified as an urgent priority. The Sub-Committee agreed that a cross- departmental sub group would be established to focus specifically on this issue.

This group is currently undertaking a focused exercise and, on completion, will submit a report, identifying costed options for future provision, to the Ministerial Sub-Committee.

Fuel Payment

Ms A Lo asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister what plans it has to introduce a one-off fuel payment for persons in receipt of incapacity benefit. (AQW 3722/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: On 15 December 2008, we announced that we intended to bring forward a Bill to provide permissive powers to take remedial action in response to any circumstances that the Executive agrees warrants rapid and effective intervention. In line with this commitment, we introduced a Financial Assistance Bill in the Assembly on 12 January 2009. The Bill will give us the necessary powers to determine that either exceptional circumstances, or unsatisfactory funding arrangements for tackling poverty, exist and that financial assistance should be provided. If the Assembly passes the Bill, it will provide the statutory basis to enable a scheme to be developed to provide a one off payment to alleviate fuel poverty.

Planning Appeals Commission

Mr T Elliott asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister in relation to the Planning Appeals Commission website, (i) how frequently it is updated with information about appeal cases; (ii) are there plans to increase the frequency of updates; (iii) what value the Commission places on the internet as a means of sharing information about appeal cases; and (iv) if the website is currently up to date. (AQW 3785/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: The Planning Appeals Commission is a tribunal Non-Departmental Public Body. Given its independent tribunal status, it is appropriate for its Chief Commissioner to provide a response directly to you, and we understand that she has written to you in the following terms:

"I have been asked to provide you with information requested in the above Assembly Question.

- (i) The website for the Planning Appeals Commission is updated on a daily basis, i.e. Monday to Friday with information relating to appeal cases;
- (ii) the Commission does not have any immediate plans to increase the frequency of its updates;
- (iii) the Commission places great value on the importance and usefulness of its website as it provides a wide range of information on issues such as appeals intake and decisions, hearings, allocations, publications, statistics, policies, procedures and the functions of the Planning Appeals Commission as well as a lot more valuable information. The website is a very good tool for the sharing of information to the public on all appeal cases;
- (iv) the information currently displayed on the website is up to date.

I would be happy to provide any further information you require arising out this response or to meet with you to discuss the matter if that would be more suitable."

Irish Diaspora

Mr P J Bradley asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister if it will make an annual contribution to the registered organisations in the United States of America that provide for the elderly and live-alone members of the Irish Diaspora. (AQW 3813/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: There are several organisations in the United States that provide critical care-giving services for the elderly and live-alone members of the Irish Diaspora. Many of these organisations are funded by the Irish Government in conjunction with city and state appropriations in the US.

While we recognise the importance of this work, there is, at present, no funding line in our current budget provided for contributions to these organisations. We acknowledge the humanitarian potential of this type of aid program, and we will, therefore, give this proposal due consideration in evaluating international spending priorities for the next financial year.

Executive Meetings

Mr D McKay asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister if it will consider holding Executive meetings outside of Belfast, similar to the pattern followed by the Scottish Executive. (AQW 3837/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: Arrangements for Executive meetings, including potential venues, are kept under review and do not preclude meetings at locations outside Belfast.

Christmas Gifts

Mr T Burns asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail all Christmas gifts they sent and received. (AQW 3885/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: The First Minister and deputy First Minister did not distribute Christmas gifts. They each received a stationery set.

Departmental Legislation

Mr P Weir asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister what legislation it will bring forward to the Assembly in 2009. (AQW 3912/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: We introduced a Financial Assistance Bill into the Assembly on 12 January. Future legislative requirements are under consideration and will be notified as required to the Assembly in due course.

Breach of the Ministerial Code

Mr D Kennedy asked the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister if the comments made by the Minister for Education on the 17th December 2008 about Bobby Sands, were in breach of the Ministerial code. (AQW 3964/09)

The First Minister and deputy First Minister: Section 28A of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 requires Ministers to act in accordance with the provisions of the Ministerial Code and any alleged breach of the Code could ultimately be determined as a matter of law.

You will, in addition, be aware that questions of confidence in Ministers relating to their observance of the Pledge of Office are specifically a matter for the Assembly under Section 30 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE AND RURAL DEVELOPMENT

Larne Veterinary Office

Mr D Hilditch asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many jobs will be lost at the Larne Veterinary Office when DARD Direct is introduced. (AQW 3798/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development (Ms M Gildernew): The DARD Direct service delivery model will offer a wider range of DARD services from a smaller number of locations. In order to provide this enhanced service DARD has already signalled that it intends to reduce the number of offices. This will inevitably mean that a number of offices will close. As a consequence some staff will have to be relocated to other offices.

There are currently around 28 DARD staff located in Larne Divisional Veterinary Office. Under the current proposals these staff would relocate. There are no plans for redundancy.

DARD has a further 19 Veterinary Service Portal Inspection staff located at Redland Road in Larne. These staff are not affected by the DARD Direct initiative due to their need to be located at Larne Harbour and will remain in Larne.

Departmental Legislation

Mr P Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what legislation will her Department bring forward to the Assembly in 2009. (AQW 3812/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The Department has identified its potential legislative requirements for the remainder of this session of the Assembly. However, these proposals are subject to consideration by the Executive and it would therefore not be appropriate or possible to pre-empt this consideration by providing the information you request at this time.

Seed Potato Industry

Mr P J Bradley asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what funding will be made available for marketing, trials and training programmes associated with the Seed Potato industry. (AQW 3815/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: DARD is supporting trials through funding from the seed potato levy (until the balance is disbursed) and through the Seed Potato Breeding Programme at AFBI Loughgall. DARD and Cafre will continue to develop and deliver further education, technology transfer and supply chain development programmes. There is also marketing development support available through the Agricultural and Forestry Marketing and Development Grant Scheme of the Rural Development Programme. This scheme will open for applications in February 2009.

Little Acre Open Farm

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what actions have been taken following the discovery of possible animal welfare issues at Little Acre Open Farm. (AQW 3861/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: In May 2008, I commissioned an independent review of the actions taken following the discovery of animal welfare issues on a farm in Katesbridge, County Down. This review is at the final stage of completion. Once I have considered this review I will take its recommendations into account in considering the situation at Little Acre Open Farm.

In addition, I have met a wide range of animal welfare interest groups and considered an earlier DARD consultation exercise on animal welfare. To assess what new legislation is required I asked my officials to bring forward a detailed policy paper. This paper is due to be with me soon.

My Veterinary Service colleagues continue to monitor the situation at Little Acre Farm on a regular basis to ensure animal welfare standards are being maintained.

Slurry

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what plans she has to review the restricted period for the spreading of slurry. (AQW 3862/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My Department will be reviewing the closed spreading period for slurry in 2010 as part of the 4 year review of the Nitrates Action Programme.

The review will be carried out in conjunction with the Department of the Environment which has joint responsibility for the Nitrates Action Programme Regulations.

The review will evaluate the effectiveness of the Action Programme measures in improving water quality.

Research being carried out by the Agri Food and Biosciences Institute on the environmental impact of slurry spreading in February will be considered in the review.

Larne Veterinary Office

Mr D Hilditch asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in relation to the proposed closure of Larne veterinary office, what consideration will be given to the views of (i) clients who depend on the office; (ii) employees in the office; (ii) elected representatives; and (iv) local farmers and residents, before a decision is made. (AQW 3866/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The proposal to establish the DARD Direct service delivery model will provide a wider range of DARD services from a smaller number of locations. In order to provide this enhanced service DARD has already signalled that it intends to reduce the number of offices.

An Equality Impact Assessment (EQIA) was carried out on the proposal. As part of the public consultation phase, 110 organisations representing key stakeholders, including customers, staff and Section 75 representative bodies, local councils and political parties were written to and invited to provide their views. A letter was also issued to members of the NI Assembly informing them of the commencement of the public consultation. In addition the EQIA was promoted through an advertisement placed in the north's main daily papers and local farming press and a press release issued. We also made the consultation document available to all staff and invited them to comment. I am content the EQIA is thorough and reflects the views and concerns of the industry, staff, equality groups and general public.

When I have had the opportunity to fully consider the EQIA report, the views expressed at the ARD Committee meeting on 2 December and various correspondences I have received, I will come to a decision on how I will progress the roll out of DARD Direct.

Any decision will be aimed at providing a high quality and accessible range of services to the maximum number of customers.

Contaminated Animal Feed

Dr A McDonnell asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in relation to the discovery of dioxins found in animal feed, pig meat and pig fat, to detail (i) how many samples of each type were taken; (ii) who took the samples and supervised the activity; and (iii) the names of the laboratories that completed the analysis. (AQW 3874/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development:

- (i) In relation to the dioxin problem, 22 samples of animal feed were obtained.
- (ii) These samples were taken by trained and experienced DARD feed inspectors, under the direction of their line managers.
- (iii) All samples were tested by the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute (AFBI) for PCB markers and one sample is being tested by the Central Science Laboratory (CSL) for PCBs and dioxins.

No pigs produced in the north of Ireland received the contaminated feed and therefore no pig meat or pig fat was sampled.

Contaminated Animal Feed

Dr A McDonnell asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development if the samples of dioxins found in animal feed, pig meat and pig fat were split three ways to provide a prosecution, defence and referee sample, as provided for in the Food Safety (Northern Ireland) Order 1991. (AQW 3875/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: All feed samples for PCB/Dioxin testing were split three ways with one sample sent to the laboratory, one left with the farmer and the third retained by DARD. No samples were taken of pig meat and pig fat.

Contaminated Animal Feed

Dr A McDonnell asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development if (i) adequate programs for risk based sampling and analysis of animal feeds and food are in place; and (ii) sufficient funds are available for this work; (a) on a routine basis, at arms length from government; and (b) when an emergency arises. (AQW 3876/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The Food Standards Agency is responsible for policy matters relating to feed and food safety, while DARD is responsible for the enforcement of feed legislation. I am therefore not in a position to comment on sampling and analysis of food.

- (i) DARD operates a risk based programme of inspections of feed businesses and implements a risk based sampling and analysis plan for animal feeds.
- (ii) I am content that there are adequate funds available for routine inspections and sampling and for emergencies.

Implementation of EU Animal feed legislation is subject to audits by the Food and Veterinary Office of the EU and the Food Standards Agency.

Contaminated Animal Feed

Dr A McDonnell asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what advice and information she sought from the Public Analyst for Northern Ireland, in relation to the problem with dioxins found in animal feed, pig meat and pig fat. (AQW 3877/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: As the dioxin problem was primarily a food safety issue, associated with contaminated animal feed, advice was provided by the Food Standards Agency. Advice was not sought from the Public Analyst.

Farm Modernisation Scheme

Mr A Bresland asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development when the money for the Farm Modernisation Scheme will be available. (AQW 3894/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: I announced on the 12th January 2009 that the Farm Modernisation Programme will open on the 28th January 2009.

Contaminated Animal Feed

Mr G Savage asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development if her Department is actively seeking compensation from the Government of the Republic of Ireland as a result of the dioxin scare, and if so, how much compensation is being sought. (AQW 3901/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The Executive has agreed to continue to press strongly for the southern Government to accept that producers and processors in the north should have access to the southern Compensation Scheme. Every effort will therefore continue to achieve this and to seek to recover the full costs incurred by producers and processors here as a consequence of the dioxin-contaminated feed incident.

Work to detail the full costs associated with these incidents is ongoing in conjunction with stakeholders and the full amount of compensation being sought from DAFF will only be known when this work is completed

Animals Due to be Culled

Mr G Savage asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many animals have been culled or are due to be culled as a result of the dioxin scare; and to outline the typical market value for these animals. (AQW 3902/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: At present no animals have been culled. In response to the Executive decision to agree a voluntary scheme for the removal and rendering of up to 7,000 cattle on affected farms, the details of such a scheme are being put in place. This scheme will pay for the slaughter and rendering of animals voluntarily surrendered.

Herdowners who relinquished live animals for sampling will receive payment for those animals.

Sustainable Schools Policy

Mr G Savage asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what contact has taken place between her Department and the Department of Education on the Sustainable Schools Policy and its possible impact on rural schools and the wider rural community. (AQW 3903/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My Department has worked with the Department of Education during the development of this policy and I have discussed the issues associated with rural schools several times with the Minister for Education. My Department and the Department of Education co-funded the development of the “Striking the Balance” report produced by the Rural Development Council. This report examined the range of key policy and social factors that influence school provision as well as setting out a range of options to consider with regard to school provision in rural areas. This report was used to inform the development of the Sustainable Schools Policy and I am pleased to see that the final policy is based on a broad range of criteria to be applied when determining the sustainability of schools.

Satellite Vessel Monitoring System

Mr G Savage asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what plans her Department has to provide financial assistance in the next few years, for the satellite vessel monitoring system. (AQW 4014/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My Department has agreed to pay for extended warranties for vessel monitoring systems up to 31st March 2010. I have also agreed that the Department will bear the cost of calls made by these systems for a period of 24 months. This period will end in November 2010.

DARD Direct Office: Upper Bann

Mr G Savage asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what consideration has been given to establishing a DARD Direct Office in the Upper Bann area. (AQW 4015/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The proposed DARD Direct office locations have been selected on the basis of accessibility for customers and staff, minimizing disruption for customers and staff, size of farming sector and potential for animal disease outbreaks in office catchment areas, geographic features, potential availability of suitable accommodation and budgetary considerations. Constituency boundaries did not form part of these criteria.

While there is no DARD Direct office proposed for location in the Upper Bann constituency, almost the entire area is within a 16 miles radius of either the proposed Dungannon, Armagh or Newry offices.

Cod Stocks

Mr G Savage asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her Department’s assessment of the effects of climate change on cod stocks in the Irish Sea. (AQW 4017/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: The Irish Sea cod stock has been fished unsustainably since the late 1980s, with the spawning stock biomass declining tenfold since then. Recruitment of juveniles to the stock has been below average for the past sixteen years and amongst the lowest on record in the six most recent years.

Whilst the largest reduction in spawning cod since the 1980s was due to fishing, scientists have noted that the major decline the number of cod being recruited to the spawning stock in the 1990s coincides with an overall trend in increased sea surface temperatures (SST) in the Irish Sea.

Cod recruitment varies from year to year and there is a tendency for strong recruitment events to coincide with years of lower sea temperature and weak recruitment with years when sea temperature is higher. This may suggest some link between sea surface temperature and recruitment but more studies are needed to be certain about this.

If raised sea temperature is found to be a cause of poor recruitment the recovery of Cod stocks can still occur but it would happen at a slower rate. This will have implications for the management of the stock and fishing effort on cod would have to remain low for a longer period.

Assistance for Farmers

Mr J Dallat asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what are her plans to assist farmers to increase the farm gate value of their produce through marketing and packaging; and the promotion of farm co-ops and other kinds of farm collectives. (AQW 4030/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: My Department will provide assistance and support through the Rural Development Programme and DARD's Supply Chain Development Advisers, to help farmers and growers work collaboratively and market their produce more effectively in order to increase the farm gate value of their produce.

Following a successful pilot in 2007/08, a Supply Chain Development Programme is due to open for applications early in 2009. This programme with a budget of £2m will facilitate co-operation and collaboration in supply chains between producers and processors, and help people develop ideas and initiatives that improve supply chains and create new ones.

A Market Development Scheme with a budget of £2m will open in late January and provide financial support for businesses to improve the marketing of agricultural and horticultural produce. This will include assistance for feasibility studies to identify new markets, and help for producer groups to collaborate and market their produce.

Pork Crisis

Mr G Savage asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the effectiveness of the co-operation between her Department and the Government of the Republic of Ireland during the dioxin in pork scare in December 2008. (AQW 4039/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: There has been regular and close communication between the relevant Departments and agencies North and South of Ireland in dealing with the dioxin-contaminated feed incident.

At Ministerial level there has been a number of direct communications between the Executive and the Southern Government which is ongoing.

However as with any significant incident we will be reviewing all aspects including how to improve the effectiveness of co-operation between relevant agencies.

At official level my Department has had regular engagement with DAFF and the Food Standards Agency here has maintained contact with its counterparts in the South to exchange information and update on developments.

Pork Crisis

Mr G Savage asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the effectiveness of the co-operation between her Department and the Food Standards Agency during the dioxin in pork scare in December 2008. (AQW 4040/09)

Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development: Following notification from authorities in the South that potentially infected animal feed material was exported to the North, DARD officials and the Food Standards Agency acted immediately to address the issue. Both parties ensured that each other were kept abreast of the current situation and communication channels were most effective.

I am pleased to say that the co-operation between DARD and the FSA was of a high and professional standard at all times.

However as with any significant incident we will be reviewing all aspects including how to improve the effectiveness of co-operation between relevant agencies.

DEPARTMENT OF CULTURE, ARTS AND LEISURE

Sports Grounds: Safety Levels

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for his assessment of safety levels at sports grounds; and what funds are available to increase these levels. (AQW 3867/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure (Mr G Campbell): Responsibility for assessing safety levels at sports grounds rests, in the first instance, with the owners and operators of the venues. However, the safety certification scheme being prepared under the Safety of Sports Grounds (Northern Ireland) Order 2006 will give District Councils powers to assess safety levels in any designated sports ground in their area.

Sport Northern Ireland (SNI), which is responsible for the development of sport including the distribution of funding, is currently considering a number of safety projects. Funding for these will be considered in the context of capital allocations for 2009/10 and 2010/11 which have not yet been confirmed.

Sports Grounds: Grant Aid

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what is the maximum amount of grant aid available to sports ground owners; and what percentage of costs can his Department provide to capital projects for Safety at Sports Grounds. (AQW 3925/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: Sport Northern Ireland (SNI) is responsible for the development of sport including the distribution of funding. SNI administers a number of funding programmes to which sports ground owners can apply for assistance. The table below details the maximum amount of grant aid available from each programme and the percentage of costs that SNI provide to capital projects for safety at sports grounds:

Programme	Max Award Amount	Max Award %
Building Sport	No upper limit	85% of eligible construction costs & professional fees
Places for Sport – Surfaces	£245k	100% of eligible construction costs only
Stadia Safety Programme	£800k	85% of eligible construction costs & professional fees
Soccer Strategy Playing Facilities	Funding levels: £300k – UEFA £200k – IPL* £75K – PIL*	85% of eligible construction costs & professional fees

* IPL – Irish Premier League

PIL – Premier Intermediate League

Multi-Sports Stadium at the Maze Site

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the views of the relevant sports governing bodies in relation to alterations to the plans for a multi-sports stadium at the Maze site. (AQW 3942/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: No decision has been taken on the stadium issue. However I have advised the Assembly through Oral Questions on 12 January 2009 that I have come to my own conclusion on the matter. I also advised that I intend to present my conclusion to the Executive in the very near future.

As part of my consideration of the issue I did meet with the governing bodies of the sports involved. In those discussions the governing bodies indicated that should the project not go ahead at the Maze they would work with government and other stakeholders to find a solution which will provide long-term stability, acceptability and sustainability for their respective sports.

Ulster-Scots and Gaeltacht Projects

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure if there are sufficient funds set aside for Ulster Scots and Gaeltacht projects for the current calendar year to meet applications that are submitted. (AQW 3970/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: Ulster-Scots and Irish language projects are generally funded from the agreed annual financial budgets for the North South Language Body, which comprises the Ulster-Scots Agency and Foras na Gaeilge, based on approved actions as defined in their respective business plans.

The Gaeltacht Quarter in West Belfast is funded directly by DCAL on the basis of an approved business case. The Department has not received any proposals for a similar project relating to Ulster-Scots.

Sports Grounds: Assessments

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure when he expects to have all sports grounds assessed and formal certification issued. (AQW 4102/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: Responsibility for assessing sports grounds for any purpose rests, in the first instance, with the owners and managers of the grounds. However, under The Safety of Sports Grounds (Northern Ireland) Order 2006 local authorities in Northern Ireland will have power to determine the number of spectators that owners and managers of designated sports grounds may admit into their venues. Under the Order, local authorities will also be responsible for issuing safety certificates to owners and managers of designated grounds. The date on which safety certificates are issued to owners and managers of designated grounds will be a matter for respective local authorities to determine in the first instance.

Sports Grounds: Spectator Safety Standards

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to list the sports grounds identified by his Department or Sport NI that do not have the necessary spectator safety standards. (AQW 4103/09)

Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure: Sport Northern Ireland has identified those sports grounds which, to varying degrees, do not meet the necessary spectator safety standards as set out in the Northern Ireland Guide to Safety at Sports Grounds (the Red Guide) published in 2007. Whilst defects at some grounds may be minor, such as inadequate toilet facilities or a lack of directional signage, these, as well as any major defects, will have to be addressed to satisfy the new certification scheme which will be applied by District Councils. The sports grounds identified by SNI are:

GAA – 6 County Grounds

- Antrim (Casement Park)
- Armagh (Athletic Grounds)
- Londonderry (Celtic Park)
- Down (Park Esler)
- Fermanagh (Brewster Park)

- Tyrone (Healy Park)

Rugby

- Ravenhill

Soccer

- All grounds within the top two tiers of the Irish League.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Education and Skills Authority

Mrs M Bradley asked the Minister of Education if there is any empirical evidence to suggest that the development of a large unitary authority, such as the Education and Skills Authority, will improve the educational outcomes of young people. (AQW 3705/09)

Minister of Education (Ms C Ruane): Is príomh chuid an réasúnaíochta ar Údarás nua Um Oideachas agus Scileanna a bhunú ná an gá d'fhócas soiléir ar chaighdeán a ardú, le freagrachtaí agus dualgais soiléire, le cumhachtaí oiriúnacha, agus tacaíocht riachtanach ar fud an chórais oideachais a sholáthar.

