The two teacher training colleges are heavily subsidised in three ways. First, they are the only teacher training colleges in the UK to receive premia payments. Secondly, they provide non-initial teacher education subjects as part of a conscious decision to give them other business to maintain their viability. Thirdly, the Department of Education essentially increases the teacher demand model to an artificially high level by giving the colleges more business than the local market can sustain. Even with those subsidies, the colleges' financial sustainability will gradually erode over time. The restoration of the premia will lengthen their future prospects, but we cannot escape the issues and the need for reform.

Mr Spratt: I thank the Minister for his answer. Have there been any discussions between the board of governors of Stranmillis University College and his officials, and, indeed, is there still a suggestion of a merger with Queen's University?

Dr Farry: I have not had a direct meeting with Stranmillis in the couple of weeks since the Executive took their decision. We are, however, continuing to engage with other stakeholders about the future system because the process of reform, and seeking consensus on reform, has to continue. I have received correspondence from Stranmillis about its emerging thinking on the way forward, and my officials continue to work with it. The possible merger of Queen's and Stranmillis, which the Member seems to advocate be reconsidered, was on the agenda in 2011. However, at that stage, his party was very clear that it was not prepared to contemplate such a merger outside wider reform of the teacher training system. In that context, if I had moved the legislation to facilitate the review, it would have tabled a petition of concern to block it. If the Member and his party are reconsidering their position, I would be very pleased to meet them to discuss their change of heart.

European Social Fund: Ministerial Priority

T4. Mr McKay asked the Minister for Employment and Learning why the European social fund (ESF), for those who are delivering on the ground, is not a priority for him, especially in light of an awards ceremony this evening in Portglenone at which a number of people will receive awards through a return to employment programme funded by ESF, albeit that it looks quite likely that the group that runs that programme will cease to exist if the ESF funding is discontinued. (AQT 2204/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Member is wrong to assume that it is not a priority for me. Indeed, we have probably spent more time on this issue over the past number of weeks than on anything else. To be very clear, one round of funding is coming to its natural end, and the duration of the funding was made very clear to every group bidding in the outgoing round. I am not aware of the precise context of any fresh bid by the organisation that the Member referred to, but no funding decisions have been made; nor will they be until we have the full picture, having scrutinised all the applications. We are oversubscribed by 1.8 times the amount available, so some organisations will be unsuccessful and, no doubt, very disappointed. Others, however, will continue to receive funding for their projects. We are, at this stage, trying to pull out all the stops to ensure that we make decisions on funding before the end of April so that the work of many organisations can continue.

To put it in context — lest people accuse us of running very close to the deadline — we put a lot of focus on getting our European social fund operational programme cleared by the European Commission. We achieved that back in 2014. Our counterparts in England have yet to have their operational programme cleared by the European Commission. We are now in the context where we have the option of ensuring continuity between programmes. In England, that will not be the case; there will be a break for many organisations, which will have a devastating impact on staff and the participants with whom organisations engage.

Mr McKay: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I am not here to talk about people in England or to discuss what Europe is or is not doing. You can blame Europe all you want, but the message that we are receiving from the community and voluntary sector is that the Department is putting blockages in the way of the groups and putting down criteria that are resulting in the situation where those groups are being put on the line. Does the Minister recognise that fact? What is he going to do to ensure that those groups do not go to the wall? Does he also recognise that the women's sector, in particular, is going to be decimated by his Department's actions?

Dr Farry: There were probably four or five questions in there. I will do my best to pick them up. The Member said that this has nothing to do with England or Europe. It is very much everything to do with Europe given that it is European money that is coming down. We have to abide by the rules coming from the European Union. If the Member wants to do a UDI on this, that is fine; we would have to find the resources locally. We simply do not have those, so let us be sensible about this and use the opportunity that comes from our membership of the European Union to invest and extend what we would otherwise not be able to do with our available resources here in Northern Ireland.

No particular guarantees can be made to any organisations. Our officials are working tirelessly to ensure that we can have decisions made by the end of March. I made the point about England to make the point that we are being far more proactive than others in ensuring that that is the case. Issues of coverage regarding the women's sector may not necessarily be the outworking of the final decisions, but, if that were to be the case, there may well be different ways in which we can reassess the distribution of funds to ensure that we invest in the policy objectives of the Department and that we have proper coverage not just geographically but across the different aspects of engaging with those who are most marginalised from the labour market.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): I call Mr Pat Ramsey. Mr Ramsey, you will not have time for a supplementary.

Ministerial Subgroup: Key Objectives

T5. Mr Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the key objectives of the ministerial subgroup and how it will achieve regional balance and a reduction in economic inactivity and joblessness in the north-west. (AQT 2205/11-15)

Dr Farry: Very briefly, I cannot answer on behalf of the Executive; it is more for the First Minister and deputy First Minister to set out the broad remit and rationale for that. Suffice it to say that I am happy to play my role. Obviously, the issue around investment in university facilities in Derry is a key aspect of that, but economic inactivity is also critical.

We have been joined by the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment. The Member will be pleased to know that we have now formally submitted the final strategy to the Executive for approval. I am sure that he will encourage his Minister to give that strategy its full endorsement when it comes up for discussion at the Executive. Hopefully, that will be this week, but, if not, it will be within the rest of this month.

Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Question 4 has been withdrawn. We will start with listed questions.

Tourism: Increased Awareness

1. Mr Lynch asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the impact that Tourism Ireland's sponsorship of the Ireland cricket team will have on the awareness of the island of Ireland as a tourist destination. (AQO 7720/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): The aim of Tourism Ireland's sponsorship is to leverage the popularity of the Ireland cricket team, whose profile has grown in world cricket in recent years, and to support tourism growth from Australia and New Zealand, as well as other key cricket-loving countries, including England, India and South Africa.

Sport-related tourism has emerged as a very significant element in world tourism in recent years. High-profile sporting events such as the ICC Cricket World Cup provide Tourism Ireland with a unique opportunity to highlight the island of Ireland as a holiday destination as well as a top location for sporting events.

2.45 pm

The ICC Cricket World Cup, which is taking place in Australia and New Zealand, is one of the world's biggest sporting events in 2015. It has a global viewing audience and is being televised in 220 countries to a potential 2·5 billion viewers. May I say that they are being treated to some thrilling exploits by the Ireland team, which, after winning its opening two games, including a victory over the West Indies, came up short in its match against South Africa earlier today?

Mr Lynch: Go raibh maith agat. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as ucht a freagra. I thank the Minister for her answer. I know that the cricket team is not doing so well today against South Africa.

The Minister will be aware that half the world turns green at this time of year for St Patrick's Day, including some landmark buildings around the world, like the leaning tower of Pisa and the Pyramids in Egypt. In response to some of my colleagues at last week's Enterprise Committee meeting —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Order, please. Where is this question going?

Mr Lynch: The CEO of Tourism Ireland, who is responsible for the initiative, said that turning this Building green for the occasion would help the global greening initiative. Will the Minister agree to support that initiative?

Mrs Foster: It is a good jump from Ireland's cricket World Cup chances to the —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Minister, I was waiting on the result.

Mrs Foster: Indeed, and we are still hopeful that we can get to the quarter-finals. We are very much behind the team, particularly those members who are from Northern Ireland, including the captain. We send them all our best wishes.

In respect of the greening of this Building, Tourism Ireland is, of course, concerned with promoting Northern Ireland and the rest of the island outside of the island of Ireland. It has approached many iconic buildings across the world. They light them up green, and it has become an attraction for St Patrick's Day. As regards this Building, which is in Northern Ireland, it is entirely a matter for the Assembly Commission whether it decides to go down this route. I know that it has had discussions about it. I know that there was some commentary last week about the fact that, if you light it up green on St Patrick's Day, other days would also need to be marked.

Mr Dunne: I thank the Minister for her answers today. I think that we all recognise the enormous role that sport plays in promoting a positive image of Northern Ireland, whether it is through our cricket players, our leading golfers like Holywood's Rory McIlroy or, indeed, our latest boxing star, Carl Frampton. What is Tourism Ireland doing to market one of our other sporting gems, our world famous Circuit of Ireland rally, which is now part of the European rally championship?

A Member: Cricket.

Mrs Foster: I thank the Member for his question, which is sport related — to answer the Member who is sedentary across the way and who I can hear mention that. [Interruption.] The European rally championship —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Order, please. I know that a little bit of banter is to be encouraged at times, but it really can go to excess.

Mrs Foster: I had the great pleasure of being with some colleagues at the Circuit of Ireland rally launch, which Lisburn City Council hosted just last week. Again, we are hoping for a very good Circuit of Ireland, particularly because it is part of the European rally championship, which allows us to publish in media outside Northern Ireland and show off our beautiful scenery across the world. We know that there are many enthusiasts for rallying, not least the Member who asked the question.

Tourism Ireland is promoting this year's event through its commercial relationship with Eurosport. In recent years, it has secured an invitation for the Circuit of Ireland rally to stage and provide footage of the UK and Ireland leg of the European rally championship. As I said, that will allow us to get that global television exposure. I think that that is very important.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): I call Mr Alban Maginness who, no doubt, will choose his sport.

Mr A Maginness: Thank you, Mr Deputy Speaker. I thank the Minister for her encouraging remarks about the Irish cricket team. Given that remarkable success and the obvious focus that there is on the island of Ireland, what plans has she to encourage Tourism Ireland to exploit that market opportunity in the near future?

Mrs Foster: In relation to sport, I think we are already exploiting it, but there is always more that we can do, particularly around golf and the fact that we have the Irish Open coming to Northern Ireland — to Royal County Down — in May this year. I know that Tourism Ireland, along with Tourism NI, is working very hard on how they can promote Northern Ireland, particularly in relation to that fabulous event.

The Member will know, of course, that we are working on a joint bid for the Rugby World Cup. Again, we are pushing ahead with that. We are garnering support for that bid. We believe that to bring the Rugby World Cup to the island and to have events up here in Northern Ireland would be a marvellous thing to achieve. I send my congratulations — I am sure that I speak for the whole House — to the Ireland rugby team. At the weekend, we had a marvellous victory over England, and we look forward to the grand slam.

Power Cuts: Emergency Number

2. Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the representations her Department has made to Her Majesty's Government and the Energy Networks Association to ensure the proposed single emergency 105 number, for use in the event of a power cut, is available in Northern Ireland. (AQO 7721/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Northern Ireland Electricity has no plans to change its dedicated customer helpline number. The rest of the UK is made up of multiple network operators, whereas, in Northern Ireland, Northern Ireland Electricity is the sole network owner through which all power cuts are reported. Northern Ireland Electricity continues to promote its contact number through a range of channels.

Mr Elliott: I thank the Minister for that update. Does she agree that, given the equal citizenship of Northern Ireland within the United Kingdom, it should be included in that single, simple number throughout the UK right from the start and the inception of the project, as opposed to what it said in the consultation document — that it may join subsequently?

Mrs Foster: I understand, absolutely, where the Member is coming from in respect of that question, but I say to him that, if you go into a national number like that, you go into a call centre, and there is always the risk that people do not know where you are talking about when you ring up and say, "I have a power cut in Derryloman". Are they going to say, "Where is that?" It causes all sorts of difficulties in that regard.

NIE, given that it is the sole operator of the grid and the network in Northern Ireland, believes that its customer helpline is the one that should be familiar to people. Certainly, if the Member is asking if we can make it more amenable so that everybody knows exactly what number to call, yes, I think that there is always more that could be done in respect of that, but apparently they have provided me with some satisfaction ratings. They say that there is 99% satisfaction with how quickly the calls are answered, 97% satisfaction with the accuracy of information provided and a 99% competency of call handler. I worry that, if we are going into a central call system within the whole of the UK, we might lose a little bit of that.

Mrs Hale: Minister, you will be aware that I have been working with Plastec and its managing director, Thomas Hawthorne, and Avodah Renewable Energies and its owner, Alistair Dickson, who are investing significantly within Lagan Valley. However, they are being obstructed by NIE through a failure to deliver grid connection, which they already paid tens of thousands of pounds for over 18 months ago, and a regulator who appears to be powerless to intervene, and, indeed, said only last week that they could do nothing about it.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Could we have a question, please?

Mrs Hale: Minister, what are you going to do about it?

Mrs Foster: That is an issue that is becoming more and more of an issue. At a constituency level, I have had delegations in of farmers from Fermanagh and west Tyrone who cannot get onto the grid. The Member who asked the question has written to me on numerous occasions in relation to businesses in her constituency. To be quite blunt, I am fed up with the merry-go-round that is going on in relation to grid connection. We have NIE saying that it is not their issue but a System Operator for Northern Ireland (SONI) issue. SONI will say that it is a regulator issue. The regulator will try to pass it to somebody else. Frankly, it cannot go on, so I have called a meeting of all of the parties involved to discuss those issues and to try to get to the bottom of the grid connection issues. If we cannot deal with the matters around the table in a voluntary way, I will have to look at other measures to deal with the issue.

Mr Rogers: Thanks, Minister, for your answers thus far. What recent discussions have you had within your Department to improve the security of electricity supply on the island?

Mrs Foster: I will be concerned, of course, just with security of supply in my own jurisdiction. As the Member will know, in consultation with the system operator and the regulator, we recently put out a contract for more generation because we felt that, in future, there may be a gap. Some have criticised us for that, but I certainly felt that there was a need to make sure that we have security of supply. That is hugely important for the population of Northern Ireland, which is why we took that decision.

Broadband: Enterprise and Business Parks

3. Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what action she has taken to ensure that all enterprise and business parks have access to high-speed fibre-optic broadband. (AQO 7722/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has just awarded a contract to BT for a new project under the UK superfast roll-out programme, which will further extend access to superfast broadband across Northern Ireland by 2017. The majority of enterprise and business parks in Northern Ireland of which my Department is aware already have access to superfast broadband services, but there remains some in areas that do not. I have indicated my desire that business parks be prioritised under this new service.

Under the SuperConnected Cities programme, which is being led by the UK Government, business premises, including those in business parks in Belfast and Londonderry, are eligible to apply for vouchers with a value of up to £3,000 to cover the cost of high-speed broadband installation. That programme is now being extended to include other areas. That presents an opportunity for our new super-councils to apply for a voucher scheme similar to those that exist in the Belfast and Londonderry council areas.

Mr Beggs: I am aware that, in other parts of the UK where there has been under-provision of superfast broadband, Openreach has facilitated local communities where it has not introduced that service, because of, it says, economic reasons. Has the Minister been in discussion with BT Openreach so that that type of flexible facility will be available to local communities and businesses, which may not be included in the scheme that she mentioned?

Mrs Foster: I just mentioned two schemes. The first is the UK superfast roll-out programme, and the second is the SuperConnected Cities programme. I think that the super-councils should look at the second programme in particular. It was initially rolled out in Belfast, then it was extended to our second city, and now it is going to be available across Northern Ireland. Given that the super-councils will have new powers in April, they should look very closely at doing something together on those voucher schemes. It is a great opportunity to try to infill what has not been filled to date.

Mr Givan: Will the Minister provide more details about the £17 million investment that her Department announced last week?

Mrs Foster: That relates to the first of the schemes, the UK superfast roll-out programme, which is a UK scheme, so it is funded by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport, us and, indeed, BT. It is envisaged that the project will begin with the survey and design process, which will take place over a number of months. BT will then begin to re-engineer the infrastructure into a fibre-rich open-access network, enabling more people to enjoy superfast broadband. At the same time, there is also the work of the Northern Ireland broadband improvement fund. I know that Members may say, "Never mind superfast, what about a good broadband service?". The other broadband intervention is still ongoing and does not finish until near the end of this year.

Mr McGlone: The Minister almost stole my thunder when she said, “Whatever about superfast, what about the rest?”. There are places where the capacity for towns to grow is being inhibited by the under-improvement of broadband. I am wondering whether the Minister or her Department has carried out any audit of those towns to see whether they are being inhibited. I have one example in mind, in Maghera, where a software development and computer company cannot expand because of the lack of broadband capacity. Has any audit been carried out to see where there are broadband hot spots, “not spots” or diminished spots where interventions could be required to facilitate economic development?

3.00 pm

Mrs Foster: There are a couple of things there. First, I do not know whether the Member has furnished me with the postcode to see whether the company will be covered under the Northern Ireland broadband improvement programme that is still ongoing. Secondly, the new super-councils will be able to apply for SuperConnected Cities money, and I hope that that will make a difference locally as well.

I asked Invest NI to audit not towns but business parks to try to establish their connectivity. Of the 80 business parks supported by Invest Northern Ireland or Enterprise Northern Ireland, 66 can get superfast speeds. Of the 14 that cannot, 10 are in the intervention area for the superfast roll-out programme; two are in the Belfast City Council area and so can apply to the SuperConnected Cities fund; and two get between 15 MB and 23 MB. There are a number of funds out there at the moment, which, if I am honest, I find a wee bit confusing. I may put in place an A4 sheet that details all the different interventions that are ongoing, and, hopefully, that will be of assistance to MLAs.

Energy Prices

5. Mr Wilson asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what representations she has received from local employers regarding the impact of energy prices on their businesses. (AQO 7724/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I have received representations from and discussed a range of energy issues, including pricing, with a number of local businesses and their representative bodies. I continue to support businesses through the promotion of competition, innovation and investment.

The recently announced reductions in electricity tariffs is good news for our small business consumers and means that, from April, prices will be lower than the EU 15 median, approximately 5% lower than the Great Britain average and around 19% lower than those in the Republic of Ireland. Large energy users negotiate requirements directly with suppliers. I understand that some of our larger users may already be benefiting from falling electricity bills. Of course, motorists and those using oil for home heating will also have benefited from falling prices. I hope to attend an information event tomorrow on Gas to the West, which will provide up to 40,000 energy consumers, including businesses, with a more efficient, lower-carbon and potentially cheaper choice of fuel.

Mr Wilson: Whilst we must all welcome the impact of the downward turn in energy prices internationally, does the Minister recognise that many firms in Northern Ireland, especially large consumers of energy, admit that one of the problems when it comes to expansion and investment is the cost of energy? Since our grid is increasingly overloaded with expensive electricity from renewable sources, what requests has she made to the Government at Westminster, who seem now to be receptive to this, to reduce the percentage of electricity that has to be produced through expensive renewable sources?

Mrs Foster: I have ongoing discussions with my Westminster counterpart, Ed Davey, the Energy Secretary. Indeed, I had a meeting with him very recently on electricity market reform, which is ongoing, and some very difficult decisions will have to be taken on that.

I have also spoken to the regulator on a number of occasions, most recently just today, about the pricing for large energy users. I hope that there will be some developments from the regulator on that before the end of the month.

Mr McKinney: The Minister referred to actions or measures to improve connectivity. Will she expand on that? What further measures or actions will the Minister put in place to lessen the impact on businesses?

Mrs Foster: I can talk to the regulator and try to point her in the right direction, but, at the end of the day, pricing is a matter for the regulator. As I say, we are having a round-table meeting on grid connection, and I have no doubt that the interconnectivity that we need with the rest of the island and with Great Britain will come up. Unfortunately, neither operates to full capacity at the moment. The Member knows that we need a second interconnector, the North/South interconnector. We also need to ensure that the Moyle interconnector is up to full capacity again, and we hope that that will be the case by next year.

Mr Kinahan: Does the Minister not find that the repeated complaints that renewable energy, in particular wind energy, are driving up prices a little rich and somewhat hypocritical, given that the person who asked the question changed the planning policy and liberalised it so that we could expand and bring in wind farm schemes?

Mrs Foster: I am waiting on an intervention. If there is a spat going on between the Member and the Member for East Antrim, I will allow that to take place elsewhere.

We are looking at a cost-benefit analysis of the strategic energy framework. We are doing that in the context of electricity market reform that is coming at us very quickly and that will cause a huge change in the way electricity comes to us over the next period. The House should be very much aware that electricity market reform will provide a huge challenge for us in Northern Ireland, not least because we are in a single electricity market on this island and will have to bid in for contracts for difference, and renewable obligation certificates will be no more. A lot of change is coming, and the House will need to be very much part of that.

Mr Flanagan: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Gabhaim buíochas leis an Aire as ucht a freagra. I thank the Minister for her answers.

The Minister might accept that the high price of energy and electricity for large energy users and manufacturing companies is a barrier to attracting and retaining jobs in the manufacturing sector. What action has she taken to support large energy users that face uncompetitively high energy costs compared with their counterparts around Europe?

Mrs Foster: As he knows, we have consulted the Utility Regulator on that very important issue. Of course, 60% of the cost of energy for large energy users is the wholesale price. As I said, that is moving in a downward direction at the moment, and I hope that that will come through to those large energy users as their contracts start to change in the future. It is important as well that we deal with constraints on the single electricity market, and that includes the North/South interconnector. It is important that we have that in place, because, at the moment, that is costing consumers on the island of Ireland around €20 million. I am sure that he would agree that it is unacceptable for us to proceed in that manner.

Corporation Tax: Silk Commission

6. Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the conclusion of the Silk commission that, in relation to devolving corporation tax powers to Wales, the "costs would outweigh the benefits". (AQO 7725/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Unlike Northern Ireland, the Welsh have not had the same long public debate around the merits of devolving corporation tax, nor have they developed a plan to use such powers for a very clear economic development purpose. It is therefore unsurprising that the Silk commission concluded that income tax was more appropriate to devolve to the Welsh Government than other major UK taxes, including corporation tax.

The case for reducing corporation tax in Northern Ireland is very different from that in Wales. The Silk commission acknowledged that in its report and described corporation tax as a useful policy tool for us because of the fiscal competition that we face from sharing a land border with the Republic of Ireland. The latest research that was commissioned by my Department, which takes into account the costs and benefits of reduced corporation tax, continues to demonstrate a strong economic case for Northern Ireland.

Mr Allister: Is it not quite striking though that another region of the United Kingdom, which is also block-grant dependent, most thoroughly investigated the issue of corporation tax through a proper commission and reached that conclusion, whereas we seem to have rushed to the endgame without any comparable consideration?

On the issue of just how attractive it would be to reduce corporation tax and all the hype about that in the context of the manufacturing industry, is the Minister not struck by the fact that, at the very time when it seems that corporation tax will be reduced, one of our largest manufacturers, alas, JTI, will depart our shores undeterred by the lure —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Mr Allister, I think that we have a question at this stage.

Mr Allister: — that is supposed to exist in reduced corporation tax?

Mrs Foster: On the latter part of the question, we discussed the lowering of corporation tax with JTI Gallaher — he would expect me to do that — but, because of the tax system in Japan, it would not have benefited from the lower rate in Northern Ireland.

We did of course look at that in great detail.

As regards rushing into our support for the lowering of corporation tax, my goodness, this has been around since devolution came back in 2007. I do not call that rushing into a decision. The entire business community, from the Federation of Small Businesses right up to the CBI, is in support of this policy development. I say to the Member that he may not wish to move forward and have ambition for Northern Ireland moving into the future, but I do. I want Northern Ireland to become a powerhouse; I want it to become what I know it can become and has great potential to become. I am sure that other Members have ambition for Northern Ireland as well. That is where I sit.

Mr Ó Muilleoir: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. Mo bhuíochas leis an Aire. Diolch yn fawr, as the Welsh would say. As we are talking about our Welsh cousins, and in the context of Mr Cameron's announcing on Friday the next step to devolving income tax power, does the Minister think that income tax is the next tax-raising power that we will seek and that it would also bring benefits to our economy?

Mrs Foster: I think that we need to deal with the power that, hopefully, we will have by the end of this parliamentary term. We know that the Bill is going through its stages in the House of Commons and House of Lords and, as I understand it, should be finished its legislative journey towards the middle of March. Then, we will be able to move forward and make the most of that power when we agree a rate and a date for implementation and we can take forward all the evidence. One of the points that Mr Allister raised was the fact that we had not looked at comparable areas on corporation tax. We have, of course, had that work completed for us. I am sure that if he looks at the work carried out by the Northern Ireland Centre for Economic Policy — now the Ulster Business School — he will see that work there.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): The time for listed questions is up. We now move to topical questions.

Broadband: Rural Improvement Programme

T1. Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the rural broadband improvement programme. (AQT 2211/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I know that the Member has a particular interest in this programme; he has always been very faithful in asking me about it. Indeed, it is going very well. Those areas that have already had the intervention report very good successes. If the Member has a particular area that he wants me to look at, I will certainly feed those postcodes in to see whether, first of all, they are on the programme and then what the timescale is for implementation.

Mr Boylan: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. I thank the Minister for her response. It is a welcome programme. The original target was, I think, 48,000 homes. Can the Minister indicate where she is with regard to a percentage of those homes? Does she feel that we will reach the target? Could she intimate how Newry and Armagh is faring on that programme?

Mrs Foster: Unfortunately, I do not have that detail in front of me. We hope to intervene for 45,000 homes. From memory, I think that we are in and around the 30,000 mark for interventions. I am certainly happy to follow it up with the Member in writing if he wishes me to do so.

Tourism Potential: Dungannon

T2. Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether she is aware of the huge tourism potential of the Hill of the O'Neill and Ranfurly House Arts and Visitor Centre in Dungannon and, if so, will she work closely with the new Mid Ulster Council and the Dungannon Regeneration Partnership to take forward a strategy to exploit that potential. (AQT 2212/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The short answer is that I am, absolutely, given that we share a constituency, aware of the tourism potential of the Hill of the O'Neill and the Ranfurly centre. I have visited on a number of occasions. I am always impressed by the facility and the way in which it has been integrated into the town of Dungannon in a very nice way, I have to say, that can also draw people into the town centre. We know that, often, when large-scale installations are put in, they draw people out of town centres, but this is right in Dungannon town centre. Dungannon and South Tyrone Borough Council is to be commended for its work. I look forward to working with the Mid Ulster Council in the future.

3.15 pm

Ms McGahan: Go raibh maith agat. I thank the Minister for her response. Does the Minister agree that the growth of the tourism sector in south Tyrone offers the potential for jobs and benefits to the local economy, shops and services?

Mrs Foster: Absolutely, and especially when the facility is in the town centre. Of course, it will bring people into the town centre for the retail experience in Dungannon, as well as to visit coffee shops and what have you. Tourism jobs go right across Northern Ireland, and I think that that is something that we should always be aware of. The sector provides jobs right across Northern Ireland, and, of course, I hope that that will be the case in Dungannon.

Juncker Fund: EU Money

T3. Mr Cree asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether she has had any discussions about the €315 billion investment fund that the EU is talking about. (AQT 2213/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I think that that is the Juncker fund. Am I right about that? As I understand it, my departmental officials are watching very closely what is going on with that. They have not had total clarity on how that is going to be rolled out, but a number of Departments in Northern Ireland will be interested, not least his party's Minister and the Department for Regional Development.

Mr Cree: I thank the Minister for her response. Minister, have you any detail on likely time frames, applications and even areas to be covered?

Mrs Foster: We have talked a lot about the grid today. Certainly, from my perspective, we will be looking at it to see if there is anything in energy infrastructure that we can augment or if there is anything more we can do in relation to the likes of energy storage or the energy grid. I am sure that colleagues will have other priorities.

Air Waves: Northern Ireland Air Show

T4. Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how central she believes the Northern Ireland air show at Portrush, which has developed in recent years, to be, not just to the economy of the north coast but of Northern Ireland, as it seeks to develop in the forthcoming years. (AQT 2214/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I thank the Member for his question. That is a very good example of how a locally organised event has continued to grow, year on year, and brought in international attention and acts to the north coast. I know for sure that it will continue to be an event that we will want to support in a tangible way through funding, but in other ways as well.

Mr Campbell: The Minister will be aware that, last year, the air show moved from one side of Portrush to the other in an attempt to develop and expand, and it did so successfully. How confident is she that it will receive the necessary support to continue to develop this year and in the forthcoming years?

Mrs Foster: I am confident that it will, because it works very closely with Tourism Northern Ireland and, indeed, with Tourism Ireland in marketing outside of the island of Ireland. If the Member has any specific issues that he wants to raise with me, I am very happy to meet him to talk to him about them. However, I know that the air show — I cannot remember its name; is it Air Waves?

Mr Campbell: Air Waves.

Mrs Foster: I know that it will go from strength to strength. It is very much in a lot of people's diaries from year to year.

Bombardier: CSeries Project

T5. Mr Newton asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to comment on the significance of the very successful CSeries aircraft project to the future prosperity of Bombardier, given its recent job reduction announcement. (AQT 2215/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Of course, we were disappointed to hear about further job losses among, what are called, temporary workers at Bombardier. I am looking forward to a meeting with senior management here in east Belfast. The Member had asked me previously if that was going to happen. I can confirm that that meeting is going to take place now. We will have discussions about the future of Bombardier. I do not want to prejudge the meeting, but the future — looking at the flight of the CSeries jet — looks very good. We are delighted to see another major milestone in Bombardier's CSeries aircraft programme because it is critical to the east Belfast plant, particularly in relation to the wings, which are constructed there. We look forward to continuing to work with Bombardier in the future.

Mr Newton: I thank the Minister for that answer. Can the Minister confirm that everything that can be done is being done on a week-to-week, month-to-month basis to support Bombardier as it develops the project?

Mrs Foster: Absolutely. I can confirm that that is the case. Invest Northern Ireland works very closely with Bombardier's senior executives so that, if any issue arises, we are aware of it very quickly and can try to help in any way we can. We believe that Bombardier is a significant and structurally important part not just of east Belfast but of the Northern Ireland economy. We will continue, therefore, to give it the attention that it deserves.

Industrial Development Land: Omagh

T6. Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, given that, some months ago, Invest NI placed a public advertisement seeking expressions of interest from landowners in the Omagh area about the availability of land suitable for industrial development, whether she can give an update on uptake or expressions of interest. (AQT 2216/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Absolutely. In mid-September, Invest NI placed an advertisement seeking expressions of interest from landowners. A total of 13 areas of land were offered. Following engagement with the DOE Planning Service, nine of those areas were ruled out due to the distance outside the Omagh settlement limit, a further two have been discounted as they were not received until after the deadline for submissions, and Invest NI is conducting a desktop exercise on the remaining two sites to determine their potential suitability for industrial development.

Mr McElduff: I thank the Minister for the specific answer and the detail contained therein. I hope that the Minister sees a connection with my supplementary question, because I do, although my mind might work in funny ways. Enterprise zone status might appear like a long shot. Coleraine has enterprise zone status. Might there be a case for enterprise zone status for Omagh, the county town of Tyrone, if you have ever heard tell of it?

Mrs Foster: I did hear tell of it. In fact, I was in the county town of Tyrone last night at a celebration with SMEs and the local council for their local economic development programmes, where 300 businesses had taken up council initiatives. I was really very pleased to see some of the work that was going on there, so I am very aware of the county town of Tyrone.

I very much want to have a conversation with MLAs about enterprise zones, because I think that there has been a bit of a misunderstanding. There is a very specific zone in Coleraine. It is a pilot scheme and it has been put in place by Her Majesty's Treasury. It is not in my gift, and we still have to see it brought into full action.

Private Sector: Decline

T7. Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline her proposals to address the simultaneous decline in output, new orders and employment in the private sector as reported recently in the purchasing managers' index (PMI). (AQT 2217/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The PMI is a snapshot at a particular time. I think that it was Richard Ramsey, the author of the PMI, who said that it was a "blip" at the time because, before that, the trend was upwards. I am very happy to take Richard Ramsey's advice on that matter.

Mr McAleer: Go raibh maith agat. The survey also highlighted the negative implications of the exchange rate for local businesses. If that is taken into account, will the Minister commit to addressing the challenges faced by businesses, particularly those in border areas?

Mrs Foster: It is one of the reasons why we have been encouraging companies to look outside the eurozone for their export markets. We accept that they will still very much want to do business with their closest neighbour, but it is important that they look to new markets, because we realise that there are difficulties with the exchange rate at present.

Broadband: Fermanagh and South Tyrone

T8. Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline her Department's plans for the development of broadband, particularly in rural areas, not least Fermanagh and South Tyrone, given that she will agree that broadband is vital to the development of businesses in rural areas. (AQT 2218/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I am very happy to answer that in relation to Fermanagh and South Tyrone. The Northern Ireland broadband improvement project is being rolled out, we have the superfast roll-out programme, and we also have the SuperConnected Cities programme in conjunction with DCMS. There are three current intervention programmes. I think that we will put more details on an A4 sheet and share that with colleagues so that they are clear about what is going on.

Lord Morrow: I thank the Minister for her answer. I am delighted to hear that there are immediate plans to develop this. What about a 10- to 15-year strategy for the further development of broadband in those rural communities?

Mrs Foster: I am very hopeful that, in 10 to 15 years, the broadband infrastructure will be very mature. I have often said in the House that we should be looking not only at fixed-line broadband but at mobile applications, because the mobile infrastructure needs to be in place. More and more people are using handheld devices as opposed to the traditional fixed-line connection. I note that Vodafone very recently set up three rural connectivity pilots in Donemana, Killeter and Pomeroy. I will meet Vodafone in the very near future and look forward to hearing how broadband is being developed in those three areas.

Economic Inactivity Plans: Update

T9. Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the progress of the economic inactivity plans for areas of great need. (AQT 2219/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Minister for Employment and Learning and I have signed off on the plans, which will go to the Executive, I hope, this week. If not this week, they will be discussed at the next Executive meeting.

Mr Ramsey: In light of our previous discussion, Minister, are you of a mind to ensure that these are programme-led rather than application-driven plans?

Mrs Foster: I certainly do not want the economic inactivity strategy to be characterised by process. I want it characterised by action, because there is no point in having an inactivity strategy if it is to be characterised by inactivity. So, let us get the actions happening on the ground and try to make a difference to those people.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Time for questions is up. We now return to the debate on —

Mr G Robinson: On a point of order, Mr Deputy Speaker. Do you realise that Enterprise, Trade and Investment Question Time was reduced by three minutes?

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): I am told that we started a couple of minutes early and that the Member listed to ask the final question is not in her place, so no one has been cheated. Now —

Mrs Cameron: On a point of order, Mr Deputy Speaker. I apologise for not being in my place for a topical question to the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure last week. I was in a meeting with the Health Minister.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Dallat): Your apology will be noted. Now, for the third time, we will move on to the debate on the report of the Committee for Enterprise, Trade and Investment inquiry into wind energy.

Committee Business

Wind Energy Inquiry Report

Debate resumed on motion:

> That this Assembly approves the report of the Committee for the Environment [NIA 226/11-16] on its Inquiry into Wind Energy in Northern Ireland; and calls on the Minister of the Environment to implement the recommendations contained in the report. — [Ms Lo (The Chairperson of the Committee for the Environment).]

Mr A Maginness: I will speak as a member of the Environment Committee on the report produced on wind energy.

I am a little bit disturbed and concerned about the way in which the debate is drifting. This is not about wind energy per se; it is about particular aspects of planning, separation distances, community engagement and so forth. So it is a given that we accept that a common good is derived from wind energy. It is important to remember that all parties in the House, without exception, support renewable energy and, indeed, wind energy in particular.

(Mr Deputy Speaker [Mr Beggs] in the Chair)

We, in this part of Europe, are blessed in having access to a considerable amount of wind, which is free and a source of renewable energy. It is important that we celebrate that —

Mr Wilson: Will the Member give way?

Mr A Maginness: — and I see the Member for East Antrim anxiously waving across the Benches, so I will give way to him.

Mr Wilson: Will the Member accept that, whilst wind is free, the means of turning wind into energy is the most expensive means of generating electricity, and, as a result of our dependence on it, we have added to fuel poverty and made industry less competitive?

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member has an extra minute.

3.30 pm

Mr A Maginness: Thank you, Mr Deputy Speaker. I thank the Member for his intervention. I think that it is fallacious to say that wind energy is expensive. The fact is that, at this point in the development of wind energy as an alternative source of energy, it has to be subsidised because of the capital costs involved. This is an initial period, and it will, over time, decrease in its cost to the consumer and to society at large. I do accept the point that the Member made about the cost to industry, and, of course, the House is aware of that. The regulator is also aware of that, and, indeed, industry has taken significant steps to address that by also, curiously enough, using alternative renewable sources of energy to create its own in-house source of energy to provide for whatever it is producing. Those are my initial points.

Throughout the inquiry, I think that the Committee worked to try to gauge the views of people who were concerned about different aspects of planning and so forth, and the report self-evidently addresses those issues. I hope that the Minister in due course will look at the report, be cognisant of the concerns that have been expressed by members of the public and take some action to ameliorate those concerns.

One thing that impressed me was the attempts by those who are building wind farms or turbines to try to engage with the community. I think that that is very important. I think that, sometimes, their efforts are misunderstood and that it is thought that they are bribing a section of the community. I think that that is very unfair. An alternative to that, of course, is to engage the community in proactively developing alternative sources of energy. Indeed, this afternoon, I had the honour of attending the all-party group on co-operatives and mutuals, and the major theme there was using cooperatives or social enterprises of different sorts to involve the local community in the development of renewable energy, be it wind, solar energy or whatever. There is a very good example in Slaughtneil in County Derry, where the local community has come together in a social enterprise and has created wind energy by investing in a turbine. That is a benefit to the community for the next 20 years. The local school will benefit, the local sporting club will benefit and the community at large will benefit from that. That is very important, and I think that we should learn from that — [Interruption.]

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Can I ask the Member to resume his seat? We are waiting for advice.

Mr Wilson: It is all hot air.

Mr A Maginness: It was your interventions. [Laughter.]

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): I have been advised that we stay. I ask the Member to continue until we get further advice.

Mr A Maginness: Mr Deputy Speaker, I am nearly at an end. I just want to say to the House that it is very important to have community engagement in all of this. I think that it will solve a lot of problems because the whole community is benefiting, not just some individuals in the community. I believe that that is a way forward in rural areas, and I hope that the good example shown in Slaughtneil can, in fact, be followed —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): I ask the Member to draw his remarks to a close.

Mr A Maginness: — by people in other areas.

Mrs Overend: I am not sure how safe it is to start, but start I will. I too welcome the report and thank the Committee Clerk and the staff for compiling it. It was a massive job. The inquiry started long before I was a member of the Environment Committee. In fact, I think that it started almost a year before I joined it. It is an issue that every MLA can relate to. There is no doubt that every elected represented has been lobbied in support of or against a wind turbine in their constituency or maybe on both sides of the argument, if you are lucky. Unfortunately, in many cases, it has pitted neighbour against neighbour. I therefore welcome the publication of the inquiry's report, as it seeks to bring some clarity to an issue that is becoming increasingly divisive in communities across Northern Ireland.

Turbines are a relatively recent phenomenon. Until relatively recent times, consent for electricity generation was not a particular problem. The Executive set the targets to achieve 40% of electricity from renewable sources. Interestingly, the Member to my left, the Member for East Antrim, claimed that that target was unachievable, even though I understand that, for a year, he was the Minister of the Environment, which was the Department that championed it.

With the development of technology and the increased drive for renewables, it was inevitable that planning consents would become an issue. Instead of Northern Ireland being overloaded with wind turbines, there needs to be an overarching strategic view on the siting of turbines, and planning consent is key to that.

Many people, not least applicants, have criticised the system for taking too long, but it is essential that all factors be taken into consideration before decisions are made. Anything else would expose the Department to undue risk. We trust that the new councils will show the same caution when they take on many of the decisions after 1 April but not necessarily the extended delays that can come with it.

There were problems with planning policy statement (PPS) 18, so the strategic planning policy statement (SPPS) at least presents a useful opportunity to put some of those to bed. That includes more obligations on developers to abide by noise limits and to ensure that all the relevant information is produced in the application process. The noise factor raised an interesting discussion in Committee, with research and evidence, and I am sure that the Minister will seek to take those on board.

Along with noise pollution, one of the regular bones of contention with wind turbines is their proximity to residential properties. The Committee report makes a sensible suggestion, and we should look to extend the distance from the current 90 metres status. The recent fall of a wind turbine in County Tyrone highlighted that need.

As the Committee learned during its evidence sessions, it is not just the noise that you hear standing nearby; often, it is more inconspicuous than that. So, whilst the fleeting observer may hear little, residents, backed up by evidence, talk of invasive noise. That leads to an array of problems, including sleep disturbance and deprivation. It is because of that disturbance that the Committee believes that the Department needs to improve the procedures for measuring that and, eventually, come to its own conclusion as to what an acceptable level of noise pollution is.

I welcome the new cautious approach recommended in the SPPS to the siting of turbines in areas of outstanding natural beauty. In fact, at this stage, I thank the Minister and the Department for working with the Committee on the issue, particularly on the drafting of the SPPS.

An important issue in the report is the call for economic considerations for assessing applications to be better defined, as it is very important not to be ambiguous in this matter. Perhaps that could counteract the presumption of favour in PPS 18.

To conclude, wind turbines draw contention in every art and part of Northern Ireland. Their positioning is key to their success, yet that same point can strike fear and cause annoyance and even have implications for health. The Committee inquiry drew many positive conclusions and recommendations, and I commend them to the Minister.

Mr Wilson: First of all, this is a very important issue because there is increasing alarm in Northern Ireland at the march of the 300-feet-plus steel triffids across the countryside destroying the natural beauty of Northern Ireland but also having an impact on people's lives and health. When I started reading the report, I was a bit alarmed because, at the very start, the Committee talked about being mindful of the need to have renewable energy. I thought, "Right, what we're going to get here is a report that justifies the way in which the policy is being applied", but I must say I am pleased about a number of the recommendations.

Prompted by yourself, Mr Deputy Speaker, earlier, the Member for South Antrim seemed to think that I was responsible for this liberal policy. The policy was drawn up at the time because there was no policy about wind turbines. Secondly, I was criticised for it being too draconian. I remember many questions in this House as to why the policy was stopping wind turbines being built.

I say that partly in self-defence but also because it is a warning that regardless of what changes may be required in planning policy, it will always have a degree of subjectivity. Therefore, it is often the guidance, instructions or will that come from the Minister's office that direct how the policy is interpreted.

While I was environment Minister, it was probably interpreted in the way in which I hoped it would be, ie, that, as it states in PPS 18, where there was an unacceptable impact on human health, public safety, residential amenity, visual amenity, landscape character etc, these things should not be allowed. As I speak to planning officers in my area, I increasingly find that the answer is, "The Minister is keen on these happening", therefore the policy is interpreted in a way that I believe is much more liberal.

I welcome some of the changes that have been asked for by the Committee. Always bear in mind, however, that if there is an overall drive and policy of pushing a particular aspect, then the policy itself may be interpreted in a way that even its drafters did not intend.

The first aspect of the report that I welcome is the requirement that those who put up or wish to put up wind turbines have to show that they meet the noise standards rather than an environmental health officer having to do that work for them. The noise standards are out of date, and the World Health Organization has highlighted deficiencies in the current standards. We must look to having more up-to-date standards of measuring noise and its impact.

The distance issue is also important. While there is no agreement across jurisdictions, some will have turbines as far as 3,000 metres from residential properties. That is important from not just the point of view of noise and the health impacts but the visual impact of wind turbines.

It was always intended to be the case that the cumulative impact of wind turbines in an area ought to be considered. That means that where the local planning office may decide about an individual turbine, and strategically wind farms might be considered centrally, those two things should not be divorced.

Mr A Maginness: Will the Member give way?

Mr Wilson: Yes, I will.

Mr A Maginness: The Member talks about the over-concentration and saturation point. In accordance with standard planning decision-making, planners look at individual applications. With restaurants or fast-food bars, for example, they do not say there are 20 fast-food bars on the Antrim Road, therefore we will not entertain any further ones. It is the individual applications that the planners look at.

3.45 pm

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member has an extra minute.

Mr Wilson: That may well be the case, but, when you look at the impact of huge 320-feet turbines on a landscape environment, you have to look at the cumulative impact. The proposition always was that there should be a requirement to look at the cumulative impact. If you see the forest of these things in some areas, it makes sense —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Will the Member draw his remarks to a close?

Mr Wilson: — not to look at them individually.

I welcome the report and the thoroughness with which it has been done, though I utter caution that, despite what changes might be made, if the direction comes from the top to —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member's time is up.

Mr Wilson: — interpret it liberally, any policy —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member's time is up.

Mr Wilson: — will always be defective.

Mr McElduff: Go raibh maith agat, a LeasCheann Comhairle. At the outset, I, too, want to thank the Clerk and staff of the Committee, as well as our Chairperson, Anna Lo, and Deputy Chairperson, Pamela Cameron, for their leadership throughout the inquiry. I endorse the Chair's statement ahead of today's debate, which essentially calls for a more strategic approach in the siting of wind infrastructure and an urgent review of current noise guidelines.

I suppose that the recommendations contained in the report constitute advice to government, principally to the Minister of the Environment and the Department generally. Yesterday, a Sinn Féin delegation met the Minister and senior planning officials from his Department, and they have undertaken to give full and thorough consideration to the report. They would have liked the timing to be different, as, with the development of the single planning policy statement and the report being almost coincidental, they are unable at this point to take full account of the recommendations in our report.

I refer to paragraph 3 of the report. My party is supportive of Programme for Government targets, but my colleague Cathal Boylan made the point earlier that we cannot ignore the concerns of local residents who have questioned the way in which that target is being achieved through an over-reliance on wind energy and an underemphasis on and underutilisation of other renewable energy sources.

What about the key conclusions and recommendations? In paragraph 18, there is specific mention of my constituency of West Tyrone and the issue of saturation point. In paragraph 22, there is reference to a cumulative impact and saturation point in the number of wind developments that are either operational in or planned for an area. Paragraph 18 highlights the fact that, hitherto, there has been a lack of a strategic approach to zoning or identifying the most appropriate locations for wind turbines.

I am aware of a number of large-scale applications in the pipeline. One of those is described as Doraville, and it has wide implications for communities in the Glenelly valley in south Derry and the part of the Sperrins in Broughderg. Indeed, I helped to facilitate a pre-application hearing for residents in respect of that application, and the scale of it is most worrying. I want to commend the local group of residents from the Lisnaharney area, which is in close proximity to Gortin, who have a very positive and proactive community development agenda for that beautiful part of the Sperrins near Gortin. Their plan for the future to create jobs and build tourism is based largely on exploiting the outdoor recreation potential of that area, and, in their submission, they point to the detrimental impact on visual amenity of a large-scale wind farm application and possible displacement of jobs in the tourism sector.

On the one hand, the industry will emphasise jobs created by wind farms and, on the other hand, groups like Lisnaharney Area Residents Group will emphasise displacement of jobs through lost tourism potential.

Reference is made in paragraphs 10 and 11 to wind turbine regulations — ETSU-97 or ETSU-R-97 — and there is general agreement that these need to be reviewed, that local government authorities and environmental health departments are far too stretched by regularly adjudicating on such matters and that perhaps there should be more of an onus on developers to prove that the noise regulations are being adhered to.

There are many questions for the Minister. For example —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): I ask the Member to draw his remarks to a close.

Mr McElduff: — why are so many non-determination appeals taking place? Why are people not even waiting for a refusal and going straight to appeal? Does the Minister have anything to say about the Screggagh incident?

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): The Member's time is up.

Mr Agnew: I welcome the debate and the Committee's focus on wind energy. As a supporter of wind energy, I want community buy-in for good wind projects based on good consultation. I also want the implementation of many of the measures that are called for in the report to promote community benefit, engagement and, when possible, ownership.

Like Alban Maginness, I was at the launch today of a solar energy cooperative, which will be run very much for community benefit. I welcome the work of the Ulster Community Investment Trust (UCIT) and the Northern Ireland Community Energy (NICE) board on that project. I also declare an interest as a shareholder in Northern Ireland's first wind energy cooperative, Drumlin Wind Energy. Indeed, it was the first example in Northern Ireland of community ownership of energy, and I want people to avail themselves increasingly of such a model.

Despite claims from the Member opposite and from such sources as the 'Daily Mail' and the 'The Daily Telegraph', wind energy is the cheapest form not only of renewable energy but of all forms of energy production. That was borne out by the EU Commission study, which, having looked at all the costs, including subsidies and external costs such as to health and the environment, found that, to generate 1 MW of energy by onshore wind cost roughly €105, compared with €164 for gas and €233 for coal. It is easy to state that wind energy is expensive — it does have upfront costs — but the unit cost is zero, and the life cycle of wind energy generation is cheaper than for other forms of energy. Indeed, the Enterprise, Trade and Investment Committee has heard, on numerous occasions, that, when demand for electricity can be met by renewable energy generation alone, the marginal cost is significantly lower than when gas comes onto the system. The reality is that the price of wind is coming down, and, whilst gas prices have dipped, the overall trend is upward. When we consider the costs of 500 deaths a year related to air pollution and the impacts of climate change, it is clear that the cost of other sources of energy such as gas and coal is significantly greater.

Turning to the report, I think that I am right in saying that the Committee Chair expressed the support of the Committee for the proposal that wider economic, social and environmental impacts should not be taken into account when planning decisions are made on wind farms. I believe that this contradicts the Committee recommendation to take a strategic approach. Inevitably, these projects are regionally significant, and their wider impact must be taken into consideration, as for any major energy project. I do not believe that we would have Kilroot, Ballylumford or, going forward, the North/South interconnector if we looked solely at the local impact of an energy development. They are regionally significant, so we have to look more widely than the local impact.

I certainly welcome further research into and monitoring of the noise impacts, but we need to take an evidence-based approach. The World Health Organization has said about imperceptible noise that there is no reliable evidence that sounds below the hearing threshold produce physiological or psychological effects. We should continue to monitor it, but we have to make decisions based on the evidence available.

I find some of the opposition to wind projects hard —

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): Will the Member draw his remarks to a close?

Mr Agnew: — to understand. Those providing the objections support unregulated quarrying and gold-mining, but, when it comes to wind turbines, they seem to have an objection to the local impacts.

Mr McNarry: Critics of wind power, like me, believe that granting planning permission for wind turbines has become little more than a rubber-stamping exercise. In some areas, approvals have hit 100%. In County Fermanagh, the county where fracking was outlawed by anoraks in green hats, 106 of 108 applications were given the green light. In the Omagh council area, 88 of 92 were approved. Through my recent research, I found that not one local council had a policy on wind farms — that augurs well for the new powers given to the super-councils, does it not? Yet we see these ghastly monsters mushrooming and destroying the lives of people who live near them.

In the last three years, some £140 million has been paid out in subsidies to the renewables sector in Northern Ireland through the renewables obligation. These subsidies are profoundly regressive: they take money from poor consumers, including pensioners, to give to cash-rich cooperations. We are being asked to adopt a report that has strayed from legal disputes and potential judicial decisions, favouring the placement of turbines where they simply are not wanted. Owen McMullan, the spokesman of the Tyrone-based Windwatch group, puts it rather neatly:

> "We were led to believe this would reduce our dependence on fossil fuels, but nobody in Northern Ireland is getting cheaper electricity."

That is true in all communities, just as it is in County Tyrone. Wind power has already exacted a heavy cost: it has caused divisions in rural communities and done nothing to decrease fuel bills. However, it has given rise to serious health concerns that require a moratorium until the true impacts on people's health are known.

This turbine lobby is yet another example of the arrogance and short-sightedness of those intolerant, self-important people who have few or no ideas except massive cost initiatives that are not about green jobs but green unemployment. UKIP has consistently exposed the failures and the money wasted by plying it into wind energy. Rather than adopting this report to satisfy the tree-huggers, we should get the super-councils to ratify an across-the-country policy of stopping wind power development. In doing so, perhaps the Assembly should urgently address the potential of an energy supply crisis when it next talks so boldly of rebalancing our economy.

The 'Sunday Telegraph', no later than February, dubbed the matter "The Great Wind Farm Farce". It said:

> "In a free market, no business would want to invest in a wind farm because no customer would want to buy its unreliable produce."

Today, in our own local farce, we have a Committee recommending the sustainability of wind farms and, regrettably, offering little to give any real assurance to the people and communities directly affected by these monstrosities. The report recommends the sustainability of wind turbines, and, if it does not, the Committee should make it clear that that is its position.

If not, the recommendations are inadequate guidance for planning implications.

4.00 pm

I challenge anyone to deny that the recommendations are in favour of the sustainability of wind farms, and there ends the story. They are not recognising the rights of people, and they will, I believe, be subject to legal challenge. What of the 849 applications still out there awaiting decision? The recommendations do nothing to make a case to refuse them planning permission. Somehow, Members, I feel that the answer is still blowing in the wind. The Assembly should not be tilting at windmills.

Mr Deputy Speaker (Mr Beggs): I call Paul Frew. The Member will have three minutes.

Mr Frew: I welcome the opportunity to speak on this important issue, which may even be more important than the debate around corporation tax and the tax-varying powers to decrease or increase the corporation tax rate. It is more important because electricity is the blood that runs through the veins of our industries. We cannot take this lightly, so I welcome the report but, alas, much like the three reports produced by the Enterprise, Trade and Investment Committee, it picks only one part of a massive subject, which is the cost of electricity.

It is true that it is expensive to have wind power, but it is also true that we should have wind power. There is a place for wind power but not every place. I would like people to tell me what a saturation point looks like in a local area or a regional area, because I cannot see it and I do not know anyone who can tell me what it is. We need to get there because it is clear that wind power and wind generation will not solve all our ills. Rather than help, it will, in fact, hinder industry in this country.

(Mr Speaker in the Chair)

I will tell you why it will hinder industry in this country. Because of the system marginal price, we have to pay wind generators the same price as we pay for gas generators. That is the system marginal price. The more wind generators that go onto that system, the more we will have to pay. Not only that; we have to pay wind generators capacity payments for being there even though they are not always there and even though, sometimes, they cannot run. Sometimes, then, because of the state of our grid and because it cannot take their energy, we have to pay them constraint charges. That is the reason why we have to get this mix right. It is the reason why, at this moment, we are not getting it right, and that is why it is burdening industry and large employers.

If we do not get this right, we could lose thousands of jobs. That is why this debate is far more important than any debate on corporation tax. The House needs to take the issue of energy costs seriously, or it will be to the detriment of our people, our employees and their children. That is how important the issue is to our people.

Let us look at some of the issues that are at hand. I repeat: what is saturation point? When do we have enough? When do we have enough wind turbines, and when do we produce enough energy through wind? It is not about security of supply, because, if we had the North/South interconnector, we would have enough generation on the island of Ireland to cover security of supply. It is not about creating energy, so what is it about?

Mr Speaker: I ask the Member to bring his remarks to an end.

Mr Frew: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker: I call the Minister of the Environment, Mr Mark Durkan.

Mr B McCrea: On a point of order, Mr Speaker, under Standing Order 17(4). Will you inform the House what consultation you had with the Business Committee in order to establish the total time to be allocated to the debate? Having written to you and having much to contribute to the debate, I am extremely disappointed that I am the only Member not to be allowed to speak.

Mr Speaker: I can understand the Member's frustration, but the Business Committee agreed the timings, as it does for all the business that comes to plenary session. They have the authority to do that, and their decision is reflected in the scope for Speakers to accommodate all those who wish to contribute. I have made a particular virtue of attempting to bring in members of the smaller parties and the independents as much as is possible and practical. However, in setting the time limits for a debate, there is a very clear calculation, by which by 4.02 pm we should have already called the Minister to make his contribution.

I can only say that I share and understand the Member's disappointment, but the Business Committee's decision is the guidance that we all apply in the circumstances. I now return to the Minister.

Mr B McCrea: Further to that point of order, Mr Speaker. Under Standing Order 17(5), if I may —

Mr Speaker: I think that I have given you a fairly comprehensive explanation. What I suggest, so that we do not end up in a challenge, is that I have to conduct the business of the meeting as determined by the Business Committee. Everyone should have a clear understanding that that in fact is how the Assembly has decided to go about its business. I will reflect on the point that you made and will come back to you if you wish to have a formal response. I have given you my understanding of it, and I will come back to you. I owe you that much. I am sorry that you did not get called to speak, but I think that you would also be the first to acknowledge that we try to involve smaller parties, independents and individuals as well as the bigger parties as much as is practical. Can I now proceed with the debate? I will come back to you. Mark Durkan.

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. I have been allocated 15 minutes; I would happily give Basil five or 15.

I begin by thanking Anna Lo, Chairperson of the Environment Committee, for proposing the motion. I also acknowledge the work of the Committee, its research team and all those who provided evidence during the wind energy inquiry. This very useful report is evidently the product of an extensive and thorough inquiry process that is to be commended. I am also grateful to Members for their contributions today.

I welcome the Committee's report and, although I have only recently seen it, I am content to consider further and address the Committee's recommendations that fall within my Department's remit, subject to normal due processes. I will return to those recommendations later, but I first wish to say a little about renewable energy development in Northern Ireland.

Northern Ireland has significant renewable energy resources and a vibrant renewable energy industry that makes an important contribution to achieving sustainable development and is a valuable provider of jobs and investment across the region. Making appropriate use of renewable energy sources is supported by wider government policy, including the regional development strategy 2035.

I turn to an issue raised earlier by Mr Wilson. DETI's strategic energy framework for Northern Ireland sets a target of 40% energy consumption from renewable sources by 2020, which is equivalent to 1,600 megawatts of energy. To date, DOE has consented in excess of 1,100 megawatts from wind farms alone. With five years to go and if all consented proposals are developed, that represents a significant contribution to the 40% target, which would be further supplemented by other forms of renewable energy development.

Northern Ireland produces in the region of 19·6% of energy requirements from renewable sources, the majority from wind energy. Existing planning policy for that form of development is set out in Planning Policy Statement 18 on renewable energy — PPS 18 — which is supported by its supplementary best practice guidance. Following the publication of PPS 18 in August 2009, my Department experienced a significant increase in planning applications for wind energy. For the period 2002-03 until the end of 2014, 89% of planning applications for wind energy development were approved.

I am aware of the strong and contrasting views — we heard some of them today — on renewable energy development. Indeed, they have been reflected here today and through the responses received following the public consultation on the draft SPPS. I recognise, going forward, that it is important that the right balance is struck between facilitating development in appropriate locations to meet renewable energy targets and protecting the exceptional quality of our natural environment. These are matters and issues that I am addressing in finalising the SPPS.

As Members will be aware, the SPPS is a radical new approach to preparing regional planning policy. It will result in a shorter, simpler and more strategic policy framework for all users of the planning system. I will shortly bring the final SPPS before the Executive in time for the transfer of planning powers to councils next month.

Returning to the wind energy report, I would like to address some of its recommendations and some of the comments made today. The recommendations set out in the report are wide-ranging and complex, and several will require further examination. However, where appropriate, I have been able to address some of the recommendations in the final SPPS. For example, the Chair of the Committee, Ms Lo, referred to the importance of properly defining how economic considerations are dealt with in determining planning applications. I deal with that in the final SPPS by setting out further detail on how economic considerations can and should be taken into account.

Ms Lo and Mr Boylan also raised the importance of effective community engagement, which also features in the report. I agree wholeheartedly, and it is an essential part of the new reformed planning system. The final SPPS will also advise on those issues, including pre-application community consultation and the minimum requirements to be placed on a prospective applicant in relation to consultation with the community for major and regionally significant applications.

Another issue that was raised is the importance of safeguarding our sensitive landscapes. I will ensure that the final SPPS brings forward a cautious approach to renewable energy developments in designated landscapes.

Other report recommendations can be taken forward through forthcoming renewable energy guidance that I intend to have in place in time for the transfer of planning powers to councils. For example, the guidance will help to address recommendations on community engagement, the liaison between my Department and councils on wind energy development, information to be submitted with renewable energy applications, assessing cumulative impact and the use of appropriate conditions when considering such developments.

As I recognised earlier, there is more work to be done. Further recommendations are likely to require additional research, policy development and public consultation. For example, several Members emphasised the need to review separation distances between wind farms or turbines and occupied properties, both from an amenity and a safety perspective. I agree that that needs further urgent consideration. I, too, was shocked and concerned about the recent collapse of the wind turbine in County Tyrone. I will ensure that any implications for my Department's renewable energy policy are fully addressed.

The Chair of the Committee, along with Lord Morrow and others, raised concerns that are also addressed in the Committee's report about the use of the ETSU-R-97 guidance. While I recognise that ETSU is currently the established UK-wide standard, having read the report and listened to the views expressed today, I am minded to investigate further the use of ETSU in Northern Ireland. I do not think I would go so far as to describe it as idiotic, as Mr Frew did, but it certainly warrants further investigation.

There are, however, recommendations that fall outside the responsibility of my Department and may require consideration by other Departments and bodies. For example, there are recommendations in relation to community benefits, which is an important issue that was highlighted by Lord Morrow. Lord Morrow also raised the issue of the potential for property values to drop as a result of nearby wind energy development. The Committee report recommends that the developer gives consideration to providing compensation where there is clear and compelling evidence of that. While this is outwith the remit of my Department, I support that recommendation.

There were some other interesting points raised by Members throughout the debate. Ms Lo referred to the transfer to councils of planning and responsibility for the vast majority of wind energy applications. We will all be interested to see how councils deal with the metamorphosis that they are undergoing from poacher to gamekeeper and how that might influence some of the very vociferously expressed views that they have had on wind energy to date.

There is more to be done on the economic considerations. I have touched on that and vowed to bring forward more detail on it. A point was also raised about the inadequacies of the current planning policy. Like beauty, inadequacy is in the eye of the beholder. If policy and systems do not give you the outcome that you want, they will be viewed as inadequate.

Mr Wilson: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Durkan: Yes, I will give way.

Mr Wilson: When the Minister is bringing forward recommendations on the economic implications, will he include in those the negative economic impact that wind turbines can have on not only individual households and property values but the cost of electricity in Northern Ireland and the fact that the more of these that go up, the greater the costs to consumers because of the subsidies that have to be paid for them?

Mr Durkan: I thank the Member for his intervention. Anything that I bring forward will be balanced. However, I am not sure that it will reflect the concerns that the Member has expressed there. It will consider them, but it will be balanced, and I am not sure what side it will come down on.

I have acknowledged and do acknowledge that improvements can and should be made to PPS 18. While we have placed a lot of stock in the SPPS, it is more of a vehicle to consolidate existing policy. I have used the opportunity to improve policy in some regards. However, I can give a commitment to the House that this policy and some others that might require further or more serious surgery, shall we say, will be reviewed in full, subsequent to the transfer of planning to councils. Lord Morrow spoke about the four main considerations —

Mr G Robinson: Will the Minister give way?

Mr Durkan: I will see how I get on and maybe let you in during my last minute, thank you.

Lord Morrow spoke of the four major considerations throughout the drawing up of this report. We have touched on safety. There is still a debate about the noise. Is there noise? Is there not noise? How much of an impact might the noise have on individuals? How much of an annoyance might it cause to households? I suppose that it would be difficult to be subjected to a constant drone for hours on end; I am sure that the Speaker could sympathise with that. I have touched on the impact on property values and, indeed, the landscape impact. According to Lord Morrow, people are a bit sceptical. He called for a more strategic approach to dealing with wind energy applications.

Cathal Boylan raised some interesting points as well. Alban Maginness said that we should celebrate and, indeed, exploit the renewable energy sources at our disposal. This will boost not only our environment but our economy. He spoke of the community involvement, as did Mr Agnew, and referred to the project in Slaughtneil, which is a tangible example of how community benefit can and should work.

Mrs Overend, too, made some very interesting points, particularly in expressing the view that this subject causes division and polarises communities. It is strange to have a case where you have not just Nimbyism but "Imbyism". There are people who do not want them in their backyard, and there are others complaining that they are not in their backyard and someone else is getting the economic benefit of hosting a turbine.

Mr Wilson went on his anti-triffid rant, and I would love to ask him what he did in the war against the triffids. [Laughter.]

Mr A Maginness: He survived.

Mr Durkan: He said that he came under fire because the policy was too draconian. The policy has not changed, as he quite rightly pointed out. He was also right in what he said about subjectivity.

I have to correct Mr Maginness on his point about the cumulative impact. The cumulative impact of wind turbines and wind farms is a material consideration when it comes to processing a wind energy application.

Barry McElduff spoke about our meeting yesterday, which was very productive. In some respects, I regret the timing of the report, in that it has come so close to the publication of the SPPS. However, the SPPS is not a catch-all, and we will have the opportunity to address some of the more serious or deep issues through a full review.

One of Mr McElduff's other pet favourites is PPS 21. He spoke about separation distances and the need to increase separation distances for wind turbines, but I do not think that we would have any chance of meeting any separation distances, because he would have a house in every field. He lamented the over-reliance on wind energy and the underutilisation of other renewable sources of energy, so I look forward to his and his party colleagues' support for applications for solar farms and anaerobic digesters as they come forward.

As I said, I welcome the Committee's report into wind energy. Whilst I have only recently seen the report, I am content to consider further and address the Committee's recommendations that fall within my Department's remit, subject to normal due processes.

Mrs Cameron: On behalf of the Committee for the Environment, I support the motion that the Assembly approves the report of the Committee on its inquiry into wind energy in Northern Ireland and calls on the Minister of the Environment to implement the report's recommendations.

The Committee is fully mindful and supportive of the requirement to promote renewable energy and to meet the Executive's Programme for Government target for 2011-15, which includes a commitment to achieve 20% of electricity consumption from renewable sources by 2015. However, the inquiry arose in response to the concerns of local residents who have questioned the way in which that target is being achieved through what they believe to be an over-reliance on wind energy.

The inquiry proved to be an immense piece of work, not just in the scope and volume of evidence that was considered but in the emotive nature of much of that evidence. I believe that the Committee has managed to produce a fair and balanced report, with robust and perhaps challenging recommendations.

Overall, the Committee concluded that the way forward for sustainable as well as renewable energy is one that fully engages those communities that are most closely involved with its production. That is very much reflected in the Committee's recommendations, which call on the Department and wind energy developers to work with communities — to inform, to communicate and to respond — at every level of planning and operation.

I take the opportunity to thank all those who contributed to the debate. Obviously, we first had the Chair, who spoke at length in moving the motion to accept the report. She said that the Committee had received 98 submissions in response to its call for evidence. The Committee also had oral evidence sessions with a range of stakeholders and commissioned the services of a specialist acoustician to assist it with the technical aspects of the inquiry. We also heard that the Committee carried out a fact-finding visit to west Tyrone to see a wind farm development at first hand and to hear from the residents who lived close to the turbines.

The Committee agreed that there was a need for a strategic approach in the siting of wind energy developments. It also considered whether a strategic approach that advocated zoning or the identification of the most appropriate location for wind turbines would be effective. However, as we all know, it was agreed that it is now too late for the introduction of zoning in Northern Ireland as many areas —

Mr Frew: I thank the Member for giving way. Whilst it would be hard to put in a strategic regional scheme or plan, NIE does produce heat maps. If the heat maps were more detailed, they would be able to show developers where the grid is strong and where it is weak. Generators could target those areas and identify whether any of that land was available, instead of what happens now, which is that they go to any available land and try their hand at getting planning permission.

Mrs Cameron: I thank the Member for his intervention. I am sure that the Minister will take those points on board as he looks into the report further.

As I said, in certain places like west Tyrone, the number of operational or planned wind developments has reached saturation point. The Committee identified a clear need for closer liaison between the strategic planning division and councils to ensure a joined-up approach and more cohesive planning for wind farms and individual turbines. The Committee also expressed some concern that the term "economic considerations", which is used in PPS 18 and retained in the draft SPPS, is not clearly defined. The Committee urges the Department to do so.

The Committee found that many submissions to the inquiry focused on perceived inadequacies in the current planning procedures and the cumulative impact of turbines. It recommended that planning applications for connection to the grid be assessed at the same time as turbine applications, which is, I think, a common-sense approach. The Committee believes that the requirement to notify neighbours who occupy buildings on land within 90 metres of the boundary of the application site is inadequate for the latest wind turbines, which may exceed a great height.

The Chair talked about the inquiry's second term of reference, which focused on wind turbine noise and separation distances from dwellings. This was a very emotive part of the inquiry, as many submissions dealt with the adverse impact of perceived noise from wind turbines on respondents' day-to-day lives. It seems that the current guidelines on permissible levels of noise are no longer adequate. The Committee therefore recommended that the Department urgently review the use of the ETSU-R-97 guidelines with a view to adopting more modern and robust guidance for the measurement of wind turbine noise. The Committee also recommended that the Department specify a minimum separation distance between wind turbines and dwellings.

The inquiry's final term of reference, as the Chair informed us, related to the extent of engagement by wind energy providers with communities. Community concerns about visual amenity, noise and health did not always seem to be given due regard. The views of residents need to be listened to, considered and taken into account.

The Committee talked about the mandatory use of the community engagement toolkit and recommended that the level of community benefit be set at government level. It recommended that this be made a condition of planning permission and that a community-benefits register similar to the one in Scotland be set up. That sums up the Chair's remarks.

I will turn now to other Members. Lord Morrow raised concerns about the impacts of wind turbines: the noise, safety, the effect on property values and the detrimental impact on the landscape. He noted that many remain to be convinced of the benefits of wind energy and that there was a mood for a more strategic approach to be taken to planning.

Cathal Boylan was in favour of the recommendations in the report but concerned about the use of reconditioned turbines. He stated that ETSU-R-97 was unfit for purpose and needed to be reviewed. He said that there needs to be more effective engagement with communities.

Alban Maginness said that it was important to note the contribution made by wind energy and that, over time, its cost will decrease. He was impressed by the efforts made by those building wind turbines with the community, and he said that engagement with communities was essential.

Sandra Overend welcomed the report's seeking to bring some clarity to this issue. She said that there is a need for an overarching strategic approach to the siting of turbines. She was concerned about noise pollution and distance from residential properties, and she wanted the Department to improve its methods of measuring noise pollution.

Sammy Wilson said that there was increasing alarm in Northern Ireland about the impact of wind turbines. He also welcomed the report. He stated that planning policy is often influenced by the guidance from the Minister's office. He also welcomed the recommendation that those putting up wind turbines be responsible for ensuring that they meet standards. He said that the guidance on noise levels needed to be updated and stated that the cumulative impact of wind turbines on an area needed to be taken into account.

4.30 pm

Barry McElduff supported the recommendations in the report. He supports the Programme for Government targets but has concerns about the over-reliance on wind energy. He was concerned about separation distances, the cumulative impact of wind turbines and the displacement of jobs and tourism. He also said that the ETSU-R-97 guidelines need to be reviewed.

Steven Agnew welcomed the Committee focus on wind energy. He called for community involvement in projects. He stated that wind energy is the cheapest form of energy production and that the price of wind energy is coming down while other sources of energy are increasing in cost. He also said that there is a need to look strategically at energy production.

David McNarry believes that the planning approval for wind turbines is a rubber-stamping exercise. He said that £140 million has been paid in subsidies to wind energy producers. He said that wind energy is not producing cheaper electricity, and he was concerned about the health implications of wind turbines. He also said that there should be a halt to wind turbine development.

The last contributor was Paul Frew, who welcomed the report. He said that the report addressed only one part of the cost of electricity and that wind power will not help industry. He stated that wind generators are paid the same as gas generators and that wind power generators have to be paid capacity payments. He also said that the cost of generating energy needs to be taken seriously.

In conclusion, I ask the Assembly to approve the report. At this stage, I thank the Minister for his initial response and look forward to a more detailed response in due course. It is also appropriate at this stage to thank the Committee staff for their hard work in the production of the report and for all their help throughout the inquiry, which turned out to be quite a large inquiry, with a great deal of work for the Committee staff. In particular, I thank Sheila Mawhinney, the Committee Clerk, for the tremendous work that she has put into it.

Question put and agreed to.

Resolved:

> That this Assembly approves the report of the Committee for the Environment [NIA 226/11-16] on its Inquiry into Wind Energy in Northern Ireland; and calls on the Minister of the Environment to implement the recommendations contained in the report.

McCreesh Park

Mr Speaker: The Business Committee has agreed to allow up to one hour and 30 minutes for the debate. The proposer of the motion will have 10 minutes to propose and 10 minutes in which to make a winding-up speech. All other Members who are called to speak will have five minutes. Clerk, please read the motion, and the best of luck.

Mr Irwin: I beg to move

> That this Assembly expresses its concern at the decision by Newry and Mourne District Council to approve again the naming of the Patrick Street play park in Newry after convicted IRA terrorist Raymond McCreesh; notes that the vote was taken prior to the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland making a final formal ruling on the matter; further notes the seemingly lethargic approach of the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland in pursuing this case; and calls on the Minister of the Environment to respond to the vote in light of the requirement for councillors to act in a way that promotes good relations by providing a positive example for the wider community to follow and, crucially, acting in the interest of the whole community.

It is with great concern that the motion has been brought before the House today, given that we are in 2015 and, still, we have a local council, albeit in its final days, clinging to an outdated, inappropriate and, in every sense of the word, unacceptable decision. Children represent our future. That is a very clear and obvious statement of fact. Therefore, it should be with that in mind that we consider this important issue.

At the outset, I must ask why a significant section of the elected membership of Newry and Mourne District Council continue, even as recently as last night, to perpetuate a situation that should never have been created in the first place. To name a play facility after a convicted terrorist is, I feel, one of the most ridiculous decisions that has ever been taken by a local council. I took it upon myself to raise a complaint with the Equality Commission back in December 2012 following a decision after review by Newry council to maintain the current park name.

Through various meetings with the commission and correspondence back and forth, it was decided that my complaint would be superseded by the commission's investigation, such was the seriousness with which it viewed the situation. However, a couple of years later, we had a recommendation from the commission to Newry council to review its processes and again consult the public on the play park name. The result of that process has been an astounding repeat of previous form and another two votes by Newry and Mourne District Council in support of retaining the McCreesh park name; the latest was last night, when a proposal to discuss the matter was rejected by Sinn Féin. That beggars belief.

I believe that it shows a complete lack of respect for due process and a disregard for any view or recommendation that the Equality Commission may bring forward. Indeed, on that point, I feel that the Equality Commission must respond to the arrogant attitude displayed, chiefly by Sinn Féin councillors in Newry but, it has to be said, no less assisted by the acquiescent nature of the SDLP councillor grouping there. Sadly, all the SDLP councillors, except one, failed to show up last month on the night of the vote, even though they had proposed that the issue should be considered. By their actions, therefore, they failed to carry through the wishes of their party leader in repairing the hurt that he is on record as saying was unwittingly caused.

I remain very concerned that, in this day and age, the Equality Commission has acknowledged that clear breach of section 75, and it appears toothless to challenge that persistent wrong. The flip side of that debate is, of course, the commission's almost speed-of-light approach to dealing with the owners of the Christian bakery over an iced cake. It really does stand in stark contrast. The two issues could not stand more opposed to each other in seriousness and gravity, yet one has been very publicly held aloft and pursued with every available weapon in the arsenal of the Equality Commission, whilst the other trudges along with no apparent urgency at all.

At the core remains the fact that, in Newry city, there is a play facility for kids named after a member of an illegal terrorist organisation — indeed, a convicted terrorist — that conducted a reign of terror, destruction, murder and bloodshed on the people of Northern Ireland. The rifle that McCreesh was found to possess was used in the slaughter of 10 innocent men at Kingsmills — a night that lives on vividly in the hearts and minds of many of us, especially the families affected by that atrocity. It is untenable to think that, only a few miles down the road from Kingsmills, we have a kids' playground named in memory of McCreesh.

I must criticise the Equality Commission because I believe that it is failing to deal with the issue effectively, given the depth of feeling that exists. The situation must change immediately. I challenge the commission to conclude its process and issue its judgement in this case. How can an iced cake end up in the courts and a terrorist-named play facility simply amble along with no clearly defined end in sight? That is what my constituents ask me daily, and that demands an answer from the Equality Commission.

I believe that the SDLP has now seen the error of its way in supporting the naming of the play park and is now publicly repositioning itself — and not before time. However, Sinn Féin predictably remains unmoved and uncaring in every sense of the words towards the wider community, unionist and moderate nationalist, who reject the naming debacle outright.

Local councillor colleagues who have been engaged in setting up the new councils tell me of the importance of the new councillor code of conduct. I understand that many hours of training have been undertaken to ensure that the elected representatives who sit on the 11 councils are fully aware of their responsibilities and the rules governing their participation in local government. That document contains lengthy direction on behaviour and responsibilities and what is acceptable and unacceptable when carrying out council business, and it will be rigorously monitored and enforced, with many councils implementing audio recording of meetings. I do not find any defence in that code of conduct for the actions of those Newry and Mourne councillors who proposed, and who have voted on a number of occasions, to maintain naming the park after Raymond McCreesh.

Indeed, it flies in the face of the code of conduct. Did Newry and Mourne council promote good relations and provide a positive example to the wider community by doing what it did? Absolutely not. Did it act with the whole community in mind when it made this decision? No, it did not: just ask the minority unionist community in Newry and Mourne, who suffered at the hands of people like Raymond McCreesh.

I ask that Mark Durkan MLA, as Minister with responsibility for local government, address the House today and leave the Northern Ireland rate-paying and voting public in absolutely no doubt as to the aims and objectives of the 'Code of Conduct for Councillors'. I ask him for his comments on the actions of his council colleagues in the SDLP in Newry and Mourne council. I must say that it is poor on the SDLP's part that it was, in fact, that party that asked for the naming of the park to be discussed last month, yet it did not show up for the vote. That must be explained by Mr McDonnell as leader of the SDLP. I want an assurance in the Chamber from the SDLP leader that this matter will be revisited and put right, as anyone with a shred of conscience and credibility would rush to do, given the age in which we live, where, across the world, terrorism rains havoc and brings abject sorrow to hundreds of thousands of people.

I conclude by saying this: Sinn Féin has been very vocal recently in calling for equality. In fact, it tells us that equality is going to be used as a "Trojan horse" to break the DUP and unionism generally. I give Sinn Féin members one small piece of advice: if, by causing outrage in the unionist community, Sinn Féin believes that the republican Trojan horse equality agenda has been advanced one iota, sadly, it is very much mistaken. The decision by Newry and Mourne council to name a play park after a convicted terrorist has only served to reinforce the view of many unionists that pan-nationalism is alive and well. Nothing less is expected from the apologists for terror, Sinn Féin. Shame, however, on the SDLP.

Ms Fearon: Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. At the outset, I want to send my solidarity to the McCreesh family, who are in our thoughts at this time, and who continue to be held in huge reverence in our area. I also want to sympathise with all victims of the conflict and express solidarity with them.

In 2011, more than 30,000 people gathered in south Armagh to honour the memory of Raymond McCreesh and his nine comrades who died on hunger strike in 1981. It is not just in Newry and Armagh that they are recognised but around the world. When Raymond's comrade Bobby Sands died on hunger strike, national Parliaments across the world stood in silence. Streets were named in their honour, as a genuinely historic chapter in world politics was written. Indeed, Nelson Mandela and his fellow political prisoners on Robben Island drew strength from Raymond and his comrades in their fight for justice. The late Cardinal Tomás Ó Fiaich said:

> "Raymond McCreesh was captured bearing arms at the age of 19 and sentenced to 14 years' imprisonment. I have no doubt that he would have never seen the inside of a jail but for the abnormal political situation. Who is entitled to label him a murderer or a suicide?"

Cardinal O'Fiaich was alluding to the fact that Raymond McCreesh had the misfortune to be born into one of the most heavily militarised areas anywhere in the world, to be born into the Orange state, one-party rule and institutional discrimination. He was, effectively, born into the belly of the beast where the worst excesses of partition were visible daily. Faced with the watchtowers, faced with the British Army patrols and faced with British brutality, Raymond, like generations of Irish republicans before him, decided to face down those conditions.

Raymond was my age when he gave his life on hunger strike. He was just an ordinary young man. It is because of the sacrifice of people like Raymond McCreesh that I was fortunate to be born into an entirely different political dispensation. My generation of young republicans is separated from him only by time. Had Raymond been born when I was, I have no doubt that he would be standing in this Chamber.

Where does the SDLP draw the line between the good old IRA and the so-called bad IRA? The SDLP's position seems to be that nobody who was involved in the conflict should have anything named after them. Beside McCreesh Park is Michael Mallin Park; next to it is James Connolly Park; and across the way is John Martin Gardens. Does the SDLP suggest that we now start to rename those? Does the SDLP now distance itself from the 1916 leaders? Will SDLP members attend centenary events for the men and women who took up arms against the same oppressive regime? I can tell you this: south Armagh was a lot more peaceful in 1916 than it was in the 1970s.

Danny Kennedy has been one of the most vociferous on this issue, and it is my understanding that he was at the council meeting when the original naming took place. Why was it not a problem in 2002? It was not an issue for Danny Kennedy, any UUP councillor, or any DUP councillor for that matter, for six or seven years until the Orange Order made it one. This is nothing more than a cheap stunt. This electioneering and exploitation on the back of victims and their families is nothing short of a disgrace and should be condemned from all corners. Every single morning that I walk into this Building, I am faced with a 7-foot statue of James Craig, the man who brought the gun into Irish politics by establishing a paramilitary force to defy the democratic will of the people;—

4.45 pm

Mr McCausland: Will the Member give way?

