Seminar overview

- National, regional and strategic contexts
- Findings from a literature review –
 - Benefits to hospice
 - Benefits to service users and carers
 - Benefits to volunteers
- Conclusions and next steps

National context

Policy direction in five nations:

- Service user preference regarding location of end of life care provision
- 74% of people would prefer to die at home yet 54% die in hospital (NICE, 2011)
- Voluntary sector key in making aspirations a reality

Regional context

- Living Matters, Dying Matters:
‘families, carers and volunteers...the crucial cornerstone of this care’ (p.4)
‘enabling all organisations to work collaboratively to design, deliver and improve palliative and end of life care services’ (p.38)
- Transforming Your Care:
‘Services will regard home as the hub’ (p.7)

The contribution of volunteers

- Hospice enabled death needed in a range of settings
- Wide variety of hospice volunteer roles essential to effective service delivery
- Increased volunteer support = increased scope and size of provision
- Collaboration between hospice at home staff, volunteers and other community staff

Strategic direction

- ‘New models of health’ emphasize community response reliant on volunteer involvement
- Low numbers of volunteers providing direct care (NICE, 2011)
- Need for strategic approach to volunteer development and deployment (HtH, 2012)

Commissioned literature review

- Ascertain nature of volunteer activities
- Define the scope of volunteer roles
- Identify process regarding selection, induction and training of volunteers
- Outline the benefits of volunteering to the hospice, services users and carers, and volunteers themselves

Benefits to hospice

- Range of volunteer activity
- Driven by desire to improve quality
- Add diversity to professional team
- Bridge between hospice and community
- Recruitment, selection, induction, education and ongoing support
- Volunteer Value

Benefits to service users/carers

- Support across illness trajectory
- Increased patient/carer satisfaction
- Complementary to professional care
- Different types of support
- Improve quality and access

Conclusion (1)

- Volunteering benefits care providers, service users, carers and volunteers themselves
- But evidence unevenly spread
- Volunteering needs development to support palliative and end of life care in the community
- There are some gaps in current research

Benefits to volunteers

- Health and social benefits
- Volunteer satisfaction
- Education and training
- Motivations for volunteering
- Enduring appeal
- Challenges of volunteering

Conclusion (2)

- Research questions:
 - What training and support is needed?
 - How to involve volunteers in patient care?
 - What exactly can volunteers do?
 - How to avoid tension with paid staff?
 - How to provide culturally sensitive care?
 - What is the impact of volunteering on volunteers?
 - What is the impact of bereavement on volunteering?
 - How to maximize benefits and minimize challenges?

Conclusion (3)

Volunteers occupy 'boundary spaces' and research is needed to better understand how these boundaries are navigated

Conclusion (4)

- Wider role of All Ireland Institute for Hospice and Palliative Care to promote practice development and explore gaps in knowledge
- Future collaborative research between academia and palliative care providers