A key part of the rationale for the establishment of the new Education and Skills Authority is the need for a clearer focus on raising standards, with clear responsibilities and duties, appropriate powers, and the provision of necessary support throughout the education system.

There is ample evidence to show that the current fragmented arrangements are not working, for example, the most common measure of a school's performance is the achievement by its pupils of 5 GCSEs at grade A* - C. The latest figures for non-grammar schools show that 45% (6844) children achieved 5 GCSEs at grade A* - C. However, within that headline figure, the variation in results across the education system point up the need for change. In Catholic-managed non-grammar schools, almost 49% (3510) of pupils gained 5 GCSEs at Grade A* - C. In controlled non-grammar schools, the figure was just 41% (3334).

These figures are not quoted to show the difference between the educational provision offered at Catholic managed non-grammar and controlled non-grammar schools, but merely to highlight the deeply unequal system in which our pupils are educated. The current fragmented system sees education administered by the 5 Education and Library Boards, the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools, the Council for Integrated Education and Comhairle na Gaelscolaíochta. A single education authority is the best approach to addressing inequalities such as this, and ensuring a consistent approach.

Education and Skills Authority

Mrs M Bradley asked the Minister of Education for her assessment as to whether the degree of change and disruption associated with the establishment of the Education and Skills Authority will be justified by the benefits that will accrue to pupils, schools and the wider community. (AQW 3709/09)

Minister of Education: Bunaíodh an tÚdarás um Oideachas agus Scileanna le go mbeadh córas oideachais níos éifeachtaí ann, agus déantar éifeachtúlacht a thomhas sna téarmaí is tábhachtaí do pháistí agus do thuismitheoirí: gnóthachtáil oideachasúil; agus lánacmhainneacht a chomhlíonadh.

The aim of the establishment of the Education and Skills Authority is to have a more effective education system, with effectiveness measured in the terms that matter most to children and parents: educational attainment; and the fulfilment of potential.

The case for change is emphasised by the current inequalities in the education system.

For example, the most recent statistics available show:

- 47% of young people did not achieve at least a Grade C pass in English and Maths, which equates to 12,000 pupils (2006/07);

- 70% (14391) of children not entitled to free school meals left school with at least 5 GCSEs at A*-C yet only 38% (1658) of school leavers entitled to free school meals had the same level of achievement (2006/07);
- 92% of Travellers have no GCSE's – compared with 4% of all school leavers (2001);
- 8.6% of minority ethnic pupils leave school with no GCSE's – compared to 3.9% of all pupils (2002-04).

For many of these children, their life chances are being unfairly limited.

The business case for the establishment of the ESA shows that, by the third year, in the first phase of this reform, £20 million per year can be redirected from bureaucracy to front line services. In subsequent phases I believe we can radically improve service delivery in a way which will release even further savings to schools and youth services.

Any disruption associated with the establishment of the ESA will surely be outweighed by the end of inequalities in educational provision across the different sectors.

New Schools Programme

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Education what is the impact on the planned new schools programme arising from the recent High Court decision against her intention to establish a framework of builders.

(AQW 3719/09)

Minister of Education: De réir rialú na hArd-Chúirte de 19 Nollaig 2008 cuireadh an creat móroibreacha ar ceal. Ní féidir dul chun cinn le aon tionscadal eile tríd an chreat.

The High Court ruling on 19 December 2008 set aside the major works framework. No further projects can be progressed via the framework. Five projects already in contract via the framework shall continue. In the light of the High Court ruling, my Department aims to develop an alternative procurement method to bring projects to the market as quickly as available resources allow. The standard documents for this purpose are now complete and project managers have been instructed to prepare for competitions early in the New Year.

Paperwork Reduction

Dr A McDonnell asked the Minister of Education what steps she is taking to significantly reduce the amount of paperwork she sends to constituency offices and other organisations throughout 2009.

(AQW 3791/09)

Minister of Education: Agus doiciméid comhairliúcháin agus foilseacháin á ndáileadh, cloíonn mo Roinn leis na bealaí comhaontaithe dailte chuig ionadaithe polaitiúla, teagmhálaithe parlaiminteacha, daoine aonair agus eagraíochtaí eile, de réir mar atá leagtha síos sna Treoracha OFMDFM um Dhailiúchán na bhFoilseachán Roinne agus na nDoiciméad Comhairliúcháin Roinne.

In distributing consultation documents and other publications, my Department follows the agreed distribution channels to political representatives, parliamentary contacts and other individuals and organisations, specified in the OFMDFM Guidance on the Distribution of Departmental Publications and Consultation Documents.

However, where possible, in order to minimise the number of documents issued, DE encourages other organisations and members of the public to access departmental publications and consultation documents on the Department's website, but will provide hard copies if requested.

To improve access to departmental information, DE's Publication Scheme, which specifies the classes of information provided by DE, was revised on 1 January 2009 in line with guidance from the Information Commissioner. In addition, where possible, the Department routinely issues key education documents to schools by e-mail.

Telephone Communication Masts

Mr D Hilditch asked the Minister of Education what is the total revenue generated by land owned or leased by the five Education and Library Boards to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts.

(AQW 3803/09)

Minister of Education: Is é an t-ioncam iomlán a fhaightear ó thalamh ar leis na cúig Bhord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne é nó ó thalamh atá ar léas acu le tógáil crann cumarsáide gutháin a éascú, ná £1,430 in aghaidh na bliana.

The total revenue generated by land owned or leased by the five Education and Library Boards to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts is currently £1,430 per annum.

Departmental Legislation

Mr P Weir asked the Minister of Education what legislation will her Department bring forward to the Assembly in 2009. (AQW 3810/09)

Minister of Education: Tá na riachtanais fhéideartha reachtacha don chuid eile den seisiún seo den Tionól sainaitheanta ag mo Roinn.

My Department has identified its potential legislative requirements for the remainder of this session of the Assembly. However, these proposals are subject to consideration by the Executive and it would therefore not be appropriate or possible to pre-empt this consideration by providing the information you request at this stage.

Schools Enrolments: South Antrim

Lagan College

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister of Education to explain why the building of a new school for Lagan College has been delayed; and when the building contract will be signed. (AQW 3892/09)

Minister of Education: Tá Lagan College páirteach i gnuastionscadal Comhpháirtíochta Príobháidí Poiblí (PPP) i dteannta Tor Bank Special School, Dún Dónaill.

Lagan College is in a Public Private Partnerships (PPP) clustered project along with Tor Bank Special School, Dundonald. The PPP project is to extend and refurbish Lagan College and provide a new school for Tor Bank Special School. There are some issues to be resolved before a preferred bidder can be appointed for this building project. The Department is working closely with those involved to allow the procurement process to move ahead.

Educational Psychologists

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister of Education how many children attending schools in East Antrim are on waiting lists to see an educational psychologist (i) for up to one year; (ii) for up to two years; (iii) for up to three years; and (iv) for over three years. (AQW 3896/09)

Minister of Education: Tá curtha in iúl ag Príomhfheidhmeannach Bhord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Oirthuaiscirt dom gur mar seo a leanas líon na bpáistí atá ag freastal ar scoileanna i dtoghcheantar Aontroim Thoir atá ag fanacht le síceolaí oideachais a fheiceáil laistigh de na hamscálaí a iarradh:-

I have been advised by the Chief Executive of the North-Eastern Education and Library Board that the number of children attending schools in East Antrim who are waiting to see an educational psychologist in the timescales requested is as follows:-

Waiting for up to one year	Waiting for up to two years	Waiting for up to three years	Waiting for over three years
137	26	9	2

These figures include Stage 3 assessments and reviews, Stage 4 assessments, Stage 5 reviews, special testing and examination arrangements and assessments of pre-school children who are attending a nursery school or class, as outlined in the Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs (COP).

Teaching Positions

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to the answer to AQW 2889/09, why over 50% of recently retired teachers are still being re-employed in temporary teaching positions despite Departmental guidance stating that employers give preference to newly qualified, unemployed teachers and to experienced non-retired teachers who are seeking employment. (AQW 3899/09)

Minister of Education: Although the number of prematurely retired teachers who subsequently became re-employed has fallen by almost 30% since the 2005-06 financial year, I remain disappointed that employers continue to re-employ retired teachers on a temporary or substitute basis. However, the Department is not the employer of teachers, and the decision on whom to appoint to any teaching position in a school rests with the Board of Governors.

In addition to the guidance issued by the Department, a number of measures are in place which help to restrict the level of re-employment:

- The rules of the Northern Ireland Teachers' Pension Scheme militate against the employment of retired teachers, in that such teachers may suffer a reduction in pension as a result of earnings from employment as a teacher.
- Recent amendments to the Teachers' Premature Retirement Compensation Scheme have ensured that, from 2008-09, employers are responsible for the cost of any enhancement to pension awarded to teachers retiring prematurely. This has resulted in a significant reduction in the number of premature retirements and amendments planned for 2009 should bring about a further reduction.
- The level of central reimbursement for the employment of substitute teachers has been capped at point 4 of the main pay scale to encourage schools to employ newly and recently qualified teachers.

De dheasca na mbeart seo, tá mé ag súil le tuilleadh laghduithe bliain ar bhliain i líon na múinteoirí a chuaigh ar luathscor agus a fuair athfhostaíocht ina dhiaidh sin.

As a result of these measures I expect to see further year-on-year reductions in the number of prematurely retired teachers who subsequently become re-employed.

Buddy Bear School, Dungannon

Mr G Savage asked the Minister of Education what consideration she has given to seconding staff from the Buddy Bear School in Dungannon to other local schools. (AQW 3904/09)

Minister of Education: Bhuaill mé le toscaireacht de thuismitheoirí agus páistí agus d'ionadaithe ón Buddy Bear Trust, a raibh Cathaoirleach an Trust i gceannas uirthi, ar 23 Eanáir 2008, le héisteacht lena gcuid buarthaí agus le plé a dhéanamh ar thograí cistithe maidir le todhchaí na scoile.

I met with a delegation comprising parents and children and representatives from the Buddy Bear Trust, led by the Chairperson of the Trust, on 23 January 2008, to listen to their concerns and to discuss funding proposals in relation to the future of the school.

Following consideration of the proposals I responded on 12 June, setting out the Department of Education's position in relation to the detailed consideration of the options presented by the Buddy Bear Trust and advising that the Department was unable to fund the options presented.

One of the options considered was a partnership with a grant-aided school or using and sharing the expertise built up by the staff in the Buddy Bear School with other special schools throughout the north of Ireland.

While it is a matter for the employing authorities to consider the employment of staff to meet the needs of children with special educational needs, and neither I nor my Department have a role in this process, officials sought the Education and Library Board's views on this type of option. The Boards have advised that if they were to employ a conductive therapist, they would have no means by which they could monitor or evaluate professional standards, since as educational professionals, they have no professional competence in relation to conductive therapy. They, therefore, would be unable to verify good practice and set appropriate professional standards for conductive therapy, which is outside their area of expertise, identify examples of best practice or take appropriate action if professional therapy standards were not met.

In recent correspondence, on 28th November 2008, the Buddy Bear Trust has presented its proposals differently and the Department of Education is currently in the process of considering these and seeking advice from the Department of Health and Social Services and Public Safety.

Job Evaluation Scheme

Mr T Lunn asked the Minister of Education what funding her Department provided to Grant Maintained Integrated Schools to ensure funding was available to meet the requirements of the Job Evaluation Scheme for school caretakers. (AQW 3905/09)

Minister of Education: In March 2005 the Department provided additional funds to those schools in the grant-maintained integrated sector who had indicated that they wished to implement Job Evaluation for caretakers on precisely the same basis used by the Education and Library Boards for staff in controlled and maintained schools.

Leithdháileadh £110k san iomlán bunaithe ar an eolas a thug na scoileanna féin.

A total of £110k was allocated based on information supplied by the individual schools.

Job Evaluation Scheme

Mr T Lunn asked the Minister of Education what funding her Department has provided to Grant Maintained Integrated Schools to ensure funding is available to meet the requirements of the Job Evaluation Scheme for school classroom assistants. (AQW 3906/09)

Minister of Education: Bhain an comhaontú ar thoradh an Phostmheastóireachta le Cúntóirí Ranga agus is iad na Boird Oideachais agus Leabharlainne atá mar Údaráis Fostaíochta dóibh, agus i gcomhthéacs an eolais seo, ní bhaineann an comhaontú seo le fostaithe Údarás Fostaíochta eile.

The recent agreement on the outcome of the Job Evaluation was for Classroom Assistants for whom the Education and Library Boards are the Employing Authorities, and in this context this agreement does not have a direct read across to employees of other Employing Authorities. Any decision within grant-maintained integrated or voluntary grammar schools to implement rates of pay in line with the outcome of the Job Evaluation process in the Education and Library Boards in respect of particular categories of staff is a matter for individual schools' Boards of Governors as Employing Authorities to consider within the constraints of the total resources available to the school.

Although this is an issue for Boards of Governors as Employing Authorities, I have listened and taken on board the concerns raised by schools about the potential financial implications for grant-maintained integrated and voluntary grammar schools. Therefore, without prejudice I had sought additional resources in both the September and December monitoring rounds to help alleviate the impact on school budgets but in light of the overall constrained financial position at that time these bids were not successful. I will continue to use my best endeavours to secure additional resources.

Schools Sited Near Overhead Power Cables

Mr C Boylan asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to the answer to AQW 2838/09, to name the schools in the Southern Education and Library Board that are within 200 metres of overhead power cables.

(AQW 3918/09)

Minister of Education: Is iad na 3 scoil i limistéar Bhord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne an Deiscirt atá suite taobh istigh de 200 méadar ó cháblaí leictreachais lastuas ná:

The 3 schools in the Southern Education and Library Board area sited within 200 metres of overhead power cables are:

- 5011602 Bleary Primary School, Lurgan
- 5032592 St Mary's Primary School, Dungannon
- 5046637 Gaelscoil Uí Néill, Coalisland

I am writing to NIE and requesting a report on what they plan to do about this.

Schools Sited Near Overhead Power Cables

Mr C Boylan asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to the answer to AQW 2838/09, how many schools in the Southern Education and Library Board will be within 200 metres of overhead power cables if the proposed route and construction of the Cavan- Tyrone Interconnector goes ahead as currently proposed by NIE.

(AQW 3919/09)

Minister of Education: Tá curtha in iúl ag NIE PLC don Roinn nach bhfuil scoil ar bith taobh istigh de 200 méadar ó bhealach beartaithe Idirnascaire an Chabháin-Thír Eoghain agus tá curtha in iúl acu fosta go bhfuil an scoil is gaire don Idirnascaire níos mó ná 700 méadar ar shiúl uaidh.

NIE PLC have, on request, informed the Department that no schools are within 200 metres of the proposed Cavan-Tyrone Interconnector route and that the nearest school is more than 700 metres away.

Children with Communication and Interaction Difficulties

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Education how many children are registered with speech, language and communication difficulties, in each Education and Library Board. (AQW 3973/09)

Minister of Education: Tá an t-eolas a iarradh sa tábla thíos.

The information requested is contained in the table below.

Pupil Profiling

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education how much has been spent on the development of pupil profiling and any subsequent training and support for teachers. (AQW 3995/09)

Minister of Education: The pupil profile was developed to provide a consistent format for the traditional annual report to parents. The cost of developing the pupil profile and of associated training and support for teachers has been some £581,000. It is as a result of this trialling and the associated training that we have been able to identify how best to modify the original proposals to meet the needs of schools and parents. That is why I am currently consulting on draft Education (Pupil Records and Reporting) Regulations (NI) 2009 that propose a standard coverage for reports but do not require a standard reporting format. However, the format will be available for any school that has worked with it and found it beneficial.

Is cuma cé acu a dtugtar próifílí dalta nó tuairiscí bliantúla chuig tuismitheoirí orthu, is é an bunchuspóir atá acu ná a chinntiú go bhfaigheann tuismitheoirí an t-eolas atá de dhíth orthu faoi dhul chun cinn agus faoi ghnóthachtálacha a bpáiste féin sa scoil i gcomhthéacs an churaclaim athbhreithnithe.

Whether we call them pupil profiles or annual reports to parents, the fundamental objective is to make sure parents get the information they need about their child's progress and achievements in school in the context of the revised curriculum. That is my focus and the purpose of the draft Regulations.

School Pupils Suspended or Excluded

Mr T Burns asked the Minister of Education how many school pupils were formally disciplined, suspended or excluded for sexual misconduct or sexual bullying, in each of the last five years. (AQW 4004/09)

Minister of Education: Ní choinníonn an Roinn an teolas a iarradh.

The Department does not hold the information requested.

The Department collects statistics annually from each of the Education and Library Boards on suspensions and expulsions. For statistical collection purposes, the reasons for such sanctions are grouped into broad categories for example, physical attack on staff, disruptive behaviour in class and stealing. Sexual misconduct and sexual bullying are not separately identified as reasons for suspension or expulsion.

The Department publishes this information on its website (www.deni.gov.uk/index/21-pupils\_parents-pg/pupils\_parents-suspensions\_and\_expulsions\_pg.htm) annually and the full list of reasons and the relevant data can be viewed for the last five school years on this site.

The table below shows the number of suspensions and expulsions in the last five years where bullying behaviour has been the reason.

	Suspensions for 'bullying of a pupil'	Total no. of suspensions	Expulsions for 'bullying of a pupil'	Total no. of expulsions
2003/04	341	9,512	0	71
2004/05	322	8,496	2	63
2005/06	339	8,918	3	54
2006/07	328	8,463	1	45
2007/08	312	8,194	2	25

Note: The information on suspension reflects the number of individual suspensions, as opposed to the number of pupils suspended.

Special Educational Needs Framework

Mr G Savage asked the Minister of Education how many children have been (i) placed in the Buddy Bear School; and (ii) financially supported by her Department through the special educational needs framework (AQW 4038/09)

Minister of Education: Tá curtha in iúl ag Príomhfheidmeannaigh na mBord Oideachais agus Leabharlainne (ELBanna) dom gur cuireadh páiste amháin chuig an Buddy Bear School sa bhliain acadúil 2008/2009 agus is é an ELB ábhartha a thugann tacaíocht airgeadais, trí tháillí scoile a íoc, le go mbeidh an páiste ábalta freastal ar an scoil.

I have been advised by the Chief Executives of the Education and Library Boards (ELBs) that one child has been placed in the Buddy Bear School in the academic year 2008/2009 and is financially supported, by the payment of school fees, to attend that school by the appropriate ELB.

Free School Meals

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education what progress has been made by her Department regarding provision of electronic access to the Department of Work and Pensions Customer Information System to facilitate the more efficient processing of free school meals applications and allow Boards to target those who do not apply for entitlement. (AQW 4058/09)

Minister of Education: The Department of Education has been working closely with the Department for Social Development and the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) to gain access to the latter's Customer Information System.

Tá meastachán mionsonraithe ar na costais forbartha ullmhaithe ag an DWP agus tá an Roinn ag breithniú an mheastacháin faoi láthair.

A detailed estimate of the development costs involved has now been prepared by DWP and this is currently being considered by the Department.

Transport Assistance

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education how many children are in receipt of transport assistance where a road safety hazard has been cited as an exceptional circumstance in each of the Education and Library Boards. (AQW 4059/09)

Minister of Education: Tá curtha in iúl ag na Boird Oideachais agus Leabharlainne go bhfaigheann na líonta páistí seo a leanas cúnamh airgid le haghaidh iompair scoile de thairbhe go bhfuil contúirt sábháilteachta bóthair ar a mbealach chuig an scoil:

The Education and Library Boards have advised that the following number of children are in receipt of school transport assistance due to a road safety hazard existing along their route to school:

Belfast Board	North-Eastern Board	South-Eastern Board	Southern Board	Western Board	Total
2	0	62	60	0	124

Child and Adolescent Psychology

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education how many graduates have enrolled for the doctorate degree in Child & Adolescent Psychology at Queen's University Belfast since 2006. (AQW 4060/09)

Minister of Education: Tá 24 céimí cláraithe don Dochtúireacht i Síceolaíocht Oideachais, Páistí agus Ógánach ag Ollscoil na Ríona, Béal Feirste ón bhliain 2006.

24 graduates have enrolled for the Doctorate in Educational, Child and Adolescent Psychology at Queen's University Belfast since 2006. The next entry of 12 students will be in September 2009.

Child and Adolescent Psychology

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education how many student places are available for a doctorate degree in Child and Adolescent Psychology as a result of his Department's funding. (AQW 4061/09)

Minister of Education: Tá 12 áit ar fáil ar an Dochtúireacht i Síceolaíocht Oideachais, Páistí agus Ógánach ag Ollscoil na Ríona Béal Feirste le haghaidh iontrála sa bhliain 2009.

12 places are available on the Doctorate in Educational, Child and Adolescent Psychology at Queen's University Belfast for entry in 2009.

Child and Adolescent Psychology

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education how much funding has been allocated to support the doctorate degree in Child and Adolescent Psychology. (AQW 4062/09)

Minister of Education: Is é an cistiú iomlán a leithdháil an Roinn Oideachais le tacaíocht a thabhairt don Dochtúireacht i Síceolaíocht Oideachais, Páistí agus Ógánach ag Ollscoil na Ríona Béal Feirste sa bhliain airgeadais reatha (2008/2009) ná £600k.

Total funding allocated by the Department of Education in the current financial year (2008/2009) to support the Doctorate in Educational, Child and Adolescent Psychology at Queen's University Belfast is £600k.