Ms Fearon: No.

— the man who boasted of a Protestant parliament for a Protestant people, and the man who built the Orange state brick by brick. Raymond McCreesh played his part in smashing that state, and I think that that is a life worth remembering.

Mr McNarry: You are brainwashed. You are a disgrace.

Mr Speaker: Order.

Mr McNarry: You are brainwashed. You are brainwashed. Brainwashed.

Mr Speaker: Order.

Mr McNarry: Why do you not call her to order, Mr Speaker, for that kind of speech?

Mr Speaker: Order. Order. This is a very emotive issue. Obviously, this is a touchstone issue for many Members in the Chamber. Bear this in mind: it is a touchstone issue for many people in our community, so the behaviour of Members here in how they conduct this debate is critical in my view. I remind all Members of that. Let us have a debate. Let us say what has to be said, and then let us make a decision, but let us not be unmindful of the consequences of people losing the rag and losing the head with one another in this discussion, because it does impact on the wider community. I say that to all Members with respect.

Dr McDonnell: I am very glad to be able to speak on the motion. I believe that it focuses primarily on the controversy surrounding the McCreesh play park in Newry, but the issues involved extend far beyond that.

We believe that today's debate is as much about reconciliation in our society as it is about anything else. It is about this Assembly and about the Northern Ireland Executive and how we conduct ourselves, how we advance healing and actively promote reconciliation in a traumatised and post-conflict society. Quite frankly, it is about whether we care about the others or whether we just want to pay lip service to reconciliation.

The absence of violence alone is by no means an indication of peace. My party, the SDLP, fully recognises the hurt, pain and distress that this issue and similar issues can cause however and wherever they present themselves. Pain has no politics, no religion, no shape and no form. We all suffer pain, and we all bleed when we are cut.

The naming of public spaces after individuals or groups involved in state or paramilitary violence can cause, and is often intended to cause, so much further hurt and distress to victims and survivors and their families. It becomes yet another barrier for us to overcome in dealing with the past, and the reconciliation of the past in our society is a core principle of the SDLP, against which we measure what we do and what we say. It is for this reason that the SDLP believes that violence must not be endorsed or glorified, even retrospectively. It is for this reason that the SDLP believes that no public space should be named after any person involved in state or paramilitary violence. It is imperative that, if we are to put conflict behind us and advance together as a shared society, we face up to that.

We regret the pain that this issue has caused to all victims and survivors, and we also recognise the hurt experienced by the McCreesh family. They too are victims; they lost a son, a valued son. This protracted situation will have caused them immense pain, and we do not want in any way to add to that pain. Party politics are being played out around these issues, and they are used continually to open wounds, wounds that we should all be working to repair. We need to move in our society into a situation where we actively promote reconciliation, and that will not be achieved in any shape or form by glorying in violence or by being selective about some violence.

I want to mention our previous speaker's speech, which somebody had obviously written for her. I draw attention to the fact —

Mr G Kelly: Will the Member give way?

Dr McDonnell: No. I want to draw attention to the fact that —

Ms Fearon: Will the Member give way?

Dr McDonnell: — no matter how much —

Ms Ruane: On a point of order, Mr Speaker. Is it appropriate for the Member to be disparaging towards the previous speaker in the way that he was? Does he think that she is not capable of writing her own speech? We will discuss gender equality in the Chamber on Monday, and I ask the Member to take that back.

Mr Speaker: I regard the comments as part of the cut and thrust of debate. I am quite confident that Mr McDonnell does not actually know who wrote the speech. Because I know the contributor, I am prepared to accept that it is her own work.

I do not think that that was a point of order. I am certain that other comments will be passed before the debate is finished, but, if people stay within the confines of good order and good temper, we can deal with this delicate and sensitive matter in a way that does not make the situation worse.

Dr McDonnell: I would just like to draw attention to the fact that the previous speaker is no Maud Gonne or Countess Markievicz. Any reference to [Interruption.] Michael Mallin or James Connolly is totally inappropriate. This situation — [Interruption.] It is obvious that the level of —

Mr Flanagan: On a point of order, Mr Speaker. Is there any chance of getting this clock started, because I do not want to listen to him all day?

Mr Speaker: Behave yourselves. Stop going on like schoolchildren. What does that have to do with what I am only after advising the House about? I am not going to put up with that nonsense. Please make your contribution. The rest of you, please listen. If you want to make a contribution, put your name down, and I will call you, time permitting, OK?

Dr McDonnell: It is difficult, Mr Speaker, but anyway. We need to move to a situation where we can actively promote honesty and reconciliation. That will not be achieved by glorifying violence of any sort. We cannot be half in, half out, half up or half down.

Last night, at the final meeting of Newry and Mourne District Council, every SDLP councillor voted to suspend standing orders to accommodate a full, open and honest discussion. Our councillors and the party as a whole are extremely disappointed that the opportunity did not materialise. That signifies that we have got only halfway towards democracy and that, in fact, some people do not want to be engaged in honest debate.

I hope that, if the primary vote had passed, our councillors would have voted to change the name of the park. In fact, they have already made that clear. I have no doubt that incoming SDLP councillors on the new council will seize the opportunity to do just that. The situation desperately needs respectful and open discussion that is free from cheap political point scoring —

Mr Speaker: The Member's time is up.

Dr McDonnell: — and jockeying for political advantage.

Mr Speaker: The Member's time is up.

Mr Kennedy: I welcome the opportunity to contribute to this important debate, and I thank the sponsors for tabling it. The issue has been the subject of much debate and controversy not just today but for years. Let me take the opportunity to put the record straight, because some people are clearly trying to play political memory games. I was desperately depressed by Megan Fearon's grossly offensive and factually incorrect contribution in the Chamber this afternoon. I have consistently and vehemently opposed the naming of the play park after the convicted terrorist Raymond McCreesh since it was first proposed. I did so as a member of Newry and Mourne District Council, and I have continually and consistently voiced my opposition as a Member of this House. My reasons for that are straightforward and easily understood: it is just plain wrong. It is deeply offensive to me, it is deeply offensive to my community, and I believe that it is deeply offensive to the vast majority of people not just in Newry and Mourne but much further afield.

People use the expression "democracy" or "democratic" to elicit feelings of freedom and fairness in the same way as they use "majority rule" to elicit feelings of subjugation and domination. In many countries and jurisdictions, people rightly feel comfortable with both, and there is no doubt that that is our long-term objective as a regional Government and regional Assembly. I accept that, in the context of Northern Ireland, many people would be uncomfortable with simple majority government in the Assembly at this time, and I accept that, in the context of Northern Ireland, many people want to see consensus-building at the centre of politics and decision-making, but I am not prepared to accept that the people who argue for power-sharing and consensus-building in this place are supporting and taking decisions in local councils that are divisive, work against community cohesion, run contrary to equality assessments and are calculated deliberately to insult the victims of terrorism. I am not prepared to accept their clear agenda of subjugation and domination of minority communities in councils that they control.

Raymond McCreesh and the like will never be anything other than terrorists, no matter how many times the revisionists try to launder his reputation. Kingsmills and the other terrorist atrocities committed in my constituency over many years will never be anything other than acts of terrorism and genocide. Just as there is absolutely nothing to celebrate in those dreadful acts, there is nothing to celebrate about the people responsible for them. I appeal to those who support retaining the name "McCreesh Park" to think again, just as I have appealed to them over many years from when I opposed this naming in the council to my opposition to the naming in the Assembly today. I appeal to them to think again and to find their conscience, because Northern Ireland cannot move forward when shared public space is named after those linked to or responsible for terrorist atrocities such as Kingsmills. I read an article by a Mr Jude Collins —

Mr McElduff: Will the Member give way?

Mr Kennedy: I will give way.

Mr McElduff: I just want to explain to the House that I have had sight of the HET report on the Kingsmills incident — the murders. Several suspects are named in that document. Raymond McCreesh is not named in that document — 106 pages — as a suspect in relation to the Kingsmills murders. I want to put that on the public record.

Mr Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr Kennedy: In spite of what the Member says, there is clear linkage through ballistics that link Raymond McCreesh to weaponry used in the Kingsmills massacre, and that is a fact.

Now, I read an article by a Mr Jude Collins, political commentator and blogger, on this issue, published online yesterday. On Kingsmills, Mr Collins wrote:

> "Whether McCreesh himself was present at the killing of the workers no one knows."

That is not true. The other killers know, the people who helped them know and the people who covered for them know. Collins went on to write:

> "Raymond McCreesh is honoured, not for his IRA activities but for his courage and conviction that resulted in his death on hunger-strike."

Again, that is simply not true. Raymond McCreesh was only in a position to go on hunger strike because he was a dedicated and convicted terrorist. There is nothing to celebrate in that, and there is no courage in that.

I find it depressing that in Northern Ireland in 2015 it is necessary that my party colleague, Tom Elliott, should have to bring forward a private Member's Bill to deal with this. We should have moved forward much sooner on this for the sake of progress for our community, but because of the regressive attitudes of some —

Mr Speaker: The Member's time is almost up.

Mr Kennedy: — he does, and I fully support him in so doing.

5.00 pm

Mr Lunn: I have listened with interest so far, and I do not detect very much common ground, which is hardly a surprise. From the republican side, the impression given of Raymond McCreesh is that he was, as Conor Murphy said this morning, a man of integrity, a principled freedom fighter who died on hunger strike rather than die as a political prisoner. That is the republican line. To the other side, Raymond McCreesh was a convicted terrorist who was caught in possession of a gun that was used in connection with the Kingsmills massacre just down the road from where he lived. Ten innocent Protestant people were killed. That was not an act of war or something to further the republican cause; it was just straightforward cold-blooded murder. I do not know if he was directly involved in that or not, but there is a connection between the gun and the massacre that we can hardly deny. I hear Mr McElduff's comment that he is not named in the HET report. I suspect that there are plenty of people, perhaps not too far from here, who would be able to tell us if he was involved in the Kingsmills massacre or not. The republican movement could certainly tell us, but I doubt that it ever will. I know that starving yourself to death is regarded as a huge sacrifice by the republican movement. To me, it is just a complete waste of a life. I will leave it at that.

From the victims' side, if you had lost a relative in the Kingsmills massacre, how could you think of Raymond McCreesh as anything but a terrorist? You would have to assume the worst about him. Whether or not he was involved at Kingsmills, there is a direct relationship. Can you not imagine the hurt that lingers amongst the Protestant population in that area? For that reason, I will say, before somebody challenges me, that we will support the motion today.

I want to ask the republicans a question: would this man be as revered as he is in the republican movement — he is obviously seen as a hero — if he had confessed to the murder of 10 innocent Protestants who were non-combatants? Would that be a plus point or a minus point for him? If anybody wants to answer that, I will give way.

Mr G Kelly: Will the Member give way?

Mr Lunn: Yes.

Mr G Kelly: I have a question for the Member: does he believe that, for instance, Nelson Mandela — [Interruption.] Yes, Nelson Mandela. Can I ask my question? Does he believe that he was a terrorist and therefore should not be revered in life and in death for all that he did? Can he explain the difference that he would make there? All this, including the Bill that is being brought forward by Tom Elliott, is based around this conviction for terrorism. Does he think that James Connolly should be treated as a terrorist in our history?

Mr Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr Lunn: We could argue all day about the definition of a terrorist. I heard 'The Stephen Nolan Show' this morning. I do not usually listen to it, but I did this morning. He was challenging people to define a terrorist. Whether Nelson Mandela was a terrorist or otherwise, you have to say that, in his later life, he at least atoned for it in a way that perhaps nobody in history ever did. I will not go into the Nelson Mandela argument, if you do not mind.

I want to talk quickly about the Equality Commission's position in all this. Frankly, words fail me. The Equality Commission was first involved in this in February 2008; it is now March 2015. It became involved seven years ago. I do not need to repeat Mr Irwin's comment about the cake. The motion refers to the Equality Commission as "lethargic"; I think that you are too kind to it. This is inactivity on a grand scale, and it is high time that it got its act together and did something about this formally. It has the powers, so why not use them?

As far as the actions of Newry and Mourne council are concerned, it is fair to say that, as the majority party, I believe, in 2001, the SDLP sided with the decision to endorse the naming of the park because it was not its idea in the first place. It has taken the SDLP 14 years to do what it did last night. I congratulate them on what they did last night. Sometimes, some journeys take a bit longer than others, and, on this one, you have come to the right decision at the last. That is good.

We all know that the council has this responsibility under section 75. The equality and good relations responsibilities of councils and public bodies are very well laid out. I really hope that Newry, Mourne and Down council, where the balance of the electorate may have changed slightly, will be able to do something about this early in its life. We are just talking about doing the right thing. You can argue about the history and the rights and wrongs of it, but there is no doubt that the right thing to do is to rename the park something less contentious. It is odious thing to name a children's play park after a convicted terrorist; it is just not right. We support the motion.

Mr Humphrey: This brings absolutely no credit to Northern Ireland. There is an old adage "Fool me once, shame on you; fool me twice, shame on me". The SDLP leader, Dr McDonnell, said that his councillors in Newry and Mourne were wrong to name a children's play park after an IRA terrorist: I welcome that. However, the difficulty is that actions speak louder than words. I hope that last night's change of heart by the party will not prove to be too late.

Mr McDonnell told the 'Belfast Telegraph':

> "Sometimes these things take a little bit of time to sort out."

As Mr Lunn has rightly said, 14 years after the SDLP supported it initially, it is still not sorted out. That is a strange comment to make when his party voted for this in 2012. The SDLP tells us that its policy is to oppose the naming of public spaces after military or paramilitary individuals. There is only one remedy: remove this odious decision and rename the park.

Initially, the SDLP excuse for eight councillors not turning up was that the party thought that the matter was to be deferred: not so. The 'News Letter' revealed on Thursday 26 February that the SDLP could not have been caught out by the importance or lack of importance of the meeting or its status for decision-making because the SDLP requested the meeting and the minutes of a staff and policy equality committee meeting of the council on Monday 19 January record that Councillor Carr of the SDLP proposed and Councillor McArdle of the SDLP seconded a proposal that the council arrange a special meeting of the said committee with full plenary powers. It gave them one week to 10 days to discuss the consultation.

Mrs McKevitt: I thank the Member for giving way. You mentioned a period of 10 days. It was not held within 10 days; otherwise, all our SDLP members would have been available on the date.

Mr Humphrey: Given the import of the decision, the embarrassment it has caused your party and what your leader has said about the issue, I would have made sure, if I was leader of the party or the group, that my councillors were there.

Perhaps the SDLP leader should clarify what he is reported to have said in the 'News Letter' on Monday 23 February:

> "I will be doing all I can, and applying all the pressures ... nobody's in a position to guarantee anything."

That is an absolutely pathetic statement for a party leader to make on the issue. If the leader of the party is in a position to guarantee anything, it is an appalling decision. We have to assume, therefore, that either the SDLP cares nothing for community relations and the sensitivities of victims or that it agrees with one of its councillors, Councillor Kate Loughran, who said that she:

> "would know the McCreesh family personally and they would actually be very good friends of mine ... They had a lot of suffering down through the years ... Basically, I just think the issue should be closed and let the family move on."

> "I believe there is a direct correlation between the idea of Raymond's comrade, Bobby Sands, who said, 'let our revenge be the laughter of our children', and the naming of this park."

Councillor Loughran believed, therefore, that it was entirely appropriate to name a play park after a convicted IRA terrorist. That is surely wrong in the eyes of all right-thinking people.

The decision is odious, wrong and disgusting, and it needs to be changed. It is time for the SDLP to undo this appalling decision, as they should have done in 2012. Failure to do so endorses Councillor Loughran's position and is further evidence that the party has lost its moral compass. It has shamefully campaigned to have dissident terrorists moved from prison. The party gives no credence to the fears, concerns and hurt of victims in Northern Ireland. That is how it looks to people on this side of the Chamber and to the people we represent. Honeyed words in TV and radio interviews or in the columns of newspapers are one thing; actions to remedy the situation are another. Admit that you got it wrong, and, when you have admitted that you got it wrong, do something to put the situation right.

I genuinely hope that, in the interests of community relations in the city of Newry and across Northern Ireland, the new council will take action to prevent this happening again. When I read reports of the potential actions of SDLP and Sinn Féin councillors on the new councils — an Irish-first policy in Newry and Mourne, an Irish-first policy in Mid Ulster and a refusal to allow poppies to be sold in Mid Ulster — I am not convinced that the SDLP is not a hostage to fortune and will not do whatever the Shinners ask it to do at the end of the day.

I welcome and support the motion, and I commend my colleague Mr Irwin for tabling it.

Mr Brady: Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. I oppose the motion. As far as my party and I are concerned, Raymond McCreesh was not, is not and never will be a terrorist or criminal. I want to put that on the record.

I was born literally within yards of the play park. I come from the very proud, caring and tolerant Ballybot community that has been vilified by people who should know better. It is a close-knit community that accepts people into it. It is tolerant and caring. I watched in astonishment last night as the SDLP group leader, in his mealy-mouthed fashion, expressed concern for the McCreesh family after giving them dogs' abuse over the past God knows how long. It is about time that they caught themselves on. Why do you not just merge with the Ulster Unionists? You could elect Tom Elliott as your leader and support his Bill. You would not need any excuses. You certainly jumped to Mr Allister's dance —

Mr Speaker: I ask you to direct your remarks through the Chair, please.

Mr Brady: — on the SpAd Bill. Just get over it and get on with it. You have been all over the place on anything that has happened recently.

I will put into context what else happened with the play park — [Interruption.] I hear Mrs Kelly laughing.

Mrs D Kelly: Will the Member give way?

Mr Brady: No, the Member will not give way to somebody — [Interruption.] — who went on a rant against Sinn Féin yesterday —

Mr Speaker: Order. Resume your seat for a second. All remarks must be made through the Chair. If the Member does not wish to give way, Members should respect that.

This will get to the point where I have to make a very direct intervention. I am seeking to facilitate the debate. There is no purpose whatsoever in allowing our tempers to get away with us. If all remarks are made through the Chair, everyone else will be able to hear the contributions and make their own judgement.

Mr Brady: Apologies, a Cheann Comhairle, but I will not take an intervention from a lady who went on a rant against Sinn Féin yesterday and could not even express concern for someone who was seriously injured in south Armagh.

Mr Maskey: Will the Member give way?

Mr Brady: The Member will give way

Mr Maskey: I thank the Member, because I know that he has very important points to make. Does the Member agree that it is probably very difficult for the SDLP, not that I have any great sympathy, given that its membership is clearly divided on the issue? Not that long ago, when Patsy McCreesh, Raymond's brother, tragically died, I understand that Mr Bradley, when giving his condolences, referred to the McCreesh family as a highly respected family. It is difficult for the SDLP to square the circle, particularly when those who aspire to be leaders — it does not actually have a leadership — are obviously politically spineless.

Mr Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr Brady: The council-maintained play facility did not have a name before. I reiterate that: as I said, I grew up within spitting distance of it, and it never had a name. It is a play facility in the Barcroft/Ballybot area of Newry. The name of Raymond McCreesh Park came from within that community in 2001 on the twentieth anniversary of his death. Evidence of support for the proposition in the form of a community survey was presented to the council. The council, in accordance with its policy at that time, conducted its own survey and found 84% support in the Barcroft/Ballybot community for the naming of the play park after Raymond McCreesh, a resident of the council district, who died on hunger strike in 1981.

5.15 pm

In 2001, the council agreed to the naming of the play park and erected its own bilingual signs. No complaint regarding the decision was received by the council between 2001 and 2008, which is a significant factor in the consideration of the issue. I am sure that Mr Kennedy objected vehemently to it, but it took seven years for the Orange Order to come to the conclusion that it objected to Raymond McCreesh Park and that it was some sort of anathema to them. It ill behoves people to make excuses now and turn round and say —

Mr Kennedy: I am grateful to the Member for giving way. I remind him of an important commandment from scripture:

> "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour."

Mr Brady: I thank Mr Kennedy for that lesson in scripture, but I was not accusing him of bearing false witness. I said that it took from 2001 to 2008 for an objection to be lodged with the council. As far as Sinn Féin is concerned, our position on this issue has been consistent. We and the vast majority of people from the area believe that the name of Raymond McCreesh Park should remain unchanged. I reiterate that the park was named in 2001 under the tutelage of a council dominated by unionists and the SDLP.

Mr Kennedy: It was never dominated by unionists.

Mr Brady: Council procedure was fully followed, and surveys taken by the council indicated clear support for naming the park after Raymond McCreesh.

Mr Kennedy: Will the Member give way?

Mr Brady: No, I will not. I want to finish, and I have a few things to say.

In the seven-year period from the naming of the park in 2001 until 2008, no unionist councillors, SDLP councillors or members of the public raised any concerns or complaints about the decision.

Mr Kennedy: On a point of order, Mr Speaker. Is it right that a Member should deliberately mislead the House by pretending that unionists have ever dominated Newry and Mourne District Council since 1973 and reorganisation, when, at the time, it represented five out of 30 of the membership?

Mr Speaker: The Member has succeeded in getting it on the record. It is not a point of order for this debate.

Mr Brady: What I actually said was that the park was named in 2001 under the tutelage of a council dominated by unionists and the SDLP.

Mr Kennedy: Never.

Mr Brady: Well, we are all entitled to our opinion.

After it was made, the complaint was investigated by the council which, after much deliberation, found that the name should be retained. Since then, there has been a very focused and nasty campaign to demonise the area and its community.

The Equality Commission believes that the council may have failed to comply with its undertaking, at paragraph 1.3 of its equality scheme, to discharge its statutory duties as set out in paragraphs 1.1 and 1.2. We have asked for the evidence that brought the Equality Commission to that view, and we are still waiting for it. It has not come back to us. Whatever the Equality Commission has or has not done, it has not answered the relevant and pertinent questions.

Mr Wilson: I started the debate listening to the comments of the Sinn Féin Member and getting angrier and angrier, but, as we got towards the end of her speech, my anger was replaced by sadness. Sinn Féin has deliberately chosen the youngest Member of the Assembly to lead on an issue in a way that must bring great worry to the whole of this society. As I listened to her, I thought of the three wee girls who paddled their way through Heathrow to go and join IS in Syria because their minds had been so poisoned that they could not see beyond the propaganda of IS to the beheadings, the bloody streets, the crucifixions, the hurt and the destruction that they were causing.

As I listened to the first Member from Sinn Féin to speak, that is exactly what I thought. I can understand Mickey Brady, steeped in bigotry, having come through all that we have come through in Northern Ireland, but how could someone born after the Troubles had started to peter out have a mind so poisoned that she could come off with the stuff that she has come off with today?

People will say, "Are you any different?" I lived through it as well, and I carry the baggage. I accept that, but for someone so young, who has not come through it all, to be so steeped in the kind of stuff that we have heard must bring great sadness to people who listen to this debate.

Mr Maskey: Will the Member give way?

Mr Wilson: No, I will not give way.

Outside Northern Ireland, people look upon this with bemusement and horror. I remember the first time that I raised it in the House of Commons and MPs came up to me after and said, "What? A play park named after a terrorist who committed suicide, poisoning the minds of the next generation in Northern Ireland". That is how it is seen outside here. Beyond the closed minds of Sinn Féin, people regard it as some kind of horror. How could grown people want to poison and pollute the minds of young people by naming a play park, which is meant to be a place of fun rather than a place of propaganda, in a council area?

I suppose that we should not be surprised at Sinn Féin, but we do have to be surprised at the SDLP. I admit that, Lot-like, the SDLP has been dragged out of the political cesspit that is now Newry and Mourne Council. Of course, everything that Sinn Féin touch, they pollute, and, unfortunately, everybody who is touched by them gets polluted in one way or another as well. I am glad to see that the SDLP, rather belatedly, have allowed themselves to be dragged out of it, although I have to note that, despite what the leader of the SDLP said, this is what one of the SDLP members used to justify their position: they believed that the naming of the park was a healing process — a healing process — and a compromise. How on earth do they ever see that as a healing process?

We are not going to resolve this issue today in this forum, but one thing that worries me is that, over the next number of months, we are meant to address the issues of the past. If this is Sinn Féin's way of addressing the past, I do not think that we have any chance of putting the past behind us, because they want to put the poison and pollution of the past into the minds of the future generation so that it will be carried out. That is the message that we get from the decision of Newry and Mourne Council last night.

Mr McCartney: Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. I wish to begin by extending solidarity to the family of Raymond McCreesh. I am very conscious that, in debates like this, some people tend to ignore or disregard his family, their feelings and their loss. I certainly have no desire in this debate, or hopefully in any debate, to add to the grief of any family that bears a loss.

Mr Sheehan: Will the Member give way?

Mr McCartney: I will, yes.

Mr Sheehan: The Member, like me, knew Raymond McCreesh; we knew him to be a man of honour, integrity and immense courage. Do you, like me, believe that many of the comments made in the Chamber today have been gratuitously offensive? Would you also agree with me that no one in this Chamber today will succeed in criminalising Raymond McCreesh? Margaret Thatcher was not able to do it in 1981, and no one here will be able to do it either.

Mr Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr McCartney: Thank you very much, a Cheann Comhairle. I totally and absolutely agree, and I think that any person who knew Raymond McCreesh would know that some of the comments are very offensive.

I have no inclination to indulge myself in pointing out the very obvious contradictions that surround this type of subject. That said, there are some things that need to be said to give this debate some context. Raymond McCreesh died on 21 May 1981 after 61 days on hunger strike. The hunger strike was the culmination of a five-year campaign to defeat the British Government's policy of criminalisation. Central to that campaign was the National H-Block/Armagh movement, which garnered the support of thousands and thousands of people throughout Ireland and beyond. Not all of them were republicans and nationalists; indeed, many of them opposed the use of arms. However, all of them were united in recognising that those imprisoned at that time in Long Kesh, Armagh and Crumlin Road Gaol were political prisoners. They recognised that the conflict that was raging on our streets required a political solution to bring it to an end. The hunger strike dismantled the policy of criminalisation. The recognition in the release of political prisoners in 1998 under the terms of the Good Friday Agreement and all subsequent agreements is the obvious validation that criminalisation failed.

The courage and resolve of Raymond McCreesh and his nine comrades is held in the highest regard in the republican and nationalist community. Indeed, I have heard many others acknowledge their courage and integrity without endorsing their political philosophy. So people cannot and should not be surprised that this manifests itself in places, organisations and events being named and held in their memory. No one should expect us, their friends and comrades, to apologise for doing that. Perhaps, today, some people could ask of themselves, quietly and without the need for a spoken reply, why this is so. Why is it that 94% of the people surveyed all approved that the park should be in Raymond's name? Why was it that 30,493 people voted to make Bobby Sands their MP? Why was it that hundreds of thousands attended their funerals? To the SDLP, I ask: why was it that so many of your councillors did not turn up for the council meeting and the one who did abstained from the vote?

I accept that no one will change their opinion, but it should make you realise that your view of the world is not one shared by all. I certainly accept that my view of the world is not one shared by everyone. In accepting this, I have to play my part in ensuring that we live in a place where different and, indeed, competing views have the space to coexist. That is a challenge we all face, and it is one that we cannot pretend does not exist. Denial or manufactured moral superiority will not make it disappear. Private Member's Bills to ascertain who bangs the drum the loudest will not make it disappear.

The songwriter Mick Hanly could not have known that this debate was about to take place today, but he certainly knew that it is a debate that takes place over and over again in different places at different times. He penned the words:

"The terrorist or the dreamer the savage or the brave?

It depends whose vote you're trying to catch

Whose face you're trying to save".

From where I got my life experience, I reflect on Bloody Sunday and on who were the savage and who were the brave? I reflect on the British state and its allies, who glorified, protected and decorated those who did it. From that day until this day, I will take no lectures on whom I consider the brave. Raymond McCreesh was unbowed and unbroken, and we will be unbowed and unbroken in upholding his memory.

Some Members: Hear, hear.

Mr D Bradley: Go raibh míle maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. I will say at the outset that the history of the DUP contains many examples of that party, to put it mildly, brushing shoulders with loyalist paramilitaries. I could easily document here today a number of those examples, but I do not want the debate to descend totally into a tit-for-tat argument. The DUP is in no position to lecture anyone in that respect. What they should do is remove the plank from their own eye before they point fingers in this direction.

5.30 pm

Mrs D Kelly: I am grateful to the Member for giving way. You know that the party never wants to engage in whataboutery — [Interruption.]

Mr Speaker: Order.

Mrs D Kelly: — but I want to draw your attention to the fact that, on Craigavon Borough Council, the Ulster Unionist Party and the DUP, some of whom are Members of the House, voted to allow the Fulton family to put a summer seat and a plaque in the garden at Seagoe Cemetery in Portadown, where some of the victims of 'Swinger' Fulton lie.

Mr Speaker: The Member has an extra minute.

Mr D Bradley: I thank the Member for that intervention.

I must say that a wry smile crossed my lips when I heard Mr Brady vilify the SDLP. When Mr Brady was a welfare rights officer in Newry, he had no problem whatsoever in referring people who he could not help to Seamus Mallon's office, but perhaps he was more closely aligned to the Worker's Party at that time. Obviously, a conversion has taken place along the way. [Interruption.] Yes, Mr Speaker, there is no doubt that the naming of a public space, especially a children's park, has caused considerable hurt to victims and survivors from the unionist and nationalist communities. We need, on all sides, to be mindful of the effects that such actions have on the whole community.

Mr Brady: On a point of order, Mr Speaker. Mr Bradley made personal references that I absolutely refute. In 1986, when the Welfare Rights Centre in Newry was looking for funding, the DUP, Sinn Féin and independents all gave their support. I have a recorded vote to show that the SDLP refused. [Interruption.]

Mr Speaker: First of all, it is not a point of order, but you have succeeded in putting those comments on the record. I am sure that they have been noted by Hansard.

Mr D Bradley: Mr Brady's intervention, of course, in no way refuted anything that I said.

As I said, any public facility should be potentially open to all citizens from across the council area. It is important that we do not set precedents in any location that will make us hostages to fortune in the future. What people do as a majority in one place at a particular time may have repercussions for a minority in another place in the future. Yes, Mr Speaker, that is a rather pragmatic way of looking at things. Whilst it may be a consideration, it is not the only one. As we attempt to move forward in creating a shared future in this society, we must be careful not to curtail public spaces in a way that prevents that very sharing. In creating social cohesion, it makes much more sense to choose names for public places with which the whole community can agree and that underline the concept of common ownership and access to those places.

I recognise that this particular issue is highly emotive for all concerned. I have already mentioned victims and survivors, and my thoughts are with them as I speak here today. We cannot trample on their hurt and loss or ignore their feelings. Mr Maskey quoted me as saying that I regard the McCreesh family highly. I have known the McCreesh family for longer, probably, than anyone in the House. I knew Raymond McCreesh personally. I did not agree with his politics, and I did not agree with his methodology. I have not come here today to in any way increase the hurt or pain of any family, particularly the McCreesh family. However, I have to set my personal acquaintance aside today and look to the common good. I believe that the SDLP decision to back the renaming of the park is not about any individual. It is influenced by a desire to heal our divided society by moving on from the tribal politics and conflicts of the past. Peace and reconciliation is not just the absence of violence. It is a fundamental shift in mindset and approaches to politics.

There are many in the House who need to make that shift.

The SDLP is clear in its policy: no public space should be named after anyone who was involved in state or paramilitary violence. We will continue to pursue that policy because we believe that it is the right policy. Whatever names people have given to public places in the past should not and must not lock us into continuing in that vein in the present.

I know that Mr Elliott will introduce a private Member's Bill. We will examine that carefully, and, if it is comprehensive and covers all those who were involved in violence in the past, including state agents, we will consider supporting it.

Mr Elliott: The debate has been somewhat exercised at times. I want to read a passage first. It states:

> "Newry and Mourne District Council failed to comply with its own Equality Scheme when deciding to retain the name 'The Raymond McCreesh Park' for a Council-owned children's play park in Newry ... the Council's consideration of the issue was 'more focussed on process and on maintaining the name of the play park than on paying due regard to the need to promote equality of opportunity and regard to the desirability of promoting good relations. There is little evidence that the duty was exercised in substance, with rigour and with an open mind in the decision making process.'"

Those words are not mine but the words of the Equality Commission.

I listened to Mr Lunn and others criticise the Equality Commission, and rightly so. I agree with them. However, more recently, the Equality Commission has taken a more aggressive approach to this, and I hope that it will follow it through. It has a responsibility to take action on it. It realises that there have been shortcomings and that there has been almost purposeful intent against a community, a minority community in the area, and it is clear that it should take action.

I cannot understand why there is such a determination to cause more hurt and suffering to the victims of this society and their families. Was it not bad enough that families had to suffer the callous and brutal murder of a loved one, unexpectedly never seeing that family member again alive, sometimes with many young children in the household? They are now having their noses rubbed in it and are having that trauma re-established by the renaming or the naming of a play park or, indeed, any other facility after that terrorist. I just cannot understand the mentality of people who want to do that and who want to carry that through. Surely those individuals have suffered enough.

It has already been said that naming a children's play park after a terrorist goes that extra mile. It makes it even more difficult when young people are the subject of this behaviour and that past behaviour.

I listened to the Sinn Féin Members' aggressive attitude. They were aggressive to most of us, including those on this side of the House and the SDLP. I saw them turning their attention on many of us to try to divert attention away from the real subject. They tried to divert attention away from their misdemeanours in this society over the last generation. They tried to divert attention away from their misdemeanours, even in the naming of the Raymond McCreesh play park. Why can they not just hold their hands up and say, "Look, folks, we were wrong"?

I have a warning for Members and for general society. These are the people who we have heard talking about building consensus, who said that there should be no more majority rule and that we want to live in a reconciled society. I have this warning for you people out there: this is what it would be like under Sinn Féin rule. This is what you would get —

Mr Humphrey: I thank the Member for giving way. He is making a very salient point, so I welcome his giving way. I just want to say that Mr McElduff, one of Sinn Féin's Members for West Tyrone, claimed that Mr McCreesh is actually more deserving of international recognition than many of those who have received the Nobel peace prize. Does the Member agree that that is an absolutely heinous thing to say?

Mr Elliott: I suppose that it is one of those ridiculous suggestions that we hear from some Sinn Féin members on a regular basis. I just wish that they would take into account victims' feelings in all this, which they have not. I hear the nice, pleasant words coming from them that they want to respect victims. Show it. Demonstrate it by your actions, not by your words. I come back to my warning:

that is what it would be like for general society — not just people in the unionist community, but people in the broad nationalist community — to live under Sinn Féin control. You would not have a say. You would do as it does and do as it says. That is exactly what it wants.

On the point of Raymond McCreesh, I have to say that he had a choice. He had a choice whether to go on hunger strike and whether to live or die. He chose to die. Those people who were brutally murdered at Kingsmills and other areas did not have that choice. They were cut down in the prime of their life without that choice by those callous and brutal murderers.

Mr Allister: Who was Raymond McCreesh? He was a young man who chose to be a terrorist and take up the gun. He was born and lived at a time when there was a free franchise; when, if his political aspiration was an all-Ireland republic, under the 1973 Act, there was the availability of a referendum to deliver that. Rather, he chose to be a terrorist. In due course, he was duly convicted of conspiracy to murder and possession of weapons. We know that one of those weapons relates to one of the most heinous crimes ever committed in this Province. Raymond McCreesh knew what he was doing, wanted to do it and, as Mr Elliott said, unlike so many victims of the IRA, had a choice. He chose the path of terror and violence.

Then, he went into prison and went on hunger strike. We hear much lauding of him today by Sinn Féin, but is it the truth that the Sinn Féin leadership wanted him to die? Is the truth that they needed and wanted the martyrdom of the hunger strikers? They lament today about their love for Raymond McCreesh. Did they not love him enough to want him to live? Did they want him to die? I suspect that they did, such is their callousness. Indeed, today's debate has been a timely reminder of the real Sinn Féin in this House.

Of course, if Raymond McCreesh had been a failed hunger striker, like another speaker in this debate, maybe, today, he would have been a Member of this House. Maybe, in fact, he would have been a partner of the DUP in government in this House. He chose to die. Those who justify, honour and clamour to bestow sainthood upon those of that terrorist ilk have stooped to the very depths of saying that, for this vile terrorist — because that is what he was — we must name a children's play park after him, to honour him and to deliver to his victims the most unmistakable message that, as for their lives, they were nothing.

5.45 pm

Mr McNarry: I thank the Member for giving way. Does he agree that, in our time here, we have come through some crises, none more so than the recent one at Christmas? Are we now hearing of a new crisis developing over the naming of a children's park and, having heard what has been said by the Sinn Féin Members, one that is putting the future of the Assembly in jeopardy?

Mr Allister: What I am hearing today is a reminder to me of why I think that Sinn Féin is so unfit for government. It is a very timely reminder indeed. That is what I am hearing. I share the view that someone else expressed: if this is the Sinn Féin attachment to the past, for all their fine, honeyed words about dealing with the past, it will not be dealt with in a manner that is acceptable to any self-respecting individual. That is abundantly clear today. I think that the debate also makes clear —

Mr Maskey: Will the Member give way?

Mr Allister: Sorry, I was told from the Chair that I am not getting any extra time.

This debate also makes clear and underscores the necessity — a necessity that should not be required in a normal society that is peopled by normal politicians — of Tom Elliott's Bill to make it clear beyond doubt that you cannot name shared spaces after those who tore this community apart.

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): Go raibh maith agat, a Cheann Comhairle. At the outset, I want to make it clear that I will respond only to those elements of the motion that relate to the Minister of the Environment. When the motion was put down, I advised the Business Office that, while I could deal with those aspects of the motion, I could not deal with the other points concerning the role and performance of the Equality Commission, which, in my view, fall to OFMDFM. In fairness, having sat through the debate and listened to it, I do not think that many, if any, of the points raised fall within the remit of the Minister of the Environment.

The debate has been emotive and extremely divisive, and it shows exactly why we need to move on from this type of debate. In responding to the debate, I am not going to spend time going through the arguments and, indeed, the insults that have been aired this afternoon. It is my personal view that the McCreesh park decision makes a mockery of councils' responsibilities to reach out to and serve all the community. It certainly does not promote good relations.

While I recognise the right of local people to make local decisions, with that right comes the responsibility to respect the needs and rights of others. Decisions based on an attitude of, "It's our area, and we have the right to do in it or with it as we wish" do nothing to promote relationships of respect and tolerance. Psychological walls around areas are every bit as bad as physical walls, which, unfortunately, we all still see. We need to change that mindset and bring these walls down.

District councils are independent bodies that are elected to represent their constituents and, in law, are bodies corporate that have the functions that are conferred on them by statutory provision. The decisions on the discharge of those functions, including the naming of any facilities that are owned by the council, are a matter for that council, subject to any relevant statutory provisions.

As public authorities, district councils are subject to the section 75 duties in the Northern Ireland Act 1998 to have due regard to the need to promote equality of opportunity and, without prejudice to this obligation, to have regard to the desirability of promoting good relations in carrying out their functions. Councillors, when acting as a district council, also have a responsibility to represent the interests of all the residents in that local government district.

Mr Humphrey: I thank the Minister for giving way. I welcome the Minister's point about community relations. We very much wanted to hear that, and I am pleased that we heard it.

The new super-councils are about to take authority next month. Given what the Minister just said, does the decision of councils like Newry and Mourne and Mid Ulster to have the Irish language first not damage the good community relations in those areas? The unionist community there feels that this is yet further damage to the areas' community relations. That is the very point that the Minister just made, yet his party is playing a role in it.

Mr Durkan: Mr Humphrey has a very long memory when it suits and a very short memory at other times. I am not sure whether he recalls a debate in the Chamber last Tuesday, when I put forward regulations that would have enshrined in the standing orders of the new councils protections for the minorities living there. Perhaps Mr Humphrey, having spent the five minutes that he was allocated in this debate on a diatribe solely against my party, might ask for another intervention to explain to the House why he signed a petition of concern against regulations that would have protected him and his constituents from the very hurt that he purports that these policy decisions have caused.

Mr Speaker: Carry on.

Mr Durkan: OK. Provisions in the Local Government Act (Northern Ireland) 2014 for certain council decisions to be taken by a qualified majority and for 15% of the members of a council to request the reconsideration of a decision are designed to provide protections for the interests of minority communities in the decision-making of the new councils. Whilst these provisions do not apply to the decision taken by Newry and Mourne District Council on the naming of the play park, they were designed to provide a mechanism to address similar issues if they arise — hopefully they will not, but more than likely they will — in the new councils.

Mr Devenney: I thank the Member for giving way. I appreciate what he said. Does he agree that an attempt to use this mechanism in Londonderry to change the name of the council failed because 25% of people on that council disagreed with the name that was agreed? That is probably why there was a petition of concern. It does not protect the minority, as you say that it does, and you know that from your constituency.

Mr Durkan: The mechanism was introduced to deal with decisions taken by a council: a change of existing policy or an existing name, as in the Derry City and Strabane District Council example cited by Mr Devenney today and by Mr Campbell ad nauseam. That name was given by the commissioner, so the decision of the new council to continue with that name was not determined to be a change of name.

The provisions that I brought before the House last week in the draft Local Government (Standing Orders) Regulations were designed to copper-fasten provisions in the 2014 Act for the protection of the interests of minority communities in council decision-making. The absence of the approval of the draft regulations as a result of the tabling of a petition of concern means that the protections that the House approved when it passed the 2014 Act may not now be delivered in regulations in time for the new councils taking over on 1 April. It is unfortunate and, indeed, very disappointing that these regulations were not approved by the Assembly. However, over the next few weeks, I intend to work with other parties to find a way to have the regulations made as a matter of urgency, and I hope that all parties will support me in that.

Of course, regulations alone cannot substitute for strong local leadership and the demonstrable commitment to equality, respect and good relations that the motion calls for. I sincerely hope that the new Newry and Mourne council and all of us will rise to the challenge: to find a way to move on from this, to break down the barriers and to build a united community, one where there will be no more "our area" and "your area", but everyone's area.

Mr McCausland: We had an initial proposal this afternoon from Willie Irwin, who reminded us that this matter had been raised with the Equality Commission back in December 2012. He reflected on the fact that, whilst the Equality Commission had pursued a bakery with the speed of light, it had been somewhat ineffective in regard to its dealings with Newry and Mourne District Council. He also pointed out that there was a lack of respect shown by those who supported the name McCreesh park, and that the weapon that was identified with McCreesh was one that had also been used in that appalling murder of 10 Protestant workmen at Kingsmills. We were also reminded that this name was put up in 2001 under a Newry and Mourne District Council that was dominated by the SDLP. That was referred to by a number of other Members.

Megan Fearon from Sinn Féin eulogised Raymond McCreesh and, as was pointed out by another Member, it was quite appalling to find the youngest Member of this Assembly, someone from a younger generation, pouring out the same poison that has been passed down from generation to generation by murderous militant republicanism. Someone asked who had written her speech. I do not know who wrote it, but I will say this much: she certainly managed to regurgitate quite a bit of what Conor Murphy said on 'The Stephen Nolan Show' this morning. It was almost word-for-word perfect. She referred to Sir James Craig and said that he was:

"the man who brought the gun into Irish politics".

The first time I heard that was from a civil servant from Dublin, but I heard it today from Megan Fearon. It was not true when the Dublin civil servant said it, and it is no more true when Megan Fearon says it. It is as though, somehow or other, the Irish Republican Brotherhood and its murderous campaigns in the 19th century, long before Sir James Craig was even born, can be simply written out of history. Not only did it bring the gun into Irish politics, it certainly also brought the bomb into Irish politics big style, when it organised its dynamite campaign on the British mainland and murdered quite a number of people in the course of it. So it was disappointing — very disappointing — and alarming to hear those words from Megan Fearon and this attempt to rewrite history. Interestingly enough, the points that she makes are obviously part of a narrative that has been worked out by Sinn Féin, as they try to rewrite history and excuse and explain away what they have done.

Alasdair McDonnell said that "pain has no politics". As we have been reminded, this name was put up under an SDLP-dominated council. He said:

"We regret the pain that this issue has caused".

I welcome the fact that there seems to have been a change of heart by the SDLP, but I would have preferred him to say, "We regret the pain that we — the SDLP — have caused".

I was also interested in Megan Fearon's references to the names of people. She talked about John Martin and various places in Newry that are named after earlier republicans of the 19th century: John Martin; John Mitchel; and others. This year, the republican movement will be celebrating the bicentenary of John Mitchel, who was not only an Irish republican but an advocate of slavery. Although, since Sinn Féin can manage to celebrate, eulogise and glorify a Nazi collaborator in Dublin, dealing with somebody who was an advocate of slavery should not be too much of a problem for them.

Danny Kennedy spoke as a former councillor and said that he had long opposed —

Mr Humphrey: They all look puzzled.

Mr McCausland: The story of Nazi collaboration and the IRA's collaboration with Adolf Hitler is well known.

Danny Kennedy reminded us how, as a councillor, he had long opposed this in Newry and Mourne and said, quite rightly, that it is just plain wrong and deeply offensive, and it is deeply offensive to decent people. IRA actions were murder and terrorism. There is nothing there to celebrate, and all true democrats will endorse those words.

Trevor Lunn referred to Kingsmills. In 1976, 10 innocent Protestant people were murdered there by the IRA, and there was linkage to Raymond McCreesh and the weapon that he was carrying. There was also criticism of the Equality Commission, which he described as being worse than lethargic, its inactivity on a grand scale. It took the SDLP 14 years to do the right thing, but, like Trevor Lunn, I welcome the fact that it is now in a better place.

6.00 pm

My colleague William Humphrey referred to a number of issues. He highlighted the weakness of the SDLP and the comments of one of its councillors Kate Loughran who previously backed the name "McCreesh". It was an odious decision, he said, and he said that the party had lost its moral compass. Actions speak louder than words, and, hopefully now, the moral compass is starting maybe to come back.

Mickey Brady told us that Raymond McCreesh is not, was not and never will be a terrorist. However, I think that most people will take the view that, if someone acts like a terrorist and if someone murders like a terrorist, he probably is a terrorist.

Sammy Wilson referred to the youngest Member of the Assembly, and asked, "Is this what our society has come to?". He drew the parallel with the actions of the three teenage girls from England who have gone to join Islamic State. Outside Northern Ireland, he said, people will look on in horror, and he described Newry and Mourne as a political cesspit. The SDLP is belatedly allowing itself to be dragged on, and he referred to the fact that one SDLP councillor said that it was a "healing process" to name the park after a terrorist.

Raymond McCartney expressed solidarity with Raymond McCreesh's family; he had known them, and he said that republicans were unbowed and unbroken. I wonder: did Raymond McCreesh and other hunger strikers really die so that Sinn Féin Members could administer British rule in a devolved Assembly under a sovereign Parliament at Westminster where they have to send every Bill for the Royal Assent of Her Majesty the Queen? We are still in the United Kingdom, so I wonder whether that is really what those folk died for.

Dominic Bradley, in a wide-ranging speech, gave us a little bit about Mickey Brady's history and then spoke about a shared future. He said that it is time to move on and that no public space should be named after someone who has been guilty of unlawful violence. It is good that he is there; there is just therefore the difficulty that it took the SDLP 14 years to get there.

Mr D Bradley: Will the Member give way?

Mr McCausland: No, I will not. I am running out of time.

Tom Elliott referred to the Equality Commission and said that Newry and Mourne District Council had failed to comply with its own equality scheme. That was the decision of the Equality Commission, yet Newry and Mourne councillors threw the Equality Commission recommendation aside. When I thought about it, it occurred to me that, when it comes to Ashers bakery, the Equality Commission behaves like a salivating Rottweiler, and, when it comes to McCreesh park in Newry and Mourne, it is tentative at best and behaves more like a little lapdog. Tom Elliott also reminded us that Raymond McCreesh had a choice; his victims had none.

Jim Allister said that Raymond McCreesh chose to be a terrorist. He was guilty of conspiracy to murder and possession of weapons, and there is the link to the Kingsmills massacre. He knew what he was doing and wanted to do it. Sinn Féin needed and wanted martyrs, and, therefore, the leadership of Sinn Féin provided the hunger strike.

Mark Durkan, as Minister of the Environment, said that we need to move on. How do we do it? We can move on, first, by renaming McCreesh park. We can also move on by not maintaining a liturgical calendar of murderous republicanism. Last Sunday, Gerry Adams was in south Armagh, the same area, glorifying Brendan Burns and Brendan Moley, two IRA terrorists who managed to blow themselves up when they were handling a bomb and putting it into a car. It turned out that one of them, Brendan Burns, had also had a connection, it seems, with the Narrow Water massacre, where 18 soldiers were murdered by the IRA, the worst single atrocity directed against the British Army in the Troubles. That is the sort of person who was eulogised and glorified by Gerry Adams on Sunday.

Castlederg is another example. We seem to have week after week after week after week of the Sinn Féin leadership keeping faith with the past, bound to the past and bound into that republican philosophy that, somehow or other, in certain circumstances, it is all right to kill. They seem to be unable to break free from the past and move forward, and the danger with all of this is that those who look and those who listen are from a younger generation. We have already heard from a younger generation today, and some in that younger generation will say. "If it was all right for them to do it, why can we not do it?". In my constituency, we have the case of a plaque for Thomas Begley being put up in Ardoyne.

I was at a debate not so long ago with Declan Kearney. He talked about national reconciliation. Actions speak louder than words. That is not the way to get national reconciliation.

Resolved:

> That this Assembly expresses its concern at the decision by Newry and Mourne District Council to approve again the naming of the Patrick Street play park in Newry after convicted IRA terrorist Raymond McCreesh; notes that the vote was taken prior to the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland making a final formal ruling on the matter; further notes the seemingly lethargic approach of the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland in pursuing this case; and calls on the Minister of the Environment to respond to the vote in light of the requirement for councillors to act in a way that promotes good relations by providing a positive example for the wider community to follow and, crucially, acting in the interest of the whole community.

Motion made:

> That the Assembly do now adjourn. — [Mr Principal Deputy Speaker.]

Adjournment

East Antrim Coastal Corridor: Industry Development and Investment

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The proposer of the topic will have 15 minutes, and all other speakers will have approximately four minutes.

Mr McMullan: Go raibh maith agat, a Phríomh-LeasCheann Comhairle. Before I start, I thank the Minister for attending the debate this evening.

In April this year, Members will see the new councils come in and a new era of local government begin. The new councils of Mid and East Antrim and Causeway Coast and Glens will have responsibility for the coastal corridor and economic development along and within that route. To put both councils in perspective, together they have 21% of the Northern Ireland land mass and 15% of the total population. In 2013, they showed an average upward trend in population of 7%. In the same period, the Northern Ireland average was 8%. In both councils, the average working population is at 63%. That is a very small snapshot of the main parts of the two councils.

The purpose of my Adjournment debate is to look at how development and investment in the coastal corridor can be maintained and improved. The Port of Larne is the second largest port and a vital outlet for industry and inward investment, but we are not using its potential. For example, the tourist industry is one of our biggest assets. We do very little other than put up signs, in most cases in the wrong place. The Port of Larne does not have a tourist office. When you leave the ferry, you find that it is a straight run to Belfast. There is no mention of the coastal route. Those are just some of the minor points for the new council and P&O. Last week, I met the new manager of P&O in Larne, and they agreed that there was a lot to do to promote the coastal corridor, as we both called it.

The new Tourism Northern Ireland must come up with a plan that will promote the coast to the visitor. If that can be delivered successfully, it will increase the visitor spend and help the tourist industry to be confident enough to expand and create much-needed jobs. There will be help from the Executive, as the Causeway Coast and Glens is one of the nine key destinations in the tourism Minister's programme for government.

For the business sector to thrive, we must look at what we have and be honest enough to answer the question about whether we are doing enough. The A8 is nearing completion, and with that comes a great opportunity to have a business corridor from Larne. You will be able to connect with Belfast in less than 30 minutes and with Ballymena and Antrim in less than 20 minutes. You also have the rail link from Larne to Belfast, with links to the rest of the island of Ireland. You can now leave Larne and stay on the motorway to Cork.

At Executive level, the Northern Ireland economic strategy is focused on five rebalancing themes. Under the heading of "promoting enterprise", it clearly states that DETI and Invest NI will:

> "Develop, in partnership with Councils, enterprise led initiatives targeted toward increasing the ... business base, in terms of marketing, management, skills, networking, product development".

The new councils will have transferred to them from central government powers such as urban regeneration and community development, powers to provide businesses with support and start-up advice, planning powers and neighbourhood renewal. Those new powers will be important for the existing small and medium-sized businesses already operating. In rural areas, they are the backbone of employment and community regeneration. It is also vital that the new councils secure the maximum funding from the rural development programme (RDP). That funding can be used to start up rural businesses and for the sustainability and growth of existing rural businesses. The fund will also be important for our farming industry and their businesses. At present, the sector is under severe pressure. That is why the RDP will be vital for farm diversification and farm incomes. In the last programme, we saw the benefit of diversification into light engineering, renewable energy and tourism. Councils must make the RDP one of their prime objectives.

Another element that must be prime in the new councils is the European funding structure. Up to now, the only councils with dedicated European officers were Derry and Belfast. From an initial talk to the chief executives of the Mid and East Antrim and the Causeway Coast and Glens councils, I think that that will be something that they will put in place, but they must have dedicated European officers to look at pulling down funding.

Another element for improvement is more high-speed broadband. The Minister answered some of that for me. For rural businesses to survive or expand, they must have modern broadband. Otherwise, they will be at a severe disadvantage when competing for contracts. Today's farmer relies on the single farm payment for income. More and more, Europe insists on online applications for nearly all farming businesses.

Development and investment in the rural areas of East Antrim and its coastal corridor is vital if we are to sustain our rural way of life. At present, those communities are disadvantaged by virtue of their remote location from essential facilities and services such as natural gas. The providers have stated that providing gas to rural east Antrim would not be profitable. That disadvantage can be addressed through the innovative use of existing services, such as community halls and schools for use in outreach and mobile services and for the benefit of new developments. The coastal corridor and rural areas of east Antrim must be connected to all aspects of the urban economic base. We cannot have urban and rural communities working independently.

I grew up in rural east Antrim and went to school there. At 15, I had to leave home to serve my apprenticeship. When we look at what we have today, we see that we really have not moved forward that much. Public transport has not improved, and more and more we see the centralisation of services that leaves rural dwellers more and more isolated. Community plans, which councils have to put in place, must have these issues embedded in them. In the entire rural area between Larne and Ballycastle, for example, we do not have one business park. How are we expected to encourage inward investment when we do not have the benefits of a park for new small and medium-sized enterprises to start up in? Any young entrepreneurs will have to leave the rural setting to avail themselves of any business space in an urban environment. If they leave, as we all know, a good percentage of them do not come back. We will lose that entrepreneurship and their craft and skills.

Recently, the Minister for Employment and Learning cut the funding for the learner access and engagement programme, which has been successfully tended by the Larne Enterprise Development Company (Ledcom) since 2013 for three years with an option of a further two years. The programme was a lifeline for those who are aged 16 and over and are hard to reach, not in work, hold no more than one qualification at level 2 or above, may have barriers to learning and will declare an intention to become economically active at a future date. These young people, without the programme that has now been taken away, have no other choice or venue to be economically active. That whole area of the glens now depends on these programmes. It is all right stating that they can go to a programme in Ballymena or Coleraine, but the transport to take them to those places is not there. They are in a catch-22 situation and fall between two stools. I ask the Minister to look at this. She has been looking at doing programmes, but this really has to be looked at. Perhaps she can get talking to the new councils so that they can put programmes in.

When the programme was running, it was a success in Larne, Carrick, Moyle and Newtownabbey, with a total enrolment over two years of 2,620. DEL's actions have left little or no provision for supported community further education. This is further evidence of rural isolation. Where will all those young people go? We need those young people to come back in the future, and we need the regeneration of rural areas. We have an opportunity now with the new councils, both of which are drawing up community plans. The Ministers now have the opportunity to sit down with the councils and draw up plans for rural areas. I ask the Minister to look at that.

Mr Ross: Over the last number of months, I have read pieces by Mr McMullan in the local press in which he has made similar claims about a lack of investment. One would have imagined that he was quite passionate about the issue, but I am not sure that that quite came across in the presentation of his speech. I have also read his comments in the local press, in common with other Sinn Féin representatives across the country, about how many young people are emigrating from Northern Ireland to find jobs. However, I must say that Mr McMullan's diatribe of negativity does nothing to help the area that he purports to wish to help. I have yet to meet an investor or potential tourist who reacts well to that sort of negativity. He should highlight the opportunities in East Antrim rather than continually —

Mr McMullan: Will the Member give way?

Mr Ross: I will give way very briefly.

Mr McMullan: Can the Member tell me where the tourist office is in Larne?

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has another minute.

Mr Ross: I appreciate that, Mr Principal Deputy Speaker.

When tourists come to Northern Ireland, they will look at the tourist website, which will point them right the way across every little place in Northern Ireland, including in east Antrim and on the coastal route, which I will talk about later in my contribution. The narrative that Invest Northern Ireland is not attracting enough businesses to invest in this area may, I am afraid, be a nice sound bite for the local press, but it fails to recognise how investment happens and how investors take decisions. Invest Northern Ireland does not decide where an investor goes; it facilitates visits and encourages people to come to Northern Ireland. Investors ultimately decide where they set up the business.

6.30 pm

Geographical position is important — Mr McMullan talked about that — but Northern Ireland is not such a big place that people cannot avail themselves of job opportunities close by. There is no doubt that there is concern among the working population about opportunities for employment. It is not unique to East Antrim or to Northern Ireland. I know that there is a lot of concern about the job losses in JTI, which will impact not just on North Antrim but on East Antrim. There is continued concern about some of the productivity lines in Caterpillar as well, although I know that the Minister has been proactive in meeting with the owners in Chicago to try to ensure that we get additional lines to East Antrim.

There are also examples close to the rural areas in East Antrim of businesses exporting all around the world. Ryobi and Schrader, to name but two, provide job opportunities for people throughout the area. Even on the coastal corridor that Mr McMullan talked about, we have the example of Glenarm Organic Salmon. I was chatting to the guys in that business not so long ago at an InterTradeIreland event here in Parliament Buildings, and they told me how they have travelled the world. They have been to the west coast of the States, China and the Middle East on trade missions with Invest Northern Ireland, exporting their products around the world. That is exactly the sort of thing that we should highlight. It is the sort of story that we should champion: the successes in East Antrim and, indeed, in the rural areas of East Antrim. Of course, we have the Ballygally Hotel, which recently put a lot of money into expanding its operation and attracting more tourists to the area.

The area has never had greater exposure. In May last year, the Giro d'Italia — I was very close to that and very enthusiastic about it — went through Moyle, Larne, Carrick and Newtownabbey. It was very fortunate that that was the route that it took, but it showcased the absolute splendour of the coast to viewers right across the world. Some 165 countries watched the coverage of the Giro d'Italia, which reached almost 800 million people and showcased the beauty of the coast. Who could forget the vision of the horses racing along the beach at Carnlough alongside the riders? It was an image used by the Giro d'Italia throughout the entire race. It will be used to promote this year's race as well and, I suggest, for some years to come. That is a prime opportunity to capitalise on cycling tourism. The Gran Fondo is coming this summer, and, already, the number of registrations from across the world show that it is a massive opportunity, and, of course, the coast road is a prime place where that could happen.

The project to restore the Gobbins path, which will hopefully be open again this summer, is a massive opportunity to bring lots of people to the coast. From Islandmagee, they will travel right up the coast road towards the Giant's Causeway and the Carrick-a-Rede rope bridge. Tourists will visit the coastal corridor to visit the film sets of 'Game of Thrones'. There is huge potential at Curran Castle and Magheramorne. If there are entrepreneurs willing to welcome visitors to East Antrim, there are business opportunities for people willing to embrace them. I point also to the all-Ireland lighthouse trail, which is an exciting project.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Will the Member bring his remarks to a close?

Mr Ross: Last year, I joined the Minister and her counterpart at the time, Leo Varadkar, at that. There are huge opportunities there and massive opportunities coming with the new council, if it works with Invest Northern Ireland and Tourism Northern Ireland. I hope that Members champion East Antrim and talk about the opportunities there, rather than just being negative about it.

Mr Beggs: I thank the Member for raising the topic in the Assembly. It is important that we talk about the opportunities for employers to come to East Antrim and for visitors to come and enjoy an experience that is not available in many other parts of the Province or, indeed, the world. I certainly view the east Antrim coastline as something very special, and any visitors who have travelled it with me have also found it very special.

We have limited natural resources. Apart from our natural environment, our main resource is our people. I noticed in recent claimant counts that the figures for 2014 show that unemployment in Carrickfergus and Newtownabbey is below the Northern Ireland average, and that has to be welcomed. We have an industrious people. It is surprising, when you go into some of the details, that, while we have a low unemployment rate, we have one of the lowest levels of employee jobs in any constituency in Northern Ireland. Why is that? It is because we have industrious people who get on their bike, get into their car, on the bus, on the train and go to work where the jobs are. For any employer out there who is listening, those people would be good, local, committed employees should that employer choose to locate somewhere more convenient in East Antrim. We have to recognise that, sometimes, you have to travel to the jobs, but we hope in future that more jobs will be provided locally. I commend our people who travel.

There are other interesting statistics. We have a very healthy number of apprenticeships operating between level 2 and level 3, some 357 I noted from a recent Assembly answer. I have to praise Larne Skills Development, which is drawing in young people from the entire East Antrim coastal area. I am aware that it provides a high success rate in providing long-term placement and, ultimately, employment. That must be commended as well. That is despite the fact that there is a very weak presence of further education opportunities locally in Larne. As has been mentioned —

Mr Wilson: Will the Member give way on that point?

Mr Beggs: I certainly will.

Mr Wilson: I am sure that, like me, the Member has been around the Larne Skills project. Does he agree that the idea is to get all those skills under one roof so that young people can experience a wide range of skills? The suggestion that has been made of having small units located all round East Antrim would not be a way of ensuring that people get experience of the range of skills that might be available to them.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an additional minute.

Mr Beggs: Thank you. Ultimately, if there is demand, you have to provide an opportunity. It would be nice if more employment could be provided locally, but we have to assess whether there is demand. There is no point in building empty buildings; there must be the demand. Certainly, I see great opportunities in the East Antrim area in the future. As others mentioned, with the A8 dual carriageway nearing completion, it will be easier for those who wish to come to Northern Ireland and East Antrim to visit. Equally, it will be easier and more attractive for employers to locate in East Antrim, whether it be in Larne or, indeed, Carrickfergus, with the A2 also nearing completion later this year. That will open up business areas that were previously deemed too difficult to access. Wonderful opportunities will arise from that, and there is a high likelihood that more jobs will arise in East Antrim as a result of both those developments.

Of course, on top of that infrastructure, we are quite close to both airports: the international airport and the city airport. As others have said, we have a natural gas supply available in our main areas. Generally, we have a good broadband infrastructure, although it has to be acknowledged that there are still gaps in urban areas and in some rural areas. I certainly wish, as I indicated earlier, that all our business parks would have access to superfast broadband in order to allow our companies to develop.

We must praise the work that goes on in our local enterprise centres. Ledcom has a wonderful record of encouraging new employment and people to take up self-employment.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Would the Member draw his remarks to a close?

Mr Beggs: I should also mention Carrick Enterprise. Ledcom helps in a wide range of other activities throughout the community to make Larne a better place.

Mr Dickson: It is perhaps worth reminding ourselves that the A2 corridor runs all the way from Whiteabbey, Jordanstown and Greenisland through Carrickfergus, Whitehead and Larne and extends all the way to Cushendun in the far north of the constituency. We are a constituency of contrasts, but I am always relentlessly positive when it comes to East Antrim. I believe that East Antrim should and does have a can-do rather than a can't-do attitude. We are a constituency of learning and skills development, with an exceptional university and further education colleges. We also have an amazing coastline and a unique and rich history, accompanied by tourism and traditional industries.

Of course, we have not escaped the effects of the recent economic storms, and our high streets have suffered the effects of economically straitened times and require meaningful support and reinvigoration. However, I believe that we can build on our previous successes, our shared history and our industry to create a truly dynamic and united and prosperous area of enterprise where everyone has the chance for employment and gaining skills in a safe and socially just community.

East Antrim has much to offer by way of infrastructure, skills and knowledge. All MLAs from East Antrim must work tirelessly to market east Antrim plc to the world.

Mr Beggs: Will the Member give way?

Mr Dickson: I will.

Mr Beggs: Would the Member acknowledge that it is very disappointing that the programme that was, for the first time, drawing in large numbers of people to develop their basic numeracy and literacy skills, which Ledcom provided in Larne, Carrickfergus and Moyle, has come to an end; that, to date, no one else has succeeded in providing that service; and that it is important that that service be continued?

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an additional minute.

Mr Dickson: I acknowledge that. I also acknowledge the changing environment in which many of those programmes are delivered.

We need to access efficient and reliable energy sources, which includes electricity but, crucially, mains gas supply. Investors from around the world do not want to look at dirty fuels. Since the 1990s, east Antrim has benefited from a natural gas supply, an innovation that, as the Minister announced today, much of Northern Ireland is only starting to see. Larne is exceptionally placed in this regard, only miles from the main gas interconnector to Scotland. However, there are parts of east Antrim and the A2 corridor that still lose out. Towns like Whitehead have to rely on oil and other fuels rather than benefit from natural gas. I will continue to press the case for gas to Whitehead and beyond into other rural areas. I call on the Utility Regulator to look into this.

Tourism represents one of the biggest opportunities for jobs in east Antrim, and, therefore, we need to completely reinvigorate our towns to attract tourists. Attractions such as Carrickfergus Castle, the new Gobbins pathway and the glens are exceptional assets. The Enterprise Minister must ensure that they are developed and marketed to their fullest potential. Our ferry connection to Scotland through Larne is an enviable strength, bringing tourists and business to our doorstep. However, constituents have expressed to me their concerns about the high cost of travel to and from Scotland. This is hurting our potential as a tourist destination. DETI needs to investigate what can be done to encourage lower pricing and more competition on the North Channel routes. In the end, we will all benefit from attracting greater numbers of people to the area.

One of the more transformative projects is, of course, the upgrade of the Shore Road and a dual carriageway all the way to Carrickfergus. People and businesses will genuinely be able to benefit from this in their journey into east Antrim. I hope that this will also eventually dovetail with the planned upgrade of the York Street interchange. In addition, the A8 marks a significant milestone of development of the port of Larne, one that will contribute to the development of a prosperous Northern Ireland. Traffic will flow more efficiently from the port. However, we need to deal with the issue at Sandyknowes. The Minister needs to investigate the possibility of a free-flowing junction in the Larne to Belfast direction to provide access from the port right across the island of Ireland. The Regional Development Minister needs to look at the utilisation of the Larne railway line for more than just passenger services.

Infrastructure is important. Others have made reference to communication technologies, particularly broadband. Ledcom has impressed upon me the need for us to keep ahead. Although 90% of Northern Ireland has access to fibre-optic broadband and is one of the best connected regions in Europe, we must not fall behind in that. That is a message that Ledcom has been pressing home to me. In the area of digital communication, we must not rest on our laurels; technology is forever changing. We must continue to lobby DETI and relevant infrastructure companies to ensure that we are keeping pace.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Will the Member bring his remarks to a close?

Mr Dickson: Ultimately, achieving a prosperous east Antrim relies on us all working together to attract business investment into the area. That requires action at council level, Stormont and Westminster. We must act to create a united, cohesive and highly skilled community that is ready to face the challenges and seize the opportunities of the 21st century.

Mr Hilditch: While I would normally acknowledge the Member who brought the topic of the Adjournment debate to the House, when I saw this one listed, I was not sure how wide or narrow it was intended to be. Sometimes a little prior engagement on these matters is good.

Having done some research, I noticed that Mr McMullan raised an issue in the 'Larne Times' last October on tackling underinvestment in the Causeway coastal corridor and questioning the role of Invest NI in the lack of enterprise or business parks north of Larne. The criticism of Invest NI by members of Sinn Féin is nothing new. While it was levelled during the creative industries inquiry by the same Member, it was clear that Invest NI was playing a crucial role.

One area that I would like to cover is the work of the local economic development units. Until my departure from local government, I was the chairman of Carrickfergus Borough Council's economic development committee. That gave me an opportunity to work closely with the LED unit at Carrickfergus Enterprise and Ledcom in Larne. Supported by Invest NI and in conjunction with the North East Partnership, those units have delivered a large range of programmes that have supported local businesses and industry from Whiteabbey to Moyle, including in raising finance for small firms, procurement, efficiency, energy, digital, build your business, step up to export and, importantly, family business programmes. Those local economic development units are playing a critical role not only in supporting existing businesses and industry in east Antrim but in encouraging the smaller indigenous family-type start-ups that came to the fore during the inquiry into the creative industries.

We will, hopefully, begin to witness an upturn in business growth with the new super councils of Causeway Coast and Glens District Council and Mid and East Antrim Borough Council. They will have to be ready to hit the ground running next month and ensure the continuity of the business support, particularly in the coastal area, with a key priority of building a strong and vibrant economy. An opportunity in mirroring Belfast's success in leveraging European support exists and should be grasped.

The further development of the tourist industry is also important in moving forward towards a better economic climate. With many thousands of people engaged in the hospitality and service industries in the constituency, there are many more opportunities for further employment and business creation around the heritage and cultural developments at Carrickfergus, with the Gobbins path coming on stream and with improvements in the coastal towns of Whitehead, Glenarm and Carnlough leading to the Causeway costal route and the scenic beauty of the glens. Local government and central government must seize the opportunity for the tourism industry.

Infrastructure is crucial to any industrial investment in the area. While we can cite the well-placed position of the constituency to the Province's airports and sea ports and look with enthusiasm at the developing road infrastructure via the A2 and A8 projects, the one necessity is a better broadband service. I would certainly join with other colleagues who have raised that matter previously. While it is usually envisaged as a rural problem, the east Antrim coastal area is not without its problems with broadband.

I acknowledge the Member for securing the Adjournment debate. It has been a tremendous advert for east Antrim, and I look forward to the Minister's response.

Mr Dallat: Why on earth would somebody from East Derry be taking part in this Adjournment debate here? There are no votes in it for me, so anything that I say is absolutely honest and comes straight from the heart.

I am pleased that the Minister is here to respond, and I am sure that she will remind us that there was a recent announcement of 400 jobs in two pharmaceutical companies. If Danny Kennedy was here, I am sure that he would remind us of the £113 million that has been put into the A8. Oh, how I envy that place called east Antrim.

Clearly, you cannot talk about the subject without talking about the glens. To me, the glens of Antrim is the most wonderful place on earth. That is not because my ancestors come from there but because I serve in a coastal area. I am a frequent visitor to Cork and Kerry, and that coastline is out of this world. I would love to see the master plan for Glenarm published. Glenarm is not exactly Kinsale at the moment, but it has the potential to be like it, if we have the vision.

I do not want to make too many references to the Minister, but she is a woman who has her sleeves rolled up. There is another woman in Glenarm called Margaret Anne McKillop, a local councillor, who also has her sleeves rolled up, and it is local people like that who we need to talk to. People who have a vision of the area for the future, and they will make it work.

The glens of Antrim were largely left alone during the Troubles. That was not exclusively the case, and I can think of Sergeant Joe Campbell and others who lost their lives. That violence has now abated and there is every opportunity to create long-term sustainable jobs in tourism that will retain young people and make sure that there is a vision for them. The people there are clever enough to be above party politics and not to engage in them-and-us disputes and all that nonsense that has destroyed tourist areas elsewhere. What the Assembly needs to do is engage with those people and give them the support and vision they need to make not only Glenarm, which I mentioned, work, but all the other glens work.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker, I am not sure whether you realise that there are nine glens in all. I will recite a little poem, because I think that it tells the story:

> "There are nine glens in Antrim; nine great glens in all.
> Glenarm is the first one, and near Cushendall,
> There is lovely Glenariff, Glenaan and Glendun.
> And nestling between them, Glenballyemon,
> Glencorp and Glenshesk. Come on, don't be lazy.
> There is only Glencloy and the last one, Glentaisie."

Let us roll up our sleeves, as the Minister does, and help Margaret Anne McKillop and other local councillors over there who are engaging, day and daily, with local community groups and enterprise groups. They are the people who will make this happen. While it is late in the evening, and we have had a particular focus perhaps on Larne, with all those new jobs, I think that the glens of Antrim are the jewel in the crown. I hope that when the Minister responds, she will take comfort from the fact that even somebody from outside the area can see the positive side of this part of Ireland and its potential for the future to portray Northern Ireland in such a light that our visitors will not just be local, from Kilrea, but from all over the world.

Mr Wilson: I do not know whether, after the poetry presentation, I am expected to sing or dance my speech. I think I will desist from that. I will say that I am glad that we have had the opportunity to have a debate about the potential there is in east Antrim, though I have to say to the proposer of the Adjournment topic — and I know that Mr Ross has already mentioned it — that if you want to promote an area, you certainly do not go around denigrating it, talking it down, describing some of the towns as being run by mob rule or calling into question the future of some of the main facilities, such as the harbour at Larne. I think that that is the first rule. If you want to promote an area, talk it up; do not talk it down.

The second thing I would like to say is that there has already been significant public investment. I want to pay tribute to the Minister for the work she has done. I remember that when Caterpillar lost so many jobs, she undertook to work with it through Invest NI to see what opportunities there might be. A lot of the job losses at Caterpillar were replaced by additional work that was brought into Northern Ireland. Of course, we have seen the successes of investment in Ryobi, Schrader, Terumo BCT and a lot of other major employers in the area, as well of course as the jobs fund and many of the other jobs that have been produced as a result of help for small businesses.

Whilst I have, on occasion, upbraided the Minister about the broadband provision, it has improved. I do not want her to take too much comfort from that: there are still big gaps. Nevertheless, progress has been made. With regard to the point that Mr McMullan made, if we are going to promote small businesses in rural areas, that is one of the important parts of the infrastructure that we need to have in place. I believe that this is one way of retaining people, although I am not allied to the idea that you provide employment opportunities and training facilities in every small village and hamlet. For a start, it is not practical. We want to broaden people's horizons as well. If they have to travel 15 or 20 miles to find those opportunities and get quality training, that has to happen.

There are things that are not within the Minister's remit, such as the railway and roads. I am glad that we have got two new roads being built in east Antrim.

I give some credit to the Minister in the Republic who pulled the plug on the A5 and, therefore, made funds available for us to spend in Northern Ireland. Of course, I was fortunate enough to be Finance Minister at the time and was able to encourage funds to be redirected in certain ways.

There is huge tourist potential, which David Hilditch mentioned. Take Carrickfergus, for instance, and now the Gobbins project, which I believe will rival the Giant's Causeway. I know that the Minister will be lobbied on the development of the Magheramorne quarry area. There is huge tourism and sports potential there, and, with some tourist money to kick-start the some of the development, it could link in. Of course, the Railway Preservation Society in Whitehead wants to run old railway trains to the site.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: Will the Member bring his remarks to a close?

Mr Wilson: It wants to take people right up to Larne — to the gateway to the glens.

Mr Dallat: Will the Member give way?

Mr Wilson: I will give way, yes.

Mr Dallat: He will get an extra minute. Will the Member be careful to remember Red Bay Boats, which is about to launch its new model? It is famous throughout the world. I am sure that he, as someone who loves his potato, eats the Glens of Antrim brand. If he is thinking of buying jewellery, there is no better place to go than Steensons; it is world-famous.

Mr Principal Deputy Speaker: The Member has an additional minute.

Mr Wilson: I went up to see the launch of one of Red Bay Boats' new craft. In fact, I got a bit seasick just sitting on it in the harbour, to be quite truthful. Again, there is huge employment potential there in a small village along the coast.

The Member is right: there is huge tourism potential, even in the rural part of East Antrim. There is also industrial potential for local entrepreneurs who are developing a product locally and want to stay local. Those are the opportunities that I think we have to look out for in the future.

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): I am pleased to have the opportunity to speak about such a lovely area as East Antrim. I know that many in the Chamber are very passionate about their constituency area, and even people who are not from the constituency are passionate about the area. Mr Dallat, you have made me want to go and discover Glentaisie; it sounds absolutely fabulous.

Over the past five years, Invest Northern Ireland has made 733 offers of support to businesses in the constituency. That support amounted to £38 million in assistance and will lead to an associated total investment of £137 million. It has also led to the promotion of over 1,250 new jobs across the constituency, including those from the regional start initiative. Many people living in the region have benefited directly or indirectly from the new employment opportunities that Invest Northern Ireland is creating in conjunction with the companies. One example is Schrader Electronics, which is investing over £56 million, creating 240 new jobs in Carrickfergus and Antrim. Further, in June 2013, Terumo BCT, which is a global medical device manufacturer and a member of the Japanese-based Terumo Group family of companies, announced plans to create more than 400 new jobs in Larne.

Of course, Invest's help goes beyond job creation. It has many programmes and interventions aimed at improving the overall competitiveness of the economy right across Northern Ireland. In East Antrim, for example, we have had 88 offers totalling £25 million of assistance to help companies to engage in research and development. That is a very important figure, because an area that engages in research and development is looking to the future for a sustainable economy. That is an important marker for that.

In relation to available land for economic development in East Antrim, Invest Northern Ireland holds approximately 144 acres of land. Just 21 acres remain available to support economic development in Carrick and Larne. Perhaps that is an issue that Members might want to look at in the future in conjunction with Invest Northern Ireland, and we are very willing to do so. We also proactively market the sites in Carrick and Larne to foreign and indigenous investors as investment locations. As with most —

Mr Beggs: Will the Minister give way?

Mrs Foster: Yes.

Mr Beggs: The figures for visitors to the constituency, looking at possible locations, are better than the Northern Ireland average but are still relatively low. Has the Minister noticed any increased interest since the development of the new dual carriageways to Larne and Carrickfergus?

Mrs Foster: It is probably too early to assess that, but the Member's point about having the appropriate infrastructure is very well made. Any constituency should not just look at the activities of Invest Northern Ireland to promote the constituency; people should look at the infrastructure to support the constituency. East Antrim is very blessed with the A2 and A8 works. I know that the Member sitting behind me has made comments about broadband recently, but broadband is an absolutely critical piece of infrastructure for moving into the 21st-century economy, and I will set out in clear terms the interventions that we are making on broadband as a Government so that everybody can assess how we are moving forward in that respect.

Mr Dallat: Will the Minister give way?

Mrs Foster: Yes.

Mr Dallat: Perhaps after saying all those nice things, will the Minister please focus particularly on Glenarm and that area? In recent times, I was over at an event to save the Dal Hospital, and it is just impossible to get a signal?

Mrs Foster: That is more a telecoms issue — a mobile issue. I am more than happy to look at that issue. Indeed, I had a meeting with Vodafone, one of the mobile phone operators, today, and we talked about small communities not being able to access telecoms. Vodafone has rolled out a programme for small communities, and perhaps I could share that information with any of the Members here, so that they can approach Vodafone to take that forward.

The jobs fund has played its part in East Antrim as well; it has promoted 481 jobs. Some of the indigenous companies have been very strong. We have talked a little about foreign direct investment, but I have to mention Glenarm Organic Salmon. I have been with them on trade missions, and the last one was in the Middle East last year. I was proud to be with them and proud to support them because of their innovative way of doing business. The provenance and the story behind their salmon is very strong, and they are now exploring new markets in Hong Kong, Dubai, North America and China, and we will continue to support them to grow into the future.

Mr Wilson: Will the Minister give way?

Mrs Foster: Yes, I will.

Mr Wilson: Mr Dallat also mentioned Steensons, the jewellery company in Glenarm. Would the Minister accept from me that, had it not been for some of the help from her Department and the Tourist Board, the grant aid that went into the Star of the Sea school, which will give Steensons a new platform from which to present their goods, would not have happened?

Mrs Foster: I thought that the Member was going to say, "Would I accept from him a gift from Steensons?" [Laughter.] I was going to ask how I could possibly do that; I would have to declare it. He is right: he have been trying to work on that issue as well.

In relation to Mr McMullan's point about local economic development, there have been 10 initiatives undertaken by the local councils in conjunction with Invest Northern Ireland. They have made quite an impact right across that region. In fact, an investment of £1·5 million has gone into those local economic development initiatives, and I am hopeful that, again, when SEUPB brings out its new programme, the local economic development part will be able to develop as well. I say to the new super-council that it needs to step forward on economic development and make sure that it works alongside Invest Northern Ireland.

