Community Relations Funding through Local Councils in Northern Ireland

1 Introduction

This paper briefly outlines community relations¹ funding for groups through local councils in Northern Ireland in the context of the inquiry by the Committee for the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister into the Together: Building a United Community strategy². The paper is a supplement to a previous paper, *Community Relations Funding in Northern Ireland*³.

It is not intended to detail all community relations activities of local councils, but a summary is given of how funding originating in the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister (OFMdfM) is used for grants to local organisations.

¹ It is not within the scope of this paper to discuss terminology in relation to this area. The term 'community relations' has tended to be replaced by 'good relations' in many areas, although both terms are still in use in various contexts. 'Community relations' is used here for simplicity and does not infer preference.

2 Community Relations Funding in Local Councils

Funding from OFMdfM is distributed to each of the councils at a rate of 75%, with the remaining 25% matched by the council itself. A proportion of this money is spent on salaries for a community relations department or equivalent and the rest on programme costs. Programme costs can include activities by the council, training, events, service level agreements and partnership work with other organisations or the distribution of grants.

Each council uses the funding differently and in most cases grants to local groups and organisations is a very small part of the programme. For example, Magherafelt District Council has not distributed grants since 2012⁴ and Dungannon District Council has used money to work in partnership with local organisations rather than in the distribution of grants⁵. In Belfast City Council, 470 separate organisations have received almost £1.7 million of funding from 2011-12 to 2013-14 through small grants, summer intervention and St Patrick's Day programmes⁶. In all, 1332 separate organisations have been in receipt of community relations funding through local councils in the past three years.

It is not intended here to itemise the various uses of the community relations funds by each of the local councils, but a full list of funding received by each organisation by council area in the financial years 2011-12 to 2013-14 is at Appendix 1.

Table 1 shows the full value of council community relations funding and the proportion that is used for the distribution of grants.