Lagan College

Ms A Lo asked the Minister of Education for an update on progress on the building project at Lagan College, Belfast agreed under the Public/Private Partnership Initiative in 2002. (AQW 4128/09)

Minister of Education: Tá Lagan College páirteach i gnuastionscadal Comhpháirtíochta Príobháidí Poiblí (PPP) i dteannta Tor Bank Special School, Dún Dónaill.

Lagan College is in a Public Private Partnerships (PPP) clustered project along with Tor Bank Special School, Dundonald. The PPP project is to extend and refurbish Lagan College and provide a new school for Tor Bank Special School. There are some issues to be resolved before a preferred bidder can be appointed for this building project. The Department is working closely with those involved to allow the procurement process to move ahead.

Lagan College

Mr A Maskey asked the Minister of Education (i) what are the reasons for the delay in the improvement and refurbishment of Lagan College, Belfast; and (ii) when her Department expects this work to be completed. (AQW 4170/09)

Minister of Education: Tá Lagan College páirteach i gnuastionscadal Comhpháirtíochta Príobháidí Poiblí (PPP) i dteannta Tor Bank Special School, Dún Dónaill.

Teacher:Pupil Ratios

Dr A McDonnell asked the Minister of Education what action she is taking to improve teacher to pupil ratios. (AQO 1723/09)

Minister of Education: Is é an Cóimheas reatha Daltaí le Múinteoirí (2007/2008) i mbunscoileanna thuaisceart na hÉireann ná 20.7. Tá an cóimheas seo níos airde ná an cóimheas in Albain (16.0), an cóimheas sa Bhreatain Bheag (19.9) agus an cóimheas i ndeisceart na hÉireann ach tá sé níos ísle ná an cóimheas i Sasana (21.6).

The current primary Pupil: Teacher Ratio (2007/08) for the North of Ireland is 20.7, this is higher than Scotland (16.0), Wales (19.9) and the South of Ireland (16.0) but lower than England (21.6).

The current post-primary PTR (2007/08) for the North of Ireland is 14.5, this is higher than Scotland (11.7) and the South of Ireland (12.7 in 2006/07) but lower than England (16.1) and Wales (16.5).

In the North of Ireland the current PTR (2007/08) for all schools is 16.8. This includes a Nursery PTR of 25.1, a Primary PTR of 20.7, a Special PTR of 6.0 and a Post-Primary PTR of 14.5.

PTR has a key role to play, in particular for teachers in schools with significant proportions of disadvantaged pupils to have smaller classes so that they can deal with the barriers to learning; give individual help to pupils; or work in small groups. That is why, for example, schools already receive additional funding via the LMS common funding formula when they have higher than average levels of pupils entitled to free school meals.

Other factors in raising standards and tackling underachievement is the quality of the teaching and leadership in a school. That is why our school improvement strategy, which we are currently finalising following consultation, has a clear focus on these.

In addition to this, I have made available extra funding, outside the formula, to ensure that, from September 2008, classroom assistants are provided for Foundation Stage pupils in all primary schools.

Pupil:Teacher ratios are a consequence of the decisions taken by individual schools on their teaching complements, under the LMS arrangements. School Boards of Governors and Principals are best placed to make decisions on the educational needs of all pupils in their schools and in determining their use of resources – including their most valuable resource, their teaching staff.

The prime determinant is therefore the availability of resources and members should recognise that more resources are needed. I maintain that the PTR is a key part of raising standards and improving schools, alongside leadership and quality teaching and would like to see a reduction in PTRs, should resources become available.

All parties should support my request for increased resources for education, which can be passed directly to schools.

Academic Selection

Ms M Anderson asked the Minister of Education for her assessment of the latest United Nations report on the 'Rights of the Child', and in particular its concerns over the continuation of academic selection in Northern Ireland. (AQO 1837/09)

Minister of Education: Cuirim fáilte mór roimh Thuairmí Deiridh Choiste na Náisiúin Aontaithe um Chearta an Linbh.

I very much welcome the Concluding Observations of the United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child.

I fully agree with their child centred approach and the need to strengthen efforts to tackle social disadvantage. I am also committed to ensuring that children have a voice in all policies that directly affect them.

I especially welcome the UNCRC recommendation that we:-

“put an end to the two tier culture by abolishing the 11+ transfer test and ensure that all children are included in admission arrangements in post primary Schools”

I continue to work for an education system which does not judge 10 and 11 year olds. All our children should have access to the best education we can offer.

I am also working to support vulnerable groups of children including those who belong to minority groups. The North/South Conference on Best Practice in Traveller Education is scheduled to take place in March this year and I am taking action to ensure that additional funding is being provided to schools based on the current reported number of Roma children.

Breach of the Ministerial Code

Mr F Cobain asked the Minister of Education how her statement on 17 December praising Bobby Sands can be reconciled with her Pledge of Office ‘to promote the interests of the whole community represented in the Northern Ireland Assembly towards the goal of a shared future’.

(AQO 1717/09)

Minister of Education: Níor sháraigh mé Gealladh na nAirí. Ba chóir mo thuairmí a léamh i gcomhthéacs na hóráide ina hiomláine. Leanfaidh mé orm ag cloí le Gealladh na nAirí.

I have not breached the Ministerial Pledge. My comments should be read in the context of my complete speech. I will continue to adhere to the Ministerial Pledge.

Breach of the Ministerial Code

Mr D McNarry asked the Minister of Education how her statement on 17 December praising Bobby Sands can be reconciled with her Pledge of Office ‘to promote the interests of the whole community represented in the Northern Ireland Assembly towards the goal of a shared future’.

(AQO 1713/09)

Minister of Education: Níor sháraigh mé Gealladh na nAirí. Ba chóir mo thuairmí a léamh i gcomhthéacs na hóráide ina hiomláine. Leanfaidh mé orm ag cloí le Gealladh na nAirí.

I have not breached the Ministerial Pledge. My comments should be read in the context of my complete speech. I will continue to adhere to the Ministerial Pledge.

Review of Irish-Medium Education

Mr F Brolly asked the Minister of Education if the Review of Irish-Medium Education will take into account her Department’s statutory obligations on the promotion and facilitation of the Irish language.

(AQO 1815/09)

Minister of Education: Is cuid lárnach den chóras oideachais í an Ghaeilge anseo agus ní mór go léirítear é seo i ngach rud a dhéanann muid. Áirítear air seo comhlíonadh an dualgaís reachtúil le forbairt na Gaelscolaíochta a chothú agus a éascú.

The Irish language is a vital part of the total education system and everything that we do, including the delivery of the statutory duty to encourage and facilitate the development of Irish-medium education, must reflect that fact.

The Review had this at its heart. It also recognised and celebrated the fact that Gaelscoileanna are producing confident, capable, productive, dynamic and bi-lingual students every year and this is a wonderful contribution to our society.

The consultation on the Review, which ended on 10 January, was a wide-ranging one, and provided those with an interest in the sector the opportunity to influence how it will develop and grow in the future.

To ensure that as wide a range of views was gathered consultation events were held around the island in Derry, Portadown, Coalisland, Belfast, Downpatrick, Armagh, Ballycastle, Cookstown, Bettystown, Cork, Galway and Dublin.

Also, the Department is consulting with children and young people and this will end on 30 January 2009.

I will ensure that in considering the outcome and implementation of any policies arising from the Review, I and my Department will take full cognisance of the statutory duty.

Review of Irish-Medium Education

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Education if she has the resources to implement the Review of Irish-Medium Education and the Early Years Strategy. (AQO 1696/09)

Minister of Education: Tá Straitéis na Luathbhlianta á dréachtú sa Roinn faoi láthair agus leagfar amach inti an fhís fhadtéarmach do sheirbhísí luathbhlianta go dtí 2020.

The Early Years Strategy which is currently being drafted by the Department will set out the long term vision for early years services to 2020. The Strategy will ensure that our energies and resources are wisely and coherently applied and funding is more cost effective in targeting priority front-line early years services, however it is too early to determine the resources that will be required to implement the draft proposals. This will be a matter for the action and implementation plan emanating from the Strategy to consider.

The consultation on the Review of Irish Medium Education ended on 10 January 2009. I will need to analyse the outcome of the consultation before announcing any policy decisions as a result of the Review. As with the Early Years Strategy it is therefore too early to determine the resources that will be required to implement the outworking of the Review.

School Modernisation Programme

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Education for her assessment of the implications of the High Court ruling on her Department's Major Capital Works framework; and the subsequent suspension of the framework for the Schools Modernisation Programme. (AQO 1804/09)

Minister of Education: De réir rialú na hArd-Chúirte de 19 Nollaig 2008 cuireadh an creat móroibreacha ar ceal. Ní féidir dul chun cinn le aon tionscadal eile tríd an chreat.

The High Court ruling on 19 December 2008 set aside the major works framework. No further projects can be progressed via the framework. The five projects already in contract via the framework shall continue within the framework. In order to minimise the impact on the remainder within the schools programme, my Department is working up an alternative procurement method outside the framework to feed projects to the market as quickly as available resources will allow. The standard documents for this purpose are now complete and project managers have been instructed to prepare for competitions early in the New Year.

Integrated Schools

Dr S Farry asked the Minister of Education to outline the terms of reference for the review of the viability criteria for integrated schools. (AQO 1786/09)

Minister of Education: Is tábhachtach liom an dualgas reachtúil atá orm le forbairt an oideachais imeasetha a chothú agus a éascú.

I take my statutory duty to encourage and facilitate the development of integrated education very seriously. It was with this in mind that I agreed to carry out a review of viability criteria for integrated schools in the Department, within the context of existing policy and legislation.

This will be completed later this year.

Breach of the Ministerial Code

Mr J McCallister asked the Minister of Education how her statement on 17 December praising Bobby Sands can be reconciled with her Pledge of Office ‘to promote the interests of the whole community represented in the Northern Ireland Assembly towards the goal of a shared future’. (AQO 1709/09)

Minister of Education: Níor sháraigh mé Gealladh na nAirí. Ba chóir mo thuairmí a léamh i gcomhthéacs na hóráide ina hiomláine. Leanfaidh mé orm ag cloí le Gealladh na nAirí.

I have not breached the Ministerial Pledge. My comments should be read in the context of my complete speech. I will continue to adhere to the Ministerial Pledge.

Breach of the Ministerial Code

Mr I Paisley Jnr asked the Minister of Education if she considers her comments on Bobby Sands has breached the pledge she took to ‘serve all the people of Northern Ireland equally, and to act in accordance with the general obligations on government to promote equality and prevent discrimination’. (AQO 1806/09)

Minister of Education: Níor sháraigh mé Gealladh na nAirí. Ba chóir mo thuairmí a léamh i gcomhthéacs na hóráide ina hiomláine. Leanfaidh mé orm ag cloí le Gealladh na nAirí.

I have not breached the Ministerial Pledge. My comments should be read in the context of my complete speech. I will continue to adhere to the Ministerial Pledge.

Pupil Profiling

Mr M Storey asked the Minister of Education what advantages the proposed pupil records reporting and assessment arrangements would have over pupil profiling for schools. (AQO 1801/09)

Minister of Education: Ceapadh an phróifíl dalta a ndearnadh úsáid aisti mar scéim phiólótach sa bhliain 2007/08 mar fhormáid chaighdeánach do thuairisciú bliantúil chuig tuismitheoirí.

The pupil profile that was piloted in 2007/08 was devised as a standard format for annual reporting to parents. It contained a broad range of information on pupils’ achievements, progress, interests, aptitudes, and participation in enrichment activities such as clubs, societies and sports opportunities.

The good news from the pilot was that the vast majority of parents found it easy to read and understand and thought it informed them of their child’s achievement. But I also received feedback that, by making every school produce its report in exactly the same format, the result was that some schools were providing less information than they used to do.

I have listened to the feedback from parents, teachers and principals on the Pupil Profile pilot, which has been useful in helping me to decide which elements to retain and which to improve. As much of the report was very positively received, I’ll be making very few changes to the detail of what should be covered in the annual school report. I am, however, proposing to go back to calling it an “annual report to parents” and to make sure that there is flexibility for schools to add in extra information that they think parents will find useful. And I’m consulting on these proposals to find out what parents, teachers and young people themselves think of them.

In view of the feedback from the pilot, my proposals do not require schools to use a standard format for reporting. However, the format trialled last summer will continue to be made available for the many schools that have found it beneficial.

Whether we call them pupil profiles or annual reports to parents, my key aim is to make sure parents get the information they need about their child’s progress and achievements in school. That’s my prime concern and that’s the purpose of the proposals contained in the draft reporting Regulations.

Learning Communities

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister of Education how area based plans and the work of the learning communities will be reconciled. (AQO 1841/09)

Minister of Education: Meastar go gcuideoidh an obair a dhéanann na Pobail um Fhoghlaim sa Cheantar (ALCanna) leis an Chleachtadh um Phleanáil Bunaithe sa Cheantar don Iarbhunscolaíocht.

It is anticipated that the work of the Area Learning Communities (ALCs) will inform the Area Based Planning Exercise for Post Primary Education. ALCs comprise schools from all sectors and have evolved across the North to plan collaborative 14-19 provision with a specific focus on delivering the Entitlement Framework (EF). They have already begun to consider and address the issues relating to the local delivery of the EF

The Area Based Planning Exercise for Post Primary Education was commissioned to produce a regional plan for the most efficient and effective arrangements to provide access to the Entitlement Framework for young people, from 2013. It is therefore likely that the ALCs will have a major input to the local area based planning process and should be well placed to make a submission to the Local Area Based Planning Groups.

However the process of making a submission to the Area Based Planning Exercise for Post Primary Education is an open and inclusive one, with submissions welcome from all interested parties and not restricted to ALCs.

Post-Primary Transfer

Mr D Ford asked the Minister of Education when she expects her post-primary transfer proposals to come into force. (AQO 1796/09)

Minister of Education: Tharraing mé moltaí anuas i mí Bealtaine 2008 agus é ar intinn agam go dtiocfadh reachtaíocht i bhfeidhm a ndéanfaidh na moltaí a bhunú, in am don phróiseas aistrithe iarbhunscolaíochta agus dóibh siúd a thosóidh iarbhunscóil i mí Bealtaine 2010.

I brought forward my proposals in May 2008 with the intention that legislation establishing these would take effect for the post-primary transfer process for those starting post-primary school in September 2010.

My proposals address a number of inequalities evident in the existing arrangements, in particular the role that disadvantage plays in constraining the life chances of children as they make the transition from primary to post-primary education. It is a damning statistic that while one in four children in our non-grammar schools is entitled to free school meals, the ratio in grammar schools is one in seventeen.

An examination of the areas that children live in as they make this transition also paints a picture of inequality, with children located in areas of disadvantage unable to enjoy equal access to a grammar school education if that should be their preference.

The case for change is also amply illustrated by statistics that record the extent of underachievement in the existing system, with 47% of young people not achieving at least a Grade C pass in English and Maths, which equates to 12,000 pupils (2006/07). Examine the statistics further to see how that underachievement relates to children from different backgrounds – Protestant, Catholic, Traveller, ethnic minority – and a clear picture emerges which strongly links disadvantage to underachievement.

This is the first cohort for whom the existing legislative framework for admissions and transfer will lapse. Despite a paper of May 13, 2008 and a legislative bid for my proposals the Executive has not engaged with them. The operative date for my proposals, of Transfer 2010, is clearly subject to this important engagement.

DEPARTMENT FOR EMPLOYMENT AND LEARNING

University of Ulster

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning given the success of the pilot schemes involving the University of Ulster and young people in parts of Derry/Londonderry and Belfast, will he work in partnership with the University of Ulster to ensure that disadvantaged pupils in South and East Antrim can benefit from an extension of this approach and enhance their prospects of entering third level education. (AQW 3763/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning (Sir Reg Empey): The Step-Up programme is one of a number of initiatives for which my Department provides funding to widen participation in higher education by students from socially disadvantaged backgrounds. Whilst the scope of the programme is essentially for the University itself to determine, my Department will consider any proposals for the further expansion of Step-Up, presented to it by the University. However, this will require the submission of a formal business case by the University which will need to be considered by the Department and formally approved by the Department of Finance and Personnel, in the context of competing budget priorities.

My Department's policies on widening participation should be judged in the round. In the current academic year, my Department is providing approximately £2.45 million to the four Higher Education Institutions in the form of a widening participation premium and funding for special projects such as Step-Up.

I am also continuing to work with Executive colleagues on the development and implementation of an integrated strategy for Widening Participation in higher education in Northern Ireland. This will include the appointment of a Regional Co-ordinator for Northern Ireland, answerable to a cross departmental steering group, who will drive the development and delivery of the strategy. It will also include the co-ordination of existing departmental and stakeholder initiatives to ensure efficiency and better targeting of resources, and the development of new collaborative partnerships to widen participation in higher education. Given the success of the Step-Up programme, it will continue to be an important part of the development of this strategy.

Telephone Communication Masts

Mr D Hilditch asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what is the total revenue generated by land owned or leased by the (i) Northern Region College; (ii) Southern Regional College; (iii) South Eastern Regional College; and (iv) North West Regional College to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts.

(AQW 3797/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: No revenue is generated by any of the named colleges in relation to leasing land or property to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts.

Paperwork Reduction

Dr A McDonnell asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what steps he is taking to significantly reduce the amount of paperwork he sends to constituency offices and other organisations throughout 2009.

(AQW 3830/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: My Department's Green Policy states that "Where possible, the use of hard copies for external contacts and customers should be avoided if forms and/or publications can be distributed by email or CD-Rom, or downloaded via the corporate website".

In addition, my officials take full account of the requirements of the NICS-wide "Guidance on Distribution of Departmental Publications and Consultation Documents". This document prescribes who should receive various categories of publications, as well as the format and the number of copies to be issued.

Departmental Legislation

Mr P Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what legislation will his Department bring forward to the Assembly in 2009.

(AQW 3846/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: The Department has identified its potential legislative requirements for the remainder of this session of the Assembly. However, these proposals are subject to consideration by the Executive and it would therefore not be appropriate or possible to pre-empt this consideration by providing the information you request.

University of Ulster

Mr M Durkan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what courses are available at the Magee campus of the University of Ulster in (i) 2008/9; and (ii) 2009/10, at undergraduate and post-graduate level.

(AQW 3865/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: This information has been placed in the library.

Redundancies: East Antrim

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what steps his Department is taking, or proposing to take, to assist individuals affected by the recent announcement of redundancies in East Antrim.

(AQW 3898/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: The staff in the Jobs and Benefits Office are working with companies which have declared redundancies in East Antrim including Ryobi, FG Wilson and Brett Martin. They have established multi agency partnerships with the relevant Borough Councils in order to ensure that the maximum help and support is given to all who are facing redundancy. A tailored response is being put in place to meet on the individual needs of the company and those facing redundancy.

Further Education Colleges

Mr R Newton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to breakdown, by age and gender, enrolment in further education colleges for the current academic year and the five previous academic years; and to outline how he plans to address any imbalances, in light of the funding cuts to community education. (AQW 4046/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: Validated Further Education (FE) enrolment statistics for the current year are not available, as the 2008/09 academic year is still in progress. The latest available validated data pertaining to total enrolments in the Northern Ireland FE sector is for the 2006/07 academic year. Enrolment information, by Age Group and Gender, for the 2001/02 to 2006/07 academic years, is detailed in the table below:

Source: Further Education Statistical Record

Note: Age is at 1st July at the beginning of the relevant academic year.

In general, any imbalances in the figures presented follow the traditional pattern of enrolment within the FE sector. For example, traditionally in post compulsory education females participate in larger numbers than males. This is the case, consistently, for those over 20 years of age across the period for which validated data is available. The patterns of enrolments, in terms of age and gender, are largely consistent across the five year period, although there has been an increase in the number of enrolments from younger age groups and a slight reduction in the number of learners from older age cohorts.

The majority of community education funded by my Department is delivered by FE Colleges through their network of approximately 750 outreach centres. My Department has made no cuts to the Community Education it funds through the FE Sector, and across the five year period in question the total FE budget increased year on year.

In addition, over the next three years the Department is funding a new £3 million per year Learner Access and Engagement Pilot Programme. Through this programme, which commenced in the current academic year, FE colleges will contract with third party organisations, to provide learner support to 'hard to reach' adults who are economically inactive, are disengaged from the labour market, and have few or no qualifications.

Repayment Thresholds for Loans

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what discussions he has held with Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs and his Executive colleagues to increase the salary threshold for graduates in relation to the paying back of loans. (AQW 4176/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs, which collects payments on income contingent repayment loans on Government's behalf, has made it clear to my Department (and the other Devolved Administrations) that it cannot operate a UK-wide collection system with different repayment thresholds. My Department could not, therefore, increase the repayment threshold unless the Department for Innovation, Universities and Skills (DIUS) in England and the other Devolved Administrations were to do similar.

I have recently indicated my intention to raise this matter with Ministerial colleagues in the other Administrations and I will inform the House when I receive a response.

Concessions for Further Education Courses for Over 60s

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning if he has sought advice from the Minister for Regional Development on the introduction of concessions for further education courses for those over 60. (AQW 4178/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: I have not asked the Minister for Regional Development for advice on the introduction of concessions for further education courses for those over 60. As incorporated bodies, Further Education Colleges are responsible for setting the level of fees, including concessionary fees, for the courses they provide. In establishing their fees policies, colleges have to take account of relevant legislation. They have to comply with Employment Equality (Age) Regulations which came into operation in October 2006. These Regulations mean that colleges are no longer able to offer concessionary fees to learners solely on the basis of their age.