Mr McMullan: Will the Minister give way?

Mrs Foster: Yes, I am happy to give way.

Mr McMullan: I agree with the Minister in all that she has said so far — even with the rest of the people, the poets and all. We are talking here about the whole of the coast road from the mid glens right up into Carrickfergus, not just down to Steensons or Ballygally Castle. You have the mid glens, and you have Glenariff Forest Park. We need employment. What I said tonight is what came out of talking to people at a public meeting that Margaret Anne McKillop was not at. Minister, what I am bringing to you came from a public meeting. I know exactly what you are talking about with regard to Invest NI. Tomorrow, I am meeting Invest NI, but we need jobs on the ground for young people to come back to work in the area. We have no ground for a small business park, for example, and that is really lost, as it would attract SMEs into the area.

Mrs Foster: I say to the Member that I agree with other Members who spoke tonight: it is important to portray the area positively. Yes, we have to deal with challenges in all our constituencies, but it is important that we talk about the positive parts of them.

I do not have much time left, but I want to talk about the tourism offering of the whole glens and the whole coastal road. The successful implementation of the Causeway Coast and Glens signature project includes developments all along that road. Obviously, the Giant's Causeway visitor centre is included; it is world-class. I agree with Mr Wilson when he says that the Gobbins path will be an outstanding tourism attraction for the area. It is something new, but, apart from that, it is absolutely stunning. I recall going to the edge of a cliff with Mr Wilson to launch the Gobbins path. You may say that that was a very dangerous thing to do [Laughter.] , but I did it. That is what a Minister has to do: take risks. Anyway, I believe that it will be a tremendous enhancement to the offering. When tourists come for the Gobbins path or the Giant's Causeway, they will experience the other fabulous sights along the glens. I have to say that there is more to be done in promoting the glens, and I hope that the new super-council will do that in conjunction with Invest Northern Ireland and Tourism NI.

I want to mention screen tourism quickly. It is, of course, a niche market for tourism in Northern Ireland, but East Antrim has very much played its part in that. The Magheramorne quarry was mentioned in relation to future tourism projects, but it has really played its part in screen tourism.

My goodness, what a fabulous event the Giro d'Italia was, right along the Causeway Coast and glens.

I make this plain: Mr Dickson said that we needed to work in a collaborative way to do all that is best for East Antrim, and I could not agree more. There really is a need for MLAs, the new super-councils, the MP and all the bodies to work collaboratively to make the most of East Antrim. It has a very good story to tell, and I am pleased that we were able to talk a little about it today.

Age Discrimination Legislation

Published at 1.30 pm on Thursday 19 February 2015

Mr Robinson and Mr McGuinness (The First Minister and the deputy First Minister): While we have an extensive body of anti-discrimination law in place here, there is one major gap– legal protection from unjustifiable age discrimination by those providing goods, facilities and services. The Programme for Government contains a commitment to extend age discrimination legislation to close this gap. We remain committed to eradicating harmful and unjustifiable age discrimination in this area and we are today, announcing our decision to take forward proposals to prohibit unjustifiable age - differentiated practices against people aged 16 and over by those providing goods, facilities and services.

The proposals and subsequent legislation will put age discrimination outside work on a similar footing to discrimination in the workplace. It will give individuals confidence that it is their right to be treated fairly. It will also help service providers to eliminate harmful age discrimination by providing them with a clear legal framework within which to deliver services.

While the intention is to outlaw age discrimination in the provision of goods, facilities and services, we recognise that there are times when it is justified and indeed beneficial to treat people differently because of their age, for example age based state benefits or the prohibition on the sale of alcohol to people under 18. Therefore the proposals will not affect other legislation which currently imposes statutory age limits.

The aim of the new legislation is to protect young people aged 16 and 17 and adults from discrimination because of their age. We recognise this may come as a disappointment to some.

We intend to bring forward a consultation document in the Spring which will set out our policy proposals, taking account of the current legislation in Great Britain and Ireland and submissions made to date by the Children's Commissioner, the Older People's Commissioner, the Equality Commission and members of the children's and older people's sector. We will want to ensure the policy document has robust rationale for exceptions to any anti-age discrimination legislation.

When we have concluded our policy consultation and agreed a robust policy position we will then consider all the options available to us for bringing this legislation before the Assembly.

Road Traffic (Amendment) Bill [NIA 35/11-15]

Members present for all or part of the proceedings:

Ms Anna Lo (Chairperson)
Mrs Pam Cameron (Deputy Chairperson)
Mr Cathal Boylan
Mr Colum Eastwood
Mr Alban Maginness
Mr Ian McCrea
Mr Ian Milne
Lord Morrow
Mr Peter Weir

The Chairperson (Ms Lo): Members, you will recall that we looked at all the clauses, but then the Department came back to us and said that, in view of what we suggested, it is bringing forward amendments, so we have not produced our final report. You now have a number of tabled papers that you need to look at. I think we have to go through them. I will let you have a quick read of them, and then we will do the formal consideration. I remind you that the session is being recorded by Hansard.

Clause 3 ("The prescribed limit": further provision)

The Chairperson (Ms Lo): Clause 3 amends article 19 of the Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1995 to retain the option — commonly called the "statutory option" — at the new lower prescribed limits. The Committee was previously content with a small technical amendment to clause 3 to comply with the recommendation of the Examiner of Statutory Rules on the delegated powers memorandum that the regulation-making power should be subject to draft affirmative resolution rather than affirmative resolution as it is currently drafted. In addition, the Committee asked the Department to bring forward an amendment to remove the statutory option, which was agreed by the Minister. Consequently, the Committee formally agreed that it was content with clause 3, subject to those two amendments. The following amendment has now been put forward by the Department:

"Clause 3, page 3, line 36

Leave out clause 3".

Are members content with that amendment? If so, I will put the Question that the Committee agrees to rescind its previous decision that it was content with clause 3 as amended and that the Committee is content with the departmental amendment to leave out clause 3.

Members indicated assent.

Clause 6 (Evidential breath test without preliminary breath test or check-point breath test)

The Chairperson (Ms Lo): The next one is a miscellaneous amendment to clause 6. The Department has brought forward the following minor amendment to clause 6, which is a technical drafting refinement made by the Office of the Legislative Counsel (OLC) for consistency elsewhere in the Bill:

Leave out 'repealed' and insert 'omitted'"

You will wish to consider if you are content with that amendment and, if so, I put the Question that the Committee agrees to rescind its previous decision that it was content with clause 6 as drafted and that the Committee is content with clause 6, subject to the proposed departmental amendment.

Members indicated assent.

New Clause

The Chairperson (Ms Lo): The next one is an amendment on the removal of the statutory option from the Order of 1995, which is a consequential amendment of the deletion of clause 3 and the insertion of new clause 6A. The Department has provided the following wording for the new clause:

"After clause 6 insert —

'Choice of specimens

6A. Article 19 of the Order of 1995 (choice of specimens of breath) is amended as follows —

(a) for the title, substitute 'Lower of 2 specimens of breath to be used',

(b) in paragraph (1), the words 'Subject to paragraph (2),' are omitted,

(c) paragraphs (2), (2A) and (3) are omitted.'"

You will wish to consider if you are content with that amendment and, if so, I put the Question that the Committee is content with the departmental amendment to introduce new clause 6A.

Members indicated assent.

Clause 16 (Minimum age for licence: small vehicle)

The Chairperson (Ms Lo): Next, we have amendments on the minimum age for holding a provisional licence and the mandatory minimum learning period. Clause 16 reduces the minimum age for obtaining a provisional licence from 17 to 16 and a half. Members asked the Department to bring forward an amendment to remove the clause so that the minimum age remains at the current statutory age of 17. The Department has provided the following amendment:

Leave out clause 16".

Members will wish to consider whether they are content with this amendment. If so, I will put the Question —

Mr Boylan: Before you put the Question, Chair, I am not saying that I will push this to the vote, but we were content with 16 and a half. Obviously, the majority of the Committee is content to change the clause. I am not going to force it to a vote or anything; I just want to put it on record that I thought that 16 and a half was reasonable.

The Chairperson (Ms Lo): OK. The Question is that the Committee agrees to rescind its previous decision that it was not content with clause 16 as drafted and that the Committee is content with the departmental amendment to leave out clause 16. Are we agreed?

Members indicated assent.

Clause 17 (Provisional licence to be held for minimum period in certain cases)

The Chairperson (Ms Lo): The next one is clause 17, which makes it a requirement for a person to hold a provisional licence for at least one year before being able to take the practical driving test. The Committee asked the Department to bring forward an amendment to reduce the minimum required period of learning to six months. The Department has provided the following amendment:

Leave out '12' and insert '6'".

Members will wish to consider whether you are content with this amendment. If so, I put the Question that the Committee agrees to rescind its previous decision that it was content with clause 17 as amended and that the Committee is content with clause 17 subject to the proposed departmental amendment.

Members indicated assent.

Clause 18 (Approved programmes of training: category B motor vehicles and motor bicycles)

The Chairperson (Ms Lo): Next, we have miscellaneous amendments. The Department is proposing a number of technical amendments to clause 18 due to the Immigration Act 2014 having inserted a new article 13A to the Road Traffic (NI) Order 1981: residence requirement. As a new article 13A is also proposed in the Bill, amendments are necessary to avoid duplication. The amendments state:

"Clause 18, page 17, line 17

Leave out '13 (grant of licences)' and insert '13A (residence requirement for grant of licences)'."

"Clause 18, page 17, line 20

"Clause 18, page 17, line 37

Leave out '13B.' and insert '13C'."

"Clause 18, page 19, line 17

"Clause 18, page 19, line 19

Leave out '13B' and insert '13C'."

"Clause 18, page 19, line 27

Leave out '13B' and insert '13C'."

The Committee previously indicated that it was content for the Department to bring forward the amendments. If members are content with the wording of the amendment, I put the Question that the Committee agrees to rescind its previous decision that it was content with clause 18 as amended and that the Committee is content with clause 18 subject to the proposed departmental amendments.

Members indicated assent.

New Clause

The Chairperson (Ms Lo): Next is miscellaneous amendments and new clause 22A. The Department proposes to insert a new clause after clause 22 on the recommendation of the Examiner of Statutory Rules. It provides that subordinate legislation made under the 1995 Order should be subject to draft affirmative procedure rather than affirmative procedure.

The new clause also includes, at (a) and (b), provision that was originally part of clause 3. Since clause 3 has now been removed, the draftsman has relocated the provision in clause 22A. The Department has provided the following wording for the new clause:

"Before clause 23 insert —

'Further amendment of the Order of 1995

22A. Article 110 of the Order of 1995 is amended as follows —

a) in paragraph (1) (exception from requirement for orders to be subject —"

[Inaudible due to mobile phone interference.] Someone's phone is on. I am sorry, but you need to check your phones. Who is guilty?

Mr Eastwood: Mine was on, but it is off.

The Chairperson (Ms Lo): I can hear it. [Inaudible due to mobile phone interference.] I will read it again:

"Before clause 23 insert —

'Further amendment of the Order of 1995

22A. Article 110 of the Order of 1995 is amended as follows —

a) in paragraph (1) (exception from requirement for orders to be subject to negative resolution), for 'this Order', where it first occurs, substitute 'paragraph (3A)',

(b) after paragraph (3) insert —

(3A) An order made under —

(a) Article 13A(4) or (7), or

(b) Article 63(9),

shall not be made unless a draft has been laid before, and approved by a resolution of, the Assembly.

(c) in paragraph (4) (procedure for certain regulations), for 'shall be subject to affirmative resolution' substitute

'shall not be made unless a draft has been laid before, and approved by a resolution of, the Assembly'".

Members will wish to consider whether they are content with the amendment. If so, I put the Question that the Committee is content with the departmental amendment to introduce new clause 22A.

Members indicated assent.

Clause 23 (Supplementary, incidental and consequential etc. provision)

The Chairperson (Ms Lo): The Department has brought forward a technical amendment to clause 23. Its purpose is to clarify that draft affirmative procedure will apply to any subordinate legislation that amends primary legislation. It is a drafting refinement that is being applied generally to Northern Ireland Bills. The Department has provided the following wording for the amendment:

"a. Clause 23, page 28, line 11

Leave out 'a statutory provision' and insert 'Northern Ireland legislation or an Act of Parliament'."

Members will wish to consider whether they are content with the amendment. If so, I put the Question that the Committee agrees to rescind its previous decision that it was content with clause 23 as drafted and that the Committee is content with clause 23 subject to the proposed departmental amendment.

This is a bit of a nuisance, isn't it? Are members content?

Members indicated assent.

Schedule 1 (Transitional and saving provisions)

The Chairperson (Ms Lo): For schedule 1, a number of consequential amendments have arisen as a result of the previous amendments. The Department is proposing the following amendments to schedule 1 in relation to the removal of the "statutory option":

"Schedule 1, page 29, line 7

Leave out 'sections 2 and 3' and insert 'section 2'"

"Schedule 1, page 29, line 17

At end insert —

'Choice of specimens

2A. The amendments of the Order of 1995 made by section 6A do not apply in relation to an offence committed before the commencement of the amendments.'"

The Department is also proposing the following amendments to the same schedule in relation to the minimum age for holding a provisional licence and the mandatory minimum learning period:

"Schedule 1, page 31, line 30

Leave out paragraph 12"

"Schedule 1, page 31, line 35

Leave out '12' and insert '6'"

"Schedule 1, page 31, line 40

Leave out '12' and insert '6'"

"Schedule 1, page 32, line 28

Leave out '12' and insert '6'"

The third and final amendment to schedule 1 relates to the definitions of "taxi" and "taxi drivers' licence". It was a transitional measure that was only required:

"until the commencement of sections 22 and 23 of the Taxis Act (Northern Ireland) 2008".

Those provisions have now commenced, and paragraph 2 is therefore no longer required.

"Schedule 1, page 29, line 10

Leave out paragraph 2"

Members will wish to consider whether they are content with the amendments, and, if so, I will put the Question that the Committee agrees to rescind its previous decision that it was content with schedule 1 as amended and that the Committee is content with schedule 1 subject to the proposed departmental amendments.

Members indicated assent.

Schedule 2 (Repeals)

The Chairperson (Ms Lo): The Department is proposing the following consequential amendments in relation to the removal of the "statutory option":

"Schedule 2, page 33, line 31

In column 2, leave out 'In Article 19, paragraph (2).' and insert 'In Article 19(1), the words 'subject to paragraph (2),'"

"Schedule 2, page 33, line 31

In column 2, at end insert —

'Article 19(2), (2A) and (3).'"

Members will wish to consider whether they are content with this amendment, and, if so, I will put the Question that the Committee agrees to rescind its previous decision that it was content with schedule 2 as amended and that the Committee is content with schedule 2 subject to the proposed departmental amendments.

Members indicated assent.

The Chairperson (Ms Lo): This stage of the Bill is due to end on 27 March 2015, so members will wish to finalise the Committee's report and order it to be printed as soon as possible. The draft final report will be put before you on 19 March. There is really very little; we have only to add in those amendments.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Mr Hussey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister why they have not answered AQO 5995/11-15 which was due for answer on 3 March 2014; and AQW 33966/11-15 which was due for answer on 11 June 2014.
(AQW 38020/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): We would refer the member to the answer to AQO 5995/11-15 which was provided on 17 November 2014. We would refer the member to the answer to AQW 33966/11-15 which was provided on 16 December 2014.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what proportion of the Shackleton site at Ballykelly will be designated to the community voluntary sector.
(AQW 38522/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Any plans for the future development of the Shackleton site will be expected to demonstrate how community needs have been identified and will be met.

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the establishment of the Civic Forum.
(AQW 39480/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Civic Forum which acted as a consultative mechanism on social, economic and cultural issues and functioned from 2000 to 2002, when devolution was suspended, has not since been reconvened.

Following the restoration of devolution in 2007, the then First Minister and deputy First Minister commissioned a review of the effectiveness and appropriateness of the Civic Forum, which had operated between 2000 and 2002. In addition, the review was to make recommendations on the most appropriate mechanism for engaging with civic society.

A public consultation was held in 2008. Inputs to the consultation did not suggest a widespread desire for a return to a structure of the size and expense of the Forum, as it had previously operated.

The participants to the recent Stormont House Agreement agreed the importance of having civic voices heard and civic views considered in relation to key social, cultural and economic issues. They envisaged that a new engagement model could be achieved, by June 2015, through the establishment of a compact civic advisory panel which would meet regularly to consider key social, cultural and economic issues and to advise the Executive.

Mr Rogers asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister why the officially recorded minutes of meetings of the Northern Ireland Executive are not made available to non-Executive MLAs or published for public transparency.
(AQW 39865/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: It is essential for the Executive to be able to conduct its work in an environment where Ministers can be confident that the content of their papers and their views are protected. We do not, therefore, release information, including minutes of meetings which provide details of Executive business or its decision making processes. The Executive may, however, where it considers it appropriate, make a statement on its decisions or views on a particular issue.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the Early Intervention Transformation Programme, as part of the framework for Delivering Social Change.
(AQW 39946/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Early Intervention Transformation Programme is one of three Delivering Social Change Signature Programmes co-funded by Atlantic Philanthropies which we announced in September 2014.

A Programme Board has been established and three initial work-streams have been identified, as follows:

- Work-stream 1 to focus on equipping all parents with the skills needed to give their child the best start in life;

- Work-stream 2 to focus on supporting families locally when problems first emerge and before they become embedded; and
- Work-stream 3 to focus on addressing the impact of adversity on children, by intervening both earlier and more effectively to reduce the risk of poor outcomes later in life.

Whilst the projects within Work-streams 1 and 2 are currently being developed via a broad engagement process, three initial projects from Work-stream 3 have been approved by the Programme Board and are actively being pursued. These relate to earlier intervention in the lives of children living in particularly adverse circumstances.

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 39470/11-15, to detail (i) the total funding; and (ii) the date funding will be made available to REACH Across.
(AQW 40575/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The 2014/15 Central Good Relations Funding scheme closed for applications on 10 February 2014. There was a very significant demand for funding. Thirty-two applicants have been awarded funding totalling around £1.6M.

Funding has been released in phases as it has become available. REACH Across has not been successful in the previous tranche. However, by keeping applications live, there is still an opportunity for funding further groups if funding becomes available in year. The organisation will, along with the other remaining applicants, be advised of the outcome of their application as soon as possible.

Ms Boyle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what funding streams are available within their Department for community groups to apply for in 2015.
(AQW 40650/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Department provides funding through a range of funding schemes and programmes. Community groups may apply to these where their applications meet the specific criteria for the schemes.

For 2014/15, Community groups whose applications meet the criteria, may apply for small grants of up to £500 through the Central Good Relations Fund.

All other community related funding streams for 2014/15 are now fully committed.

Now that the 2015/16 budget has been agreed by the Executive, the Department will be able to finalise funding allocations for the new financial year.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 38521/11-15, what proportion of this site is likely to be designated for use by the community voluntary sector.
(AQW 40856/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Our aim is that community needs should be identified and taken into account in the future disposal of the Shackleton site. Any plans for the future development of the site will be expected to demonstrate how this would be done.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 39389/11-15, whether it is likely that findings of the stakeholder review of the North West Gateway Initiative, and material relating to further consultation with relevant Departments, will be published in due course.
(AQW 40902/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We refer you to our answer of 9 December 2014.

The publication of the Stakeholder consultation is a matter for the North South Ministerial Council to consider at a future meeting.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for their assessment of the role and effectiveness of the One Plan Interdepartmental Coordination Group.
(AQW 40904/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The One Plan Interdepartmental Coordination Group provides strategic analysis and advice to the Executive, departments and the Derry/Londonderry Strategy Board on the most appropriate means through which the policies, programmes and projects of Executive Departments can positively impact the One Plan. The Group meets twice a year to monitor progress and it also provides a forum for the discussion and resolution of cross cutting issues. Individual departments remain, however, responsible for the implementation of their own policies, programmes and projects.

Progress continues to be made on the implementation of the One Plan across each of the Catalyst Programmes to grow the local economy, and provide more jobs.

Mr F McCann asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the United Youth element of Together: Building a United Community.
(AQO 7345/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: One of the seven core headline actions committed to within Together: Building a United Community is the development of the United Youth Programme.

To date there has been comprehensive and detailed engagement with youth related organisations and young people themselves to ensure the programme has maximum buy-in and consensus.

The co-design process begun by OFMDFM is being continued by the Department for Employment and Learning and is being supported by a Design Team which includes representation from the Department for Employment and Learning, OFMDFM, the Department for Social Development, the Department of Education, Community Relations Council, Youthnet, Youth Council, International Fund for Ireland, Public Health Agency and Education and Library Boards.

OFMDFM successfully ran the first pilot through Springboard called “Headstart”.

A call for concept proposals to deliver pilot projects was issued in early September. Following a development phase in the Autumn, over 150 pilot applications were submitted in December. An assessment of these proposals was completed with assistance from the programme’s Design Team.

As a result, 50 organisations (57 proposals) have been selected to go through to the next co-design development stage. Following this development phase, a number of pilot schemes will be operational during the 2015/16 financial year.

It is expected that the selected pilot projects will be aimed at the 16 – 24 age group who are not in education, employment or training and offered to approximately 300 young people. By summer 2016 the programme will extend the eligible age range to the 14-24 age group.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how much funding has been allocated through the Social Investment Fund to deprived areas within the Northern Zone since 2011.
(AQW 41488/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Social Investment Fund selection criteria meant that projects must address deprivation or dereliction. Six projects, fulfilling these criteria are being taken forward in the Northern Zone. They are as follows:

Coleraine Rural and Urban Network (CRUN) and Fuel Poverty had funding of £0.46 million and £1.83 million respectively, committed in 2014. CRUN has contractors on site.

A letter of offer has issued to Community Capacity Hubs for £1.13 million and a letter of offer will issue shortly for Employment through Education for £3.54 million.

Capacity for Health and Access to Employment and Health are estimated at £1.7 million and £0.8 million respectively. These figures are approximate as both projects are currently going through the internal approvals process.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the Social Protection Fund as outlined in the Programme for Government 2011-15.
(AQW 41551/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Social Protection Fund was designed to help individuals and families facing hardship due to the ongoing economic downturn.

During 2012 some £22 million was distributed by the Department for Social Development and the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety as Winter Fuel Payments for benefit recipients and cancer patients. However, no funding was explicitly allocated to the Social Protection Fund over the remaining three years of the budget period.

In 2013 we decided to subsume the Social Protection Fund into one consolidated and integrated ‘Delivering Social Change Fund’ which affords us the opportunity to respond quickly, and in a flexible manner, to urgent social needs as they arise and address the specific needs of some of our most vulnerable individuals and families.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development (i) what discussions she has had with the Minister of the Environment on the environmental damage caused to rivers by fuel launderers; (ii) to detail the rivers concerned; and (iii) to detail any fish kills attributed to fuel laundering over the last five years.
(AQW 41182/11-15)

Mrs O’Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): I have had no discussions with the Minister of the Environment regarding environmental damage caused to rivers by fuel launderers. Information relating to environmental damage caused to rivers and any fish kills attributed to fuel laundering should be sought from the Department of the Environment.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 40427/11-15, why Countryside Management Scheme payments will be delayed, despite farm businesses declaring their intention to claim in May 2014.
(AQW 41329/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The NI Countryside Management Scheme (NICMS) is administered according to the rules set down in EU and National Legislation. Under these rules, claims for all agri-environment agreements entering into force after 01 January 2007 must be made via the Single Application Form (SAF) and be received by 15 May of that year.

Agri-environment scheme participants must comply with the terms and conditions of the scheme and have the full calendar year in which to observe required prescriptions and complete any claimed work. Therefore, my Department may be unable to complete some required control checks prior to the end of the calendar year. Furthermore, by issuing the second stage claims in early 2015 my Department is able to provide the scheme participant with the most up to date information available on their pre-populated form thus assisting them to make an accurate claim. My Department is currently on schedule to commence payment of the 2014 NICMS claims in May 2015, which is in line with the issue of the 2013 payments.

As with all payments to farmers I will continue to press for NICMS payments to be made as early as possible.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 40427/11-15, why claim forms will not be available until the end of February 2015.
(AQW 41330/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The issuing of the NI Countryside Management Scheme (NICMS) Second stage claim forms commenced on 26 January 2015 and will continue over the next 6-8 weeks.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 40427/11-15, how practical the two week window will be for farmers.
(AQW 41331/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: For the 2014 NI Countryside Management Scheme participants have been asked to return their completed second stage claim within two weeks of receipt. This will allow DARD to begin processing of the forms and ensure payments are made as soon as possible. Late claims may result in a delay to payments for all participants.

This year the second stage claim form is pre-populated. This will mean for the majority of claimants they will have little or no changes to make, so allowing for a quicker return. My Department consulted with farmer representative groups on this issue and no concerns were received regarding the two week return period.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 40427/11-15, whether the two week window is to allow her Department to facilitate the administration of the Countryside Management Scheme; and what appeal process is in place for an application which falls outside the two week window.
(AQW 41332/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: All farm businesses which declared their intention to claim for the NICMS on the 2014 Single Application Form (SAF), will receive a claim pack, including a pre-populated claim form and a guide on how to complete the form. Farm businesses have been asked to return the form within two weeks of receipt. This will allow DARD to begin processing of the forms and ensure payments are made as soon as possible.

The Review of Decision Process is available to applicants who may wish to request a formal review of a decision made by DARD. To request a Stage One review applicants must contact the Countryside Management Development Branch at Loughry Campus and request a Review of Decisions Stage 1 application form (AP1). The completed application form must be received by the Department no later than 42 calendar days of the date on the decision letter. I wish to encourage all farmers to return their claim as promptly as possible as this will enable the processing of the claim towards payment.

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the the financial investment in fisheries in (i) Kilkeel; (ii) Annalong; and (iii) Ardglass, in each year since 2007.
(AQW 41420/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: From 2007 to 2009 grant funding was made available to the fishing communities of Kilkeel, Annalong and Ardglass through the EU Financial Instrument for Fisheries Guidance (FIFG). This fund was succeeded by the European Fisheries Fund which provided the investment from 2009.

Details of the level of investment (up to and including 31st December 2014) are set out in the table below:

	Annalong	Ardglass	Kilkeel
2007	£0	£0	£943,373
2008	£0	£0	£217,964
2009	£0	£0	£0

	Annalong	Ardglass	Kilkeel
2010	£0	£467,662	£807,835
2011	£141,921	£399,124	£1,334,899
2012	£32,437	£122,821	£1,238,897
2013	£41,584	£294,719	£268,585
2014	£142,678	£135,400	£2,587,808

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether the latest farm maps issued to farmers in 2014 contain all the previous information supplied by farmers and the inspections considered and included in the re-mapping exercise; and whether these changes or amendments can be audited.
(AQW 41424/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In November 2014 farmers were sent an updated 2015 Scheme map and field information table to assist completion of the 2015 Single Application Form. These maps only showed the fields declared by a business in its 2014 Single Application Form. Field boundaries had been reassessed and ineligible areas had been captured to lower levels than in previous maps.

As this information will be used to pre-print the 2015 Single Application Form, DARD asked businesses to check their map carefully and to advise us of any necessary changes. If a farmer advised us of changes to their map or if we make any further changes, for example, as a result of an on-the-spot inspection, we will issue a replacement map in early 2015.

In order to produce the final map, we have to combine information from a variety of sources. These include the ongoing wider DARD review of maps, farmer reported changes and inspection findings.

These changes are applied in a priority order. In practice this means that an inspection change may override a change indicated by a review of aerial photography if the inspection was more recent. Farmer reported changes may similarly be over-ridden in certain circumstances due to greater accuracy of the inspection. In this case it is possible that a farmer change reported before an inspection is carried out may not have been applied.

All inspection information will be applied to DARD's mapping dataset to assist with the 2015 scheme year, but due to the lengthy process of inspection review and appeal, some of these have not yet been applied. These will be applied at the earliest opportunity and if possible a map issued to farm businesses in April. If it is not possible to provide a revised map in advance of the May SAF deadline, my staff will communicate directly with these farmers and advise them on how to complete their 2015 SAF.

If a farmer identifies an error in the maps received, it is important that the farmer lets the Department know and adjusts the claim accordingly.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she will extend the legislation banning fox hunting to Northern Ireland.
(AQW 41460/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department has no powers to regulate, or ban, hunting or coursing with dogs. Hunting is not regarded as an agricultural activity. It is not exclusively carried out on agricultural land and the fox is not regarded as an agricultural animal. DARD has responsibility for the Welfare of Animals Act 2011 (the 2011 Act), but its responsibilities towards animals in the wild are very limited and do not include any controls over the hunting, or taking, of wild animals and birds, or powers of entry for their protection.

Section 53 of the 2011 Act specifically exempts from its provisions the coursing or hunting of any animal, other than a protected animal, except under certain circumstances such as the animal being released in an injured state or into a confined space from which it has no reasonable chance of escape.

As the hunting issue cuts across the responsibilities of two or more Ministers any introduction of legislation to ban hunting with dogs is a matter for the Executive.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what process has been put in place to appoint the Chairperson for the Agri-Food Strategy Board for the next term.
(AQW 41503/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Chair and industry Members of the Agri-Food Strategy Board (AFSB) were appointed on merit following an open and transparent competition conducted in accordance with the spirit of the Commissioner for Public Appointments NI Code of Practice.

The DETI Minister and I are currently considering future arrangements for strategic advice to government on development of the agri-food sector. I expect decisions on future arrangements to be communicated to stakeholders in the very near future.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether any measures are in place to increase the representation of primary producers on the Agri-Food Strategy Board.
(AQW 41504/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Chair and 8 industry members of the Agri-Food Strategy Board (AFSB) were appointed on merit following an open and transparent competition which was conducted in the spirit of the Commissioner for Public Appointments NI Code of Practice.

Those appointed to the Board were selected, not to represent specific sectors or elements of the supply chain, but because Minister Foster and I believed collectively they had the appropriate skills and experience to develop a strategic vision for the agri-food sector and a plan to achieve that vision.

As a result of this competitive process, two producers were appointed to the AFSB, and in addition two employees of producer-led co-operatives were also appointed. In addition, there was significant primary producer representation on the Board's sectoral sub-groups, which ensured that the views of farmers, growers and fishermen fed directly into the development of the Board's Going for Growth report. Stakeholder organisations, including producers, also had an opportunity to contribute their views via a public Call for Evidence.

It is envisaged that producers will continue to play a key role in implementation of the agreed actions in response to Going for Growth.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the funding her Department has awarded to the Newry and Armagh constituency since 2007, broken down by the (i) amount awarded; and (ii) the scheme from which the funding was awarded.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what percentage of the Military Covenant her Department has adopted as policy; and what percentage has been implemented.
(AQW 40637/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): My Department and its associated arm's length bodies ensure equality of opportunity for all individuals and groups in accessing services across the culture, arts and leisure sector.

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what funding streams are available within her Department for sports groups to apply for in 2015.
(AQW 40647/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: To sustain and increase participation, and improve performances in sport, Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department, invests in a range of projects throughout the north of Ireland. Sport NI is a Lottery award distributor and also provides exchequer funding to sports groups and clubs seeking funding in the north.

Sport NI's Active Awards for Sport programme is a Lottery funded small grants programme primarily aimed at grassroots community based sport. Round two of this programme is currently being assessed and will be completed at the end January 2015. The next funding round of Active Awards for Sport programme will open in March 2015.

In addition, new funding streams will be developed should other funding become available. Sports groups and clubs can register with Sport NI via its website, so that they are informed of these new funding programmes as they are launched.

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the outcomes from the report of the elver fish kill at Ballyshannon Power Station in 2014; and whether the Electricity Supply Board will be prosecuted for this incident.
(AQW 40700/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Inland Fisheries Ireland (IFI) has undertaken an investigation of the fish kill in April 2014 at Ballyshannon and has referred the matter for legal opinion.

No details of the findings of the investigation have been released as yet and as such it would be inappropriate for me to comment further on the matter at this time. I will keep you advised of developments.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to list the (i) recipients; and (ii) relevant awards from Sports NI since May 2011.
(AQW 40710/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: To sustain and increase participation, and improve performances in sport, Sport NI, an arm's-length body of my Department, invests in a range of projects throughout the north of Ireland. Sport NI is a Lottery award distributor and also provides exchequer funding to a number of Sport NI recognised Governing Bodies of Sport and sports groups and clubs seeking funding in the north.

Details of investments awarded by Sport NI since May 2011 to March 2014 can be accessed on the Sport NI website at http://www.sportni.net/funding/funding-guidance/ I have arranged for details of awards granted since April 2014 to date to be placed in the Assembly library.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how much money had been profiled for spend on the redevelopment of Casement Park between January 2015 and March 2016.
(AQW 40727/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The spend profile for the redevelopment of Casement Park between January 2015 and March 2016, prior to the outcome of the Judicial Review, was circa £53.0m.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure when she first became aware of the scale of the opposition to the GAA proposal for the redevelopment of Casement Park.
(AQW 40728/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: A local residents group, Mooreland and Owenvarragh Residents' Association (MORA), first made contact with me in November 2012 to raise their concerns regarding the redevelopment of Casement Park.

Extensive community consultation was an essential element of the planning process. The UCGAA were fully committed to fully consulting all the community including MORA and therefore a number of community consultation events took place. My Department was fully supportive to the UCGAA during the community consultation process for the redevelopment of the Casement Park.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure why her Department made no contingency plans to ensure that, if there was a delay in the redevelopment of Casement Park, the funding could be used for other parts of the overall three-sports stadiums package which were ready to move forward, in particular the football sub-regional stadiums, and so that no funding would be handed back by her Department.

(AQW 40729/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: DCAL has been allocated £110 million by the Executive to deliver the Stadia projects which include the redevelopment of Casement Park. The redevelopment of Casement Park is an Executive Programme for Government pledge and therefore remains a key priority.

The funding cannot be used by the Department for other capital projects. It is part of a decision that was made by the Executive going back as far as March 2011. I remain fully committed to ensuring this project is delivered and I will do all that I can to ensure funds are made available in the event that planning permission is granted at a later date.

The Executive endorsed a proposal to provide an additional c. £36m for sub-regional stadium development for football as a priority area of spend in the next CSR period (2015).

DCAL has developed a Strategic Outline Case for the Sub Regional Programme and following the Assembly's approval of the 2015/16 budget, this programme will now proceed and commence it next stages.

I am optimistic that the remaining full funding will be approved in due course to allow construction work to commence in 2016/17.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the Casement Park redevelopment project.
(AQW 40808/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Funding Agreement was issued to the UCGAA and the successful contractor (Heron Buckingham JV) was appointed in December 2013.

Planning permission for a 38,000 all-seater stadium at Casement Park was granted by the Department of Environment in January 2014.

A local residents group, Mooreland and Owenvarragh Residents' Association, (MORA) applied for a Judicial review into the decision and this was granted. The case was heard over 13 days between 9 September and 13 October 2014. On 18th December 2014 Mr Justice Horner quashed the existing planning approval for the Casement Park project.

There is a strong resolve within the Ulster GAA to submit a new planning application in 2015 to develop a regional stadium in Ulster at Casement Park. Any new planning application will take account of the learning points raised in the judgment and DCAL will fully support Ulster GAA during the new planning process.

The redevelopment of Casement Park is an Executive Programme for Government pledge and therefore will remain a key priority.

DCAL is committed to the re-development of Casement Park and will work with all parties to facilitate this becoming a reality.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail any operations by bailiffs on the stretch of the Braid River from Curls Avenue to Railway Street and to Sainsbury's supermarket in Ballymena, in the last twelve months.
(AQW 40913/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: In the last twelve months there have been sixteen patrols by DCAL Fisheries Protection Officers on the stretch of the Braid River in question.

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on her Department's future plans for the management of Seagahan Dam, Armagh.
(AQW 40922/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department has entered into a new leasing arrangement with NI Water (NIW) for an additional 14 waters which includes Seagahan Reservoir. My Department will manage the Seagahan fishery directly in 2015.

In accordance with the approach for the other NIW waters it is my Department's intention to invite interested parties, through a public tender process, to manage and develop Seagahan Reservoir in the future.

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail her Department's financial investment in South Down in each year since 2007, including the (i) organisations that have received funding; and (b) investment they received.
(AQW 41423/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The information you requested is provided in the attached table. For the purposes of this response, investment is understood to include capital and resource funding since 2007: it is reported on a financial year basis except in the case of North/ South Bodies where expenditure is reported on a calendar year basis.

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what progress has been made on the Ulster-Scots dictionary and glossary; (ii) how much it has cost to date; (iii) how many people are working on the project; and (iv) when it is expected to be delivered.
(AQW 41496/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín:

(i) An Ulster-Scots “Spelling and Pronunciation Guide” and “Word Glossary” was published by the Ulster-Scots Language Society in March 2013. This publication resulted from work largely undertaken by the Ulster-Scots Academy Implementation Group. These documents will make an important contribution to the aim of the Ministerial Advisory Group – Ulster Scots Academy to develop an Ulster-Scots dictionary. This will first require agreement on the orthography of Ulster Scots.

To this end in October 2013 my Department appointed an Orthography panel of linguistic experts to advise the Ministerial Advisory Group (MAG) – Ulster Scots Academy on the implementation and development of Ulster Scots Orthography. The Orthography Panel is due to deliver its first Interim Report March 2015.

(ii) To date my Department has spent £25,673 on preparatory work for an Ulster-Scots dictionary. £20,673 was for the development of an Ulster-Scots "Spelling and Pronunciation Guide" and "Word Glossary" under the auspices of the Ulster-Scots Academy Implementation Group in 2011, £13,523 of this money was spent by the Ulster-Scots Academy Implementation Group and £7,150 by the Ulster-Scots Agency. The Ministerial Advisory Group Ulster Scots Academy has provided a further £5,000 to the Ulster Scots Language Society for completion and publication of the "Spelling and Pronunciation Guide" and "Word Glossary" and their subsequent launch in March 2013.

(iii) There are 3 Expert Advisors on the Orthography Panel engaged on an Ad Hoc basis.

(iv) The development of an Ulster-Scots Dictionary will be a step by step process based on consensus across the Ulster Scots sector. As with dictionary projects for other languages, this will require a long term commitment and will take some time to deliver. The next step as identified by the MAG Ulster-Scots Academy is the development of an Ulster-Scots lexicographical database. The MAG Ulster-Scots Academy has been in discussion with sectoral representatives and other key potential partners about how to now progress the Dictionary Project. An Ulster-Scots dictionary is an important piece of work to be taken forward by the Ulster-Scots Academy.

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what efforts have been made to develop a Líofa type initiative for Ulster-Scots by the Ulster-Scots Agency and the Ministerial Advisory Group on the Ulster-Scots Academy.
(AQW 41497/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Work is progressing well to scope and develop proposals for a four to five year language and culture development initiative for Ulster Scots with strong community and lifelong learning elements. All main sector bodies, including the MAG Ulster-Scots Academy and Ulster-Scots Agency, are participating in the work on a collaborative basis. An initiative programme, along with costings, delivery mechanisms, programme management arrangements and funding options will be prepared and a business case completed by end of March 2015, as the basis of a bid for additional funding.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether there is a recycling policy for local libraries.
(AQW 41509/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has informed me that its policy and approach to recycling is set out within its 'Environmental Policy 2013/15'.

The policy states that 'Libraries NI are committed to minimising the environmental impacts of our activities and recognises the need to deliver sustainable development' and specifically to 'Reduce the amount of waste produced and minimise its environmental impact by following the waste hierarchy of reduce, reuse and recycle'.

In implementing this policy Libraries NI avails of a range of waste management arrangements with local Councils, other Government bodies and the private sector. This policy has been published on its website.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the (i) resource; and (ii) capital grants paid out to boxing clubs for each of the last three years, including (a) the name of the club; (b) the amount of the grant; (c) the funding stream from which it was drawn; and (d) whether the grant was from (i) her Department; or (ii) Sport NI.
(AQW 41522/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have arranged for details of Exchequer and Lottery funding awarded by Sport NI to boxing clubs directly and also indirectly through the Irish Amateur Boxing Association from April 2011 to date, to be placed in the Assembly Library. This information includes the names of the individual clubs and the amounts awarded.

To sustain and increase participation, and improve performances in sport, Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department, invests in a range of projects throughout the north of Ireland. Sport NI is a Lottery award distributor and also provides exchequer funding to a number of Sport NI recognised Governing Bodies of Sport, sports groups and clubs seeking funding in the north, including boxing.

Boxing clubs have benefited from a number of funding streams from both my Department and Sport NI from April 2011 to date. These include:

1 DCAL funded – Sport Matters Community Capital Programme, Equipment Pre Games Training Camps and City of Culture Legacy.

2 Sport NI funded – Boxing Investment Programme, Active Clubs Programme and Awards for Sport Programme.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what streams of funding for capital works are available to boxing clubs, including (i) opening date; (ii) closing date; (iii) amount available; and (iv) how the stream has been advertised.
(AQW 41523/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Sport NI has no funding programmes currently available for capital works to which boxing clubs may apply. However, Sport NI has provided Lottery funding of £3.27 million to develop the sport, to include the provision of equipment and capital works to improve club premises under the Boxing Investment Programme. Under this Programme the Governing Body of boxing, the Irish Amateur Boxing Association, received almost £170,000 to provide ninety four clubs across the north of Ireland with new equipment. This was delivered to clubs between August 2013 and February 2014.

Funding of £2.5 million was allocated under the Programme for capital works. A call for Stage 1 applications for capital awards was made on 10 September 2013 and closed on 4 October 2013. A call for Stage 2 applications for the capital awards was made on 18 November 2013 with a closing date of 9 December 2013. Indicative Letters of Offer were provided on 31 January 2014 and 3 February 2014 to forty applicants.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the funding provided by NI Screen to television programmes to mark the centenary of the Ulster Covenant, along with the names of the programmes and the production companies.
(AQW 41529/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Ulster-Scots Broadcast Fund made an award of £65,000 on 11 March 2011 to Double Band Films for the programme entitled "The Covenant Trail". The title of the programme was subsequently changed to "The Ulster Covenant" and was broadcast on BBC 1 NI on 27th September 2012.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the money contributed by her Department to community festivals, on the basis of approved business cases, prior to the creation of the Community Festival fund in April 2006, including the names of the festivals and the amount allocated to each festival in each year.

Ms Ní Chuilín: The information requested is not readily available and may only be obtained at disproportionate cost. In addition, it is possible that some records may have been disposed of in line with the Department's disposal of records schedule where there is no requirement, in many instances, to retain records for a period of more than seven years.

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether LibrariesNI, in support of a family friendly policy, intend to continue to offer job-share opportunities to staff, including front line employees.
(AQW 41572/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has informed me that it intends to continue to offer job share opportunities to staff, including frontline employees, in support of a family friendly policy, in line with business need and budget availability.

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether LibrariesNI intend to only employ staff on part-time contracts.
(AQW 41573/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has informed me that it does not intend to only employ staff on part-time contracts. Libraries NI currently employ staff on both full-time and part-time contacts and this will continue to be the case.

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for a breakdown of the number of staff employed by LibrariesNI who have a (i) full-time permanent contract; (ii) part-time permanent contract; (iii) a full-time temporary contract; and (iv) a part-time temporary contract.
(AQW 41574/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Libraries NI has informed me that the number of staff it currently employs who have a full-time permanent contract; part-time permanent contract; a full-time temporary contract and a part-time temporary contract is as follows:

Contract Type	Number of Staff
(i) Full-time permanent	320
(ii) Part-time permanent	446
(iii) Full-time temporary	7
(iv) Part-time temporary	2
Total	775

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how her Department and its agencies have helped in the efforts to find Kieran McAree in Enniskillen.
(AQW 41655/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Whilst Waterways Ireland has to date had no direct involvement in the search and rescue efforts relating to Kieran McAree it has maintained a liaison with the PSNI and is aware of their operation and the extent of their current findings. Waterways Ireland has offered to provide whatever assistance it can to the PSNI official search, on their request, depending on available resources. The PSNI has not as yet made any request of Waterways Ireland, nor have they required the closure of the Navigation.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the Casement Park redevelopment project.
(AQW 41668/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I refer member to the answer to AQW 40808/11-15
http://aims.niassembly.gov.uk/questions/printquestionsummary.aspx?docid=220029

No further update at this stage.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether her Department's proposal on an Irish language strategy was approved by the Executive; and if so, when.
(AQW 41737/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have informed Executive Ministers and the Assembly on a number of occasions of my intention to publish the following Strategies:

- Strategy to Enhance and Protect the Development of the Irish Language 2015-2035.
- Strategy to Enhance and Develop the Ulster-Scots Language, Heritage and Culture 2015-2035.

Executive approval was not sought. I consulted with and shared both draft Strategies with Executive Ministers for feedback and comment on two occasions.

In June 2013 I gave Executive Ministers the opportunity to comment on the first draft of the Strategies and the responses from the public consultations.

During July 2014 I provided Executive Ministers with a further opportunity to comment on a revised version of both Strategies and advised them that I intended to publish both.

I am very grateful to Ministerial colleagues for their comments and feedback on both occasions.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure when the Arts Council will open the fund for instruments for bands.
(AQW 41793/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: In 2015/16 the Department has inescapable capital commitments in excess of the capital budget allocation and is working closely with DFP to manage the situation. The Department is not in a position to confirm any other capital allocations at this time.

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether the Programme for Government 2011-15 target, to support 200 projects through the Creative Industries Innovation Fund, will be achieved by March 2015.
(AQW 41839/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: 203 projects have been supported by the Creative Industries Innovation Fund as of February 2015. This achieves the Programme for Government target and exceeds the anticipated number of supported projects by three.

The fund has catalysed new ideas, products, networks and collaborations and has played a significant role in developing the north of Ireland as a vibrant hub for the creative industries.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the number of staff employed by Waterways Ireland, broken down by religion.
(AQW 41886/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The total number of staff employed by Waterways Ireland is 312. There is no legal requirement for Waterways Ireland to monitor the religion of the 230 staff working in the South. Currently Waterways Ireland employs 82 staff in the North.

Of those 82 employees, 28 are Protestant, 50 are Roman Catholic and 4 declared as other.

Department of Education

Mr Newton asked the Minister of Education what percentage of his 2015/16 Budget that will be allocated to administration.
(AQW 40992/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): Administration costs are a subset of the total resource budget, and reflect the resources consumed directly in providing central government services. These costs include pay, superannuation, travel and subsistence, current expenditure on back office accommodation etc.

During 2014-15, that part of my overall Resource Budget, used to fund Administration costs was 0.9%. While I am still finalising the 2015-16 Final DE Budget, I do not envisage the percentage increasing in 2015-16.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how much funding the Ulster-Scots Agency received from his Department in the last three financial years.
(AQW 40999/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department has not received any funding applications from the Ulster-Scots Agency or provided it with any funding in the last three financial years.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education to detail the percentage of schools meeting the Entitlement Framework requirements for (i) Key Stage 4; and (ii) post-16 in the current academic year, broken down by (a) sector; and (b) Education and Library Board.
(AQW 41103/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The 2014/15 Entitlement Framework Audit data is not yet available. However, based on the 2013/14 data the percentage of schools meeting the Entitlement Framework requirements at (i) Key Stage 4 of 21 courses; and (ii) post-16 of 24 courses, broken down by (a) sector and (b) Education and Library Board are set out in the tables below.

(i) Schools at Key Stage 4 meeting the 2014 requirements of 21 courses, of which one third are general and one third applied

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Education how much of the £2.5 million restored to his Department will be allocated to the statutory pre-school sector.
(AQW 41159/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department's Pre-School Education Programme offers places in statutory settings in nursery schools and units attached to primary schools and in non-statutory voluntary playgroups and private settings.

The £2.5m restored to the Education budget related to the funding of pre-school education offered in voluntary and private settings.

Pre-school pupils in grant-aided nursery schools and nursery classes within primary schools are funded under the Local Management of Schools formula funding arrangements, as detailed in the Common Funding Scheme www.deni.gov.uk/schools and infrastructure/schools finance/common funding scheme 2014-15

The restoration of the draft budget reduction will ensure that sufficient funding is available to meet the projected need for pre-school places across the north for the 2015-16 academic year.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Education how his Department will work to negate the long term damage that cuts will have on the future for schools.
(AQW 41163/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: As part of the 2015-16 Final Budget outcome, my Department received an additional £64.9million funding in recognition of the inescapable pressures facing education and the overwhelming response to the consultation.

Throughout the budget process my aim was to protect as far as possible funding to schools. Therefore, following this final budget allocation and my wider education budget review I allocated £80 million to the Aggregated Schools Budget. This allocation means that there has been no reduction in cash terms to schools delegated budgets, although in real terms, schools will still face pay and inflationary pressures in 2015-16.

My focus remains on raising standards and closing the achievement gap. This continuous improvement will best be achieved when schools are supported and trusted to develop their own school improvement strategies.

Also, by working with the Boards, CCMS and others, my objective through the area planning process is to develop a network of sustainable and financially viable schools; right sized and in the right places and able to maximise the use of available resources so that they focus on providing the quality of education that pupils deserve.

I acknowledge the demanding financial position still facing the education sector in 2015-16. It must be recognised that this constrained financial context is set to continue for the foreseeable future. Let me be clear that I will continue to make the case for increased investment in education.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education, pursuant AQW 40341/11-15, to detail (i) the services rendered; and (ii) the amount spent.
(AQW 41298/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In pursuant of AQW 40341/11-15, (i) services rendered relate to the NICCE's role in establishing a Catholic schools' sectoral support body; and (ii) the amount spent in this respect was £43k, paid in the 2013-14 financial year.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the maintenance costs of each Education and Library Board headquarter building, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41305/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The following table details the maintenance costs of each of the Education and Library Board headquarter buildings, in each of the last five financial years.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 40753/11-15, why the post-primary role within the Jigsaw project was not maintained to support pupils when they moved to new schools.
(AQW 41399/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The North Eastern Education and Library Board have advised that Jigsaw is a Barnardos service funded by the Department for Social Development (DSD) with contributions from Extended Schools and Barnardos voluntary funds.

I understand that discussions took place between Barnardos, DSD and community representatives with regards the possibility of Barnardos continuing to support former Ballee Community High School (CHS) pupils when the pupils moved to other post primary schools following the closure of Ballee CHS in August 2014.

The Board have advised that the decision not to continue with the Jigsaw project was taken by Barnardos due to the resignation of the post-primary Jigsaw worker. The recruitment and induction of a new worker was viewed by Barnardos as not viable for the remainder of the funding period up to 31 March 2015.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 40753/11-15, to detail the additional (i) Education Psychology; (ii) Education Welfare Service; and (iii) Behaviour Support provided to each post-primary school that received pupils from Ballee Community High School following its closure.
(AQW 41400/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The North Eastern Education and Library Board (NEELB) have advised as follows:-

(i) Education Psychology - An Educational Psychologist from the Board attended School Based Care Team meetings in advance of the closure of Ballee CHS to identify potentially vulnerable pupils. All identified pupils were then followed up by the Educational Psychologist through consultation with the receiving schools. The educational psychology time allocated to Ballee CHS has also been made available to the receiving schools in addition to their existing time allocation.

(ii) Education Welfare Service – A project officer from the EWS provided peer support to year 9 and 10 pupils identified as in need of support in managing change and relationships. The Education and Welfare Officer worked with other Board services to ensure a smooth transition from Ballee CHS to the receiving schools. This included meetings with the schools, individual work with young people and home visits to ensure the welfare and educational needs of the pupils were met.

(iii) Behaviour Support – All pupils in receipt of Behaviour Support from Ballee CHS were supported in their new schools with 6 pupils continuing to access support. All schools receive advice and support as requested through links with Behaviour Support Service staff or School Based Care Teams.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of nursery school (i) applications; and (ii) places available in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41432/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number of applications for pre-school places

Year	Applications	Number of children in places*
2011/12	22570	22668
2012/13	22955	23023
2013/14	22898	23164
2014/15	23437	23667

* The process is demand lead and the number of available places varies from year to year. The number of places provided is the actual number of children in funded pre-school places taken from School Census for each year.

The number of applications provided is the number received during the pre-school admissions process and recorded with the Education and Library Boards (ELBs). Once the admissions process has ended parents may apply direct to pre-school providers which have funded places available hence more children can attend than applications received in the ELBs.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Education for an update on the proposed new build for Strabane Academy, including details of the (i) work undertaken by the Department to progress this project; and (ii) interaction between his Department, the Western Education and Library Board and the Governors of Strabane Academy since the amalgamation of the two schools to form the Academy.
(AQW 41461/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The new school for Strabane Academy was included in my Capital Announcement of January 2013. The Western Education and Library Board are responsible for taking this project forward. However my Department continues to liaise with them during this planning process

The Design Stage 2 (C) documentation for the Strabane Academy project was sent to my Department in mid November 2014 Academy project was sent to DE in mid November 2014. Unfortunately the documentation indicated that there was a significant increase in the anticipated construction costs for the project compared with those identified in the business case. When changes in cost of the magnitude indicated occur at any stage in a project it is necessary for a comprehensive review of the project to be carried out by DE's professional advisors and economists to understand the reason for the change and ensure that the project provides value for money.

This work, which was undertaken through December and January, concluded that on this occasion the increase was justified given the restrictive nature and topography of the site. A letter approving the design team to continue to Stage 3 of the design was sent to the Western Education and Library Board on 28 January 2015.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how many maintained sector school new builds he has authorised since May 2011.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Education whether he plans to continue funding outreach and detached youth services through earmarked additional funding, or whether the cost can be met under the core youth work budget.
(AQW 41479/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am currently finalising my 2015-16 spending plans and detailed decisions on allocations for local youth services will be determined in due course.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) what training exists to encourage teachers to identify child victims of domestic abuse; and (ii) the correct link-up process with other relevant bodies if a child is identified, or suspected.
(AQW 41550/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In schools, domestic abuse comes within the overall child protection agenda.

All schools have a named Designated Teacher (DT) for Child Protection and a named Deputy Designated Teacher. The DT acts as a focal point for child protection within the school through providing advice and support to staff and by liaising with agencies outside the school as appropriate.

All grant-aided schools are required by law to have a child protection policy and to implement it. When preparing its policy a school must take account of advice from the Department, relevant Education and Library Board (ELB) and, in the case of Catholic maintained schools, the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS).

All advice issued from the Department is consistent with the 'Co-Operating to Safeguard Children' document and the Area Child Protection Committee Regional Policies and Procedures.

Training on child protection matters is organised by the ELBs and is available to members of Boards of Governors, school principals, DTs and their deputies.

There are clear procedures under the UNOCINI (Understanding the Needs of Children in the North of Ireland) assessment framework to facilitate referral from schools to social services and onward to other agencies such as PSNI, as appropriate.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Education what information was provided to parents, specifically transport arrangements, to enable them to make an informed decision regarding their choice of post-primary school for September 2015 enrolment by the Southern Education and Library Board and Council for Catholic Maintained Schools.
(AQW 41561/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In advance of selecting a post-primary school for their child for September 2015, all parents were issued by the Education and Library Boards with a copy of "Transfer 2015 – A Guide for Parents – Admission to Post-Primary Schools". The guidance includes information on applying for transport assistance. Information regarding transport is provided by the Education and Library Boards on behalf of the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools.

Additionally, the Department of Education provided an advice leaflet to parents of pupils in Year 6 (Primary 6) in the 2013/14 school year ahead of their transfer in September 2015. The leaflet is entitled, "The Transfer Process to Post-Primary School: Advice for Parents of Children in Primary Six". The leaflet contains advice with respect to school transport, inter alia.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education to detail the process for the appointment of school leaders under the new single education authority.
(AQW 41562/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Work on developing a Teaching Appointments Scheme (TAS) for the Education Authority (EA) is underway. An interim scheme will be developed in the first instance to make provision for those appointments that must be made in the first months following the establishment of the EA. This will allow time for a longer-term TAS to be agreed once the EA has been established.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 40592/11-15, how many pupils in each Education and Library Board did not have a decision to carry out a statutory assessment within a ten week period as of 31 December 2014.
(AQW 41585/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards have advised that the number of pupils for whom a statutory assessment was requested and the decision to turn down the request issued during the ten week period from 23 October – 31 December 2014 was as follows:

BELB	*
NEELB	8
SEELB	25
SELB	8
WELB	29

* denotes fewer than five pupils suppressed due to potential identification of individual pupils.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Education for an update on the recruitment of a principal for St Mary's High School, Brollagh.
(AQW 41589/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department is not the employer of teachers. In this case, the relevant employing authority is the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS).

CCMS have advised that the Board of Governors carried out interviews at the end of January 2015. Such appointments are subject to ratification from CCMS followed by negotiation regarding a release date.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Education for an update on the involvement of his Department and that of the Department of Education and Skills in supporting the establishment of a pilot cross-border partnership with St Mary's High School, Brollagh.
(AQW 41590/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Both Education Ministers have discussed and agreed that the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS) and the Western Education and Library Board (WELB) should work with education providers in Donegal to develop a pilot proposal. The CCMS has confirmed that a draft plan will be completed to my Department for consideration by the end of February 2015.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) when he expects the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS) to produce a plan on the proposed pilot cross-border partnership with St Mary's High School, Brollagh; (ii) what level of engagement he expects CCMS to have with local community and political representatives in formulating a plan; and (iii) whether any plan will be made public.
(AQW 41591/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: CCMS has confirmed that a draft plan will be provided to my Department by the end of February 2015.

I and my officials will need to see the plan before decisions are taken on the way forward but I expect community engagement to be part of the process.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education to detail the percentage of pupils achieving five or more GCSEs at grades A-C in each of the last three years, broken down by (i) gender; and (ii) pupils entitled to free school meals.

Mr O'Dowd: The information contained in the following table refers to the achievement of pupils leaving mainstream grant aided post-primary schools during the academic years 2010/11 to 2012/13.

Data covering the academic year 2012/13 are the most recent available. Equivalent figures for 2013/14 school leavers are scheduled for release in May 2015.

Percentage of school leavers achieving five or more GCSEs at grades A*-C (including equivalents) by gender and pupils entitled to free school meals, 2010/11 to 2012/13

	Boy	Girl	Entitled to free school meals
2010/11	67.7	78.9	48.8

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Education what policy exists for the recognition in Northern Ireland of a Statement of Special Educational Needs that has been made elsewhere in the United Kingdom.
(AQW 41631/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Although there are a number of similarities between the assessment process in the north of Ireland and England, Wales and Scotland, there are also substantial differences in the administration of education and in the funding of Statements of Special Educational Needs (SEN). It is not possible, therefore, to have reciprocal arrangements between the separate jurisdictions which would allow Statements to be accepted when a family moves from one jurisdiction to another.

Prior to a pupil receiving a Statement of SEN, a statutory assessment must be completed within this jurisdiction by the relevant Education and Library Board (ELB). As part of that process the Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs (COP) advises that the educational psychologist (EP) from whom the ELB seeks psychological advice must be employed by the Board. The EP must, however, consult and record any advice received from any other psychologist who may have relevant knowledge of or information about the child.

The COP also requires ELBs to consider any advice which parents may submit independently and, as far as possible, follow up suggestions from other agencies or individuals who might be able to provide relevant advice.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 41246/11-15, for his assessment of whether a policy, or legally binding document, should be in place to eliminate any potential concerns or issues.
(AQW 41658/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am content that the Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs clearly documents procedures regarding privately obtained psychologists' assessments in a manner that ensures equitable treatment for all pupils.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 41363/11-15, whether a mechanism exists to ensure that Education and Library Boards and schools provide appropriate support during the transition period for young people with Special Education Needs who do not have a statement.
(AQW 41684/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Under Article 4(2) of the Education (NI) Order 1996, Education and Library Boards and Boards of Governors of grant-aided schools are required to have regard to the provisions of the Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs (SEN).

Paragraph 6.51 of the Code recognises that, in some instances, a pupil approaching the age of 16 may have SEN which do not call for a statement, but which are nevertheless likely to require some support during the transition process. The Code makes clear that Boards and schools should seek to provide such support. This may include the provision of school/FE college link courses or work placements. Schools may also wish to prepare their own transition plans for non-statemented students with SEN.

In addition, the Department for Employment and Learning's Careers Service is available in post-primary schools for all young people with SEN, regardless of whether or not they have a statement.

I am satisfied that the Code, which is underpinned by legislation, together with the intervention of the Careers Service, provide the mechanism for appropriate support during the transition period for those young people with Special Education Needs who do not have a statement.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education what percentage of newly qualified teachers have obtained full time teaching posts within Northern Ireland, in each of the last four years.
(AQW 41706/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department does not hold the information in the format requested. The General Teaching Council (GTCNI) collects information on teacher employment on an annual basis. The tables below set out the number of teachers whose employment is of a permanent or a significant temporary nature (ie. one term or more), at the date specified, and includes full-time and part-time teachers:

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of teacher training places he and his predecessor was advised to allocate as the optimum number to ensure properly regulated supply for (i) 2012/13; (ii) 2013/14; and (iii) 2014/15.
(AQW 41707/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number of initial teacher education places allocated in each of the years specified reflects the number of places advised. Details of the allocations which I made in respect of these years are routinely published and are available on the Department's website at the following web link:

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education what actions his Department is taking to standardise the systems and practices in each Education and Library Board in relation to employment of school principals as they approach becoming a single Education Authority.
(AQW 41721/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department does not employ teachers, and is not responsible for the appointment of school Principals; this is the role of the employer/employing authority. However, the Education Authority Implementation Team is currently developing a Teaching Appointments Scheme (TAS) for the Education Authority (EA). An interim scheme will be developed in the first instance to make provision for those appointments that must be made in the first months following the establishment of the EA. This will allow time for a longer-term TAS to be agreed once the EA has been established.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Education for an update on the Holywood Multi-Schools Project.
(AQW 41723/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I refer the member to my response to his earlier question AQW 37263/11-15 which was published on 17 October 2014.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 40818/11-15 and given that withdrawal of crossing patrols has been increasing, for his assessment of the impact of the withdrawal of patrols on pupil safety when walking or cycling to and from school.
(AQW 41746/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The provision of school crossing patrols is a discretionary function. Patrols are, therefore, provided in support of the parental duty to ensure the safety of their child(ren) when walking to school. Patrols are provided where a location has been assessed as exceeding the threshold(s) set out in assessment guidelines. The guidelines are based on those of Road Safety GB, previously Local Authority Road Safety Officers Association (LARSOA). These guidelines incorporate elements from the existing widely adopted criteria for the assessment of potential zebra and pelican crossing sites, and consider factors such as traffic flow and the number of pupils crossing. Therefore, patrols are usually established at locations where there are high numbers of pupils and a heavy volume of traffic. Additionally, school crossing patrols are only permitted to marshal pedestrians and not cyclists.

Reassessments of patrols are routinely conducted when a patrol person leaves their post. School crossing patrols may be removed where a location no longer exceeds the threshold(s) set out in the guidelines.

With regard to the impact upon pupils following the removal of a patrol, Boards ensure that the reassessed crossing point is within tolerances experienced by pupils on any other route without a crossing patrol.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education to detail the dates of any meetings he has held, or arranged, with the Ulster-Scots Agency, as referred to by the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure in the Assembly on 2 February 2015.
(AQW 41778/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Since coming into office as Minister for Education I have met with the Ministerial Advisory Group on Ulster Scots on 6 December 2011 and I also met with representatives of the Ulster Scots Agency on 26 March 2012 to discuss Ulster Scots in schools.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education what progress has been made on the appointment of members to the new Education Authority.
(AQW 41781/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The processes to appoint the Chair and the 20 members to the Board of the Education Authority (EA) are at an advanced stage and the full membership will be appointed in advance of the establishment of the EA on 1 April 2015. A press release announcing the appointments will issue at the appropriate time.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education what steps he has taken to recoup money spent on the Education and Skills Authority; and how much of that money will relate to work of the new Education Authority.

Mr O'Dowd: In preparation for ESA significant progress was made in planning the delivery of services on a consistent regional basis. This work, which will now support the creation of the Education Authority, included the development of common procedures and policies for a single organisation.

A significant part of the money spent on ESA will therefore support the delivery of the Education Authority and allow it to move forward more rapidly once established. However, it is not possible to quantify the proportion.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education where the different services operated by the new Education Authority will be sited.
(AQW 41783/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The location of Education Authority services and associated staff will be a matter for the Board of the Authority to consider in consultation with Trades Unions. As a regional organisation with a strong local presence, the Authority will wish to ensure that it is accessible to the schools and communities it serves.

Decisions of this nature will be subject to Rural Proofing and Equality Impact Assessment, if required.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Education what impact the creation of one education authority will have on the staff of the five former boards.
(AQW 41784/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The staff of the five education and library boards will transfer to the Education Authority. Staff will be afforded protection of their existing contractual terms and conditions in accordance with the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 2006, as provided for by Schedule 2 of the Education Act (NI) 2014. This will also extend to the protection of pension arrangements.

Significant reductions in staff have already been made in anticipation of the establishment of the Education and Skills Authority. Nevertheless, the new Authority is expected to employ fewer staff in senior and middle management grades than are currently employed by the education and library boards. It is my expectation that the remaining reductions will be achieved through voluntary redundancy, retirement and resignation.

The location of Education Authority staff and functions will be determined by the new Authority through the development of a location strategy in consultation with trades unions. It will take time for the Education Authority to arrive at a "steady state" and so issues around location of staff and functions will be implemented incrementally. These will need to be reviewed at the appropriate time to determine their equality impact as well as conducting other screening processes such as rural proofing.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education what evidence schools are expected to provide of community support for a project seeking support through the Together: Building a United Community – Shared Education Campuses programme.
(AQW 41787/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Each application to the Shared Education Campuses Programme is unique and therefore the evidence of community support will vary from project to project.

My Department has not been prescriptive about what is required. Evidence can be provided in the form of surveys, letters from local community organisations, elected representatives, churches and other schools in the locality.

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Education to outline the procedure to review a decision that a school is zero-rated for reception provision.
(AQW 41849/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In accordance with the 'Local Management of Schools – Common Funding Scheme 2014-15' pupils in reception provision may be weighted zero where the school:

- has not previously had reception provision;
- where reception provision is not provided for within the school's admission criteria; or
- where the reception class has been replaced by nursery provision under the pre-school expansion programme and the Pre-school Education Advisory Group (PEAG) has recommended to the Department that this is the case and the Department accepts the recommendation.

Pupils in Reception provision at Grammar schools are zero rated.

Any school which has concerns about its financial position, including zero-rating of reception provision, should contact the appropriate Funding Authority for advice in the first instance.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education whether he has reconsidered his proposal to impose a twenty per cent cut on the budget of the Youth Council, in view of his decision to restore the reduction that he made in the budget of Education and Library Board Youth Services at draft budget stage.
(AQW 41851/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am currently finalising my 2015-16 spending plans and detailed decisions on allocations will be determined in due course.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) any strategy or policy on improving the provision of sex education in schools; (ii) whether sex education is contained within the statutory curriculum; and (iii) his assessment of the importance of appropriate sex education.
(AQW 41890/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Relationships and Sexuality Education (RSE) is a policy which is devolved to schools. All schools are required to have in place a RSE policy which sets out how the school will address RSE within the curriculum. A school's policy should be subject to consultation with parents and it should be endorsed by the Board of Governors of the school. While it is a devolved policy, the Department does provide guidance to support schools, which emphasises the need for pupils to have the opportunity to provide feedback about the contents of the RSE programme delivered by the school, so that it can be responsive to their needs. CCEA has been working to review current guidance and it is expected that new guidance will be issued to all schools before the end of the current academic year.

RSE is an integral part of the curriculum in both primary and post-primary schools and it must be delivered in a sensitive manner which is appropriate to the age and understanding of pupils and the ethos of the school. The minimum to be taught is detailed in legislation as Areas of Learning (AOLs) for each Key Stage. The main Areas of Learning within the revised curriculum for the delivery of Relationships and Sexuality Education (RSE) is Personal Development and Mutual Understanding (PDMU) at primary level and the Personal Development strand of the Learning for Life and Work Area of Learning at post-primary level. A survey of RSE provision in Primary Schools is to be conducted by the Education and Training Inspectorate towards the end of 2015.

Effective RSE provision is essential if our children are to value themselves as individuals and make responsible and well-informed decisions about their lives.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Education when the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment posted the letters dated 28 January 2015 to non-Irish Medium primary schools inviting expressions of interest in the teaching of the Irish language.

Mr O'Dowd: The letters dated 28 January 2015 were posted in the afternoon of 28 January 2015.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Education whether the Board of Governors is responsible for setting the cultural ethos of a school.
(AQW 41901/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The role of the Board of Governors is to manage a school with a view to helping the staff provide the best possible education for all of the pupils. This involves setting the school's vision and aims and establishing and maintaining the school's ethos.

The ethos of a school should promote the moral, spiritual, intellectual, social and personal development of all its pupils and should contribute to the wider goals of the school.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education what changes have been made to the criteria for deciding whether there should be a crossing patrol at a school, in the last five years.
(AQW 41921/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards inform me that there have been no changes in the last five years to the assessment criteria used for determining the need for school crossing patrols.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education, in relation to the 'previous [Irish language] survey' mentioned in a letter of 28 January 2015 from the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment to primary school principals, to detail (i) the date that survey was carried out; (ii) the question asked; and (iii) the response received.
(AQW 41964/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd:

(i) The online survey was carried out between 12 November 2012 and 12 December 2012.

(ii) The questions asked were as follows:

- Do you currently teach languages in your school? Yes/No
- If yes which language(s)? (Comment Box)…and what year group(s)? (Select all that apply)
- If no, why not? (Comment Box)
- Would you be interested in introducing Irish language teaching? Yes/No (Comment)

(iii) A total of 127 respondents completed the questionnaire.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) pupil numbers; and (ii) the number of schools in (a) 2007; and (b) 2014.
(AQW 42032/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information below is taken from the annual school census. The figures for 2014/15 are currently provisional and will be finalised at the end of February.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Education how many temporary posts of Senior Executive Officer and above were created in each Education and Library Board in 2014; and of these posts, how many were awarded permanent status up to 31 December 2014, broken down by religious background.
(AQW 42098/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The table below details the number of temporary posts at Senior Executive Officer and above which were created in each Education and Library Board in 2014 and the number of these temporary posts which were awarded permanent status, up to 31 December 2014. The figures are broken down by perceived religious background.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of recommendation 4.2.6 of the Report of the Ministerial Advisory Group on the Strategic Development of Irish-medium Post-primary Education.
(AQO 7511/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I concur with the conclusions of the Ministerial Advisory Group that new schools face significant challenges in their initial years of operation, including attracting sufficient enrolments.

In taking forward implementation of the review recommendations, my officials will undertake further work to determine the appropriateness of the levels of intake proposed by the Ministerial Advisory Group in Recommendation 4.2.6.

The key aim must be to ensure that we ultimately deliver a viable and sustainable school providing high quality Irish-medium education.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Education to outline the number and progress of development proposals submitted to his Department by schools in Upper Bann.
(AQO 7512/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There are currently two development proposals for schools in the Upper Bann area under consideration.

DP 320 proposes an increase in the enrolment at St Mary's Primary School, Derrymore, from 145 to 175 pupils and DP 321 proposes an increase in the enrolment at St Patrick's Primary School, Magheralin, from 129 to 175 pupils.

Both proposals were published on 20 November 2014 and the statutory objection period ended recently, on 20 January 2015.

My officials are currently collating all the relevant information in relation to these proposals and I hope to be in a position to make decisions in the near future.

A record of all current development proposals and recent decisions are listed on my Department's website. These records are updated following my decision on a proposal.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education for an update on the proposed new build for St Columbanus' College, Bangor.
(AQO 7513/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: No timescale has been set for the delivery of a new build for St Columbanus College, Bangor. Any decision on this matter has been subject to ongoing area planning considerations.

By way of update I can advise that the South Eastern Education & Library Board published Development Proposal No 254 on 2 October 2014. The 2-month consultation period ended on 2 December 2014 and my officials are currently considering responses received. A decision on the Development Proposal will issue in due course.

I will continue to examine the case for Capital Investment across the estate and subject to the structure of maintained provision in the area being clear, any proposal for the school will be considered alongside other priorities, as part of any future capital announcement.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education to outline what representation he has had in relation to Belfast Education and Library Board's proposed closure of Malvern Primary School.
(AQO 7514/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Belfast Education and Library Board published a proposal for the closure of Malvern Primary School on 28 January 2015. Publication triggered a statutory two-month period for comments and objections which will end on 30 March 2015.

During this two-month period, anyone interested in the proposal can write directly to my Department. Account will be taken of all representations made during the two-month period and these views will be included in advice to me from my officials. In due course I will decide whether the proposal should be approved. As I am the final decision maker I cannot discuss the details of the proposal at this stage.

You should note that the advice from my officials and my decision will subsequently be published on my Department's website.

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Education to outline the capital budget for new school builds in the next 12 months.
(AQO 7515/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: A total capital budget of over £23 million has been allocated for spend on Major Works in the current financial year.

The department's gross capital budget for FY15/16 is significantly below the 2014/15 allocation. While spending plans for capital in 2015/16 are currently being reviewed, the Major Works budget will be prioritised in order to minimise the impact on longer term projects. It is anticipated that the number of major works on-site will increase in FY15/16 and an initial indicative allocation of £50m has been made for these projects, however this figure will be subject to revision following review of the overall capital budget position.

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Education to ouline his position on minimum enrolment numbers for secondary schools as set out in his Department's Sustainable Schools Policy.
(AQO 7516/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Sustainable Schools Policy sets out six criteria and associated indicators to be used in assessing the sustainability of a school.

One of the criteria is 'stable enrolment trends' which sets out minimum enrolment thresholds for Post-primary schools of 500 for Years 8-12 and 100 for Sixth Forms.

However, this is not intended to be used in a mechanistic fashion. Sustainability is not assessed simply on the number of pupils, but rather across the full range of criteria in the policy on a casebycase basis, taking account of local circumstances.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Education whether the £2 million allocated to Education and Library Board youth services includes funding for outreach and detached youth work delivered via the area projects.
(AQO 7517/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: On 19 January I announced that I was allocating £2million to Education and Library Board youth services to restore the reduction made at draft budget stage. I am currently finalising my 2015-16 spending plans and a detailed decision on allocations for youth services will be determined in due course.

Mr Anderson asked the Minister of Education why he approved a new Irish-medium school when other local primary and post-primary schools are facing severe cuts to their budgets.
(AQO 7518/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I consider the individual merits and circumstances of each Development Proposal in reaching my decision whether or not to approve.

In the case of Coláiste Dhoire, I recognised the demand for Post-primary education through the medium of Irish and believe that the new school will be capable of delivering a high quality education. My decision to approve the proposal is entirely consistent with my statutory duty to encourage and facilitate the provision of Irish-medium education.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Education why he approved an Irish medium school in Dungiven.
(AQO 7519/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have a statutory duty to encourage and facilitate the provision of Irish-medium education and I take that duty seriously. I recognise the demand for post-primary education through the medium of Irish and believe that Coláiste Dhoire is capable of delivering a high quality education for the benefit of all young people in Dungiven and the surrounding areas.

Department for Employment and Learning

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many applications for funding from the European Social Fund were received from the East Londonderry area.
(AQW 41009/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): A total of 135 applications were submitted to the European Social Fund by the closing date of 9 January 2015 with 4 of the applications from the East Londonderry constituency.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what support is given to the private sector independent training providers to help enable employers have their choice of delivery partners.
(AQW 41037/11-15)

Dr Farry: When the employer alone is paying for the training, the choice of training provider lies with the employer; where there is a contribution in funding from government to the training then the training provider must be agreed by government.

By far the greatest contribution made by government to training for employers is through the Apprenticeship NI programme and in this instance the range of available training providers is determined by a Northern-Ireland wide contract and procurement process. The Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) website contains a range of procurement guidance notes including a guide specifically drafted to help Small and Medium sized Enterprises increase their knowledge and understanding of public sector procurement.

Training suppliers deliver a range of training programmes across Northern Ireland. Through various marketing activities, my Department aims to provide employers with comprehensive information on all the training opportunities that attract a government subsidy.

Relevant information can be found by visiting the nidirect website - http://www.nidirect.gov.uk/skills-to-succeed.

Should an employer require further information, helpline numbers are also listed against each service.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many jobs resulted from the Kilcooley Jobs Fair.
(AQW 41172/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Jobs Fair took place at Kilcooley Community Centre, Bangor on 13 November 2014.

The target audience was unemployed young people aged between 18 and 24 and local employers in the Bangor and Holywood areas. Ten employers and 93 young jobseekers from Bangor and Holywood attended the event. One hundred and ten placement/job opportunities were confirmed as available on the day by participating employers. I am delighted to report that, following the event, 45 Work Placement Opportunities were secured by clients and a further eight clients found work (See Annex A for further details).

My Department continues to monitor those clients on work placement with the aim of developing these opportunities into employment.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on funding availability for the United Youth Programme; and when organisations will receive notification of the outcome of their pilot concept proposals.
(AQW 41199/11-15)

Dr Farry: Funding has been secured via the Change Fund to deliver a number of pilots for the United Youth Programme during the 2015/16 financial year. All of the organisations who submitted concept proposals were advised of the outcome of their applications by 26 January 2015.

Of the 130 organisations who submitted a concept proposal, 50 are being taken forward to the development phase.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQO 7354/11-15, for further details of the three joint bids.
(AQW 41273/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department and the Department for Social Development submitted three joint bids to the Department of Finance and Personnel Change Fund.

The first bid, led by the Department for Employment and Learning, was for £600,000 to fund a pre-commercial procurement competitive pilot model. The aim of this project was to identify a range of new and innovative solutions to the complex problems arising from economic inactivity and test a range of approaches on their potential to reduce inactivity amongst a number of specific economically inactive client groups. This bid was unsuccessful.

The Department for Social Development led on two joint bids (with the Department for Employment and Learning and Department of Enterprise Trade and Investment) to the Change Fund. These were aimed at testing new models of early intervention/intensive support to effect a long term reduction in economic inactivity. One of these bids was successful with £300,000 allocated in the Executive's 2015/16 budget to test one or more new models of delivering work focused support in areas with significant levels of economic inactivity.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the collaborative skills funding awarded to his Department in the Budget 2015-16, including (i) how; and (ii) when groups can bid for this funding.
(AQW 41306/11-15)

Dr Farry: Invest Northern Ireland provides funding for collaborative skills projects. Industry-led groups can, however, apply for funding under the Collaborative Network Programme and use this support to collectively scope and/or address skills issues.

Recent examples of networks adopting this approach include the Align IT Network (led by Liberty IT); the Align IT Tech Partnership (led by Equiniti ICS); the Energy Skills Training Network (led by John Burke Shipping) and the Engineering Skills Training Network(led by NuPrint Ltd).

The Collaborative Network Programme is open for applications on an ongoing basis. Networks must consist of a minimum of four Northern Ireland companies, one of which must be an Invest NI client company. Application forms are available from Invest NI.

My Department collaborates with Invest NI to ensure that any focus on skills development is aligned with cross-departmental objectives. The Assured Skills Programme is the primary vehicle through which my Department and Invest NI jointly provide skills support. The Programme is available on an ongoing basis and support is provided on a case by case basis.

Blended projects are run jointly between my Department and Invest NI and consist of 100% funded, bespoke training programmes available to both Foreign Direct Investment companies and expanding indigenous companies. Recent examples include Academy-style training models in Data Analytics, Cloud Computing and Software Testing.

The 2015/16 budgets within Invest NI and DEL for collaborative skills support are still in the process of being finalised.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what support exists in Regional Colleges, beyond work preparation programmes, to facilitate young people with disabilities' entry to employment.
(AQW 41367/11-15)

Dr Farry: Further Education (FE) provision is delivered to all students, including young people with learning difficulties and/or a disability, with the aim of providing them with the necessary skills to help prepare them for future employment. Provision is focussed on helping them complete their course of study and gain the qualifications, confidence and ability to progress to further study or employment.

Additional support is provided, beyond FE provision and work preparation programmes, to help colleges assist young people with learning difficulties and/or a disability in their preparation for success in their course of study and to progress.