Goods, facilities and services do not fall within the scope of the Employment Equality (Age) Regulations. This is why pensioners can be offered, for example, access to free transport, while it is not possible to offer college fee concessions on the basis of age.

Apprentices

Dr A McDonnell asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many apprentices have been made redundant in the (i) construction, (ii) automotive and (iii) engineering sectors since 1 April 2008; and how many in each category have availed of contingency arrangements put in place by the Department as a response to the economic downturn. (AQO 1799/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: Management Information collected by the Department in relation to apprentices who have left training provision is included in a broader "early leaver" destination category. Consequently, the Department cannot say categorically whether these apprentices have left due to redundancy.

Nevertheless, from 1st April 2008, the following numbers of apprentices have been recorded as being “early leavers” in the sectors requested:

- Construction – 266
- Automotive – 54
- Engineering – 97

I would emphasise that the Department’s work in this area is ongoing, and that contingency arrangements were only introduced on 1st December 2008. These arrangements allow for a 3 week period in which the apprentice can look for an alternative employer, before transferring onto the Steps for Work initiative, or continuing training under Training for Success. This 3 week period, coupled with the Christmas holidays, means that a clearer picture on the uptake of contingency arrangements will emerge over the next few weeks.

West Belfast Employment Service Board

Mr A Attwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the 500 people moved into substantive employment and 4000 referrals and whether this confirms the success of the West Belfast Employment Service Board (ESB); and what plans he has to identify additional funding to enable ESB to develop its work. (AQO 1798/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: I am very encouraged to see that so many people from West Belfast and Greater Shankill have moved into substantive employment as a direct result of my Department’s provision. The Local Employment Intermediary Service programme (LEMIS) and the previous pilot Targeted Initiatives operate in Belfast, Londonderry and Strabane and results have been positive in all areas.

My Department does not core-fund organisations. It purchases services from Providers which are focussed on assisting clients. Additional funding to enable the ESB to fulfil its “Wider Task Force Remit” is a cross Departmental issue and I welcome the fact that the DEL Committee has recently acknowledged this by writing to the other Departments seeking their views on the issue. The ESB’s administration facilitates the LEMIS Belfast Citywide Stakeholders Forum in its monitoring of LEMIS and generally in assisting DEL in the delivery of the service in Belfast. They currently receive £88k per annum for this and are contracted to deliver this service until March 2010.

I appreciate the Employment Services Board’s contribution in this partnership between the Department, local communities and Providers. I also value the local providers on the ground, who actually engage and mentor the participants, and the work of my own officials who develop and oversee the service.

STEM Review

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Employment and Learning when the review of STEM will be completed and how quickly he anticipates the Department being able to respond to its recommendations. (AQO 1805/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: The final draft of the STEM review is due to be presented to the Minister of Education and me in the near future. After that my Department, in conjunction with the Department of Education, will make a prompt response to the report subject, of course, to the details of the recommendations and any resource implications it may contain.

AVX Redundancies

Mr D McClarty asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what response his Department has made to the recent redundancies at AVX in Coleraine. (AQO 1692/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: Immediate contact was made with the Company when the redundancies were announced offering help and advice on employment, education, training, reskilling, jobsearch, and arranging for benefits advice from the Social Security Agency. Under a multi-agency approach, facilitated by the local Council’s Economic Development Team, we will target directly those in AVX facing redundancy.

Redundancies in South Down

Mr J McCallister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what response his Department has made to the recent redundancies in South Down. (AQO 1697/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: The Department has provided information and advice to those made redundant in South Down to help them find alternative employment or identify opportunities to retrain under the Department's employment and training programmes. In a number of cases the Jobs & Benefits staff were able to deliver on-site clinics directly to those who had received notices of redundancy.

STEM Courses at Universities

Mr E Poots asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many additional places will be available for STEM courses at universities in 2009. (AQO 1785/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: The allocation of places for particular courses is a matter for each of the universities in Northern Ireland. I am, however, very keen to work with the universities to determine if any additional places are required in specific subject areas. This will be particularly relevant in the context of the forthcoming STEM review which will contain a range of recommendations, including actions for government.

Educational Guidance Service for Adults

Mr J Dallat asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the importance of the Educational Guidance Service for Adults (EGSA) in the current economic climate. (AQO 1840/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: The Education and Guidance Service for Adults (EGSA) is currently funded to support my Department in providing educational guidance to adults and introducing adults to learning, with particular emphasis on essential skills. I consider this to be an important role particularly in the current economic climate.

Stranmillis Queen's Merger Business Case

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Employment and Learning when the consideration of the Stranmillis Queen's merger business case will be complete. (AQO 1695/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: The consideration of the Stranmillis-Queens Merger business case will be complete once a sequence of approval processes have been satisfactorily addressed. The business case is firstly considered by my Departmental economists to determine if it meets Treasury 'Green Book' standards; work has begun already on this. Subsequently, it will be examined by my Department's Finance Division before being submitted to the Permanent Secretary for approval. If my officials are satisfied with the business case, it will then be submitted to the Department of Finance and Personnel (DFP) for scrutiny. If DFP approval is granted, I will at that time give the business case my full consideration.

Research Assessment Exercise

Mr F Cobain asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what assessment his Department has made of the performance of the two universities in the 2008 Research Assessment Exercise. (AQO 1694/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: The results of the 2008 Research Assessment Exercise (RAE) show that in Northern Ireland the proportion of research graded at the highest level has increased since the last RAE in 2001. Half the assessed research in Northern Ireland is either internationally excellent or world-leading with more than 98 per cent of researchers working in disciplines where world leading research is taking place. I am delighted with the performance of our two universities and their improvement in overall placing within the UK.

Quality of Research at Universities

Mr B McElduff asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the quality of research undertaken by Queen's University Belfast and the University of Ulster. (AQO 1794/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: The results of the 2008 Research Assessment Exercise (RAE) show that in Northern Ireland the proportion of research graded at the highest level has increased since the last RAE in 2001. Half the assessed research in Northern Ireland is either internationally excellent or world-leading with more than 98 per cent of researchers working in disciplines where world leading research is taking place. I am delighted with the performance of our two universities and their improvement in overall placings within the UK.

Educational Guidance Service for Adults

Mr T Burns asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what consideration he has given, in addition to the increase in staff at Jobs and Benefits Offices, to guarantee funding for organisations like the Educational Guidance Service for Adults (EGSA) given its proven ability to support persons both facing redundancy and long term unemployment. (AQO 1803/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: My Department provides specific services in redundancy situations and to the long term unemployed, in partnership with other organisations, including EGSA. With the exception of EGSA, all of this work is carried out on a contract basis and funding is guaranteed until the contract end date. EGSA is funded by my Department to provide educational guidance and introduce adults to learning. Funding is agreed on an annual basis. Work is currently progressing in relation to tender action and EGSA will have an opportunity to compete.

Further Education Facilities

Mr P Doherty asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what plans his Department has to increase the provision of further education facilities and courses in the West Tyrone constituency. (AQO 1792/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: South West College's state of the art campus for further education was opened in Omagh in November 2005. A wide range of Further Education and Higher Education provision is available at this campus, including Foundation Degrees. Provision can be enhanced even further, subject to local demand.

North West Regional College is considering proposals to provide a new build facility at its Strabane campus. Work is currently scheduled to begin in 2012 with a completion date in 2014.

North West Regional College expanded the number of full time and part time courses at its Strabane campus at the start of the 2008/09 academic year. The College intends to offer an even wider range of provision in Strabane for the 2009/10 academic year following the completion of refurbishment of the campus' facilities.

December Monitoring Round

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to provide details of monies returned by his Department in the December Monitoring Round. (AQO 1838/09)

Minister for Employment and Learning: My Department declared a total of £25.9 million in reduced requirements in the December 2008 Monitoring Round made up as follows:

Small and Medium-Sized Enterprises

Ms M Anderson asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what support and assistance is available to small and medium-sized enterprises that are struggling to survive as a result of the economic downturn. (AQW 3773/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: There are a number of initiatives underway to assist businesses during the downturn. The Finance Minister and I met representatives of the local banks in December 2008 to discuss their lending policies to businesses, and how they might make more use of the UK wide lending initiatives announced by the Chancellor in his Pre-Budget Report to help small businesses. My Department and Invest NI are also continuing to work with the UK Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform (BERR), the banks and businesses to ensure that Northern Ireland takes full advantage of the UK-wide Small Business Finance Scheme which is due to be launched during January.

Invest NI has developed a programme of initiatives designed to enable its clients to tackle the impact of a sustained economic downturn. At the end of September, the £5 million 'Accelerated Support Fund' was launched providing fast track advice and assistance to client companies to help them respond to the effects of the downturn.

The agency has held seven seminars on the theme of "Navigating through Challenging Times". These have attracted over 500 attendees from 440 of Invest NI's Client Companies and feedback to date has been extremely positive. As a follow-up to these events, Invest NI is offering up to five days of free consultancy support on a range of key business areas.

Invest NI has also continued to increase its focus on export support to exploit the current weaknesses in the exchange rate and has initiated additional trade missions to Saudi Arabia, the Gulf States & Europe as well as developing a new export mentoring programme.

For those businesses that are not Invest NI clients, a “Beat the Credit Crunch” section has been added to the nibusinessinfo website which provides practical tools and guides on key business activities such as managing Finances and securing extra sales. Invest NI has also brought together other economic development partners to launch a series of seminars offering practical advice and support to non Invest NI client companies. A pilot seminar was held in Omagh in December 2008 and a further nine seminars will be held across Northern Ireland during January and February 2009.

All Northern Ireland businesses can also access the Carbon Trust’s Interest Free Loan Scheme which aims to maximise energy efficiency. To date 24 applicants have received a total of £3.2m funding under this scheme, and 95 free energy efficiency surveys completed.

Both DETI and Invest NI continue to proactively work with the companies and entrepreneurs whose business strategies and investment decisions are essential to progressing towards the targets contained in the Executive’s Programme for Government.

Presbyterian Mutual Society

Mr D Kennedy asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what regulatory powers and duties does her Department have with regards to the Presbyterian Mutual Society.[R] (AQW 3789/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: The Presbyterian Mutual Society is a registered society under the Industrial and Provident Societies Act (Northern Ireland) 1969. Under that Act, my Department is responsible for the office of the Registrar, who undertakes specified statutory functions in respect of all societies on the current register. These functions relate to the registration status and non-commercial aspects of a society’s operations:

- Registration, name and maximum shareholding
- Provisions as to rules
- Cancellation, suspension or refusal of registration of society or rules
- Membership and special provisions affecting membership
- Accounts, Officers, registers, books
- Amalgamations and transfers of engagements
- Dissolution

All registered societies are also required under section 48 of the Act to submit an annual return within seven months of its respective financial year-end. The annual return must contain the revenue account and balance sheet prepared in accordance with section 37 (provisions as to the accounts and balance sheets of registered societies). The annual return comprises part of the public file on each society held by the Registry.

The Registrar does not have any prudential supervisory role in relation to industrial and provident societies.

Presbyterian Mutual Society

Mr D Kennedy asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what discussions she has had with Her Majesty’s Treasury about guaranteeing investments in the Presbyterian Mutual Society. (AQW 3790/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: I have not had any discussions with the Treasury about guaranteeing investments in the Presbyterian Mutual Society (PMS). However, following the Chancellor’s Pre-Budget Report announcement of the planned review of the Northern Ireland mutuals sector, officials from my Department met with Department for Finance and Personnel and Treasury officials to discuss the scope and timescale for the review which will consider, among other things, how to prevent this situation being repeated in the future, and look at proposals for depositor protection.

At its meeting on 15 January, the Executive also considered the PMS issue and it was agreed that the FM and dFM should seek to raise with the Prime Minister the issue of help to the members of the PMS and to impress upon him the need for the UK government to provide support to them in terms of depositor protection. This is currently being actioned.

Paperwork Reduction

Dr A McDonnell asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what steps she is taking to significantly reduce the amount of paperwork she sends to constituency offices and other organisations throughout 2009. (AQW 3792/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: The Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment and its NDPBs have a statutory duty in respect of certain publications, e.g. Annual Reports and Accounts, to provide hard copies of documents. However, whenever possible and acceptable to recipients, publications, including consultations, are made available in electronic format.

Geothermal Heating

Mr D McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what research her Department has done on geothermal heating and how it could be successfully exploited. (AQW 3800/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: The Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment has carried out research on geothermal energy in Northern Ireland through projects involving Action Renewables and the Geological Survey of Northern Ireland (GSNI). Studies were completed into the potential for both shallow and deep geothermal energy in 2005. A follow-up study, funded by DETI, was carried out in 2008 which matched the best areas of deep geothermal energy potential to planned developments in the domestic, public and commercial sectors throughout Northern Ireland.

These studies have all concluded that there is considerable potential for the exploitation of both deep and shallow geothermal energy to produce low-carbon heat energy in Northern Ireland. GSNI is undertaking further research projects designed to enhance the knowledge of the deep geological and geothermal characteristics in areas of Northern Ireland. The aim of this work is to reduce the risks associated with deep geothermal exploration and thus to encourage private sector investment in this sector.

GSNI is also a partner in the EU-funded GeoThermal Regulation - Heat project (2006-09). The project will use the experience of partner countries with well-developed geothermal energy markets and efficient regulatory frameworks, to propose new legislation for those partner countries, such as Northern Ireland, where these do not yet exist.

Departmental Legislation

Mr P Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what legislation will her Department bring forward to the Assembly in 2009. (AQW 3808/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: DETI has identified its potential legislative requirements for the remainder of this session of the Assembly. However, these proposals are subject to consideration by the Executive and it would therefore not be appropriate or possible to pre-empt this consideration by providing the information you request.

Global Point Business Park

Mr T Burns asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to provide an update on the development of Global Point Business Park, Newtownabbey. (AQW 3858/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: In January 2008, Invest NI received planning approval which enabled it to offer serviced sites for sale to client companies at Global Point Business Park. Work on the latest phase of the internal infrastructure, which is releasing over 30 acres of land suitable for Invest NI clients, is due for completion by end January 2009.

Design for improvements to the Corr's Corner roundabout and an attenuation scheme, both required as a result of the planning approval, are at an advanced stage. Invest NI is actively engaged with Roads Service and Rivers Agency to ensure these designs are acceptable and to ensure that any immediate sales are not delayed pending the implementation of the final solutions to meet the planning conditions.

Invest NI is actively marketing Global Point Business Park to both existing and prospective client companies (there are 6 recorded interests for a total of 29 acres of land) although given current economic conditions, any site sales are likely to be challenging.

Invest NI continues discussion with Newtownabbey Borough Council concerning the transfer of the linear park to its care.

Northern Ireland Tourist Board

Mr S Hamilton asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment when a tourism strategy for the Strangford Lough area will be developed by the Northern Ireland Tourist Board. (AQW 3860/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: The Strangford Lough area is recognised as one of Northern Ireland's key tourism assets and the development and promotion of such an asset is already captured at a strategic level within The Northern Ireland Tourist Board's draft corporate plan (2008-2011). As such, an overarching strategy exists.

Within this, NITB has identified key product areas as the focus for product development, management and marketing over the next 2 years. Underpinning these will be Northern Ireland's superb natural assets, its unspoilt landscapes, coastlines and environment which includes Strangford Lough. These product areas will be the key to developing the tourism experience across Northern Ireland and particularly will drive investment and development in regional areas such as Strangford.

In addition, the wider Strangford constituency area will also benefit from the development and promotion of the St Patrick and Christian Heritage Signature Project which stretches from Armagh to Bangor. The trail passes through Downpatrick, linking Inch Abbey and Saul before travelling on down the Ards peninsula where it follows Strangford Lough and visits the impressive Cistercian Abbey at Greyabbey on its way North.

Rise in Unemployment

Lord Browne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how does the rise in unemployment compare with the remainder of the United Kingdom, in the last six months. (AQW 4002/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: The official measure of unemployment is sourced to the Northern Ireland Labour Force Survey (LFS) and there has been little change in the unemployment rate over the six month period to August-October 2008.

However, the more recent seasonally adjusted claimant count measure of unemployment in Northern Ireland has risen by 9,000 or 35.9% in the last six months to 34,100 in November 2008. In that period the rate as a percentage of the workforce has risen by 1.0 percentage points to 3.9%.

In the same period the level of unemployment in the UK has risen by 30.0%. The unemployment rate has increased by 0.7 percentage points to 3.3%.

Northern Ireland had the third highest percentage increase in unemployment levels (35.9%) with only the South East (41.4%) and the South West (47.5%) showing higher percentage increases.

Persons of EU and Non EU Nationality Resident in Northern Ireland

Mr D Simpson asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many (i) EU; and (ii) non-EU foreign national have been residents in Northern Ireland, in each of the last five years. (AQW 4034/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: Labour Force Survey estimates for the number of persons of EU and non EU nationality who were resident in Northern Ireland between 2004 and 2008 are shown in the table below.

RESIDENTS IN NORTHERN IRELAND BY EU AND NON-EU NATIONALITY<sup>1</sup>, 2004-2008.

Year	EU Nationality	Non-EU Nationality
2004	1,666,000	18,000
2005	1,687,000	11,000
2006	1,691,000	24,000
2007	1,709,000	20,000
2008	1,721,000	25,000

Figures for 2007-2008 refer to EU27 countries: EU25 plus Bulgaria and Romania.

Please note that these estimates are subject to sampling error.

Programme for Government

Mr L Cree asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the targets in the Programme for Government that relate to the value added nature of prospective FDI, with the commitment to create a minimum of 6,500 jobs with 85% or above of these to be in the private sector. (AQO 1859/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: The provisional data for those inward investment projects approved between 1st April and 31st December 2008 indicates that 2,053 new inward investment jobs have been promoted to date, 1,258 of which will have salaries above the 2008 Northern Ireland Private Sector Median. A number of the projects have not yet been announced and might well now be delayed until more favourable economic conditions arise.

Invest NI remains committed to securing high value jobs as measured by salary but as I have stated in response to a previous question, the pipeline for prospective new FDI clients is not favourable, reflecting the general deterioration in business confidence.

The economic situation remains too volatile to predict with any precision how it will look in the future. However, the project sales cycle for inward investment can take 18 to 24 months to complete and Invest NI is confident that, in the medium to longer term, Northern Ireland will benefit from the opportunity that the USNI conference afforded to position the Northern Ireland business

Achieving the FDI targets in the Programme for Government will become increasingly challenging as the economic downturn continues. However I remain cautiously optimistic that new opportunities may emerge and, when they do, Northern Ireland businesses will be well placed to exploit them.

Review of Electricity Price Increases

Mr M McLaughlin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail how her Department intends to respond to the findings of the independent review into electricity prices increases. (AQO 1846/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: I welcome the independent report into the electricity price setting process commissioned by the Northern Ireland Authority for Utility Regulation which was recently completed, and its conclusions that there were no anomalies or shortcomings within the process followed by the Utility Regulator. Wider issues raised in the report will be considered in the context of the Department's ongoing review of the Strategic Energy Framework.

Review of DETI and Invest NI

Mr D McNarry asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment if the planned review of her Department and Invest NI will examine the current suitability of the economic targets in the Programme for Government. (AQO 1852/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: To date, performance on operating plan targets for 2008/09 has been generally positive. However, given the global downturn, there are obvious concerns relating to falling demand for locally produced goods and services and for potential investment opportunities. The combination of these factors suggests that targets for 2009/10 and 2010/11 will need to be monitored carefully.

In addition to internal reviews that my officials will be conducting, I have asked the Review Panel to provide an independent assessment of my Department's economic goals and targets. The Terms of Reference have been expanded to reflect this.

Private Sector

Mr D Ford asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what plans she has to help the private sector in light of the global economic downturn. (AQO 1830/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: Members will already be well aware of the £45 million package of assistance announced by the Finance Minister in December, underlining the Executive's commitment to supporting our local businesses during the downturn.

Following on from this, I along with the Finance Minister, met representatives of the local banks last month to discuss their lending policies to businesses, and how they might make more use of the UK wide lending initiatives announced by the Chancellor in his Pre-Budget Report to help small businesses.

In partnership with Enterprise NI, District Councils and the NI Chamber of Commerce we have also now developed a further programme of business information seminars specifically focused at non Invest NI clients. This was piloted in Omagh last month and a further nine events will be rolled out across Northern Ireland during the remainder of January and in February.

In addition, the new "Beat the Credit Crunch" section of the nibusinessinfo website will be particularly helpful as it offers practical tools and guides on a wide range of key business activities.

All Northern Ireland businesses can also access the Carbon Trust's Interest Free Loan Scheme which aims to maximise energy efficiency. To date 24 applicants have received a total of £3.2m funding under this scheme, and 95 free energy efficiency surveys completed.

These initiatives are being undertaken in conjunction with the range of activity developed by Invest NI to assist its clients, including the fast track advice and support available through the £5m Accelerated Support Fund package, an increased on export support to exploit the current weaknesses in the exchange rate.

We therefore continue to work proactively our local companies and entrepreneurs to help minimise the impact of the current economic downturn and we will continue to develop further methods of support and assistance as necessary.

Review of DETI and Invest NI

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what consideration she has given to bringing forward the completion date of the proposed review of her Department and Invest NI in light of the current economic crisis. (AQO 1850/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: As I indicated in my statement to the Assembly on the 1 December 2008, I expect the Independent Review Panel to provide a report to me by early summer 2009.

Members should recognise the scale of work involved in a Review of this nature. Moreover, the focus of the Review is not to provide a response to the current short-term pressures facing local companies as a result of the global economic slowdown. The Executive is already taking measures to help businesses cope with these pressures.

However, we also need to concentrate on the medium to longer term priorities for the economy that are set out in the Programme for Government. That is the focus of the Review. I will continue to ensure that the Panel has the necessary resources to produce a detailed and evidence based report within the timeframe I have already announced.

Help for Businesses

Mrs N Long asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline what help she will provide to businesses that are being hit by the economic downturn. (AQO 1829/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: Members will already be well aware of the £45 million package of assistance announced by the Finance Minister in December, underlining the Executive's commitment to supporting our local businesses during the downturn.

Following on from this, I along with the Finance Minister, met representatives of the local banks last month to discuss their lending policies to businesses, and how they might make more use of the UK wide lending initiatives announced by the Chancellor in his Pre-Budget Report to help small businesses.

We therefore continue to work proactively our local companies and entrepreneurs to help minimise the impact of the current economic downturn and we will continue to develop further methods of support and assistance as necessary.

Telecommunications Provision

Mr B McElduff asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the Western Economic Strategy Team (WEST) report into telecommunications provision in Tyrone and Fermanagh. (AQO 1847/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: The report highlights a number of issues that are relevant to the WEST region and also to many rural and dispersed communities, not only in Northern Ireland but across Europe. We are already taking steps to address those matters, focusing our efforts on the business sector with the resources available to my Department under the Programme for Government. For instance, an application to our recently launched Broadband Fund resulted in an excellent project that will bring forward a range of broadband services, at the higher speeds businesses demand, to many areas in the WEST region. Furthermore, we have just put in place a new 3 year contract ensuring the continued availability of broadband services across all of Northern Ireland. This is particularly important for those living and working in remote and rural areas.

Private Sector

Mr S Neeson asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail her plans to help the private sector in light of the global economic downturn. (AQO 1828/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: Members will already be well aware of the £45 million package of assistance announced by the Finance Minister in December, underlining the Executive's commitment to supporting our local businesses during the downturn.

Following on from this, I along with the Finance Minister, met representatives of the local banks last month to discuss their lending policies to businesses, and how they might make more use of the UK wide lending initiatives announced by the Chancellor in his Pre-Budget Report to help small businesses.

We therefore continue to work proactively our local companies and entrepreneurs to help minimise the impact of the current economic downturn and we will continue to develop further methods of support and assistance as necessary.

Economic Development Policies

Mr R Beggs asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what emphasis will be placed on the green economy in the review of Northern Ireland’s economic development policies written by Professor Richard Barnett. (AQO 1849/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: The Terms of Reference for the Independent Review have already been shared with Members in the context of my statement on 1 December 2008. They have also been placed on a dedicated website that has been developed as part of the Independent Review.

The Terms of Reference are wide ranging and include the need to make recommendations on the policy options to stimulate economic growth & productivity, and to build a larger and more wealth-creating private sector.

I expect that Review will refer to high growth-potential sectors, including the green economy.

Northern Ireland Tourist Board

Mrs M O’Neill asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail how the Northern Ireland Tourist Board plans to develop and promote Lough Neagh as a tourism resource. (AQO 1848/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: Lough Neagh’s main tourism strength lies in the range of water-based sports and activities that it has to offer. The Northern Ireland Tourist Board (NITB) is working to develop the Lough as a key element of its Sports Activities and Waterways product.

Partnership is the best way forward for successful tourism development and delivery and the Lough Neagh Partnership has played a leading role in the Lough’s development. NITB actively engages with the Lough Neagh Partnership in developing the tourist and leisure potential of the Lough.

NITB has responsibility for marketing in Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic. It employs websites, publications, targeted campaigns and its Tourism Information Centre and an office in Dublin to promote tourism growth in Northern Ireland as a whole. Lough Neagh and its attractions are included in these marketing formats. Information on Lough Neagh is also available from partner organisations and their websites such as the Regional Tourism Partnerships, the Lough Neagh Partnership and the Countryside Access and Activities Network.

NITB will continue to work with relevant partners to ensure continued progress in the development and promotion of Lough Neagh as a tourist destination.

Review of DETI and Invest NI

Mr J McCallister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment if she can give a definitive completion date for the proposed review of her Department and Invest NI. (AQO 1853/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: As I indicated in my statement to the Assembly on the 1 December 2008, I expect the Independent Review Panel to provide a report to me by early summer 2009.

Members should recognise the scale of work involved in a Review of this nature. Moreover, the focus of the Review is not to provide a response to the current short-term pressures facing local companies as a result of the global economic slowdown. The Executive is already taking measures to help businesses cope with these pressures.

However, we also need to concentrate on the medium to longer term priorities for the economy that are set out in the Programme for Government. That is the focus of the Review. I will continue to ensure that the Panel has the necessary resources to produce a detailed and evidence based report within the timeframe I have already announced.

Programme for Government

Mr A McFarland asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment when remedial action will be proposed for at risk targets in the Programme for Government that fall under her remit. (AQO 1851/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: To date, performance on operating plan targets for 2008/09 has been generally positive. However, given the global downturn there are obvious concerns relating to falling demand for locally produced goods and services, and for potential investment opportunities. The combination of these factors suggests that targets for 2009/10 and 2010/11 may need to be monitored carefully.

It should be recognised that the Programme for Government (PfG) and DETI's Corporate Plan indicated that targets were framed in the context of the then predicted economic downturn. Furthermore, they also explained that targets would be continually tracked and monitored against changing markets and, where appropriate, amended over the PfG period.

My Department has developed detailed Delivery Agreements which outline the actions to be taken to deliver on the targets and commitments contained in the PfG. Robust monitoring procedures have also been established to track performance. These will continue to be used to identify areas of concern where remedial action may be required.

Impact of the Economic Downturn on Agriculture

Mr T Elliott asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what discussions she has had with the Minister for Agriculture and Rural Development about the impact of the economic downturn on agriculture. (AQO 1854/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: The Minister for Agriculture and Rural Development and I have met to discuss a wide range of agri food related matters.

We have both met delegations from the Northern Ireland dairy sector and have given our support for the case for the re-introduction of export refunds. My Department also continues to be represented on the Interdepartmental Committee on Rural Policy, which is chaired by the Agriculture Minister, and is committed to working with DARD to achieve the full economic potential of rural Northern Ireland.

In recent months, I have sought to focus on actions that can help alleviate the impact of the economic downturn on Invest NI's clients. These include a number of food processing companies.

In this regard, Invest NI has put in place a number of initiatives including a new £5 million Accelerated Support Fund; a series of Credit Crunch seminars (which 33 food companies have attended since September 2008); guidance on how to increase new sales in export markets; and ongoing promotion of R&D. Invest NI is also proactively seeking out international best practice which could be applicable to the NI food industry and is taking a broad section of the agri-food industry to New Zealand this month.

At the Breakfast Food Branding conference in November, I had the opportunity to hear first-hand from many of the 75 companies that attended of the issues they are currently facing. I have also had meetings with a number of individual companies and representatives from the food and agriculture sectors, including the Ulster Farmers' Union, the Northern Ireland Meat Exporters Association and Dairy UK (NI) to discuss a wide range of economic issues.

Renewable Technologies

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, given the recent investment of 500m Euro by the Republic of Ireland's government in renewable energy technologies, and the Scottish Executive's aim to become a world leader in marine technologies, to outline what specific large scale policy initiatives are in place to ensure a partnership in the development of renewable technologies with those two regions. (AQO 1858/09)

Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment: Northern Ireland has an ongoing relationship with the other administrations in the United Kingdom including the Scottish Executive, and proactively seeks to help the UK meet Member State obligations in renewable energy. Northern Ireland also works with the Republic of Ireland on energy matters and has done so for many years. This co-operation is based on delivering practical results that are mutually beneficial for the economies and consumers on both sides of the border. I have met Energy Ministers from both Scotland and the Republic on a number of occasions and renewable energy remains a key part of the shared agenda, particularly in the context of the EU focus on developing regional energy markets.

Two ongoing examples of effective co-operation with both regions are:

- Northern Ireland is a full partner in the Biomara project with both Scotland and the Republic of Ireland. This €6 million project will pioneer innovative research into the production of renewable energy from seaweeds and marine algae from shared seas.
- Northern Ireland, Scotland and the Republic of Ireland are also undertaking a project (the Isles project) to examine the feasibility of constructing an offshore electricity transmission network linking potential offshore sites for the generation of renewable electricity in the coastal waters of Western Scotland, Northern Ireland and Ireland – this will be key in developing offshore resource.

DEPARTMENT OF THE ENVIRONMENT

Colin Glen Trust

Ms J McCann asked the Minister of the Environment when the land lease issue with Colin Glen Trust in West Belfast will be addressed. (AQW 3675/09)

Minister of the Environment (Mr S Wilson): The land lease issue with Colin Glen Trust is already being addressed.

A case for a 99-year lease to Colin Glen Trust of Colin Valley Golf Course and adjacent lands linking the Course to Black's Road was prepared by my Department's Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) and submitted to the Department of Finance and Personnel (DFP). DFP recently advised NIEA that a 99-year lease would be acceptable in principle, provided it could be justified by a full economic appraisal addressing social, economic and environmental issues. Compiling such appraisals is complex and this one will require input from bodies external to my Department. If the case set out in the appraisal is accepted by DFP, the 99-year lease will be expedited by NIEA, with input from the solicitors of both the Department and Colin Glen Trust. As essential steps in the process are outside the control of my Department, I cannot give a completion date, but NIEA will continue to give high priority to this case.

Northern Ireland Environment Agency

Mr R Beggs asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to the answer to AQW 1050/09, what assessment the Northern Ireland Environment Agency has made of the suitability of proposals by Northern Ireland Water for sewage treatment and disposal at Ballystrudder, Ballycarry and Whitehead, based on details of the marine modelling for the proposed discharge into this environmentally sensitive area. (AQW 3716/09)

Minister of the Environment: Following initial marine modeling, Northern Ireland Water (NIW) proposed to discharge untreated screened effluent via an outfall pipe. This modelling however showed that a large section of coastline would be impacted with high bacterial levels by such a discharge and Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) did not consider this to be acceptable.

NIEA has since asked NIW to model two options namely; the discharge with primary treated effluent and the discharge with secondary treated effluent. The primary treatment model will be available in early February, at which point NIEA will meet with NIW to discuss the results in order to establish if it is necessary to model for the second option of secondary treatment.

Northern Ireland Environment Agency

Mr R Beggs asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to the answer to AQW 1050/09, (i) what levels of water and sewage treatment the Northern Ireland Environment Agency deems suitable for the coastal district of Ballystrudder, Ballycarry and Whitehead; and (ii) to list all local and EU regulations on which the Agency bases its consent to discharge standards that it deems appropriate for the area. (AQW 3717/09)

Minister of the Environment:

- (i) The Northern Ireland Environment Agency will assess an application/proposal for a discharge consent, taking account of the relevant legislation and guidelines applicable to the area and taking account of issues such as the local population equivalent (p.e.) to establish the appropriate treatment or disposal system.

The proposed discharge location at Cloghfin Bay must comply with the Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive which requires appropriate treatment as there are no designated bathing or shellfish waters in the vicinity. In England and Wales, secondary treatment is a policy requirement for all works discharging to coastal waters serving a p.e. of greater than 2000. In the absence of this policy for Northern Ireland, NIEA produced a guidance document called the Northern Ireland Estuarine and Coastal Waters Classification Scheme. This policy affords protection to all water users and fulfils our requirement to protect public health under the Water (Northern Ireland) Order 1999.

- (ii) The Agency takes account of the following when considering a discharge consent application in this area:-
- The Water (Northern Ireland) Order 1999;
  - The Urban Waste Water Treatment Directive; and
  - The Northern Ireland Estuarine and Coastal Waters Classification Scheme.

Visitors' Centre at the Giant's Causeway

Mr D McKay asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the planning application for a publicly funded Visitors Centre at the Giants Causeway. (AQW 3726/09)

Minister of the Environment: The planning application for a publicly funded visitors centre at the Giants Causeway has been assessed by my officials in the Planning Service and a report and recommendation is currently with me for consideration.

I have had no meetings other than those with planning officials as is normal practice. I have not received any correspondence on either of the planning applications.

Visitors' Centre at the Giant's Causeway

Mr D McKay asked the Minister of the Environment to list (i) all the meetings he has held about both applications for a Visitors Centre at the Giants Causeway; and (ii) all those who have corresponded with him regarding the applications. (AQW 3727/09)

Minister of the Environment: The planning application for a publicly funded visitors centre at the Giants Causeway has been assessed by my officials in the Planning Service and a report and recommendation is currently with me for consideration.

I have had no meetings other than those with planning officials as is normal practice. I have not received any correspondence on either of the planning applications.

Kitchen Waste

Mr D McKay asked the Minister of the Environment (i) to list which Councils recycle some kitchen waste; and (ii) which Councils recycle all kitchen waste including meat, fish and vegetables. (AQW 3729/09)

Minister of the Environment: I understand that:

- (i) Omagh District Council recycles some kitchen waste; and
- (ii) Armagh City & District Council, Banbridge District Council, Dungannon & South Tyrone Borough Council, Magherafelt District Council and Newry & Mourne District Council recycle all kitchen waste including meat, fish and vegetables.

Planning Service

Mr A Bresland asked the Minister of the Environment how much it has cost the Planning Service to send out invalid planning applications. (AQW 3735/09)

Minister of the Environment: The cost of returned applications cannot be identified as no separate postal costs are kept for invalid applications. However, we can advise that since April 2007 to date a total of 18572 applications have been returned as invalid.

River Pollution

Mr T Burns asked the Minister of the Environment how many river pollution incidents occurred in (i) the South Antrim constituency; and (ii) all of Northern Ireland, in the calendar year 2008. (AQW 3745/09)

Minister of the Environment: Water pollution statistics compiled by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) are not recorded by parliamentary constituencies. However, statistics recorded in respect of river basins in South Antrim for 2008 show that:

- 216 separate pollution investigations were carried out, and
  - 106 of those incidents have, to date, been verified.
- (ii) During 2008, for all of Northern Ireland, pollution statistics compiled by NIEA show that :
- a total of 2164 pollution investigations were carried out, and
  - 1111 of those incidents have, to date, been verified.

The investigation of a number of incidents which occurred in the latter part of 2008 is still continuing during the initial part of 2009. In some cases this includes awaiting the results of scientific analysis of samples which may prove or disprove the occurrence of pollution in specific instances. Therefore, while the total number of incidents investigated during 2008 will not change, the number of confirmed incidents of pollution quoted must at this stage be regarded as 'interim'.

Road Safety Council

Mr T Lunn asked the Minister of the Environment how much the 2008 review of the Road Safety Council cost. (AQW 3767/09)

Minister of the Environment: Following a tendering process, the Department commissioned PA Consulting Group, a major international organisation with extensive experience in the field, to carry out a review of the Road Safety Council. The cost of the contract was £22,500 (excluding VAT).

Kitchen Waste

Mr D McKay asked the Minister of the Environment what his Department (i) has done and (ii) plans to do to promote Bokashi Composting, to give householders the opportunity to compost all of their kitchen waste and significantly reduce the amount of kitchen waste going to landfills. (AQW 3788/09)

Minister of the Environment: District councils play a key role in encouraging householders to recycle and compost their waste and through membership of the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP), my Department will continue to provide technical support and advice to the councils in the provision of improved services to householders on all aspects of recycling and composting. However, my Department currently has no plans to promote Bokashi composting as a means of recycling kitchen waste.

Paperwork Reduction

Dr A McDonnell asked the Minister of the Environment what steps he is taking to significantly reduce the amount of paperwork he sends to constituency offices and other organisations throughout 2009. (AQW 3793/09)

Minister of the Environment: My Department follows the statutory requirement to provide hard copies of documents to certain organisations, including political representatives, parliamentary contacts and Legal Deposit and other libraries. Where there is no statutory requirement in place, my Department seeks to reduce the amount of paperwork sent to constituency offices and other organisations by following guidance issued by the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister. This states that departments may write to recipients and stakeholders advising that a document is to be launched or is about to be published and is available in electronic format. Such correspondence also provides the option for a hard copy to be made available if this is requested by the recipient, but normal practice is to use electronic versions where possible. My Department will continue to follow this guidance during 2009 or until it is superseded.

Divisional Planning Enquiries

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the effectiveness of the NI Direct telephone call handling arrangements for divisional planning enquiries made by elected representatives. (AQW 3804/09)

Minister of the Environment: In order to improve its responsiveness to customers, the Planning Service, through NI Direct, introduced revised telephone call handling procedures for divisional planning offices with effect from 31 October 2008.

When designing the revised procedures it was recognised that the revised arrangements would not be appropriate for all callers and arrangements were put in place for calls from elected representatives to be offered the option of assistance by the NI Direct agents or for the call to be put through to the relevant case officer.

Unfortunately, there were initial technical telephony and process problems experienced by NI Direct which resulted in elected representatives and others being delayed in getting through to Planning Service. However, these initial problems have been resolved and I understand the revised system is now functioning effectively for all callers, including elected representatives.

Hydro-Electric Turbines

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment (i) how many planning applications were received by his Department for the installation of hydro-electric turbines in rivers including the number (a) granted approval; (b) refused; and (c) pending; and (ii) if his Department has any plans to review the present policy. (AQW 3807/09)

Minister of the Environment: My Department has received 7 planning applications for hydro-electric turbines between 1st April 2002 and 30th September 2008. 5 approvals have been issued and 2 planning applications are under consideration. The breakdown of applications is as follows:

Reference No	Proposal	Status
X/2005/0786/F	Installation of a micro-hydro generator house lake intake and penstock and a revised route for the outflow	Approved 7th November 2005
E/2006/0396/F	Hydro-electric scheme – installation of water turbine	Approved 10th July 2007
R/2006/0705/F	Micro hydro-electric turbine generation chamber with feed pipe through Donard Forest	Approved 15th January 2008
J/2007/0072/F	Hydro-electric turbine, housed in a replica flax mill building	Approved 9th May 2007
K/2007/0035/F	Hydro-electric generation station to provide power for Omagh College	Approved 14th November 2007
Q/2007/0758/F	Rebuilding of traditional mill water turbine house with 2No 55Kw water turbines	Pending
B/2008/0324/F	Construction of a hydro-electric renewable energy system on Tircreven Burn	Pending

The current policy for assessing hydro-electricity development is Policy PSU 12 of the Planning Strategy for Rural Northern Ireland published in September 1993.

Draft Planning Policy Statement 18 ‘Renewable Energy’ (PPS 18), was published for public consultation in November 2007. Draft PPS 18 provides updated policy on the provision and siting of all forms of renewable energy. In addition, it also contains technical information and best practice guidance specific to hydro electricity schemes. My Department aims to publish PPS18 in final form before the end of March 2009.

These figures have been extracted from a live database which is continuously updated and validated. They should therefore be regarded as indicative only at this point in time and should not be compared with any previous figures published by the Agency.

Departmental Legislation

Mr P Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what legislation will his Department bring forward to the Assembly in 2009. (AQW 3809/09)

Minister of the Environment: My Department has identified its potential legislative requirements for the remainder of this session of the Assembly. However, these proposals are subject to consideration by the Executive and it would therefore not be appropriate or possible to pre-empt this consideration by providing the information you request.

Recycling Materials

Mr P J Bradley asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the markets relating to recycling materials and to confirm that there is adequate storage space available to deal with the amounts of recycling material being collected. (AQW 3816/09)

Minister of the Environment: My officials have advised me that they believe the current very low prices internationally for recyclable materials will be temporary and the market will recover. In Northern Ireland, a slowdown and difficulties in obtaining revenue for recyclates are being reported. However, goods are currently still moving albeit at a reduced rate for some materials and the things which householders here are being asked to identify, separate and place in the recycling bins and boxes are still being sent for recycling.

The 3 Northern Ireland Waste Management groups are in regular contact with their contractors in respect of the prevailing situation and are keeping it under constant review. The Groups currently have no plans to stockpile material or send it to other alternative disposal routes such as landfill.

Climate Change Act

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister of the Environment if he has had any meetings with Environment Ministers from Scotland, Wales and Westminster about the Climate Change Act and if so, what were the issues discussed. (AQW 3822/09)

Minister of the Environment: There have been no such meetings of Ministers since my appointment.

Ulster Farm By-Products

Mr T Burns asked the Minister of the Environment to detail how much money was budgeted by his Department for monitoring the Ulster Farm By-products operation and enforcing his Department's duty under the Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2003, each year since 2003. (AQW 3825/09)

Minister of the Environment: The Northern Ireland Environment Agency has regulated Ulster Farm By-Products under the Pollution Prevention and Control (NI) Regulations 2003 since November 2005. Under these Regulations, the costs of enforcing authorities are recovered through a charging scheme which includes an annual subsistence charge designed to cover the costs of monitoring compliance with permits and taking appropriate enforcement action. The subsistence charges for the Ulster Farm By-Products operation since November 2005 are set out below:

Year	Subsistence Charge
November 05 – March 06	£ 451.67
April 06 – March 07	£1,355
April 07 – March 08	£1,424
April 08 – March 09	£4,575

Ulster Farm By-Products

Mr T Burns asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the extent to which the costs incurred by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency in its monitoring and enforcement of the Ulster Farm By-products operation under the Pollution Prevention and Control Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2003 are met by the annual financial charges levied upon Ulster Farm By-products as part of its PPC permit. (AQW 3826/09)

Minister of the Environment: Charges levied upon Ulster Farm By-Products were listed in AQW 3825/09.

The costs incurred in regulating the company (and other rendering operations) were not differentiated from the total cost of regulating all companies prescribed for control under the Regulations until 1 September 2008. Consequently the cost of regulating the company prior to that date cannot be calculated separately.