FE colleges offer a wide range of support to these young people through their student services; learning support units; and careers guidance. In addition my Department provides funding to colleges to help them meet the cost of providing additional support to students with learning difficulties and /or disabilities to help them overcome barriers to learning and enable successful completion of their courses and progression to further provision or employment. This funding is provided from a number of sources:

- Additional Support Fund (ASF) - £4.5 million per annum to help colleges provide additional technical and personal support to students with learning difficulties and / or disabilities enrolled in FE provision, as well as helping colleges meet the cost of providing smaller class sizes and classroom assistants for those students who, by nature of their learning difficulty or disability are unable to participate in mainstream provision.
- Training for Success (TfS) - funding allocated to engage Disability Support Suppliers such as Disability Action, Sensory Learning Support, Cedar Foundation and Ulster Supported Employment Limited to work in conjunction with training suppliers, including FE colleges, in providing a wide range of support, including work focussed elements, to facilitate participants progression to employment, such as job coaching, advocacy with potential employers and disability awareness training for employers and colleagues of people with a disability.
- Disabled Students Allowance (DSA) – to provide support for students with a disability or learning difficulty participating in higher education (HE) provision in either HE institutions or FE colleges. This funding helps meet the extra costs which may be incurred in attending a course of study, as a direct result of a disability, mental health condition or specific learning difficulty. This will ultimately improve the students' chances of success in their course of study and help position them in securing employment.

Employment and Skills Strategy for People with Disabilities

My Department is currently developing an overarching 'Employment and Skills Strategy for People with Disabilities' in conjunction with key stakeholders from the local disability sector and FE colleges. The purpose of the new strategy is to improve the skills, employability, job prospects and working careers of people with disabilities in Northern Ireland. The aim of the strategy is to improve transition into and out of the various departmental services, including FE colleges and to result in more young people with disabilities achieving their employment goals.

Disability Employment Service pilot projects

In addition, in 2012 my Department's Disability Employment Service established a two year pilot project with three regional colleges to improve relationships between respective departmental services, and enhance the transition between the college's vocational programmes for young people with the labour market. The majority of the students involved have a learning disability, with others having Autistic Spectrum Disorder and other conditions. Since 2012, 132 students have been referred to the project. Forty eight students have secured paid employment with the assistance of departmental provision, including the Youth Employment Scheme, Workable (NI) and Access to Work (NI).

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what employment support is given to people who have been unemployed for nine months or less.
(AQW 41375/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Employment Service offers a wide range of assistance to clients to help them to move towards and into work through the network of 35 Jobs & Benefits Offices and Jobcentres.

A wide range of job search support is offered, including work readiness assessments, CV building, advice, interview and job application techniques. Advisers also offer individually-tailored advice, provide information and support to clients, and refer clients to specialist provision when appropriate. Support for eligible clients also includes Jobclubs and a comprehensive package of financial incentives.

The Youth Employment Scheme is available for young unemployed people aged 18 to 24 years old and aims to provide the skills to compete for jobs and sustain employment. Participants can currently access a short period of work experience lasting between three to eight weeks or a longer period of up to 26 weeks during which they will have the opportunity to achieve a relevant vocational qualification. In addition, an Employer Subsidy is available for the first 52 weeks of permanent employment.

Steps 2 Success is the Department's main employment programme to assist unemployed people move from unemployment into work and to sustain that work. JSA claimants aged between 18 and 24 years will become eligible for referral to Steps 2 Success if they have failed to find work after nine months on benefit, and claimants aged 25 and over will become eligible after 12 months on benefit. Early entry to the programme is also available for defined groups of clients. Steps 2 Success Contractors will agree with each participant a Progression to Employment Plan that identifies how they will work together to find and keep employment. The service delivered by Contractors to participants is underwritten by a service guarantee.

Priority 1 of the Northern Ireland European Social Fund Programme 2007-2013, is entitled 'Helping people into sustainable employment' and assists unemployed and economically inactive people to enter sustained employment. There are currently 95 projects operating across Northern Ireland that assist people who have experienced varying durations of unemployment, including nine months or less.

Mr Newton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether there are any shortages of lecturers within the further education system; and if so, in which subject areas there is a skills and knowledge gap.
(AQW 41394/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department does not hold information regarding shortages in the lecturing workforce in the further education sector. Colleges are the employers of lecturers and are individually responsible for ensuring that the lecturers they employ are collectively able to deliver the curriculum that each college offers.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what independence attends the appointment of The Visitor to a university; and how this compares with the arrangements under the Office of Independent Adjudicators in the rest of the United Kingdom.
(AQW 41474/11-15)

Dr Farry:

a) The universities are autonomous institutions responsible for the management of their own policies and procedures, including the appointment of the Visitor and the Board of Visitors. The Department does not have any responsibility in this regard. The Higher Education Act 2004 required the appointment of an independent body to run a student complaints scheme in England and Wales. The Office of the Independent Adjudicator was chosen to operate this scheme, to which all universities in England and Wales must subscribe. In Scotland, Higher Education complaints fall within the remit of the Scottish Public Services Ombudsman.

b) As stated above the Department has no role in the appointment of the Visitor or the Board of Visitors. However, the Office of the First and deputy First Minister Committee plan to introduce a Northern Ireland Public Service Ombudsman Bill to the Assembly in 2015 which will include Higher Education complaints within its remit.

c) In the five years up to and including the 2013/14 academic year the Queen's University Belfast Board of Visitors determined 14 cases of which two were adverse to the university. For the same period the Ulster University Visitor determined 19 cases of which ten were adverse to the university.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the current arrangements for the appointment of The Visitor to a university in Northern Ireland; and what plans he has to bring such controls into line with the situation prevailing throughout the rest of the UK.
(AQW 41475/11-15)

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many determinations The Visitor has made in each local universities in each of the last five years; and how many of these have been adverse to the universities.
(AQW 41476/11-15)

Mr Douglas asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for a progress report on the pilot Welding Academy which he announced in July 2014 to address specialist welding needs for Harland and Wolff.
(AQO 7525/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department worked with Harland and Wolff and local Further Education colleges to set up a Welding Academy, beginning in September 2014, as a first step to upskill local unemployed welders to the Harland and Wolff specification.

The Welding Academy, facilitated by Belfast Metropolitan College and Northern Regional College, had an intake of eighteen people.

Of the eighteen Welding Academy trainees who successfully completed training, six are now employed by Harland and Wolff, with five of these on probationary contracts with a view to extending, if satisfactory.

A further cohort of five trainees from the eighteen is expected to commence a two week placement shortly, leading to contracted employment thereafter. My Department awaits confirmation of this from Harland and Wolff.

This is an important first step in addressing the welding skills need identified by the engineering sector and its success will determine further initiatives. The skills and certification these individuals have gained through the Welding Academy will allow the local skills base to grow with highly skilled welders that can support not only Harland and Wolff, but other specialist manufacturers.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the future of St Mary's University College in its current form.
(AQO 7526/11-15)

Dr Farry: Members will be aware that I am considering withdrawing the Small and Specialist Institution premia from the teacher training colleges.

Any decision would be taken in the context that my Department faces an unprecedented level of cuts which have necessitated difficult choices to protect frontline services and the needs of the wider economy.

The two reports I commissioned on Initial Teacher Education infrastructure, Grant Thornton and Aspiring to Excellence, confirm that the status quo is unsustainable from both a financial and qualitative perspective.

Aspiring to Excellence provides alternatives to the current structure which could enable Initial Teacher Education to be delivered more cost-effectively and to a world-class standard.

In my view, the options which best achieve these criteria are Options B, a two-university approach, or D, a single institution, though I remain open to alternatives that are financially sustainable, increase sharing and integration and provide a research-rich environment in line with best international practice.

I would also stress that any new structure will include provision for the respective ethos of the colleges to be not only accommodated, but embraced.

I have recently met with the four providers - Queen's, Stranmillis, St Mary's and Ulster University - to discuss the way forward.

Three of the four support the Aspiring to Excellence report and are willing to engage to reach a consensus. Unfortunately, the fourth, St Mary's, has rejected all the options put forward.

St Mary's have also advised that removal of the premia will likely make the college unviable as a going concern and, as an autonomous institution, it is a matter for the Board of Governors to determine how to address this.

However, I remain committed to engagement with all the providers on finding an agreed way forward and the issues arising from the potential removal of the premia.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how he will balance his budget in 2015/16.
(AQO 7527/11-15)

Dr Farry: The final Executive Budget leaves me with a pressure of £62m to find. The Department's Budget Consultation paper set out proposed reductions of £33.2m , current advanced thinking is that these will be confirmed.

The remaining budget pressure, including European Social Fund match funding pressure of £1.8m, totals £30.1 m.

It is proposed that this will come from a reduction to higher education of £14 million, further education £12 million and additional Departmental efficiency savings and reductions of £4.1 million.

To mitigate these reductions as far as possible I have agreed to relax the minimum required level of reinvestment of additional student fee income on widening participation measures to 10%. This change could free up to £8 million in spending powers for the higher education providers.

In addition, the further education reduction will be partially mitigated by the use of £6 million in End Year Flexibility, subject to agreement of the Executive. However, this is effectively reducing the colleges' level of reserves.

It is my hope to confirm the final budget position for the Department over the coming days.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on his efforts to address the remaining barriers to cross border mobility at undergraduate level.
(AQO 7528/11-15)

Dr Farry: I have made a commitment in my Department's higher education strategy, to facilitate cross-border co-operation and student mobility and a project group which includes representation from the Higher Education Authority and the Institutes of Technology has been established to take this forward.

Recent press articles highlighted the decline in the number of students from the south coming north. If we look specifically at undergraduates, recent figures show a drop from 2945 in 2010/11 to 2247 in 2012/13. The figures also include details of students studying higher education courses at further education colleges which have, in fact, risen during this period. This coincides with the introduction of the £9,000 fees in England and a period of debate in relation to student fees in Northern Ireland.

It should be noted that the number of undergraduate students from Northern Ireland enrolled in institutions in the Republic of Ireland has also declined between 2010/11 and 2012/13 from 855 to 755.

This is a complex area influenced by many factors including, student awareness, institutional attractiveness, admissions procedures and requirements, fees, cost of living and options available in other parts of the UK and further afield.

My Department's Careers Service continues to build the knowledge of its advisers to ensure that students are fully informed about opportunities in the UK and the Republic of Ireland.

My officials are working with officials in the Department for Education and Skills to research and analyse cross border student flows. A joint report, which will inform policy development, is being finalised and will be published early in 2015.

Mr Devenney asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what assistance his Department will provide to the new local councils to help people who are not currently in education, training or employment.
(AQO 7530/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department leads the Executive's work helping those people who are not in education, training or employment under the inter-departmental 'Pathways to Success' strategy.

The strategy contains an Action Plan with responsibilities stretching across Departments and monitored by the NEET Advisory Group chaired by my Department.

This Group includes key decision makers including

Local Government Officials who help monitor the effectiveness and implementation of the Pathways to Success Strategy.

My Department is committed to working with the new Councils to help those young people who fall into the NEET category through a refreshed approach over the next few years.

After the initial funding for programmes under the strategy ceases at the end of March 2015, my department will continue to support young people through the new European Social Fund (ESF) Programme commencing in April 2015.

Taking the 40% ESF funding, 25% contribution from my department and the required 35% match funding together, almost £21 million will be made available to support this group of young people from April 2015 to March 2018.

Sourcing match funding for the new Programme is the responsibility of potential applicants, who were encouraged to engage with possible match funders, including local councils.

The Department also engaged with potential match funders, including councils, to inform them of the new ESF Programme and ensure that they were open to such approaches.

I expect the new set of ESF projects to cover all areas of Northern Ireland and particularly those that have the greatest level of objectively identified need.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what impact the Budget 2015/16 will have on Farm Lodge and Trostan Avenue Northern Regional College campuses in Ballymena, as well as the Ballymoney campus.
(AQO 7531/11-15)

Dr Farry: I have given priority to the development of new campuses for the Northern Regional College and have agreed the funding to initiate the procurement of a design team. This team will take forward the detailed design for the preferred estate option once the business is fully agreed. However, as you will appreciate I am unable to commit to any capital investment beyond 2015/16 as this falls within a new comprehensive spending review period for which capital funding has yet to be agreed.

In terms of the overall recurrent budget the Executive has now approved an additional allocation of £20 million for my Department but it still faces an unprecedented level of budget reductions. Colleges are currently working through the implications of these cuts for staffing and courses.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on his efforts to increase the number of women involved in science, technology, engineering and mathematics related careers.
(AQO 7532/11-15)

Dr Farry: I am very conscious of the need to promote careers in science, technology, engineering and mathematics to women. The STEM Strategy, 'Success through STEM' includes a recommendation to "address gender bias".

My Department's careers advisers provide advice and guidance to pupils in school when they are making subject choices, underpinned by up-to-date labour market information on job opportunities both now and in the future, including those opportunities in STEM related areas.

In addition, since November 2012 I have funded a STEM Business Co-ordinator who has worked with businesses to encourage the promotion of females in STEM careers. Successes to date include the publication of a Report entitled 'Addressing Gender Balance – Reaping the Gender Dividend in STEM', a good practice guide to assist businesses to address the gender issue. Following this in June 2014, the Co-ordinator in conjunction with the Equality Commission, launched the 'STEM Charter', to enable organisations to demonstrate their commitment to change. To date 31 employers have signed the charter. A 'STEM Employers Equality Network' is now in place to support employers in implementing good practice. Three 'STEM supplements' have also been published in regional newspapers to promote STEM opportunities particularly to females.

I also work with employers, academia and other Government departments for example through sectoral groups in ICT, Advanced Manufacturing and Engineering Services, and Food and Drink Manufacturing Skills, to raise career attractiveness of these important sectors and to address skills needs.

These Groups recognise the need to attract more females into STEM related careers and to this end I have funded interventions to raise awareness and encourage young women to study STEM subjects.

There is no doubt that STEM skills will continue to be highly sought after in the future and a mix of people is essential to meet the demands for jobs in this important area.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on any recent engagement he has had with the Minister for Education and Skills.
(AQO 7533/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department works closely with the Department for Education in Skills and I met with the former Minister for Education and Skills, Ruairi Quinn, regularly. I have continued this close working relationship with his successor, Minister Jan O'Sullivan. I met with Minister O'Sullivan on 5th December 2014 to discuss areas of mutual interest to both our Departments.

At our meeting we discussed the issue of student flows, particularly in the North West region. I have followed this up by writing to Minister O'Sullivan and I hope we can come to a mutual agreement on how best to address the issue.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether setting the future strategic direction for Tourism, as outlined in her statement on 20 January 2015, will include specific targets for visitor numbers and tourist spend for each new council area.
(AQW 41020/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): I will work with local and central government and the tourism industry to bring forward a new strategic plan for tourism which will set challenging targets for tourism growth in Northern Ireland and identify key priorities for action to ensure that we deliver on my and the industry's aspiration to make tourism a £1billion industry by 2020.

In order to meet our overarching targets, tourism growth must be realised right across Northern Ireland and Tourism Northern Ireland has been engaging with the 11 new Council Chief Executives to determine tourism development priorities in each of the new Local Authority areas.

In terms of setting specific targets for visitors and spend in each new Council area, this will be a role for the new Councils as the tourism product offering obviously differs across each of the Local Authority areas and as such so will the volume and value of visitors.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what action her Department is taking to secure funding from the European Globalisation Adjustment Fund to support workers at JTI Gallaher.
(AQW 41132/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The European Globalisation Adjustment Fund does not fall within the remit of my Department, however it is my understanding that; as JTI has advised that they are planning to relocate some jobs to Eastern Europe; these jobs would not be eligible for funding as jobs relocated to other Member States do not qualify for funding under the EGF.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how her Department is providing support for hotels.
(AQW 41269/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department, through Invest NI, provides a wide range of support schemes for hotels. This support includes support towards the expansion of existing hotels and development of new hotels, the delivery of tailored programmes and support to help with competitiveness, management development, people excellence, marketing, e-commerce and ICT, and the provision of information and business advice.

In the last three full financial years Invest NI has made 189 offers of assistance totalling over £2.8 million to the hotel sector. Examples of support offered during this period include grant for the addition of new rooms at the City Hotel in Londonderry, support for market repositioning at the White Horse Hotel in Campsie and assistance for management development and marketing provided to the Roe Park Resort in Limavady.

DETI is currently reviewing its policy regarding the provision of support for all tourism accommodation with a view to ensuring that accommodation stock meets the future growth needs of the tourism sector.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the collaborative skills funding awarded to her Department in the Budget 2015-16, including (i) how; and (ii) when groups can bid for this funding.
(AQW 41307/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The 2015/16 budgets within Invest NI and Department for Employment and Learning (DEL) for collaborative skills support are still in the process of being finalised.

Invest NI provides funding for collaborative skills projects through a range of support programmes, including Skills Growth programme and Assured Skills programme. Industry-led groups can also apply for funding under the Collaborative Network Programme and use this support to collectively scope and/or address skills issues.

Recent examples of networks adopting this approach include the Align IT Network (led by Liberty IT); the Align IT Tech Partnership (led by Equiniti ICS); the Energy Skills Training Network (led by John Burke Shipping) and the Engineering Skills Training Network (led by NuPrint Ltd).

The Collaborative Network Programme is open for applications on an ongoing basis. Networks must consist of a minimum of four Northern Ireland companies, one of which must be an Invest NI customer. Application forms are available on the Invest NI website.

Invest NI also works collaboratively with DEL to ensure that any focus on skills development is aligned with cross-departmental objectives.

The Assured Skills Programme and Skills Growth programmes are the principal vehicles through which DEL and Invest NI jointly provide skills support. The Programmes are available on an ongoing basis, providing assistance in implementing bespoke company skills development solutions.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the Northern Ireland Sustainable Energy Programme (NISEP); and what mechanism will be implemented to replace NISEP in 2016.
(AQW 41376/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Sustainable Energy Programme (NISEP) is delivered by the Utility Regulator and funded by consumers. NISEP is due to end in March 2016 but I have recently asked the Utility Regulator to consider extending the scheme until such times as an appropriate replacement is in place.

A number of schemes, either available or planned, could promote energy efficiency. These include DSD's Affordable Warmth Scheme and OFMDFM's proposed HEaT programme. To allow informed and joined-up decisions to be taken, DETI is working with others, including OFMDFM, DSD and the Regulator, to come up with options for meeting the Energy Efficiency Directive and delivering sustainable and affordable energy policies.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how engineering companies can access European funding.
(AQW 41382/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The European Commission recently approved the Northern Ireland ERDF Operational Programme for the Investment for Growth and Jobs Programme 2014-2020. The funding secured will be used to support all companies, including engineering companies, that meet Invest NI's strategic objectives and the objectives identified by the European Commission for the Programme, namely, strengthening research, technological development and innovation and/or enhancing the competitiveness of SMEs.

The schemes through which Invest NI will utilize the ERDF funding include the Grant for Research and Development scheme, the Design Development Programme and the Access to Finance strategy.

Horizon 2020 is the EU's competitive programme for research and innovation, which funds a range of research from blue-skies right through to near-market activity. Horizon 2020 is open to all organisations across most sectors including engineering.

The Northern Ireland Contact Point (NICP) Network, which includes Invest NI, has been established to support applicants into Horizon 2020. There is a NICP specialist dedicated to assisting the engineering sector and Invest NI supports SMEs to participate in the programme. Free advice and guidance is also available through the Office of the Northern Ireland Executive in Brussels.

Invest NI offers financial support of up to £15,000 to help towards the costs associated with the development of a Horizon 2020 application. In addition, InterTradeIreland can provide financial assistance towards the costs of meeting North/South partners or attending Horizon 2020-related events in Europe.

Engineering companies can also avail of European funding accessed directly through relevant calls for proposals and, in view of the complexity of the application process, Invest NI can provide guidance and support to companies seeking to access such funding.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the dates on which meetings of the Shale Gas Regulators Forum have taken place; and when minutes from these meetings will be available online.
(AQW 41444/11-15)

Mrs Foster: To date there have been seven meetings of the Shale Gas Regulators' Forum as follows:

- 18 October 2012
- 14 March 2013
- 28 June 2013
- 25 October 2013
- 20 February 2014
- 28 July 2014
- 14 January 2015

The minutes of the first six meetings are available on the DETI website.

The draft minutes of the 14 January 2015 meeting require to be ratified at the next meeting of the Forum before they can be published. A date for this meeting has not yet been determined.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (i) for the breakdown of applications received by Invest NI for support for new or expanded hotels in each council area, in each year since 2010; to detail the grants (i) approved; (ii) rejected; and (iii) still under consideration.
(AQW 41466/11-15)

Mrs Foster: In the period specified in the request Invest NI received 20 applications for financial support for development of new, or expansion of existing hotels.

In 2010 there was one application in Armagh, one in Lisburn and two in Londonderry council areas.

In 2011 there was one application in Dungannon, one in Coleraine, two in Londonderry and two in Ballymena council areas.

In 2012 there was one application in Armagh, one in Larne, one in Moyle and three in Londonderry council areas.

In 2014 there was one application in Newry & Mourne, one in Omagh and two in Moyle council areas.

There were no applications received by Invest NI in 2013.

Of the 20 applications 7 have resulted in an offer of support and 1 has been formally rejected. The remaining 12 applications have not as yet progressed to submission of a business plan for formal consideration.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the proposals (i) supported; and (ii) rejected by Invest NI in each year since 2010, broken down by constituency.
(AQW 41467/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The tables below detail the proposals, or applications for support, that were either (i) supported or (ii) did not reach formal approval status in each financial year since 2010/11, broken down by constituency.

Invest NI cannot easily determine the number of applications that it rejected as this information is held in paper files and the work required to so identify this would constitute disproportionate cost. However, we can supply information on the number of applications that did not reach formal approval status, which can be as a result of the application being withdrawn by the applicant or rejected by Invest NI.

The table also contains the number of proposals, or applications, that are still under consideration.

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of Northern Ireland Science Park's Springboard Programme.
(AQW 41492/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Springboard is one of a suite of successful initiatives being delivered by the Northern Ireland Science Park through its CONNECT Programme. This Programme is designed to provide potential entrepreneurs and fledgling companies in the high technology sector with access to the necessary resources and knowledge to bring their product to market. The Springboard initiative is an integral part of that programme. It provides free assistance from experienced entrepreneurs to high growth potential start ups and early stage high tech companies to help get their ideas to market.

Latest figures from the Science Park show that 25 start ups have successfully progressed through the programme with a further 16 in progress. These start ups have attracted investment of over £13.9 million and directly created over 103 new jobs.

The programme is currently expanding and is set to develop further through the new North West Regional Science Park.

I welcome the continuing success of Springboard and the CONNECT Programme. The Programme's development has and will play an important role for high tech companies to develop and grow here and to help achieve Northern Ireland's vision to become a leading entrepreneurial knowledge economy.

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the mentorship and advice available to digital and tech start ups in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 41493/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI provides an extensive portfolio of support to start-up businesses in Northern Ireland including grant and mentoring support in a number of specific areas available to digital and technology starts ups. Access is available to a qualified pool of highly experienced industry mentors, as well as Invest NI staff with sector specific experience.

Invest NI's Business Support Team (BST) provides a centralised service responding to enquiries from all types of businesses in Northern Ireland. The BST provides information and support to businesses via telephone, web, email and social media.

nibusinessinfo.co.uk is an online resource for business support in Northern Ireland, providing free practical advice, information and support to businesses.

The Regional Start Initiative (RSI) is designed to support entrepreneurs into self employment providing advice on developing a business plan and mentoring throughout the process.

'Export Starts' is dedicated to entrepreneurs who are starting an export focused business or who have an established business who are seeking to enter export markets for the first time. These businesses are typically supported with advice and assistance in areas of job creation, marketing, ICT, skills and strategy and R&D.

Other programmes available include:

- The Propel Programme - available to high calibre, innovative entrepreneurs with potential for international success;

- The Leader Programme - aimed at Managing Directors/Owners/Chief Executives who can demonstrate clear strategic need and willingness to enhance their leadership
- The Mentor Programme - open to business start-ups and SMEs who are Invest NI customers.

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what peer-coaching is available to tech and digital start-ups in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 41494/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI offers the following support programmes, which incorporate an element of peer-coaching (none of these are specific to tech and digital start-ups):

The Propel Programme, which is available to high calibre, innovative entrepreneurs who have potential for international success. As well as mentoring, the programme includes financial support, high quality training workshops, investor-ready business plan support, shared workspace and support to make overseas market visits.

The Leader Programme is aimed at Managing Directors/Owners/Chief Executives who can demonstrate a clear strategic need and willingness to make changes to their leadership performance. The programme includes business mentoring, leadership coaching and shared learning through peer networks.

The Mentor Programme is open to business start-ups and SMEs who are Invest NI customers. The programme offers up to £1500 or 49% of eligible costs, whichever is the lesser, over a 12 month period.

The Export Start programme offers a series of workshops focusing on key business disciplines. There is a peer learning element to this offering with participants engaged in a shared learning process. This support is available to export start companies, including technology and digital start-ups.

In addition, mentorship and advice is also available from a range of other organisations outside of Invest NI including TechStart NI, HALO, the Northern Ireland Science Park and Momentum.

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what links Northern Ireland has with the recently established Tech City in London.
(AQW 41495/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Northern Ireland Science Park (NISP) through NISP Connect has strong links with Tech City UK. It is a member of Tech City's Cluster Alliance which has as a strategic objective to accelerate the growth of digital businesses in cities around the UK. NISP Connect has played a key role in the Northern Ireland research underpinning the recently published Tech Nation report. Alastair Hamilton, CEO, Invest NI visited Tech City in September 2014. In collaboration with NISP Connect, Invest NI is committed to building its links with Tech City, to share best practice, drive opportunities and ultimately accelerate the growth of local digital businesses.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what process has been put in place to appoint the Chairperson for the Agri-Food Strategy Board for the next term.
(AQW 41505/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The current term of the Chair and Members of the Agri-Food Strategy Board expires on 19 February 2015.

The Agriculture Minister and I are currently considering future arrangements in accordance with the spirit of the Code of Practice of the Commissioner for Public Appointments Northern Ireland.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether any measures are in place to increase the representation of primary producers on the Agri-Food Strategy Board.
(AQW 41506/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Agri-Food Strategy Board (AFSB) comprises a Chair and 8 industry members, appointed by myself and the Agriculture Minister following an open and transparent competition which was conducted in the spirit of the Commissioner for Public Appointments Northern Ireland Code of Practice.

The Chair and industry members were selected in respect of their appropriate skills and experience and not in their capacity as representatives of any specific sub-sector or element of the agri-food supply chain.

As a result of this competitive process, two producers were appointed to the AFSB, and in addition two employees of producer-led co-operatives were also appointed. Primary producers were also significantly represented on the AFSB's sectoral sub-groups whose input was crucial to the development of Going for Growth. As such I believe that the primary production sector has been well represented in the deliberations of the AFSB.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline any recent discussions she has had with the Irish Government on the proposed budget cuts to Tourism Ireland and InterTrade Ireland.
(AQO 7540/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I wrote to Minister Donohoe and Minister Bruton on 24 November 2014 about the proposed reductions to Tourism Ireland and InterTradeIreland's 2015-16 budgets.

I met with Minister Donohoe on 27 November 2014 in Dublin and discussed Tourism Ireland's budget cuts.

I also met with Minister Bruton on 5 December 2014, at the offices of the North South Ministerial Council in Armagh and discussed InterTradeIreland's budget.

My officials have been working with officials in Tourism Ireland, InterTradeIreland, the Department of Transport, Tourism and Sport and the Department of Jobs, Enterprise and Innovation, and have agreed the reductions in the 2015 Business Plans.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline how the newly branded Tourism Northern Ireland will benefit local tourism.
(AQO 7541/11-15)

Mrs Foster: As a named Statutory Partner in the Community Planning process Tourism Northern Ireland has been engaging with the eleven new Council Chief Executives to determine tourism development priorities in each of the new Local Authority areas.

These development priorities will be reflected in the respective Council Community Plans as they are progressed.

New Councils will play a leading role in the development of local tourism priorities.

Through the community planning process Tourism Northern Ireland will work with them to define the role of tourism as an investment opportunity within each of their districts.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the work of the Agri-Food Strategy Board.
(AQO 7542/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Successful implementation of Going for Growth, the Strategic Plan developed by the Agri-Food Strategy Board, will require the commitment of both Government and industry.

My Department is working in partnership with the agri-food industry to take forward a number of actions arising from Going for Growth. These range from facilitating the development of sustainable solutions to deal with poultry litter, to extending a major review of business red tape to include the agri-food sector.

The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development is also progressing work on the Farm Business Improvement Scheme. Implementation of this Scheme will benefit the entire agri-food sector by improving the competitiveness and productivity of the producer base.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of how the impact of Foreign Direct Investment on newly started indigenous technology businesses sits with Invest NI's published digital strategy.
(AQO 7543/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Attracting Foreign Direct Investment and the growth of the indigenous business base are both key components of Invest NI's strategy. Foreign Direct Investment in technology businesses has brought significant economic benefit to Northern Ireland including job creation, new skills, increased innovation and productivity.

Our success in attracting Foreign Direct Investment has resulted in increased competition for qualified staff, which can be a challenge, particularly for smaller businesses. However, I firmly believe that the overall impact is positive, which will, in the long run, strengthen the indigenous technology business base.

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how Tourism Northern Ireland promotes Gaelic games to potential visitors.
(AQO 7544/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Tourism Northern Ireland delivers marketing activity promoting Northern Ireland as a tourism destination in both Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

Tourism Northern Ireland develops marketing initiatives with a range of sporting organisations including Ulster GAA and Ulster Rugby, targeting their respective fan bases.

Tourism Northern Ireland features event information, as supplied by event organisers and local authorities, on its consumer website www.discovernorthernireland.com and through its digital & social media channels.

Mr D McIlveen asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the importance of Northern Ireland having good connectivity to the City of London.
(AQO 7545/11-15)

Mrs Foster: It is essential that Northern Ireland has good air connectivity to London. Access to a network of global connections is currently provided via nine flights a day to Heathrow. Northern Ireland is also well served via frequent daily services to Gatwick, London City, Luton and Stansted.

Mr Milne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on improvements to rural broadband in Mid Ulster.
(AQO 7546/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Building on previous interventions, my Department is currently implementing the Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project which seeks to provide wire line broadband services of at least 2 Megabits per second in areas that previously had no service and improve the availability of fixed line broadband services of 24 Megabits per second or higher in areas where choice is poor or broadband speeds are low. The project is progressing according to schedule and by 31 December 2014 almost seventeen thousand, five hundred premises across Northern Ireland had benefitted from the improvements being delivered including just over two thousand, five hundred in the Mid Ulster Constituency.

By project completion in December 2015, it is anticipated that improvements will have been delivered for at least forty five thousand premises across Northern Ireland.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline any recent discussions she has had with her Executive colleagues and the Irish Government on the economic benefits of an all-island tourism strategy.
(AQO 7547/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I have had no specific discussions about an all-island tourism strategy with Executive colleagues or the Irish Government.

Department of the Environment

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the savings to be made by his Department from the public sector voluntary exit scheme, over each of the four financial years commencing 2014/15.
(AQW 40738/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): Under the final Budget for 2015-16, my Department's non ring-fenced Resource DEL budget was reduced by 10.7% to £104.2 million, the highest percentage reduction of all the Departments. Once account is taken of inescapable De-rating grant payments to councils, the reduction to my remaining Budget is almost 15%.

The cuts to my Budget will mean reducing or withdrawing funding from a wide range of external bodies while seeking to implement substantial reductions in staff numbers under the central Civil Service voluntary exit scheme.

My Department has highlighted a need to achieve approximately £15 million in savings by way of Civil Service Voluntary Exit Schemes. No savings are anticipated in the present financial year (2014/15). The level of savings that occur in 2015/16 and following years will depend on levels of uptake and management of the central Civil Service voluntary exit scheme.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the impact that the 56 per cent cut will have on his Department's delivery of strategic planning and policy, including to what extent this cut will be passed onto local councils.
(AQW 41101/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I am not immediately clear as to the basis of the 56 per cent reduction in funding referred to, while the headline reduction in the Department's final Budget was 10.7%, the underlying reduction is nearer to 15% once amount is taken of inescapable derating count payments to councils. The financial allocations for DOE contained in the Budget will have significant adverse implications for the services provided by my Department and for its staff, stakeholders and clients. This is one of the many reasons why I voted against the budget.

I am currently considering the impact that these significant cuts to my Department's budget will have on the level of funding available for all of my Department's functions, including strategic planning and policy. I now have very difficult decisions to make on all expenditure areas, including expenditure relating to the Department's delivery of strategic planning and policy in 2015/16.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment what percent of the cut to the planning budget will be passed on to local councils.

Mr Durkan: My Department remains committed to ensuring that the transferred planning function is fit for purpose and adequately resourced to ensure the success of the planning process following reform. Consequently, my department has ring fenced all planning budgets associated with those functions transferring to councils and therefore planning budgets have been fully protected from recent budgetary cuts.

In addition, for the purpose of calculating the Transfer of Function Grant the department has taken a conservative view when estimating the value of planning receipts that the councils shall receive. The department has estimated planning income for 2015-16 to be in the region of £12.3m, however if the current growth in planning receipts continues, the income for 2015-16 could be closer to £13.6m. This could result in a windfall gain for rates payers as councils could potentially receive more in planning fees during 2015-16 than the department has estimated.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment when the Supplementary Planning Guidance in relation to Areas of Townscape Character referred to in the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan adoption statement at 11.1 will be published for consultation.
(AQW 41205/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department will not be publishing supplementary planning guidance for Areas of Townscape Character within the area covered by the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan.

To be effective supplementary planning guidance requires public consultation and I am content that the new planning authorities which come into being in April 2015 can take this matter forward in a manner and time suited to their needs.

The extensive preparatory work on the supplementary guidance will be available to the new authorities.

When the Belfast Metropolitan Area Pan was adopted in September 2014 the Department stated it would take forward the consultation process for Areas of Townscape Character guidance but this has not been possible. My Department has had to commit considerable resources to other aspects of the Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan and insufficient time now remains to complete the Area of Townscape Character process prior to the transfer of planning functions in April 2015.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the impact on category 2 and 3 farm businesses of planning insistence on a six year farming business, given that there is no scope within Planning Policy Statement 21.
(AQW 41287/11-15)

Mr Durkan: PPS21 policies CTY 10 'Dwellings on Farms' and CTY 12 'Agricultural and Forestry Development' share a requirement that any farm business has been established for at least 6 years.

The applicant will therefore be required to provide the farm's Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) business ID number along with other evidence to prove active farming over this period. This is a reasonable period to demonstrate an ongoing commitment to active farming on the part of the applicant.

The Department is aware that DARD issues different categories of business ID however PPS21 does not differentiate, for the purposes of planning policy, between these different categories.

Finally, as you will be aware planning policy and guidance cannot anticipate all possible scenarios. Therefore, notwithstanding the above requirement, and dependent upon the individual circumstances of a particular case, my Department may accept other suitable alternative evidence of active farming or a lesser period of establishment. In such cases my Department will always provide a robust justification for so doing.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of whether there should be greater flexibility in determining what constitutes an active farm beyond entitlement to Single Farm Payments, such as the consideration of other information such as herd and flock numbers.
(AQW 41288/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There is no requirement in PPS 21 Policies CTY 10 or CTY 12 for an applicant to prove an entitlement to claim Single Farm Payment in order to demonstrate that a farm business is currently active. The Justification and Amplification to PPS 21 policy CTY10 'Dwellings on Farms' states that in order to demonstrate that a farm business is active an applicant 'will therefore be required to provide the farm's DARD business ID number, along with other evidence of active farming over the required period'.

Planning Appeals Commission decisions have confirmed that, while an applicant need not personally be involved in active farming, they should nevertheless provide the farm's DARD business ID in order to establish that the farm where the dwelling is proposed is both active and established.

As planning policy and guidance cannot anticipate all possible scenarios, my Department may accept other suitable alternative evidence of active farming, dependent upon the individual circumstances of a particular case. In such cases my Department will require a robust justification for so doing. However, the general position will be that applicants will be expected to provide the farm's agricultural business ID as evidence.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of the Environment whether Planning Policy Statement 21 makes any formal distinction between farm business identification categorisations and debars categories 2 and 3 from consideration under Policy CTY 10.
(AQW 41289/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Justification and Amplification to PPS 21 policy CTY10 'Dwellings on Farms' states that in order to demonstrate that a farm business is active an applicant 'will therefore be required to provide the farm's Department of Agriculture and Rural Development business ID number, along with other evidence of active farming over the required period'.

The Department is aware that DARD issues different categories of business ID however PPS21 does not differentiate, for the purposes of planning policy, between these different categories.

Finally, as you will be aware planning policy and guidance cannot anticipate all possible scenarios. Therefore, notwithstanding the above requirement, and dependent upon the individual circumstances of a particular case, my Department may accept other suitable alternative evidence of active farming. In such cases my Department will always provide a robust justification for so doing.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of the number of planning applications for single wind turbines and wind farms which are going directly to the Planning Appeals Commission without any determination and in the context of growing concerns relating to the current ETSU-R-97 guidelines.
(AQW 41325/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Article 32 of The Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991 provides a statutory right of appeal for applicants against the refusal of a planning permission. Article 33 of The Order allows for an appeal in default of a planning decision by the Department. This applies as if permission had been refused by the Department. In both instances the Planning Appeals Commission (PAC) will deal with the application as if it had been made to them in the first instance.

The PAC operates under The Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991. As such, in reaching a decision on a planning appeal, the PAC is required to take full account of all relevant planning matters. This will include the views of third parties both in objection and support. In relation to windfarms specifically this will include the provisions of relevant guidance documents, including the ETSU guidelines. ETSU remains a material consideration in the determination of single turbine and windfarm developments regardless of whether the decision is being taken by the Department or the PAC.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment what procedures are in place to ensure the allocation of positions of responsibility in a manner reflective of the compositions of the new councils.
(AQW 41501/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Local Government Act (Northern Ireland) 2014 (the 2014 Act) makes provision for the filling of positions of responsibility on a council to ensure that these positions are allocated across the political parties and independents represented on a council. Section 6 of the 2014 Act specifies the positions of responsibility on a council, and Schedule 1 to that Act specifies the procedures available to a council for filling those positions. These are the d'Hondt and Sainte-Laguë formula methods or the Single Transferable Vote method. The d'Hondt method is specified as the default method, unless a council decides by a qualified majority to use one of the alternative methods.

In addition to ensuring the sharing of positions of responsibility across the political parties and independents, Schedule 2 to the 2014 Act makes detailed provision in relation to the appointment of councillors to council committees to ensure that each committee, in so far as is practicable, reflects the levels of representation of the political parties and independents on the council.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment what procedures are in place to ensure the new councils are properly carrying out their responsibilities to improve good relations.
(AQW 41502/11-15)

Mr Durkan: All district councils, as public authorities, are subject to the duty specified in section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998 in relation to promoting good relations. Each district council is responsible for ensuring that it complies with this statutory duty.

In addition to this duty, provision is made in the Local Government Act (Northern Ireland) 2014 (the 2014 Act) that community planning for a local government district will include the identification of long-term objectives for improving the social well-being of the district. Section 66(3) of the 2014 Act provides that the reference to improving social well-being includes, amongst other matters, the desirability of improving good relations. The 2014 Act places a duty on a council and its community planning partners to review the community plan at least every four years and to monitor progress towards meeting the objectives in the current community plan. It also places a duty on a council and its community planning partners to seek the participation of, and view from, the community in relation to community planning and the community plan.

The combined effect of these statutory duties will commit district councils to carrying out their responsibilities in relation to good relations.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment (i) what guidelines are in place for the spraying of chemicals, including herbicides and pesticides, on (a) Areas of Special Scientific Interest (ASSIs) managed by his Department; (b) land owned or leased by his Department; and (ii) what chemicals have been sprayed on ASSIs managed by his Department in the last four years.
(AQW 41510/11-15)

Mr Durkan:

(i) There are no guidelines for the spraying of chemicals specific to:

(a) Areas of Special Scientific Interest (ASSIs) managed by my Department or

(b) land owned or leased by my Department.

My Department follows the guidelines set out in the document 'Pesticides – Code of Practice for using Plant Protection Products'. This is a DARD document to which the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) contributed.

In addition, the NIEA policy on the management of its country parks states:

The use of chemicals, particularly biocides, will be limited to situations where this represents the most sustainable means of achieving an essential objective, for example stump treatment with herbicide in the removal of invasive, non-native shrubs may be preferable to repeated coppicing.

A similar approach applies to NIEA-managed nature reserves.

Where it has been identified that there is a requirement to undertake spraying on Department lands which have been declared as an ASSI, each case is assessed on an individual basis.

(ii) Table 1 below provides details of those chemicals which have been sprayed in ASSIs managed by the Department of Environment during the last four years.

Table 1 – Chemicals sprayed within ASSIs managed by the DOE since 2011.

ASSI	Biocide product and active ingredient	Need
Roe Valley Country Park	Roundup Pro Biactive (Glyphosate)	Control of the invasive species Japanese knotweed (Fallopia japonica).
Peatlands Park	Roundup Pro Biactive (Glyphosate)	Control of the invasive species Rhododendron x super-ponticum.
Brackagh Moss Nature Reserve	Roundup Pro Biactive (Glyphosate)	Control of the invasive species Japanese knotweed (Fallopia japonica).
Dorn Nature Reserve (Strangford Lough).	Fusilade Max (Fluazifop P-butyl).	Control of the invasive hybrid species Common Cord Grass (Spartina anglica).
Roe Estuary Nature Reserve	Fusilade Max (Fluazifop P-butyl).	Control of the invasive hybrid species Common Cord Grass (Spartina anglica).

For clarification, ASSIs do not match the areas of Country Parks so there is some variation between this Answer and the Answer to AQW 41511/11-15.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment what chemicals have been used in (i) Crawfordsburn Country Park; (ii) Peatlands Park; and (iii) Roe Valley Country Park, by his Department, or by those leasing land from his Department, in the last four years.
(AQW 41511/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Details of chemicals that have been used in (i) Crawfordsburn Country Park; (ii) Peatlands Park; and (iii) Roe Valley Country Park by the Department of Environment, or by those leasing land from the Department in the last four years are provided in Table 1.

Table 1 – Chemicals used in Crawfordsburn Country Park, Peatlands Park and Roe Valley Country Park in the last four years.

Site	Chemical Product	Need
Roe Valley Country Park	Roundup Pro Biactive (Glyphosate)	Control of the invasive species Japanese knotweed (Fallopia japonica).
Roe Valley Country Park	Diclofenac	Pest control as part of Property Maintenance services.
Peatlands Park	Roundup Pro Biactive (Glyphosate)	Control of the invasive species Rhododendron x super-ponticum.
Peatlands Park	Scala	Treatment of apple orchard under lease (insecticide).
Peatlands Park	Dursban	Treatment of apple orchard under lease (fungicide).
Peatlands Park	Diclofenac	Pest control as part of Property Maintenance services.
Crawfordsburn Country Park (Glen).	Roundup Pro Biactive (Glyphosate)	Control of the invasive species Japanese knotweed (Fallopia japonica).
Crawfordsburn Country Park (Glen).	Roundup Pro Biactive (Glyphosate)	Control of Bohemian knotweed (Fallopia x bohemica).

Site	Chemical Product	Need
Crawfordsburn C P (Helen's Bay Car Park)	Roundup Pro Biactive (Glyphosate)	Control of Himalayan knotweed (Persicaria wallichii).
Crawfordsburn Country Park (Grey Point Fort)	Zeptreet 100	Control of moss and algae on ramp.
Crawfordsburn Country Park (visitor centre).	Diclofenac	Pest control as part of Property Maintenance services.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether a Habitat Regulations Assessment under article 6 of the Habitats Directive has been carried out for periwinkle harvesting on Strangford Lough.
(AQW 41512/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Habitats Directive requires that any plan or project likely to have a significant effect on a Natura 2000 site shall undergo an Appropriate Assessment (also known as a Habitats Regulation Assessment) to determine the implications for the site.

The term plan or project refers to a consent, authorisation, licence or permission, and the Competent Authority is the body with responsibility for determining that consent, authorisation, licence or permission.

The Department is not a Competent Authority, as defined in the Habitats Directive, for licensing the harvesting of periwinkles. Consequently, there is no obligation for it to undertake an Assessment under the Habitats Regulations.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department has received reports of unlawful asbestos dumping on land managed by his Department within the last six years
(AQW 41513/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In March 2010, my Department received a report of the alleged illegal deposit of building waste, possibly including asbestos, at two sites in one of the Country Parks managed by NIEA.

A subsequent site investigation did not disclose any asbestos.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, given that Northern Ireland is emerging from conflict, how he will ensure that the new planning functions bestowed on councils will examine the reality of contested spaces and support the development of safe, open and welcoming shared spaces which can be used by the whole community.
(AQW 41535/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I can advise the Member that I firmly believe the new two tier planning system will have a role to play in addressing issues arising from the conflict, particularly contested spaces. By returning planning powers to councils I consider them to be well placed, through the production of their Local Development Plans (LDPs), to contribute to strategies for dealing with legacies of the conflict such as contested spaces; as well as the creation of new and enhancing existing shared spaces in their own areas.

I have instructed my officials to reflect this approach in the draft Strategic Planning Policy Statement (SPPS) which is currently being finalised and I intend to bring to the floor of the Assembly in the near future. A core planning principle of the SPPS is "Creating and Enhancing Shared Space", which emphasises this important role.

In addition, local councils will also have new powers of Community Planning which, together with their land-use planning powers, will help towards achieving the Government's wider objectives laid out in "Together: Building a United Communities" strategy of equality of opportunity, the desirability of good relations and reconciliation.

It is my belief that the planning system through local councils should seek to play its part in addressing all barriers that prevent or interfere with the creation and maintenance of shared space, and ensure that all individuals can live, learn, work and play wherever they choose.

My Department's commitment to ensure that planning is utilised to tackle a legacy of division is reiterated in the Department's "Living Places: Urban Stewardship and Design Guide", which acknowledges the problem before identifying that new and existing places should be accessible and inviting to all users.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the average cost to the public purse of a road fatality.
(AQW 41619/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The latest average cost figures, supplied by the Department for Transport in its 'Reported Road Casualties Great Britain: 2013 Annual Report', are provided below. We have traditionally read these cost estimates across to Northern Ireland as representing a reasonable proxy.

Casualty / Collision Type	Cost Per Casualty	Cost Per Collision
Fatal	£1,742,988	£1,953,783
Serious	£195,863	£223,870

Casualty / Collision Type	Cost Per Casualty	Cost Per Collision
Slight	£15,099	£23,544

These figures consider the cost to the economy rather than specifically the cost to the public purse, which are not figures that are currently produced or would be straightforward to produce.

The figures include:

- loss of output due to injury - this is calculated as the present value of the expected loss of earnings plus any non-wage payments paid by the employer;
- ambulance costs and the costs of hospital treatment; and
- the human costs of casualties. These are based on willingness to pay to avoid pain, grief and suffering to the casualty, relatives and friends, as well as intrinsic loss of enjoyment of life in the case of fatalities.

Police costs, administrative costs of insurance and costs of damage to vehicles and property and are not included in the average cost per casualty. These costs are deemed not to relate specifically to casualties and are instead included in the calculation of the average cost of a collision which is also provided in the table above.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of the Environment for a breakdown of road traffic accidents which resulted in the death of a pedestrian, broken down by (a) type of road, including the speed limit; and (b) whether the area was urban, rural or residential, in each of the last three years.

Mr Durkan: The table below provides a breakdown of road traffic collisions where a pedestrian was killed by road type, speed limit and area.

Area (based on road speed)1	Road Type	Speed	2011	2012	2013	2014*
Urban	One way street	30	1	0	0	1
Urban	Single carriageway	30	5	6	5	4
Urban	Single carriageway	40	0	0	0	1
Rural	Single carriageway	50	0	0	0	1
Rural	Single carriageway	60	4	3	2	10
Motorway/Dual Carriageway	Dual carriageway	30	1	0	0	0
			13	9	7	17

Source: Police Service of Northern Ireland

1 This is based on speed limit of road where 40 miles per hour or less is urban and over 40 miles per hour is rural apart from where the carriageway type is a dual carriageway or motorway.

* Provisional data – estimates from January to November 2014

Over the last three complete calendar years (2011-13) there were 29 road traffic collisions which resulted in the death of a pedestrian. Provisional information for 2014 (January to November) is also provided. During the first eleven months of 2014 there were 17 road traffic collisions which resulted in the death of a pedestrian. Information is not available to indicate if the area in which each collision occurred was considered residential.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the latest statistics available on the number of road traffic accidents that resulted in death or serious injury.
(AQW 41629/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There were 68 fatal and 523 serious road traffic collisions recorded by the Police Service of Northern Ireland between January and November 2014. This resulted in 73 road deaths and 640 people being seriously injured. For the same time period in 2013 there were 51 fatal and 555 serious road traffic collisions resulting in 53 road deaths and 647 people seriously injured.

Mr Cree asked the Minister of the Environment whether he has agreed to support a register of Northern Ireland's remarkable trees; and if these trees will be protected as a crucial part of the environment.
(AQW 41653/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I am aware that the Woodland Trust is in the process of preparing a register of Northern Ireland's remarkable trees. The register will seek to identify, celebrate and protect our trees of special interest. I recognise that many of these trees will be of great age, have seen centuries come and go, are home to many species of wildlife and have cultural value. When I receive the register I will be happy to give it further consideration. This will include a consideration of how best to protect such trees.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what road safety and advertising campaigns are planned for 2015/16, including the use of previously used material.
(AQW 41675/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Significant reductions have been made to my Department's budget allocation in the Executive's agreed budget for 2015-16. I am currently considering how to allocate my available budget to my Department's activities. I have yet to complete this exercise, so I cannot at this stage state with certainty what budget will be available to support road safety promotion activity next year.

When the budget allocation is finalised, my officials will undertake a critical review of the road safety problem profile and ensure resources are allocated in line with priorities. This will ensure resources are targeted where they will have the greatest impact on reducing the level of deaths and serious injuries on our roads.

Funds allocated to road safety would utilise my Department's current portfolio of actions which address many road safety problems. There are currently no plans to commission any new campaigns for 2015/16.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what is the projected spend on road safety advertising and campaigns funded by his Department in 2015/16.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment to list the historic monuments that are under the protection of the NIEA in the Fermanagh District Council area.
(AQW 41735/11-15)

Mr Durkan: For the purposes of this answer, NIEA has taken 'under the protection of NIEA' to refer to any "protected place" as defined by Article 29 of the Historic Monuments and Archaeological Objects (NI) Order 1995 (HMAOO 1995). That definition refers to any place which is the site of a scheduled monument or of any monument under the ownership or guardianship of the Department.

There are 12 sites in State Care in County Fermanagh and these are listed by townland in the attachments accompanying this response.

There are 299 Scheduled Historic Monuments in the Fermanagh District Council Area, and they are also listed in the attachments. These sites have statutory protection under Article 3 of the HMAOO 1995 and are comprised of a wide range of monument types from the prehistoric through to the more recent past. They are largely in private ownership and, through the provisions of the HMAOO 1995, NIEA regulate activities within their protected areas. NIEA also actively monitors their condition and advises on their upkeep through a cyclical inspection regime

Department of Finance and Personnel

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 37850/11-15, of the £400m identified, what amount has been derived from dormant bank accounts within Northern Ireland.
(AQW 39683/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): Financial institutions participating in the dormant accounts scheme do not participate on a regional basis, instead they do so on an institutional basis. This unfortunately means that the amount of funding from Northern Ireland based dormant accounts is not available.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he has met the Together: Building a United Community Strategy commitment to introduce an impact assessment that assesses the extent to which his departmental policies and interventions contribute to the objective of building a united, rather than divided, community.
(AQW 40223/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Once the new Equality and Good Relations Commission is in place, and an impact assessment tool is developed to assess a policy's contribution to the delivery of good relations objectives, my Department will implement the new guidance in full.

In the meantime, we will continue to use the Equality Commission's current guidance to assess the impact of our policies.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how much funding his Department provided to Trade Unions in the last financial year.
(AQW 40298/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: In 2013-14 no funding was provided to Trade Union organisations by my Department. However, the Department paid £187k in salary costs in respect of Trade Union Representatives and their administrative support staff.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of tourists visiting Northern Ireland from (i) Great Britain; (ii) Republic of Ireland; and (iii) abroad, in each of year since 2007.
(AQW 40412/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The annual (2007-2013) number of overnight trips of visitors to Northern Ireland from (i) Great Britain; (ii) Republic of Ireland; and (iii) outside UK & Ireland is detailed in the table overleaf.

Table: Number of overnight trips (thousands) to Northern Ireland of visitors from (i) Great Britain, (ii) Republic of Ireland and (iii) outside UK & Ireland (2007-2013).

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what is the estimated annual revenue generated by tourism since 2007.
(AQW 40413/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The annual expenditure (£million) on all overnight trips (NI residents and visitors) in Northern Ireland is detailed in the table below.

Table: Annual expenditure (£million) on overnight trips (NI residents and visitors) in Northern Ireland (2008-2013).

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what percentage of overseas tourists to the island of Ireland in each year since 2007 have visited Northern Ireland.
(AQW 40415/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The annual number of overnight trips to Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland is detailed in the table overleaf.

The figures shown relate solely to visitors from outside Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he plans to allow couples in civil partnerships to marry.
(AQW 40534/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I have no plans to bring such legislation before the Assembly.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how much has been saved since Orange Halls were exempt from paying rates.
(AQW 40548/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It is estimated that £5.7 million has been saved since April 2006 through Article 41A exemptions relating to Orange Halls.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 39009/11-15, to detail (i) when each subject premises was entered on the valuation list as liable for rates; and (ii) whether rates have been paid on each of the subject premises consistently since May 2011.
(AQW 40585/11-15)

Mr Hamilton:

(i) The premises were first entered in the Valuation List as follows:
- Unit 1 at 79 Quarry Road was separately valued from the main property on 24th September 2008;
- 26 Burn Road, Cookstown on 5th March 1998;
- 162 Tullaghans Road, Dunloy on 11th February 1992; and
- 12A Main Street, Dunloy, was separately valued from 12 Main Street, Dunloy on 31st December 2014.

(ii) Details relating to individual rate bills cannot be released under the Data Protection Act.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of people registered as unemployed in the Limavady Travel to Work Area, broken down by age.
(AQW 40595/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: There is no official Limavady Travel to Work Area (TTWA), Limavady District Council is included in the Derry TTWA.

The attached table shows the number of persons claiming unemployment related benefits at November 2014, broken down by age in the Derry TTWA.

Table: Number of persons claiming unemployment related benefits by age-group in Derry TTWA November 2014

45-54	1,255

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, following the recent report 'Equality Statistics for the Northern Ireland Civil Service', to detail the breakdown in the number of Protestants and Roman Catholics amongst those recruited to the general service grades in that year.
(AQW 40671/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: There were 366 Protestants and 354 Catholics recruited to the General Service grades during 2012. This is based on appointments to 18 competitions.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the proposed timetable for Corporation Tax to be devolved.
(AQW 40683/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Corporation Tax (Northern Ireland) Bill was introduced in the House of Commons on 8 January 2015 and had its second reading on 27 January 2015. In line with the Stormont House Agreement, the passage of the Bill through UK Parliament is conditional on implementation of key measures to deliver sustainable finances for Northern Ireland. On this basis, it is anticipated that the Bill will receive Royal Assent before dissolution of Parliament on 30 March 2015. The legislation includes a commencement clause which will enable powers to transfer from April 2017 subject to the Northern Ireland Executive demonstrating its finances are on a sustainable footing for the long term.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail proposals which have been submitted, to benefit from unallocated Financial Transactions Capital funding, since the 2014 October Monitoring Round.
(AQW 40720/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Statement to the Assembly on the 2014-15 January Monitoring Round detailed allocations of ring-fenced Financial Transactions Capital totalling £40.6 million, including £38.5 million to support the University of Ulster Greater Belfast Development and £2.1 million for the Invest NI Growth Loan Fund. This ensured that all of the Financial Transactions Capital available to the Executive in this year is now allocated to departments.

No other bids were submitted for Financial Transactions Capital in the January Monitoring Round.

Details of allocations for 2015-16 are detailed in the Executive's Final Budget.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for the percentage of his Department's overall Current Resource Expenditure allocated to staff wages in (i) 2013/14; and (ii) the 2014/15 draft budget.

Mr Hamilton: Approximately 45% of my Department's 2013-14 current resource expenditure was allocated to staff wages.

The Department's 2014-15 January monitoring position also has approximately 45% of the current resource expenditure allocated to staff wages.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how his Department's definition of a rural areas differs from the definitions used by the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development and the Department of the Environment; and what consideration has been given to the merits of standardising the definition against flexibility in rural retail rates.
(AQW 40759/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Department's definition aligns with the recommendations of the Inter-Departmental Urban-Rural Definition Group.

You should note however that the Report recommended that definitions should not be used in a prescriptive way and that policy-makers need to consider the appropriateness of settlement and urban/rural classifications to individual policies. Accordingly I am not in a position to comment on the rationale used by DARD or DOE when defining rural areas for their own purposes as these may vary according to the reason for the definition.

In relation to your point on rural retail rates the location of a property is fully reflected in the rating valuation, because it represents an assessment of a property's rental value. This means that shops in less favourable trading locations are assessed at lower values.

One area where my Department defines rural is in the definition of Rural ATMs for rates exemption; that definition is premised upon settlement data from NISRA in order to designate what constitutes a rural ward.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 40195/11-15, to detail (i) the latest financial year for which his Department has an estimate of revenue raised from Corporation Tax in Northern Ireland; and (ii) how his Department conducted informed negotiations with HM Treasury over the transfer of Corporation Tax powers without up-to-date data.
(AQW 40828/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The most recently published Departmental estimate of Corporation Tax revenues for Northern Ireland was included in the Northern Ireland Net Fiscal Balance Report (NFBR) in March 2014. It relates to the 2011-12 financial year.

The comprehensive engagement between my Department and HM Treasury in relation to the transfer of Corporation Tax rate-setting powers has been informed by the latest available data from HMRC's administrative sources and associated projections.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the savings to be made by his Department from the public sector voluntary exit scheme, over each of the four financial years commencing 2014/15.

Mr Hamilton: As the public sector voluntary exit scheme will only be effective from 2015-16, it will not deliver any savings in 2014-15.

It is anticipated that savings of around £2.5m will need to be made by my Department in 2015-16. Staff reductions will only start to generate a full year of savings from 2016-17 onwards, estimated at around £10m per annum in 2016-17 and 2017-18. Further reductions in staff costs are likely to be required in 2016-17 and 2017-18. However, until the Department's budget allocation for these years has been set, it is not possible to estimate what these may be.

This response is provided for the Department of Finance and Personnel only as the information for all departments is not held centrally. The Member should contact individual departments for their information.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the PSNI equal pay claim.
(AQW 40861/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It has been established that there are no valid equal pay claims for both PSNI and NIO staff upon which to base a settlement. The paper I circulated to Executive colleagues before last summer recognises the moral argument put forward, and I hope it will satisfactorily resolve the issue for this group of staff.

However, my recommendation and any associated expenditure require the approval of the Executive and I therefore await the agreement of Executive colleagues for the paper to be brought forward for discussion. While I appreciate the frustration of staff affected by this issue, the matter is now in the hands of the Executive.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline all the business cases relating to the repayment of all Financial Transaction Capital projects identified in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 40907/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It is the responsibility of individual departments to identify proposals for the utilisation of Financial Transactions Capital (FTC). These investment decisions must be underpinned by a proportionate business case developed by the relevant department. It is for the relevant department to release details of the business cases.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail all bids submitted by each Department for financial assistance provided under the Change Fund.
(AQW 40933/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Over 120 bids were received from across the public sector, with the total amount requested equating to approximately five times the value of the fund. A list of all bids submitted by each department for financial assistance provided under the Change Fund is attached at Annex A.

A list of successful bids is published in the Northern Ireland Executive's Budget 2015-16.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the likely impact on the community background of the Civil Service of 20,000 redundancies.

Mr Hamilton: The Civil Service is not planning 20,000 redundancies.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, in reference to paragraph 3.61 of the Budget 2015/16, what is the comparison with Scotland in terms of the level of actual indebtedness, as opposed to the borrowing limit.
(AQW 40959/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The new borrowing powers available to the Scottish Government under the Scotland Act 2012 come into effect from 1 April 2015. It therefore follows that, at this point, Scotland does not currently have a level of indebtedness under these powers to compare to.

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail, for each of the last five years for which data is available, the (i) proportion; and (ii) value of food and drink sales exports (a) overseas; (b) to Britain; and (c) to the south of Ireland.
(AQW 40964/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Exports data are available from the Regional Trade Statistics (RTS), which are produced by Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs (HMRC). Table 1 attached shows the value and percentage of food and drink exports from Northern Ireland, to (a) overseas and (b) the Republic of Ireland (ROI) for the five year period 2009/10 – 2013/14.

As HMRC does not track trade between UK regions, the information requested on food and drink sales to Great Britain (GB) is sourced from the Department of Agriculture and Regional Development (DARD). Table 2 shows the data for the most recent five years available.

HMRC and DARD estimates are collected on a different basis and are not directly comparable.

1 The figures in Table 2 exclude the sales of all food and drinks processing businesses with turnovers of less than £250,000.

2 A number of different definitions are available to describe what food and drinks processing encompasses. Table 2 relates to businesses that are involved in processing activities that change the nature of a raw material destined for human consumption. This differs from the standard industrial classification (SIC) definition, which is used to compile most Government's statistics on the manufacturing industry or its subsectors.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the progress of equal pay for (i) Northern Ireland Office staff; and (ii) PSNI civilian staff.
(AQW 40967/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It has been established that there are no valid equal pay claims for both PSNI and NIO staff upon which to base a settlement. The paper I circulated to Executive colleagues before last summer recognises the moral argument put forward, and I hope it will satisfactorily resolve the issue for this group of staff.

However, my recommendation and any associated expenditure require the approval of the Executive and I therefore await the agreement of Executive colleagues for the paper to be brought forward for discussion. While I appreciate the frustration of staff affected by this issue, the matter is now in the hands of the Executive.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether the money received in the final Budget from the Change Fund by the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment and the Department for Employment and Learning for collaborative skills is being pooled between the Departments; and if not, to outline the reasons.
(AQW 41028/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Collaborative Skills Change Fund allocation was distributed between the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment and the Department for Employment and Learning and the details of the distribution can be found in the Annex of the 2015-16 Budget document.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the locations on the Civil Service estate which have electric car charging points; (ii) the locations where he intends to install points over the next twelve months; and (iii) whether electric car charging points in the public sector estate are to be made available to all staff and visitors of those locations and be time limited.
(AQW 41031/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Electric car charging points are currently installed at:-

a) Goodwood House, Belfast

b) Ballymena County Hall, Ballymena

c) Clarence Court, Belfast

Over the next 12 months it is intended to install electric car charging points at:-

a) Dundonald House, Stormont Estate, Belfast

b) Craigantlet Buildings, Stormont Estate, Belfast

c) Castle Buildings, Stormont Estate, Belfast

d) Stormont Cottages, Stormont Estate, Belfast

e) Clare House, Belfast

f) Clarence Court, Belfast

g) Rathgael House, Bangor

h) Marlborough House, Craigavon

i) Academy House, Ballymena

j) Inishkeen House, Enniskillen

k) Omagh County Hall, Omagh

l) Northland House, Belfast

Where electric car charge points are installed in the office estate, the current car park access arrangements will remain unchanged at each location. Management of charging spaces will be through local premises staff who currently have responsibility for management of each local car park. There are no plans to change current car park access arrangements.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel (i) how much his Department pays annually for Trade Union officials; (ii) how many officials this payment covers; and (iii) what is the cost of administering Trade Union's dues.
(AQW 41061/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: In 2013-14 the Department paid £187k in salary costs in respect of Trade Union officials. The amount covers five Trade Union Representatives and administrative support of one staff member. It is not possible to provide the cost of administering Trade Union dues as it is not separately identifiable.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the most recent rates arrears figures for the (i) Limavady; (ii) Ballymoney; (iii) Coleraine; and (iv) Moyle Borough Council areas.

Mr Hamilton: The amount of rate arrears at 31st March 2014 is provided in the table below.

District Council	Rate Arrears*
Limavady	£2,520,342
Ballymoney	£1,515,460
Coleraine	£4,240,862
Moyle	£973,372

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 36362/11-15, for an update on equal pay for PSNI and former Northern Ireland Office staff.
(AQW 41145/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It has been established that there are no valid equal pay claims for both PSNI and NIO staff upon which to base a settlement. The paper I circulated to Executive colleagues before last summer recognises the moral argument put forward, and I hope it will satisfactorily resolve the issue for this group of staff.

However, my recommendation and any associated expenditure require the approval of the Executive and I therefore await the agreement of Executive colleagues for the paper to be brought forward for discussion. While I appreciate the frustration of staff affected by this issue, the matter is now in the hands of the Executive.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many responses were received to the public consultation on the draft 2015/16 Budget; and how these responses were considered in the short time period before his Department produced the Executive paper on the revised proposals.
(AQW 41165/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The overarching consultation on the 2015-16 Draft Budget received 19,050 responses. These responses were collated and analysed by DFP officials as they were received, with the first response received in early November 2014. A short summary of key consultation themes was provided to the Executive as part of their deliberations on the Final Budget.

In addition, individual departmental consultation received over 30,000 responses and these responses helped to form individual Minister's views on their departmental priorities.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what is the anticipated impact of the proposed exit scheme on natural wastage, at no added cost, over the next four years, given that those who might have retired in the normal process are now likely to wait for an exit package.
(AQW 41187/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As there is no default retirement age in the NICS and the Voluntary Exit Scheme currently under development for the NICS is on a voluntary basis, it is not possible to predict any future likely impact on natural wastage, until applications are received and selected.

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether the Department for Regional Development requested priority funding for the Ballyclare Relief Road in the last five years.
(AQW 41204/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Department of Finance and Personnel has not received any priority funding requests from the Department for Regional Development in relation to the Ballyclare Relief Road in the last five years.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 35745/11-15 and 39899/11-15, to detail (i) if the resolution of the long running issue in relation to equal pay for administration staff of the PSNI and others was discussed during recent budget negotiations; and (ii) when he expects this matter to be resolved.
(AQW 41302/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It has been established that there are no valid equal pay claims for both PSNI and NIO staff upon which to base a settlement. The paper I circulated to Executive colleagues before last summer recognises the moral argument put forward, and I hope it will satisfactorily resolve the issue for this group of staff.

However, my recommendation and any associated expenditure require the approval of the Executive and I therefore await the agreement of Executive colleagues for the paper to be brought forward for discussion. While I appreciate the frustration of staff affected by this issue, the matter is now in the hands of the Executive.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 35929/11-15, for an update on the progress of his Department's proposed settlement on equal pay for PSNI and Northern Ireland Office staff, following the circulation of the proposal to the Executive.
(AQW 41303/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It has been established that there are no valid equal pay claims for both PSNI and NIO staff upon which to base a settlement. Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what progress is being made to address the equal pay issue of former Northern Ireland Office and PSNI staff within the Northern Ireland Civil Service.
(AQW 41356/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It has been established that there are no valid equal pay claims for both PSNI and NIO staff upon which to base a settlement. Mr Irwin asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the non-departmental public bodies that have been required to pay (i) Corporation Tax; and (ii) penalties to HMRC in the last five years.
(AQW 41371/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: None of the Department of Finance & Personnel's non-departmental public bodies have paid corporation tax or penalties paid to HMRC in the last 5 years.

This response is provided for the Department of Finance and Personnel only as the information for all departments is not held centrally. The Member should contact individual departments for their information.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the current rates arrears in (i) North Down; and (ii) Ards Borough council areas; and the average arrears for Northern Ireland.

Mr Hamilton: The amount of rate arrears at 31st March 2014 is provided in the table below.

District Council	Rate Arrears*
North Down	£6,742,877
Ards	£4,906,662

*2013/14 figures subject to audit assurance.

Information is not available on the average arrears for Northern Ireland.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the impact, particularly in the local construction industry, of the Onshore Employment Intermediaries: False Self-Employment legislation coming into effect.
(AQW 41524/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The legislation to reduce false self-employment was included in the UK 2014 Finance Act and came into effect on 6 April 2014.

While tax is a reserved matter, I appreciate that the legislation will have an impact on the local construction industry because of its reliance on subcontractor chains for the provision of labour.

Abuse of self-employment status damages local construction firms and construction workers. The legislation will benefit construction workers by ensuring that they receive the protection that employed status gives - protection such as holiday pay, sick pay, maternity pay and pensions. It also benefits our citizens, reducing the burden on them by ensuring that firms and individuals pay the tax they should.

However, I acknowledge that construction firms using self-employed workers may have increased reporting and tax withholding requirements. As with many tax requirements the penalties for non-compliance can be severe and, if incurred, could have a major impact on our smaller firms.

HM Revenue and Customs issued advice in 2011 on due diligence in the use of labour - only subcontractors. CPD brought this to the attention of the local construction industry through the Construction Industry Forum for Northern Ireland (CIFNI). CPD will highlight the current legislation to CIFNI at its next meeting on 2 April 2015.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he has considered working with the Treasury to introduce National Savings and Investments pensioner bonds to Northern Ireland, as introduced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer in 2014, and recently made available in Great Britain.
(AQW 41548/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The 65+ Guaranteed Growth Bonds (Pensioner Bonds) that were launched recently are already available to people living in Northern Ireland as long as they are aged 65+ and have a UK bank account.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, in relation to the £70 million set aside to compensate for losses due to social welfare cuts, what Departments will face reductions as a result of this allocation.
(AQW 41567/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Draft Budget 2015-16, published on 3 November 2014, provided for £70 million to be held centrally for a possible package of measures to mitigate the impact of welfare reform. This measure, as with all other non ring-fenced Resource DEL allocations made as part of the Draft Budget, was funded by the reductions that the Executive agreed should be applied to departments. These reductions form part of the overall departmental outcomes reflected in the Draft Budget 2015-16 document.

The Final Budget 2015-16, published on 19 January 2015, adjusted the amount held centrally for welfare reform mitigating measures to £26.9 million. This is based upon a revised estimate of cost and predicated on the implementation of welfare reform half way through the year. The funding released by this was then allocated to departments as part of the Final Budget process.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what is the average salary in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 41617/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The median gross annual earnings for full-time employees at April 2014 was £24,020.

The median gross annual earnings for part-time employees at April 2014 was £8,624.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the legislative process and timetable for devolving Corporation Tax to Northern Ireland; and whether the Northern Ireland Assembly will be required to pass legislation for this purpose.
(AQW 41632/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Corporation Tax (Northern Ireland) Bill was introduced in the House of Commons on 8 January 2015. In line with the Stormont House Agreement, the passage of the Bill is conditional on implementation of key measures to deliver sustainable finances for Northern Ireland. On this basis, it is anticipated that the Bill will receive Royal Assent before dissolution of Parliament on 30 March 2015.

The legislation includes a commencement clause that will enable powers to transfer from April 2017 subject to the Northern Ireland Executive demonstrating its finances remain on a sustainable footing for the long term. Once the commencement clause has been exercised by the UK Government, the Northern Ireland Assembly will be enabled, by resolution, to set the Northern Ireland rate of Corporation Tax.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the percentage of jobs that (i) are part time; and (ii) pay the minimum wage.
(AQW 41640/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The estimated percentage of employee jobs that are part time in Northern Ireland at September 2014 was 35.7%

The estimated percentage of adults (aged 21 or older) in part time jobs, which earned the minimum hourly rate of £6.31 at April 2014 was 10.4%.

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the equal pay settlement for civil servants who worked for the PSNI and the Northern Ireland Office.
(AQW 41645/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It has been established that there are no valid equal pay claims for both PSNI and NIO staff upon which to base a settlement. The paper I circulated to Executive colleagues before last summer recognises the moral argument put forward, and I hope it will satisfactorily resolve the issue for this group of staff.

However, my recommendation and any associated expenditure require the approval of the Executive and I therefore await the agreement of Executive colleagues for the paper to be brought forward for discussion. While I appreciate the frustration of staff affected by this issue, the matter is now in the hands of the Executive.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel when the Voluntary Exit Scheme will be initiated by the Executive.
(AQW 42005/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Plans to develop a Voluntary Exit Scheme for the NICS are well advanced. The Executive agreed the preferred option at its meeting on 5 February and it is intended that the NICS Scheme will be launched on 2 March 2015.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40214/11-15, how the delays have impacted the Western Health Social Care Trust's budget.
(AQW 40977/11-15)

Mr Wells (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): I have been advised by the Western Health and Social Care Trust that cancellations do not impact significantly on the trust's overall financial position. Whilst cancellations typically occur within the context of service pressures in hospitals, patients who have had their treatment cancelled will be re-scheduled as per guidance contained within the Integrated Elective Access Protocol.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many Multiple Sclerosis patients are currently receiving Tysabri treatment in the (i) Belfast Health and Social Care Trust; and (ii) Western Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 41117/11-15)

Mr Wells: There are several different disease modifying drugs licensed for MS. Patients who meet the criteria are placed on a waiting list for NICE recommended disease modifying therapies rather than a specific product. Once the patient is ready to start treatment, they will be given information about the drugs available and discuss with their clinician which is the most appropriate for them.

At 31st December 2014, there were 29 people actively waiting for treatment for NICE recommended therapies for MS in Northern Ireland, all of whom were waiting less than 13 weeks. A breakdown of these by Trust of Residence is given below.

Trust of Residence	Number of Patients Waiting less than 13 weeks
Belfast Trust	6
Northern Trust	4
South Eastern Trust	6

Trust of Residence	Number of Patients Waiting less than 13 weeks
Southern Trust	5
Western Trust	8
Total	29

At 31st December 2014, there were 22 people receiving Tysabri treatment in the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust, and 20 people receiving Tysabri treatment in the Western Health and Social Care Trust.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the Bangor Minor Injury Unit will remain open after April 2015.
(AQW 41137/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Health and Social Trust has no plans to change the Bangor MIU service after April 2015. Any future proposed change to this service would be undertaken within my Department's policy guidance concerning changes to or withdrawal of services.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of urology patients per consultant in each Health and Social Care Trust in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41157/11-15)

Mr Wells: The HSC Trusts have provided headcount and whole-time equivalent (WTE) numbers for Urology consultants in the last five years, shown in the tables below. Depending on Trust, either a number of consultant referrals or a combined figure of patients contributing to new/review outpatient attendances, inpatient admissions and day case activity have been used to approximate a patient count. Note that this means that some patients may be counted more than once in a given year. These factors, combined with the use in some Trusts of visiting and sessional consultants from other Trusts, means that a 'patients per consultant' comparison between Trusts cannot be inferred. Official Statistics on the hospital activity that patients generate can be found on the Department's website, by specialty, at: http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/statistics/hospital.htm

Belfast HSC Trust

Year	Headcount	WTE	Patients
2010	7	7.0	13,896
2011	7	7.0	13,791
2012	7	7.0	13,400
2013	8	8.0	14,599
2014	8	8.0	14,229

Belfast Trust's patient figures relate to the number of patients contributing to new/review outpatient attendances, inpatient admissions and day case activity. Belfast Trust consultants also provide services to Northern and South Eastern Trusts

Northern HSC Trust

Year	Headcount	WTE	Patients
2010	2 then 3 from November	2.00 then 3.00 from November	2,906
2011	3	3.00	3,236
2012	3 then 2 from October	3.00 then 2.00 from October	3,616
2013	2	2.00	4,316
2014	2	2.00	3,986

In the 2012 year, a consultant left the Trust in October 2012 and this post has been substantively vacant since that time. Consultant urology provision in the Northern Trust is also currently being managed through arrangements with Western and Belfast Trusts. The Northern Trust's patient figures are based on the number of referrals to consultants.

South Eastern HSC Trust

Year	Headcount	WTE	Patients
2010	4	3.5	5,424
2011	4	3.5	6,879

Year	Headcount	WTE	Patients
2012	4	3.5	6,772
2014	5	3.6	6,035

The South Eastern Trust staffing figures for 2010-12 and 2014 include 0.5 WTE provided by a sessional visiting consultant from the Belfast Trust. Patient figures for South Eastern Trust are based on inpatient, day case and outpatient activity.

Southern HSC Trust

Year	Headcount	WTE	Patients
2010	3	3.0	6,731
2011	2 from Jan-Aug then 3	2.0 from Jan-Aug then 3.0	9,320
2012	4	4.0	10,090
2013	4	4.0	11,078
2014	5 until August 2014 then 6	5 until August 2014 then 6.0	12,653

Patient figures for the Southern Trust are based on inpatient deaths and discharges, day cases and outpatient activity.

Western HSC Trust

Year	Headcount	WTE	Patients
2010	2	2.0	2,496
2011	2	2.0	2,853
2012	2	2.0	3,603
2013	3	3.0	3,645
2014	3	3.0	4,184

The Western HSC Trust notes that its patient figures are based on the number of referrals to consultants. Western Trust consultants also provide services to Northern Trust.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40033/11-15, whether his Department holds personal bank details of the scales of income and wealth of clients who contribute to their social care.
(AQW 41181/11-15)

Mr Wells: In line with the DHSSPS publication "Charging for Residential Accommodation Guide", Health and Social Care Trusts are required to carry out a financial assessment of clients' scale of income and wealth. In order to do so, evidence of clients' bank statements are required to validate the savings figure at the time of admission.

Actual bank account details are only held in each individual client file. These details are stored and accessed in accordance with the Trusts' data protection policy.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40033/11-15, for a breakdown of the other income from non-patient services identified as contributions from external income.

Mr Wells: The table below provides a breakdown of these income lines by HSC Trust for 2012/13:

	Other Income from non-patient services £m	Other Income £m
Belfast HSC Trust	38.5	7.8
Northern HSC Trust	14.2	-
Northern Ireland Ambulance Service	0.3	-
South Eastern HSC Trust	8.1	4.1
Southern HSC Trust	8.9	1.5
Western HSC Trust	10.2	-

	Other Income from non-patient services £m	Other Income £m
	80.3	13.5

The Trusts' Financial Returns do not require these categories of income to be broken down further by sub-heading. However, they typically include income for services that do not include episodes of patient care, examples of which include: pharmacy, laboratory and theatre services provided to other organisations; donations; government/lottery grants; R&D income; premises income eg rents received; food and catering income; car parking charges; and recouping the cost of staff seconded to other organisations.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the programme of training for Health Service staff on recognising the signs of human trafficking.
(AQW 41263/11-15)

Mr Wells: Substantial guidance has been developed to support staff working in Health and Social Care to recognise the signs of Human Trafficking. This includes: "Working arrangements for the welfare and safeguarding of child victims/suspected victims of human trafficking", published by DHSSPS and the Police Service of Northern Ireland in February 2011; "Working arrangements for the welfare and protection of adult victims of human trafficking", published by DHSSPS and the Department of Justice in October 2012; and "Pathway for safeguarding and promoting the welfare of separated children" launched by DHSSPS in November 2013.

Belfast, South Eastern and Southern Trusts have delivered training for staff on how to recognise the signs of human trafficking. This topic is also addressed in all training provided by HSC Trusts on Safeguarding Children and is to be incorporated into future training on Adult Safeguarding.

In addition, awareness training and/or specialist training is provided for social workers, as appropriate to their duties, and within the curriculum of the Degree in Social Work sponsored by the Department.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the current number of General Practice surgeries.
(AQW 41267/11-15)

Mr Wells: There are currently 350 general practices across Northern Ireland serving a population of £1.8m. While the number of GP Practices has decreased by 7 over the last five years this is primarily as a result of GP Practices merging together.

NI currently has the lowest average practice list size across the UK with 5,474 whilst Scotland is 5,566; Wales is 6,759; and England is 7,034.

I can confirm that any patient wishing to register with a general practice within Northern Ireland is able to do so.

The HSCB keeps the overall capacity of general practice under review and develops enhanced services, as necessary, to increase capacity in response to demand. During 2014/15 the HSCB has made available £800k of additional investment for a Northern Ireland Local Enhanced Service for Additional Surgeries. This service will run from 1st November 2014 to 31st March 2015 enabling GP Practices to provide additional surgeries, either in hours or in the evenings, or to put in place initiatives to manage acute demand and home visits for their patients.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of General Practice surgeries in each of the last five years; and how his Department is encouraging young doctors to enter the GP workforce.
(AQW 41268/11-15)

Mr Wells: The number of general practices by year is as follows;

Year	Number of practices
April 2014	350
April 2013	351
April 2012	353
April 2011	353
April 2010	357

Whilst the number of practices has reduced, this is primarily as a result of GP Practices merging together.

The number of applications for GP training places in NI regularly far exceeds the number of actual places. In the latest round of applications for courses there were 185 applications for a total of 65 training places which is comparable to the demand experienced for GP training in London.