Between 1 September 2008 and 31 December 2008, the Northern Ireland Environment Agency estimates that regulation of the company has cost approximately £15,000. The annual subsistence fee charged for the period April 2008 to March 2009 was £4,575.

Climate Change Act

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister of the Environment if he proposes to meet with Environment Ministers from Scotland, Wales and Westminster to discuss the implementation of the Climate Change Act and what position will he take at those meetings. (AQW 3827/09)

Minister of the Environment: No meeting has been proposed at this stage. Implementation of the Climate Change Act is being taken forward by a number of working groups drawn from Whitehall and the Devolved Administrations, at which my department is represented.

Northern Ireland Environment Agency

Mr T Burns asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) how many working hours officials from the Northern Ireland Environment Agency have spent monitoring and enforcing their duty to oversee the operations of Ulster Farm By-products under the Pollution and Prevention Control Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2003, each year since 2003 and (ii) the total cost of these monitoring and enforcement operations, each year since 2003. (AQW 3828/09)

Minister of the Environment: Pursuant to my answers to AQW 3825/09 and 3826/09,

- (i) The hours spent regulating the company (and other rendering operations) were not differentiated from the total hours spent regulating all companies prescribed for control under the Regulations until 1 September 2008. From 1 September to 31 December 2008, NIEA spent 195 hours on regulating the company.
- (ii) For the reasons given above, the historical costs of regulating Ulster Farm By-Products cannot be calculated separately.

PPS 21

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister of the Environment when will PPS 21 be in place so that applications in process may be lodged. (AQW 3850/09)

Minister of the Environment: I issued Draft PPS 21 for consultation and with immediate effect on 25 November 2008. It is therefore to be accorded substantial weight in the determination of any planning application received after 16 March 2006.

PPS 21

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister of the Environment if planning applications under PPS 21 will be processed more quickly for new houses now that there are extra staff and a 20% reduction in applications. (AQW 3869/09)

Minister of the Environment: My Department has given priority to reassessing planning applications currently deferred under draft PPS 14. It is hoped this would be substantively complete by June 2009.

New applications under PPS 21 will be processed as quickly as possible. The council will be consulted in the normal manner with the Department's opinion on the proposal. Rural houses fall within the intermediate category of applications and performance to date this business year indicates that 65% of these applications were processed within the PS target of 31 weeks with 70% achieved in the month of November.

There are no extra staff in Planning Service which continues to have a number of vacancies at Professional and Technical and Administrative grades.

Carbon Dioxide Emissions

Mr D McKay asked the Minister of the Environment to provide the most up-to-date level of carbon dioxide emissions; and what percentage reduction this is compared to levels in 1990. (AQW 3917/09)

Minister of the Environment: The latest Greenhouse Gas Inventories for England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland (1990-2006) was published on 18th September 2008. It indicates that carbon dioxide emissions in Northern Ireland have reduced by 1.5% from 1990 levels to 2006. The same report indicates that there has been a 6.0% decrease in overall greenhouse gas emissions.

Councillor Training

Mr A Ross asked the Minister of the Environment what training will he be offering councillors in advance of planning powers being transferred to local councils. (AQW 3922/09)

Minister of the Environment: The transfer of the majority of planning functions to district councils, along with the major planning reform programme that is underway, will represent a significant change for all involved in the planning system. The Department is working with local government, through the RPA implementation structures, to explore issues such as capacity building, with a view to ensuring readiness for the changes that will arise. The Capacity Building Working Group, which is part of Policy Development Panel C, is considering training and capacity issues for all aspects of RPA, and this will include those relating to planning. Planning Service officials also continue to engage with councillors on a range of issues, including capacity building, through the joint NILGA Planning Working Group.

National Parks

Mr J Dallat asked the Minister of the Environment what are his plans for the establishment of one or more national parks; and if the Causeway Coast is being considered for one. (AQW 4032/09)

Minister of the Environment: I am considering National Parks very seriously and will wish to discuss the issue with my Executive colleagues. If it is decided to proceed with National Parks the first step would be new enabling legislation. At this stage I have no plans for any specific area.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE AND PERSONNEL

Rate Rebate Applications

Mr P McGlone asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of rate rebate applications remaining to be processed, broken down by the month in which the claims were made, in this financial year. (AQW 2512/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel (Mr N Dodds): As shown in the following table, a total of 29,633 applications for Rate Rebate were processed by Land & Property Services between 1 April and 31 December 2008, leaving some 1,577 applications outstanding as of 31 December. This number includes 69 applications for Lone Pensioner Allowance (LPA) for which further information is required from applicants, and 86 applications for Disabled Persons Allowance for which further information is required from applicants/ medical practitioners before the claims can be finalised. Land & Property Services has increased the staff allocated to Housing Benefit/Rate Relief applications so that all outstanding cases for which full information has been provided are fully cleared by 31 March 2009.

Note 1: Processing of Lone Pensioner Allowance did not begin until the end of June 2008 because of the need to develop, implement and test the new IT functionality required for this new allowance.

Note 2: Housing Benefit/Rate Relief processing decreased in June, July and August because of the need to prepare for a changeover to a new module of the IT system.

Government Buildings in Larne and Carrickfergus

Mr R Beggs asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, in the event that the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development and the Department for Social Development relocate staff from Government buildings in Larne and Carrickfergus, (i) which Department will have to pay for the maintenance of the vacant offices; (ii) the amount of funding that has been spent on each of these offices, in the past five years; and (iii) his assessment of the quality of accommodation of these offices currently. (AQW 3718/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel: DARD and DSD currently occupy three buildings in Larne and Carrickfergus:

1. Portal Inspection Office -Redlands Road, LARNE,

BT40 1AH (occupied solely by DARD)

2. Crown Buildings, 59 Pound Street, LARNE BT40 1SH

(DARD share this accommodation with DSD – it is both a Jobs & Benefits Office and a Divisional Veterinary Office)

3. Carrickfergus Jobs & Benefits Office, 1 Davy Street,

Carrickfergus, Co Antrim, BT38 8TJ.

(occupied solely by DSD)

In the event that any Department decides to vacate a property then the vacating department must meet the accommodation costs of the property until it can be re-occupied or disposed off.

The amount of funding that has been spent on each of these offices, in the last five years is as follows:-

	Resource	Capital
Carrickfergus JBO	£213,011	£1,704,000
Larne JBO/DVO	£ 358,040	£2,035,000
Larne Portal Office	£ 137,000	£31,000

The three buildings are considered to be in good repair.

Workplace 2010

Mr B Armstrong asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what assessment has been made of the (i) number of jobs that could be safeguarded or created in the construction and support services sectors if the proposed Workplace 2010 procurement were to be accelerated; and (ii) extra infrastructure investment and employment opportunities that could be financed from the expected capital receipt from Workplace 2010.

(AQW 3771/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel: Under Workplace 2010, construction and support services would be delivered by the successful contractor or their service partners. It is unlikely that additional jobs would be created in support services as these services are currently being provided through different means.

Although, it is likely that additional jobs would be created in the construction industry in the early years of the contract, I am not in a position to quantify the extent of these additional jobs as this would be a matter for the winning contractor.

The expenditure of any capital receipt generated through the Workplace 2010 contract is a matter for the NI Executive to consider within the context of the Investment Strategy for Northern Ireland.

Departmental Legislation

Mr P Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what legislation will his Department bring forward to the Assembly in 2009. (AQW 3844/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel: In addition to the annual Budget Bills my Department intends to bring forward a Financial Provisions Bill during the present session. A Rates Amendment Bill will also be brought forward to the Assembly subject to consideration by the Executive.

Energy Performance Certificates

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many fines have been issued to house vendors for failure to provide an energy performance certificate. (AQW 3890/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel: There have been no fines issued to house vendors for failure to provide an energy performance certificate.

Energy Performance Certificates

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what measures are taken by his Department to ensure the vendor of a premises provides an energy performance certificate prior to the purchase of a property. (AQW 3891/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel: Since making the regulations requiring energy performance certificates, officials have been proactive in bringing the requirements to the attention of property professionals, the legal profession and the general public. In turn the professional bodies have advised their members of the requirements. Officials have promoted the requirements in a number of ways including:

- press releases, adverts, radio and television interviews and a series of public information seminars attended by approximately 1700 people, mainly property professionals and members of professional organisations such as the Construction Employers Federation, the Law Society etc.;
- mailshots and follow-up visits to estate agents and letting agents;
- distribution of information leaflets on the requirements for dwellings to all MLAs and to district councils for onward transmission to libraries, Citizens Advice Bureaux, Consumer Council offices etc.; and
- a dedicated website at www.epb.dfpni.gov.uk where detailed information and further guidance may be accessed online.

Officials will continue to promote awareness by means of a poster campaign in estate agents, letting agents and solicitors' offices, targeted classified advertising and editorials in the press, features in forthcoming local council magazines and follow-up visits with property agents.

In addition, any specific complaints from a prospective buyer or tenant that an energy performance certificate has not been made available will be investigated fully by officials and enforcement action, including the issue of a penalty charge notice, taken as appropriate

Workplace 2010

Mr A Bresland asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the Workplace 2010 Programme. (AQW 3921/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel: Procurement activity for the Workplace 2010 contract was suspended on 31st October 2008 as a result of continuing speculation that both Workplace 2010 Bidders could come under common ownership. This was confirmed on 8th January 2009, when Land Securities announced that agreement had been reached for the sale of their Trillium business to Telereal. The Department is now considering this latest development before making recommendations on how best to proceed.

Civil Service: SO Grade Appointments

Mr P Maskey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel have there been any appointments at Staff Officer grade in the Civil Service in the greater Newry area in the last eight years; and to provide the location of each of these appointments. (AQW 3929/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel: The attached table shows appointments made at the Staff Officer grade in the Newry and Mourne District Council area during the last 8 years. Appointments made in the complete calendar year 2008 are not yet available.

Civil Servants: Rental Assistance

Mr G Savage asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many Civil Servants are getting tax payer funded assistance with their rent; and what the total cost is for this initiative, per year. (AQW 4016/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel: There is no initiative to provide Northern Ireland Civil Servants with tax payer funded assistance with their rent.

There are circumstances in which a number of allowances are payable to Northern Ireland Civil Servants who are required to carry out official business away from their homes. Reimbursement is only appropriate when an additional expense has incurred.

Salary Sacrifice Childcare Vouchers Scheme

Mr J Dallat asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel will he make a statement detailing when the Salary Sacrifice Childcare Vouchers Scheme will be implemented for Northern Ireland Civil Service employees. (AQW 4029/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel: The scheme was launched on Monday 19 January and those staff who are eligible and wish to do so may now avail of it. The first vouchers will be available along with the February pay.

Deaths Due to Drug Poisoning

Mr D McKay asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many deaths there have been as a result of heroin overdoses in (i) 2005; (ii) 2006; (iii) 2007; and (iv) 2008, broken down by (a) individual totals; and (b) Health and Social Care Trust. (AQW 4079/09)

Minister of Finance and Personnel: The attached table gives the number of deaths registered in Northern Ireland by year, 2005 to 2007, due to drug poisoning<sup>1</sup> where heroin or morphine<sup>2</sup> was mentioned on the death certificate by Health and Social Care Trust. Data for 2008 will not be available until late Spring 2009.

1. International Classification of Diseases, Tenth Revision codes:

F11-F16, F18-F19 - Mental and behavioural disorders related to drug use.

X60-X64 - Intentional self-poisoning by drugs.

X40-X44 - Accidental poisoning by drugs.

X85 – Assault by drugs.

Y10-Y14 - Undetermined and other poisoning by drugs.#

2. As heroin (diamorphine) breaks down in the body into morphine, the latter may be detected at post mortem and recorded on the death certificate. Therefore a combined figure for deaths where heroin or morphine was mentioned on the death certificate have been included.

Minister of Finance and Personnel: The attached table gives the number of deaths registered in Northern Ireland between 1 January 2008 and 30 September 2008, with Clostridium difficile mentioned on the death certificates by the Health and Social Care Trust area the deceased died in. DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH, SOCIAL SERVICES AND PUBLIC SAFETY*Fire Stations

Mr D McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the general condition of the fire stations. (AQW 3671/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (Mr M McGimpsey): The condition of fire stations is a matter for the Chief Fire Officer and the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service Board. The Chief Fire Officer's assessment of the condition of Northern Ireland fire and rescue stations is that they are adequate for the immediate needs of the Fire & Rescue Service. However, within its business case for strategic infrastructure development, which is currently being considered by my Department, the Fire and Rescue Service has identified the need to replace or refurbish a total of 26 fire stations across Northern Ireland over the next 10 years to meet the needs of a modern fire and rescue service.

Neurology Unit at Forster Green Hospital

Mrs C Hanna asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if the Neurology Unit at Forster Green Hospital will be moved to a new facility at Musgrave Park Hospital in June 2009. (AQW 3685/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: It is intended that the neurology services will move from Forster Green Hospital to new facilities at the Musgrave Park Hospital site.

However, due to unforeseen circumstances further design work has proven necessary and therefore it is anticipated that it will be 2010 before the move may take place.

Assembly Questions

Mr J McCallister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many (i) written; (ii) oral; and (iii) part input questions he has answered since taking up office. (AQW 3687/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety:

From May 2007 to 31 December 2008 I have answered:

- (i) 2649 written Assembly Questions (of which 525 were Priority Written questions);
- (ii) 259 Oral questions (including 3 Private Notice questions) and;
- (iii) 69 Part Input questions.

This amounts to a total of 2977 questions answered in this period.

Rights of a Patient

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) to detail the rights of a patient to obtain a second opinion on a diagnosis or treatment plan made by their GP and provide the correct procedure for same; and (ii) to clarify if a second opinion requires to be financed by the patient in a private capacity. (AQW 3694/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: If a patient is dissatisfied with the diagnosis or treatment plan proposed by a particular GP in the GP Practice that they are registered with, they can ask for an appointment with any other GP in the same practice. Alternatively the patient has a choice of de-registering with their current GP Practice and registering with a different GP Practice.

If a patient wishes to remain with their current GP Practice and does not wish to consult a partner in the same practice then they may seek an appointment with another GP Practice on a private fee paying basis.

(AQW 3696/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Northern Ireland Ambulance Service does not record data about possible consumption of alcohol by patients when responding to emergency incidents.

Admissions to Health and Social Care Hospitals with an alcohol related diagnosis on 24, 25, 31 December 2008 and 1 January 2009 are as follows:

(AQW 3730/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: All premises with an entertainment licence in Northern Ireland are regulated through a system of inspection and certification under the Fire Services (Northern Ireland) Order 1984. The Order requires the owners or occupiers of places of entertainment to obtain a fire certificate issued by the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service Board following an initial inspection of the premises.

I shall shortly be announcing a public consultation on regulations relating to improved fire safety, which will bring Northern Ireland into line with the rest of the UK and ensure full compliance with EU directives on fire safety.

In the 2007/08 year there were 27 nurses and 2 doctors employed in six health and social care organisations disciplined for various levels of misconduct. Each of these cases were robustly dealt with under the organisation's disciplinary procedures but given the sensitive nature of disciplinary cases I am not in a position to provide more detail.

Memory Clinics

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety will he, in line with the NHS in England and Wales, introduce memory clinics so that patients displaying early signs of dementia might be able to remain in familiar surroundings for as long as possible.

(AQW 3759/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Health and Social Care Trusts currently provide a number of services for patients with memory problems:

Belfast Health and Social Care Trust provide a Memory Service across the Trust area that includes clinics being provided by Older Peoples Services in all Trust localities.

The South Eastern Trust four teams deliver a general psychiatric outpatient service where patients with memory disorders, functional disorders and psychotic disorders etc. are cared for together.

The Southern Trust currently provide three Memory Clinics, one in each Legacy Trust.

The Northern Trust holds memory clinics in Causeway Hospital, Antrim/Ballyclare, Cookstown, Carrick/Larne, Newtownabbey and Ballymena.

The Western Trust has a dedicated memory clinic provided for patients in the northern sector of the Trust. Home visits are also provided for clients with memory impairment throughout the Trust and these are carried out by the Community Psychiatric Nurse / Consultant Psychiatrist.

My Department is currently developing a dementia strategy, which will be completed during 2009. This will take account of service developments and best practice throughout the UK and elsewhere.

GP Training

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if he will provide GP's with the same levels of training that their colleagues in England and Wales will be receiving to enable them to detect, assess and work with patients who are exhibiting early signs of dementia. (AQW 3760/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: My Department is currently developing a Dementia Strategy for NI, due for completion in 2009. We will be looking into the training provided to GP's throughout the UK during the development of the Dementia Strategy in order to follow best practice for further developing our dementia services in NI.

Auxiliary Nurses

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if auxiliary nurses are now responsible for personal care, will this be reflected in a name change to more clearly identify their role. (AQW 3786/09)

Paperwork Reduction

Dr A McDonnell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps he is taking to significantly reduce the amount of paperwork he sends to constituency offices and other organisations throughout 2009. (AQW 3795/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: There is a requirement to provide hard copies of documents such as Annual Reports, Departmental Publications and Consultation Documents to certain recipients including political representatives, parliamentary contacts and Legal Deposit and other libraries.

Other recipients/stakeholders can be advised in writing when a Departmental document is being launched or published making them aware that it is available in electronic format. It is then a matter of choice for the organisation as to whether their preference is to receive a hard copy document or to access the electronic version.

With the onset of RPA, I anticipate that the number of bodies, and therefore the number of copies to be issued, will be greatly reduced.

Telephone Communication Masts

Mr D Hilditch asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the total revenue generated by land owned or leased by the (i) Eastern; (ii) Northern; (iii) Western; and (iv) Southern Health and Social Services Boards to facilitate the erection of telephone communication masts. (AQW 3796/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: None

No revenue income is generated by any Health and Social Services Boards to facilitate the erection of telephone communications masts as Health and Social Services Boards do not have legal powers to own or lease land.

Nursing Home Care

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if he monitors fee increases that have been or will be introduced in nursing home care; and what discussions he has had with their governing bodies considering that some nursing homes intend to increase fees by 8.9%. (AQW 3829/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Officials from my Department and the HSC meet periodically with representatives of the care home sector, including the Independent Health and Care Providers, to discuss a range of issues including rates for care. In addition, the HSC, in fulfilling its duty to procure care on the basis of quality and value for money, routinely monitors the level of fees for both residential and nursing homes. However, my Department has no legal authority to compel nursing home providers, which are independent businesses, to restrict the fees charged for care.

(1) RPA	6.0
(2) Pharmacy and regional procurement	2.1
(3) Income generation	0.3
(4) Productivity and general efficiency	23.4
(5) Service redesign	5.1
Total	36.9

A range of these proposals are subject to consultation at the current time.

Care in the Community

Mr A Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline his Department's long term plans for care in the community for elderly people in North Down. (AQW 3842/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The HSC is responsible for commissioning services in response to local need. The South Eastern Trust has advised that it will develop services in the North Down area in line with the Eastern Health and Social Services Board's Health and Wellbeing Strategy for Older People. This will see the development of a broad range of services linked to four key themes: Promotion of Health and Wellbeing, Helping Older People Retain or Regain their Independence; Development of Long Term Living Options and Developing Dementia and Mental Health Services. Examples of these services include expanded domiciliary and intermediate care, investment in Assistive Technologies to maintain older people in their own home, increases in day care and respite provision, and partnership working with the Housing Executive to develop alternatives to traditional residential and nursing home care.

Departmental Legislation

Mr P Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what legislation will his Department bring forward to the Assembly in 2009. (AQW 3845/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Department has identified its potential legislative requirements for the remainder of this session of the Assembly. However, these proposals are subject to consideration by the Executive and it would therefore not be appropriate or possible to pre-empt this consideration by providing the information you request.

Nursing Homes

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if he would issue a statement that nursing homes should ensure that any increases in fees are level with inflation and not at a rate significantly above this figure. (AQW 3852/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Officials from my Department and the HSC meet periodically with representatives of the care home sector, including the Independent Health and Care Providers, to discuss a range of issues including rates for care. In addition, the HSC, in fulfilling its duty to procure care on the basis of quality and value for money, routinely monitors the level of fees for both residential and nursing homes. However, my Department has no legal authority to compel nursing home providers, which are independent businesses, to restrict the fees charged for care.

Security Facilities for People with Mental Illness

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what facilities are available for people who require a high level of security because they have severe mental health conditions. (AQW 3868/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: There is no high secure hospital in Northern Ireland. The State Hospital, Carstairs, Scotland, has provided most of the care and treatment in conditions of high security for adults from Northern Ireland with mental illness or severe mental impairment who, because of their dangerous, violent or criminal propensities, cannot be cared for in any other setting locally.

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The information is not available in the format requested, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Statutory Homes

Mr E Poots asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many statutory homes in the 15 mile radius surrounding Dromore are (i) closing; or (ii) have closed, and how many bed places have been lost, in the last five years. (AQW 3871/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The information is not available in the format requested, and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Residential Homes

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: There are five statutory residential homes for the elderly within the Southern Trust area. The table below shows the direct cost budget for each of these 5 statutory residential care homes including Skeagh House for 2007/08.

Nursing Staff

Mr R Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if his Department has, or Health and Social Care Trusts have, considered establishing a pool of nursing staff willing to work at short notice thereby avoiding the additional cost of engaging agency staff. (AQW 3878/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I can confirm that all Trusts have 'nursing bank' arrangements in place. Bank staff can be a mixture of nurses employed by their Trust and staff from other organisations who provide additional shifts. I have asked Trusts to examine their reliance on agency staff and I am assured that they are making every effort to address this.

Information on the average number of agency nurses employed daily is not held centrally and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Nursing Staff

Mr R Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the average number of agency nurses that are employed each day, broken down by each acute hospital; and what consideration has been given to minimising the dependency on agencies for the provision of additional staff. (AQW 3879/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: I can confirm that all Trusts have 'nursing bank' arrangements in place. Bank staff can be a mixture of nurses employed by their Trust and staff from other organisations who provide additional shifts. This includes dealing with calls from people in crisis and helping to de-escalate the crisis situation and, where appropriate, referral of callers to associated statutory sector, community sector or Contact Youth support services. Support services provided under the contract include counselling, mentoring, and befriending. These services are available across Northern Ireland.
- (ii) The contract will run initially for a period of 1 year and 3 months, with options to extend for a further three one-year periods subject to agreement by both parties.
- (iii) It is estimated that the service will cost in the region of £3.5 million per annum.

Contact Youth

Mr M Durkan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) what partnerships exist between Contact Youth and other counselling providers to deliver services in the Foyle constituency; (ii) what process was used to establish these partnerships; and (iii) how long these partnerships are due to remain in place. Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: St John Ambulance is a voluntary organisation and my Department has not made any assessment of its capacity to deal with patients suffering from cardiac problems. Emergency 999 calls involving patients suffering from cardiac problems will receive a response from the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (NIAS).

I understand that as part of its contingency planning, for example in the event of a major incident, NIAS would request assistance from the voluntary ambulance services, including St John Ambulance. The voluntary ambulance services also provide valuable support to the Health and Social Care sector by providing routine non-emergency patient transport services.

St John Ambulance Service

Mr D McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many times has St John Ambulance been used in place of emergency ambulances by the Northern Health and Social Services Board

Of these, 281 or 85% have obtained nursing posts, with a further 31 or 9% on HSC Trust employment waiting lists.

The remaining 20 students who returned questionnaires have opted to travel.

At the University of Ulster, destination statistics for nursing students who completed their course in September 2008 are not yet available. However for the 137 students who completed in September 2007, 117 returned destination surveys. Of these 113 or 96% have obtained nursing posts.

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: It is difficult to make a reliable estimate of such a figure at this stage given that such proposals are subject to the outcome of consultation. The Trust has provided estimates that the potential savings are in the region of £370k.

Gynaecological Ward at the Erne Hospital

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the future of the gynaecological ward at the Erne Hospital Enniskillen; and what attempts are being made by the Western Health and Social Care Trust to amalgamate gynaecological services with surgical services that are already overstretched. (AQW 4022/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The gynaecological ward at the Erne Hospital is not closing. The ward will relocate on 1 February to the present female surgical ward and will comprise of 2 four-bedded wards and one single room. The beds will be protected for gynaecological use.

It is for the Western Health and Social Care Trust to configure its services to best meet the needs of the local population. The Trust advises that this adjustment brings the service into line with the model planned for the new south west acute hospital.

Closure of Community Stores at Omagh and Enniskillen

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans his Department or the Western Health and Social Care Trust has to close the community stores at Omagh and Enniskillen and centralise them in Derry/Londonderry by April 2010. (AQW 4023/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: Following a recent review, the Western Health and Social Care Trust is now considering a number of options in relation to how to best provide a stores service for its resident population. There are no plans at present to close the community stores at Omagh and Enniskillen, and no decision has been taken on whether or where stores might be centralised.

The Western Health and Social Care Trust has stated that its staff will be kept fully informed throughout the process.

Hip Arthroscopic Surgery

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many patients are currently on a waiting list for hip arthroscopic surgery, in each Health and Social Care Trust. (AQW 4024/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: There was one patient waiting for hip arthroscopic surgery at the Southern Health and Social Care Trust in Northern Ireland at 30th September 2008, the last quarter for which official waiting time data are available.

There were no patients waiting for hip arthroscopic surgery at any of the other four Health and Social Care Trusts at 30th September 2008.

Tyrone County Hospital

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety (i) the cost of refurbishing wards 5-6 at Tyrone County Hospital, Omagh in 2008; and (ii) if wards 5-6 will remain open until the new hospital is built in Omagh. (AQW 4068/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety:

(i) The cost of the refurbishment of wards 5 and 6 at Tyrone County Hospital was some £480,000.

(ii) Wards 5 and 6 will remain open until the new Omagh Hospital is operational.

Emergency Services Employees

Lord Browne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to breakdown by gender, employees of (i) the Northern Ireland Fire Service; and (ii) the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service. (AQW 4075/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The table below details the breakdown, by gender, of employees of the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service and the Northern Ireland Ambulance Service:

	Male	Female	Total
Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service Employees	1,927	224	2,151
Northern Ireland Ambulance Service Employees	838	294	1,132

Western Health and Social Care Trust

Mr A Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the organisational structure of the Western Health and Social Care Trust. (AQW 4096/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: My Department is currently developing programmes of activity to address rural poverty, social exclusion and community development, and therefore I cannot confirm that in-kind contributions by Community and Voluntary Groups will be treated as regards eligibility for match funding. The appropriateness of treating in-kind contributions as potential match funding will be considered within the economic appraisal process of each proposed programme. However under all but the farm diversification measure of Axis 3 of the Rural Development Programme 2007 – 13, social economy enterprises may provide match funding towards eligible costs in the form of contributions-in-kind in line with the programme operating rules.

Health Centre at Ballygawley, Co Tyrone

Mr T Gallagher asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety if (i) the Primacare plans for a new Health Centre at Ballygawley, County Tyrone have been approved by any of the Health authorities; (ii) he will confirm that his Department has approved this plan; and (iii) it will be taken forward as a Private Finance Initiative. (AQW 4183/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The development planned by Primacure is an independent healthcare facility. Consequently it has no connections whatsoever with the plans I have announced for investment in the health and social care infrastructure across Northern Ireland.

The Southern Board and Trust who are responsible for the commissioning and delivery of services in the Ballygawley area have indicated that this proposal has not been discussed with either of them.

My Department has had no discussions with Primacure and as such there is no plan to enter into any project or contracts with Primacure.

A statement was issued to the local Tyrone Times on 16 December 2008 confirming that neither my Department nor the Southern Board and Trust had any connection with the article published by Primacure.

Mid Ulster Hospital

Mr F Molloy asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what changes have been made to the Strategic Spending Review Consultation document with regard to Mid Ulster Hospital, following the end of phase 1 of the consultation process. (AQW 4199/09)

Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety: The Trust published its Engagement and Consultation Programme document in late 2008. This indicated briefly the proposals that the Trust intended to consult formally on. More detailed but identical Mid Ulster proposals are the subject of a specific formal consultation which is currently underway. The consultation document is available on the Trust's website and responses can be received by the Trust up to 6 March 2009.

DEPARTMENT FOR REGIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Road Gritting

Mr A Bresland asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the annual spend for road gritting, broken down by district council area, in each of the last three years. (AQW 3600/09)

Minister for Regional Development (Mr C Murphy): My Department's Roads Service does not maintain the information that you have requested by council area. However, the table below details the winter maintenance expenditure to treat snow and frost at Roads Service Divisional level.

Roads Service	Winter Maintenance Expenditure
	2005/06	2006/07	2007/08

Southern Division	£1,282,000	£1,194,000	£1,298,000
Western Division	£802,000	£745,000	£790,000
Roads Service Headquarters*	£388,000	£272,000	£272,000
Total	£5,260,000	£4,444,000	£4,683,000

* Roads Service Headquarters costs include forecast information from the Met Office, calibration / maintenance of sensor sites and other associated costs.

Dunmurry Wastewater Treatment Works

Mr P Butler asked the Minister for Regional Development to provide an update into the problems associated with Dunmurry waste water treatment works and new developments in the Dunmurry area. (AQW 3604/09)

Minister for Regional Development: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water that connections to the public sewerage system from new development in the Dunmurry area continue to be controlled and limited. Work commenced recently to address specific issues with the local sewerage network in advance of the main sewer improvements required under the Drainage Area Study. In addition, a detailed catchment survey is underway to establish the design requirements for the upgrade of Dunmurry Wastewater Treatment Works. The upgrade of the Works and the sewerage network in the area is scheduled to commence in 2010 subject to funding being available.

Liability Claims

Mr P Ramsey asked the Minister for Regional Development how many liability claims have been made against the Stormont estate due to accidents occurring on the pavements. (AQW 3620/09)

Minister for Regional Development: There have been 20 public liability compensation claims received involving accidents occurring on the Stormont Estate pavements since the Department's Central Claims Unit was set up in 1989.

A25/Burrenbridge Road

Mr J Wells asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to the answer to AQW 3059/09 to detail the estimated costs of the proposed improvement scheme at the junction of the A25/Burrenbridge Road. (AQW 3637/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that an improvement scheme at the junction of the A25/Burrenbridge Road is likely to cost in the region of £600,000.

Metro Bus Drivers

Mr J Wells asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to the answer to AQW 2872/09, for his assessment of the sufficiency of a 30 minute break for Metro Bus drivers given the workload and responsibilities of these posts. (AQW 3644/09)

Minister for Regional Development: Arrangements for rest breaks are an operational matter for Translink. Translink has informed me that the rules on working time and rest periods for bus drivers are set out in a number of transport regulations with which Translink fully complies. These regulations set a minimum rest period of 30 minutes.

Disabled Parking

Mr T Elliott asked the Minister for Regional Development what recent action his Department has taken to reduce the abuse of blue badges for disabled parking. (AQW 3652/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department is currently in the process of making a statutory rule, which amends the 1993 Regulations, to prescribe a revised form of the Blue Badge. The revised badges will incorporate a hologram on the front to improve security and help prevent the use of forgeries. It is expected that this amendment will come into operation on 1 April 2009.

In addition, Roads Service's Parking Enforcement Unit, in conjunction with NCP Services Ltd, is effectively enforcing parking violations, where information gathered points to the misuse of Blue Badges. This has resulted in a number of Penalty Charge Notices being issued to vehicles parked in contravention of parking concessions falsely claimed under the scheme. NCP Services Ltd and Roads Service will continue to gather information to substantiate the legitimacy of vehicles displaying Blue Badges and enforce parking legislation accordingly.

Walking to School and Cycling Initiatives

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister for Regional Development what consideration he has given to walking to school and cycling initiatives as part of his Department's strategy to reduce traffic congestion. (AQW 3661/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service is involved in promoting walking and cycling to school through its Travelwise Safer Routes to Schools programme. This programme has been developed to support the objectives of the Regional Transportation Strategy. The aim of this strategy is to provide a safe, modern and sustainable transportation network, for the north, by raising awareness of the major issues related to traffic congestion, including the detrimental impact on road safety, health and the environment.

More information on the Travelwise initiative can be found at the following web address:

B47 Glenelly Road

Mr M Durkan asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) what gritting arrangements are in place for the B47 Glenelly Road between Plumbridge and Draperstown; and (ii) if he has any plans to revise these arrangements. (AQW 3757/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that the B47 Glenelly Road runs from Plumbridge to its junction with the B41 Sixtowns Road. The route to Draperstown then extends along the B41.

The B47 Glenelly Road from Plumbridge to the eastern boundary of Cranagh, and the section of the B41 Sixtowns Road from Draperstown to its junction with the Disert Road, are included within the salting schedule. Previously, the 13 mile gap between these locations did not meet the criteria for inclusion in the salting schedule. This stretch was serviced with approximately 50 grit piles.

However, following a recent Roads Service assessment of this route, a one mile section of the B41 between its junctions with the Disert Road and the B47 Glenelly Road, has been added to the salting schedule, for inclusion from the end of January 2009.

Traffic Census Figures

Mr K Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development what are the most up to date traffic census figures for the following roads and locations; (i) Jordanstown Road (Shore Road Junction to Monkstown Road Junction); (ii) Monkstown Road (Doagh Road Junction to Old Carrick Road B90 Junction); (iii) Doagh Road (Cloughfern Corner to Shore Road Junction); (iv) Doagh Road (Cloughfern Corner to Monkstown Road Junction); (v) Shore road (M5 Roundabout to Whiteabbey Station Road Junction); (vi) Shore Road (Whiteabbey Station Road to Jordanstown Road Junction); (vii) Shore Road (Jordanstown Road to Greenisland Station Road Junction) (AQW 3762/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that while none of the roads detailed in your question are included in its automatic traffic counting sites, temporary traffic counts will be carried out on a number of these roads as part of the proposed works on the A2 Shore Road. I have asked the Divisional Road Manager for Eastern Division to write to you when these surveys have been completed.

Roads Service

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development how much Roads Service has spent on roads, in each of the last five financial years, broken down by division. (AQW 3805/09)

Minister for Regional Development: The table below sets out the total capital and maintenance spend on roads by Roads Service over the last five financial years, broken down by Division.

All figures are in £ million's

Division	03-04	04-05	05-06	06-07	07-08
North	54.002	50.934	52.387	39.473	51.135
East	50.251	64.614	59.465	68.243	54.713
South	49.373	65.257	62.291	99.324	55.860
West	39.748	48.364	50.878	53.064	58.168
Total	193.374	229.169	225.021	260.104	219.876

Roads Service

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development how (i) many compensation claims were made; and (ii) much was paid out by Roads Service for vehicle damage on County Fermanagh roads, in each of the last five financial years. (AQW 3806/09)

Minister for Regional Development: The number of compensation claims made against the Department for Regional Development and the amount of compensation paid in each of the last five financial years in respect to damage to vehicles on roads in County Fermanagh is as follows:-

	Number of Claims	Total Compensation Paid
2003/04	72	£7,752.52
2004/05	75	£6,357.17
2005/06	68	£4,814.15
2006/07	72	£5,351.55
2007/08	88	£7,129.00

CCTV Cameras

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister for Regional Development if he would consider a change in the rules and legislation so that CCTV cameras could be mounted on street lights. (AQW 3819/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that they do not have the powers to allow the mounting of CCTV cameras by third parties on to their street lighting equipment.

Roads Service refuses such requests on the grounds of Health and Safety, third party liability and the implications concerning the violation of Human Rights legislation, including the Data Protection Act. The Health and Safety grounds for refusal include the risks to Roads Service staff carrying out maintenance operations, with the presence of multiple power supplies.

Therefore, I cannot agree to any change to Roads Service's current practice that would allow the mounting of third party CCTV cameras on to their street lighting equipment.

Road Resurfacing Projects

Mr A Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail any cuts to road resurfacing projects in the North Down area, in the next two years. (AQW 3843/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that, although budgets have not been finalised, it is anticipated that the road resurfacing programme in the North Down area will remain broadly at its current level for the next two years.

However, as always, all proposed projects are subject to the availability of funding.

Level Crossings

Mr T Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development how many recorded incidents there were where (i) vehicles; and (ii) pedestrians, violated barriers at level crossings, in each of the last five years. (AQW 3855/09)

Minister for Regional Development: The following table provides the number of recorded incidents at level crossings in each of the last five years.

Year	Incidents Involving Vehicles	Incidents Involving Pedestrians
2004	48	9
2005	35	20
2006	47	27
2007	37	44
2008	71	41

Unpaid Parking Fines

Mr S Hamilton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many unpaid parking fines, issued to Republic of Ireland registered vehicles, remain outstanding since the start of the NCP contract. (AQW 3859/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that from commencement of the current parking enforcement contract, at the end of October 2006, up to 11 January 2009, the number of Penalty Charge Notices (PCNs) issued to vehicles registered in the south, which remain unpaid, is 18,898.

Nutts Corner Roundabout

Mr T Burns asked the Minister for Regional Development what road safety issues his Department has identified at Nutts Corner Roundabout; and when this traffic flow was last reviewed. (AQW 3886/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service, in conjunction with the PSNI, continues to monitor the safety performance of all roads across the North. I am advised that the majority of collisions occurring in the vicinity of the Nutts Corner Roundabout, over the most recent three-year period for which collision data is available, tend to be minor. The collisions relate mainly to rear end shunts on the approaches to the roundabout, or poor lane discipline of vehicles circulating the roundabout. There is no discernable pattern of collisions that would be amenable to treatment under the programme of collision remedial measures carried out by Roads Service.

Recently it has been identified that the landscape planting, on the islands on the approaches to the roundabout, has reduced visibility. This issue has been raised with Antrim Borough Council, who provided the landscaping and has responsibility for its maintenance.

I can also advise the Member that a few years ago, planning approval had been granted for warehousing in the vicinity of the roundabout. As a condition of the approval, the developer agreed to improve the junction by widening the circulatory carriageway and introducing spiral road markings. I am advised that the warehousing development has not yet commenced. Therefore, Roads Service has no plans at present to carry out any further work to the roundabout junction.

In regard to traffic flow, the Member will be aware that a number of important routes, including the A26, A52 and B101, converge at the Nutt's Corner Roundabout. Roads Service recently published the Annual Traffic Census 'Traffic and Travel Information 2007' report, which details the volume of traffic using the A26 at two locations, one on either side of the Nutt's Corner roundabout. The report shows 19,450 vehicles per day using the A26 Tully Road, and 13,270 vehicles per day using the A26 Moira Road.

Dungiven Bypass

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister for Regional Development if there will be any delay in the Dungiven bypass project as a result of the current economic climate. (AQW 3895/09)

Minister for Regional Development: At present, the economic climate has had no impact on the delivery of the A6 Derry to Dungiven scheme, including the Dungiven Bypass. My Department's Roads Service has advised that its programme of development work is making good progress, and it is anticipated that the preferred route will be announced in spring 2009.

Gritting Schedule

Mr P Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development what changes have been made to the gritting routes maintained by Roads Service in North Down, in the past five years. (AQW 3909/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service salts main through routes carrying more than 1,500 vehicles per day and, in exceptional circumstances, roads with difficult topography carrying between 1,000 and 1,500 vehicles per day. The application of this policy ensures that 28% of the total road network, which carries around 80% of traffic, is salted, at an annual cost of approximately £5 million.

Roads Service does not maintain a record of specific changes made to its schedule of salted routes over the past five years. However, arising from a review carried out in 2001, the salting schedule was increased by about 4% across the North. The additional routes were determined by an increased weighting for buses. In addition, small settlements containing 100 dwellings or more now have salted links to roads on the main salted network. Also, as new sections of road were constructed, they were included onto the salting schedule, if the above criteria were met.

Gritting Schedule

Mr P Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to provide a list of all the roads on the gritting schedule, in the North Down Constituency. (AQW 3910/09)

Steria Contract

Mr T Elliott asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment (i) of a statement released by Northern Ireland Water about an alteration to a contract with Steria that will cost approximately £3m pounds to implement; (ii) of what the alteration entails; (iii) of the operational and financial benefits he would envisage as a result of this alteration; and (iv) to any figures relevant to this matter. (AQW 3939/09)

Minister for Regional Development: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NIW) that, as part of an increasing focus on value for money and in view of the continuing deferral of domestic charging, it plans to change the contractual arrangements with the Crystal Alliance consortium led by Steria Ltd that provides customer contact and billing services and a mobile work management system. Any costs associated with the change will only be determined following commercial negotiations with Steria Ltd over the next 12 months, but there is a provision in the contract for payment up to a maximum of £3 million.

The change to the contractual arrangements involves the termination of the contract with Steria Ltd with NIW taking over direct management of the sub-contractors. Steria Ltd will continue to provide business to NIW's Customer Billing and Contact Service alongside the existing sub-contractors.

NIW is confident that in overall terms, this development will achieve significant benefits in cost efficiency, value for money and continuing customer service improvements through more direct relationships with its core service providers and customers. However, it would not be appropriate to speculate on costs or savings, both of which will depend on the outcome of commercial negotiations with Steria Ltd.

Budget for Roads Service Southern Division

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Regional Development if the budget for roads in the Southern Division has been cut by over £50m; and what is his assessment of the impact of this reduction (AQW 4009/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that the budget for Roads Service Southern Division has not been cut from the £38.1 million allocated at the start of this financial year. I should explain that this is not necessarily the total spend that will be achieved this financial year, as Cross Divisional schemes and expenditure by Roads Service's in-house contractor, Roads Service Direct, will also benefit Southern Division.

Cycle Lane

Mr R Newton asked the Minister for Regional Development if Roads Service carried out consultation with the residents of Grand Parade before commencing work to create a cycle lane on 12th January 2009; and what was the extent of these consultations. (AQW 4047/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service has advised that the cycle lane at Grand Parade forms part of a larger scheme for the area that includes a pelican crossing, an upgrade to the existing zebra crossings, pedestrian refuge islands and road markings for right turning vehicles. The scheme has been designed to enhance road safety, provide safer crossing facilities for pedestrians and to assist cyclists.

I can advise the Member that consultation with residents has included;

- a letter drop with plans and details of the scheme was made on 23 September 2008;
- a letter to all of the residents who signed a petition expressing concerns about the scheme. Several amendments were made as a result of the points raised;
- a letter drop notifying residents of the proposed start date, and outlining changes to proposals as a result of feedback from residents, was made on the 7 January 2009; and
- Roads Service officials have corresponded directly with any residents who have contacted them about the scheme.

Unlawful Advertising Signage

Mr J Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of rural businesses which have incurred Roads Service (i) enforcements; and (ii) penalties for infringements, in relation to signposting of businesses. (AQW 4188/09)

Minister for Regional Development: My Department's Roads Service does not distinguish between rural and urban businesses in respect of action taken against the erection of unlawful advertising signage. Roads Service, therefore, does not maintain such records to answer the Member's question.