Under the remit of the regional workforce planning group a medical workforce planning subgroup was established to develop a suite of medical workforce plans, including for GPs, for the five-year period 2013-14 to 2018-19. The GP medical workforce group included representatives of the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB), the Northern Ireland Medical and Dental Training Agency, the Northern Ireland General Practitioners Committee, the Royal College of GPs and my Department. In addition, the HSCB has undertaken further work specifically examining potential initiatives aimed at improving the recruitment and retention of trained GPs.

No final decisions will be taken until the Department has considered the findings of those reviews. Increasing the number of GP trainees would, of course, require increased funding, and any decisions would need to take account of the overall financial position of my Department.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the support services, including overnight refuge provision, available to male victims of domestic violence in Foyle.
(AQW 41272/11-15)

Mr Wells: A range of support services are available regionally for male victims of domestic violence: the 24 Hour Domestic and Sexual Violence Helpline; Multi-Agency Risk Assessment Conferences; Victim Support NI and the Men's Advisory Project which provides confidential counselling, information and referral services to men experiencing domestic abuse and relationship breakdown. In the Foyle area specifically, Men's Action Network supports male victims of domestic violence by offering advice, counselling and support.

The Department for Social Development has advised that there are currently no housing services specifically for male victims of domestic violence in the Foyle Area. However, the NI Housing Executive is currently in discussions with Foyle Women's Aid around the development of a number of new services in Londonderry and is exploring options around the introduction of accommodation based support services specifically for men.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) how his Department is ensuring local audiology services are adequately resourced to meet the growing demand within communities; (ii) the current waiting times for audiology services; (iii) what consideration he has given to directing the Health and Social Care Board and Health and Social Care Trusts to publish waiting times for audiology services; and (iv) whether he will implement Quality Standards in Audiology as a matter of urgency, to help arrest the decline of audiology services and to support the thousands of local people with hearing loss.
(AQW 41295/11-15)

Mr Wells:

(i) Across Northern Ireland demand for audiology services exceeds the capacity that HSC Trusts have to deliver though 5 audiology posts. This is predominately in the Northern HSC Trust and the South Eastern HSC Trust. The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) has plans in place with both Trusts that will address these gaps and this will ensure that the audiology service across Northern Ireland is fully resourced to meet the demand for services.

It should be noted however that currently there is a recruitment and retention difficulty with audiologists across Northern Ireland and as a result Trusts have a number of vacant posts, resulting in longer waiting times for patients.

(ii) Information on the number of patients waiting more than 9 weeks from referral to assessment at 31 December 2014 is detailed in Table 1 below:

HSC Trust	Total waiters	Waiters > 9 weeks
Belfast	346	2

South Eastern	1,056	552
Southern	357	0

Northern Ireland	3,330	1,511

Information on the number of patients waiting more than 13 weeks from assessment to fitting of a hearing aid at 31 December 2014 is detailed in Table 2 below:

My Department currently publishes information on patients waiting for an audiology (pure tone audiometry) diagnostic service by weeks waiting. This information is published quarterly by Hospital Information Branch (HIB) in the 'Northern Ireland Waiting Time Statistics:

(iii) Diagnostic Waiting Times' statistical bulletin and is available on the DHSSPS website at the following link: http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/statistics/hospital/waitingtimes/waitingtimes-diagnostic.htm

My Department is currently assessing newly developed information on waiting times for hearing aids and when considered as being of robust quality, it will be published as official statistics.

(iv) The HSCB and Health and Social Care Trusts (HSCTs) adopted the Adult Quality Standards for Audiology Services in 2013 to develop a process of measurable service improvement across Northern Ireland.

The implementation of the Adult Quality Standards by HSCTs was expected to take 3 years with improvements initially focussing on the quality of the patient experience; the development of improved pathways; and more efficient ways of delivering care. This has also included effective triage and a straight to diagnostic test to help deliver streamlined pathways. The pace of implementation has been slower than expected, due to a number of factors; most significantly recruitment and retention issues in respect of audiology staff. However, HSCTs remain fully committed to the implementation process.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment on the progress of the Autism Strategy.
(AQW 41314/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Autism Strategy is being progressed through the Autism Strategy Inter-departmental Senior Officials Group, which is chaired by the DHSSPS. An Action Plan is in place and implementation is being overseen by a Regional Multi-Agency Implementation Team. This team met initially in November 2014 and its focus has been on information sharing and establishing access to awareness training across all sectors. As carer/service-user and community/voluntary sector representation is key to progress, it is intended to hold an event in the coming weeks to advance this aspect.

The Autism Act (NI) 2011 states that the DHSSPS must prepare and lay a monitoring report on the implementation of the Strategy before the Assembly not more than three years after the publication of the Strategy and at least every three years thereafter. Based on these timescales an initial report will be made to the Assembly before 14 January 2017. However, it is intended that an annual update on overall progress of the Strategy, with cross-Departmental and inter-agency input, will be produced at the end of each financial year and I will ensure that this is shared with the Assembly.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for a breakdown of audiology service waiting times in relation to (i) the total number of patients; (ii) the number of patients waiting beyond the nine week referral for assessment; and (iii) the number of patients waiting beyond 13 weeks from assessment to treatment, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust, in the last three years.
(AQW 41316/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on audiology service waiting times was requested from the Health and Social Care (HSC) Board. Information on the number of patients waiting more than nine weeks from referral to assessment is detailed in Table 1 below:

Table 1: Number of Patients Waiting from Referral to Assessment

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for a breakdown of current waiting times for all advance radiotherapy for cancer sufferers in Health and Social Care Trust, in each of the last twelve months.
(AQW 41318/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Belfast HSC Trust is the only Trust delivering advanced radiotherapy treatment (stereotactic ablative body radiotherapy, SABR) in Northern Ireland. This treatment is delivered in the Northern Ireland Cancer Centre for treatment of radical lung cancers, although the Northern Ireland Cancer Centre also refers patients with a range of brain conditions to England for stereotactic radiotherapy in England via the Extra Contractual Referral (ECR) process.

At the week beginning Monday 26th January 2015 there were fewer than five patients waiting to start SABR lung treatment, the majority of these were waiting longer than 31 days for treatment.

In each of the months for the period January 2014 to December 2014 there were between 0 and 6 patients waiting to receive SABR lung treatment. A number of these patients received treatment within 31 days however the majority waited for longer than 31 days. The Belfast HSC Trust has advised that patients attend for radiotherapy planning within 7 days of the decision to treat date. The waiting time to start of treatment reflects the complexity of the treatment; the time required to plan and quality check individual treatment plans.

Given the small numbers of patients receiving SABR lung treatment it has not been possible to provide a further breakdown of current waiting times, as this may compromise patient confidentiality.

Waiting times for patients referred to England for stereotactic radiotherapy via the Extra Contractual Referral (ECR) process are not recorded by the Belfast HSC Trust.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the cost of prescribing a standard prescription of Aspirin, in each Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 41322/11-15)

Mr Wells: The cost of dispensing a standard prescription for Aspirin in primary care in Northern Ireland can be estimated using the Northern Ireland Drug Tariff cost for the item plus the dispensing fee paid to community pharmacy contractors. The actual cost of a prescription depends on the dosage, quantity and type of Aspirin prescribed. However, by way of example the cost of a prescription for 32 Aspirin 300mg Dispersible Tablets is £1.04 for the drug costs plus £0.98 dispensing fee paid to the community pharmacy contractor. There is an allowance of 4.43p per prescription for the work of coding prescriptions for the purposes of payment.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust authorised internal alterations to the new build at Bangor Hospital and taken delivery of '5 real leather sofas' and microwaves when Bangor Hospital GP Ward has just closed due to lack of funding.
(AQW 41338/11-15)

Mr Wells: Refurbishment and extension of the Bleakley Wing at Bangor Hospital was necessary in order to amalgamate Bleakley Wing staff teams with staff who were in rented accommodation at Balloo Industrial Estate. This action was taken as part of the South Eastern Trust's estates rationalisation and exit plan from leased property and as such, is a separate matter from the utilisation of GP beds in Bangor.

The accommodation in Bangor Hospital is designed to meet the DHSSPS's estates guidance note on new ways of working relating to open plan offices, meeting rooms, interview rooms, social spaces and tea points. Part of the furniture for the waiting areas and social spaces included soft sitting in the form of five plastic/leather lookalike sofas. Microwaves replaced cookers in the tea/staff room areas.

The SE Trust has informed me that this new working environment has been welcomed by staff, management and users.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the cost of the Sir Liam Donaldson report; and provide a breakdown of same.
(AQW 41360/11-15)

Mr Wells: The total cost, at this time, of the Donaldson report is £116,750, broken down as follows:

Professional fees(1)	£100,250
Travel, accommodation and other expenses	£16,500
Total	£116,750

Note (1) – Professor Sir Liam Donaldson, Dr Paul Rutter and Professor Michael Henderson

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 39586/11-15, to detail (i) why he has no plans to reduce the number of Health and Social Care Trusts currently in operation when, according to Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency, the current population of Northern Ireland is 1.84m, whilst several single Health Trusts in England serve a larger population; (ii) his assessment of the potential financial and administrative savings which would result from consolidating the six existing Health and Social Care Trusts into one entity; and (iii) whether he will consider revising the terms of reference for the ongoing review of health spending to include an economic assessment of the optimum number of Health and Social Care Trusts for the population of Northern Ireland.
(AQW 41379/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department has overseen two major structural changes to the Health and Social Care system within the last 8 years under the Review of Public Administration. In April 2007 the current model of 5 integrated HSC Trusts one NI Ambulance Trust was created. In April 2009 the Health and Social Care Board, Public Health Agency, Business Services Organisation and Patient and Client Council were established. In this context, I believe that the focus of the ongoing review should remain on how the structures work together, rather than a more fundamental review.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the evaluation of the Individual Funding Request process, due to be completed at the end of 2014.
(AQW 41381/11-15)

Mr Wells: I plan to release the key findings of the evaluation of the IFR process shortly.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he (i) intends to put in place plans for adequately resourced audiology services; (ii) will direct the Health and Social Care Board and Health and Social Care Trusts to publish waiting times for audiology services; and (iii) will implement Quality Standards in Audiology as a matter of urgency, to help arrest the decline of audiology services and to help the thousands of local people with hearing loss.
(AQW 41383/11-15)

Mr Wells:

(i) Across Northern Ireland demand for audiology services exceeds the capacity that HSC Trusts have to deliver by 5 audiology posts. This is predominately in the Northern HSC Trust and the South Eastern HSC Trust. The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) has plans in place with both Trusts that will address these gaps and this will ensure that the audiology service across Northern Ireland is fully resourced to meet the demand for services.

It should be noted however that currently there is a recruitment and retention difficulty with audiologists across Northern Ireland and as a result Trusts have a number of vacant posts, resulting in longer waiting times for patients.

My Department currently publishes information on patients waiting for an audiology (pure tone audiometry) diagnostic service by weeks waiting. This information is published quarterly by Hospital Information Branch (HIB) in the 'Northern Ireland Waiting Time Statistics:

(ii) Diagnostic Waiting Times' statistical bulletin and is available on the DHSSPS website at the following link: http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/statistics/hospital/waitingtimes/waitingtimes-diagnostic.htm

My Department is currently assessing newly developed information on waiting times for hearing aids and when considered as being of robust quality, it will be published as official statistics.

(iii) The HSCB and Health and Social Care Trusts (HSCTs) adopted the Adult Quality Standards for Audiology Services in 2013 to develop a process of measurable service improvement across Northern Ireland.

The implementation of the Adult Quality Standards by HSCTs was expected to take 3 years with improvements initially focussing on the quality of the patient experience; the development of improved pathways; and more efficient ways of delivering care. This has also included effective triage and a straight to diagnostic test to help deliver streamlined pathways. The pace of implementation has been slower than expected, due to a number of factors; most significantly recruitment and retention issues in respect of audiology staff. However, HSCTs remain fully committed to the implementation process.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many specialists, who work with adults with autism, can conduct assessments and issue appropriate diagnoses following referral, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust. (AQW 41410/11-15)

Mr Wells: The headcount and whole-time equivalent (WTE) numbers and roles of HSC Trust staff specialising in working with adult clients with Autistic Spectrum Disorder (ASD) are shown in the tables below. Where their time is split with other types of clients, the WTE shown is that which is dedicated to adults with ASD.

Belfast HSC Trust

Grade	Headcount	WTE
Consultant Clinical Psychologist	1	0.4
Clinical Psychologist	1	0.5
Occupational therapist	1	0.5
Psychiatrist	1	0.025

The Belfast Trust notes that their Adult Learning Disability team has a specialist clinical psychologist, a speech and language therapist and an occupational therapist who can complement the Adult ASD Team above for a small amount of time, depending on other pressures in their system. A second Consultant clinical psychologist working in Adult Mental Health Primary Care also has expertise and can provide some cover.

Northern HSC Trust

Grade	Headcount	WTE
Speech & Language Therapist (Learning Disability)	1	0.1
Clinical Psychologist (Learning Disability)	1	0.1
Principal Clinical Psychologist	1	0.6
Clinical Psychologist	1	0.1
Occupational Therapist	1	0.2
ASD Co-ordinator	1	0.1
Consultant Psychiatrist	1	0.025

The Northern Trust notes that the 0.025 WTE for the consultant psychiatrist equates to one session per month.

Southern HSC Trust

The Southern HSC Trust reports that it does not employ any specialists who work with adults who can undertake this role.

South Eastern HSC Trust

Grade	Headcount	WTE
Consultant Clinical Psychologist	1	0.2
Psychological Therapist	1	1.0
Specialist Occupational Therapist	1	0.7
Associate Psychologist	1	0.5

These figures relate to the South Eastern Trust's specialist Adult Autism Service which operates a multidisciplinary assessment process, conducts assessments and provides diagnosis based upon recommendations outlined in the RASDN Regional Guidelines. The Trust notes that it also provides a broad range of services through its Adults' Services, Primary Care and Older Peoples' Directorates. Staff in these services may also provide assessment and diagnosis for individuals who do not require referral to the specialist Autism Service.

Western HSC Trust

Grade	Headcount	WTE/Days Worked
Clinical Psychologist	1	1.0 WTE
Consultant Psychiatrist	1	1.0 WTE
Consultant Psychologist	1	1 day per month

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the role of (i) voluntary sector organisations; and (ii) Health and Social Care Trusts, in providing respite services to parents.
(AQW 41429/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Community/Voluntary sector (CVS) has a key role in supporting a wide range of individuals and their families. The HSC Board and Trusts commission a wide range of services from the CVS including those services related to short breaks/respite. The range of services available provides a more flexible response for families and is seen as going beyond the traditional model of residential respite.

Short Breaks has been subject to recent review undertaken by the RQIA and the HSC Board is currently taking forward a response to the recommendations contained within this review (http://www.rqia.org.uk/cms_resources/Respite_Rep_FINALREPORT_ISBN_.pdf). In addition, the NI Assembly Research and Information Service has completed a briefing paper in relation to Short Breaks for Families of Children with Disability (NIAR 825-13) which provides a comprehensive overview of practice in NI and across the rest of the UK.

With an ageing population, there is a need for the consideration of the needs of older parents caring for an adult with a disability. In such cases the individual needs of the carer and person cared for require to be assessed in terms of ensuring a person centred response. The HSC Board and Trusts are currently seeking to increase the number of carers' assessments offered and undertaken across all programmes of care. The HSC Board and Trusts have also developed a regional project to further develop initiatives such as Direct Payments, personalised budgets and enhancement of the Self Directed Support model which should offer broader choice and control for carers, including respite/short breaks.

This work, as noted in Transforming Your Care, is currently on-going and a Regional and Trust project structure has been developed. The aim of this work is to create a broader model of service provision and greater emphasis on choice for carers. Such a model is already well established in Great Britain.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how Health and Social Care Trusts maintain updated registers of children who have a disability.
(AQW 41430/11-15)

Mr Wells: Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts do not maintain registers of children who have a disability. However, they have a range of information systems which record children with a disability who are known to particular services. Their key information system is the Child Health Information System which has the capacity to record a number of relevant areas of information in respect of children with a disability.

In addition, the Children's Services Improvement Board (CSIB) has established a work stream to review the current information systems used within HSC Trusts with a view to ensuring regional consistency and the validation of information. CSIB membership includes all HSC Trusts, the Health and Social Care Board and DHSSPS.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he has accepted recommendation 1 in the Liam Donaldson report.
(AQW 41445/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Donaldson report recommendations' are far reaching in their implications and I want to take time to give full consideration to a number of them including recommendation 1. Given the significance of these recommendations I also want to ensure that stakeholders across Northern Ireland have the opportunity to give their views and participate in a debate about how we take forward health and care services in the future.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 39938/11-15, whether he can provide an assurance that any proposed cuts in services impacting 'frontline' care provision will be open to public consultation and equality screening.
(AQW 41447/11-15)

Mr Wells: In submitting their savings plans for 2015/16, Health and Social Care Trusts and the Health and Social Care Board have been asked to give consideration to whether any proposals they put forward may require public consultation, screening or impact assessments to be carried out in line with the requirements of their respective Personal and Public Involvement (PPI) Schemes.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40484/11-15, why the information was not available in the format requested.
(AQW 41448/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information relating to domiciliary care clients, client visits and contact hours over the course of the year is not routinely collected and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Information on the number of clients receiving domiciliary care services and the number of domiciliary care contact hours in Northern Ireland during a survey week is published annually. For the purposes of this survey, the independent sector refers to all services provided by private and voluntary agencies under contract from Health and Social Care Trusts.

This and further information on domiciliary care is published in the 'Domiciliary Care Services for Adults in Northern Ireland' statistical bulletin and can be found on the DHSSPS website at the following link:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/statistics/socialcare/domiciliary-care.htm

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40484/11-15, whether the independent sector category covers the private sector and the community and voluntary sector.
(AQW 41449/11-15)

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the specific actions his Department has taken to ensure families have adequate access to child-minding provision for children with autism.
(AQW 41450/11-15)

Mr Wells: A number of actions taken forward by my Department in recent years have supported improved access to childcare for children with a disability, including those with an autistic spectrum disorder.

Through Bright Start, my Department was able to secure £500k funding to support a range of initiatives to improve access to childcare for children with a disability. This included the provision of small grants and disability awareness training which allowed childcare providers, including childminders, to secure specialist equipment and training. There was a particularly high uptake from child care providers and childminders who were looking to support ASD children.

The Family Support NI website (www.familysupportni.gov.uk) was developed with funding from my Department's Families Matter Strategy, while information around Autism services on the site has been enhanced in line with the Autism Strategy.

An enhanced childcare search and App for all major smart phones and tablet devices have been developed using funding through Bright Start and my Department's Families Matter Strategy. This enables parents to search for registered and approved childcare across Northern Ireland, specifying a range of criteria which they require including a providers experience of supporting children with a disability.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much has been spent on taxis by each of the Health and Social Care Trusts in the last five years.
(AQW 41453/11-15)

Mr Wells: Expenditure by HSC Trusts on taxis in each of the last five financial years is set out in the table below; this expenditure includes costs for private taxis and bus hire companies.

Taxis are used for a variety of reasons. Most of the expenditure is incurred on the transport of vulnerable patients and clients, particularly children in care and adults with a physical or learning disability.

The use of taxis by Health and Social Care Trusts is planned and monitored.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the current usage of spot purchased beds for intermediate care in each Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 41480/11-15)

Mr Wells: The information requested is not held centrally and was therefore requested from Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts. Their responses can be found below.

Belfast HSC Trust

The Trust do not spot purchase intermediate care beds.

Northern HSC Trust

The Trust was spot purchasing 35 beds at 30 January 2015.

South Eastern HSC Trust

The Trust was spot purchasing 39 beds at 2 February 2015.

Southern HSC Trust

In 2014/15, up until the end of December 2014, the Trust was spot purchasing an average of 23.3 nursing home beds and 8.8 residential beds on any given day.

Western HSC Trust

The Trust do not spot purchase intermediate care beds.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how Health and Social Care Trusts obtain spot purchased beds for intermediate care.
(AQW 41481/11-15)

Mr Wells: Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts are required to commission all care home placements in line with guidelines set out within Departmental Circular HSC ECCU 1/2010 Care Management, Provision of Services and Charging Guidance (http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/hsc-eccu-1-2010.pdf.). The terms and conditions of the services provided by care homes are contained in the Regional Residential and Nursing Home Specification and Contract between HSC Trust and care home providers.

Those Trusts that do spot purchase independent sector intermediate care beds, the Northern Trust, the Southern Trust and the South Eastern Trust, have confirmed that they strive to secure beds at the regional Independent Care Home Tariff Rate that is set by the HSC Board. The rates for the 2014/15 financial year are as follows: Residential Care Home - £461 per week, and Nursing Home - £581 per week.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the average cost to Health and Social Care Trusts of a spot purchased bed for intermediate care.
(AQW 41482/11-15)

Mr Wells: Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts are required to commission all care home placements in line with guidelines set out within Departmental Circular HSC ECCU 1/2010 Care Management, Provision of Services and Charging Guidance (http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/hsc-eccu-1-2010.pdf.). The rates for the 2014/15 financial year are as follows: Residential Care Home - £461 per week, and Nursing Home - £581 per week.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the average cost of independent provider beds with GP medical support for intermediate care.
(AQW 41483/11-15)

Mr Wells: The medical care provided for an intermediate care bed is outside of the General Medical Services (GMS) contract. The medical management of patients in intermediate care beds remains with the HSC Trusts through employing or purchasing their own medical staff or sessions.

The Northern Trust, the Southern Trust and the South Eastern Trust have confirmed that they strive to secure independent provider beds at the regional Independent Care Home Tariff Rate that is set by the HSC Board. The rates for the 2014/15 financial year are as follows: Residential Care Home - £461 per week and Nursing Home - £581 per week. The Belfast Trust has advised that they commission independent provider interim beds to aid in timely discharge from hospital in the care planning process and rehabilitation beds which provide further specialised treatment to patients prior to return to home. These beds cost between £630 and £670.50 per bed per week.

The Western Trust does not commission independent provider beds for intermediate care.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the current usage in each Health and Social Care Trust of independent provider beds with GP medical support.
(AQW 41484/11-15)

Mr Wells: Clients requiring use of an independent provider bed are accommodated under the provision of the General Medical Services (GMS) contract by their own GP.

Information on the current number of independent provider beds in use is not available. However, information on the number of residential and nursing home care packages in effect in the independent sector is available and can be found in Table 1 below.

Table 1. Number of residential and nursing home care packages in effect in the independent sector at quarter ending 31 December 2014*.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to what extent do each of the Health and Social Care Trusts comply with the RM1599 Procurement Framework during the tendering process in relation to MFDs and Printing services.
(AQW 41516/11-15)

Mr Wells: Multi-functional devices (MFDs) are in common use throughout Health & Social Care organisations. In some cases they are procured on a stand-alone basis and in others, they are procured as part of a wider managed service, which includes all costs associated with their operation.

RM1599 is a framework let by Crown Commercial Services (CCS) for, inter alia, MFDs. As RM1599 is a framework and not a contract, there is no obligation for a particular public body to use it. Trusts are therefore free to put local arrangements in place.

The only Trust to have currently put a contract in place by way of RM1599, is the South Eastern Health & Social Care Trust.

Belfast HSC Trust currently procures its MFD needs through the Technology Partner Agreement – this is a framework for ICT goods and services in place between HSC and Hewlett Packard. However, the Trust is currently developing a business case with a view to moving to a MFD managed service contract. This contract is likely to be procured under framework RM1599 and will be subject to the terms of that framework.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the tenders accepted by the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust regarding MFDs and printing supplies; and whether these tenders have adhered to the RM1599 procurement framework.
(AQW 41517/11-15)

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the total expenditure on MFDs and print related services by each Health and Social Care Trust over the last three years.
(AQW 41518/11-15)

Mr Wells: Expenditure by HSC Trusts on MFDs and printed related services can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps his Department is taking to implement National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence guidance CG32 regarding Nutritional Support for Adults.
(AQW 41519/11-15)

Mr Wells: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) Clinical Guideline 32 (CG32) regarding Nutritional Support for Adults was published in February 2006.

This predates the Department's formal links with NICE and therefore CG32 has not been endorsed by the Department.

My Department launched 'Promoting Good Nutrition: A Strategy for Good Nutritional Care for Adults in all Care Settings in N. Ireland' in 2011.

The vision of this strategy is to improve the quality of nutritional care of adults in Northern Ireland in health and social care, whether delivered or commissioned, through the prevention, identification and management of malnutrition in all health and social care settings, and has been extensively rolled out in all HSC Trusts in both acute and community settings.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether Bangor Hospital GP Ward will reopen in 2015/16.
(AQW 41534/11-15)

Mr Wells: The future provision of intermediate care in North Down and Ards, including the GP Ward at Bangor Community Hospital, is currently being consulted on by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust. In its consultation document the Trust has stated that the temporary closure of 20 GP beds in Bangor Community Hospital will remain in place until the public consultation and associated decision making processes are concluded.

The temporary closure remains the subject of an ongoing Judicial Review. A substantive hearing is expected to commence on 20 February. It would be therefore be inappropriate for me to comment further on this matter in the meantime.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the resources supplied for audiology services; and what plans he has to increase provision.
(AQW 41542/11-15)

Mr Wells: Audiology Services in Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts provide a full range of diagnostic tests for hearing impairments and a comprehensive hearing aid provision service.

Across Northern Ireland demand for audiology services exceeds the capacity that HSC Trusts have to deliver through 5 audiology posts. This capacity issue is predominately in the Northern HSC Trust and the South Eastern HSC Trust. The Health and Social Care Board has plans in place with both Trusts that will address these gaps and this will ensure that the audiology service across Northern Ireland is fully resourced to meet the demand for services.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when will he introduce Quality Standards for audiology.
(AQW 41543/11-15)

Mr Wells: I refer the member to my answer to AQW 41317.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the Public Health Agency's 10,000 Voices Project; and whether it will be continued in 2015/16.
(AQW 41547/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Regional Outcomes Report of the 10,000 Voices project, published by the Public Health Agency in October 2014 clearly highlights that it provides a valuable forum for service users to inform us of how we are delivering and how we should deliver health and social care services.

Information from patient's stories has already been used to inform a range of local and regional service improvements. By using this information to shape how we deliver services we can be assured that improvements will be based on information which really matters to people.

The Public Health Agency have advised that the 10,000 Voices project will be continued in 2015/16 subject to funding. The work plan for 2015/16 is currently being negotiated and will be available at the end of March 2015.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the process of the collection of data in Health and Social Care Trust areas of addiction issues relating to people under eighteen.
(AQW 41552/11-15)

Mr Wells: Data relating to addiction issues of people of all ages are collected from Addiction Treatment Service providers centrally within the Department through the annual Drugs Misuse Database (DMD) and the biennial Census of Drug and Alcohol Misuse.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40033/11-15, with regard to income generated from client contributions to social care, for a breakdown of the number of clients in each Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 41554/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the number of clients contributing to social care income is not available and could only be provided at a disproportionate cost.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the implementation of the recommendations in the Dementia Strategy; and whether adequate action is being taken to achieve meaningful outcomes for patients.
(AQW 41555/11-15)

Mr Wells: Implementation of the recommendations in the Dementia Strategy is being taken forward by the regional Dementia Strategy Implementation Group, which is co-chaired by the Health and Social Care Board and the Public Health Agency.

The latest report from the Group indicates that significant progress has been made on a range of recommendations in the Dementia Strategy, in particular developing and enhancing memory services across the five HSC Trusts, providing timely diagnosis for people with dementia and information and support to inform decisions about future care and treatment, and reviewing hospital bed provision for dementia assessment with the aim of developing assessment services in the community.

The Atlantic Philanthropies/ Delivering Social Change Dementia Signature initiative, launched in September 2014, will also support implementation of recommendations in the Dementia Strategy. The initiative will focus on three key strands: awareness raising, information and support; training; and short breaks, respite and support to carers. These themes have been selected as they are likely to have the greatest impact on improving the quality of life, care and treatment for people living with dementia. As part of this project, an Outcomes Based Accountability Model to evaluate this work is being developed.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many hours of counselling support is provided to patients resident in Tyrone and Fermanagh Hospital on a weekly basis.
(AQW 41578/11-15)

Mr Wells: Inpatients at the Tyrone and Fermanagh Hospital receive care and treatment based on individual assessed needs, delivered by teams of multidisciplinary professionals.

A range of evidence-based psychological/psychotherapeutic treatments is provided in the context of individual care and support plans, based on individual assessed needs.

Talking therapies vary in type and intensity. The total number of hours provided each week is therefore variable and it is not possible to quantify provision in this way.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many individuals have been referred for Robotic Assisted Radical Prostatectomies in each of the last four years, including (i) where they were referred; and (iii) the total annual cost of referrals.
(AQW 41579/11-15)

Mr Wells: Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts currently refer men who need radical prostatectomies to a Great Britain centre that has the facility to undertake robot assisted surgery. Information on the number of referrals for Robotic Assisted Radical Prostatectomies is collected by the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB), as the commissioner of such services.

Information on HSCB approved referrals is available from 1st April 2013 to date. There have been 24 patients referred for Robotic Assisted Radical Prostatectomies since 1st April 2013. Due to the small numbers, it has not been possible to provide a breakdown for individual years as this may compromise patient confidentiality.

The hospitals to which the HSCB have referred patients to for Robotic Assisted Radical Prostatectomies are:

(i) Addenbrookes Hospital, Cambridge Hospital, Christie Foundation Trust, Guys Hospital and University College Hospital, London.

(ii) The estimated total cost of these treatments (using the NHS draft tariff for 2015/16 of £5070) as advised by the HSC Board, is set out in the table below:

Total Estimated Treatment cost range	121,000-126,000
Total Estimated Travel costs (estimated- £1k per referral)	24,000

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many patients spent one night or more in the recovery ward of Craigavon Area Hospital in the last three months.
(AQW 41580/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the number of post - operative patients who spent one night or more in the recovery ward of Craigavon Area Hospital, in each of the last three months, is shown in the table below.

Month	Number of patients who spent one night or more in recovery ward*	Average Number of Nights Spent in Recovery Ward
November 2014	56	1.0
December 2014	30	1.5
January 2015	137	1.0
Total	223

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many domiciliary care packages are in place in the Southern Health and Social Care Trust; and of these, how many are direct payment.
(AQW 41584/11-15)

Mr Wells: The number of domiciliary care packages currently in place is not available. However, information on the number of clients receiving a domiciliary care package during a survey week in 2013 is available.

During a survey week in 2013 there were 4,461 clients receiving a domiciliary care package in the Southern Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust. This does not include services provided to clients by direct payment.

Information on domiciliary care is published annually by my Department in 'Domiciliary Care Services for Adults in Northern Ireland' and can be found online at the following web address:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/statistics/socialcare/domiciliary-care.htm

Domiciliary Care Services for Adults in Northern Ireland (2014) will be published on 12 February 2015.

The number of direct payments currently in place is not available. However, during the quarter ending 31 December 2014 there were 705 direct payments, including one-off and payments which ceased, paid in the Southern HSC Trust.

Information on direct payments is published quarterly by my Department and can be found online at the following web address: http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/statistics/socialcare/direct-payments.htm

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why residents are prohibited from making any contribution for more expensive nursing or residential home provision and are restricted to third party contributions.
(AQW 41599/11-15)

Mr Wells: Departmental guidance (Circular HSC (ECCU) 1/2010 – Care Management, Provision of Services and charging guidance) clearly states that the HSC has a duty to procure quality services in response to assessed need at a price that represents good value for money. When arranging a place in a residential or nursing home, Trusts are required to contract at whichever rate is necessary to secure appropriate accommodation.

Some service users, however, will wish to go to alternative accommodation which may be more expensive than that which a Trust can arrange. In these circumstances, the additional cost must be met by a third party such as a family member or friend. Residents are not permitted to meet the extra cost themselves as they will already have been financially assessed to determine the maximum amount of money they can contribute to the cost of their care. Paying their own top-up would deplete their assets at a quicker rate meaning they would reach the point of requiring financial support from the HSC more quickly. Private funders who make their own arrangements and fund their care privately are free to purchase care at any price they can afford.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the average number of respite or intermediate care patients at Northfield House, Donaghadee, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41601/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the average number of respite or intermediate care patients at Northfield House is not held centrally and was therefore requested from the South Eastern Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust. The Trust provided information on the total number of respite and intermediate care admissions to Northfield House and their response can be found in Table 1 below.

Table 1. Number of respite and intermediate care admissions to Northfield House by financial year.

Year	Respite	Intermediate Care
2013/14	4	116
2012/13	4	107
2011/12	4	95
2009/10	28	168

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many patients were not in the appropriate ward in Craigavon Area Hospital over the last three months.
(AQW 41602/11-15)

Mr Wells: The average number of patients outlied into other specialities per day in Craigavon Area Hospital, over the last three months, is shown in the table below:

Month	Average number of patients outlied into other specialities per day
November 2014	11
December 2014	11
January 2015	28

Source: Southern Trust

The Southern Trust would also like to highlight that despite the pressures they have been experiencing, at all times they have maintained the same gender bays, have had no corridor beds and at this time have maintained their elective service.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the impact that the Mental Capacity Bill may have on the provision of Power of Attorney in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 41627/11-15)

Mr Wells: The draft Mental Capacity Bill, which is being taken forward jointly by my Department and the Department of Justice, provides for a new system of Lasting Powers of Attorney (LPA) to replace the existing Enduring Powers of Attorney (EPA) system. This was a key recommendation of the Bamford Review and follows similar reforms in England and Wales.

The new scheme will provide stronger protections for people who want to plan ahead for a time when they may lose their mental capacity. Importantly, it will allow a person to give someone else the authority to make decisions on his/her behalf not just in relation to financial matters, but also health and welfare matters. Any EPA put in place prior to the Bill coming into operation will, however, be respected. Further work on the implementation of the new system will be undertaken in consultation with key stakeholders to help ensure that the transition to the LPA scheme here goes as smoothly as possible.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of hours that senior management have been on evening duty in the last six months; and of these shifts, to detail (i) the purpose; (ii) the cost; (iii) whether any senior staff performed portering duties.
(AQW 41641/11-15)

Mr Wells: For the purposes of this question 'senior management' has been interpreted as staff at director level and above (including Chief Executives).

Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts have advised that:

(i) senior management frequently work in excess to their specified contractual hours to support frontline staff during periods of increased activity and demand including after normal working hours and at weekends. Information on the additional hours worked is not routinely collected. Senior management do not work shifts;

(ii) there is no cost associated with these additional hours;

(iii) portering duties have not been performed by senior management, however, within the Belfast HSC Trust there are a number of senior managers who are qualified as clinical staff by professional background and on a very small number of occasions may have accompanied patients from one part of the hospital system to another. This would be deemed to be within the scope of the professional practice of good support to staff but most critically of benefit to patients.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when he decided to progress plans to implement plain packaging for tobacco products.
(AQW 41646/11-15)

Mr Wells: On 21 January the UK Government announced its decision to lay UK-wide regulations on standardised packaging within the current Parliament, subject to agreement from the Devolved Administrations.

I sought Executive support and I announced on 2 February that the proposed regulations will apply to Northern Ireland. This decision was made on the basis of the consultation responses to the draft standardised packaging regulations which the Department of Health shared with my Department on 22 January 2015 as well as the findings of the Chantler Review and other relevant information

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why waiting times for audiology services are currently not published; and whether he will take steps to ensure they are published.
(AQW 41669/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Department currently publish information on patients waiting for an audiology (pure tone audiometry) diagnostic service by weeks waiting. This information is published quarterly by Hospital Information Branch (HIB) in the 'Northern Ireland Waiting Time Statistics: Diagnostic Waiting Times' statistical bulletin and is available on the DHSSPS website at the following link:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/statistics/hospital/waitingtimes/waitingtimes-diagnostic.htm

The Department is currently assessing newly developed information on waiting times for hearing aids and when considered as being of robust quality it will be published as official statistics.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of waiting times for first appointments and reassessments for audiology services in each Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 41670/11-15)

Mr Wells: Across Northern Ireland demand for audiology services exceeds the capacity that Trusts have to deliver through 5 audiology posts. This is predominately in the Northern HSC Trust and the South Eastern HSC Trust. The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) has plans in place with both Trusts that will address these gaps and this will ensure that the audiology service across Northern Ireland is fully resourced to meet the demand for services.

It should be noted however that there is a recruitment and retention difficulty with audiologists across Northern Ireland and as a result HSC Trusts have a number of vacant posts, resulting in longer waiting times for patients.

My Department does not hold information on reassessments however it is currently assessing newly developed information on waiting times for hearing aids and when considered as being of robust quality, it will be published as official statistics.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what consideration is being given to capping care home fees, in light of the decision to cap fees in England from April 2016.
(AQW 41678/11-15)

Mr Wells: I recognise the need to ensure both that our care and support system remains sustainable into the future and also that the balance of responsibility between government and individuals is fair. My Department is therefore progressing the Reform of Adult Care and Support project which will give consideration to a broad range of potential reforms, this will include exploring the introduction of a cap on care home fees.

It is intended that proposals for change will be finalised next year with public consultation to follow.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of whether Northern Ireland could benefit from a Better Care Fund as currently present in England.
(AQW 41702/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Better Care Fund was established in England to fund integration of local health and social care services, particularly for older people. As Northern Ireland already has an integrated health and social care system a Better Care Fund would provide no additional benefit.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the sickness and absenteeism trend in Craigavon Area Hospital amongst nursing staff in the last six months.
(AQW 41729/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Southern HSC Trust has provided sickness absence rates for the most recent available six months for Nursing & Midwifery staff in the main building of Craigavon Area Hospital. These are shown in the table below. Figures for December 2014 are not yet available; the table refers to the period of June to November 2014.

Month	Sickness Absence %
June 2014	6.69%
July 2014	6.55%
August 2014	5.92%
September 2014	5.65%
October 2014	6.85%
November 2014	6.68%

Notes:

1 The Southern Trust notes that sickness absence reporting is currently being refined as the new Human Resources, Payroll, Travel and Subsistence (HRPTS) system is rolled out. Sickness absence percentages reported above are therefore marginally inflated until refinement of the reporting functionality is complete.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 38568/11-15, for an update on the procurement process.
(AQW 41745/11-15)

Mr Wells: Under the cross-departmental strategy to prevent and address the harm related to substance misuse, known as the New Strategic Direction for Alcohol and Drugs Phase 2, the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) and the Public Health Agency (PHA) were tasked with developing a Regional Commissioning Framework for Alcohol and Drug Services in Northern Ireland.

The HSCB and PHA subsequently produced a draft Framework document for public consultation, along with a corresponding procurement plan to tender for a range of services to address the key priorities outlined in the Framework. It had originally been envisaged that these services would be in place from April 2015. However, the procurement process for such a wide range of services is complex, therefore the process has been extended and the PHA anticipates the new contracts will commence in July 2015. The existing services will remain in operation until the new services are in place.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how extra contractual referrals are administered for young people at risk of substance misuse.
(AQW 41749/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) operates a process which allows local Trusts, in exceptional circumstances, to refer patients outside NI by means of an Extra Contractual Referral (ECR). ECRs must be based on clinical recommendations for specific treatment needs that cannot be met in NI. Such a referral must outline all of the resources that have been considered locally, and why these are felt to be inappropriate.

ECRs normally arise, and are eligible for approval, in the following circumstances:

- the patient's clinical condition requires specialised care that could only be sustained for a large catchment population and cannot be provided for a small geographic area such as Northern Ireland;

- the patient's clinician wishes to seek a second opinion from a provider outside Northern Ireland because of complexities of the patient's condition or circumstances;
- the treatment is available locally but the patient has an exceptional reason which renders their case different from the vast majority of other patients with the same condition which therefore justifies a referral outside Northern Ireland;
- the service being requested is not reflected in commissioning arrangements such as a Service Level Agreement with a provider outside Northern Ireland; or
- the service being requested is not commissioned for the population of Northern Ireland, but the patient's clinical circumstances are such that exceptionality can be demonstrated and a case justified for an ECR to access care from a provider outside Northern Ireland.

All applications are first cleared within the given Trust, and are then sent to the ECR Panel in the HSCB. The ECR Panel meets on a weekly basis to consider all ECRs received within the preceding 7 days. Decisions are made and communicated to the Trust within one week of the panel meeting.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40970/11-15, given that the competition had concluded, will he answer parts (i), (ii) and (iii) of the question.
(AQW 41810/11-15)

Mr Wells: Pursuant to my response to AQW 40970/11-15, the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that:

(i) there were 70 applicants;

(ii) two applicants have been given conditional offers;

(iii) no final offers or appointments have been made as yet due to financial constraints. It is the intention to progress to final offer stage in the new financial year.

I can confirm that:

(i) the business case was made on 17 April 2014;

(ii) the original offers of employment will proceed when approval is received via the Trust's scrutiny arrangements; and

(iii) the position will be filled when this approval is received.

Mr Brady asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the annual cost of the Cancer Drug Fund.
(AQW 41832/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Cancer Drugs Fund is administered by NHS England and applies only to England; details of the operation and finances of the Fund may be found at this link:

http://www.england.nhs.uk/ourwork/pe/cdf/

Mr Brady asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether any drugs provided through the Cancer Drug Fund are life saving.
(AQW 41856/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Cancer Drugs Fund (CDF) is administered by NHS England and applies only to England. The assessment of the clinical performance of the drugs made available via the CDF is a matter for NHS England.

Details of the operation of the Fund may be found at this link: http://www.england.nhs.uk/ourwork/pe/cdf/

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the expected income bracket for paying prescription charges.
(AQW 41857/11-15)

Mr Wells: I have previously stated publicly that it is not unreasonable for patients to make a contribution towards the costs of their prescriptions, particularly given the challenges of funding high cost specialist medicines. Any proposal to reintroduce prescription charges would be subject to public consultation. That consultation will include how a charge could be applied and potential patient exemptions.

Mr Brady asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the annual cost of administrating the system for prescription charges.
(AQW 41944/11-15)

Mr Wells: There are currently no charges for prescriptions and no associated administration costs. Any proposal to reintroduce prescription charges would be subject to a full public consultation. That consultation would include consideration of how a charge should be applied and also any associated administration costs.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether cancer drugs have to be paid for; and if so, to detail the income bracket.
(AQW 41945/11-15)

Mr Wells: Health service treatment is free at the point of delivery of care. No patient receiving approved health service treatment in any specialty, including cancer, should be asked to pay.

The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) has responsibility for commissioning cancer drugs in Northern Ireland. Every patient in Northern Ireland has the same access to approved cancer drugs as any other patient in the UK. All NICE approved cancer drugs are either recurrently funded or available via a cost per case mechanism in Northern Ireland.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update for the business case submitted by the Southern Health and Social Care Trust in relation to the development of a centre for adults with complex learning disabilities at Oakridge, Dungannon.
(AQW 41994/11-15)

Mr Wells: In September 2014, the Southern Health and Social Care Trust submitted an updated Outline Business Case for the development of the centre at Oakridge, taking into account feedback from my Department's review of the previous version. Whilst improvement has been made, there is some further work required to make the Business Case sufficiently robust to obtain approval.

Once the necessary business case approval has been obtained, the progress of any development will then still be subject to the budget process for 2015/16 onwards and its relative priority against all other Trust and regional capital proposals. In that context I would highlight that the current financial position for my Department is challenging and that the majority of capital funding will be allocated to contractually committed schemes.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40378/11-15, to detail the number of applications (i) still in process; and (ii) that have been rejected, including the reasons for rejection.
(AQW 42028/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Trusts have advised that, of the 10 applications for adoption received from same sex couples, 9 are still being processed. 1 application has not proceeded on medical grounds.

Department of Justice

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Justice how many times HMP Maghaberry has been locked down because of staff shortages in each of the past twelve months.
(AQW 41221/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): While there has not been a full lockdown of Maghaberry Prison, individual residential areas have been locked on occasions. There are 51 residential landings, with the number of partial lockdowns as follows:

Jan	Feb	Mar	Apr	May	June	July	Aug	Sept	Oct	Nov	Dec
104	134	73	85	20	13	3	16	0	28	50	151

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to provide, or place in the Assembly library, the risk assessment document used in deciding whether a convicted murderer is suitable for temporary leave from custody; and (i) when this criteria were drawn up and put into practice; and (ii) how many changes have been implemented since its introduction.
(AQW 41232/11-15)

Mr Ford: The exact date the criteria were drawn up is not known but it has been in use since at least 2008. The criteria have been changed once since 2008.

Copies of the risk assessment documents have been placed in the Assembly Library.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Justice whether he will review how ex parte High Court applications are processed.
(AQW 41281/11-15)

Mr Ford: Table 1 below outlines the numbers of ex-parte High Court applications dealt with on a Friday in 2014. It is not possible to determine how many were heard on a Friday afternoon. Data for 2015 are not yet available.

Table 1 Ex-parte High Court applications dealt with on a Friday

Table 2 below outlines the numbers of ex-parte High Court applications received and dealt with in each Division of the High Court in the last 3 years. It is not possible to determine how many have been granted, heard and or refused without a manual review trawl of all final orders. This could not be completed without incurring a disproportionate cost.

1 Ex-parte applications based on initiating document entered on Integrated Courts Operation System (ICOS). Data for 2014 is provisional.

To determine how many ex-parte High Court applications have been granted and resulted in costs and damages being ordered for the respondent would require a manual review of all final orders and would incur a disproportionate cost.

I currently have no plans to review how ex-parte High Court applications are processed.

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Justice how many prison officers have been injured while on duty at HMP Maghaberry as a result of attacks from inmates, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41350/11-15)

Mr Ford: The information requested is not recorded in a format that is easily retrievable therefore this answer could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Justice how many prison officers have been on (i) short term; and (ii) long term sick leave as a result of injuries received on duty at HMP Maghaberry, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41351/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service updates and records the reason for sickness absence as provided by the member of staff or their General Practitioner. The reason provided is normally the medical condition that is preventing the individual from attending work. There is not necessarily any indication that the absence is due to an injury received on duty.

Therefore the information requested cannot be provided without disproportionate costs being incurred as an examination of each individual case would be required.

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Justice how many prison officers in HMP Maghaberry have had a (i) verbal warning; (ii) written warning; and (iii) final written warning as a result of being off on sick leave due to work related injuries or stress, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41352/11-15)

Mr Ford:

(i) The Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) does not issue verbal warnings as such warnings are not provided for in the policy contained in the Northern Ireland Civil Service HR Handbook, specifically the section dealing with inefficiency sickness absence policy and procedures.

(ii) (iii) This information cannot be provided without disproportionate costs being incurred as an examination of each individual case would be required.

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Justice how many prison officers in HMP Maghaberry have (i) lost their job; or (ii) left the service following a final written warning, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41353/11-15)

Mr Ford: During the last five years 12 Prison Officers in Maghaberry, who were issued with a final written warning on the grounds of inefficiency, have lost their jobs or left the service. A number of these left on a voluntary basis. Those that did not left on grounds of ill health, inefficiency or misconduct. I am unable to provide details of this information for each year, or provide additional details, as to do so would breach the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1998 as it may lead to the identification of an individual.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether legal aid is available for people, who have been convicted of offences and imprisoned in a country outside Northern Ireland and who wish to be repatriated to serve their sentence in a Northern Ireland prison, to pay for legal costs and representations; and in how many instances has this been (i) sought; and (ii) granted, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41354/11-15)

Mr Ford: Each application for legal aid is considered on its own merits. The Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission does not hold details of the name(s) of the people who have been convicted of offences and imprisoned in a country outside Northern Ireland and who wish to be repatriated to serve their sentence in Northern Ireland and cannot, therefore, comment on in how many instances has this been (i) sought; and (ii) granted, in each of the last five years.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to list the schools visited by the Prison Service in the last twelve months to promote careers in the service.
(AQW 41355/11-15)

Mr Ford: In the last 12 months the Northern Ireland Prison Service has not visited schools for the purpose of promoting careers in the service. NIPS has not conducted a recruitment campaign during this period.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to persons remanded in custody after an alleged offence but then transferred to an outside facility due to mental health issues, (i) whether this counts as time spent on remand if convicted; and (ii) whether a person would remain classed as a prisoner or be deemed a patient after transfer.
(AQW 41357/11-15)

Mr Ford: Persons remanded in custody but then transferred to an outside facility by means of a transfer direction under Article 54 of the Mental Health (Northern Ireland) Order 1986 have the time they spend at such facilities counted as remand time, given that they are still being detained under the direction of the court. Persons so transferred are referred to as detainees under Article 57(1) of the Order.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in light of the three recent cases of convicted murders absconding whilst on temporary leave from custodial sentences, whether a review is to be conducted into the criteria of granting temporary leave to convicted murderers, with particular attention paid to those who have committed this offence on previous releases.
(AQW 41366/11-15)

Mr Ford: No review of the criteria of granting temporary leave to convicted murderers is planned. Particular attention is already given to those who have committed this offence on previous releases.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 40747/11-15, whether it is possible to examine CCTV to ascertain this information.
(AQW 41406/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service has reviewed the Closed Circuit Television footage from Dungannon Courthouse on 12 January 2015 up to 10.30am. All 96 marked car parking spaces were full. In addition, the recorded CCTV footage shows that approximately 12 vehicles were double parked on pavements, at kerbs and outside parking bays in the lower public car park. There were no vehicles parked outside marked parking bays in the secure upper car park.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 40522/11-15, how many (i) law firms; (ii) junior counsel and (iii) senior counsel acted throughout the various trials, including the aborted trial and appeal; and whether any of the instructed counsel acted throughout all or more than one trial.

Mr Ford: The same firm of solicitors, junior and senior counsel acted throughout all proceedings.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many prisoners have been repatriated from Northern Ireland prison facilities in each of the last five calendar years, stating the convictions for which each prisoner was jailed.
(AQW 41409/11-15)

Mr Ford: Four prisoners have been repatriated from Northern Ireland since 2010. In 2012 two prisoners were repatriated to the Netherlands both having been convicted of importing controlled drugs. In 2013 one prisoner was repatriated to the Republic of Ireland having been convicted of murder. In 2014 one prisoner was repatriated to Lithuania having been convicted of rape, assault occasioning actual bodily harm and false imprisonment.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to explain the difference between a charge sheet and a Public Prosecution Service summons appearance in court; and whether, particularly in indictable allegations, (i) the nature of the charges is any less significant; and (ii) upon conviction, the sentencing outcome is different.

Mr Ford: Summonses and charge sheets are two different mechanisms to get cases before the magistrates' courts. A charge sheet will be used where the person has been arrested and charged with an offence and they will appear before the court the next day (if in custody) or within 28 days if released on police bail. Where a person is not charged, they may be reported to PPS for prosecution and PPS may initiate proceedings by way of summons.

Decisions as to the method, timing and approach by which a criminal offence or charge is brought to the court are operational matters for the police and the Public Prosecution Service. The decision to charge or submit a file to the Public Prosecution Service is, for example, a matter for police.

Sentencing powers in relation to indictable offences are typically more substantial than those dealt with by way of summary proceedings.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Justice to detail the timescale for publication of locally agreed phased plans to remove all interface barriers; and what work has been completed to meet the timescale.
(AQW 41419/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department of Justice is engaged with voluntary/community sector groups and other statutory agencies in exploring the opportunities for reducing and eventually removing interface structures. Engagement has been initiated on close to 40 of the Department's remaining 52 structures.

My officials work closely with community groups, both directly and through the International Fund for Ireland Peace Walls Programme, to develop site specific plans to deal with individual structures. The progress made in developing these plans will depend on many factors, with community safety and regeneration at the heart of the process. It is simply not possible to set timescales for the development or publication of such plans. They will develop at their own pace, with community support remaining a key element.

The Department continues to work with all stakeholders, including the International Fund for Ireland, to develop and improve the programme for looking at alternatives to interface barriers.

The University of Ulster and Department of Justice commenced a 12 month knowledge exchange partnership in August to support and develop policy and practice enabling the removal of peace walls. The University team will act as a 'critical friend', as formative evaluators of the current policy implementation process, and as a provider of evidence-based research to my Department. Part of this work will see a rerun of the "Attitudes to Peace Walls" survey of June 2012, including, for the first time, Portadown and Lurgan.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether he will authorise an investigation into how Vidmantas Jokubauskis was permitted to reside close to homes of victims whilst awaiting sentencing at Dungannon Magistrates Court and in spite of specified bail terms.

Mr Ford: The setting of court bail terms is entirely a matter for the judge hearing the bail application. These may include conditions specifying a bail address, placing restrictions on residing at a particular address or requiring that a place of residence is approved by police. No specific conditions regarding his address were imposed by the court during the period in question. Bail conditions regarding residency were imposed subsequently by the judge when granting bail pending appeal.

A referral into the public protection arrangements, where there has been no previous relevant conviction, is triggered when a convicted offender is sentenced by the court.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 40522/11-15, whether the costs of the aborted trial have been finalised; and for a breakdown of these costs.
(AQW 41456/11-15)

Mr Ford: The fees in respect of the aborted trial and the second re- trial have not yet been paid and therefore the costs are not finalised.

It is not possible to provide a breakdown of the costs of the aborted retrial separately as, in accordance with paragraph 23(2) of Schedule 1 to the Legal Aid for Crown Court Proceedings (Costs) Rules (Northern Ireland) 2005, the determination of costs for both the aborted retrial and the second retrial are considered as having comprised one trial.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 40605/11-15, how many law firms do these figures equate to in each year.
(AQW 41457/11-15)

Mr Ford: The number of law firms and counsel paid by the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission (the Commission) for legal aid for representation in legacy cases under the Statutory Exceptional Grant Power Scheme per year was:

Year	Number of Firms	Number of Counsel
2011/12	Nil	Nil
2012/13	1	2
2013/14	1	2

The number of law firms and counsel paid by the Commission under the Statutory Exceptional Grant Power Scheme in respect of the plaintiffs' costs in the Omagh civil action per year was:

Year	Number of Firms	Number of Counsel
2011/12	1	Nil
2012/13	2	3
2013/14	1	3

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to detail the refurbishment and upkeep expenditure over the last ten years on each of the eight court houses proposed for closure.
(AQW 41477/11-15)

Mr Ford: The expenditure included in the response dates from the devolution of Justice to the Northern Ireland Assembly on the 12 April 2010. The total expenditure for the eight courthouses proposed for closure from this date to December 2014 is £4.5 million. This figure, which includes refurbishment, maintenance and security costs, is broken down as follows:

Total Expenditure (£) per Court Office from 1 April 2010 to 31 December 2014

Armagh Court Office	508,535.66
Ballymena Court Office	1,675,078.26
Enniskillen Court Office	307,240.22
Limavady Court Office	163,110.67

Lisburn Court Office	567,793.03
Magherafelt Court Office	198,399.93
Newtownards Court Office	906,488.81
Strabane Court Office	247,308.38
Grand Total	4,573,954.96

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Justice what is the annual cost of keeping a person in prison; and for a breakdown of this cost.
(AQW 41507/11-15)

Mr Ford: The annual cost of keeping a person in prison in Northern Ireland is known as the Cost per Prisoner Place (CPPP). It is the full operating expenditure of the Prison Service divided by the average number of staffed prisoner places. The Northern Ireland Prison Service CPPP for 2013/14 was £62,898. There is no further breakdown of this cost.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) whether a PSNI Chief Constable has had the authority to direct how (a) public funds supplied by the Department of Justice; and (b) private funds, are used within or by the Police Federation of Northern Ireland; (ii) whether a policy exists on this issue; if so (iii) to place a copy in the Assembly Library; and (iv) what accountability or scrutiny in applied in these instances.
(AQW 41536/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Police Association for Northern Ireland Regulations 1991 (a copy of which was placed in the Assembly Library in November 2014) provides the authority for the Police Federation to raise funds for defraying expenses incurred by the Federation through the collection of voluntary subscriptions from its members, and by other means including borrowing money, accepting donations, and the sale of publications or other articles.

The Police Federation is also required to keep accounts of funding and expenditure and to have such accounts audited annually by independent auditors.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to people convicted of sex offences against children or persons remanded on suspicion of child sex offences, and in line with child protection and safeguarding policies and given that no bail conditions can be imposed on prisoners, (i) what procedures are in place to prevent contact with children during prison visits; (ii) how visits in these circumstances can be accommodated; (iii) whether these visits are barred from occurring when children are present to visit other prisoners; and (iv) whether visits in these circumstances are routinely supervised by Social Services personnel, as per in the community.
(AQW 41537/11-15)

Mr Ford: Managing visits to, and communication with, those prisoners who present a risk to children is done in accordance with NIPS' Child Protection Policy and Procedures contained in Safeguarding Children Framework and Guidance, which is available on the NIPS website.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many forfeiture orders have been made for vehicles following criminal convictions in each of the last three calendar years, broken down by court division.
(AQW 41538/11-15)

Mr Ford: Forfeiture orders made in court relate to the forfeiture of property. To identify the number of orders relating specifically to the forfeiture of vehicles would require a manual trawl of court records and would incur a disproportionate cost.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many sex offenders being managed in the community have been moved from placements or residences following concerns raised by the public, in each of the last two calender years.
(AQW 41539/11-15)

Mr Ford: On 31 March 2013 there were 1,375 sex offenders being managed under the public protection arrangements and on 31 March 2014 the statistics stood at 1,251 offenders. The information requested is not recorded separately and could only be ascertained by a manual search of files by all relevant agencies which would incur a disproportionate cost.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice what are the job consequences of the proposal to close eight courthouses.
(AQW 41540/11-15)

Mr Ford: As a result of the Executive's Public Sector Voluntary Exit Scheme, it is anticipated that staff numbers within the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service (NICTS) will reduce significantly. The rationalisation proposals would allow NICTS to manage some of the consequent pressures through a reduction in the number of locations at which it operates and the implementation of more streamlined management structures.

The rationalisation would also reduce the level of contracted services currently provided although the impact on jobs is a matter for those contractors.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice what consultation was carried out with the judiciary and other relevant stakeholders before announcing the proposal to close eight courthouses; and what were the responses.
(AQW 41541/11-15)

Mr Ford: In developing the rationalisation proposals, the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service worked closely with the judicial representatives on the NICTS Agency Board. NICTS officials also briefed the Lord Chief Justice during the process, before formally consulting him in relation to the draft consultation document. I also discussed the matter with him on a number of occasions prior to the launch of the consultation.

The judicial representatives assisted in developing proposals which would accommodate the court business within a reduced court estate. However they expressed concerns about the impact of the proposed closures on court users.

NICTS officials also met with key partners as the consultation proposals were developed. They included PSNI, Public Prosecution Service, Probation Board, Youth Justice Agency, Prisoner Escort and Court Custody Service, and Northern Ireland Guardian Ad Litem Agency. The views provided recognised the necessity of reducing the court estate and were broadly supportive of the proposals. Partners welcomed the opportunity to be engaged during the full consultation to identify opportunities for business improvement.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in respect of vehicles which have been ordered forfeit by courts following criminal convictions, how are these vehicles disposed of; and who has responsibility for their disposal.
(AQW 41603/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) may apply to the court for the forfeiture of a vehicle. Once a court order is made, the seizure becomes a matter for PSNI. The Department of Justice does not hold any information in relation to seized vehicles.

I am committed to respecting the operational independence of the Chief Constable and the role of the Policing Board. You may wish to direct your question to the PSNI.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to outline the changes in staffing structures and procedures within the Northern Ireland Legal Aid Agency that differentiates its role from that of the Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission, as its predecessor; and to whom is the agency responsible.
(AQW 41605/11-15)

Mr Ford: The creation of the Legal Services Agency Northern Ireland (LSANI) on 1 April 2015 will result in a number of changes that will deliver efficiency savings and improve governance and accountability.

The Chief Executive will report directly to me, with meetings held annually (or more frequently as required) to discuss the Agency's aims, objectives, performance and financial management. This closer relationship will strengthen accountability. A new appeals process will be put in place, which will streamline operations and reduce costs. NICS conditions of service and accountancy standards will apply to the Agency resulting in more efficient and effective working practices. There will also be benefits from the Agency joining the NICS network of shared services and its digitisation programme.

While the Agency will be subject to my overall direction, it will retain independence in relation to decisions in individual cases, and therefore at the core of the new arrangements is the creation of a new Statutory Office Holder, the Director of Legal Aid Casework.

Agency status will also provide greater flexibility in managing staff resources, by providing access to a wider skills base in the NICS. In this context it will facilitate implementation of the outcome of the Staff Review, which is in the process of being concluded, by allowing any changes in staffing to be managed within the NICS.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice of the recently published figure of 1878 reports of domestic abuse within the period of 16 December 2014 and 5 January 2015, how many have resulted in cases now within the court system, broken down by court division.
(AQW 41606/11-15)

Mr Ford: The figures quoted relate to the number of domestic incidents reported to the Police Service of Northern Ireland.

The Department of Justice does not hold any information in relation to these incidents. It is, therefore, not known how many of these incidents have resulted in a case before the court or how many persons may be subsequently reported for prosecution by way of a summons.

I am committed to respecting the operational independence of the Chief Constable and the role of the Policing Board. You may wish to direct your question to the PSNI.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice (i) for a breakdown of the current operating costs of the eight courthouses proposed for closure; (ii) to detail the estimated annual maintenance and other costs associated with the upkeep of the courthouses if they are not used until they are disposed of; (iii) when and how it is anticipated that the courthouses will be disposed of; and (iv) the anticipated level of receipt from any sales.
(AQW 41610/11-15)

Mr Ford: The current operating costs for the eight courthouses, based on audited figures for the financial year 2013/14, are set out in Table 1 below. These costs include utility charges, premises related costs, service charges and general administration costs excluding salaries:

Table 1 – Annual Operating Costs

Courthouse	2013/2014 Annual Operating Costs
Armagh	£429,445
Ballymena	£473,555
Enniskillen	£238,771
Limavady	£63,846
Lisburn	£302,835
Magherafelt	£89,747
Newtownards	£469,446
Strabane	£174,443
Total	£2,242,087

Following any decision to close a courthouse a reduced planned maintenance programme will be established. Each building will be surveyed prior to closure to agree the necessary maintenance works and the associated cost. Aside from these planned maintenance works, any budget allocation will also include on-going premises costs such as rates charges (if applicable), utilities and minor reactive maintenance works. Table 2 sets out these estimated premises costs for each courthouse.

Table 2 – Estimated Annual Premises Costs Following Closure

Courthouse	Estimated Annual Premises Costs
Armagh	£21,068
Ballymena	£14,834
Enniskillen	£11,079
Limavady	£10,284
Lisburn	£23,951
Magherafelt	£9,416
Newtownards	£39,793
Strabane	£18,059
Total	£148,484

The Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service will work closely with Land and Property Services to ensure courthouse are disposed of in accordance with the Department of Finance and Personnel guidelines on the Disposal of Surplus Public Sector Property in Northern Ireland. It is not possible at this stage to estimate the receipt from any sale of the courthouses.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice what impact assessment on the capacity of surviving courts has been carried out in respect of the proposal to close eight courthouses.
(AQW 41611/11-15)

Mr Ford: The capacity of receiving venues to deal with the business transferring from any closing courthouse was considered fully as part of the development of the proposals. Business levels, court sitting times, court utilisation rates and facilities were examined for all court venues.

The receiving venues are the larger or more modern venues with more courtrooms able to deal with the range of court business. The illustrative calendars underpinning the proposals demonstrate that it is possible to accommodate the transfer of the current scheduled business to the receiving venues.

I believe the proposals will also provide the opportunity to discuss with the judiciary the listing and scheduling of business to make better use of scheduled sitting days and where appropriate merge smaller less busy sittings.

It is accepted that for some court users the closures will result in additional travel to attend court. Even though a very small number of court users attend court by using public transport, there were tolerance levels set for journey times between venues. The parameters set where that journey times by public transport between venues should not exceed 60 minutes, and that they should enable users to arrive at the start of the court sitting and return home within a reasonable time each day.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice what impact assessment on the inconvenience imposed on users has been carried out in respect of the proposal to close eight courthouses.
(AQW 41612/11-15)

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Justice to make public immediately a timeline and timeframe for the publication of the responses to the NI Law Commission's Consultation Paper Defamation Law in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 41618/11-15)

Mr Ford: The NI Law Commission consultation on Defamation Law in Northern Ireland ends on 20 February 2015. At that point the Law Commission will consider the timeline for the remainder of the project taking into account factors such as resources available and the number and complexity of the responses received.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Justice for a break down of prison sentences for convictions for causing death by (i) dangerous; (ii) inconsiderate; and (iii) dangerous and careless driving.
(AQW 41621/11-15)

Mr Ford: Offences where a death was caused by dangerous, inconsiderate or careless driving may be prosecuted under the Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1995. However, some offences under this Order do not differentiate between death and grievous bodily injury in the offence title. Databases held by the Department do not contain detail on the circumstances of an offence. It is not therefore always possible to say for a conviction for such offences whether death, or grievous bodily injury, resulted.

The most recent convictions data available relate to 2013. In that year there were 55 convictions for offences causing death or grievous bodily injury by careless, inconsiderate or dangerous driving. Of these, 8 resulted in a custodial penalty. Details of the sentences imposed are listed in the following table.

Custodial terms imposed for convictions for causing death by dangerous or careless driving, 2013

	Custodial sentence period
Offence	< 1 year	1 year - < 3 years	3 years & over
Causing death by dangerous driving	1	1	2
Causing death by driving carelessly with excess alcohol	-	1	-
Causing death or grievous bodily injury by careless driving (without due care and attention)	3	-	-

Note:

1 Data are collated on the principal offence rule; only the most serious offence for which an offender is convicted is included.

2 The figures provided relate to convictions for all classifications of the offence specified.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Justice when Lasting Power of Attorney will be introduced in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 41622/11-15)

Mr Ford: My Department does not have substantive policy responsibility for Lasting Powers of Attorney.

However, I can confirm that the draft Mental Capacity Bill contains provisions to introduce Lasting Powers of Attorney in Northern Ireland. The Bill is being prepared jointly by my Department and the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety. It is currently intended to submit a Bill to the Executive for approval in March 2015, to enable introduction to and passage through the Assembly by March 2016.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Justice (i) how many Enhanced Disclosure checks are currently being processed by Access NI; (ii) what is the current average waiting time for an Enhanced Disclosure Certificated to be issued; and (iii) what action is being taken to address any delays.
(AQW 41633/11-15)

Mr Ford:

(i) AccessNI processed 127,758 enhanced disclosure checks in 2014. It receives on average 2,450 applications per week.

(ii) AccessNI is currently processing enhanced applications within 5 days of receipt. Approximately 72% of the checks can then be issued. The other 28% are sent to PSNI (or other police services as appropriate). Currently, a further 24% of all enhanced checks, are issued within five weeks of receipt once returned by police forces. The remaining small percentage of checks fall into a category of cases which cannot be issued until PSNI advise AccessNI if they have any information to be disclosed. The average waiting time for an enhanced check between 1 January and 31 December 2014 was 17.5 days.

(iii) There is regular contact between AccessNI and PSNI staff to review progress and backlogs. The PSNI have a backlog of the more complex cases requiring greater scrutiny. The Christmas holiday period has also impacted on their turnaround of the more straightforward cases. PSNI have a recovery plan in place, with steps being taken to reduce the number of outstanding cases over the next few months. AccessNI will continue to work with PSNI and to monitor the situation.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Justice how his Department intends to engage with the local community over his proposal to close Enniskillen courthouse.
(AQW 41651/11-15)

Mr Ford: My officials will hold a public meeting to engage with the local community. This will be in Enniskillen courthouse and the date and time of the meeting will be made known shortly.

Local residents may also respond formally to the public consultation and I would encourage them to do so.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Justice how his Department and its agencies have helped in the efforts to find Kieran McAree in Enniskillen.
(AQW 41652/11-15)

Mr Ford: While responsibility for search and rescue policy rests with the Department of Justice, the operational response and deployment of search and rescue assets remain with the relevant statutory tasking authority.

I visited the search area in January and met some of the teams, both statutory and voluntary, involved in this sustained operation. The dedication and professionalism of all those who have taken part in the search is remarkable.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Justice to outline the rationale behind the decision to close Newtownards Courthouse.
(AQW 41660/11-15)

Mr Ford: The main drivers for the rationalisation of the court estate, including the proposal to close Newtownards, are set out in the consultation document.

My Department, like others, is required to make savings to operate within a challenging budget allocation. This means that continuing to operate the current 20 courthouses is no longer sustainable.

The Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service has strategically reviewed the current court estate to identify venues which could be closed and business transferred to an alternative court venue with minimal impact and ensuring continuing efficient and effective service delivery.

Each court venue was evaluated against the same criteria to identify potential closures e.g. caseload, physical condition of buildings, number of courtrooms, ability to deal with a range of business types, and distance and public transport availability to alternative venue etc. On this basis Newtownards was one of the courthouses identified for potential closure.

Bangor previously operated as a Hearing Centre for a number of years, opening only on court days. A public consultation exercise was carried out in 2012 and based on the efficiency savings to be made, the comparatively poorer facilities and accessibility issues I decided to close Bangor in April 2013 and transfer business to Newtownards.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Justice what is his justification for closing both Bangor and Newtownards courthouses within the last three years.
(AQW 41661/11-15)

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 40889/11-15, whether some ground could be opened to accommodate overspill, reduce carpark congestion and obstructive on-street parking at Killyman Road.
(AQW 41663/11-15)

Mr Ford: Given the layout of the Dungannon Courthouse site and the current financial climate, the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service has no plans to extend car parking facilities.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) which agencies are involved in placing a sex offender in the community post custodial sentence; (ii) what procedures are applied; and (iii) do these procedures differ in relation to the category of sex offender.
(AQW 41664/11-15)

Mr Ford: Sex offenders are released from prison when they have served the custodial element of their sentence or on a date determined by the Parole Commissioners for Northern Ireland.

The agencies involved in their assessment and risk management under the Public Protection Arrangements for Northern Ireland (PPANI) are PSNI, the Probation Board, the Prison Service, the Health and Social Care Trusts and the Housing Executive. This involves assessing the risk presented by individual sex offenders and developing a risk management plan tailored to their circumstances and the particular risks they present. One agency is then identified as the individual's designated risk manager.

The relevant procedures applying to this process are detailed in the PPANI Manual of Practice which is available on the PPANI website www.publicprotectionni.com. The procedures are applied to all eligible offenders as defined in the Manual of Practice.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) how much has been recouped in outstanding unpaid fines through Fine Default Reviews or other mechanisms, in each court division to date; (ii) to provide a progress report on this matter; and (iii) whether any further measures to secure longstanding overdue fines are being considered.

Mr Ford: At the end of December 2014, 14,938 default hearing notices in respect 20,442 outstanding Magistrates' Court imposed fines had been issued.

The table below details the value of outstanding fines that have been cleared through Fine Default Hearings by cash payment or by way of 'notional payment' i.e. remitted by judicial authority or by serving a default prison period up to 5 February 2015.

County Court Division	Cash Receipt	Notional payment	Total
Antrim	43,413.45	65,288.57	108,702.02
Ards	32,242.08	130,928.83	163,170.91
Armagh And South Down	32,753.36	24,934.26	57,687.62
Belfast	225,856.39	119,363.12	345,219.51
Craigavon	15,827.71	52,207.34	68,035.05
Fermanagh And Tyrone	59,347.48	254,261.67	313,609.15
Londonderry	30,768.72	8,270.41	39,039.13
Total	440,209.19	655,254.20	1,095,463.39

The table does not include a further £997,000 in fine payments recovered by staff through the fine collection scheme: a centralised service which targets defaulters as they approach their fine payment due date.

Legislation to reform the arrangements for the collection and enforcement of fines is currently being drafted. It will introduce a range of new powers, under the authority of the court, including the ability to agree instalment orders, extend time to pay and arrange for deductions from earnings and benefits.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Justice for an estimate of the annual value of assets gained through crime that the PSNI has been unable to seize but which would have been seized if the National Crime Agency (NCA) had been allowed to operate in Northern Ireland, given that the PSNI does not have the legal authority to the same extent as the NCA to seize assets gained through criminality.

Mr Ford: There was a significant step forward in securing a full role for the National Crime Agency here on 3 February when the Assembly gave consent to Westminster introducing the necessary legislation. After an impasse since 7 October 2013 we should shortly be able to see a full operational NCA here supporting our law enforcement effort.

The inability to bring civil recovery cases in the devolved sphere has been costly. Since June 2013 there has been a 58% decrease in the number of Northern Ireland investigations (19 to 8). Obviously there have been no new devolved cases since October 2013. The value of the cases involved has dropped by approximately £4m net which gives an indication of the loss to the public purse. There has also been a 71% decrease in the number of property freezing orders in Northern Ireland cases.

There is no precise figure on the resource cost to the PSNI to accommodate work which should have been handled by NCA. They have, however, on occasion had to withdraw officers from other work. Difficult decisions regarding prioritisation have had to be made.

A 2014 report by the United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child expressed their strong concern that, in the absence of National Crime Agency operation in the devolved sphere in Northern Ireland, the Child Exploitation and Online Protection Centre (CEOP), which is integrated into the NCA, is not fully operational here. It suggested that this was an example of devolution leading to discrimination in the enjoyment of rights by children. The PSNI are able to access information and advice from CEOP. What has been missing, however, is access to operational support and an input into NCA planning strategically and operationally.

I hope that shortly the hiatus will be resolved and the people of Northern Ireland can then benefit from the expertise and resources of the National Crime Agency.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Justice for an estimate of the additional resource cost to the PSNI incurred through the National Crime Agency not being allowed to operate in Northern Ireland, with specific reference to serious and organised crime, child protection and human trafficking.
(AQW 41672/11-15)

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of the number of vulnerable children who are put at risk of sexual exploitation and trafficking through the inability of the National Crime Agency (NCA) to operate in Northern Ireland.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Justice for an estimate of the annual value of criminal assets lost to the public purse through the inability of the National Crime Agency to operate in Northern Ireland; and what additional pressure does this put on the PSNI budget.
(AQW 41674/11-15)

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice whether he will initiate an investigation into the handling of applications by firearms dealer Person A by Firearms Branch and his Department.
(AQW 41688/11-15)

Mr Ford: It is not within my remit to initiate an investigation into the handling of applications by PSNI Firearms Branch. In the absence of any specified concern I do not see the need to examine the handling of the appeals by my officials.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Justice why, in cases where a criminal conviction for sexual abuse has arisen, members living in the same household as the perpetrator can not avail of criminal injuries compensation if their case pre-dates 1988.
(AQW 41689/11-15)

Mr Ford: Article 3(2) (b) of the Criminal Injuries (Compensation) (Northern Ireland) Order 1977 states that no compensation shall be paid if the victim was, at the time when the criminal injury was sustained, living with the offender as his wife or her husband or as a member of the same household as the offender. The position was changed by the Criminal Injuries Order 1988, but the principle is that legislation is not retrospective so the change does not apply to cases before the commencement of the Order.

Those who suffered sexual abuse in such circumstances would indeed be classed as victims. They would not, however, be eligible for compensation due to the legislative provisions which prevailed pre-1988.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 40886/11-15, how many prisoner officers were medically retired in each year of the Voluntary Exit Scheme.
(AQW 41709/11-15)

Mr Ford: The first tranche of prison officers left under the Voluntary Exit Scheme on 31 March 2012 with the last tranche leaving on 31 May 2014. The number of Prison Officers medically retired during the calendar years from 1 January 2012 to 31 December 2014 is set out in the table below:

Year	Number of Prison Staff Medically Retired
2,2012	17
2014	20

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether the role of the Reducing Reoffending Team extends to monitoring youths or minors remanded on bail for serious offences, which are within the court system, particularly in respect of instances in which further offences are committed whilst on bail for separate matters and further bail is granted; and if not, whether he will give consideration to such an initiative.
(AQW 41711/11-15)

Mr Ford: The granting of bail and any conditions set, including any police monitoring role, is a matter for the judiciary in conjunction with the PSNI.

The Youth Justice Agency does assist in the supervision, surveillance and support of young people subject to bail in specific cases where the court has requested it. This service is provided by a dedicated Bail Support and Supervision Team who oversee bespoke packages of intervention to young people. These programmes are delivered in partnership with the PSNI Reducing Offending Unit teams.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice in how many court cases in 2014 have cash sureties been seized in whole or part after a breach, broken down by court division.
(AQW 41713/11-15)

Mr Ford: Three court cases had cash sureties seized in whole or part after a breach during 2014. Two cases were within the Division of Armagh and South Down and one was in the High Court.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice whether the Peruvian authorities have contacted his Department regarding the potential repatriation of Michaela McCollum.
(AQW 41715/11-15)

Mr Ford: I am able to confirm that the Peruvian authorities have been in contact with the Northern Ireland Prison Service regarding the repatriation of Michaella McCollum. This contact was made via the British Embassy in Lima, Peru and the National Offender Management Service in London.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice whether he can refuse the repatriation of Michaela McCollum.
(AQW 41716/11-15)

Mr Ford: There is no obligation on those countries, of which the United Kingdom is one, which have entered into bilateral prisoner transfer agreements or are signatories of the European Convention on the Transfer of Sentenced Persons, to accept every application for repatriation. However, the ethos behind the reciprocal arrangements that are in place is to encourage and promote rehabilitation and resettlement by allowing persons convicted of offences overseas to return to their home jurisdiction so that they can serve their sentences much closer to their families and avail of the support they can offer through regular visits and other forms of familial contact. It would be wrong, after entering into such reciprocal arrangements and having facilitated the repatriation of others in the past in very similar circumstances, to refuse an application when tried and tested grounds for such a repatriation have been proven to exist. While data protection restrictions prevent me from commenting on the detail of this particular case it is already a matter of public record that I have accepted Michaella McCollum's application for repatriation to this jurisdiction.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Justice why people living with a convicted perpetrator of sexual abuse, during the period when the abuse occurred, are not classed as victims, given that their emotional and psychological well being is likely to have been harmed.
(AQW 41725/11-15)

Mr Ford: Article 3(2) (b) of the Criminal Injuries (Compensation) (Northern Ireland) Order 1977 states that no compensation shall be paid if the victim was, at the time when the criminal injury was sustained, living with the offender as his wife or her husband or as a member of the same household as the offender. The position was changed by the Criminal Injuries Order 1988, but the principle is that legislation is not retrospective so the change does not apply to cases before the commencement of the Order.

Those who suffered sexual abuse in such circumstances would indeed be classed as victims. They would not, however, be eligible for compensation due to the legislative provisions which prevailed pre-1988.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Justice what role the National Crime Agency will have in tackling the sale and smuggling of illegal tobacco products.
(AQW 41728/11-15)

Mr Ford: Excise evasion on tobacco products is a reserved matter and therefore is within the remit of the National Crime Agency, although without local accountability at present. The lead agency for evasion of duty is HM Revenue and Customs (and Border Force in relation to smuggling). They may call on the National Crime Agency for support and additional expertise where they feel it is necessary.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice whether former employees of the Historical Enquiries Team are subject to the constraints of the Official Secrets Act.
(AQW 41738/11-15)

Mr Ford: The management of the Historical Enquiries Team was an operational matter for the Chief Constable, for which he is accountable to the Policing Board.

You may, therefore, wish to refer your query to the Chief Constable.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many convicted sexual offenders are being managed in a community setting in each court division; and whether the relevant monitoring agencies are giving due consideration to the potential for clustering in some areas.
(AQW 41789/11-15)

Mr Ford: Data in relation to management of offenders under the public protection arrangements (PPANI) is not recorded by court division but can be provided by police district. Data is generally only recorded by court division where the Northern Ireland Courts & Tribunals Service is responsible for its collation.

The number of convicted sex offenders being managed within the community is subject to change on a daily basis. The data provided in the table below relates to the number of sex offenders being risk managed under the public protection arrangements within each police district on 10 February 2015.

Police District	A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H
Number	119	277	144	144	167	113	150	118

The location of convicted sex offenders is always considered as part of the PPANI multi-agency risk assessment and risk management process.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 40980/11-15, whether he will review this answer given that the arraignment was held, pleas entered and sentencing passed on 12 January 2015 at Dungannon Crown Court, over a week before the question was submitted.
(AQW 41792/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission has not yet received any claims for payment in relation to the proceedings in Dungannon Crown Court, as detailed in ICOS reference number 14/109656. The following is an estimate of the costs payable broken down by type of legal representative:

Solicitor	£287,515.92
Senior Counsel	£250,320.00

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice what action is being taken to reduce the cost of holding a person in prison.
(AQW 41799/11-15)

Mr Ford: Northern Ireland Prison Service is taking all actions possible to minimise the cost of holding a person in prison. The Cost per Prisoner Place (CPPP) has fallen from £81,340 in 2008-09 to £62,898 in 2013-14, with a target CPPP of £60,800 for the current financial year 2014-15

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice what criteria were used to select the courthouses proposed for closure and those to remain open; and why the eight proposed for closure were selected.
(AQW 41800/11-15)

Mr Ford: As detailed within the consultation paper on proposals for rationalisation of the court estate, every courthouse was assessed against the following criteria:

- Caseload at each court venue;
- The physical condition of the buildings;
- The numbers of courtrooms available at each building and their capability to accommodate a range of court business;
- Existing technology available at venues;
- Availability of facilities for victims and witnesses, such as separate waiting areas, space for voluntary sector partners and remote link rooms for video evidence;
- Accessibility of facilities for victims, witnesses and vulnerable users;
- Travel time and public transport links to an alternative venue;
- The cell capacity and access to courtrooms for prisoners; and
- Potential for public sector re-use, disposal or re-sale.