DEPARTMENT FOR SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT

Pensioners Living Below the Poverty Threshold

Ms M Anderson asked the Minister for Social Development for her assessment of the number of pensioners living below the poverty threshold because their income is marginally above the threshold receiving Pension Credit. (AQW 3674/09)

Minister for Social Development (Ms M Ritchie): The assessment of the number of pensioners living below the poverty threshold because either income is marginally above the threshold receiving Pension credit necessitates a range of complex analysis. The information required could only be obtained at a disproportionate cost.

Housing Executive

Mr J Spratt asked the Minister for Social Development if all non-emergency repairs to Housing Executive stock in Belfast have been suspended and, if so, when that suspension is expected to be lifted. (AQW 3768/09)

Minister for Social Development: All non-emergency repairs across Northern Ireland have been suspended and that suspension will not be lifted until 1 April 2009.

Paperwork Reduction

Dr A McDonnell asked the Minister for Social Development what steps she is taking to significantly reduce the amount of paperwork she sends to constituency offices and other organisations throughout 2009. (AQW 3832/09)

Minister for Social Development: My Department's arrangements for the distribution of publications and consultations are governed by guidance issued by the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister. This guidance stipulates that certain recipients, such as political representatives, must be provided with hardcopies of documents but that other recipients can be offered the option of obtaining documents electronically.

Departmental Legislation

Mr P Weir asked the Minister for Social Development what legislation her Department will bring forward to the Assembly in 2009. (AQW 3847/09)

Minister for Social Development: My Department has identified its potential legislative requirements for the remainder of this session of the Assembly. However, as these proposals are subject to consideration by the Executive, it is therefore difficult to forecast which legislation will be agreed by the Executive for introduction in the Assembly before summer recess.

Strategic Business Review

Mr W Irwin asked the Minister for Social Development for her assessment of the proposals under the Strategic Business Review, to relocate staff and services from the Armagh Social Security Office to Newry and Dungannon, given the possible increase in the use of these services in Armagh in light of the economic downturn. (AQW 3881/09)

Minister for Social Development: Public consultation on the Strategic Business Review proposals was launched on the 27 November 2008 and is planned to run in two phases until late April 2009. Final decisions on the proposals, including the potential relocation of staff, will not be made until consultation has been completed. I will make my assessment of the impacts once the consultation responses have been considered.

Strategic Business Review

Mr G Savage asked the Minister for Social Development what implications the Strategic Business Review Plan will have on Benefits Offices in Banbridge, Lurgan and Portadown. (AQW 3900/09)

Minister for Social Development: The proposals set out in the Strategic Business Review of the Social Security Agency are currently subject to ongoing public consultation which will run until late April 2009. Final decisions on the proposals, including any relocation of functions or staff, will not be made until consultation has been completed and responses considered.

Housing Executive

Mr B Armstrong asked the Minister for Social Development what assessment has been made of the number of jobs at risk due to the decision by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive to implement cuts to its programme of routine maintenance repairs, changes of tenancy repairs, and other similar works. (AQW 3914/09)

Minister for Social Development: The Construction Employers Federation estimates that for every £1 million the Northern Ireland Housing Executive invests, 18 jobs are created in the construction industry. The lack of resources to deliver the Northern Ireland Housing Executive planned programme of work will ultimately result in further job losses across the industry.

A request for a further £10.5 million funding to be reallocated to the Housing Executive in February has been made. This financial support will allow the Housing Executive to release all change of tenancy repair work to contractors between now and the end of March.

Housing Executive

Mr B Armstrong asked the Minister for Social Development what efforts are being made to increase the funding available to the Northern Ireland Housing Executive so that it has sufficient resources to carry out its programme of routine maintenance repairs, changes of tenancy repairs, and other similar works. (AQW 3915/09)

Minister for Social Development: Following discussions with the Finance Minister Nigel Dodds, I have requested that the additional £10.5m is re-allocated to the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, subject to approval in the February Monitoring Round. This will allow the NIHE to release a number of maintenance, change of tenancy repairs and other similar works.

Requests for additional resources will also be made in February to increase funding for housing to carry out programmes which would otherwise not be started until the next financial year. It will also support the building industry at a time when it is facing job losses.

Housing Executive

Mr D McKay asked the Minister for Social Development to list how many Housing Executive properties in each estate in the Ballymoney, Ballymena and Ballycastle areas are unoccupied; and for how long they have been unoccupied. (AQW 3916/09)

Minister for Social Development: The tables below detail the required information:-

Heating Installations

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister for Social Development (i) if she considers the Egan form of contract to be a saving to the taxpayer in terms of heating installations; and (ii) what the spend is on an average oil heating and gas installation since the conversion in 2001 from solid fuel to oil and gas. (AQW 3943/09)

Minister for Social Development: It is estimated that the Egan form of contract has resulted in savings of 8% per annum, plus further savings of £0.5 million in administration costs per annum. The average cost of all heating installations is set out in the table below:-

Year	Total amount
2001/02	£ 8,773,930.00
2002/03	£12,854,810.00
2003/04	£13,636,989.00
2004/05	£15,807,631.00
2005/06	£16,733,624.00
2006/07	£13,536,602.00
2007/08	£11,232,444.00

Heating Installations

Mr B Wilson asked the Minister for Social Development for her assessment of whether (i) the rising cost of oil heating and gas installations has been good value for money; and (ii) this rising cost can be justified beyond the inflation rate. (AQW 3946/09)

Minister for Social Development: The cost of heating installations has risen above the level of inflation as a result of legislative changes in building regulations and rising costs in materials. Whilst costs have increased my Department and its partners have introduced several technical innovations to bear down on the cost of heating installations. New oil and gas heating systems can generate significant energy efficiency savings over their lifetime and continue to provide good value for money.

Benefits Not Claimed by the Elderly

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister for Social Development what steps she is taking to ensure that the £1.2 million in benefits, not claimed by the elderly, will be claimed by those who are entitled to it. (AQW 3947/09)

Minister for Social Development: The £1.2 million quoted, was published in Help the Aged's SeniorLine Benchmark Report 2008. It is an estimate of benefit potentially available to older people who contacted SeniorLine with a benefit enquiry. The report acknowledges that the majority of unclaimed benefits recorded were as a result of their participation in the Social Security Agency's 2007/08 Benefit Uptake Programme. This Programme aimed to increase awareness of social security benefits for customers identified by the Agency as having potential entitlement for additional benefit. I can report that the 2007/08 Programme generated over £8 million of additional benefit.

The Housing Executive and the Social Security Agency provide a range of services on a daily basis to ensure that people are advised of their potential entitlement to benefits, including outreach services, joint working and promotional campaigns. Both organisations participate in the recently established Interdepartmental Group on Benefit Uptake, the aim of which is to coordinate efforts to increase benefit take-up.

I launched the 2008/09 Benefit Uptake Programme in May 2008 to increase awareness of social security benefits. This builds on the previous successful uptake programmes which have been in place since 2005 and resulted in £15 million of additional benefit paid to the most vulnerable in our society, £11 million to older people. This year's Programme will see over 115,000 people contacted about possible benefit entitlement, over 108,000 are older people. I can report that £2.2 million in additional benefit has already been generated for older people.

In addition, an improved way to process new claims for State Retirement Pension was introduced in 2008. This has resulted in a more joined-up service for customers who are claiming State Retirement Pension but may also be entitled to State Pension Credit. This new service increases the Agency's ability to ensure that older people are receiving the full range of benefits to which they are entitled.

Overall, the Agency has a comprehensive system of reviews to ensure people are receiving their full entitlement. Since April 2008, over 5,000 cases have been adjusted upwards resulting in extra benefit payments of approximately £12.8m.

Child Maintenance and Enforcement Division

Mr J Shannon asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to the answer to AQW 862/09, what steps she is taking to ensure that those applications that have not yet been processed are cleared, particularly those applications received more than 48 months ago. (AQW 3949/09)

Minister for Social Development: Since the answer to AQW No 862 was given, the number of applications received over 12 months ago and not yet cleared has been reduced by approximately 16%. Specifically, in relation to those applications received over 48 months ago, the number uncleared has been reduced by 10%. There are a number of reasons why applications can go uncleared for this period of time. Amongst these is the inability to trace a secure address for Non Resident Parents, which would allow the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Division to obtain the relevant information to calculate a liability. Each of these failures to obtain a confident address is reviewed on a regular basis with the aim of identifying fresh information to allow the application to be progressed. The Division has dedicated resources focused entirely on the clearance of the older outstanding applications.

Housing Executive

Mr W Clarke asked the Minister for Social Development how much funding was requested for maintenance by each area office of the Housing Executive, in each of the last five years. (AQW 3950/09)

Minister for Social Development: The information on how much maintenance funding was requested by each of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's area offices in each of the last five years is not available.

Housing Executive

Mr W Clarke asked the Minister for Social Development how much funding was allocated for maintenance to each area office of the Housing Executive, in each of the last five years. (AQW 3951/09)

Minister for Social Development: The revenue maintenance budget which excludes capital improvement works for each area office of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, in each of the last five years, is contained in the table below:-

(AQW 3952/09)

Shared Future Housing Programmes

Ms C Ní Chuilín asked the Minister for Social Development to list the proposed locations of schemes for 'Shared Future' housing programmes and to provide these proposed schemes by Electoral Ward or the smallest geographical unit available. (AQW 3954/09)

Minister for Social Development: A twin track approach to developing shared areas has been adopted, firstly through the social new build programme and secondly through existing housing areas.

All new developments on the Social Housing Development Programme are now considered for Shared Future status and later this week I will launch our latest Scheme in Lisburn. Others will follow. However, given the sensitivity attached to community consultation to bring these schemes forward, I would prefer not to jeopardise that process by revealing any further details of these at present.

In respect of existing estates, a total of 30 neighbourhoods will be identified to participate in the Shared Neighbourhood Programme. In August 2008, I launched the first five estates to participate in this Programme; Springfarm in Antrim, Lissize in Rathfriland, Knockmore/Tonagh in Lisburn, Gortview/Killybrack Close in Omagh and Ballynafeigh in Belfast. Details of the next ten neighbourhoods will be announced shortly.

The electoral ward breakdown is as follows:

Duncairn	Waterworks	Chichester	Ardoyne
68 units	34 units	77 units	104 units

The housing types are as follows:-

Warm Homes Scheme

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister for Social Development how much financial assistance her Department allocated to the Warm Homes Scheme in the 2008/9 financial year; and how much is proposed for 2009/10. (AQW 3959/09)

Minister for Social Development: The budget for the Warm Homes Scheme for 2008/09 was £20 million and this money has all been committed. The detail of the Budget allocations for 2009/10 will not be determined until March 2008.

Warm Homes Scheme

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister for Social Development how many people are on the waiting list for (i) loft and wall insulation; and (ii) oil heating, under the Warm Homes Scheme. (AQW 3961/09)

Minister for Social Development: At 9 January 2009, there were:

- (i) 3,167 applications for insulation waiting to be surveyed; and
- (ii) 2,812 applications for heating and insulation waiting to be surveyed.

Warm Homes Scheme

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister for Social Development how many people benefited from the Warm Homes Scheme in 2008. (AQW 3962/09)

Minister for Social Development: My Department is on track to meet its 2008/09 Public Service Agreement target to alleviate fuel poverty in 9,000 households through implementing energy efficiency measures. This will mean that over 69,000 households will have benefited from increased energy efficiency through the Warm Homes Scheme since its inception in 2001.

Warm Homes Scheme

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister for Social Development when new applications will be accepted for the Warm Homes Scheme. (AQW 3963/09)

Minister for Social Development: The budget available for the Warm Homes Scheme has been fully committed for the financial year 2008/09 and the Department is on track to meet its Public Service Agreement target to alleviate fuel poverty in 9,000 households through implementing energy efficiency measures. It is not possible, therefore, to take any new applications for the current scheme. My Department has just completed a public consultation on proposed changes to the Warm Homes Scheme following a report by the Northern Ireland Audit Office and subsequent Public Accounts Committee hearing. I expect the new Scheme to be operational in the spring.

Housing Executive

Mr G Savage asked the Minister for Social Development in relation to the £25m shortfall in the Housing Executive's budget to detail (i) how this situation came about; (ii) what schemes, projects and maintenance works will not be undertaken; and (iii) what Council areas are affected. (AQW 4041/09)

Minister for Social Development: The approved budget for the Housing Executive voted by the Assembly included £80m of capital receipts as it was based on historical and property receipts. The shortfall is a consequence of the collapse of the housing market, combined with the credit crunch. Housing Officials have been aware of this and have tried to mitigate the impact by bidding for the shortfall in each monitoring round. While there was some success in securing additional resources it was insufficient to meet the deficit. A proposal to reallocate £10.5 million from existing Departmental resources to the Housing Executive has been made; this is subject to Executive agreement which will be sought as part of February monitoring. This would allow a significant amount of work to be undertaken this year that would otherwise not be possible.

Approximately 85 Planned Maintenance, Kitchen replacements, Heating replacement and Multi Element improvement schemes have been held back this year and there are now only funds to allow 16 of these to proceed. There will also be a delay in up to 400 new starts. It is too early in the review of the Housing Executive's programmes to state the specific locations that may be affected, however, the Housing Executive aims to undertake its full schedule of work and to commence all schemes in its programmes at the earliest opportunity.

Housing Executive

Mr G Savage asked the Minister for Social Development to give an assessment of the impact of Northern Ireland Housing Executive's £25m shortfall on the Upper Bann constituency. (AQW 4042/09)

Minister for Social Development: The Housing Executive has been working alongside my Department to minimise the impact of the shortfall. A proposal to reallocate £10.5 million from existing Departmental resources to the Housing Executive has been made; this is subject to Executive agreement which will be sought as part of February monitoring. This would allow a significant amount of work to be undertaken this year that would otherwise not be possible. It is too early in the review of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's programmes to state the specific locations that might be affected by the shortfall in funding, however, the Housing Executive aims to undertake its full schedule of work and to commence all schemes in its programmes as soon as possible.

'Christmas Bonus' Received by Pensioners

Mr T Burns asked the Minister for Social Development regarding the 'Christmas Bonus' received by pensioners in 2008, (i) who was eligible for the bonus; (ii) how a payment was made; (iii) when a payment was made; (iv) how many people received the payment; (v) the cost of providing the bonus; and (vi) if the same payment was made to pensioners in the rest of the United Kingdom. (AQW 4063/09)

Minister for Social Development: The 2008 Christmas Bonus includes an additional one off amount of £60 on top of the normal £10 Christmas Bonus making a total payment of £70. The information requested, where available, is set out below.

(i) A person is eligible for the 2008 Christmas Bonus if they are living or normally resident in the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man, Gibraltar, another European Economic Area Member State or Switzerland and are entitled to one of the qualifying benefits in week commencing 22nd December 2008. The qualifying benefits are: Retirement Pension, State Pension Credit, Disability Living Allowance, Attendance Allowance, Constant Attendance Allowance, Carer's Allowance, long-term Incapacity Benefit, qualifying Employment and Support Allowance, Widowed Mother's Allowance, Widowed Parent's Allowance, Widow's Pension, Severe Disablement Allowance, Industrial Death Benefit, an Unemployability Supplement or Allowance, a War Disablement Pension, a War Widow's Pension, and a Mobility Supplement.

- (ii) The payments are made automatically using the customer's normal method of benefit payment
- (iii) The 2008 Christmas Bonus is being paid in two instalments- all eligible recipients received their normal £10 bonus in December 2008 and will receive the additional £60 payment by the end of March 2009.
- (iv) & (v)
Final figures in relation to the number of recipients and the total cost of the 2008 Christmas Bonus are not yet available as payments will continue to be made up to the end of March 2009.
- (vi) Social Security benefits in Northern Ireland are maintained in parity with those in Britain. This means that benefits, including the 2008 Christmas Bonus payment are paid at the same rates and are subject to the same conditions of entitlement across Northern Ireland and Britain.

Castlemara Housing Scheme, Carrickfergus

Mr D Hilditch asked the Minister for Social Development when the Castlemara housing scheme in Carrickfergus will be completed. (AQW 4083/09)

Minister for Social Development: Phase 3 of the Castlemara Multi Element Improvement scheme was programmed to start in March 2009. However, due to the current funding position this date will not be achieved. At this stage it is not possible to give a completion date for this scheme.

Winter Fuel Costs

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister for Social Development how many households in the West Tyrone constituency will benefit from the proposed payment of £150 to assist with winter fuel costs. (AQW 4114/09)

Minister for Social Development: I expect the Financial Assistance Bill to come into effect by the end of January. OFMdFM will then designate a department to deliver a fuel credit/payment. I am unable to confirm when a credit/payment will be made as there are still a number of key decisions to be made in terms of who will get the payment and whether it will be a credit or a payment. These decisions will not be made until OFMdFM have designated a department to deliver the credit/payment.

Housing Executive

Mr T Buchanan asked the Minister for Social Development what effect the £25m shortfall in the Housing Executive budget will have for the West Tyrone constituency. (AQW 4115/09)

Minister for Social Development: The Housing Executive has been working alongside my Department to minimise the impact of the shortfall. A proposal to reallocate £10.5 million from existing Departmental resources to the Housing Executive has been made; this is subject to Executive agreement which will be sought as part of February monitoring. This would allow a significant amount of work to be undertaken this year that would otherwise not be possible. It is too early in the review of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's programmes to state the specific locations that might be affected by the shortfall in funding, however, the Housing Executive aims to undertake its full schedule of work and to commence all schemes in its programmes as soon as possible.

Multi-Element Improvement Scheme at Annadale Flats

Mr J Spratt asked the Minister for Social Development to give an update on the planned multi-element improvement scheme at Annadale Flats, South Belfast. (AQW 4120/09)

Minister for Social Development: Phase 1 of this Multi Element Improvement scheme currently going through the European Procurement process is planned, subject to budget provision, for 2009/2010.

Winter Fuel Costs

Mr I McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development how many households in the Mid-Ulster constituency will benefit from the proposed payment of £150 to assist winter fuel costs. (AQW 4157/09)

Minister for Social Development: I expect the Financial Assistance Bill to come into effect by the end of January. OFMdFM will then designate a department to deliver a fuel credit/payment. I am unable to confirm when a credit/payment will be made as there are still a number of key decisions to be made in terms of who will get the payment and whether it will be a credit or a payment. These decisions will not be made until OFMdFM have designated a department to deliver the credit/payment.

Liquor Licensing Laws

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the timeframe for her proposal to introduce a system of penalty points for premises that break liquor licensing laws. (AQW 4173/09)

Minister for Social Development: Following my review of liquor licensing and registered clubs' legislation in Northern Ireland, I submitted in October 2008 a Policy Memorandum seeking Executive approval for a Bill in the current session which would amend the Licensing (NI) Order 1996 and the Registration of Clubs (NI) Order 1996 to provide for a system of penalty points for premises contravening those laws. I await an Executive decision on my legislative proposals. In the absence of such a decision I cannot confirm the timescale for bringing the Bill into effect.

Registration of Clubs (NI) Order 1996

Ms S Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development when she proposes to bring forward her amendment to the Registration of Clubs (NI) Order 1996. (AQW 4175/09)

Minister for Social Development: Following my review of liquor licensing and registered clubs' legislation in Northern Ireland, I submitted in October 2008 a Policy Memorandum seeking Executive approval for a Bill in the current session which would amend the Licensing (NI) Order 1996 and the Registration of Clubs (NI) Order 1996 to provide for a system of penalty points for premises contravening those laws. I await an Executive decision on my legislative proposals. In the absence of such a decision I cannot confirm the timescale for bringing the Bill into effect.

Strategic Business Review

Mr G Savage asked the Minister for Social Development what consultation her Department has had with the Department for Employment and Learning about the Strategic Business Review. (AQW 4187/09)

Minister for Social Development: The Social Security Agency has had ongoing consultation with the Department for Employment and Learning (DEL) from the outset of the Strategic Business Review. I discussed the proposals with my Executive colleague, the Minister for Employment and Learning, prior to the launch of public consultation. A senior DEL official represents DEL interests at Project Board level. In addition, a Joint Working Group between DEL and the SSA has been established to assess the operational impact of the SBR proposals in terms of the joint Jobs & Benefits service.

Social Security Agency

Mr G Savage asked the Minister for Social Development what plans and costings her Department has to improve the telecommunications system in the Social Security Agency, in the next 12 months; and if funding is in place. (AQW 4189/09)

Minister for Social Development: The Social Security Agency has plans for number of new initiatives and the extension of existing solutions to improve its telecommunications systems over the next 12 months. Funding cover via an approved Business Case is in place for all of these plans.

1. Disability and Carers Service (DACS) – To replace the existing contact centre infrastructure with a more modern replacement with enhanced functionality in June 2009. The implementation costs are £221,000 with annual running costs of £216,000.

2. Link between DWP and NICS Telephony – This initiative will allow telephone calls between the NICS telephone system and the DWP telephone system to be handled as internal calls and not require external dialling. Finalised costs are under discussion with the supplier.

3. Strategic Business Review (SBR) – Subject to the outcome of the public consultation current plans over the next 12 months are to implement 3 Telephone Support Units in Newry, Dungannon and Armagh in October 2009. Estimated implementation costs are £12,094 with annual running costs of £9,591. Full rollout of the SBR proposals would see a further 13 Telephone Support Units established. Estimated implementation costs of full rollout are £119,697 with annual running costs of £296,579.

3. Extensions to Existing Services - Over the next 12 months there will be an increase in numbers of Agency staff using existing telephony systems in Employment Support Allowance (ESA) and the Pension Centres in Windsor House and Carlisle House. Finalised costs for these increases are under discussion with the supplier.