Each criterion was rated by importance, and all courthouses assessed against these criteria. The potential savings to be made by closing those with the lowest ratings was also considered together with the ability to establish a workable administrative court structure which would align with the new local government districts.

As a result of this exercise, the eight selected courthouses were identified for closure.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice to detail the projected savings from the proposed closure of (i) Ards Courthouse; and (ii) the other courthouses listed for closure.
(AQW 41803/11-15)

Mr Ford: As detailed within the consultation paper the projected financial savings from the closure of the courthouses are as set out in the table below.

Courthouse	Annual recurrent savings
Lisburn	£143,865
Newtownards	£191,818
Ballymena	£223,351
Limavady	£33,866
Armagh	£217,406
Magherafelt	£50,971
Strabane	£101,012
Enniskillen	£92,439
Total	£1,054,728

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 40366/11-15, and in respect of the Fermanagh and Tyrone court division, what assurances he can give that there are adequate measures in place to protect the public and prevent clustering.
(AQW 41877/11-15)

Mr Ford: Individuals who are subject to the notification requirements of Part 2 of the Sexual Offences Act 2003 are relevant sexual offenders for the purposes of risk assessment and risk management under the public protection arrangements. They will have a risk management plan which is tailored to the circumstances of the individual offender and the risk they present to the public. Their location is carefully considered as part of the risk management process.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41459/11-15, (i) why this situation was allowed to occur; (ii) who is responsible; and (iii) what action will he take, particularly in respect of the failure to refer in line with provision of Regulation 18 (1).
(AQW 41946/11-15)

Mr Ford: The individuals to which the Questions refer are serving police officers and are paid by the Chief Constable as police officers.

The 'situation' covered by Regulation 18(1) allows the Police Federation to make a contribution in respect of the pay, pensions or allowances paid to individual office holders as agreed between the central committee of the Police Federation for Northern Ireland and the Northern Ireland Policing Board. Only in default of any such agreement would the Department be asked to make a determination in the matter.

I have not been made aware by the Policing Board or the Federation's central committee that any agreement reached between the parties is in default.

As stated in the answers I gave to AQW/38708/11-15 and AQW/41459/11-15,

I can reaffirm that this matter has not been referred to the Department for such a determination.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, following the recent incidents at HMP Maghaberry that jeopardised the safety of staff, whether he will order a full inquiry into why the Prison Service failed to implement the correct procedures in these circumstances.
(AQW 41950/11-15)

Mr Ford: As is normal practice, following any serious incident in a prison, the Northern Ireland Prison Service will conduct a review to establish the exact facts surrounding the incident and what lessons might be learnt.

That enquiry will determine whether any further action is required.

If there are specific procedural concerns that the Member thinks should be addressed I can refer those to the Prison Service for consideration.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Regional Development whether he has considered the use of LED lighting as a cost saving measure.
(AQW 41215/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has considered the use of LED street lighting and already installed many hundreds of new LED street light fittings.

LEDs have developed rapidly over recent years and their efficiency and reliability has improved greatly, while costs have been falling steeply. My Department has worked with the Strategic Investment Board to examine a number of technical and operational options for street lighting and LEDs featured prominently in that work.

Going forward, my Department plans to make extensive use of LED street lighting.

Ms McCorley asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the integrated ticketing system and concessionary fares for Belfast Rapid Transit vehicles and the West Belfast Taxi Association.
(AQW 41230/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink is currently finalising an economic appraisal to examine the costs and benefits of various replacement options for a new ticketing system. My Department will require that any new ticketing system is compatible with the Belfast Rapid Transit project and offers the best possible value for money for passengers and the Department. The new system will be designed so that it can also be used by other public transport operators. When the economic appraisal is finalised, it will need approval from my Department and the Department of Finance and Personnel.

In relation to the Concessionary Fares Scheme, this will apply to Belfast Rapid Transit as it does to other public transport services in Northern Ireland.

The West Belfast Taxi Association (WBTA) has not applied to join the Northern Ireland Concessionary Fares Scheme.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 40135/11-15 and his reference to an hourly service, why no bus departs Enniskillen serving commuters travelling to Belfast between 6:05am and 7:30am.
(AQW 41236/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The key determinant of current levels of frequency on the 261 route between Enniskillen and Belfast to serve commuters is Translink's ability to operate efficiently and the requirement to allocate resources in a sustainable manner.

Current patronage levels would not support the resource required to provide a direct bus service from Enniskillen to Belfast. However Translink continues to review its services and how best to improve and attract new customers. Services at 06:05 and 07:30 from Enniskillen which operate via Dungannon and Park and Ride sites are currently being reviewed as part of an overall Bus Business Plan.

Ms McCorley asked the Minister for Regional Development whether West Belfast Taxi Association vehicles will be permitted to use the bus lanes on the Belfast Rapid Transit scheme.
(AQW 41239/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: It is currently proposed that the bus lanes on which Belfast Rapid Transit will operate will be available for use by buses, bicycles, motorcycles and permitted taxis, in the same way as other bus lanes in the city currently operate. As such the West Belfast Taxi Association vehicles will be permitted to use them.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister for Regional Development what assurances he can give that the Winter Service Route Optimization programme will be rural proofed; and that the gritting schedule will not be reduced in terms of personnel or machinery as a result of the programme.
(AQW 41255/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Route Optimisation project will not involve a change to our current Winter Service policy.

The purpose of the project is to deliver savings in the cost of delivering the winter gritting service by minimising the total number of salting routes and overall mileage covered to service the whole treatment network. It will not reduce the length of the current salted network but will identify the most cost effective way of providing this service. This is likely to result in a reduction in the level of personnel and machinery required to carry out this activity.

My Department's current Winter Service policy has been established in accordance with Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act 1998.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the measures under consideration to allay traffic and road safety issues around the Gransha Road roundabout, Bangor.
(AQW 41259/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: It is recognised that Gransha Road roundabout would benefit from enhanced pedestrian measures and my officials are currently investigating the best option to facilitate both pedestrian and traffic movements at this busy interchange. Various options are being considered, including a fully signalised roundabout providing controlled pedestrian facilities on each approach.

I have asked Mr Simon Richardson, TransportNI's Divisional Manager for the area, to apprise you of the outcome, upon completion of this work.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister for Regional Development when the recently commenced street light maintenance work will be completed; and what steps he is taking to ensure that the lighting system is not allowed to deteriorate to such an extent in the future.
(AQW 41274/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Following the Executive's decision to meet my Department's bid for additional funding in the January monitoring round, I immediately reinstated the use of external contractors to repair defective street lights. Contractors are back on the ground, in addition to my Department's own street lighting staff, working through the backlog of street lighting repairs that has accumulated since last August. I have instructed that all available resources are to be used to expedite the work. My aim is to have the backlog cleared as quickly as possible within the remainder of this financial year.

However, the funding provided in January monitoring is for this financial year only. In order to avoid a similar situation occurring next financial year, I have alerted Executive colleagues to the need for an adequate road maintenance budget, which includes for street lighting repairs. I will continue to bid for adequate resources to keep street lighting operating, but ultimately my Department will not be able to spend money it does not have.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development, in view of the indication that Irish Rail is considering a rail spur to directly connect rail passengers from Belfast to Dublin Airport, whether he will review and act on the need for a direct rail link to Belfast International Airport.

Mr Kennedy: I fully recognise the strategic importance of our airports and remain committed to exploring opportunities to enhance our road and rail connections where appropriate and where funding can be secured.

In publishing my Railway Investment Prioritisation Strategy last year, I set out my priorities for investment in our rail network over the next 20 years. At that time I highlighted my commitment to explore the potential for establishing a rail link to Belfast International Airport. However, as the Strategy noted, annual passenger numbers through Belfast International Airport would need to rise to around 10 million, to make a rail link economically viable and to enable provision of a regular and frequent service. While passenger throughput in 2013 was just over 4 million, this is expected to grow towards 10 million by 2030, well within the lifetime of my Strategy.

I note that Dublin Airport currently handles over 21 million passengers per annum. I am aware that the Irish Government has consulted recently on six transport options for North Dublin, which would provide services to Dublin Airport. Three of the options do not involve a heavy rail link and I note the Irish Government has not yet selected its preferred option.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on progress on the flood alleviation project in Mourneview, Newcastle Co Down.
(AQW 41293/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by NI Water that the development of the detailed design of a project to reduce the risk of flooding in the Mourneview area of Newcastle is progressing well. NI Water and its design consultant, McAdam Design, have completed extensive topographical surveys in the area and have appointed an independent Hydraulic Modelling Consultancy to validate design options, with CCTV internal pipe inspections and ground investigation work commencing in the near future. NI Water will also be seeking lands agreements and undertaking consultations with Transport NI and DARD Rivers Agency.

Subject to available funding and statutory approvals, it is envisaged this project will be tendered with a target construction start date of October 2015. This date has been selected in order to avoid construction work clashing with the peak holiday season.

The current estimated value of the project is approximately £0.5 million, which will be jointly funded by NI Water and TransportNI.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development what progress his Department has made in addressing the traffic congestion in Downpatrick town centre.
(AQW 41294/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: A full review of all recent traffic studies for Downpatrick town centre is currently being carried out to help identify the best option for traffic progression through the town. This includes a review of the Council's Town Centre Masterplan and a number of other studies carried out over the years.

A full consultation process will be undertaken with all interested parties upon completion of the overall review, which is scheduled for spring 2015.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Regional Development what plans his Department has in place to provide additional, regular public transport to the new Local Enhanced Hospital in Omagh.
(AQW 41310/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: It was identified that the current level of service was insufficient to serve the proposed new Local Enhanced Hospital in Omagh. As such, Translink has been involved in on-going discussions with the Trust in relation to the provision of public transport to the new hospital site.

Translink recommended that a shuttle bus service should operate, throughout the day, between the Hospital and Omagh Town Centre/Bus Centre for the benefit of staff, patients and visitors. This service would penetrate the site and be provided subject to a period of financial support from the Trust.

A meeting to discuss the detail of frequency of service and hours of operation was scheduled for week commencing 19 January 2015 but has been rescheduled to mid-February.

Translink is represented on the Western Health & Social Care Trust Travel Plan Steering Group which is tasked with achieving the sustainable travel targets detailed in its travel plans

Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline his Department's plans to invest in the water infrastructure in West Tyrone to ensure no recurrence of the problems experienced during January 2015.
(AQW 41311/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by NI Water that the water treatment works and associated distribution systems across Northern Ireland ordinarily provide a continuous service and are normally robust. The primary reason for the interruptions to supply during December 2014 and January 2015 was the industrial action taken by NI Water's staff including those with the skills and knowledge required to maintain the service.

NI Water is progressing a review of the issues highlighted during this period with the intention of identifying and analysing the problems encountered and if necessary developing a programme of work to address the issues. Internal and external reviews have just commenced and it would be premature to indicate the extent of the reviews and the time frame for completion.

A number of major capital projects relevant to the West Tyrone area have been identified in the PC15 capital programme covering the period April 2015 to March 2021. Details of the works identified are listed below. They do however remain subject to the availability of funding.

- A major trunk main from Carland to Cookstown;
- Upgrade of Filters and Chemical Dosing at the Derg Water Treatment Works;
- Provision of additional treated water storage at Lough Fea Water Treatment Works; and
- A Northern Ireland wide study to develop new Water Resource and Supply Resilience Guidance quantifying capital expenditure for the post 2021 funding period.

The total cost of the work identified above is £11.5 million.

NI Water also intends to spend £46 million, during this programme period, on Base Maintenance work at water treatment works and water pumping stations across Northern Ireland which will be delivered on a prioritised basis. This will include maintenance and investment to improve the resilience of water treatment works where necessary.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department will introduce traffic calming measures in the Coolnagard area of Omagh.
(AQW 41312/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has undertaken an assessment of the need to provide traffic calming measures in the Coolnagard area of Omagh. During the assessment it was noted that this development has been designed and constructed with traffic calming in mind, in that the road alignment within the housing areas encourages vehicles to travel at appropriate speeds. This important factor contributed to the outcome of the assessment, which indicated the Coolnagard development is not ranked as highly as other sites currently within the 2015-2017 Traffic Calming programme for Omagh District Council area. Therefore, based on current funding allocations, traffic calming measures are not being proposed for this development.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the one way driving proposal by residents for Shore Road, Millisle,
(AQW 41327/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My officials have been considering your request for a one-way system in Shore Road, Millisle. As I stated in my letter to you of 23 December 2014, one-way systems can create specific problems such as increased vehicle speeds due to the absence of opposing traffic, additional journey lengths and times, inconvenience to locals and displacement of traffic to other previously quiet streets.

I understand there is one isolated area on Shore Road where parked cars on both sides of the carriageway restrict the road to one lane. This is a common occurrence in many areas across many areas in Northern Ireland and traffic must "give and take" to progress through these sections.

As this general area has a good safety record, there may be other options that could be considered, rather than the requested one-way system, such as the introduction of localised waiting restrictions, which would improve traffic progression in the specific area of concern.

These options need time to be considered and require discussion with the Police Service of Northern Ireland, which will enforce such measures. I have asked my officials to apprise you of the outcome when they complete their deliberations.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the circumstances in which a half hour rail service could be established between Coleraine and Derry.
(AQW 41343/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Establishment of a 30-minute frequency train service in both directions on a single track between Coleraine and Londonderry would require the creation of passing loops at 15-minute travel time intervals. Hence, in addition to the planned passing loop at Bellarena, this would require an additional loop at Eglinton. This is not part of the current Phase 2 signalling and relay project currently being procured.

Half-hourly frequency between Coleraine and Londonderry will be most effective when half-hourly frequency extends southwards from Coleraine to Belfast, i.e. a half-hour through service between Belfast and Londonderry. To achieve this would require the creation of a series of loops (at 15 minutes travel time intervals). This would best be achieved by extending the Ballymoney loop, i.e. dualling in a southerly direction a new loop between Killagan and Ballymena (possible at Glarryford) with dualling of track from Ballymena to Bleach Green.

The precise detail for extent of dualling, location of loops etc. can only be established after detailed modelling/simulation.

Such an upgrade would require significant capital funding to allow the substantial signalling renewals that would be required as well as the works to construct the passing loops. In addition, more trains would have to be purchased to provide the additional services and those services would require additional funding under the Rail Public Service Obligation to operate.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development what progress has been made to agree the future of the old Waterside Railway station as a focal point of new passenger facilities in Derry.
(AQW 41344/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I announced in March 2014 plans for an integrated transport hub in Londonderry, subject to securing the necessary funding. Since then, my Department has engaged extensively with the Special European Programmes Body and officials in Scotland and the Republic of Ireland to secure the inclusion of a Sustainable Transport thematic objective in the INTERREG VA Programme. The programme is currently going through the final stages of the European Commission approval process.

I expect the first call for INTERREG VA projects to open later this year and my Department intends to present an application for funding at this, or a subsequent, call.

I am particularly keen that the community benefits arising from any such project are optimised and reflect local and regional demand. To this end, if and when funding is confirmed, I expect my Department's engagement meetings with stakeholders to further inform the detailed design of the project.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the proposals outlined by Irish Rail that mean a commuter may be able to get on a train in Northern Ireland and arrive at Dublin Airport, but not be able to get on a train in Northern Ireland and arrive at an airport in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 41346/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am aware that the Irish Government has consulted recently on six public transport options for the North Dublin area, which also would serve Dublin Airport. Three of these options do not include a heavy rail solution. Two of the options would involve an extension of DART services from the line north of Dublin to the airport. Other options involve light rail or bus based rapid transit. The Irish Government has yet to commit to a preferred option.

Within my recently published Railway Investment Prioritisation Strategy, establishing a rail link to Belfast International Airport is one of the options to be considered to enhance the Northern Ireland network, if significantly greater amounts of railways capital grant can be found from the Executive's budget over the next 20 years.

The Strategy noted that annual passenger numbers through Belfast International Airport would need to rise to around 10 million, to make a rail link economically viable. As passenger throughput in 2013 was just over 4 million, a detailed feasibility study would be expected as passenger numbers grow towards 10 million by 2030, as is predicted by the airport operator. By comparison, air passenger throughput in Dublin Airport in 2014 was 21.7 million.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development how many grit boxes were provided in North Down in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41348/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Details of the number of salt bins provided, in each of the last five years, are provided in the table below:

Year	Salt bins provided in North Down (no.)
2010/11	172
2011/12	184
2012/13	188

Year	Salt bins provided in North Down (no.)
2013/14	185
2014/15	184

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the target time for the repair of a broken street light; and what percentage of repairs meet this target.
(AQW 41349/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In normal circumstances, the majority of street lighting repairs are carried out within five working days of the fault being reported. However, due to budgetary constraints I had to suspend the use of external contractors, who had been carrying out the majority of the repairs and supplementing our internal resources and consequently it has been taking longer to complete the necessary repairs.

Following the Executive's decision to meet my bid for additional funding in the January Monitoring round, I immediately reinstated the use of external contractors to repair faulty street lights. Contractors, in addition to my Department's own street lighting staff, are working through the large backlog of street lighting repairs that has accumulated since last August and it is estimated that 15% of the backlog has already been cleared.

My Department aims to have the backlog of faulty street lights cleared as quickly as possible within the remainder of this financial year.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the reasons for the withdrawal of the Notice of Intention to make a Vesting Order for certain lands at numbers 3, 5 and 7 Temple Road, Strathfoyle, Derry; and what are the implications of this withdrawal for the proposed A6 Londonderry to Dungiven dualling.
(AQW 41369/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: When the Notice of Intention to Make a Vesting Order was published in December 2011, unresolved environmental issues influenced the area of land required at Temple Road. Having resolved these issues, my officials were content that the area of land under threat of vesting could be reduced without compromising construction of the new road.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development whether any lands have been vested by his Department to facilitate the proposed A6 Londonderry to Dungiven dualling; and if so, to detail the costs involved.
(AQW 41370/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: No land has been vested for the construction of the A6 Londonderry to Dungiven dualling scheme.

Mr Newton asked the Minister for Regional Development how many street lights are currently non-operational in East Belfast; and when these street lights will be fully functional.
(AQW 41392/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department does not hold data relating to street lighting outages by individual electoral area.

However I am pleased to be able to confirm that following the Executive's decision to meet my Department's bid for additional funding in the January monitoring round, I immediately reinstated the use of external contractors to repair defective street lights. Contractors are back on the ground, in addition to my Department's own street lighting staff, working through the backlog of street lighting repairs that has accumulated since last August. I expect all repairs to be completed by mid-March 2015.

Mr Newton asked the Minister for Regional Development what actions his Department will take to liaise with businesses and residents on the route of the rapid transit system along the Upper Newtownards Road.
(AQW 41393/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has already carried out considerable public consultation in relation to the Belfast Rapid Transit (BRT) project. In 2009/10 the Department carried out a full public consultation on the policy proposals for BRT. In 2011/12, a further public consultation on the route options for BRT and the Equality Impact Assessment of the proposals was carried out. The latter consultation included public exhibitions of the proposals. In East Belfast, the proposals were exhibited in Ballyhackamore Library and Connswater Shopping Centre. In addition, the proposals were exhibited in the Offices of the East Belfast Partnership Board for the duration of the consultation period.

As the designs for individual sections of the BRT routes are completed, my Department is undertaking local Public Information Events. These events provide an opportunity for local elected representatives, residents and businesses to view the proposals and speak to members of the BRT project team. Invitations to these events are issued to all residents and businesses which front the section of the route; the elected representatives (Councillors, Shadow Councillors, MLAs and MPs) for the area; and members of the Assembly's Committee for Regional Development and Belfast City Council's Development Committee. The events are also advertised in the local daily newspapers. To date the following events have been held in East Belfast:

- Dundonald Park & Ride – in Dundonald Library on 27 April 2013 and 1 May 2013.

- BRT route on the Upper Newtownards Road between Sandown Road and Knock Road – in Ballyhackamore Library on 28 & 29 November 2013.
- BRT route on the Upper Newtownards Road between Albertbridge Road and Sandown Road – in Holywood Arches Library on 25 & 26 September 2014.

These Events have been well attended and the views expressed by attendees have been generally supportive of the project. Further Public Information Events will be arranged as the detailed designs for each section of the route are finalised.

Officials from my Department are also happy to provide briefings on the BRT project to local groups on request. They have recently provided briefings to the Ballyhackamore Business Association and the Newtownards Road & Inner East Traders Association.

When works are being undertaken on a particular section of the route, the appointed contractor letter drops all residents and businesses on the section prior to the commencement of the works and again in relation to any specific works which will affect particular properties. This correspondence also provides local site contact details should anyone have queries or issues regarding the works. Site supervisors are on site during working hours to deal with day-to-day issues as they arise.

As work on each section of the BRT route is completed, there will be further public consultation in relation to the introduction of the bus lanes. Initially these bus lanes will operate during peak hours, typically 7:30-9:30 and 15:30-18:30. When BRT becomes operational in 2017, it is the intention to change the operative hours of the bus lanes to 12 hours (7am-7pm). This change to the bus lane operating hours will be the subject of further public consultation. This consultation will seek to identify and address local issues in relation to servicing, deliveries, etc.

This high level of local engagement has been ongoing and will continue throughout the BRT project. My Department's BRT project team would be happy to meet with you to discuss the project if you would find that helpful.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the NI Water staff pensions dispute.
(AQW 41404/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NI Water) that an initial agreement on potential settlement terms has been agreed with the Water Group of Trade Unions (WGTU) on a without prejudice basis. This has allowed WGTU to agree to a suspension of the current industrial action. NI Water is now in the process of completing Business Cases and Pay Remit documentation for submission to DRD and DFP for review and approval.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development in light of the additional money awarded in the Budget 2015-16, whether his Department is now in a position to repair all malfunctioning street lights.
(AQW 41405/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Following the Executive's decision to meet my Department's bid for additional funding in the January monitoring round, I immediately reinstated the use of external contractors to repair defective street lights. Contractors are back on the ground, in addition to my Department's own street lighting staff, working through the backlog of street lighting repairs that has accumulated since last August. I have instructed that all available resources are to be used to expedite the work. My aim is to have the backlog cleared as quickly as possible within the remainder of this financial year.

However, the funding provided for street lighting repairs in January monitoring is for this financial year only and there has been no additional money awarded in the 2015/16 budget to maintain this level of service. In order to avoid a similar situation occurring next financial year, I have alerted Executive colleagues to the need for an adequate road maintenance budget, including for street lighting repairs.

I will continue to bid for adequate resources to keep street lighting operating, but ultimately my Department will not be able to spend money it does not have.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development who funded the building and installation of the private hire taxi-rank at Central Station, Belfast; and who approved the funding.
(AQW 41408/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Economic Appraisal, which was submitted in 2002/03, catered for a wider traffic management system at Central Station which included the car park, the bus-way and a taxi rank.

The project was submitted to Translink's Executive Committee for approval, then to the NITHC Board. Once approved at both forums, the project was submitted to and subsequently approved by my Department, who provided approval for capital funding in September 2003.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 40719/11-15, to detail additional eligibility criteria, for properties which were built before 2000 who wish to install mains water, so they can benefit from the supplemented allowance of £12,000.
(AQW 41427/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The supplementary allowance of £12,000 per property is available to all properties constructed before 1 January 2000 which have not previously been served by a public mains water supply. Properties classed as 'not served' do not have a water main in the nearest public road as opposed to properties that are not connected to a nearby water main by a private supply pipe. Householders are responsible for installing and paying for the private supply pipe from the boundary of their property to the point of supply.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development whether it is still his Department's intention to vest the lands at Mobuoy Road; and if so, what are the costs involved from (i) vesting; (ii) additional environmental assessment processes; and (iii) remediation of contaminated land.
(AQW 41439/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have not yet confirmed any of the Statutory Orders for the Londonderry to Dungiven dual carriageway. If in due course I confirm the Direction Order to complete planning for the scheme, the Vesting Order will continue to remain in draft until funding has been confirmed.

This draft Vesting Order, as presented at the Public Inquiry into the scheme, has not been amended at Mobuoy. The costs associated with the acquisition of these lands will not be known until the vesting process is completed at some stage in the future. At that stage, the Department will be guided by DFP's Lands and Property Services on land valuation.

It has not been necessary for my Department to undertake any additional assessment work at Mobuoy as the environmental considerations into the chosen road alignment took existing conditions, known at the time, into account. The land being vested at this location which forms part of the illegal land fill site is required for flood compensation measures. Additional environmental assessments have been undertaken by the Northern Ireland Environment Agency and this information has been used to inform potential solutions to the contamination, which may be required should remediation still be necessary.

In responding to your previous questions on this issue, I noted that, should the contamination issue remain unresolved when the road is being built, I am content that cost effective measures can be deployed to remedy the undesirable effects of the buried waste.

Having examined the extant record of extensive intrusive investigation of the contaminated lands, consultants experienced in the remediation of contaminated land have advised that the contaminated material can be left in situ provided:

1 a watertight cut-off trench is installed alongside the River Faughan to prevent contaminated groundwater migrating into the river;

2 filter drains are installed within the contaminated material to direct contaminated groundwater to a sump where it can be removed and dealt with offsite;

3 an impermeable membrane is installed over the contaminated area to prevent ingress of rainwater into the contaminated area; and

4 the contaminated area is capped with surplus excavated material arising from the road construction.

The last item is an integral part of the earthworks strategy for the scheme and is already allowed for in the scheme estimate. The remaining costs would be assimilated quite easily into allowances already included in the scheme estimate to defray the cost of unforeseen events.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development whether Translink has a contract with any private hire taxi company or preferred operator; and if so (i) with which company; (ii) when the contract was tendered and awarded; and (iii) whether Translink promotes said taxi company on its vehicles or premises.
(AQW 41458/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The contract for Central Station generates revenue for Translink in exchange for Value Cabs being the on-site provider of taxi services. This contract commenced in 2009 and is due to expire in October 2015.

Translink is currently collaborating with the Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) of DFP for the provision of taxi services, including the use of taxis for operational requirements within Translink.

This contract is due to be awarded in 2015.

There are stands/signage directing passengers emerging from trains to access the taxi services. There is no other advertising in the form of posters, etc. on premises, or on buses.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development when work on the next phase of the Coleraine to Londonderry rail line will begin.
(AQW 41462/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Invitations to tender for the signalling works contract of the Coleraine-Londonderry Renewals Project (Phase 2) have been issued.

At this point Translink hopes to appoint a signalling contractor by around the end of May 2015.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the expected timeline to completion of the A26 dualling from Glarryford.
(AQW 41463/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The contract commenced on 19 January 2015 and is expected to be completed in the summer of 2017.

Mr Anderson asked the Minister for Regional Development how many street lights are currently non-operational in (i) Portadown; (ii) Lurgan; and (iii) Banbridge; and when these street lights will be fully functional.
(AQW 41498/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As of Monday 2 February 2015, the numbers of non-operational street lights in each of the towns listed were as follows:

Town	Non-operational street lights (No.)
Portadown	132
Banbridge	94

The backlog of defective street lights in each council area is being addressed on a route-by-route basis to maximise the repair rate and minimise non-productive travelling time. It is not possible to predict when all the defective lights will be repaired at particular locations within a local authority area, but it is estimated that it will take a minimum of six weeks to clear the backlog in the Craigavon Borough and Banbridge District Council areas.

Mr Anderson asked the Minister for Regional Development how many staff are deployed by his Department to fill grit boxes in Upper Bann.
(AQW 41499/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Upper Bann constituency is serviced by TransportNI's Carn and Corbet depots, which cover the Craigavon and Banbridge areas, respectively.

Salt boxes and piles are placed at strategic locations in compliance with established Departmental criteria commencing from October and maintained until the end of the winter season in April. The frequency of replenishment of salt/grit at these locations is dependent upon weather conditions and usage. The number of operatives utilised on replenishment will therefore vary on a day-to-day basis depending on weather conditions and other work priorities.

Throughout the recent cold period since early January 2015 there have been, on average, 12 operatives engaged on this activity each day.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development how many (i) domestic; and (ii) non-domestic water meters were installed in North Down in each year since 2007.
(AQW 41564/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Northern Ireland Water holds water meter installation information according to the nature of the installation, the number of meters, and the type of property (domestic or non-domestic) it serves. It is not operationally practical for the company to hold the information according to geographical area or constituency boundary and it is therefore not in a position to provide the requested information.

There are approximately 113,000 water meters in Northern Ireland, of which some 32,000 have been installed at domestic properties. The table below shows the number of meter installations in Northern Ireland from 2007 – 2014.

Year	Number of meters installed at domestic properties	Number of meters installed at non-domestic properties	Total Number of meters installed
2007 / 08	3,220	2,154	5374
2008 / 09	11,460	4,886	16346
2009 / 10	3,945	933	4878
2010 / 2011	4,427	1,115	5542
2011 / 2012	3,458	814	4272
2012 / 2013	3,078	737	3815
2013 / 2014	3,031	481	3512

Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department will investigate the need for traffic calming measures on the Circular Road, Killyclogher, particularly in the area of Castleview and Mullaghmore.
(AQW 41571/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have asked my officials to undertake an assessment for a traffic calming scheme at Circular Road, Killyclogher. This assessment should be completed within the next 10 to 12 weeks and my officials will write to you to apprise you of the outcome.

Mr Irwin asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the discovery of fuel in the Transport NI Armagh depot which contained potentially trace amounts of fuel unsuitable for road use.
(AQW 41650/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Fuel is supplied to TransportNI through a UK-wide government contract. Armagh depot received a delivery of fuel recently which, following testing, was found to have potentially trace amounts of fuel unsuitable for road use. TransportNI promptly reported the incident to HMRC and an investigation is underway.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development whether there have been any recent changes in, or alterations to, contracts regarding the A26 dualling scheme which could affect the cost or timing of the project.
(AQW 41657/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The contract for the A26 Dualling scheme was awarded to the consortium BAM/McCann on 21 October 2014. Following contract award, a dispute arose between the contractor and the Department. Despite this, BAM/McCann remained the most economically advantageous tenderer.

The dispute has had no impact on timing of the project as it has always been anticipated that design/site mobilisation works would be carried out in late 2014/early 2015, with the main construction works commencing in March/April 2015. The estimated overall cost of the project remains in the region of £55million.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the new sewage pump improvement scheme in Millisle.
(AQW 41666/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The ownership of the site required for the new wastewater pumping station in Millisle is presently split between Ards Borough Council and the Crown Estate. Before NI Water can acquire the entire site, Ards Borough Council must first acquire a strip of land from the Crown Estate. Matters in relation to this initial acquisition are still ongoing and are outside of NI Water's direct control. NI Water's legal department have sought regular updates from the external parties and I understand that the legal processes are still progressing. The contract to construct the new pumping station is presently out to tender and the project will be brought to construction as soon as possible, following completion of the necessary land acquisitions.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the cost of (i) new; and (ii) replacement road markings in each region, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41696/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department does not monitor the cost of new and replacement road markings separately, however, the table below provides details of the total expenditure by each of Transport NI's Divisions, for each of the last five years, for the renewal of road markings and reflective road studs (cat's eyes):

Financial Year	Northern Division (£)	Southern Division (£)	Eastern Division (£)	Western Division (£)	Total (£)
2009/10	566,000	592,000	485,000	459,000	2,102,000
2010/11	482,000	506,000	537,000	422,000	1,947,000
2011/12	638,000	595,000	704,000	369,000	2,306,000
2012/13	549,000	556,000	744,000	467,000	2,316,000
2013/14	553,000	662,000	836,000	385,000	2,436,000

Department for Social Development

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development whether the individual has ever declared any interest while being involved in the approval process for assistance to GAA clubs under the Neighbourhood Renewal Programme.
(AQW 40859/11-15)

Mr Storey (The Minister for Social Development): The Officer is not a member of any GAA club, which has received assistance from my Department therefore the officer has not had to declare any interest.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister for Social Development whether Employment Support Allowance applicants are permitted to cancel an appointment more than once on the grounds of poor weather not permitting them to attend.
(AQW 41151/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Service provider seeks to arrange a mutually agreeable appointment for Employment and Support Allowance claimants who have been asked to attend a face to face assessment. Claimants will be automatically offered one further appointment when they have notified that they are unable to attend due to poor weather. Where a subsequent appointment is cancelled due to poor weather a form is dispatched to the claimant asking for the reasons. This is then considered by a decision maker and a further appointment will be set where the decision maker determines it is appropriate.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Social Development (i) how much his Department pays annually for Trade Union officials; (ii) how many officials this payment covers; and (iii) what is the cost of administering Trade Union's dues.
(AQW 41176/11-15)

Mr Storey: In the 2013/14 financial year, my Department paid staff costs of £184,116 in respect of 5.8 full-time equivalent (FTE) staff seconded to NIPSA.

HRConnect, as the payroll provider for the NICS, provides the facility to deduct trade union subscriptions from staff salaries. There is no charge levied for this service.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 40536/11-15, to list by constituency the number of households in receipt of benefits in excess of £26,000 per annum.
(AQW 41192/11-15)

Mr Storey: At June/July 2014, it was identified that there were 6,600 households receiving benefits (Social Security Agency benefits[1], Housing Benefit, Child Benefit and Tax Credits) in excess of £26,000 per annum in Northern Ireland.

By constituency these are:

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 40536/11-15, to detail the total annual benefits being paid to the 6,600 families in receipt of benefits in excess of £26,000 per annum.
(AQW 41264/11-15)

Mr Storey: At June/July 2014, it was identified that there were 6,600 households receiving benefits (Social Security Agency benefits[1], Housing Benefit, Child Benefit and Tax Credits) in excess of £26,000 per annum in Northern Ireland.

The total annual benefits being paid to the 6,600 households is estimated to be £203,500,000 (rounded to the nearest £100,000).

The average annual benefit received by these households is estimated to be £30,700 (rounded to the nearest £100).

The following benefits are not included in this calculation as data is either not held by the Department or is not in a format that can be linked to overall household benefit income: Child Disability Living Allowance, Guardian's Allowance, Widow's Pension, War Widow's or War Widower's Pension, Armed Forces Compensation Scheme, Armed Forces Independence Payment and War Pensions.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development what is the anticipated cost to the Northern Ireland budget over the coming years of sustaining benefits above the cap being applied elsewhere in the United Kingdom.
(AQW 41265/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Benefit Cap will be considered during the passage of the Welfare Reform Bill through the Assembly. Proposals within the Bill mirror the approach taken elsewhere in the United Kingdom with a cap of £26,000 for a family or lone parent and £18,200 for a single person with no children. The same exclusions will apply to the Benefit Cap as are in place in Great Britain.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development how the Warm Home Scheme was evaluated for (i) value for money; and (ii) reducing fuel poverty.
(AQW 41320/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Warm Homes Scheme has been my Department's main tool in contributing to tackle fuel poverty since 2001. It has assisted over 125,000 households and has invested over £150 million in energy efficiency improvements.

The Warm Homes Scheme relies on households self referring to the scheme and those householders must be in receipt of certain social security benefits in order to qualify. Evaluation of the Warm Homes Scheme was carried out in 2014 and highlighted:-

- 61 per cent of claimants as being either very satisfied or satisfied with the cost of running their heating system following intervention through Scheme assistance; and
- That 89% of claimants were overall either satisfied or very satisfied with the Warm Homes Scheme.

This is a positive claimant satisfaction achievement.

Following installation of Warm Homes Scheme measures, households achieved an average SAP improvement of 15%.

The evaluation of the Warm Homes Scheme also found that fuel poverty may benefit from a move away from self-referral applications to a targeted approach based on identifying households in greatest need.

The evaluation concluded that the Warm Homes Scheme successfully met its objectives.

However in spite of the investment in domestic energy efficiency the rate of fuel poverty in Northern Ireland continued to rise, with a significant number of people living in extreme or severe fuel poverty, who were not self referring into the Warm Homes Scheme.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development whether the mooted merger of Oaklee, Trinity and Ulidia Housing Associations will be subject to any tenant ballot; and if not, why this is not the case given its monopolistic and competition implications.
(AQW 41358/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Department requires that appropriate public consultation be carried out in the eventuality of a merger and extensive guidance is available on the forms that this may take. This can be found at:

http://www.dsdni.gov.uk/index/hsdiv-housing/ha_guide/hag-index/hagsa-scheme-approval-contents/hagsa-background-consultation.htm

https://www.gov.uk/government/uploads/system/uploads/attachment_data/file/100807/file47158.pdf

In Northern Ireland the Board of an association is elected by its shareholders and provided there is no change to the regulatory framework covering the tenancies there is no requirement for a tenant ballot. This is the situation which applies to the Oaklee Trinity and Ulidia merger.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the staffing implications of the merger of Trinity and Oaklee Housing Associations; and what measures were taken to ensure parity in relation to salary and pension rights.
(AQW 41359/11-15)

Mr Storey: All housing associations are bound by existing government legislation in relation to equality, recruitment and employment protection. It is not the Department's role to determine the salary or pension contributions of any individual working for a housing association. However, as the regulatory body, part of the role of the Department's inspection team is to ensure that human resource policies are clear, complete, appropriate and fit for purpose.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of houses that have benefited from the Affordable Warmth Scheme to date.
(AQW 41373/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department has been piloting the Affordable Warmth Scheme since 2012. Since then, 1,279 homes have benefited from the provision of energy efficiency measures.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of (i) Employment and Support Allowance; and (ii) Disability Living Allowance appeals that have been upheld in each of the last four financial years, based on additional medical evidence supplied by the applicant or obtained by the Social Security Agency subsequent to their original decision.
(AQW 41421/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Chairman of the Appeal Tribunal only records whether the decision made on appeal was either more or less advantageous than a previous decision. The specific information used by the Tribunal in reaching its decision is not recorded. A more advantageous decision may increase the allowance or direct that a new award be made.

The table below details the number of Employment and Support Allowance and Disability Living Allowance appeals in each of the last four financial years that have received final determination/outcome and of those how many were successful.

Year	Benefit type	Final Outcome	More Advantageous Decision	Benefit Type	Final Outcome	More Advantageous Decision
2010/11	ESA	5035	1461	DLA	4607	1651
2011/12	ESA	6318	2193	DLA	3826	1511
2012/13	ESA	8559	2855	DLA	3819	1395
2013/14	ESA	12193	3778	DLA	3799	1318

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the rate that benefit appeal tribunal panel members are paid; and the basis on which the payment is calculated.
(AQW 41431/11-15)

Mr Storey: In relation to benefit appeal tribunals, panel members are paid per half day session, between either 9.30 to 13.00 or 13.30 to 17.00. Each session includes multiple hearings. Members may be asked to prepare multiple cases for each session and to sit for two sessions in one day.

The Department for Social Development is responsible for determining and paying the remuneration and allowances of panel members. The fee payable is included in members' terms and conditions.

The current rate payable to each category of panel member is detailed in the table below.

Panel Member Category	Rate per session
Legally Qualified Member	£226.50
Medically Qualified Member (up to 40 sessions)	£156.50
Medically Qualified Member (over 40 sessions and Consultants IRO certain appeal type)	£187.50

Panel Member Category	Rate per session
Financially Qualified Member	£152.50
Disability Qualified Member	£97.00

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development why (i) the Affordable Warmth Scheme was not openly procured to ensure best value; and (ii) the skills of the Warm Homes Scheme staff were not transferred through The Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 2006 to ensure a smooth transition to Affordable Warmth.
(AQW 41436/11-15)

Mr Storey: Delivery of measures under the Warm Homes Scheme is restricted to the two Scheme Managers contracted to deliver that scheme.

The new Affordable Warmth Scheme is similar to the Boiler Replacement Scheme which was introduced in September 2012 and is open to all boiler installers to fit replacement boilers. To date some 2,000 local installers have gained work through the Boiler Replacement Scheme. This model is successful in providing much needed employment in local areas.

The Affordable Warmth Scheme was designed to allow independent installers to carry out the energy efficiency improvements.

In addition, my Department, local councils and the Housing Executive are working in partnership to effectively target vulnerable households most at risk of fuel poverty. This partnership is effective in referring vulnerable households to other services such as the councils Home Safety Officer, Environmental Health, Social Security Agency and Disabled Facilities Grants.

There was therefore no requirement to seek tenders to deliver the Scheme.

As there will be a fragmentation of how works are carried out, under the Affordable Warmth Scheme, moving from the responsibility of the two scheme managers to individual contractors chosen by the householder, the Housing Executive does not believe that any Service Change Provision arises within the meaning of the Service Provision Change (Protection of Employment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2006. The Housing Executive is therefore satisfied that Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) (TUPE) does not apply in the particular circumstances of this case.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 33523/11-15, since a policy was in place, how many times the Social Security Agency provided information in an accessible format to people with visual impairment.
(AQW 41437/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Social Security Agency can provide general information in relation to benefits in Braille, large print or audio cassette format. Many benefit leaflets include a standard signposting clause advising customers of this facility and to contact their benefit paying branch if they require further help. Notifications issued to customers relating to their benefit entitlement can also be provided in these formats on request.

The Social Security Agency does not collate information requests in terms of the actual number of times it has provided this information in an accessible format to people with a visual impairment; however this information is widely available.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development whether his Department has an equality policy in relation to people with a visual impairment; and if so, whether it is monitored for compliance by the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland.
(AQW 41438/11-15)

Mr Storey: Contained within the Department for Social Development's Equality Scheme is the commitment to ensure that information and services are fully accessible to everyone in the community. This would include people with a visual impairment.

To ensure equality of opportunity in accessing information, the Department provides information in alternative formats on request, where reasonably practicable. Alternative formats may include audio, Braille or large print.

The Department reports to the Equality Commission annually on the implementation of its Equality Scheme, including progress on delivery of actions identified to promote equality of opportunity and good relations.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister for Social Development how many Housing Executive properties are vacant in the Coleraine Borough Council.
(AQW 41452/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that at 31 December 2014 there were 24 properties vacant in the Coleraine Borough Council area, 20 of which are awaiting imminent relet.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development what benefit was derived as a result of the monies allocated under the Get Britain Building project in 2013.
(AQW 41464/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Department is currently in the process of progressing a number of initiatives under the Get Britain Building funding.

The first of these initiatives, under the banner of the Affordable Home Loans Fund (AHLF), involves working in partnership with three Housing Associations (Oakley, Clanmil and Apex) to deliver 600 affordable homes by 2020. Unfortunately, efforts to move ahead with the pilot have been hampered by the reluctance of lending institutions to partner the Housing Associations in the delivery of a new shared equity product, a core element of the ALHF.

The Department has worked closely with the 3 Housing Associations, the Federation of Housing Associations and the Council for Mortgage Lenders to resolve this issue. Good progress has been made and indications are that the new shared equity product should be available early in the new financial year. Furthermore, it is positive to note that the Housing Associations involved in this initiative have a number of homes ready to sell, including the 20 Mountview homes in Lisburn where the Fund was launched, and have reported a high degree of interest from potential purchasers.

In addition, under Great Britain Building Phase 2, the Department has allocated a £5m to date in Financial Transactions Capital (FTC) funding to a Rent to Purchase scheme (being delivered by Co-Ownership) and £9.2m in FTC funding to an Empty Homes scheme (being delivered by Clanmil Housing Association). These pilots are an earlier stage than the ALHF but the Department is working closely with both partner organisations to ensure appropriate progress is made against targets.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on his Department's Empty Homes Strategy in East Londonderry.
(AQW 41485/11-15)

Mr Storey: Within the constituency of East Londonderry, the Northern Ireland Housing Executive's Empty Homes Unit has had 38 empty properties reported to it from April 2014 to January 2015. 25 of these are located in the Coleraine council area and 13 in the wider Limavady council area. 19 of the reported properties are in areas where there is no housing need.

The Department will continue to work with the Housing Executive across a number of initiatives to assist in bringing empty homes back into use.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the current level of unoccupied social housing in East Londonderry.
(AQW 41489/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that at 31 December 2014 they had 30 vacant properties in the East Londonderry Parliamentary constituency, which includes properties awaiting imminent relet, difficult to let or undergoing major repairs etc. Housing Associations advise they currently have 37 vacant properties in the East Londonderry Parliamentary constituency, which includes properties awaiting imminent relet, undergoing major repairs or pending appraisal/ consideration of disposal or redevelopment.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 39719/11-15, whether any conditions are attached to the various funding of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender groups which prohibits the use of the public funds provided in political campaigning, such as the current campaign by the Rainbow Project against equality legislation providing for a conscience clause; and if so, how this is monitored.
(AQW 41527/11-15)

Mr Storey: Funding approved by my Department to any organisation can only be used for the purpose of furthering the aims and objectives of the project as defined in the organisation's application form and in the agreed Contract for Funding. Organisations must inform the Department of any circumstances which may affect the project, including change of use or any potential misuse of funds. Delivery of projects is monitored through quarterly reports in line with procedural guidance.

In regard to funding to the Rainbow Project, the Housing Executive has advised that the funding provided to this organisation is specifically for an advocacy worker to support victims of hate crime and help sustain their tenancies. It is not for any wider work they may be involved in as an organisation.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on when the double glazing windows will be installed to the flats at Ballyferris, Kilcooley Estate, Bangor.
(AQW 41528/11-15)

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 40865/11-15, whether (i) the interim manager appointed by the Charity Commission to the DPOANI has power or authority to share personal information held by the Disabled Police Officers Association (DPOANI) with the Charity Commission in the absence of a valid Order made by the Commission under section 23 of the Charities Act (Northern Ireland) 2008; (ii) the Charity Commission has lawful authority to share personal information with third parties other than public bodies; (iii) he will place in the Assembly Library a copy of any Order made by the Charity Commission under section 23 of the Charities Act (Northern Ireland) 2008 in relation to mobile phones owned by DPOANI, and a copy of any other Orders made by the Charity Commission in respect of such telephones.
(AQW 41570/11-15)

Mr Storey:

(i) The Charity Commission is the independent regulator of charities in Northern Ireland and sections 33 and 35 of the Charities Act (Northern Ireland) 2008 deal with the functions to be discharged by the interim manager appointed by the Commission.

(ii) Part 5 of the Charities Act (Northern Ireland) 2008 deals with the information powers of the Charity Commission; in particular, section 24 allows the Charity Commission to disclose information to any public body or office-holder. Section 10(1) of the Act provides, generally, that the Commission has power to do anything which is calculated to facilitate, or is conducive or incidental to, the performance of any of its functions or general duties.

(iii) My Department does not hold such documents.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the procurement thresholds for (i) his Department; and (ii) his Department's arm's-length bodies.
(AQW 41582/11-15)

Mr Storey: Procurement Guidance Note 04/12, endorsed by the Procurement Board sets out the Procurement Control Limit's (PCL's) and the basis of contract award for application in all procurements. These Procurement Control Limits apply across the Department including the Social Security Agency, Northern Ireland Housing Executive and the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland. The relevant Procurement Control Limits are detailed at Annex 1.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development whether the Housing Executive plans to replace kitchens in Willowbrook, Bangor.
(AQW 41635/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that properties in Willowbrook Dale were not built until 1997 and there is a kitchen scheme scheduled there for 2017, which is line with the NIHE policy on kitchen replacement of 20 years.

They further advise that all kitchens in Willowbrook Drive, Gardens, Green, Grove, Park, Place and Rise were replaced in 2006 and are not due another replacement until 2026.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development whether the Housing Executive plans to replace double glazing in Barnagh Park, Donaghadee.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the implementation of the Enniskillen Town Masterplan.
(AQW 41642/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Enniskillen Masterplan was launched in November 2012 setting out 24 separate regeneration actions, their priority, timeframes and the potential delivery partners for each action. Improvements to the town centre public realm were identified as a key regeneration activity for delivery in the 1 – 3 year time frame. My officials continue to work with Council to finalise the business case that Council commissioned for this major programme of public realm improvements in the town centre.

The Enniskillen Castle Basin (Riverside Walk) Public Realm scheme was also identified as a priority in the masterplan. Work on this scheme is progressing well and it is due to complete in June 2015.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the Affordable Warmth Scheme.
(AQO 7557/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department has been working closely with both the NI Housing Executive and local councils to develop the new Affordable Warmth Scheme. The Affordable Warmth Scheme was launched in September 2014, following two successful pilots which were conducted over a 2 year period. In some of the targeted pilot areas fuel poverty prevalence was over 80% and many of these households had not applied to the Warm Homes Scheme. These are the households that the Affordable Warmth Scheme will identify, approach, and persuade to take up the offer of the help available.

The Affordable Warmth Scheme is at an early stage but it is already being effectively delivered across all councils areas. Whilst local councils are going through a period of significant restructure, officials have been working with council staff for over 2 years to pilot and develop the scheme. Each of the 11 lead councils has signed a Service Level Agreement with the Department demonstrating their commitment to delivering the new scheme. All councils have appointed a Co-ordinator as well as support staff for the scheme.

The current Warm Homes Scheme contract has been extended to 31st March 2015 to allow for the Affordable Warmth Scheme to become established and embedded in the new structures.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the Public Realm Scheme in Donaghadee.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development whether his Department plans to centralise in excess of 100 jobs, specifically those dealing with housing benefit claims, to Lisburn.
(AQW 41766/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that as part of its response to budget reductions, it is reviewing all the services it provides including the Housing Benefit service.

The Housing Executive has further advised that in relation to Housing Benefit, there has been preliminary exploration of an option to reconfigure part of the Housing Executive's Housing Benefit Service Centres to deliver a more efficient and effective use of its resources. However, these considerations are at an early stage and there are no plans for changes of the scale suggested. The proposed reconfiguration of workload does not involve the redeployment of staff.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Social Development what agencies or bodies he has engaged with regarding the development of the masterplan for the St Patrick's site in Ballymena.
(AQW 41779/11-15)

Mr Storey: I have met with the Chief Executives of Northern Regional College, North Eastern Education and Library Board and Mid and East Antrim Council to discuss potential development opportunities for public sector use for the St Patrick's Barracks site

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development (i) whether all of the contractors have been paid, or money reimbursed to the Housing Executive, in accordance with the agreement made in March 2014, for response maintenance work; (ii) whether any disputed amounts have been settled within the 21 day target; and if not (iii) how many are outstanding in Upper Bann.
(AQW 41821/11-15)

Mr Storey: I assume the Member's question relates to the planned maintenance settlement agreement. The Housing Executive has advised as follows: -

(i) The Housing Executive and its four Contractors are working through the Settlement Terms where assessments are being made against financial reconciliations submitted. This involves 191 schemes across the five area contracts and progress has been achieved allowing payments to be made to each of the Contractors. This process is ongoing. Some 51 schemes have yet to be presented to the Housing Executive for assessment. All monies identified in the Settlement have been reimbursed to the Housing Executive.

(ii) Disputed amounts are being considered in accordance with the terms and due to several factors there has been a slippage of the time periods. To date the parties have not involved the need of the Adjudication process to resolve disputes but rather sought a decision from the Housing Executive in the first instance and / or the two experts who provided assistance as part of the agreed settlement.

(iii) There are 37 schemes involved in the South Area, which covers Upper Bann, to be finalised of which eight schemes have still to be presented for consideration. Difficulties have arisen in establishing the entitlements of some elements of claim, although to date some £169k has been processed in favour of Bann Ltd since the 5 August 2014. It is believed that at least six schemes are well advanced and close to agreement with only a small number of elements to be verified.

Meetings have been convened with the parties and their Solicitors and experts to advance the resolution of issues identified by each side. Agreement has been reached as to a way forward on one scheme where the findings of a joint inspection can be adopted for other unresolved schemes and therefore expedite the payment process. This is being monitored on a regular basis.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Social Development how many people are entitled to £26,000 or more in benefits.
(AQW 41822/11-15)

Mr Storey: Pursuant to AQW 40536/11-15, at June/July 2014 it was identified that there were 6,600 working-age households receiving benefits (Social Security Agency benefits[3], Housing Benefit, Child Benefit and Tax Credits) in excess of £26,000 per annum in Northern Ireland.

A household may include a single adult, or a married or cohabiting couple plus any of their dependent children.

The following benefits are not included in this calculation as data is either not held by the Department or is not in a format that can be linked to overall household benefit income: Child Disability Living Allowance, Guardian's Allowance, Widow's Pension, War Widow's or War Widower's Pension, Armed Forces Compensation Scheme, Armed Forces Independence Payment and War Pensions.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the financial support available for low income households to heat their homes.
(AQW 41893/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department offers a range of financial support to assist low income households to heat their homes.

Warm Homes Scheme

The Warm Homes Scheme offers a range of energy efficiency improvement measures to households in receipt of qualifying benefits. The Warm Homes Scheme has been the Department's main fuel poverty scheme since 2001 and is due to end on 31 March 2015.

Affordable Warmth Scheme

The new Affordable Warmth Scheme was launched in September 2014 following two successful pilots conducted over a 2 year period and will replace the Warm Homes Scheme from 1 April 2015. The new Affordable Warmth Scheme will find and assist households with an income of less than £20,000 per year and will improve the energy efficiency of their homes with a range of insulation and heating measures.

Boiler Replacement Scheme

The Boiler Replacement Scheme provides a grant of up to £1,000 to assist householders who earn less than £40,000 per year to replace old inefficient boilers. Since it was launched in 2012 the scheme has funded the installation of over 18,000 new energy efficient boilers.

Cold Weather Payments

Cold Weather Payments will be paid to eligible claimants during periods of exceptionally cold weather in the area where they live. Payments will be made when the average temperature is, or is forecast to be, zero degrees centigrade or below over 7 consecutive days from November to March. This information is supplied to the Social Security Agency by the Met Office based on information from weather stations located across the province. Payments are at the rate of £25 for each 7 day cold weather period and are issued automatically. To qualify for a Cold Weather Payment a person must be receiving:

- State Pension Credit or income-related Employment and Support Allowance that includes a work related activity or support component (main phase) for at least one day in a period of cold weather; or
- Income Support, income-based Jobseeker's Allowance or income-related Employment and Support Allowance (in the assessment phase) for at least one day in a period of cold weather and
- have a dependent child aged under five; or
- have a relevant pensioner or disability premium; or
- Child Tax Credit for a child or qualifying young person who is disabled or severely disabled.

3 The following benefits are not included in this calculation as data is either not held by the Department or is not in a format that can be linked to overall household benefit income: Child Disability Living Allowance, Guardian's Allowance, Widow's Pension, War Widow's or War Widower's Pension, Armed Forces Compensation Scheme, Armed Forces Independence Payment and War Pensions.

Winter Fuel Payment

In addition, the Social Security Agency in line with previous years is operating a Winter Fuel Payment scheme for winter 2014/15. A Winter Fuel Payment is a lump sum payment to provide support for older people to be able to meet the costs of their heating bills. Winter Fuel Payments are paid to all eligible people born on or before 5 July 1952 and you do not need to be claiming benefits to qualify for this extra money.

Winter Fuel Payments are £200 for those households with someone over women's state pension age but under age 80, and £300 for those households with someone aged 80 or over. If there is more than one eligible claimant in the household the payment is split between them.

Benefit Uptake Programme

As part of its 2014/15 Benefit Uptake Programme, the Social Security Agency is writing directly to 25,000 existing customers who may have additional benefit entitlement to offer them a full and confidential assessment. This assessment, provided by the Independent Advice Sector partner, Advice NI, will explore potential entitlement to all social security benefits. It will also provide advice about Housing Benefit, Rates Relief and the Warm Homes Scheme.

Make the Call Campaign

The Department for Social Development's 'Make the Call' campaign, which aims to ensure people are getting all the money they are entitled to, encourages people to call the Benefits Advice Line where experienced advisors assess their entitlement to benefits, services and other government supports. The advisor can also provide help and assistance with making a claim and a visit from a Community Outreach Officer can be arranged if required. The Benefits Advice Line can be reached on 0800 232 1271. A province-wide advertising campaign using television, press and outdoor locations, has been running during the 2014/15 Benefit Uptake programme. The aim of the campaign is to encourage people across Northern Ireland to check if there is additional benefit to which they may be entitled.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Social Development how many people receive more than £26,000 in benefits; and to detail the total sums involved.
(AQW 41898/11-15)

Mr Storey: At June/July 2014, it was identified that there were 6,600 working-age households receiving benefits (Social Security Agency benefits[4], Housing Benefit, Child Benefit and Tax Credits) in excess of £26,000 per annum in Northern Ireland.

A household may include a single adult, or a married or cohabiting couple plus any of their dependent children.

The total annual benefits being paid to these 6,600 households is estimated to be £203,500,000 (rounded to the nearest £100,000). The average annual benefit received by these households is estimated to be £30,700 (rounded to the nearest £100).

The information provided is an Official Statistic. The Production and dissemination of all such Statistics is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by the UK Statistics Authority.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Social Development when the criteria for the new proposed Hardship Top up Fund will be published.
(AQW 41942/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department is continuing to develop proposals for providing additional financial support to claimants that will be adversely impacted by the Welfare Reforms. I am determined to ensure the best possible outcome for all affected claimants and this is a necessarily complex process.

While considerable progress has been made to date it is not yet possible to confirm when the eligibility criteria will be available for publication. However, I can provide an assurance that, following agreement with Executive colleagues, the criteria will be issued for public consultation.

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Social Development how many households receive more than (i) £24,000; and (ii) £25,000 in benefits per annum.
(AQW 41981/11-15)

Mr Storey: At June/July 2014 it was identified that there were:

(i) 9,900 working-age households receiving benefits (Social Security Agency benefits[4], Housing Benefit, Child Benefit and Tax Credits) in excess of £24,000 per annum in Northern Ireland and;

(ii) 8,100 working-age households receiving benefits (Social Security Agency benefits[4], Housing Benefit, Child Benefit and Tax Credits) in excess of £25,000 per annum in Northern Ireland.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Social Development who will administer the Top up Fund.
(AQW 42091/11-15)

Mr Storey: The administrative arrangements that will be necessary for the effective delivery of the additional financial support are currently being developed. However, the current assumption is that the Department for Social Development will have responsibility for this scheme.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Mr Givan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for their assessment of the Equality Commission's legal action against Ashers Bakery.
(AQO 7109/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): The Equality Commission for Northern Ireland is an executive non departmental public body sponsored by the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister and, as such, is independent from Government and Ministers in respect of its operation.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when an enhanced good relations section of the Equality Impact Assessment for all government policy was introduced as per the Together: Building a United Community commitment set out in May 2013.
(AQW 39990/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Together: Building a United Community (T:BUC) strategy includes a commitment to establish an Equality and Good Relations Commission that will act as an independent, statutorily-based organisation to provide policy advice and a challenge to Government. One of the stated objectives of the proposed Equality and Good Relations Commission is the development of an augmented impact assessment that will assess the extent to which public authorities contribute to the delivery of the strategy's overarching good relations objectives.

It is envisaged that the commission will be underpinned by primary legislation. The draft legislation is currently under active consideration in the Department.

Concurrently, departmental officials intend to work with both the Equality Commission and the Community Relations Council to consider the extent to which the aims and objectives of the T:BUC strategy can be delivered by these respective organisations within their existing vires.

Officials are also working with other departments and key stakeholders, including District Councils to ensure that the strategy's aims and objectives are embedded in policy delivery.

Mr Agnew asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what steps they are taking to remove Article 71 of the Fair Employment and Treatment (Northern Ireland) Order 1998.
(AQW 40555/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Department of Education has policy responsibility for this issue and, therefore, proposals to amend or repeal the exception to the Fair Employment and Treatment Order 1978 should be initiated by the Department of Education.

As our Department has legislative responsibility for the Fair Employment and Treatment Order, if a change to the current policy position were agreed by the Executive, following proposals from the Department of Education, OFMDFM would bring forward the proposed changes to the legislation.

Ms Boyle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what funding streams are available within their Department for sports groups to apply for in 2015.
(AQW 40648/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Department provides support through a range of funding programmes. Sports groups may apply to these where their applications meet the specific criteria for the schemes.

For 2014/15, sports groups whose applications meet the criteria, may apply for small grants of up to £500 through the Central Good Relations Fund.

All other sports related funding streams for 2014/15 are now fully committed.

Now that the 2015/16 budget has been agreed by the Executive, the Department will be able to finalise funding allocations for the new financial year and will make further announcements on funding opportunities in due course.

Mr Rogers asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail any meetings they attended at which the Narrow Water Bridge project was discussed in 2014; and to detail the positive decisions made on the subject during these discussions.
(AQW 40751/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We attended meetings of the North South Ministerial Council in Institutional format on 10 January 2014 and Plenary format on 5 December 2014 where the Narrow Water Bridge project was discussed.

At those meetings both jurisdictions indicated that they remain supportive of the concept of a bridge at Narrow Water subject to the availability of funding for the project.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 38521/11-15, to detail the outcome of meetings with the local community association in Ballykelly.
(AQW 40853/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Meetings between officials and the local community association in Ballykelly have been positive, and discussions have taken place regarding the community benefits which could be derived from the future development of the Shackleton site.

Any plans for the future development of the site will be expected to demonstrate how community needs have been identified and will be met.

Ms Lo asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQO 7333/11-15, on what basis they are seeking to widen the pool of candidates when two candidates were deemed suitable for appointment in October 2014 following a rigorous recruitment process.
(AQW 40975/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We have not indicated how many candidates were deemed suitable but as the First Minister said in response to a question during Question Time on Monday 19 January, the previous competition to appoint a new Commissioner for Victims and Survivors produced a disappointingly small pool of appointable candidates. It is on this basis that we are seeking to widen the pool through a new competition.

However, the candidates from the previous competition will remain on the deemed appointable list.

We would once again assure you that we remain committed to ensuring all victims and survivors have an appropriate representative voice through their Commissioner and, as such wish to ensure that we have the right person for the job.

Mr McMullan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister who can apply for funding from the Play and Leisure Programme; and to detail the criteria that must be met.
(AQW 41158/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Play and Leisure Signature Programme is the seventh Delivering Social Change signature programme and is expected to support new play and leisure opportunities for children and young people. It is proposed that the signature programme will support new sustainable opportunities for play; raise awareness of the importance of play and ensure play is considered in the provision of local services.

The programme is not open to applications for funding. Details of the scheme will be outlined in due course.

Mr Lunn asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the cross-community sports programme of Together: Building a United Community; and to detail their Department's definition of "significant".
(AQW 41417/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The purpose of the cross-community sports programme is to use sport in a central role to break down divisions in society and deliver a detailed good relations programme through the medium of sport with the emphasis on tackling sectarianism, racism and improving good relations.

The Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure launched a pilot project on 5 January 2015 which will run to 31 March 2015. This pilot will involve young people engaging in a range of sporting and creative activities with a strong good relations focus. The areas of Lower Falls and the Greater Village have been identified as the two Action Zones for the pilot project.

The cross community youth sports programme is designed to build the capacity in these communities to ensure community led, community owned projects.

The programme will seek to promote employability prospects, health messages and core values to young people. Young Leaders from the programme will be drawn from the various communities to participate in the delivery of the programme and build community cohesion and long term sustainability in the community, local sports clubs and governing bodies.

As it rolls out, this will be a significant programme in engaging young people in terms of its reach geographically and in terms of inclusion and access, in particular to young women, young people with disabilities and those from a minority ethnic background.

Mr Spratt asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how the Urban Village project will be facilitated in Sandy Row.
(AQW 41514/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Junior Ministers announced on 21 January 2015 that the areas of the Markets/ Donegall Pass/Sandy Row in South Belfast and Bogside/Fountain in Derry/Londonderry have been identified as the next locations to benefit from the Urban Villages Programme, as committed to within Together: Building a United Community.

The next step in the process will be to establish a project team for each of the new Urban Village areas to engage and work with the community in these areas to determine the boundaries of the urban villages, assess what is needed and develop priorities for each of the areas.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to provide further details on the North West Executive sub-group; and to define the geographical remit of the North West.
(AQW 41549/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Executive Sub-Group is on Regional Opportunities not just the North West. It will consider the economic needs of regions and the potential for further investment to overcome obstacles to growth and prosperity. We will be co-chairs of the sub-group which will also include the Minister for Employment and Learning, the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, the Minister of the Environment, and the Minister for Regional Development. While focusing initially on the North West, it will in due course examine other regions with identified economic needs.

Mr McGimpsey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister if they have had any recent discussions with the Northern Ireland Office about the proposals to reduce the number of MLAs.
(AQO 7450/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The first quarterly review meeting of the Stormont House Agreement took place on Friday 30 January 2015. We discussed progress on all aspects of the Agreement with the Secretary of State, including the provision that the number of Assembly members should be reduced in time for the 2021 election.

The meeting noted that Executive Party Leaders have established a sub-group to consider this, and a number of the other institutional issues contained in the Agreement.

Mr Wilson asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what departmental arrangements are in place to monitor the implementation of the Stormont House Agreement.
(AQO 7453/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: A commitment to effective implementation and to active review and monitoring is an intrinsic part of the Stormont House Agreement.

An Implementation Plan has been drawn up by the Head of the Civil Service and agreed by the Executive Party Leaders Group. This allocates responsibility to the relevant department for each of the commitments in the Agreement and sets out a projected timeline for their implementation. The Plan will be updated regularly and progress will be reviewed at the weekly meetings of the Party Leaders. The Agreement also provides for quarterly review meetings between the Party Leaders and the UK and Irish Governments. The first meeting took place on Friday, 30 January.

A number of these commitments falls specifically to our department, particularly in relation to the establishment of a Commission on Flags, Identity, Culture and Tradition; support for victims; institutional reform; and civic engagement. Our officials are already working on all of these issues in accordance with the work plans and timescales set out in the agreed Implementation Plan.

Mr Dickson asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the implementation of those aspects of the Stormont House Agreement that are within their remit.
(AQO 7454/11-15)

Mr Kinahan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what steps are being taken to promote racial equality.
(AQO 7459/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Racial equality remains a key goal for the Executive.

Central to this are the Racial Equality Strategy and the Minority Ethnic Development Fund.

We recently completed a public consultation exercise to ensure our revised Racial Equality Strategy is relevant to current need and reflective of the aspirations of our minority ethnic population. Officials are currently analysing the responses to the consultation and these will inform the new Strategy.

We are pleased to confirm that, despite the financial pressures that currently exist, the Minority Ethnic Development Fund remains at £1.1m for the 2015/16 financial year. We shall be making a public announcement inviting applications soon.

We also remain committed to the elimination of all hate crime and continue to support the work of Unite Against Hate.

We are supporting a range of actions to counter the attitudes that give rise to racism and race hate attacks. Unite Against Hate has been taking forward valuable work to highlight that this is a welcoming place and to challenge the myths that circulate.

Mrs Cochrane asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what consideration they are giving to the allocation of Junior Ministerial posts as part of the review and reduction of Executive Departments.
(AQO 7460/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The number and functions of Junior Ministers will be kept under review in light of the future reduction in the number of Departments and our ongoing assessment of changing needs and priorities.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when the Ageing Strategy is expected to be published.
(AQW 41764/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Active Ageing Strategy is currently being finalised and, subject to Committee consideration and Executive approval, will be published in due course.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the Rural Development Programme 2014-2020.
(AQW 41624/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): The draft Rural Development Programme 2014-2020 was formally submitted to the European Commission on 14th October 2014. We are currently waiting for the Commission's response on the content of the draft Programme.

Because of a backlog in approving Programmes across Europe, the European Commission have advised that the earliest possible date for approval of our Programme is likely to be June 2015 and not April as originally planned.

While any delay in the approval process of the RDP is disappointing, it will not affect the continuing work by my officials in obtaining the necessary business case approvals and in developing the schemes for opening. We will continue to work to open the schemes as early as possible once all the necessary approvals are in place.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how her Department and its agencies have helped in the efforts to find Kieran McAree in Enniskillen.
(AQW 41654/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Rivers Agency has co-operated with and provided assistance to the PSNI in the search for Kieran McAree by operating the Lock Gates at Portora and controlling water levels in Lough Erne.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what was done with the timber which was felled following the clearance of large sections of trees in a number of forests in the Craigantlet Hills, Holywood over the last number of months.
(AQW 41667/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Forest Service has contract supply arrangements in place with licensed timber processors to allow for the removal and industrial processing of timber arising from areas which have been felled to control the spread of tree disease at Ballysallagh forest in the Craigantlet Hills.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the councils that have banned circuses that use wild animals from using council property.
(AQW 41753/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Each Council is autonomous and adopts its own policy on any issue, including banning circuses that use wild animals from Council property.

My Department does not collate or retain information relating to Councils' operational policies for circuses.

I would suggest that this information is sought directly from Councils.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 39235/11-15, when the scoping study will be completed and progressed.
(AQW 41814/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The scoping study has been commissioned by Fermanagh District Council. As such, timescales and proposals associated with the study are a matter for the council. My officials in Forest Service have provided information and access to Lough Navar forest to facilitate this exercise and will continue to liaise closely with the council on any proposals they develop resulting from the scoping study.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of organic farming in Northern Ireland; and what support is available from her Department.

Mrs O'Neill: There is currently around 9,000ha of land within the north that is certified organic. This represents approximately 0.9% of the total area of agricultural land.

Higher commodity prices in recent years have resulted in limited premiums at the farm gate for organic produce. This has led to a reduction in the number of organic producers from 224 in 2006 to currently some 150.

Overall, because of the weak market, there has been limited opportunity to expand the sector. Therefore, any further development is likely to be into supplying niche markets. My Department will continue to work with the sector, listen to market signals, and help the sector develop in areas where there are opportunities.

Under the Rural Development Programme 2007-2013 my Department provided financial support to 39 farmers through the Organic Farming Scheme for conversion to organic production. It also provided an organic maintenance payment to 10 farmers through the Organic Management Option within the NI Countryside Management Scheme.

Furthermore, ongoing technical advice and training courses on growing organic produce are available through CAFRE's Development Advisers and Technologists. There is a fully operational organic farm at Greenmount College, which farmers can visit to learn more about best practice in organic production methods. DARD Supply Chain Advisers can also provide supply chain and marketing advice.

My Department also offers a wide range of support through various other schemes, which are open to all farmers, including organic farmers.

My officials are currently reviewing what support for the maintenance of organic production may be possible under the new Rural Development Programme 2014-2020.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the departmental and arm's-length body buildings that are equipped with defibrillators; and how many staff in each of these buildings are trained in (i) the use of defibrillators; and (ii) C.P.R.
(AQW 41844/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: A total of 5 buildings are equipped with defibrillators. The table below outlines those buildings and the number of DARD staff trained in the use of (i) defibrillators and (ii) CPR.

	Number of Staff Trained
Building	Defibrillators	CPR
Castleton House, Mallusk	1 (private sector owned)	2
Dundonald House, Stormont	1 (DOJ owned)	15
Enniskillen Campus, Enniskillen	18	21
Loughs Agency (Prehen, Derry & Carlingford)	6	31
Greenmount Campus, Antrim	29	63
Loughry Campus, Cookstown	19	21

In addition there are a further 9 staff trained in the use of a defibrillator (in buildings not equipped with a defibrillator) and 296 staff trained in CPR across the rest of the Department and Arms Length bodies.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she will extend the legislation to ban hunting of wild animals with dogs to Northern Ireland.
(AQW 42207/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department has no powers to regulate, or ban, hunting or coursing with dogs. Hunting is not regarded as an agricultural activity. It is not exclusively carried out on agricultural land and the fox is not regarded as an agricultural animal. DARD has responsibility for the Welfare of Animals Act 2011 (the 2011 Act), but its responsibilities towards animals in the wild are very limited and do not include any controls over the hunting, or taking, of wild animals and birds, or powers of entry for their protection.

Section 53 of the 2011 Act specifically exempts from its provisions the coursing or hunting of any animal, other than a protected animal, except under certain circumstances such as the animal being released in an injured state or into a confined space from which it has no reasonable chance of escape.

As the hunting issue cuts across the responsibilities of two or more Ministers any introduction of legislation to ban hunting with dogs is a matter for the Executive.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how her Department will help secure the future of POBAL.
(AQW 40255/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): The review of core funding recommended new service delivery arrangements to support 6 lead organisations delivering specified services on an all island basis to meet the needs of the language.

Following an open competitive selection process Conradh na Gaeilge was appointed as the lead organisation for language awareness raising; language protection and representation. The new arrangements took effect from 20th July 2014.

Foras na Gaeilge engaged a Change Management Consultant to work with those organisations whose funding would cease. The role of the Change Management Consultant was to assist the organisations in identifying and exploring other funding options or to develop an exit strategy. POBAL did engage, albeit to a limited extent, with the Change Management Consultant.

I would encourage Pobal to discuss with Foras na Gaeilge and also with Conradh na Gaeilge, the Lead Organisation for Awareness Raising, Language Protection and Representation, opportunities for collaboration and funding.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how much funding has been given to Cricket Ireland and spent in Northern Ireland, through the Northern Cricket Union and North West Cricket Union, over the last five years.
(AQW 41881/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: In the last five years up to March 2014, Sport NI, an arms length body of my Department, has allocated a total of £1,249,589 in funding to Cricket Ireland to develop the sport of cricket solely in the north of Ireland.

This funding includes £30,000 awarded in 2010, from Sport NI's Sports Matters Capital and Equipment Programme to Cricket Ireland, towards the development of a two lane outdoor net facility and purchasing of performance analysis equipment. This was for the development of a Centre of Excellence in the North West Cricket Union area.

In addition, a further £30,000 was awarded in 2010, to the Instonians Sports Club for the development of a 2 lane outdoor net facility and purchasing of performance analysis equipment, for the development of a Centre of Excellence in the Northern Cricket Union area.

The remaining funding has been provided to Cricket Ireland to develop performance within the sport, including the Northern Cricket Union and North West Cricket Union areas. Examples include the provision of £582,237 through its Investing in Performance Sport Programme between 2009 and 2013; £150,000 through its Athlete Investment Programme from 2013 – 2015; and £373,352 through its PerformanceFocus Programme from 2013 – 2015.

In February 2015, Sport NI advised Cricket Ireland that it intends to provide a total of £366,524 over 4 years through the Active Clubs programme to recruit two Active Club Coordinators who will be based in the Northern Cricket Union and North West Cricket Union respectively.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to detail the planned funding allocations by her Department for stadia redevelopment; and for an update on the expenditure to date.
(AQW 41943/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: DCAL was allocated £110 million by the Executive to deliver the stadia projects. In terms of executive funding: £31m has been made available to the IFA for the redevelopment of Windsor Park; £62.5 million has been made available to the Ulster Council of the GAA to build a new stadium at Casement Park; and £16.5 million has been made available to the Ulster Branch of the IRFU to redevelop the Kingspan Stadium.

As of 31st March 2014 total spend across the programme was circa £20.4 million. In terms of spend to 31st March 2014: £1.9 million has been spent on the Windsor Park project; £5.1 million has been spent on the Casement Park project; and £13.4 million has been spent on the Kingspan Stadium project.

The current spend forecast for 2014/15 is circa £21.9 million. In terms of 2014/15 spend forecast: £17.2 million spend is forecast for Windsor Park; £1.6 million spend is forecast for Casement Park; and £3.0 million spend is forecast for the Kingspan Stadium.

With regards to the 2015/16 spend, circa £11.8 million is anticipated to bring the Windsor Park project to completion. The Kingspan Stadium project will be completed in 2014/15 therefore no spend is forecast in 2015/16. Anticipated spend on the Casement Park project during 2015/16 and beyond is currently under review and will be linked to the new project schedule which is currently being developed.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for her assessment of the level of funding that has been provided by SportNI to angling in recent years.
(AQW 42008/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Good progress continues to be made by Sport NI in respect of the support it is providing to angling overall.

In addition to the financial investment provided, Sport NI is working closely with the Ulster Angling Federation (UAF), the representative body for game angling clubs in the North, to develop the sport on a practical level including the current work to appoint an angling development officer. The detail of this support is outlined below.

In the last five years up to March 2014, Sport NI provided a total of £78,749 grant funding to angling groups as follows:

Year	Organisation	Project Summary	Amount
2011/12	Ulster Angling Federation Ltd	Governance Improvement Programme	£3,750
2013/14	Ulster Coarse Fishing Federation	Coaching development	£1,700
2014/15	Ulster Angling Federation Ltd	Coaching development	£5,200
2014/16	Ulster Angling Federation Ltd	Active clubs co-ordinator post	£54,699
2014/15	Ulster Coarse Fishing Federation	Coaching development	£3,400
2014/15	Loughmacrory and Murrins District Angling Association	Active Awards for Sport small grants	£10,000
		Total	£78,749

Sport NI also undertook a Strategic Review of Angling and invested £14,000 towards the total cost of £228,325. As part of the recommendations identified in this Strategy, the UAF received funding of £4,900 towards angling training. Sport NI also provides practical advice and financial support to the UAF on a range of angling related development programmes.

Furthermore, Sport NI has invested £6,565 in the first angling conference in the north of Ireland in June 2014 with over 70 delegates attending. This conference was a direct result of the recommendations from the Review.

Sport NI has approved the investment of up to £190,000 in the UAF through its 'Active Clubs' programme. Included in this amount is funding for the provision of an angling development officer to work on behalf of the UAF, the Ulster Coarse Fishing Federation and other angling representative bodies to develop the sport. The recruitment process for this post is currently underway.

In addition, in the 2013/14 financial year, Sport NI provided funding of £27,000 to Families at the Waterworks Fishing Club for the provision of an additional boat and engine for the use of their members with disabilities and for the supply of a new engine for their existing boat.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how her Department intends to develop the angling sector in Co. Fermanagh.
(AQW 42009/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department has been consulting recently with stakeholders in Co. Fermanagh and beyond regarding the development of a Fisheries Management Plan for the Lough Erne catchment.

The Plan will consider a range of issues including the status and interrelationships of fish stocks in the Lough and the how all sectors of angling may be sustained and developed for the social and economic benefit of the region.

The Plan will be a vital factor in informing my Department's future policies and priorities on the Lough Erne fisheries

Officials have also been liaising with Fermanagh District Council, which, in conjunction with Omagh District Council, is developing an angling strategy for the new council area. This will have a focus on the development of the angling product in the region through improved facilities, targeted promotion and strong stakeholder partnerships to increase participation in the sport from the range of local interests and tourist anglers.

My Department is also working with closely with Fermanagh District Council and other partners to organise, promote and deliver a number of high profile angling competitions, including the 2015 Classic Fishing Festival. These play an important role in promoting Fermanagh as a world class angling venue and provide a welcome boost to the local economy.

My Inland Fisheries staff in the South West operational area continue to deliver infrastructure improvements, including access paths, fishing stands and facilities for disabled anglers, at Public Angling Estate Waters across Fermanagh. They have also been involved in the delivery of a number of angling taster events for young people, women and those with disabilities.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how much annual funding her Department provides to Belfast Zoo.
(AQW 42062/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department does not provide annual funding to the Belfast Zoo.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what was the operating cost of the Ministerial car in each of the last three financial years.
(AQW 42139/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The operating cost of the Ministerial car (including maintenance costs and fuel costs) in each of the last three financial years is as follows-

Year	Car operating costs
2011-2012	£2,629.10
2012-2013	£2,166.40
2013-2014	£2,775.25

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether her Department has any plans to implement further accessibility for wheelchair and motorised wheelchair access in the development of Windsor Park.
(AQW 42191/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Regional Stadium Programme will integrate an exemplar standard for inclusive design on all new-build elements of the 3 projects at Ravenhill Park, Windsor Park and Casement Park based on all current statutory requirements and legislation.

We have also worked closely and incorporated recent draft guidance developed by Disability Sport NI (DSNI) in conjunction with DCAL and the new Inclusive Stadia Advisory Group which includes representatives of all NI key disability agencies (ISAG also includes DCAL).

The guidance incorporates and in some cases exceeds current best practice and is an important element within the programme.

Windsor Park includes existing facilities which will be refurbished and DCAL will make best endeavours to raise the standard of access to services in these areas within the constraints of the programme.

Based on the proposed new 18,000 capacity stadium, current guidance provides 140 wheelchair viewing spaces are required at the redeveloped Windsor Park.

I understand at present 159 wheelchair viewing spaces are proposed within the current design. This exceeds the capacity requirement.

To summarise there will be significant provision in relation to accessibility and comfort for spectators of all abilities within the completed Windsor Park, these will include (but are not limited to):

- Provision of 159 wheelchair spaces dispersed throughout the venue in order to provide a range of viewing options;
- Installation of accessible lifts to provide access to wheelchair viewing spaces on the upper floors in the stands;

Further general accessibility factors such as Induction Loops and Guide Dog spending areas have also been incorporated.

Department of Education

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education how he will ensure the Committee for Education are given sufficient opportunity to properly scrutinise his draft budget for 2015/16.
(AQW 39214/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): Since the publication of the Draft Budget 2015-16 by the Finance Minister on 3 November 2014, I worked with my officials to establish the full extent of the Department's inescapable pressures and identify potential areas for reductions.

You will be aware that the Department of Education's 2015-16 Draft Budget was published on 26 November 2014. This document set out my draft budget allocation and reduction proposals and was open for public consultation until 29 December 2014.

My officials met with the Education Committee on 3 December 2014 to provide the opportunity to discuss these draft proposals and to highlight the key issues and challenges that these proposals present for Education.

Following Executive agreement of the Final Budget 2015-16 I am currently finalising my spending plans for next year and hope to announce these in the near future. In recognition of the important and integral role that the Education Committee can play in shaping the education budget I, and my officials, are happy to address any questions the Committee may have in regard to the 2015-16 Budget process at the upcoming briefing on 4 March 2015.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education how many teachers are currently involved in collective agreements and have yet to find suitable new teaching positions, broken down by Education and Library Board.
(AQW 41720/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number of teachers currently involved in collective agreements[5] and yet to find suitable new teaching positions is detailed in the table below. Please note that the figures for CCMS have been broken down by Education and Library Board area and incorporated into the overall figures.

The symbol # indicates that due to the small numbers involved suppression would be required to prevent the identification of an individual.

This guidance is in accordance with the confidentiality principle of the Statistics Authority's Code of Practice on Official Statistics.

While the 2014/15 school census took place on the 10th October 2014, finalised figures for SEN will not be available until late February 2015.

The above figures include all children, in all school settings, at all stages of the Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs.

5 The School Reorganisation Agreement (TNC 2013/2) sets out the arrangements for the transfer of teaching staff following any reorganisation of school provision in an area and was drawn up by Employing Authorities and recognised teachers' unions on 6 June 2013. This circular supersedes TNC Circular 2007/3 (Collective Agreement).

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education what arrangements exist for insuring teachers who qualify to teach in Great Britain, but wish to work in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 41752/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: You have clarified that this question relates to the indemnification of student teachers enrolled on teacher education courses in institutions outside this jurisdiction, who wish to carry out the school placement element of their course locally.

Ensuring adequate insurance cover for students on teacher education courses is the responsibility of the providing institution and is not a matter in which the Department can intervene.

The Department is aware that some universities in Britain are prepared to provide an indemnity agreement for local placements, which places a certain transfer of risk/insurance cover to the university should the student-teacher cause injury to persons or damage to property; however other providers do not offer such an arrangement.

I am sure you will appreciate that it is not possible for schools here to facilitate placements in the absence of adequate insurance cover.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the number of teachers currently suspended in each Education and Library Board; (ii) the length of the suspensions; and (iii) all costs relating to salaries and employer's contributions to pensions and National Insurance Contributions.
(AQW 41754/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Details of (i) the number of teachers currently suspended in each Education and Library Board (ELB); (ii) the length of the suspensions and; (iii) all costs relation to salaries and employer's contributions to pension and National Insurance contributions are shown in the table below.

Across the ELBs	Period of Suspension	Cost including employers contributions to pensions & National Insurance
11*	Varies according to the individual	£943,648.74

* This is the total figure for the ELBs as due to the small numbers involved in each ELB a high level of suppression would be required to prevent the identification of an individual.

 The length of suspension for each individual has not been given, as to do so may assist identifying them. This is in accordance with the confidentiality principle of the Statistics Authority's Code of Practice on Official Statistics.

Please note these figures only include the controlled schools within the respective ELBs. They do not include schools under the remit of the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools, Voluntary Grammar Schools, Grant Maintained Integrated Schools and other Maintained Schools.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of professional development opportunities currently available for youth work staff.
(AQW 41765/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The professional development of youth work staff is an operational matter for the Education and Library Boards and the Youth Council. All of the Boards and the Youth Council have an ongoing commitment to support the professional development of staff.

Mr Newton asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to question AQW 40995/11-15, to detail the planned investment in outdoor play areas in schools for pupils with special needs within the Belfast area over the next three years.
(AQW 41831/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Belfast Education and Library Board (BELB) and the South Eastern Education and Library Board (SEELB), who have responsibility for Special Schools in the Belfast area, have advised that the process of setting a programme for capital minor works, which would include outdoor play areas, over the next three years has not yet concluded. Decisions will be dependent on the extent of the allocated budget over this period which has still to be determined.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the Aiming High Programme in England; and whether he would consider a similar programme in order to transform services for children with a disability in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 41880/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Aiming High for Disabled Children: Better Support for Families Report, published in 2007, tries to address the needs of disabled children and their families specifically within the English system. The report spans the responsibilities of a number of government departments and local government bodies.

In relation to my responsibilities for supporting the education of pupils with a disability here, I am content that an inclusive environment is promoted in all school settings to ensure that all pupils are valued. The learning needs of a pupil with special educational needs and a disability are addressed through the special educational needs framework and discrimination against pupils on the grounds of disability is prohibited within the Special Educational Needs and Disability (NI) Order 2005 (SENDO). School buildings are also required to be disability compliant as part of SENDO.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education how many staff are employed in the Irish Medium section of the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment.
(AQW 41883/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am advised by CCEA that the number of staff employed in its Irish Medium section at 9 February 2015 is 16.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education to outline the role of the Irish Medium section of the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment in relation to non-Irish Medium schools.
(AQW 41884/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am advised by CCEA that the Irish Medium team sits within CCEA's Curriculum, Assessment and Reporting (CAR) Unit. Its main remit, as defined within CCEA's costed work programme, is to address elements of the Review of Irish-Medium Education Report (2009).

The Irish Medium team also contributes to the broad remit of the CAR Unit to provide guidance, support, resources and training for teachers in the north of Ireland in relation to the implementation of the Curriculum and its Assessment and Reporting arrangements.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the number of primary schools that were sent a letter dated 28 January 2015 from the Irish Medium Programme Manager of the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment seeking expressions of interest in the development of the teaching of the Irish language; (ii) how many of these were controlled schools; and (iii) how many of the controlled schools were integrated schools.

(AQW 41887/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Letters were sent to 837 primary schools. Of these, 387 were controlled schools and of these, 19 were controlled integrated schools.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Education whether he (i) carried out an Equality Impact Assessment on his proposal to support the teaching of the Irish language in non-Irish Medium Schools; and (ii) considered the human rights implications of this project, particularly in regard to the right of non-assimilation.
(AQW 41888/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department did not screen this proposal in terms of equality or human rights legislation and does not consider that this proposal would adversely impact upon anyone either from a Section 75 or Human Rights perspective.

The letter which issued was intended to be as inclusive as possible and hence was issued to all primary schools. It sought responses from schools expressing an interest; a nil response was not required. Participation in any programme arising from the initial consultation will remain purely voluntary for schools i.e. at all stages the choice to participate remains with schools.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the training provided to teachers and classroom assistants to deal with homophobic bulling in schools; and (ii) what steps he has taken to improve the current training provision.
(AQW 41891/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Bullying, for whatever reason and in whatever form, is unacceptable. Tackling bullying is a complex challenge, in which the training of teachers is just one of many necessary responses.

All initial teacher training programmes delivered locally will include training on bullying and many specifically draw on homophobic bullying as a learning example or case study.

In-service teacher training is provided by the Education and Library Boards and focuses on the needs of all children and young people, and is supplemented with school-based advice, on-going telephone guidance, support in relation to specific anti-bullying issues and advice on the content of a school's anti-bullying policy. Priority issues for general in-service training are set annually by the Boards drawing on needs identified by their schools.

My Department funds and is a member of the local Anti Bullying Forum. The Forum promotes an anti-bullying culture in schools and offers training and advice to schools on current best-practice in this area. It also provides awareness raising activities for pupils, highlighting the different forms bullying can take and pointing them towards sources of help and support if they are experiencing bullying. The Forum has produced a resource pack called "Effective Responses to Bullying Behaviour" and this has been distributed to every school in the North.

Whilst much of the training provided to teachers and classroom assistants is generic, if a school needs support with specific types of bullying, such as homophobic bullying, both the Education and Library Boards and the Anti-Bullying Forum can signpost them to resources or agencies with specific expertise in that area.

At my request, in late 2013, the Anti-Bullying Forum undertook a review of current anti-bullying provision and practices in our schools. One of the recommendations of that review was that we needed to strengthen our current legislation; and that is one of the drivers behind my Department's current public consultation on new Anti-Bullying legislation and my commitment to legislate for this during the current Assembly mandate.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Education why Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment gave school principals a few days to respond to the letters dated 28 January 2015 with the result that they could not consult with Boards of Governors before responding.
(AQW 41900/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: It is routine practice within CCEA's Curriculum, Assessment and Reporting Team to give similar periods of notice for initial responses in terms of expressions of interest. The deadline was given as 6 February 2015 to ensure that schools which had expressed an initial interest in talking to CCEA, could be given as much notice as possible to arrange dates for appointments or cluster meetings to discuss their views prior to any proposal being made to the Department by the end of March 2015.

It is reasonable that any school introducing a voluntary programme should consult as required with their Board of Governors and parents prior to its implementation. However, as outlined in the letter, schools were not asked to express an interest in participating in a programme, but to express an interest in participating in initial consultation discussions which could help inform and shape such a programme.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) when; and (ii) how the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment was first asked to explore and develop an initiative to teach the Irish language in non-Irish Medium primary schools.
(AQW 41902/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In February 2012, my Department asked the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment (CCEA), to consider this proposal and to determine how best to proceed. After a further meeting in March 2012, the Department commissioned CCEA in September 2012, to undertake a feasibility study into the scale of need. This work was carried out by CCEA's Research and Statistics Team in November / December 2012 and the report submitted to the Department in early 2013.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 40342/11-15, what are the significant changes since 2007; and whether he plans to commission any new research.
(AQW 41915/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Significant changes to educational structures and policies since the publication of the Deloitte 'Cost of the Divide' report include the implementation of a new Curriculum (from 2007) that includes key elements of mutual understanding, cultural understanding and citizenship; replacement of the Community Relations funding schemes by the Community Relations, Equality and Diversity in Education policy (March 2011) and subsequent reduction in earmarked funding to £1.1m per annum up to March 2015; the introduction of the Entitlement Framework (Sept 2013) and Shared Education (2014) leading to increased collaboration between schools; introduction of a Sustainable Schools policy (January 2009) and implementation of Area Planning (from 2012) both of which are aimed at reducing the schools estate; the introduction of legislation to establish the new Education Authority from April 2015; and a more collaboration approach in relation to teacher education, for example the CREDIT programme which was a collaboration between St Mary's and Stranmillis University Colleges.

The 'Cost of the Divide' research was commissioned by OFMdFM. I have no plans to commission new research in relation to education.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Education to detail all support provided by his Department and its arm's-length bodies to Fóram na nÓg.
(AQW 41962/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Since 2009, the Youth Council for (YCNI) has awarded circa £20k to Comhairle na Gaelscolaíochta (CnaG) per annum to contribute towards the implementation of Recommendation 18 of the Review of Irish Medium Education. Following a regional assessment of need of Irish medium for 2014-15, the YCNI allocated £40k to CnaG.

To date, CnaG have used this funding to support the development of a regional voluntary platform, Fóram na nÓg, to help coordinate the development of local groups delivering youth work through the medium of Irish.

CnaG also provides some administrative assistance to support the youth development officer in Fóram na nóg in terms of office space; telephone, payroll and supervision of employee.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Education to detail (i) the cost of producing the recent education works advertisements; (ii) the cost of producing an Irish language version; (iii) whether he intends to produce a further advertisement in minority languages; and (iv) what research was undertaken to ascertain the number of people who would not understand an English language version only.
(AQW 41966/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The 'Education Works' campaign aims to raise the value we, as a society, place on education.

This is a multi-media campaign comprising television, radio, outdoor posters, local press and various online sites. It is being taken forward in English and in Irish in keeping with the Department of Education's statutory duty to encourage and facilitate Irish-medium education.

Whilst production costs are commercially sensitive, the overall cost of the advertising campaign in its entirety is £139,520. The total campaign media spend for the Irish language element of the Education Works campaign was £6,784.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education how often Special Education Needs inspections are carried out in mainstream post-primary schools in the Southern Education and Library Board.
(AQW 41968/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Training Inspectorate inspect special education needs as part of all mainstream post-primary inspections in the Southern Education and Library Board. By the end of the current academic year almost all post-primary schools in the SELB (94%) will have been inspected within seven years of their last inspection (or follow-up inspection).

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Education what actions his Department has taken in recent years to (i) identify; and (ii) tackle educational inequalities.
(AQW 41969/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department's evidence, based on a census of all schools/pupils , confirms that social deprivation, as measured by Free School Meals, is strongly correlated with and reflective of educational disadvantage and lower educational attainment. This is very much in line with international evidence which also reports the strong correlation between pupils' socio-economic background and their outcomes in education.

The evidence shows that pupils from disadvantaged backgrounds have greater obstacles to overcome. Their schools need additional resources to help them do this.

That is why I have redistributed school funding to target schools with high numbers of pupils from socially disadvantaged backgrounds and have continued to implement policies and provide funding for a range of additional interventions, with a focus on improving standards and tackling educational underachievement. However, there are two other key issues.

Firstly, a socially balanced education system enables all pupils to perform better. While some schools persist in the use of academic selection, we will be unable to eradicate this social division.

Secondly, inequality in outcomes is a societal issue and one that education authorities and schools cannot tackle on their own. The challenge of tackling inequalities, be they educational, health or economic, is one that we all face and success will depend on all stakeholders working together in order to achieve greater equity in our society.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 40818/11-15, to detail the location of all withdrawn crossing patrols.
(AQW 41971/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards have provided the following information which shows the location of school crossing patrols that have been withdrawn during the period 2012 to 2014 (inclusive):

Education and Library Board	Location of withdrawn school crossing patrol

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Education for an update on plans for a new build for Drumlins Integrated Primary School, Ballynahinch.
(AQW 41973/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I was pleased to announce Drumlins Integrated Primary School as part of the major capital announcement in June 2014. The business case for this project has been approved and it is anticipated that a professional team to take forward this project will be appointed mid-March 2015. The new school will be built on site of the old Library Board Headquarters and Health Centre off Windmill Lane, Ballynahinch and work is ongoing to clear this site. It is currently estimated that the school will be completed May/June 2017.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Education whether his Department offers any scholarships for young people advancing to tertiary education.
(AQW 41974/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department does not offer any direct scholarships for young people advancing to tertiary education.

However my Department promotes and facilitates the All Ireland Scholarship Scheme which is funded by JP McManus and administered by the Department for Employment and Learning. The scheme provides financial support of £5,500 per annum to 25 high achieving students from challenging economic backgrounds for the duration of their undergraduate degree courses. Applicants to the scheme must be in receipt of the Educational Maintenance Allowance (EMA).

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education how many teachers are unemployed and on the Northern Ireland Substitute Teacher Register.
(AQW 42029/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: While there are some 9100+ teachers registered on the Substitute Teacher Register (NISTR), the number who can be regarded as actively available for work in schools varies from day-to-day, depending on an individual teacher's availability, their personal preferences and on the number of substitute teachers employed by schools each day. The number of teachers registered as actively available for work on any given day cannot be taken as an indication of the number of unemployed teachers, as some individuals may be engaged in other types of work.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education how many school patrol crossing guards are currently employed in North Down; and to detail how this compares with 2005.
(AQW 42069/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am advised by the South-Eastern Education and Library Board that the number of school crossing patrol guards that are currently employed in North Down is 15, and in 2005 the number employed was 23.

The reduction of 8 School Crossing Patrol's between 2005 and 2015 can be attributed to: 3 posts discontinued in post primary schools (the Board does not provide School Crossing Patrols in post-primary locations); 2 posts discontinued following 2 school closures; 1 post discontinued as road traffic lights were installed at the crossing location; and, 2 posts discontinued following ill-health retirement of post-holders and locations not meeting criteria for provision.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the 'World Around Us' component of the Key Stage 2 curriculum, including its effectiveness in specifically encouraging students to pursue science subjects.
(AQW 42081/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department asked the Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI) to conduct a review of the implementation of the 'World Around Us' Area of Learning in 2013/14. The purpose of this review was to find out how primary schools are implementing and developing this Area of Learning. ETI's report found that most of the science and technology lessons observed by inspectors (86%) were evaluated as good or better. Over half of the lessons were evaluated as very good or outstanding. The report makes a number of recommendations and I have asked my officials to consider how these can be taken forward.

Additionally, the Department has a number of STEM intervention programmes and initiatives to complement the curriculum and together, I believe these are having a positive impact in terms of pupils pursuing science subjects. There has been an upward trend in the number of A-level STEM examination entries since 2007/08 rising from 38.2% to 41.2% in 2012/13.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Education to list the consultancy firms that provided financial services to his Department in each of the last five years; and the amount paid to each firm for these services.
(AQW 42094/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: A list of firms engaged by my Department for the provision of financial services, and classified as external consultancy assignments in accordance with guidelines set out by the Department of Finance and Personnel (DFP), is set out below. The tables detail spend incurred on external consultancy in respect of financial services in the last five years. Such firms may also be engaged for other external consultancy projects which are not related to financial services or they may also be engaged on other areas of work, which are not classified as external consultancy in line with DFP guidance. Spend in relation to such activities is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Mr Moutray asked the Minister of Education for an update on the current status of the Portadown YMCA Building Project.
(AQW 42097/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: An Economic Appraisal is in the process of being completed by Department of Education in conjunction with the Portadown YMCA regarding the proposed project.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education what progress has been made in ending the requirement for candidates to have Certificates of Religious Education in maintained primary schools appointments.
(AQW 42100/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department does not employ teachers.

The requirement to hold the Certificate in Religious Education is a policy decision of some employers, namely the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS) and some Grant Maintained Integrated Primary Schools.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education what steps are being taken to repeal the exception for teachers in the Fair Employment and Treatment (Northern Ireland) Order 1998.
(AQW 42102/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Fair Employment and Treatment (NI) Order 1998 is the responsibility of OFMdFM.

The removal of the exception under Article 71 of the FETO is a matter for OFMdFM to take forward and should be subject to a full public consultation.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Education to outline the number of Special Educational Needs classrooms assistants employed by each Education and Library Board, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 42121/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number (headcount) of Special Educational Needs classrooms assistants employed by each Education and Library Board, in each of the last five years, is as follows:

	At 31/8/10	At 31/8/11	At 31/8/12	At 31/8/13	At 31/8/14
BELB	1125	1200	1295	1404	1565

SEELB	1148	1266	1279	1429	1630

The figures shown above include all Special Needs and Additional Special Needs classroom assistants.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Education for an update on the status of Parkhall College; and; whether it has received full integrated status.
(AQW 42125/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Development Proposal (DP) for the acquisition of controlled integrated status for Parkhall College was approved by the Minister on 15 May 2009. From the date specified in the DP (1 September 2009), Parkhall became a Controlled Integrated school, as provided for in legislation.

This position was outlined to the NEELB by the Department on 19 December 2013 in order to address any confusion that there may have been on the status of the school.

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Education what steps he has taken to remove the requirement for a Certificate in Religious Education which is a barrier to teachers within the controlled sector getting employment within the maintained sector.
(AQW 42135/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department does not employ teachers. The requirement to hold the Certificate in Religious Education is a policy decision of some employers, namely the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS) and certain Grant Maintained Integrated Primary Schools. A teacher of any religious background, or none, can hold the Certificate in Religious Education. The policy and criteria for selection and recruitment of teachers is a matter for the relevant employers.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education what was the operating cost of the Ministerial car in each of the last three financial years.
(AQW 42136/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The operating costs of the Ministerial car in each of the last three financial years are as follows:

Financial year	Operating costs
2011/2012	£41,591
2012/2013	£38,944
2013/2014	£40,123
1/04/14 to 31/01/15	£33,341

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education how many pupils in the mainstream Southern Education and Library Board division are within each of the five Special Educational Needs stages; and of these, how many have a classroom assistant, shown per stage.
(AQW 42159/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number of pupils in mainstream schools in the Southern Education and Library Board area at each stage of the Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs and the number of those who had access to classroom assistance specified in their statement of special educational needs, as at 11 October 2013, is as follows:

	Number of Pupils	Number with a Classroom Assistant
Stage 1	2,190	0
Stage 2	4,704	0
Stage 3	2,182	0
Stage 4	195	0
Stage 5	2,960	1989
Total	12,231	1989

Sources: NI school census 2013/14 and Southern Education and Library Board.

While the 2014/15 school census took place on the 10th October 2014, finalised figures for SEN will not be available until late February 2015.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education for an update on the adoption of a Unique Learner Number as part of the development of a system to track student progress, particularly those at risk of not being in education, employment or training.
(AQW 42204/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department is working on the introduction of a Unique Learner Number (ULN) for all learners in the north of Ireland at Year 11 and above. In taking forward this work, the Department established a pilot exercise involving up to 25 post-primary schools during 2013/14. This pilot was subsequently extended to 2014/15 to allow for IT developments and to optimise participation from schools.

Progress to date has been positive and the outcomes of the pilot are being evaluated to help inform decisions on the full roll out of the ULN across all schools here.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education what is the required number of Special Education Needs inspections at mainstream post-primary schools during each school year.
(AQW 42236/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Training Inspectorate inspect special educational needs as part of all mainstream post-primary inspections. The number of post-primary inspections undertaken each year is linked to the business planning cycle in that particular year. For example: by the end of the current academic year 28 post-primary schools should have been inspected; in 2013-14, 29 were inspected; and in 2012-13, 28 were inspected.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of primary school headteachers, broken down by gender.
(AQW 42315/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number of primary school principals broken down by gender is published annually as part of the Teacher Workforce Statistical Bulletin and the most recent bulletin, published June 2014, is available at the below link. The information requested is contained within Table 7.

Department for Employment and Learning

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how much funding his Department has awarded the GAA over the last three financial years.
(AQW 41174/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): The Department for Employment and Learning has not awarded direct funding to the Gaelic Athletic Association (GAA). However, through two employment programmes, GAA organisations did receive payments as employers participating in the relevant programmes. To date, in the 2014-15 financial year, £3,603 has been paid, and £250 in 2013-14, to GAA organisations participating in the Youth Employment Scheme. GAA organisations were also paid £5,700 in the 2013-14 financial year and £460 in 2012-13 for employment subsidies in relation to participants on the Steps to Work Programme.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Employment and Learning (i) how much his Department pays annually for Trade Union officials; (ii) how many officials this payment covers; and (iii) what is the cost of administering Trade Union's dues.
(AQW 41197/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department funds civil servants on secondment to the Northern Ireland Public Service Alliance (NIPSA) to carry out full-time trade union duties. In the financial year 2013/14, the total cost of funding the civil servants on secondment to NIPSA was £92,867.24.

This payment covers the number of officials below:

2013/14	Number of Trade Union Officials
April 2013 – February 2014 (inclusive)	2
March 2014	3

There is no charge throughout the Northern Ireland Civil Service for the cost of administering Trade Unions' dues.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many students, in 2013/14, in the (i) Northern; and (ii) North West Regional Colleges enrolled in courses which support the hospitality and tourism sectors.
(AQW 41200/11-15)

Dr Farry: The most recent figures available, for the 2013/14 academic year, show that (i) 985 individuals enrolled in 'Hospitality and Catering' or 'Travel and Tourism' at Northern Regional College and (ii) 1,001 individuals enrolled in 'Hospitality and Catering' or 'Travel and Tourism' at North West Regional College.

The figures are correct as at 17th October 2014 using the subject sector area Hospitality & Catering and Travel and Tourism for both colleges.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many applications for funding from the European Social Fund were received from North Down.
(AQW 41565/11-15)

Dr Farry: A total of 135 applications were submitted to the European Social Fund by the closing date of 9 January 2015 although it should now be noted that one of the applications was a duplicate, making the final number of applications received as 134. There were no applications received from organisations registered in North Down.

You may wish to note that a number of applications submitted across each strand of the new ESF Programme would, if successful, be delivered across Northern Ireland and therefore should cover North Down.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 41202/11-15, to detail the support, other than financial provision, which is available.
(AQW 41693/11-15)

Dr Farry: All of the further and higher education institutions in Northern Ireland offer a wide range of support services to all students, some of whom will have caring responsibilities.

Further Education colleges provide a wide range of non-financial support for students with caring responsibilities in relation to entering, sustaining and achieving in FE. Student support teams within FE colleges provide pastoral care to all students and work closely with those students who have declared themselves as being carers to ensure they are not disadvantaged. Such support can include individually tailored timetables to facilitate carer duties; the use of technology to support students to access course information remotely and to complete assignments online; and time off at short or without any notice for medical/hospital appointments.

Northern Ireland's higher education providers also provide a range of support services to both full-time and part-time students. The nature of the support will vary according to the needs of the individual student but can include the support of a tutor / mentor and flexibility with course delivery and assessment, including extensions if necessary, for coursework submissions. In addition, it is a basic function of student support services that staff are alert to the needs of students, including carers, and that they are sign-posted appropriately so that help and advice can be accessed in a timely manner.

Access to Success, my Department's regional strategy for widening participation in higher education, has identified adult learners as a group which faces barriers to their participation in higher education. In some cases this will include adult learners who find it difficult to engage in education because of caring responsibilities. Access to Success aims to give groups such as adult learners the encouragement and support they need to achieve the necessary qualifications to apply to, and to benefit from, the higher education that is right for them, irrespective of their personal or social background.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what support could be available to JTI Ballymena workers from the Northern Ireland Redundancy Service.
(AQW 41699/11-15)

Dr Farry: It is deeply regrettable that Japan Tobacco International (JTI) will close its production facility at Gallaher's, Lisnafillan, with the loss of 877 jobs.

Support will be available to JTI employees through the Redundancy Advice Service co-ordinated by my officials in the Employment Service. They will work in partnership with the Social Security Agency, Further Education Colleges, Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs, (HMRC), and other agencies. Advice on alternative job opportunities, mentoring, access to training courses, entrepreneurship, education opportunities and careers advice, as well as a range of other issues such as benefits and taxation will be provided to JTI Gallaher employees. This service is always delivered free of charge to any company and employees facing closure or redundancy.

In addition and in order to ensure there is on-going support for JTI and its employees, my officials in Ballymena Jobs and Benefits Office have already identified a dedicated team to provide advice and guidance should any of the employees facing redundancy require immediate assistance. Specifically this includes guidance on our initiatives and programmes, local provision, help with jobsearch, job clubs, writing CVs, job application forms, preparing for interviews, careers guidance and assistance with travel costs for interviews.

My officials are attending meetings with JTI Gallahers, Ballymena Borough Council and Invest Northern Ireland over the next few weeks. Over the coming months, my Department will work closely with all those involved to manage the closure process and ensure that the best advice, help and support are offered to all those affected employees at the appropriate time

Finally, please rest assured that my Department will do everything that it can to assist the employees of JTI Gallaher's back into employment where appropriate. I thank you for your interest and support on this matter

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning (i) for an update on the work of the Cross Border Project Team; (ii) the dates on which the group have met; and (iii) the progress made to date.
(AQW 41812/11-15)

Dr Farry:

(i) The Cross Border project team was established as part of the implementation plan for Graduating to Success. The key objectives of the team are to:

- ensure that by the end of 2013, the higher education institutions (HEIs) will have identified opportunities for north-south co-operation in teaching and learning;
- assist in ensuring that by the end of 2020, the HEIs will have met established targets on increased cross-border student mobility; and
- support the Department in the implementation of the relevant recommendations (1, 4, 6 and 9) in the the Irish Business and Employers' Confederation - Confederation of British Industry (IBEC-CBI) Report "A Study of Obstacles to Cross-Border Undergraduate Education".

(ii) The project team has met on four occasions: 21 June 2013; 2 October 2013; 24 January 2014; and 15 May 2014.

(iii) The project team has made the following progress:

The Higher Education Institutions in Northern Ireland have provided assurance to the project team that they are continuing to identify opportunities for collaboration.

The project team has considered the relevant recommendations (1, 4, 6 and 9) of the IBEC-CBI report on undergraduate mobility and progress has been made in the following areas:

- In relation to improving information (recommendation 1), careers teachers and my Department's careers advisers have received additional training on the higher education opportunities available in the Republic of Ireland and on the Central Applications Office processes. Extensive information, to support our local students in their higher education decisions and also to act as a gateway for other students, including from the Republic of Ireland, who may be interested in studying in Northern Ireland, is now available through the NIDirect portal;
- The recommendation in relation to student funding (recommendation 4) has been achieved as Northern Ireland students studying in the South now have access to funding support;
- In relation to A Level and Leaving Certificate grades (recommendation 6), the project group has received updates from the Department of Education that discussions between CCEA and Irish Universities Association are still ongoing. However the group has noted the progress made by individual institutions e.g. Trinity College Dublin and Dublin City University; and
- In relation to the impact of future demographics on cross border student flows (recommendation 9), my officials have been working with officials in the Department for Education and Skills to research and analyse the current position in order to inform future policy development. A joint report is being finalised and will form the basis for the next project team meeting.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the support available for partners of the Steps 2 Success and Steps to Work Programmes to enable them to offer employment to people who complete a placement.
(AQW 41826/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Steps 2 Success programme is designed to assist unemployed participants find and sustain work. Each of the three Lead Contractors that deliver the programme has designed a wide range of provision to help participants find work. The Contractors have all worked with their supply chain partners to put in place the same service to that available from the Lead Contractor. The service delivered to all participants must at least meet standards set by the Department in a Service Guarantee. All delivery organisations will agree a Progression to Employment Plan that will outline the activities that each will complete to address the participant's assessed barriers to employment. The Progression to Employment Plan will be updated regularly to take account of the participant's improvement in job readiness. The Lead Contractors and partners will also work with a wide range of employers to identify jobs and match participants to these. All activities undertaken by participants are based on helping the participant finding their job goal.

In delivering the service there are a range of supports offered by each of the Lead Contractors to their supply chain partners, these include: dedicated supply chain management team; staff training; computer hardware and dedicated software package; performance management regime including assisting with underperformance; provision of detailed and timely Management Information; clearly defined performance targets; compliance and audit support; quality management regime; and Human Resources support.

Those participants who complete their attachment period on Steps 2 Success without having found employment are referred back to an Employment Service Adviser. They will build on the improvement in employability that have occurred during their Steps 2 Success attachment.

The Steps to Work Programme was closed to new entrants in May 2014.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of participants on the Steps 2 Success and Steps Work Programmes who have been offered employment by their work placement, following its completion.
(AQW 41827/11-15)

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many groups representing people with a disability applied for the European Social Fund in (i) Northern Ireland; and (ii) East Londonderry.
(AQW 41828/11-15)

Dr Farry: A total of 33 applications were submitted from groups representing people with a disability to the European Social Fund by the closing date of 9 January 2015. One of the above applications came from an organisation in the East Londonderry constituency.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what consultation a university or college must undertake with his Department prior to discontinuing a course.
(AQW 41874/11-15)

Dr Farry: While the Department sets the strategic direction for the higher and further education sectors, each university and college is responsible for its own course provision and curriculum change. In these circumstances the Department does not approve individual university or college courses nor require a university or college to consult when it proposes to discontinue a course.

Before making decisions regarding course provision the universities take a number of factors into account including my Department's priorities, the needs of the economy and student demand. Reviewing course provision is part of the normal annual cycle and is good business practice.

My Department sets high level Public Service Agreement targets in respect of the FE curriculum to be delivered by the FE sector, and agrees broad targets with individual colleges through the annual college development planning process.

Colleges offer a wide range of economically focused provision, tailored to meet local needs. Decisions on whether specific courses run are driven by the level of demand locally and it is the responsibility of individual colleges to meet the needs of learners and employers in their areas in a cost effective way that ensures best use of public money.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what steps his Department is taking to encourage joint working between the two universities in order to rationalise higher education provision, in view of the cuts to the departmental budget.
(AQW 41907/11-15)

Dr Farry:

(i) While the Department sets the strategic direction for the higher education sector, each University is responsible for its own course provision and curriculum. My Department has therefore not entered into discussion with the two universities in relation to joint working and rationalisation of higher education provision.

(ii) The two Vice-Chancellors and members of the respective Senior Management Teams meet on a regular basis to review issues relating to Higher Education. This includes discussion on opportunities for cooperation and partnership across a broad range of issues relating to education, research, knowledge transfer and societal impact.

(iii) As no rationalisation plans have been developed it is not possible to comment on the implications of such plans.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on any discussions that have taken place between Queen's University, Belfast and the Ulster University on co-operating to rationalise their educational provision, including the outcome of these talks for course provision across the higher education sector.
(AQW 41908/11-15)

Dr Farry:

(iii) As no rationalisation plans have been developed it is not possible to comment on the implications of such plans.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what would be the implications for staff numbers and job losses arising from any rationalization plans agreed between the two universities.
(AQW 41909/11-15)

Dr Farry:

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of (i) teacher training places at (a) Stranmillis; (b) St Mary's; (c) Ulster University; (d) Queens's University; (e) Open University; and (ii) teachers needed in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 41911/11-15)

Dr Farry:

(i) The number of teachers being trained at the Higher Education Institutions as of 1 December 2014 is as follows:

a St Mary's University College, 579;

b Stranmillis University College, 569;

c Queen's University Belfast, 136;

d Ulster University, 117; and e The Open University, 27.

(ii) My Department does not determine the number of teachers to be trained. That responsibility falls to the Minister of Education.

My Department's responsibility for teacher training relates to resourcing the Initial Teacher Education providers.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether he intends to bid for funding for the expansion of Ulster University at Magee in the next Comprehensive Spending Review.
(AQW 41952/11-15)

Dr Farry: You will know that a business case for the expansion of the Magee campus was submitted to my Department in December. The business case is currently being scrutinised to ensure that it meets the requirements of the Northern Ireland Guide to Expenditure Appraisal and Evaluation. If it does and we also obtain approval from the Department of Finance and Personnel, I would intend to submit a bid in the next Comprehensive Spending Review to secure funding for the expansion on a sustainable basis.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether the reduction of courses available for study at Ulster University provides space for a veterinary school at Coleraine.
(AQW 41980/11-15)

Dr Farry: My understanding is that space was never an issue with regards to the proposal to establish a veterinary school at Ulster University's Coleraine campus. The University is preparing a business case to support the establishment of the veterinary school but a complete full draft of the business case has never been submitted to my Department. The key issues are establishing that there is a need for a veterinary school in Northern Ireland and securing the funding for it.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail his Department's (i) understanding; and (ii) definition of Management Accounts.
(AQW 42038/11-15)

Dr Farry: This Department's understanding and definition of Management Accounts is that they comprise internal financial and non-financial data, regularly produced by an organisation in order to provide information to management to inform decision making, budget management, planning, control, performance measurement and continuous improvement. They are often used by the Department for monitoring purposes, and for assessing financial capability and stability when awarding contracts.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline any discussions she has had with (i) the operators, or owners, of St Angelo Airport, Enniskillen; or (ii) commercial airlines, about the possibility of commercial airlines using the facility.
(AQW 41575/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): I have not had any discussions regarding the potential for new routes from St Angelo Airport.

I would be happy to consider any proposals for the introduction of new routes from the airport with business or inbound tourism potential. However, it would be important that any new services were profitable and sustainable for both airport and airline.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what benefits the opening of St Angelo Airport in Enniskillen would bring to the local economy.
(AQW 41576/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The introduction of air routes from St Angelo Airport would provide direct access for visitors to the extensive tourist offering available in Fermanagh. In particular, potential visitor segments might include those interested in activity tourism such as golfing and fishing. However, it would be important that any new services were profitable and sustainable for both airport and airline.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 34114/11-15 and AQW 33390/11-15, whether her department has completed reviewing the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development Regional Development Working Paper 2013/20 'The Case of Ireland – Northern Ireland – Regions and Innovation: Collaborating Across Borders'; and what action she intends to take as a result of the report.
(AQW 41607/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has considered the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development Regional Development Working Paper 2013/20 'The Case of Ireland – Northern Ireland – Regions and Innovation: Collaborating Across Borders'.

The recommendations in this report have been reviewed and are being taken forward by InterTradeIreland, a North South body established to foster and support cross border collaboration on innovation, trade and business development activities.

My Department, in conjunction with the Department of Jobs, Enterprise and Innovation in the Republic of Ireland will seek to ensure that InterTradeIreland takes account of the findings and recommendations in the Report in its work going forward.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how many visits by potential foreign direct investors took place in (i) Moyle; (ii) Ballymoney; (iii) Ballymena; (iv) Carrickfergus; and (v) Larne, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41609/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The number of visits by potential foreign direct investors that took place in (i) Moyle; (ii) Ballymoney; (iii) Ballymena; (iv) Carrickfergus; and (v) Larne, in each of the last five years was as follows:

- 2009-10 – Larne (2)
- 2010-11 – Ballymena (1), Larne (3), Moyle (1)
- 2012-13 – Ballymena (4), Carrickfergus (5), Larne (5)
- 2013-14 – Ballymoney (1), Larne (3)

Foreign investors choose to visit Northern Ireland on the basis of our talented and loyal workforce, advanced telecoms infrastructure, high skilled business clusters, a pro-business environment, competitive operating costs and proximity to major markets.

Once Invest NI has secured agreement to visit Northern Ireland the company then decides what areas it wishes to visit based on its requirements. Requirements will vary depending on the nature of the project, but a company will typically look at existing investors in the same business sector (Invest NI's key target sectors being ICT, business and professional services, financial services and renewables); universities and colleges that offer courses relating to that sector; and suitable, available property.

Areas in which these desired features do not exist, or are not clearly presented, are unlikely to attract the attention of potential investors to visit or locate in the area. In addition, potential investors are often drawn to population centres that they consider will provide the appropriate number of suitably skilled potential employees. Therefore a clear understanding and evidence of skill demographics for any region would greatly assist a potential investor in considering a particular area.

Ultimately the investor will make the decision as to where they visit and locate based on their specific business needs and having considered the options available to them.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the European Regional Development Fund Operational Programme.
(AQW 41623/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has considered the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development Regional Development Working Paper 2013/20 'The Case of Ireland – Northern Ireland – Regions and Innovation: Collaborating Across Borders'.

The recommendations in this report have been reviewed and are being taken forward by InterTradeIreland, a North South body established to foster and support cross border collaboration on innovation, trade and business development activities.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what pressures her Department can put on energy providers to reduce customers' bills in light of the reduction in oil prices.
(AQW 41714/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has no formal role in this matter and I have no power to compel energy suppliers to reduce prices. However, my Department participates in the latter stages of electricity and gas tariff review meetings between the Utility Regulator and regulated suppliers.

On 12 February, the Regulator and Power NI announced a reduction of 9.2% in the company's domestic and small business customer electricity tariff. This will take effect from 1 April 2015. This is a 2-year tariff, but it will be kept under close review by the Regulator. Budget Energy, one of the non-regulated electricity suppliers, has also announced a reduction of 5% in its domestic tariff to take effect from 10 March 2015.

Separately, the Regulator has been progressing a review of regulated gas tariffs in respect of Airtricity Gas Supply (for the Greater Belfast area) and firmus energy (for the Ten Towns area). It is also expected that these reviews will conclude soon to allow any changes to gas bills to take effect from 1 April.

Oil prices have no direct or significant influence over generation prices in the Single Electricity Market – gas prices are the main driver and they have fallen less sharply than those for oil. Wholesale costs also account for only part of a customer's bill and movements in other charges impact on the final tariff position. Of course, the benefits of lower oil prices are already feeding through in lower heating bills and costs of transport.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment which postcodes in North Down will benefit from the Broadband Improvement Project.
(AQW 41732/11-15)

Mrs Foster: A number of postcode areas in the North Down constituency have already benefited from the increases in broadband availability provided through the roll-out of the Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project.

Further details regarding improvements already made, or planned in postcode districts, can be found using the on-line postcode checker provided at: http://www.online.detini.gov.uk/Broadband/Start.aspx

Work is continuing in the area and is due to be completed by 31 March 2015.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail (i) the number of; and (ii) the amount granted to businesses in (a) North Down; and (ii) Northern Ireland from the Northern Ireland Small Business Loan Fund since its inception.
(AQW 41750/11-15)

Mrs Foster: During the period from the launch of the Northern Ireland Small Business Loan Fund in February 2013 until the date of the most recently publicly released figures (30th September 2014):

(i) two business in North Down have availed of the fund, securing funding amounting to £30,000; and

(ii) 100 businesses across Northern Ireland have availed of the fund. The total value of these loans is £2,146,809.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the areas in West Tyrone that do not have adequate and reliable broadband coverage.
(AQW 41771/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I would refer the member to the NI Direct website (http://www.nidirect.gov.uk/broadband-improvement-project) where details of the postcode areas to be addressed by the current Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project (NIBIP) can be found. This project aims to improve the broadband connectivity for more than 45,000 premises by the end of 2015.

In addition, my Department has consulted on the proposed intervention area for the Superfast Roll-out Programme Phase 2 (SRP2) project which seeks to further increase the coverage of superfast broadband services across Northern Ireland by 2017. The consultation document, which can be found on the DETI website (http://www.detini.gov.uk/index/what-we-do/deti-telecoms-index/consultations_from_2014/superfast_rollout_programme_phase_2.htm), contains a list of postcodes where it is considered additional public intervention may be required when the NIBIP is complete.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the areas in Fermanagh and South Tyrone that do not have adequate and reliable broadband coverage.
(AQW 41772/11-15)

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what monies have been allocated to IT and telecom companies over the last five years to increase broadband services across rural black spots.
(AQW 41773/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Over the last five years £40.207 million has been allocated to Telecoms companies to increase the availability of broadband services across Northern Ireland including rural areas.

The allocation can be broken down as follows:

Project	Allocation
Northern Ireland Broadband Fund	£ 1.107 million
Next Generation Broadband	£19.800 million
Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project	£19.300 million
Total	£40.207 Million

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what proposals her Department has to meet the current needs of many rural businesses that require a reliable and adequate broadband service.
(AQW 41774/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department is currently implementing the £23.68million Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project. This project is being delivered in eight phases with an overall completion date of 31 December 2015. The project is progressing according to schedule and by 31 December 2014 just under 17,500 premises across Northern Ireland, both business and residential, had benefited from the improvements being delivered, including many in rural areas.

By project completion it is anticipated that improvements will have been delivered for at least 45,000 premises across Northern Ireland resulting in the provision of basic fixed-line broadband services of at least 2 Megabits per second in areas that previously had no service and improvements in the availability of superfast fixed-line broadband services (24 Megabits per second or higher) in areas where choice is poor or broadband speeds are low.

In addition my Department is currently progressing a further project (Superfast Rollout Programme phase 2) which is aimed at extending the reach of Superfast Broadband services across Northern Ireland by 2017. The proposed intervention area includes postcodes in rural areas.

A response to an Invitation to Tender has been received and is currently under consideration. The final intervention area is dependent on this evaluation. Assuming that the bid is acceptable, it is anticipated that contract award will be made towards the beginning of March 2015 with implementation commencing immediately thereafter. Further information on the project, including details of the proposed intervention area, can be found at on the Department's website at www.detini.gov.uk/index/what-we-do/deti-telecoms-index/telecoms-srp.htm

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment when 100 per cent broadband coverage will be achieved.
(AQW 41775/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Broadband in Northern Ireland is available to 100% of premises and is delivered through various technologies, including fixed line, fixed wireless, satellite and mobile broadband.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment which areas of East Londonderry do not have adequate and reliable mobile phone coverage; and what measures her Department is taking to address this issue.
(AQW 41872/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department does not gather information on mobile coverage. Such data is collected by the telecommunications regulator, Ofcom and is published on an annual basis in its Infrastructure Reports. The latest report, published in December 2014, can be found at http://stakeholders.ofcom.org.uk/binaries/research/infrastructure/2014/infrastructure-14.pdf. In addition, an interactive map, which allows users to assess the coverage and performance of the infrastructure in their area, can be found at http://infrastructure.ofcom.org.uk.

The telecommunications market is fully privatised and independently regulated, with investment decisions taken on the basis of commercial return. In recent years the Mobile Network Operators (MNOs) have been investing significantly to improve their 2G and 3G networks and Northern Ireland has seen some marked improvements, particularly with regard to 3G coverage, which is now on a par with the rest of the UK at 99% from at least one operator.

To address areas where the market is not currently investing, the Department of Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) is currently implementing the Mobile Infrastructure project which is focused on 2G technology. However, it is understood that operators will future proof the infrastructure being deployed, in order to further support 3G, 4G and beyond, where possible. Northern Ireland is in line for around 70 nominal, new mast sites under this project.

In addition, in December 2014, the UK Government announced that it had struck a deal with the MNOs which will see the mobile industry investing £5 billion in UK infrastructure and increasing coverage by 2017.

My Department maintains a watching brief on these initiatives and will assess the need for further Government intervention once they are complete.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment which areas of East Londonderry do not have adequate and reliable broadband coverage; and what measures her Department is taking to address this issue.
(AQW 41873/11-15)

An Invitation to Tender was issued on 12 November, with a closing date for bids of 26 January 2015. A bid was received and is under consideration. If this bid is acceptable, it is anticipated that contract award will take place in early March 2015.

The consultation document, which can be found on the DETI website (http://www.detini.gov.uk/index/what-we-do/deti-telecoms-index/consultations_from_2014/superfast_rollout_programme_phase_2.htm), contains a list of postcodes where it is considered additional public intervention may be required when the NIBIP is complete.

Mr Dunne asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what actions have been taken to encourage local energy providers to reduce their pricing to local consumers and businesses.
(AQW 41914/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has no formal role in this matter and I have no power to compel energy suppliers to reduce prices. However, my Department participates in the latter stages of electricity and gas tariff review meetings between the Utility Regulator and regulated suppliers.

On 12 February, the Regulator and Power NI announced a reduction of 9.2% in the company's domestic and small business customer electricity tariff. This will take effect from 1 April 2015. This is a 2-year tariff, but it will be kept under close review by the Regulator. Budget Energy, one of the non-regulated electricity suppliers has also announced a reduction of 5% in its domestic tariff to take effect from 10 March 2015.

Separately, the Regulator has been progressing a review of regulated gas tariffs in respect of Airtricity Gas Supply (for the Greater Belfast area) and firmus energy (for the Ten Towns area). It is also expected that these reviews will conclude soon to allow any changes to gas bills to take effect from 1 April.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what contact her Department has had with NIE concerning the lack of capacity at substations for new renewable energy developments in the Ballycastle area.
(AQW 41951/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department is in regular contact with NIE on substation capacity across Northern Ireland, including Ballycastle. I would encourage any proposals for new development to take into account information on NIE's website showing the availability of connection.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail any proposals her Department has to address areas of poor broadband coverage in the Sperrins region.
(AQW 42001/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department is currently implementing the Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project (NIBIP). It is anticipated that by project completion in December 2015, improvements will have been delivered for at least 45,000 premises across many areas of Northern Ireland, including the Sperrins region, resulting in the provision of basic wire-line broadband services of at least 2 Megabits per second in areas that previously had no service and improvements in the availability of superfast fixed-line broadband services (24 Megabits per second or higher) in areas where choice is poor or broadband speeds are low.

Information on the areas where work has completed to date and the timeline for roll-out over the remainder of the project can be found on the NI Direct website at http://www.nidirect.gov.uk/broadband-improvement-project).

In addition, the Department is progressing the Superfast Roll-out Programme Phase 2 (SRP2) project, which seeks to further increase the coverage of superfast broadband services across Northern Ireland by 2017. A tender bid has been received and is under consideration. If this bid is acceptable, it is anticipated that contract award will take place in early March 2015. The proposed intervention area, which includes postcodes in the Sperrins Region, can be found on the DETI website at http://www.detini.gov.uk/index/what-we-do/deti-telecoms-index/telecoms-srp.htm

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on high speed broad band roll out in East Belfast.
(AQW 42122/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department is currently implementing the Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project (NIBIP). The project is progressing according to schedule and by 31 December 2014 just over 17,500 premises across Northern Ireland had benefited from the improvements being delivered including a number in the East Belfast constituency. Information on the areas where work has completed to date and the timeline for roll-out over the remainder of the project can be found on the NI Direct website at http://www.nidirect.gov.uk/broadband-improvement-project)

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what efforts are being made to ensure that reductions in the wholesale price of natural gas are being passed on to domestic customers.
(AQW 42303/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Utility Regulator is currently engaged in a review of regulated gas tariffs in respect of Airtricity Gas Supply (for the Greater Belfast area) and firmus energy (for the Ten Towns area). It is expected that these reviews will conclude soon to allow any changes to gas bills to take effect from 1 April 2015.

Department of the Environment

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment how many complaints have been received, in each year since 2012, by Planning Service in relation to their failure to provide necessary neighbourhood notification to residents in respect of planning applications; and how many of these complaints were later referred to the Northern Ireland Ombudsman.
(AQW 41546/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): Table 1 below outlines the number of complaints received by the Department in relation to neighbour notification, in each year since 2012;

Table 1 Complaints received in relation to neighbour notification

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment whether he intends to amend The Planning (General Development) Order (Northern Ireland) 1993 to bring it into line with similar legislation in England which does not allow permitted development rights through The Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 if 'it consists of the drilling of boreholes for petroleum exploration' or Scotland, which through the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) (Scotland) Order 1992 has stated that the 'the provisions permitting minerals development...exclude exploration for oil and gas'. (AQW 41588/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In Northern Ireland, there are certain permitted development rights under Part 16 of Schedule 1 to the Planning (General Development) Order (NI) 1993 for Mineral Exploration where planning permission is not required, which includes exploration for oil and gas. They allow certain specified development on land in any period not exceeding four months consisting of drilling boreholes, carrying out seismic surveys or making other excavations. Any operation within an area of special scientific interest or site of archaeological interest is specifically excluded from these permitted development rights.

Importantly, there are also a number of limitations and conditions associated with this temporary permitted development right. These restrictions include a requirement for pre-commencement notification to the Department of the Environment giving details of the location, target mineral, details of plant and operations and anticipated timescale. A developer, should they wish to invoke these permitted development rights, must notify the Department accordingly in order that a decision can be taken on whether or not the permitted development right should be removed and the proposal made subject to the full planning application process.

In addition, where development is identified in either of the Schedules to the Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012 and Environmental Impact Assessment is applicable based on the details of the proposed development, permitted development rights do not apply (Article 3(8) of the Planning (General Development) Order (NI) 1993 refers).

In the interests of clarity, it is important to note that the temporary permitted development rights for minerals exploration do not allow the commercial extraction of minerals, including petroleum. Such activity will be subject to the full planning application process as well as relevant Environmental Impact Assessment, licensing and environmental permitting arrangements.

There are no plans at present to amend the existing legislation in Northern Ireland in relation to permitted development rights for Mineral Exploration under Part 16 of Schedule 1 to the Planning (General Development) Order (NI) 1993. The Department takes the view that the permitted development right as currently drafted strikes an appropriate balance between permitting the carrying out of legitimate exploratory activity and at the same time protecting amenity interests and the environment.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the total spent by his Department on road safety campaigns and advertising in each of the last five years, including the percentage of his Department's budget this spend represented. (AQW 41677/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The total spent by the Department on road safety campaigns and advertising in each of the last five years, including the percentage of the Department's budget, is as follows;

Year	Spend on Road Safety Campaigns & Advertising £	% Net RDEL Budget
2009/10	1,476,587	0.97%
2010/11	1,703,256	1.17%
2011/12	2,504,043	1.94%
2012/13	2,513,472	1.90%
2013/14	2,528,361	1.93%

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment, in the context of the 2013 High Court ruling in the case of Champion v North Norfolk District Council, whether the imposition of planning conditions to monitor environmental effects on water quality in relation to the Gortin gold mine planning approval K/2013/0072/F, and of the recovery of protected habitat (peat bog) following the removal of development approved under application K/2014/0387/F, is compatible with; (i) the negative Environmental Impact Assessment determinations reached by his Department on each of these cases; and (ii) legislation. (AQW 41705/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I am satisfied that these applications have gone through proper process and that the planning approvals are lawful.

For information, the High Court decision you refer to has been overturned at appeal and is now before the Supreme Court for adjudication.

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of the Environment for a breakdown of (i) the (a) actual; and (b) estimated cost of Local Government Administration from 2009 to April 2015, broken down by year; and (ii) the estimated cost for 2015/16.
(AQW 41726/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department only holds information on the overall gross expenditure incurred by councils each year and this information cannot be broken down to show the actual cost of local government administration in each year. Therefore I have provided the gross expenditure incurred by councils. The actual gross expenditure incurred by councils between 2008/09 to 2013/14 is contained in the certified accounts of councils and is summarised in Annex A.

The estimated gross expenditure for 2014/15 is taken from the General Estimates Forms submitted by councils to my Department after the rates for 2014/15 were struck, and is also summarised in Annex A.

Estimated gross expenditure for the 11 councils in 2015/16 will not be available until after the 2015/16 rates are struck.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the number of raths in each council area; and (ii) the number that are protected by the NIEA.
(AQW 41734/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Some 2,814 sites are identified as raths in the Northern Ireland Monuments and Buildings Record (MBR). I have provided an overview map of these in Appendix 1 and the actual numbers as they relate to each council area (pre and post RPA) in Appendix 2. I will also place copies of these in the Assembly library.

There are 524 raths in Northern Ireland which are protected by scheduling under the Historic Monuments and Archaeological Objects (NI) Order 1995; the majority of these are on private land. Fifteen raths are protected by being in State Care: Appendix 2 details the location of these protected sites with regard to council areas. In addition, all other recorded raths are protected by both planning and agricultural policies.

You should also note that the MBR contains details of 3,474 sites that have a potential to be raths but which survive now only as below ground remains. As there are no visible above ground remains to examine, only archaeological excavation could ascertain the definitive nature of these 3,474 sites. I trust that this information and the accompanying appendices have answered your query.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the areas where new development is not permitted due to capacity issues relating to sewage disposal.
(AQW 41757/11-15)

Mr Durkan: DOE Planning works closely with Northern Ireland Water and the Northern Ireland Environment Agency to ensure that capacity issues relating to sewage disposal are fully considered in the determination of planning applications. Where capacity issues are identified as part of consultations my Department is able to consider a range of solutions including issuing approvals with negative conditions and provision of temporary sewage arrangements until the wastewater treatment works are upgraded. My Department is not aware of any areas where new development is not permitted due to sewage capacity issues. Each planning application must be considered on its own merits taking account of all material planning considerations including sewage infrastructure.

Mr McQuillan asked the Minister of the Environment whether his Department has been liaising with the Department for Culture, Media and Sport in relation to the Listed Places of Worship Repair Fund announced in the Chancellor's Autumn Statement, 3rd December 2014; and how many applications have been received from Northern Ireland.
(AQW 41809/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In November 2014, the Department for Culture, Media and Sport notified this Department of the potential of the Listed Places of Worship: Roof Repair Fund and offered the opportunity to comment on the draft application pack, which my officials duly did. This fund is a government sponsored grant scheme administered by the National Heritage Memorial Fund. It is not linked to the Heritage Lottery Fund.

In December 2014, I wrote to Ed Vaizey, Minister of State for Culture and the Digital Economy, welcoming this new, one-off £15m grant scheme and advised that 'My department has been proactively raising the profile of this scheme, and it has been drawn to the attention of the relevant church 'umbrella groups'.' This has included a press release on the scheme, and officials providing advice to some church groups for their applications, including the provision of 'letters of support'.

I understand 1,900 applications were received from across the UK. I am not aware how many applications were submitted from Northern Ireland. The National Heritage Memorial Fund is now processing the applications and beginning the assessment process. The Fund closed on 30 January 2015, and it is anticipated that a final decision on the successful applicants should be announced by the end of March 2015.

In relation to other sources of funding, I would draw attention to the Listed Places of Worship Grant Scheme which continues to make grants towards the VAT incurred in making repairs and carrying out alterations to listed buildings mainly used for worship.

I would also direct congregations to the 'Funds for Historic Buildings Website' a comprehensive on-line directory of funding sources for historic buildings, including places of worship. This service, administered by the Architectural Heritage Fund, is partially funded by this Department.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment how many applications for the discharge of raw sewage were made in the Fermanagh District Council area in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41811/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Discharges from sewage collection systems are consented under the Water (Northern Ireland) Order 1999. Most collection systems are combined systems in that they deal with rainwater run-off as well as domestic and industrial wastewater. Discharges from combined systems consist of:

- Combined Sewer Overflows (CSOs) cause intermittent discharges from sewers which carry both foul sewage and rainfall run-off water. CSOs discharge dilute raw sewage during heavy rainfall; and
- Emergency Overflows (EOs) from sewage pumping stations may discharge raw sewage under emergency conditions.

Northern Ireland Water is consented for 19 CSOs, 28EOs and 31 pumping stations which consist of both CSOs and EOs. Of these only five EO were consented in the last five years.

Eight private developers have been consented for pumping stations with EOs in the last five years.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 40667/11-15, to address the second part of that question and advise where in planning application K/2013/0072/F are the details approving the importation and infilling of 8,000 tonnes of aggregates adjacent to the Owenkillew Special Area of Conservation.
(AQW 41840/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The aggregates were brought on to this site to facilitate the hard surface layout of the development as approved under application ref: K/2013/0072/F for the extension to existing underground exploration tunnel; including temporary buildings, vehicle parking, waste rock storage area, water treatment system and passing bays. The approved site layout extends to approximately 51 hectares.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 40714/11-15, and given the precautionary requirements of Article 6(3) of the Habitats Directive, (i) to detail documentary evidence which confirms that his officials took into account the effects of the importation of materials on the Owenkillew Special Area of Conservation prior to the granting of permission; (ii) whether the detailed plans with final topographical levels referred to were recieved prior to the granting of planning permission; and (iii) whether these details were available to consultees and the public to comment on and inspect prior to the granting of planning permission.

(AQW 41842/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Habitat Regulations Assessment and EIA determination undertaken by the Department assessed the potential impacts of site preparation and construction phase operations. The need for the importation of material for the construction of the site compound is described in the Project Description document and information supplied by the applicant.

The impact of reduced water quality and potential effects on the Owenkillew Special Area of Conservation caused by site preparation works and construction phase were also assessed. This is referred to in the EIA determination, case officer report and Habitats Regulations Assessment report relating to the project. These documents are available to view online on the Department's Planning Portal.

In addition, a discharge consent at the site from NIEA requires that discharge from the site is below the limits specified in the consent. Adherence to the consent will prevent any impact from the works on the water quality of the Owenkillew SAC/ASSI.

Detailed plans with final topographical levels for the compound area were received following the grant of planning permission to aid the Department's enforcement investigation.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the departmental and arm's-length body buildings that are equipped with defibrillators; and how many staff in each of these buildings are trained in (i) the use of defibrillators; and (ii) C.P.R.
(AQW 41858/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My Department does not have any directly managed departmental buildings or arms length body buildings equipped with defibrillators. There are some DOE staff located in one building (Goodwood House), managed by another department, which does have defibrillators. There are qualified first aiders located in all buildings housing DOE staff and they are trained to administer cardiopulmonary resuscitation in an emergency.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 40626/11-15, to detail (i) the organisations that have submitted an application from the Fermanagh District Council area; (ii) the value of each of application; and (iii) the applications that were successful and amounts awarded.
(AQW 41889/11-15)

Mr Durkan: ENTRUST, as the regulatory body for the Landfill Communities Fund, enrols those organisations wishing to receive funding through the scheme, and the environmental bodies will report to ENTRUST the contributions they have received from landfill operators. Details of the amounts paid out to environmental bodies by Fermanagh District Council since the fund was established are contained in the attached table.

However, ENTRUST does not hold information on any unsuccessful or partially successful applications. That information would need to be sought directly from Fermanagh District Council.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, given the length of time taken to deal with enforcement cases, for his assessment of whether the requirement of Regulation 26 of the Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012, to screen unauthorised developments for Environment Impact Assessment only at the time when formal enforcement action is deemed appropriate, for his assessment of whether his Department transposed the Environmental Impact Assessment Directive, which requires the effects of a project to be considered at the earliest possible stage of the decision making process.
(AQW 41913/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department has made the Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012 which amend and consolidate the Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1999. These Regulations transpose the codified EIA Directive (Directive 2011/92/EU) into the planning process in Northern Ireland. The Department is satisfied that it has fully transposed the directive into Northern Ireland law which has passed the scrutiny of the European Commission to whom the regulations were submitted.

The alleged length of time taken to get to enforcement is not a legislative error as implied and the actions undertaken by the department are both appropriate and legally compliant with the EIA directive.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment whether the proposed mini fall off test in the shale reservoir included in planning application E/2013/0093/F under licence PL3/10 issued to Rathlin Energy Ltd, will provide information about the character of the shales that would be relevant to an assessment of their unconventional resource potential.
(AQW 42022/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Ballinlea No. 2 well is planned to test whether the oil found in a sandstone unit in the 2008 Ballinlea No. 1 well is an indication that there is a significant oil / gas accumulation nearby (at a geologically structurally higher level).

The proposed mini fall off test will take place in the Carboniferous shale which lies beneath the target sandstone layer. The fall off test measures how the pressure in a low permeability rock unit 'falls off' with time. It gives an estimate of the permeability in low pressure formations and is not a hydraulic fracturing process.

Currently, there is relatively little known about the deep geology of the Rathlin sedimentary basin and the distribution of Carboniferous shales is poorly understood, let alone their viability as an economic target for gas.

The exploration operations proposed by Rathlin will examine the Carboniferous shale, because these would be the source rocks for any oil discovered in the overlying sandstones and it is important for the company to understand their physical and chemical properties including their potential to have generated oil and gas in the geological past. No testing for shale gas will be carried out and the results of the mini fall off test will provide information about the shale properties but not constitute an assessment of the shale's unconventional resource potential.

I can assure you that application E/2013/0093/F constitutes a conventional borehole and is not for the unconventional exploration of hydrocarbons and neither does it propose to use any unconventional testing techniques. The primary objective of the proposed Ballinlea No. 2 well is to test the Carboniferous conventional sandstone reservoir sequence at the new well location.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment what reassurance he can provide that planning application E/2013/0093/F will not involve or permit fracking.
(AQW 42033/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Planning application E/2013/0093/F seeks permission for an exploratory borehole for hydrocarbon exploration. The application does not propose high volume unconventional hydraulic fracturing, however at the extended testing phase, should the operator have difficulty obtaining the natural flow of the gas/oil, a conventional hydraulic stimulation fracture may need to be conducted.

A conventional hydraulic stimulated fracture is different from the unconventional hydraulic fracturing currently being debated in the media. It is common practice in the industry and was not controversial prior to the debate around unconventional horizontal fracking.

A shale gas fracking operation is multiple fracking zones over a significant length through a horizontal section in the shale requiring a significant amount of equipment, water and high pressure.

The conventional hydraulic stimulation would only be carried out if the oil or gas production rate was poor during previous flow tests or if the acid stimulation (acid wash) to clean up the perforations in the casing are not successful.

The volumes of fluid to be used (115 cu m) may be compared to those specified by the European Commission in their definition of High Volume Hydraulic Fracturing (1000 cu metres per stage or 10,000 cu. m. per well) to which the recent recommendation paper on the 'Exploration and production of hydrocarbons (such as shale gas) using high volume hydraulic fracturing in the EU' (Jan 2014) applies.

I can therefore assure you that application E/2013/0093/F constitutes a conventional borehole and is not for the unconventional exploration of hydrocarbons and neither does it propose to use any unconventional testing techniques.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of the Environment to outline how he will mitigate the impact of the Budget 2015/16 on environmental Non-Government Organisations.
(AQO 7554/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Under the final Budget for 2015-16, my Department's non ring-fenced Resource DEL budget was reduced by 10.7% to £104.2 million, the highest percentage reduction of all the Departments.

My Department is actively assessing which discretionary functions will be affected. It is expected that a wide range of grant and other support programmes that are aimed at supporting key environmental programmes will be affected.

I will be trying to support the many Non Government Organisations in whatever practical way possible including the use of receipts from the 2015/16 Carrier Bag Levy.

In making my final budget decisions I will of course take into consideration the concerns and issues raised during the consultation process.

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the extent of co-operation between his Department and the Road Safety Authority in agreeing road safety policy.
(AQO 7555/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There is a great deal of co-operation between my Department and the Road Safety Authority (RSA) on road safety matters. We also have strong working arrangements with the Department for Transport, Tourism and Sport (DTTAS).

My officials and I liaise regularly with our counterparts in Ireland to share experience and exchange information including, over recent times, on the development of our respective road safety strategies. Our strategies are complementary, with many of the same issues to be addressed, and both focus on the principal causes of road traffic casualties such as speeding, drink-driving, carelessness and failure to wear seat belts. The RSA is a member of my Road Safety Forum and regularly attends and contributes to Forum meetings.

Structured arrangements at official level have been established to progress mutual projects, support activities in one jurisdiction which impact on the other, and generally to ensure positive road safety benefits on both sides of the border. DOE, RSA and DTTAS officials engage regularly between more formal meetings, the most recent of which was on 16 December 2014 when a range of road safety and vehicle regulation issues of mutual interest were explored. These included Graduated Fixed Penalty and Deposit Schemes; graduated driver licensing; fitness to drive; definitions of serious injuries; and interventions around driving at work.

We will continue to share information on initiatives and measures and on the technical, logistical and public information aspects of implementing such measures. We will also consider further activities that would afford the possibility of raising the profile of the strong collaboration on road safety activities, including in enforcement operations and promotional campaigns. The next formal meeting with RSA and DTTAS officials is scheduled take place in May 2015 but a wide range of contact will take place between now and then.

I am keen to see links continue and strengthen. It makes sense to work together to the benefit of everyone on the island. We all aspire to ever increased levels of road safety, and learning from each other is an important element of delivering this.

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the development of Dundrum Castle.
(AQO 7556/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Further to my announcement, in December 2013, of significant Capital investment in Heritage-Led Development, my officials have progressed works to develop enhanced visitor facilities at Dundrum Castle. Part of this was the completion of an objective Feasibility Study to ensure we get the best location and form for a new visitor facility, based on present and anticipated needs at Dundrum Castle.

The Feasibility Study was completed in September 2014, and identified particular issues around vehicular and pedestrian access to Dundrum Castle, issues that are key to the site.

I am advised by officials that work continues with key stakeholders, including landowners and other statutory bodies, to resolve these issues, and to move forward with delivery of the enhanced visitor facilities.

Works underway to date include trial excavations to ensure that the new facility will not destroy important archaeological remains at the site, geotechnical studies to assess the ground conditions for development, vegetation management to enhance public views to and from the castle, and trial lighting to illuminate the upstanding remains.

As the project develops I will ensure that you are kept updated. Dundrum Castle is a jewel in terms of the heritage offering of South Down, which is why I have prioritised it for new facilities, making a real contribution to our tourism economy in this and the wider region.

Mr Ó Muilleoir asked the Minister of the Environment whether he will reconsider the decision not to allow planning permission to convert the Scottish Mutual building in Belfast into a boutique hotel.
(AQO 7558/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In 2013/14 my Department processed a planning application for the conversion of the Scottish Mutual Building to Boutique Hotel along with an associated listed Building Consent for various internal alterations and external repairs. NIEA Conservation Architects provided particularly helpful advice on the Listed Building aspects of these proposals.

My Department granted Planning Permission and Listed Building Consent on 28 February 2014.

At that time I acknowledged the importance of this prominent listed building in Donegall Square and within the Linen Conservation Area. The proposals for the sympathetic conversion of this beautiful building secure the future sustainable use of such an important landmark building and will add to the vitality of Belfast City Centre.

In line with my vision for a fast, fair and fit for purpose planning system this large scale investment proposal was processed and approved within 6 months in line with the Programme for Government commitment.

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the proposed development of Killeavy Castle.
(AQO 7559/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The planning application for the proposed development of Killeavy Castle will be presented to the Planning Development Committee of the Newry & Mourne District Council on 5 February 2015 as an approval.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of the Environment to outline the material cost difference identified by the DVLA for printing Northern Ireland driving licences with or without the Union Flag.
(AQO 7560/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As I stated during the Assembly debate on this subject on 27 January 2015, I do not believe there to be a material cost difference between printing Northern Ireland driving licences with or without the Union flag. Rather it is the provision of an opt in/opt out option and the overall costs associated with the system and other changes required to offer this individual choice which led DVLA officials to advise DOE officials in 2012 that such costs would be prohibitive.

The Department for Transport itself concluded that the costs associated with an opt in/ opt out option were prohibitive and have confirmed, as I have previously noted, that all GB driving licences will be printed with the EU and Union flag.

I understand that DVLA has recently estimated the cost associated with individual choice, had it been offered to Great Britain driving licence holders, to be in the region of £14-19 million.

As I stated in my answer to AQW 40588/11-15, DVLA has confirmed that the cost of printing NI driving licences will not be impacted by the decision to change the design of the GB driving licence.

Mr Milne asked the Minister of the Environment to outline his Department's response to the wind turbine collapse near Fintona, County Tyrone, in particular the implications for set-back distances in planning policy.
(AQO 7561/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I would, firstly, like to convey my concern at this unprecedented event, however, I am very pleased to hear that no harm occurred to any member of the public. Indeed, it is reassuring to learn that no member of the public has ever been injured by a wind turbine operating in the UK or Ireland and I am assured by the renewable energy industry that this event was an extremely rare occurrence. The trade bodies that the Northern Ireland Renewable Energy Group (NIRIG) represents are committed to taking practical steps to improve safety standards and to ensure that lessons learned are shared as widely as possible among member companies so that standards are continually improved.

I am aware that investigations into the incident are currently being carried out by the Health and Safety Executive as well as by the manufacturer of the wind turbine. I look forward to the findings from these investigations which I intend to fully consider in terms of any implications that they may have on my Department's planning policy for Renewable Energy.

The planning system in Northern Ireland exists to regulate the development and use of land in the public interest. It is important to distinguish those matters which planning can influence from those which are outside its control. The central concerns of the planning system are to determine what kind of development is appropriate, how much is desirable, where it should best be located and what it looks like. In carrying out its statutory duty as the Planning Authority, my Department determines planning applications for Renewable Energy developments on a case by case basis, against planning policy such as that contained within Planning Policy Statement 18: Renewable Energy (PPS 18), its supplementary Best Practice Guidance as well as all other material considerations.

Planning policy indicates that the separation distance which will generally apply in relation to potential impacts on public safety, human health and residential amenity for wind farm development is 10 times rotor diameter to occupied property, with a minimum distance not less than 500m.

The details of each application including the site characteristics, locality and height of turbines will differ and therefore each application is determined on its own merits and separation distances may differ in each case.

Although my Department does not have any responsibility for the physical construction, mechanical integrity or the maintenance of wind turbines, I am committed to working with Executive colleagues as well as the Renewable Energy Industry on any findings that may arise from the ongoing investigations into this incident at Screggagh wind farm.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether there is a disease prevelant which attacks the yew trees at the front of Parliament Buildings; and if so, why his Department replaces the trees rather than trying to eradicate the disease.
(AQW 39614/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): Tests undertaken of the yew trees and soil in front of Parliament Buildings revealed that no disease is present. The loss of some of the yew trees is related to the nature of the site and the exposure of the trees to the elements.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how much revenue was raised through stamp duty in each of the last five financial years.
(AQW 41759/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The latest HM Revenue & Customs estimates of the stamp duty raised in Northern Ireland in each of the five years to 2013-14 are detailed in the table below.

	2009-10	2010-11	2011-12	2012-13	2013-14
N. Ireland	£40m	£40m	£30m	£33m	£37m

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what was the outcome of his Department's review of the accreditation process for Centres of Procurement Expertise.
(AQW 41796/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: My Department, through the Central Procurement Directorate (CPD), carried out a review of the Centre of Procurement Expertise (CoPE) accreditation process resulting in agreement by the Procurement Board of a new model in November 2011. The CoPEs were subsequently assessed against the model between September and December 2013, with the results considered by the Procurement Board in June 2014.

The assessment process tested CoPEs against the Model's eight key criteria, to ensure that processes, procedures and controls were operating efficiently and were compliant with Northern Ireland Procurement Policy.

The criteria are as follows:

- a unique portfolio in the roads, transport, water, housing, education or health sectors;
- a clearly defined organisational structure, setting out the roles and responsibilities of Head of CoPE and Head of Procurement;
- delivery of the Procurement Board's Strategic Plan, including best value for money;
- compliance with Northern Ireland Procurement Policy and best practice;
- adequate resourcing of qualified procurement/construction professionals;
- robust data capture and management information systems to enable the implementation of policy and best practice;
- sufficient controls in place within the CoPE to manage risk; and
- effective engagement with the relevant supply base.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the departmental and arm's-length body buildings that are equipped with defibrillators; and how many staff in each of these buildings are trained in (i) the use of defibrillators; and (ii) C.P.R.
(AQW 41846/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The information requested is provided in the table below.

Building	Staff trained in use of defibrillators	Staff trained in C.P.R
Clare House	10	6
Craigantlet Buildings	10	9
Goodwood House	12	12
Lincoln Buildings	13	13
Waterside House	0	2
M-TEK II Armagh	2	2

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of staff employed by the Special EU Programmes Body, broken down by religion.
(AQW 41906/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The community composition of the SEUPB staff in the Belfast and Omagh offices is outlined in the table below.

	Number of staff
Protestant	20
Roman Catholic	32
Other	3
Total	55

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of people who have enquired about a reassessment of a non-domestic rate bill since the Schedule of Draft Rateable Values was revealed in November 2014.
(AQW 41957/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Since the release of the schedule of draft rateable values on the 13th November 2014 there has been a total of 895 enquiries.

597 of these have been general enquiries and 298 have been enquiries relating to the assessment of the property.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he will publish the strategy which links the Executive's Voluntary Exit Scheme to wider public sector reforms in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 42004/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Stormont House Agreement and Budget 2015-16 set the strategic direction for a significant period of restructuring and reform across the public sector. On 22 January, the NI Executive agreed a suite of measures to help departments to live within Budget 2015-16 and beyond. The measures include financial support for voluntary exits of staff across the NICS and the wider public sector.

In light of the prevailing budgetary climate, there is a need to renew, redesign, rethink, restructure and reform our government. Voluntary exit will be an important step in this process and will facilitate restructuring to provide a more streamlined public sector.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what advice and support is available to third sector organisations who are seeking to bid for public service contracts.
(AQW 42202/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: There are a number of initiatives to provide advice and support to organisations in Northern Ireland and there is a particular focus on assisting SEEs when bidding for public service contracts.

CPD has published procurement guidance note 01/11 Public Procurement: A Guide for Social Economy Enterprises. This note aims to increase their knowledge and understanding of public sector procurement and in so doing, help them to develop their capability to compete successfully for public sector contracts. It also highlights the benefits of forming a consortium or sub-contracting within the supply chain.

CPD also attends regular 'Meet the Buyer' events enabling organisations to meet with public sector buyers, gaining insight into the public procurement process.

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether the concession to staff of the Fire Service allowing retirement at 55, will attract a financial penalty by Westminster to the block grant.
(AQW 42205/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: There is no financial penalty to the Executive's budget resulting from the concession to firefighters allowing retirement at 55.

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the implementation plan for the devolution of Corporation Tax.
(AQO 7581/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Stormont House Agreement set out the basis on which the Government has agreed to the transfer of Corporation Tax rate setting powers to the Northern Ireland Assembly. The passage of the Bill is conditional upon the implementation of key measures to deliver sustainable finances for Northern Ireland, in particular, the agreement of a balanced budget for 2015/16 and the passage of the Welfare Reform Bill in this House. As members know, good progress has been made on both fronts.

As such, the Corporation Tax (Northern Ireland) Bill was introduced to the House of Commons on 8th January. The Bill has now had two readings in the House of Commons and the Public Bill Committee concluded its consideration last Thursday. On this basis, it is anticipated that the Bill will receive Royal Assent before the dissolution of Parliament on 30 March 2015.

The legislation includes a commencement clause that will enable powers to transfer from April 2017 subject to the Executive demonstrating its finances remain on a sustainable footing for the long term.

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he has received the NI Water pay remit.
(AQO 7583/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: No pay remit has been submitted to my Department for Northern Ireland Water staff.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many government contracts have included social clauses since 2011.
(AQO 7584/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: All contracts that are based on CPD's standard forms of contract will contain social clauses that relate to equality and health and safety.

Departments can also include additional social clauses intended to deliver their departmental responsibilities and policy priorities and support the Programme for Government commitment.

The first year of reporting on the Programme for Government commitment was 2012/13.

Reports provided by departments show that, for financial years 2012/13 and 2013/14, 1,914 contracts included additional social clauses. However, not all departments provided a report. It is disappointing that reporting is incomplete.

CPD will ask departments to provide figures for 2014/15 in April 2015.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what discussions he has had with the Minister for Employment and Learning to identify options to realise the £1.8 million required to match fund European Social Fund projects.
(AQO 7585/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As part of the 2015-16 draft Budget discussions, Minister Farry raised a number of pressures within his Department, including match funding for European Social Fund projects.

The Executive has agreed the 2015-16 Budget, including a settlement for the Department for Employment and Learning. It is now for Minister Farry to manage his budget within that envelope.

Mr Devenney asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to outline his Department's interaction with Carnegie Roundtable on Measuring Wellbeing.
(AQO 7586/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: In September 2013, I jointly opened the "Measuring What Matters in Northern Ireland" conference, organised by the Carnegie UK Trust. At this event I asked officials to draw together Northern Ireland data for the National Wellbeing set of indicators. This information was published in February 2014.

Following on from this work the Carnegie Roundtable was established in 2014 to create a route map for measuring wellbeing and for achieving wellbeing outcomes for citizens and communities across N Ireland. Throughout the last year, DFP officials have participated in the Carnegie Roundtable work. This has included attendance at the roundtable discussions and participation in a study visit to Edinburgh.

On the 20th January 2015, I addressed a seminar organised by the Carnegie Roundtable on Measuring Wellbeing in Northern Ireland.

Mr Brady asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how he will ensure that the Voluntary Exit Scheme will not lead to skills shortages in the public sector.
(AQO 7587/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: As the Minister of Finance and Personnel, I am responsible for seeking, allocating and monitoring the funding for voluntary exit schemes across the public sector. These schemes will support the pay-bill reductions required to address budgetary constraints. My Department is also responsible for the development and implementation of a specific voluntary exit scheme for the Northern Ireland Civil Service (NICS).

For the NICS scheme and bearing in mind the fact that the scheme is voluntary, the number and skills base of staff wishing to exit is not yet known. However, in the first instance, the staffing complement in terms of skills requirements will be managed locally within each department. Where requested, Corporate Human Resources (CHR) within DFP will assist with the deployment of staff between NICS departments to ensure skills are maintained across the NICS.

In the wider public sector, it will be for individual public bodies to decide on how pay-bill reductions will be achieved with business cases supporting for each scheme. Each body will need to address the service and skills implications for their own organisations.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the Voluntary Exit Scheme.
(AQO 7589/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Plans to develop a Voluntary Exit Scheme for the NICS are well advanced. The Executive agreed the preferred option at its meeting on 5 February. It is intended that the Scheme will be launched on 2 March 2015. The Scheme will be open to virtually all Civil Servants, including part-time staff, below Permanent Secretary (and analogous) grades.

We anticipate those selected to leave under the Scheme will do so in tranches between 30 September 2015 and 31st March 2016, however there will not be a provision for staff to select a leaving date when making their applications.

Trade Union Side has been consulted throughout the development of the Scheme, both at departmental level and centrally through the Whitley Executive machinery. We will continue this consultation up to and beyond launch.

The overarching objective of the NICS Voluntary Exit Scheme is a permanent NICS pay bill reduction in the 2015/16 financial year and beyond. I would emphasise that a successful outcome can only be achieved if all departments adopt a collaborative and co-operative approach to releasing staff and manage the redeployment consequences tin a corporate fashion.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the cost to his Department of (a) heating; and (a) electricity in 2014; and (ii) the capital costs and details of the five most cost effective projects which his Department could undertake to generate its own energy or reduce energy costs.
(AQW 40559/11-15)

Mr Wells (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): My officials have liaised with colleagues in DFP to seek to obtain as much information as possible for this response.

My Department is housed in a multi-occupancy building and the Department of Finance and Personnel (DFP) Properties Division is responsible for paying utility bills associated with multiple occupancy buildings in the Northern Ireland Civil Service Office Estate. In that context, DFP is also responsible for capital projects which could be undertaken to generate energy or reduce energy costs.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40396/11-15, to provide further details on 'the difficulties in providing medical staff with expertise in pain management'; and what efforts are being made to address these difficulties.
(AQW 41251/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Health and Social Care Trust has advised that the recruitment of medical staff with both anaesthetic and chronic pain management qualifications is currently challenging at a national level. My reply to AQW 38677 11-15 provided advice on efforts that are being made to address these difficulties.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the support services dedicated to the needs of young carers in the North West.
(AQW 41271/11-15)

Mr Wells: Support services to young carers in the North West are provided by Barnardo's, on behalf of the Health and Social Care Board, and include:

- A break from caring
- A listening ear
- Individual support
- Information about the illness of the person they are caring for
- Peer Support Groups
- Personal Development group work programmes
- Advocacy, advice and signposting
- Fun/social activities
- A voice
- A safe environment to express concerns and worries.

It is the policy of the Department to treat all children who are providing care as children first and carers second.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 39938/11-15, to detail all proposed new service developments, and their respective costing, which will not proceed in 2015/16.
(AQW 41315/11-15)

Mr Wells: At this stage, the Department has estimated that potential service developments amounting to £110m would not be able to proceed in 2015/16 in the following areas:

- Elective care;
- Unscheduled care;
- Family and childcare;
- Safety and quality including normative nursing levels;

- Public health initiatives including vaccinations;
- Revenue consequences of capital schemes;
- NICE drugs and specialist services;
- Mental health and learning disability; and
- TYC transitional funding.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 39817/11-15, why he has not answered the original question.
(AQW 41335/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Health and Social Care Trust's Contingency Plan was developed in October 2014 and was focused primarily on those savings that could actually be delivered in the remaining months of the financial year, including constraining temporary bank/agency staffing and non-pay expenditure. As the plan was of a short-term nature, the trust advises that no direct consideration was given to rurality.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40482/11-15, to detail (i) the number of staff receiving these bonuses; and (ii) their particular staff role, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust area.
(AQW 41520/11-15)

Mr Wells: Senior medical staff do not receive performance related bonuses.

They can however apply for a Clinical Excellence Award through an independent committee process managed by the Department. These awards are given to recognise exceptional performance by medical consultants in the services they provide to patients. Clinical Excellence awards are part of the Terms and Conditions of service for medical and dental staff employed by the Trusts.

The tables below detail the number of staff in the 5 Health and Social Care Trusts who are in receipt of a Clinical Excellence Award, broken down by speciality.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how the number of hospital beds available compares with the situation in (i) May 2011; (ii) how the number of Emergency Department attendances compares over the same period. (AQW 41525/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the number of available beds across all programmes of care, in HSC Trusts in Northern Ireland is collected on a quarterly basis. The number of available beds is the number of beds on each ward open overnight that were actually available for patients, measured at midnight. Beds reserved solely for day care admissions or regular day admissions are not included as these patients do not stay overnight.

The table below compares the average number of available beds during the quarter ending 30th June 2011 with quarter ending 31st December 2014P.

HSC Trust	Available beds quarter ending June 2011	Available beds quarter ending Dec 2014[P]	Difference in available beds
Belfast	2,431.4	2,114.2	-317.2
Northern	1,086.2	995.8	-90.5
South Eastern	943.2	959.3	16.1
Southern	1,025.5	894.5	-131.0

P Data relating to quarter ending 31st December 2014 is provisional and therefore subject to change

The Rapid Review of Northern Ireland Health and Social Care funding needs and the productivity challenge (Appleby, 2011) identified that in 2008/09, acute beds in Northern Ireland were approximately 25% higher than in England, that they were not used as intensively and that the lengths of stay were longer. Hospital bed numbers have therefore decreased since June 2011. This change has been managed by more efficient use of beds through changing clinical practice, increasing use of day surgery, better anaesthetics, and improved community rehabilitation options. These developments in changing the patterns of hospital bed use have resulted in shorter stays in hospital. Consequently the average length of stay for all patients in Northern Ireland has fallen. In 2010/11, average length of stay in the acute programme of care was 5.5 days; this decreased to 4.9 days in 2013/14. As a result fewer beds are needed to meet demand. Over the same period, percentage occupancy has fluctuated, increasing by 0.6 percentage points overall. Between 2010/11 and 2013/14, the day case rate increased from 74.2 to 77.8.

Information on the number of attendances (New and Unplanned Reviews) at emergency care departments during the quarters ending December 2014 and June 2011 is detailed in the table below, for the most recent period which information is available.

Quarter Ending	Number of New & Unplanned Review Attendances
June 2011	183,099
December 2014	171,747

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the budget of the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust for 2015/16.
(AQW 41531/11-15)

Mr Wells: Work is currently ongoing regarding financial planning for 2015/16; as such the budgets for each individual Trust have not as yet been finalised.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety by how much the budget for the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust will increase in 2015/16.
(AQW 41533/11-15)

Mr Wells: Work is currently ongoing regarding financial planning for 2015/16; as such the budgets for each individual Trust have not as yet been finalised.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40847/11-15, to detail the (i) incidence; and (ii) survival rates for each year.
(AQW 41544/11-15)

Mr Wells:

(i) Information on cancer incidence rates including rates for each cancer, for each of the last 10 years, was provided in the response to AQW 40847/11-15.

(ii) The table below shows the age-standardised 5-year relative survival rates for cancer in Northern Ireland and where possible, for each cancer site. It should be noted that 5-year survival rates are available from the Northern Ireland Cancer Registry (NICR) and are not routinely calculated every year.

Confidence intervals are a measure of the precision of a statistic. Typically, when incidence is low, precision is poorer and confidence intervals will be wider. As a general rule, when comparing statistics, if the confidence interval around one statistic overlaps with the interval around another, it is unlikely that there is any real difference between the two (e.g. bladder cancer survival rate in 1993-97 vs. 2003-07).

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 41049/11-15, to detail (i) the extent of consultations; (ii) the groups consulted; and (iii) whether the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust intends to publish the outcomes of the consultation and screening process.
(AQW 41556/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern HSC Trust has confirmed that it consulted with a total of 250 existing Community Meals service users who were asked for their views via a survey. It also consulted with 100 prospective service users who participated in focus groups at day care centres. The outcome of the consultation helped to inform the development of the service specification which was used to tender the contract.

The Trust has advised that it has not published the outcome of the consultation and Equality Screening process. The Equality Screening documents are available on request. The Trust is committed to monitoring the impact of the proposal on an on-going basis.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the current number of people suffering with Multiple Sclerosis who are currently waiting for an appointment with a consultant neurologist following an emergency referral in each Health and Social Care Trust; and (ii) their respective average waiting time.
(AQW 41559/11-15)

Mr Wells: Reason for referral, or confirmed diagnosis, is not collected for patients waiting for a first consultant-led appointment. Therefore it is not possible to separately identify patients with Multiple Sclerosis waiting for a first appointment with a consultant neurologist.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much has been spent on gluten free food issued by prescription in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41583/11-15)

Mr Wells: Patients with confirmed gluten-sensitive medical conditions are currently able to obtain a range of foods on prescription. To ensure efficient use of resources, the HSC Board has issued guidance to all prescribers recommending that only staple foods be supplied on prescription to patients diagnosed with gluten-sensitive enteropathies.

The table below provides a breakdown of the gross expenditure, prior to discounts, on all relevant products that can be identified by Business Services Organisation covering the last five financial years.

Financial Year	Expenditure
2009/10	£2,258,153
2010/11	£2,395,843
2011/12	£2,294,513
2012/13	£2,002,211
2013/14	£1,971,486

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps he is taking to address the current waiting time of 44 weeks for spinal appointments at the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 41587/11-15)

Mr Wells: Waiting times for new spinal appointments within the Belfast Health and Social Care Trusts are 44 weeks for routine patients and less than 15 weeks for urgent patients.

The Belfast Trust has been successful in appointing a replacement, whole time equivalent, spinal surgeon, following the retirement of two, 0.5 whole time equivalent, spinal surgeons in December 2014. The Belfast Trust continues to prioritise patients based on clinical urgency in order to address long waiting times and is currently taking steps to re-allocate patients to the replacement surgeon.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust plans to close the Physiotherapy Department at Bangor Community Hospital.
(AQW 41592/11-15)

Mr Wells: Podiatry and Physiotherapy services are located within the Therapy and Rehabilitation department in Bangor Hospital. This provides outpatient appointments for Allied Health professions. These services continue as normal and there is no intention to withdraw these services or close the facility.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust plans to close the Podiatry Service at Bangor Community Hospital.
(AQW 41593/11-15)

Mr Wells: Podiatry and Physiotherapy services are located within the Therapy and Rehabilitation department in Bangor Hospital. This provides outpatient appointments for Allied Health professions. Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the operating costs of Northfield House in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41597/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has provided the information set out in the table below on the operating costs of Northfield House in each of the last five financial years:

Year:	Operating Costs:
2009/2010	£1,108,281
2010/2011	£1,039,592
2011/2012	£ 998,526

Year:	Operating Costs:
2012/2013	£ 994,784
2013/2014	£1,055,586

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the operating costs of the intermediate care beds in Ards Community Hospital in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41598/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust has provided the operating costs of 'GP Beds' which includes intermediate care beds, shown in the table below. It should be noted that the mix of GP and Intermediate Care Beds numbers is likely to have been changeable over this five year period.

Year	Total operating cost of GP Beds, Ards Community Hospital (£)
2009/10	1,457,868
2010/11	1,378,714
2011/12	1,321,925
2012/13	1,483,050
2013/14	1,607,177

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the cost of treating respite and intermediate care patients at Northfield House, Donaghadee, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41600/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust has provided the costs which are set out in the table below. Prior to year 2012/13, costs were not split between intermediate and non-intermediate care provision. It should also be noted that non-intermediate care includes respite care provision.

	Cost per Occupied Bed weeks (£)
Year	Intermediate Care Provision	Non-Intermediate Care Provision
2009/10		666.34
2010/11		754.91
2011/12		958.25
2012/13	1079.66	877.37
2013/14	907.47	1329.00

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40543/11-15, what additional payments or budget allocations will be made available to community pharmacies to provide the "Making it Better through Pharmacy in the Community Strategy".
(AQW 41630/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Department's implementation plan for the 'Making it Better through Pharmacy in the Community' strategy was published on 4 February 2015.

The plan recommends 16 key actions for implementation by the HSC Board, DHSSPS and Pharmacy Regulatory, Professional and Representative Bodies. The HSC Board has been asked to produce a detailed work plan to deliver their key actions. It is anticipated that some elements of the plan will be delivered within existing resources whilst others will be subject to business case approval processes.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust plans to relocate the breast screening unit from Newtownards Community Hospital to Bangor.
(AQW 41639/11-15)

Mr Wells: Women are invited for screening every three years. Breast screening is provided across Northern Ireland using a mix of static and mobile screening units. The mobile units are sited at suitable locations across each of the Health and Social Care Trust areas. This is to make the breast screening service more accessible to women and hopefully increase the uptake.

In the past women from Bangor were invited for screening to the mobile unit at Bangor Community Hospital. When the mobile was scheduled to visit Bangor in 12/13, the site at Bangor Community Hospital was not available due to ongoing capital works and women living in Bangor were invited to Newtownards instead.

A site had been found for the most recent visit to Bangor, scheduled to last from December 2014 to November 2015. However at short notice, the new site (Bangor Health Centre) became unavailable, due to problems with electricity. As a result the mobile screening unit was relocated to Ards Community Hospital and appointments were resent to Bangor women previously invited to offer screening at Newtownards.

The South eastern Trust is continuing to work to identify a suitable site in Bangor for the screening mobile unit.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 30140/11-15, whether the current budget will allow for the implementation of the National Institute of Health and Care Excellence guidance of three treatment cycles of IVF, or whether a phased approach of two treatments will be considered.
(AQW 41643/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board has responsibility for commissioning fertility services in Northern Ireland. The Board is currently considering how best to implement NICE Clinical Guideline 156 within the context of the very challenging 2015/16 financial position and competing health and social care priorities. While the Board is committed to achieving the full implementation of this Clinical Guideline as soon as possible, the financial situation is likely to impact on its ability to increase the number of publicly funded IVF cycles.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the fire safety arrangements adopted by each Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 41644/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Department of Health and Social Services does not hold information centrally relating to the operational procedures of individual Health and Social Care Trusts. The Health and Social Care Trusts were asked to submit details on their fire safety arrangements and these responses are attached in Annex A.

Annex A: Trust Responses to information request

Southern	The Southern Health and Social care Trust has comprehensive and integrated fire safety arrangements in place which is outlined as follows. The Trust invests available resources to fire safety through staffing resources for the Fire Safety Department; training; upgrading building infrastructure; and maintaining existing fire safety provisions such as fire alarm systems, fire doors, first aid firefighting equipment, etc. The Trust has a Fire Safety and Arson Prevention Policy which details the responsibilities for staff across the Trust and sets out governance arrangements. Such arrangements include a Fire safety Committee which monitors fire safety throughout the Trust and is comprised of senior representatives from each Directorate. Each facility has a Nominated Fire Safety Officer who has local management responsibility. Training is an essential part of the overall all fire safety strategy which is provided for all staff. Specialised training is provided for Nominated Fire Offices, staff using evacuation aids such as ski sheets/ ski pads and evacuation chairs, hands-on use of fire extinguishers and in some specialist roles such as bed managers, switchboard staff and staff in theatres. Life safety is paramount and the Trust has a specific focus on evacuation arrangements. Each facility has an evacuation plan and fire drills are carried out regularly by the Nominated Fire Officer. In hospital facilities simulated fire drills are undertaken by Fire Prevention Officers, actions are observed, staff interviewed and ward audited and a written report is forwarded to Nominated Fire Officer, Director responsible for ward and Executive Director responsible for fire safety. In our hospitals we have started to undertake major exercises which includes the Fire & Rescue Service, Ambulance Service, Police Service and local Council; the first such exercise was carried out in Craigavon Area Hospital in September 2014. There is a rolling programme of fire risk assessments which are undertaken by Trust Fire Prevention Officers which reviews fire safety arrangements in facilities. The findings of these risk assessments are issued as a written report to the Nominated Fire Officer for that facility, relevant Director and the Executive Director for fire safety.

HSC Trust	Trust Response to Information Request AQW 41644/11-15
	The Trust has comprehensive guidance and provisions in place as part of the contractual arrangement for building contractors. The Trust has a small Fire Safety Department which provides expertise and advice on all aspects of fire safety, review all work schemes, investigates all fire incidents, monitors fire safety, carry out simulated fire evacuations in wards and carry out fire risk assessments and specialist training. Fire safety information is published on the Trust Intranet and global mails are utilised when necessary.
Western	It is the policy of the Western Health and Social Care Trust to ensure as far as reasonably practical, that all steps are taken to prevent fire, and minimise its effects in all premises owned or occupied by the Trust (Fire Safety Policy – Trust Board approved 2014). Trust fire safety arrangements are governed by Fire & Rescue Services Order (NI) 2006, Fire Safety Regulations (NI) 2010, and DHSSPS Firecode guidance. The Trust Board through the Chief Executive has ultimate accountability to ensure effective fire safety arrangements. Directors are responsible for fire safety arrangements within Directorate to ensure compliance with Trust Policy, legislation and guidance. Director of Performance and Service Improvement is the Director with overall fire responsibility in accordance with NI Firecode, supported by Head of Estates and Trust Environment Manager (Estates). Fire Safety Management is fully integrated in the Trust's governance and risk management arrangements i.e. Fire Safety Management Group report to Trust Risk Management Sub-Committee and then to Governance Committee of Trust Board. The Trust Fire Safety Policy is implemented and operationalized across Trust facilities contained in a Trust Fire Safety Manual, and ensures insofar as is reasonably practical: ■ compliance with fire safety legislation and guidance (including Firecode) ■ persons with fire responsibilities are nominated ■ fire risks are assessed and recorded by fire risk assessment ■ monitoring and audit of fire safety arrangements ■ documented site specific emergency evacuation plans/procedures ■ provision of appropriate fire safety training to staff ■ co-operation and communication with other users ■ monitoring and reporting of fire incidents A Multi-discipline Trust Fire Safety Working Group (chaired by Head of Estates) meets quarterly to monitor overall fire safety performance, and provides a report annually to Trust Board.
Northern	The Northern Trust has a Fire Safety & Arson Policy which details the arrangements for Fire Safety management within the Trust. The policy is in accordance with the requirements of NI Firecode Health Technical Memorandum (HTM). There is a detailed management structure for Fire Safety. The Trust completes the annual Controls Assurance Standard for Fire Safety which examines all areas of fire safety within the Trust. The Trust has Fire Safety Officers who carry out audits and Fire Risk Assessments annually within the Trust facilities which highlights any deficiencies in Fire Safety. The Fire Safety Officers deliver tailored mandatory annual Fire Safety training to Trust staff. Additional training is delivered to high risk areas such as residential homes and acute hospital wards in accordance with Firecode HTMs. The Trust has an annual programme of Firecode upgrading works for physical compliance, which brings facilities up to current NI Firecode HTM standards. We currently have two years remaining of a nine year programme which is funding dependent. All items of Fire Safety Equipment are under relevant maintenance contracts or procedures eg Fire alarms, emergency lighting, Fire extinguishers, fire doors. The Trust holds an annual meeting with the NIFRS Area Commander to go through Fire Safety within the Trust.

South Eastern	The Trust reports up to the Department of Health on Fire Safety issues via its Control Assurance Returns. There is a Control Assurance return completed for Fire Safety and this is Audited by BSO internal Audit. The Trust's Chief Executive also reports on Fire Safety via his Accountability Review with DHSSPS, as required. The Trust 's internal fire management systems include:- ■ Trust Fire Committee ■ Fire Risk Assessments carried out by Trust Fire Officers ■ ISO 14001 covers fire management ■ NIFRS audit of the Trust's Fire Risk assessments ■ RQIA cover fire risk on their inspections of Trust Property ■ Trust Internal Policies on Fire Safety include an Arson Policy and the Trust Fire Policy, which covers staff responsible from the Chief Executive down to all staff The Trust reports on KPIs on fires which include real fires, unwanted fire signals and staff training numbers. In terms of Emergency Planning, the Trust has an ongoing programme of Major Incident Tests on high risk buildings and these involve workshops with public agencies such as NIFRS, PSNI, NIAS and local Councils. The Trust has also carried out a simulation exercise, code named Nightwatch, which included involvement of NIFRS, Ambulance and Ward staff and included smoke simulation
NIAS	The Northern Ireland Ambulance Service HSC Trust (NIAS) manage fire safety across the Trust, through the application of the NIAS Fire Policy and Procedures as below: ■ Annual compliance letter from Heads of department to Chief Executive, evidenced by monthly checks by supervisors and line mangers incorporating fire safety systems alarms and extinguishers. ■ Annual review of Fire Risk Assessments conducted by the local managers and audited by Senior Managers. ■ Annual sample audit of Fire Risk Assessment (all properties audited over 5 year cycle) conducted by Senior Managers ■ 5 yearly independent review of Fire Risk Assessments ■ Quarterly fire compliance group meetings to review fire safety issues, risks, alarms and incidents and provide assurance to the Assurance Committee and Trust Board in respect of Fire Safety across the Trust. NIAS comply with applicable Fire code NIHTM 85: Fire precautions in existing healthcare premises requirements and NI Fire Part 3 of The Fire Safety Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2010; The Fire and Rescue Services (Northern Ireland) Order 2006 and The Fire Safety Regulations

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the announcement of the closure of JTI Gallaher's Ballymena factory influenced his decision to bring forward plain packaging for tobacco products.
(AQW 41647/11-15)

Mr Wells: As Minister for health, my decision to recommend that Northern Ireland be included in UK-wide regulations for the introduction of standardised packaging was made on the basis of the available evidence relating to public health. This included the outcome of the Chantler Review, published in April 2014, and the summary of responses to the final UK-wide public consultation on standardised packaging, which my Department received on 22 January 2015.

Ms P Bradley asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the savings of 9.9 per cent by the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service, as proposed in the 2015-16 budget, can be delivered within one year.
(AQW 41656/11-15)

Mr Wells: Given the scale of the financial challenges facing DHSSPS in 2015/16, each of my Department's arms length bodies initially prepared scenarios based on 5%, 10% and 15% reductions for 2015/16.

The NI Fire and Rescue Service, is working to a savings target of 5.5% for 2015/16. I will require full detailed plans on how such savings can be delivered, which are to be prioritised on the basis of those that minimise the impact on service delivery and which are focused on areas such as support functions and central staffing structures. Final agreement to the NIFRS savings proposals will be on the basis of evidence-based reforms and that a priority is given to staff and public safety. Proposals will also be subject to consultation processes, as appropriate.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the introduction of pulse oximetry for newborns in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 41680/11-15)

Mr Wells: I refer the honourable member to the answer I gave to AQW 37431/11-15.

As you are aware, the UK National Screening Committee (NSC) has recommended piloting the use of pulse oximetry to screen newborn babies for congenital heart defects. The aim of the pilot is to evaluate the impact of implementing newborn pulse oximetry screening on NHS services and to establish feasibility for future national rollout as an addition to the existing suite of screening tests undertaken as part of the newborn programme.

Pilot sites have now been identified. Phase one is due to commence this month and will undertake baseline assessment and data collection in the selected pilot sites. Phase two will commence in May 2015 and will introduce or assure the agreed national screening protocol in those pilot sites already undertaking newborn pulse oximetry and collect data to record impact of any change. The data collection in this phase will run until 31st December 2015 after which the pilot will be evaluated.

The NSC will then consider the findings from the pilot and make a recommendation. I will await their recommendation before making a policy decision on this for Northern Ireland.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the payments received by his Department in (i) Quarter 1; (ii) Quarter 2; and (iii) Quarter 3, from Year One of the 2014-18 Pharmaceutical Pricing Regulations Scheme.
(AQW 41681/11-15)

Mr Wells: Returns to Northern Ireland from Year One of the Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme 2014 are detailed in the following table.

	Quarter 1 (Jan –Mar)	Quarter 2 (Apr-Jun)	Quarter 3 (Jul-Sep)
Amount	£3.53 m	£3.83 m	£3.92 m

It should be noted the returns apportioned to Northern Ireland go directly to the Health and Social Care Board and not to my Department.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the formula by which Northern Ireland will be allocated a share of future payments from the 2014-18 Pharmaceutical Pricing Regulations Scheme.
(AQW 41682/11-15)

Mr Wells: The method for apportioning future payments to Northern Ireland from the Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme 2014 is based on the spend on licensed branded medicines for primary care in Northern Ireland using the prescribing data for the same period as the income relates.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the average waiting times of Multiple Sclerosis patients between initial referral to neurology and the first appointment with a Consultant Neurologist, broken down by each Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 41700/11-15)

Mr Wells: Reason for referral, or confirmed diagnosis, is not collected for patients waiting for a first consultant-led appointment. Therefore it is not possible to separately identify patients with Multiple Sclerosis waiting for a first appointment with a consultant neurologist.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the amount of financial resource spend on the Dementia Strategy since its publication.
(AQW 41701/11-15)

Mr Wells: Significant funding has been invested in the dementia strategy since its launch in 2011.

The HSC Board has provided funding of £1m in 2012/13 and £1m in 2013/14 across HSC Trusts. This funding has been used to develop and enhance memory services and to increase professional staffing levels and services.

Since 2011 the Department, along with Atlantic Philanthropies, has invested £400k each year in the Dementia Services Development Centre. This funding is used for the provision of training courses, advice on building design, library facilities and learning opportunities.

Further investments have come from Atlantic Philanthropies, investing £300k in a 3 year period from 2014-2017 in the NI Hospice to support end of life care for people with dementia; and a joint investment with the PHA of £194k as part of a £2m programme of research in dementia care.

The Atlantic Philanthropies/Delivering Social Change/DHSSPS initiative, which was launched in September 2014, also includes a £6.25m investment in dementia, over a three year period to 2017.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the specific cancers (i) treated by advanced radiotherapy; and (ii) whereby patients are referred to other parts of the UK for treatment.
(AQW 41703/11-15)

Mr Wells: (i)Advanced radiotherapy techniques including intensity modulated radiotherapy (IMRT) and stereotactic ablative body radiotherapy (SABR) is provided for the radical treatment of head and neck cancers, lung cancer, prostate cancer and all breast cancer. Other cancers (e.g. lower or upper GI, gynaecological cancers) can also be treated using IMRT where a clinical oncologist determines this would be more clinically beneficial than conventional treatment.

(ii)Patients for whom treatment with cranial-stereotactic radiotherapy is indicated are referred to cancer centres in England for treatment under extra contractual referral arrangements. It is hoped to have a cranial-stereotactic service established in Belfast in early 2016.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on when the Medicines Optimisation Quality Framework consultation will proceed.
(AQW 41704/11-15)

Mr Wells: I am advised that the Medicines Optimisation Quality Framework is currently being developed. A date for consultation is not yet confirmed although I expect it within the coming months.

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the future intention for the care and rehabilitation of patients that will be moved from Loane House, Aughnacloy to facilitate its closure.
(AQW 41727/11-15)

Mr Wells: Following a public consultation on the future provision of inpatient non-acute hospital services for older people, the Southern Health and Social Care Trust approved a proposal to relocate non-acute inpatient beds to Craigavon Hospital.

The proposal is that beds will be relocated to a new build development as part of a wider site redevelopment plan for the redevelopment of Craigavon Area Hospital.

However, changes will not take place immediately as implementation of the plans could take up to three years to put in place. The Southern Trust will continue to engage with users, carers, staff and the local community as it develops the implementation plans for these changes which are vital to ensuring quality health care in Southern Trust.

Full details of the outcome of the consultation can be found on the Trust website:
http://www.southerntrust.hscni.net/pdf/FINAL_TYC_Consultation_Outcome_Report_November_2014(1).pdf

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the average usage and occupancy of spot purchased beds, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust area, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41751/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is assumed that the term ‘spot purchased beds’ relates to the short term purchase of a bed in the private sector to facilitate an intermediate care patient.

The information requested is not held centrally and was therefore requested from Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts. Their responses can be found below.

Belfast HSC Trust

The Belfast HSC Trust do not spot purchase intermediate care beds.

Table 1. Total number of admissions for spot purchased beds in the Northern HSC Trust

	2012	2013	2014	2015
Northern HSC Trust	297	284	157	52

The occupancy rate for these admissions is 100% as the Northern HSC Trust only purchase beds that are required. The information available to formulate this response is only available from 2012.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what facilities are regarded as a place of safety under the Section 16 of Mental Health Act; and which Health and Social Care Trust is served by each facility.
(AQW 41790/11-15)

Mr Wells: I have assumed that your question refers to section 136 of the Mental Health Act, which does not extend to Northern Ireland. Article 129 of the Mental Health (Northern Ireland) Order 1986 is the equivalent provision in Northern Ireland and defines a place of safety as:

- any hospital designated as such by the managing Health and Social Care Trust;
- any police station, or
- any other suitable place the occupier of which is willing to temporarily receive the person requiring a place of safety.

The hospitals designated as places of safety by their managing Trusts are listed in the table below.

Hospitals designated as Places of Safety

Belfast HSC Trust	Emergency Department, Royal Victoria Hospital, Grosvenor Road, Belfast Emergency Department, Mater Hospital, Crumlin Road, Belfast
Northern HSC Trust	Emergency Department, Antrim Area Hospital, Bush Road, Antrim Emergency Department, Causeway Hospital, New Bridge Road, Coleraine
South Eastern HSC Trust	Emergency Department, Ulster Hospital, Upper Newtownards Road, Dundonald Emergency Department, Lagan Valley Hospital, Hillsborough Road, Lisburn
Southern HSC Trust	Emergency Department, Craigavon Area Hospital, 68 Lurgan Road, Portadown Emergency Department, Daisy Hill Hospital, Hospital Road, Newry
Western HSC Trust	Emergency Department, Altnagelvin Hospital, Glenshane Road, Londonderry Emergency Department, South West Acute Hospital, Enniskillen

At present all five Health and Social Care Trusts have identified their hospital emergency departments as their designated places of safety. If the individual has sustained injury, is suspected of having taken substances, or has other pressing medical needs, then a hospital emergency department is the most appropriate place of safety.

My Department is currently working with the HSC Board and the PSNI to develop a regional protocol, which will provide a framework for co-operation and joint working between the PSNI and Health and Social Care Trusts to ensure that people with a mental disorder are managed in a safe and effective manner.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the provision of full-time consultant neurologist cover in the South West Acute Hospital.
(AQW 41815/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Health and Social (HSC) Trust has advised me that there has been no change to the Neurology Service in South West Acute Hospital since November 2014. Consultant Neurology cover continues to be provided by the Regional Centre to the South West Acute Hospital.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much it is costing the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust to contest the judicial review of the temporary closure of the Bangor GP Ward.
(AQW 41817/11-15)

Mr Wells: The decision to temporarily close the 20-bed GP Ward is being considered by the Courts. The South Eastern Trust's costs to date of contesting the Judicial Review of this decision are not known at present. It is normal practice for parties to be billed after a case has been concluded.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether patients who attend an Emergency Department, and are subsequently transferred to an Acute Medical Unit, fall under the remit of Emergency Department performance standards in relation to meeting both 4 and 12 hour waiting targets.
(AQW 41833/11-15)

Mr Wells: The emergency care targets apply to all new and unplanned review patients attending emergency care departments, regardless of whether they are subsequently discharged, admitted or transferred. A patient's waiting time is measured from when they arrive in the emergency department until they leave. Transfer or admission to an acute medical unit completes their care in the emergency department and ends their emergency department waiting time.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the total number of patients attending Emergency Departments; and (ii) the number of these patients subsequently transferred to an Acute Medical Unit, in each of the last twelve months, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 41834/11-15)

Mr Wells:

(i) It is assumed that this question refers to the number of attendances (new and unplanned reviews) at emergency care departments. It is important to note that the number of attendances does not equate to the number of patients treated, as it is possible for the same person to attend an emergency care department more than once during each month.

Information on the number of attendances at emergency care departments is detailed in the table below, for each of the last twelve months (January 2014 – December 2014).

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the measures his Department is taking to reduce dependence on agency staff.
(AQW 41835/11-15)

Mr Wells: Agency staff can be a vital resource to maintain delivery of service and I recognise that agency expenditure will never be zero. It is, however, an important policy aim for the health service, to endeavour to reduce expenditure on agency, locum and bank staff.

Health and Social Care Trusts are continually seeking to drive down these costs through a range of initiatives. One such initiative which seeks to more effectively manage the use of and expenditure associated with locum doctors, is the new e-locum system currently being piloted within HSC Trusts. This should help with the difficultly in securing cover for gaps in rotas by offering greater opportunity to systemise and organise staffing cover.

Furthermore I am delighted to advise that an additional £12million has been secured to support the implementation of Delivering Care (Nurse Staffing Levels in NI). This will result in additional permanent posts with medical and surgical in patient wards. As additional posts are created a key performance indicator is also being developed to incrementally reduce spend on nursing bank and agency spend as the posts are being filled.

In addition, and as I indicated in my Written Statement of 30 October 2014, in order to help address the financial deficit, elective care treatments will be focussed on urgent procedures, assessed by clinicians in priority order, and potentially provided on different sites in order to reduce locum and agency spend.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline any discussions he has had with the Minister for Employment and Learning regarding the current number of nursing places at universities.
(AQW 41836/11-15)

Mr Wells: I have not had any discussions with Minister Farry in regard to this issue.

My Department is in regular contact with the relevant universities, QUB, UU and Open University, and has recently confirmed the number of commissioned nursing places for 2015/16.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the future of Greenfield Residential Home in Strabane.
(AQW 41837/11-15)

Mr Wells: No decision has yet been made on the future of Greenfield Residential Home.

The Western HSC Trust, along with the other four Health and Social Care Trusts, has completed its evaluation on the future role and function of its statutory residential care homes for older people against the new criteria approved by the Health and Social Care Board in June 2014. The new criteria were approved following an extensive public consultation exercise.

In line with the regional process, the Western HSC Trust has formally submitted its proposals for change to the Health and Social Care Board. My Department is now working with the Health and Social Board to develop a robust consultation plan for these proposals.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how his Department can develop a practical and workable primary care strategy for all of Northern Ireland as an integral part of the Health Service.
(AQW 41864/11-15)

Mr Wells: Primary care services are an integral part of health and social care in Northern Ireland. In 2005, my Department published “Caring for People Beyond Tomorrow - A Strategic Framework for the Development of Primary Health and Social Care for Individuals, Families and Communities in Northern Ireland”.

The Strategic Framework outlines a 20-year vision for developing primary health and social care services. This vision includes maximising care and treatment in the community closer to people’s homes and minimising the need for hospitalisation or residential care. The Strategic Framework also sets out a series of principles, values and high level goals designed to steer and influence the future development and delivery of primary care services.

A key aspect of the work being taken forward under Transforming Your Care is a shift in health and social care services to a model focused on prevention, early intervention and the provision of enhanced services in primary and community care sectors.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of out-of-hours GP services in rural areas.
(AQW 41867/11-15)

Mr Wells: GP out-of-hours services are delivered in line with a service specification and there are standard response times for dealing with calls which are based on the clinical urgency of a call. This is independent of the location of the person contacting the service.

GP out-of-hours centres are geographically spread across the region to facilitate ease of access for patients. If deemed necessary, home visits are also available as part of the GP out-of-hours service.

The Department and the Health and Social Care Board are committed to ensuring a safe and comprehensive GP out-of-hours service and the Board monitors performance by all GP out-of-hours providers. To help deal with demand for services an additional £1.5m has been invested in the GP out-of-hours services across Northern Ireland in 2015/16.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) why patients have had to be bussed from the Royal Victoria Hospital Emergency Department to the Mater Hospital Emergency Department; (ii) the number of occasions this has happened; and (iii) how many patients have been bussed.
(AQW 41922/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Belfast Health and Social Care Trust continues to experience significant pressure on its emergency department services. In order to provide the best possible services to patients, on 4 February 2015 some patients were assessed by a consultant in the Royal Victoria Hospital Emergency Department and given the option of being transported to the nearby Mater Hospital Emergency Department where they were seen and treated in a much shorter time. Nine patients transferred to the Mater Hospital Emergency Department. This is the first time that this has happened. Clinicians had assessed that this alternative was an appropriate and safe method of treatment.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action is being taken to ensure that the Emergency Department at the Mater Hospital is able to cope with the increase in admittance figures in Belfast Emergency Departments.
(AQW 41923/11-15)

Mr Wells: The increase in demand for emergency department services has been experienced chiefly at the Royal Victoria Hospital. The Mater Hospital has experienced a much smaller rise in the number of new and unplanned review attendances at its emergency department and a reduction in the number of admissions from the emergency department compared to the previous year. The Mater Hospital was however allocated £60,000 from winter pressures funding for a Medical Admission Unit 5 days per week.

Mr A Maginness asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the total number of admissions to each department in the Mater Hospital in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41924/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the number of admissions under each specialty within the Mater Hospital in each of the last five years is detailed in the table below.

Specialty	2009-2010	2010-2011	2011-2012	2012-2013	2013-2014

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the new Suicide Prevention Strategy.
(AQW 41925/11-15)

Mr Wells: Extensive pre-consultation engagement has been undertaken to inform the development of the new mental health promotion/suicide prevention strategy. It is anticipated that a draft of the new strategy will be issued for public consultation in June 2015. In the meantime, my Department will be liaising with other Departments, agencies, and the Suicide Strategy Implementation Body to finalise the draft document.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many patients have been waiting longer than one year for an initial appointment with a surgical consultant at Altnagelvin Hospital.
(AQW 41927/11-15)

Mr Wells: No patients were waiting longer than 52 weeks for an initial consultant-led outpatient appointment within any specialty, at any hospital site within the Western Trust at 30th September 2014, the most recent quarter for which official statistics are available.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of people who presented to the Emergency Department at Altnagelvin Hospital in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41928/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is assumed that this question refers to the number of attendances (new, unplanned and planned reviews) at Altnagelvin Area emergency care department. It is important to note that the number of attendances does not equate to the number of patients treated, as it is possible for the same person to attend an emergency care department more than once during the year.

Information on the number of attendances at Altnagelvin Area emergency care department is published on an annual basis, and available to view or download from:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/statistics/hospital/emergency-care/emergency-care-activity.htm

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of people who presented to Altnagelvin Hospital with flu-like symptoms in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41930/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the number of attendances at Altnagelvin Area emergency care department because of flu-like symptoms is not available.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to list the consultancy firms that provided financial services to his Department in each of the last five years; and the amount paid to each firm for these services.
(AQW 41939/11-15)

Mr Wells: The table below shows the consultancy firms that provided external consultancy financial services to the Department and its ALBs from 2009-10 to 2013-14

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what actions his Department has taken in recent years to (i) identify; and (ii) tackle health inequalities.
(AQW 41970/11-15)

Mr Wells: Health inequalities - the different health and wellbeing outcomes experienced by different groups within society - are wholly or partly a result of differences in the wider socio economic circumstances of people's lives. Reducing health inequalities is therefore an ongoing challenge which goes beyond the remit of my Department , and requires long-term coordinated effort.

At strategic level DHSSPS led the development of the Executive's overarching strategic framework for public health "Making Life Better," published in June 2014 to reinvigorate efforts to improve health and reduce health inequalities. It provides direction for action from government, to regional and local levels, and in many settings such as communities, workplaces, schools and homes, and health settings. Through strengthened co-ordination and partnership working in a whole system approach, a key aim is to create the conditions for individuals, families and communities to take greater control and be enabled and supported to lead healthy lives.

The HSC role in preventing poor health, promoting healthy living and keeping people well is also vital to reducing health inequalities. A wide range of strategies, programmes and activities are ongoing, for example through Public Health Agency and HSC Trust programmes, many of which are targeted to the identified needs of specific population groups. In addition Making Life Better seeks to increase the emphasis on prevention and early intervention across the commissioning, design and delivery of HSC services.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the future of The Cottages respite facility in Derry.
(AQW 41977/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Trust has advised me that it is still considering the best way forward in its review of children's respite services. Families affected will be advised of its decision in due course.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, following the recent BBC Freedom of Information request on the ban on gay men donating blood, whether he will now move to lift the ban.
(AQW 41979/11-15)

Mr Wells: The lifetime ban on blood donation applies to men who have had sex with men (MSM), not to gay men as such. It is based on sexual behaviour, not sexual orientation.

The judicial review hearing on blood donation by MSM concluded on 17th April 2013. The judgment was delivered on 11th October 2013 and the Court delivered its final order on 6th November 2013.

My Department and the Secretary of State for Health have appealed the judgment, which included a finding that this was a matter to be decided by the Secretary of State for Health, not the Northern Ireland Health Minister. The appeal hearing has been postponed pending a case being heard by the European Court of Justice. The NI Court of Appeal has not yet set a new date for the appeal hearing but may do so on 27th March.

It would not be appropriate to comment on matters that are before the courts.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in relation to patient complaints, to detail the target response time operated by each Health and Social Care Trust, including how each is performing against their target.
(AQW 41990/11-15)

Mr Wells: The HSC Complaints Policy requires HSC Trusts to provide a substantive response to the complainant within 20 working days of receipt of a complaint. Where this is not possible, a holding response explaining the reason for the delay must be sent to the complainant.

Information on the time taken to provide a substantive response to complaints received by all HSC Trusts is published on an annual basis by the Department, and available to view or download from:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/statistics/safetyquality/patient-safety/complaints-safety-and-quality.htm

Table 11 of the publication details the number of complaints received by HSC Trusts and the percentage provided with a substantive response within 20 working days, during each of the last three years.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of patient complaints made to each Health and Social Care Trust in each month of the last three years.
(AQW 41992/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the number of complaints received each month by Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts is not available.

However, information is available on the number of complaints received each year by HSC Trusts. This information is published on an annual basis by the Department, and available to view or download from:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/statistics/safetyquality/patient-safety/complaints-safety-and-quality.htm

Table 11 of the publication details the number of complaints received by HSC Trusts in each of the last three years.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many recommendations of the Toner Report have been implemented.
(AQW 41995/11-15)

Mr Wells: One recommendation of the Toner Report is in the process of being implemented. This involves the rewriting of the Department's child protection guidance, Co-operating to Safeguard Children. A team was established to review and update this safeguarding policy for children and young people taking account of changes in legislation and structures and with input from other Government Departments, their agencies and arms length bodies. It is planned that the draft consultation document will be launched for public consultation during early 2015.

All remaining Toner recommendations have been implemented.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for a breakdown of the number of complaints submitted to each Health and Social Care Trust in the last three years.
(AQW 42015/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the number of complaints received by Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts is published on an annual basis by the Department, and available to view or download from:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/statistics/safetyquality/patient-safety/complaints-safety-and-quality.htm

Table 11 of the publication details the number of complaints received by HSC Trusts in each of the last three years.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the future of The Cottages children's respite facility in Derry.
(AQW 42018/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Trust has advised me that it is still considering the best way forward in its review of children's respite services. Families affected will be advised of its decision in due course.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for a breakdown of all spend on public health initiatives by the Public Health Agency since 2009.
(AQW 42019/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Public Health Agency was established on 1 April 2009 with the twin aims of improving and protecting the health of the population. Funding by the PHA on public health initiatives covers a wide range of programmes, which are often cross-cutting in their nature, and involve a multitude of organisations including HSC Trusts, voluntary and community groups, local government and other healthcare providers. Programme spend (i.e. PHA budget less admin costs) can be broken down as follows:

	2009/10 (£m)	2010/11 (£m)	2011/12 (£m)	2012/13 (£m)	2013/14 (£m)
Regional Health Improvement	*	*	8.1	9.0	12.4
Local Health Improvement	*	*	21.5	22.1	23.0
Health Protection	*	*	4.5	4.5	9.3
Nursing	*	*	4.9	6.2	6.0
Screening	*	*	9.4	10.8	10.8
R&D	12.4	11.3	10.3	10.7	11.9
Campaigns	*	*	1.8	1.4	1.8
Total programme	55.5	50.4	60.6	64.6	75.2

* Systems were not in place in 2009/10 and 10/11 to enable PHA to meaningfully break down spend by public health initiative in a way which is consistent with later years.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how campaigns aimed at increasing public awareness of cancers will be measured.
(AQW 42020/11-15)

Mr Wells: For the upcoming Public Health Agency's Be Cancer Aware public awareness campaign, due to be launched today, pre- and post-campaign surveys will be used to track the campaign, assess if there are any changes regarding barriers and assess spontaneous and prompted awareness of the signs and symptoms of lung, bowel and breast cancer. Post-campaign omnibus surveys will also measure campaign awareness or recognition.

The impact the campaign is having will also be assessed by monitoring the following indicators –

- The number of urgent referrals for suspected cancer
- The proportion of urgent referrals which result in a cancer diagnosis (conversion rate) and the proportion of cancers treated which were urgent referrals (detection rate)
- The proportion of people diagnosed in the early stages of cancer will be used to assess campaign impact in the longer term.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how his Department intends to respond to the recent Royal College of Nursing report, which stated that the morale of district nurses was at an all-time low.
(AQW 42021/11-15)

Mr Wells: The District Nurse is a valued and respected member of the healthcare profession. I recognise the continued commitment that our District Nurses provide under increasing pressures, to maintain their excellent delivery of care in the community. My Chief Nursing officer reiterates her support for the highly skilled, hard working, compassionate District Nurses that work in Northern Ireland.

I have made significant investment in District Nursing with a further investment expected within the next few weeks. The total investment will be approximately £2.5 million recurrent. I remain committed to increasing the number of District Nurses in training.

A review of District Nursing Services has been undertaken by my Chief Nursing Officer. A draft service development framework 'A District Nursing Service for Today and Tomorrow' is in the final stages of development. This framework will ensure that we develop and transform our District Nursing Service with the right nurses, with the right skills, in the right place, to deliver safe and effective person centred care.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many women in Fermanagh and South Tyrone have been diagnosed with ovarian cancer, in each of the last two years.
(AQW 42034/11-15)

Mr Wells: The latest information available from the Northern Ireland Cancer Registry (NICR) indicates that there were 7 women diagnosed with ovarian cancer in the Fermanagh and South Tyrone assembly area in 2011 and 9 in 2012.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to clarify the situation with regard to the continuation of the ban on blood donations from gay men following the BBC Freedom of Information request that no medical evidence exists.
(AQW 42072/11-15)

Mr Wells: The lifetime ban on blood donation applies to men who have had sex with men (MSM), not to gay men as such. It is based on sexual behaviour, not sexual orientation.

The judicial review hearing on blood donation by MSM concluded on 17th April 2013. The judgment was delivered on 11th October 2013 and the Court delivered its final order on 6th November 2013.

My Department and the Secretary of State for Health have appealed the judgment, which included a finding that this was a matter to be decided by the Secretary of State for Health, not the Northern Ireland Health Minister. The appeal hearing has been postponed pending a case being heard by the European Court of Justice. The NI Court of Appeal has not yet set a new date for the appeal hearing but may do so on 27th March.

It would not be appropriate to comment on matters that are before the courts.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the Better Futures project since it began in 2012.
(AQW 42073/11-15)

Mr Wells: I would commend the work of the Positive Futures Team and their volunteers for the high standard of commitment shown in connection with the Better Futures project which, by way of a partnership approach, aims to support carers of adults with a learning disability and develop new and innovative models of service for the future.

The Health and Social Care Board has also indicated that the work of Positive Futures, and specifically the Better Futures Project, is very much in line with the ethos and model of care as set out in Transforming Your Care.

I also note the positive assessment in the Interim Better Futures Project Report (April 2014) by Dr Laurence Taggart of the University of Ulster. This clearly showed that the aims and objectives of the project were on target, and that comments made by families and carers illustrated its success in providing practical advice and vital support to them. Outcomes of Public Health Initiatives

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the mechanism in place for the Public Health Agency to substantively measure real term outcomes of public health initiatives.
(AQW 42084/11-15)

Mr Wells: The specific mechanisms for measuring the outcomes of public health initiatives vary depending on the nature and scale of the programme. For example -

Screening and immunisation programmes - measures include invitee and participant numbers, analysis by target group, referrals and disease incident rates over time.

Health improvement initiatives - a range of qualitative and quantitive measures include pre - and post levels of knowledge/ attitudes, weight loss, mental health levels etc. Changes in population risk obtained from survey data eg of obesity or smoking rates act as shorter-term proxy measures for longer-term improvements in outcomes such as reductions in avoidable premature deaths from stroke, cancer etc.

Quality and safety initiatives - project-specific outcomes measure pre- and post-implementation of training or development. In some areas this will include qualitative feedback on initiatives which helps to assess programmes and direct future work.

Formal evaluation is commissioned either internally or externally particularly for large-scale projects.

A range of population health measures which are a mixture of uptake rates, measures such as infant mortality, disease incidence, potential avoidable premature death etc are incorporated into a wider PHA outcomes framework. A set of high level indicators will be monitored as part of the implementation of the public health framework Making Life Better.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40581/11-15, to detail the mechanism in place to ensure that children in foster care, where appropriate, have access to classroom assistants.
(AQW 42088/11-15)

Mr Wells: I have been advised by the Department of Education that access to classroom assistant support is not determined by whether or not a child is in foster care; rather it is determined by the individual needs of the pupil, for example special educational needs. This is based on an assessment carried out by an Education and Library Board.

When a pupil enters the care system it is the responsibility of the Health and Social Care Trust responsible for the child's care to ensure that the relevant school is notified. Every looked after child of school age is required to have in place a Personal Education Plan (PEP), which aims to promote positive educational outcomes for the young person in order to achieve their full potential. It is the overarching Education Plan for the young person that takes account of the young person's views and brings together other education plans such as the Individual Education Plan and Statement of Special Educational Needs.

The Health and Social Care Board has advised that information in relation to the number of children in foster care who have access to a classroom assistant could only be provided at disproportionate costs.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service is not seen as a frontline service.
(AQW 42155/11-15)

Mr Wells: For the purposes of the draft Budget for 2015/16, the protection from reductions for frontline services by the Northern Ireland Executive, related solely to the Health and Social Care elements of the DHSSPS budget. The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS), similar to other frontline services such as the PSNI, is not afforded the same protection.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many men have been diagnosed with prostate cancer in Fermanagh and South Tyrone in the last three years; and to outline the actions being taken to raise awareness of the disease.
(AQW 42156/11-15)

Mr Wells: The latest information available from the Northern Ireland Cancer Registry (NICR) on the number of men diagnosed with prostate cancer in the Fermanagh and South Tyrone assembly area in each of the last three years is detailed in the table below:

Year of diagnosis	Number of cases
2010	60

Year of diagnosis	Number of cases
2011	74
2012	72
Total	206

The new Northern Ireland public awareness campaign 'Be Cancer Aware' will be launched by the Public Health Agency (PHA) on 24 February 2015. This campaign aims to promote early diagnosis of cancer by raising awareness of cancer signs and symptoms and encouraging people with these to make an appointment to see their GP. The campaign will include mass media advertising and will be supported by public relations and social media activity as well as a new website www.becanceraware.info

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for a gender breakdown of board members of the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service.
(AQW 42157/11-15)

Mr Wells: The current NIFRS Board comprises 11 members, 10 males and 1 female.

A public appointments competition is currently underway in respect of the NIFRS Board seeking to fill four prospective vacancies on the board.

The advertisement for the posts recognises that women (and some other groups) are underrepresented on NIFRS Board and a welcome statement has been included to seek to encourage applications from the underrepresented groups.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the potential impact on response times of the proposed cuts to the budget of the Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service.
(AQW 42162/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) has been asked to risk assess and prioritise their savings proposals on the basis of those that minimise the impact on service delivery. Any changes to service delivery must ensure the continued safety of both the public and the firefighters who deliver the service.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how his Department will measure the impact on increased risks of (i) hepatitis; (ii) HIV; and (iii) drug overdose, due to the budget cuts on The Addiction Service at Railway Street, Ballymena.
(AQW 42193/11-15)

Mr Wells: While I remain extremely disappointed by the decision of the Department of Justice (DoJ) to remove funding from Railway Street Community Addiction Service, I have been assured that the Northern Trust (NHSCT) will continue to operate a substance misuse service for the clients at Railway Street, and will endeavour to minimise the impact of the DoJ budget cuts.

However, the reduction in the budget for the service will impact on its capacity. It is very difficult to quantify the impacts of this directly, but it is likely to mean a decrease in the provision of harm reduction advice, which could lead to increased risk of users contracting (or not accessing treatment for) blood borne virus such as hepatitis and HIV. In addition, this could increase the risk of overdose among this client group.

The NHSCT has written to service users advising them of the change and assuring them of its commitment to continue to support them as much as possible. The NHSCT is also engaged in ongoing discussions with officials from the HSCB and the PHA to assess and review the implications of DoJ's decision. HSCB/PHA will continue to work with NHSCT to assess and minimise the negative consequences of the DoJ withdrawal of funding.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 41316/11-15, to detail the action being taken by his Department to alleviate waiting times for patients waiting for audiology services.
(AQW 42215/11-15)

Mr Wells: Across Northern Ireland the demand for audiology services exceeds the capacity that Health and Social Care Trusts (HSCTs) have to deliver through 5 audiology posts. This is predominately in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust and the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust. The Health and Social Care Board has plans in place with both HSC Trusts that will address these gaps and this will ensure that the audiology service across Northern Ireland is fully resourced to meet the demand for services.

It should be noted however that currently there is a recruitment and retention difficulty with audiologists across Northern Ireland and as a result Trusts have a number of vacant posts, resulting in longer waiting times for patients.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for a breakdown of the number of Integrated Care Partnerships in operation in each Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 42272/11-15)

Mr Wells: There are seventeen Integrated Care Partnerships operating across the five Local Commissioning Group areas in Northern Ireland as detailed below:

- Belfast: East Belfast ICP, North Belfast ICP, South Belfast ICP, West Belfast ICP;
- South: Armagh/Dungannon ICP, Newry/Mourne ICP, Craigavon/Banbridge ICP;
- North: Antrim/Ballymena ICP, Causeway ICP, Mid Ulster ICP, East Antrim ICP ;
- South East: Lisburn ICP, Down ICP, Ards ICP, North Down ICP; and
- West: Northern sector ICP (Derry/Londonderry/ Limavady and Strabane) and Southern Sector ICP (Omagh and Fermanagh).

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the implementation of Integrated Care Partnerships has been consistent across Health and Social Care Trusts.
(AQW 42273/11-15)

Mr Wells: All seventeen Integrated Care Partnerships were established in June 2013 – initially meeting in shadow format. They have met on a quarterly basis since then. Their implementation has been overseen by a Regional ICP Implementation Project Board.

All ICPs are working to address the key areas of risk stratification, information sharing, care planning and evaluation. All of the ICPs have agreed action plans in place which they are working to implement to deliver more integrated care.

All ICPs submitted investment proposals to Local Commissioning Groups for service changes which meet the commissioners' specification. The scale of those proposals varied across the region, dependent on the LCGs' priorities and the anticipated resource available. Some of these proposals have already been approved by the LCGs and the Health and Social Care Board and work is underway to deliver the service change.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the (i) proposed; and (ii) actual date of implementation of the Integrated Care Partnerships, in each Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 42274/11-15)

Mr Wells: The proposed date for establishment of the 17 Integrated Care Partnerships was June 2013.

All seventeen ICPs were established in June 2013. The 17 partnership committees met for the first time in June 2013 but did not at that stage have full membership. Work continued over the following six months to ensure that all ICPs had full membership. The chairperson role was carried out by the ICP clinical lead until an elected chairperson was agreed.

By January 2014 the majority of committees had full representation and had elected a chairperson. The three ICP committees in the Southern area elected their chairpersons in June 2014.

All 17 committees continue to meet on a quarterly basis and work continues to ensure that there is consistent and full membership.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) how many children and young people from the Southern Health and Social Care Trust are currently in foster care; (ii) how many of the total number of children and young people are fostered within the geographical boundary of the Southern Health and Social Care Trust; and (iii) what percentage of the overall budget is set aside for fostering.
(AQW 42295/11-15)

Mr Wells: This information is not held centrally and was requested from the Southern Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust.

The Southern HSC Trust has informed me that

i) at 17th February 2015 there were 366 children in foster care in the Southern HSC Trust;

ii) of these, 323 were placed in foster care placements within the Trust's geographical boundaries;

iii) as a percentage of the overall Trust budget, 1.61% is set aside for fostering.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what funding is being made available for The Addiction Service at Railway Street, Ballymena in 2015/16.
(AQW 42308/11-15)

Mr Wells: Further to the announcement in October of a withdrawal of funding from the Department of Justice (DoJ), the Northern Health and Social Care Trust (NHSCT) have been working with all partners to retain as much of the current Railway Street service as possible and to review options for a reduced service model to continue to meet the needs of service users and the community.

The NHSCT have had ongoing discussions with the DoJ about the potential for limited financial support over the next two years and with the Health and Social Care Board about resources for two clinical staff to enable core treatment provision which would otherwise be lost to the service.

Given that these discussions are still ongoing it is not possible to confirm exact funding for 2015/16, although the service will still experience a reduction in funding. However, I welcome the developments to date and the NHSCT has informed me it will continue to work with all partners to provide the best model of service moving forward.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when he will introduce the Mental Capacity Bill.
(AQO 7600/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department, alongside the Department of Justice, is working on the development of the draft Mental Capacity Bill. It is my aim to submit a draft Bill to the Executive next month, with a view to seeking approval to introduce, to enable passage through the Assembly by March 2016.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the funding pressures in the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQO 7598/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Trust is working to manage a challenging financial position in 2014/15, which includes the delivery of its contingency plans and the implementation of additional constraints surrounding its workforce and other non-pay budgets.

Despite these measures, at this stage the Trust is still anticipating a small deficit for 2014/15. The Trust is therefore continuing to work closely with the HSCB to explore all available opportunities to address this deficit in order to secure financial breakeven by the end of the financial year.

Looking to next year, the final budget for 2015/16 is exceptionally challenging for my Department. Work is ongoing with all of the Trusts, HSCB and other Arm's Length Bodies to clarify the implications of the Executive's final budget and develop balanced financial plans for 2015/16.

However, given the need to live within budget and meet rising demand, I expect that there will inevitably be an impact on the pattern of delivery of some of our services.

In any case, I can also assure you that maintaining the safety of services for patients and clients will remain a priority.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what plans he has to meet with his counterparts in the other devolved regions of the UK.
(AQO 7593/11-15)

Mr Wells: I will be meeting my counterparts from the other devolved regions on Thursday 19 February 2015.

This is the third such meeting. I hosted Ministerial colleagues in Belfast on 30 October 2014 and my predecessor Edwin Poots was in Edinburgh on 13 March 2014.

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust brought forward plans to temporarily close the 20-bed unit in Bangor Hospital in November 2014 before announcing, in January 2015, that its preferred option is to close it altogether.
(AQO 7594/11-15)

Mr Wells: Mr Speaker, I trust that the Assembly will understand that I am mindful that the decision to temporarily close the 20-bed GP Ward is being considered by the Courts, so I am limited in what I can say on that. The South Eastern Trust is indeed consulting on proposals in relation to long term plans for intermediate care services in the North Down and Ards area, including the GP Ward.

The Trust is committed to engaging fully with stakeholders on this matter and I will await the outcome of that consultation before commenting further.

Mr McCartney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the services available for people under 18 dealing with substance misuse.
(AQO 7595/11-15)

Mr Wells: In line with cross-departmental strategy to prevent and address the harm related to substance misuse, a range of information and advice, intervention, harm reduction, and treatment and support services is available for those who misuse alcohol and drugs at all ages, including children and young people. Where appropriate, these services work in partnership with other Health and Social Care teams to respond to the complex needs of clients, including Children and Family Services, Mental Health teams, Probation and Criminal Justice teams.

A directory of all alcohol and drugs services currently funded by the Public Health Agency (PHA) in each HSC Trust area, including for children and young people, is available on the PHA website. Work is underway to commission a range of updated services in light of new guidelines and evidence, and it is anticipated these will be in place from July 2015.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the proposed changes to children's respite care in the Western Health and Social Care Trust area.
(AQO 7596/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Trust has advised me that it is still considering the best way forward in its review of children's respite services. Families affected will be advised of its decision in due course.

The Trust's review of these services is primarily to meet new and increasing needs and to manage these within their existing funding – it is not solely a proposal to save money.

As part of this review, consideration has been given to the very different physical environments of the two respite homes, the different staffing skills and structures, the needs of the children using the service, and the requirement to provide safe and appropriate care and support to children and their families.

Mr Brady asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on a cancer drugs fund.
(AQO 7599/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Cancer Drugs Fund was developed by NHS England to provide funding for non National Institute for Health and Care Excellence (NICE) approved drugs. It is only operative in England. The Cancer Drugs Fund Operating Procedures were recently reviewed to include an assessment of a drug's cost alongside its clinical benefits.

In Northern Ireland access to NICE unapproved drugs is through the Individual Funding Request (IFR) process which is administered by the Health and Social Care Board.

The Member will be aware of the statement I made to the Assembly earlier which sets out a number of recommendations which I believe will strengthen the IFR process and allow for better access to this group of drugs where there is an agreed clinical need.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action he is taking to improve services for adults with autism.
(AQO 7601/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Cross-Departmental Autism Strategy (2013-2020) and current Action Plan form the foundation for driving forward the improvement of Autism Services. They are being implemented in co-operation with other agencies and with input from service users, carers and families and the voluntary sector.

The Adult ASD Care pathway commenced in 2012 and much good work has been undertaken however, as with children's services, demand is greater than capacity. The HSC Board's review of ASD Services and audit of the Care pathways indicate that the focus for adults should include joint working; better information on the range of support available; improved advocacy and peer support; and exploring opportunities for development of life coaching and mentoring services. Individual Trusts have also developed initiatives to improve ASD Adult Services.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he plans to retain the current acute services at the Causeway Hospital, Coleraine.
(AQO 7602/11-15)

Mr Wells: I am committed to retaining Causeway Hospital as a small acute hospital.

The model for services in Causeway and the Glens area will be based around an acute hospital in Coleraine with an Emergency Department and supporting clinical services, a well-developed intermediate care service and community teams evenly distributed across the area.

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on waiting times for cancer treatment.
(AQO 7604/11-15)

Mr Wells: The latest published waiting time figures for cancer treatment for quarter ending September 2014 are available on my Department's website.

Regionally, the percentage of patients seen within 14 days by a breast cancer specialist following an urgent referral for suspected breast cancer improved from 45.9% in July 2014, to 87.2% in August 2014, and to 99.4% in September 2014, against a target of 100%. I welcome this improvement which must be maintained.

In contrast, regionally, the percentage of patients treated within 31 days following a decision to treat, fell from 97.1% in July 2014, to 96.1% in August, and 95.1% in September 2014, against a target of 98%. Whilst performance is just below the target, it has been achieved in the past, and I want to see it achieved again.

Ensuring that patients referred as urgent by their GPs with a suspected cancer receive their first treatment within 62 days is challenge, and performance remains well below the target set of 95%, being 72.6% in July 2014, 74.0% in August 2014 and 64.5% in September 2014.

The majority of those patients waiting beyond 62 days are waiting within the Urology speciality. Urology services across Northern Ireland remains very challenged and the Health and Social Care Board is leading a service improvement initiative across all Trusts to improve the position.

Department of Justice

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice to detail the number of (i) summonses; (ii) bills of indictment; and (iii) civil bills that were processed in each of the last five years through each of the eight courthouses proposed for closure.
(AQW 41613/11-15)

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether there is a requirement or policy for agencies tasked with placing convicted sex offenders in the community, to notify landlords of the circumstances or criminal record in each case.
(AQW 41710/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Public Protection Arrangements in Northern Ireland (PPANI) Manual of Practice provides the procedural guidance for the assessment and management of convicted sex offenders in the community. The Manual specifically provides guidance on disclosure of information to a third party such as a landlord. Any decision to disclose information would be considered as one component in the context of the overall risk assessment and risk management plan in respect of the individual offender.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice why are prisoners in some instances permitted to be released without being suitably rehabilitated; and whether the requirement of rehabilitation engagement could be built into sentences as a mandatory requirement prior to release.
(AQW 41712/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service plays its part in building a safer community by working with people in custody to reduce their risk of re-offending.

Determinate sentence prisoners must be released at the end of their sentence; and indeterminate sentence prisoners, having served the period of their tariff, must be released when Parole Commissioners consider it appropriate and safe.

I have no plans to change the law in this regard.

Mr Elliott asked the Minister of Justice what is the average length of time taken for a case to be heard in (i) magistrates court; and (ii) crown court, once a decision has been taken to prosecute.
(AQW 41717/11-15)

Mr Ford: During 2013/14, provisional performance data indicates that the average time taken between prosecution, decision and disposal in the Magistrates' Court is 51 days for Charge cases and 83 days for Summons cases (for defendants with one summons only i.e. repeated attempts at the service of a summons are not included). Comparable data for the youth court indicates an average of 70 days between prosecution decision and disposal for Charge cases and 115 days for Summons cases.

In the Crown Court, provisional performance data indicates that the average time between PPS indictable decision to disposal is 232 days.

Cases where the court ordered an Arrest Warrant, Bench Warrant or a deferral against a defendant are excluded from these statistics.

The table below sets out performance against published judicial performance standards for the progression of Crown and magistrates' courts cases. Consequently, backlog has been reported as those cases exceeding the target between April and December 2014.

Performance Standard	Number exceeding standard	% exceeding standard
80% of Crown Court defendants will be arraigned within six weeks of committal	85	6.4%
80% of Crown Court defendants will start their trial within 18 weeks of committal	188	14.1%
80% of Crown Court defendants will be sentenced within six weeks of a plea or a finding of guilt	205	17.8%
80% of magistrates' courts adult defendants will have their case disposed of within nine weeks of first listing	4,027	14.2%
A finding will be reached within 12 weeks from first listing for 80% of youth court defendants	120	11.3%

The consultation paper on proposals to rationalise the court estate sets out the arrangements for transferring business and there are no proposals to reduce the current number of scheduled sittings. Capacity will therefore be unchanged. In addition the colocation of judges dealing with a particular type of business offers greater scope for the judges to work collaboratively and deal more effectively with the cases before them.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Justice to detail the process for registering Power of Attorney in Northern Ireland, compared to the process in England and Wales.
(AQW 41769/11-15)

Mr Ford: In Northern Ireland, an Enduring Power of Attorney (EPA) enables a Donor to appoint a person to deal with their property and affairs. Subject to any conditions imposed by the Donor, the EPA can take effect as soon as it is signed by the Attorney. If the Donor becomes mentally incapable of managing their affairs, the EPA will remain valid provided that it is registered with the High Court (Office of Care and Protection). Registration is not required until the point where the Attorney believes the Donor is no longer capable of managing their affairs.

In England and Wales the EPA was replaced with a Lasting Power of Attorney (LPA) in 2007. There are two types of LPA, a property and financial affairs LPA and a health and welfare LPA. The Donor can set up one or both.

LPAs must be registered with the Office of the Public Guardian before they can be used. The health and welfare LPA can only be used when the Donor is unable to make their own decisions.

Information about the procedures in both jurisdictions is available on the government websites, NIdirect and Gov.uk.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Justice which of the recommendations made by the independent assessment team on Roe House have been implemented.
(AQW 41770/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service accepted the nine recommendations within its responsibility and continues to work towards their implementation. The Prison Service is fully committed to that ongoing process.

As said previously the implementation of the recommendations of the Stocktake Report is a responsibility shared by the Prison Service and the prisoners themselves.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) what onus is placed upon parents or guardians to ensure that the bail conditions of a young person in their guardianship are monitored and adhered to; (ii) what action can be taken against parents, guardians or others for failing to appropriately monitor young persons in these circumstances; and (iii) whether this also applies to young people residing in care facilities.
(AQW 41791/11-15)

Mr Ford: The granting of bail and any conditions set is a matter for the judiciary, while the monitoring of bail conditions is an operational matter for the PSNI.

In cases where court bail for a child requires a surety, then that surety would normally be a parent or guardian, where that person is available and appropriate. In such cases, the parent or guardian is required to ensure that the child appears at court on every occasion the case is listed and abides by any bail conditions which may be imposed, otherwise any recognizance agreed by the surety may be forfeited.

The Youth Justice Agency assists in the supervision, surveillance and support of young people subject to bail in specific cases where the court has requested it. This may include conditions relating to parental involvement. In situations where there has been no specific mention of parent/guardian responsibility in bail conditions, the Agency's dedicated Bail Support and Supervision Team, in partnership with the PSNI Reducing Offending Unit teams, will seek to work alongside the young person's support systems in order to maximise adherence to their bail conditions.

In the case of young people residing in care facilities, this is a matter for the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice to detail the total costs of each courthouse in each of the last five years.

Mr Ford: Spend by the Department of Justice, including its agencies but not its arm's-length bodies, on translators to facilitate non-English speaking persons in

(i) 2011-12, (ii) 2012-13; and (iii) 2013-14 is shown in the table below.

£635,733	£531,587	£534,778

These figures exclude expenditure on written translation and sign language.

A small element of travel time costs may be included within these figures.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Justice how much has been spent on maintenance and repairs for Ballymena Courthouse in each of the last five years; and to list the items of work.
(AQW 41861/11-15)

Mr Ford: Total costs for maintenance and repairs for Ballymena courthouse in each of the last five years are outlined below. The majority of spend each year is allocated to planned maintenance works which includes statutory testing in relation to Legionella prevention and Fire Alarm testing. Grounds maintenance, pest control and external cleaning also fall under the maintenance spend. Major items of work carried out in 2010 – 2012 included a replacement boiler, internal signage, fixed wire testing and a refurbishment programme including repairs to the roof and disability access upgrades.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Justice to detail the departmental and arm's-length body buildings that are equipped with defibrillators; and how many staff in each of these buildings are trained in (i) the use of defibrillators; and (ii) C.P.R.
(AQW 41870/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department of Justice occupies a mixture of Department of Finance and Personnel (DFP) owned, leased and DOJ owned property. The following tables list the buildings occupied by DOJ Core and arm's length bodies that are equipped with defibrillators.

DOJ Core

Building	Number of Staff Trained in Use of Defibrillators	Number of Staff Trained in CPR

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 40694/11-15, (i) why was the verbal statement of mistaken identity issued through his departmental agencies permitted, but a written statement refused; (ii) what grade of staff within the relevant agencies authorised this verbal statement, but decided it could not be affirmed in writing; and (iii) was the manner of providing this information procedurally erroneous.
(AQW 41875/11-15)

Mr Ford: As outlined in my answers to all the previous questions on this matter Probation Board for Northern Ireland does not comment or issue statements in respect of specific cases. There was no procedural error.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 40183/11-15, as this case has concluded and reporting restrictions have been removed, will he answer the original question.
(AQW 41876/11-15)

Mr Ford: The case had been listed for trial and subsequently taken out of the list on nine separate occasions. The listing of a case is a judicial function.

Three trials were started and subsequently stopped at the direction of the trial Judge. The first two trials were stopped for legal reasons; the third trial was stopped as a number of jurors knew a witness in the case. The trial was then moved to Belfast to avoid further juror issues.

In this case the complainant has an automatic right to lifetime anonymity and therefore nothing can be reported that could lead to the complainant being identified.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41233/11-15, whether he will review his answer specifically in respect of the statement that the bollards are considered to be operationally reliable and fulfil their function of minimising the security risk to the courthouse; and if so (i) how many bollards are broken; (ii) when were they reported broken; (iii) when they will be fixed; (iv) when was the last time all bollards were fully functional; and (v) when were the bollards last used.
(AQW 41878/11-15)

Mr Ford: I do not intend to review my previous answer. It is not the policy of my Department to comment in detail on security matters.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41604/11-15, (i) in the event of a non-disabled blue badge holder refusing to move, what is the procedure; (ii) why is there no enforcement; (iii) in absence of enforcement whether his Department or the Court Service fully compliant with disability law; and (iv) what action is being taken to deal with this disparity.
(AQW 41879/11-15)

Mr Ford: The blue badge scheme is administered by Transport NI and provides concessions for on street parking. The scheme does not apply to off-street car parks, or private roads. The Department of Justice and the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service (NICTS) do not have powers to enforce the blue badge scheme. In line with disability legislation, NICTS makes reasonable adjustments for disabled users of its services. Disabled persons who must attend court are made aware that they may contact the court in advance to ensure steps are taken to accommodate them. All car park users are encouraged to act responsibly and observe the rights of disabled persons.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) what agencies are involved in the community management of Owen Roe McDermott and James McDermott; (ii) who risk assessed their current residence and classed it suitable; (iii) whether it is normal practice for offenders of this nature to be housed close to a school; and (iv) whether he will order a review into the management and structures of decision-making of this and similar cases.
(AQW 41947/11-15)

Mr Ford: PSNI are the designated risk managers with support from the Western Health and Social Care Trust. There is a risk management plan which is tailored to the circumstances of the individuals and the risk they present to the public and their location has been carefully considered as part of the risk management process.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice what consideration has been given to the publication of photographs of persons wanted by bench or arrest warrant following failures to attend court, particularly in relation to serious allegations and convictions awaiting sentencing,
(AQW 41949/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Police Service of Northern Ireland may photograph persons detained under The Police and Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order 1989 in connection with the investigation of an offence. Any decision to publish photographs for other purposes would be an operational matter for the PSNI.

I am committed to respecting the operational independence of the Chief Constable and the role of the Policing Board. You may wish to direct your question to the PSNI.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41076/11-15, (i) what actions are being implemented to deal with the increasing number of drug smuggling cases in Magilligan and Hydebank; (ii) what actions followed the 2013 spike in Magheraberry; (iii) whether prison service staff are liasing with PSNI in relation to drug smuggling in prisons; and (iv) how these illicit drugs are being brought into prisons.
(AQW 41997/11-15)

Mr Ford:

(i) The rise in drug finds at Hydebank and Magilligan is explained by the move away from randomly selected searches of prisoners and cells to an intelligence led process. There is a real and concerted effort by the Northern Ireland Prison Service to address substance misuse based around a three strand approach – to restrict supply, to reduce demand and to assist recovery.

(ii) This spike is also explained by the new searching methods. The misuse of drugs is robustly challenged with searching and sanctions (including prosecution by PSNI) and with support for those with drug dependencies.

(iii) NIPS and PSNI have well embedded processes for working together in challenging illegal behaviour in prisons; PSNI staff are based in each prison.

(iv) There are a number of known methods for smuggling drugs into prisons, Procedural security exists to deter those who might attempt to smuggle drugs and prevent trafficking where possible. The current review of the NIPS Drugs Strategy will consider how this can be improved in the future and the completion of physical improvements to the main search areas for goods and individuals entering the prison will strengthen capability.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41134/11-15, to detail the (i) disciplinary action against prisoners who have breached prison rules in the last four years; (ii) prosecution of prisoners for offences committed whilst in custody in the last four years; and (iii) convictions following such prosecutions.
(AQW 41998/11-15)

Mr Ford:

(i) Any prisoner found to be in breach of prison rules may be placed on report and subject to an adjudication heard by a Governor. The sanctions that the Governor may award for a guilty verdict range from a caution to a maximum of 14 days cellular confinement. Other sanctions include fines, loss of privileges and loss of privileged visits. (ii) and (iii) My Department does not hold this information.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Justice what assessments have been carried out since the power to randomly search a prisoner was removed from prison staff.
(AQW 42049/11-15)

Mr Ford: Searching is now more focused on intelligence and not on random selection by computer. However, all prison officers continue to have the authority to search any prisoner that they reasonably suspect may be concealing an illicit or unauthorised article.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Justice how many searches have been conducted in each prison in each of the last five years.
(AQW 42050/11-15)

Mr Ford: The number of searches conducted in each prison for the stated time is set out below.

	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014
Maghaberry	25821	43769	42256	47527	24976
Magilligan	27162	35361	33002	24546	17545
Hydebank	15409	12721	12579	10600	8754

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Justice how prisoner on staff or prisoner on prisoner assaults are recorded; and how his Department categorises assaults.
(AQW 42051/11-15)

Mr Ford: In the case of staff, assaults are recorded in Accident Books. All assaults, including those involving prisoner on prisoner, are recorded on the NIPS IT system. What constitutes an assault will be open to the interpretation of those involved in an incident, but NIPS examines each case to ensure that records are accurate and appropriate action is taken.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice what lessons the Prison Service has learnt from the recent protest at Maghaberry prison.
(AQW 42063/11-15)

Mr Ford: As is normal practice, following any serious incident in a prison, the Northern Ireland Prison Service will conduct a review to establish the exact facts surrounding the incident and what lessons might be learnt.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice whether the Prison Service has conducted a review of security after the recent protest at Maghaberry prison.
(AQW 42064/11-15)

Mr Ford: As is normal practice, following any serious incident in a prison, the Northern Ireland Prison Service will conduct a review to establish the exact facts surrounding the incident and what lessons might be learnt.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice whether he has met with the Chief Constable to discuss the recent protest at Maghaberry prison.
(AQW 42065/11-15)

Mr Ford: I met with a Chief Superintendent from the Police Service of Northern Ireland on Wednesday 11 February. The recent protest at Maghaberry was discussed at that meeting.

The Director General of the Northern Ireland Prison Service has also discussed the protest with the Deputy Chief Constable.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice what assessment has been made of the impact on the timescales for hearing court cases as a result of the closure of Newtownards courthouse.
(AQW 42067/11-15)

Mr Ford: The consultation paper sets out the arrangements for transferring business from Newtownards to Belfast and there are no proposals to reduce the current number of scheduled sittings. Capacity will therefore be unchanged.

In addition the colocation of judges dealing with a particular type of business offers greater scope for the judges to work collaboratively and deal more effectively with the cases before them. Case progression and timescales will continue to be closely monitored.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41194/11-15, (i) why these costs are not known; and (ii) whether he will order an audit to establish these publicly funded costs.
(AQW 42076/11-15)

Mr Ford: Record accounting for income and expenditure must be retained for seven years. Given that this expenditure was incurred in 2005 it falls outside the retention period and therefore no audit can take place.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice following the dissident republican prisoner actions in Roe House and the associated protest outside HMP Maghaberry, how many prisoners have been charged with offences; and what are the nature of the offences.
(AQW 42083/11-15)

Mr Ford: One prisoner has been charged with the offence of “Disobeys a Lawful Order (Rule 32 Paragraph 22)” as a result of the incident in Roe House on 2 February 2015.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Justice to list the consultancy firms that provided financial services to his Department in each of the last five years; and the amount paid to each firm for these services.
(AQW 42096/11-15)

Mr Ford: External consultancy expenditure by the Department of Justice (DOJ) is included in the Annual Compliance Report on the Use of External Consultants which is published annually by the Department of Finance and Personnel and is available on their web site www.dfpni.gov.uk.These figures include the Department, its Agencies and its arm’s length bodies. Please note 2013/14 figures are not yet published.

For convenience the table below shows DOJ external consultancy expenditure since the Department came into existence in April 2010. The names of consultancy firms have been withheld in line with DOJ policy.

2010-11	£1.69m
2011-12	£0.53m
2012-13	£0.30m
2013-14	£0.21m

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice whether employees affected by the proposals to close eight courthouses will be offered alternative employment or offered redundancy terms.
(AQW 42128/11-15)

Mr Ford: There will be no requirement for redundancies as a result of the proposals. However, all eligible Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service (NICTS) staff will have the opportunity to apply to the Public Sector Voluntary Exit Scheme when it is introduced. Any redeployment of NICTS employees would be subject to the protections provided under existing Northern Ireland Civil Service policies and procedures, taking into account individual circumstances.

The rationalisation would also reduce the level of contracted services currently provided although the impact on jobs is a matter for those contractors.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice what was the operating cost of the Ministerial car in each of the last three financial years.
(AQW 42140/11-15)

Mr Ford: Costs for the Ministerial Car used by the Minister for Justice are covered by the Police Service of Northern Ireland.

These costs are not recharged to the Department.

Ms Boyle asked the Minister of Justice what action his Department is taking to ensure that relatives of prisoners have access to transport to and from Magilligan and Maghaberry prisons.
(AQW 42147/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) supports and provides a range of services to assist relatives of prisoners in maintaining contact with family members in custody. This includes the transport service currently provided by NIACRO to each prison establishment.

With the recent confirmation of the departmental budget for 2015-16, my officials are currently working to determine what level of resources will be available to fund services provided by the Voluntary and Community Sector. One of the priority areas where this funding will be targeted is supporting the families of prisoners.

Once the level of funding is confirmed, my officials will be working with Voluntary and Community Sector organisations to identify those services which can best assist in maintaining family links while people are in custody.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 2730/11-15 and AQW 27299/11-15, (i) whether the September 2013 transitional Professional Code of Ethics and Values and Code of Conduct were reviewed and updated by October 2014, as was pledged; (ii) whether any amendments have been promulgated to prison staff; (iii) if so, on what date; and (iii) to place a copy list of all incorporated amendments in the Assembly Library.
(AQW 42158/11-15)

Mr Ford: Once the new Codes became operational it became apparent to the Northern Ireland Prison Service that for any review to be meaningful these internal NIPS documents needed to be in operation for longer than 12 months. This review process has now commenced and will be completed in due course.

Once this review has been completed Prison staff will be made aware of any documents that have been revised and any revised documents will be placed in the Assembly library.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Justice what discussions he has had with Executive colleagues on the retention of the Supporting People Programme.
(AQW 42209/11-15)

Mr Ford: I have not discussed the retention of the Supporting People Programme with Executive colleagues. I understand that the Department for Social Development-led review of the Supporting People Programme will bring forward recommendations to improve its effectiveness and efficiency; there are no plans to stop the Programme. Officials in my Department and the Probation Board for Northern Ireland work directly with the Northern Ireland Housing Executive to ensure that the accommodation needs of people who have offended or are at risk of offending are addressed via the Supporting People Programme.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Justice whether he requested and received a savings delivery plan that set out the impact of saving measures on service delivery and an assessment of section 75 equality impacts, prior to the prioritisation of budget cuts.
(AQW 42232/11-15)

Mr Ford: Draft Savings Delivery Plans were completed by each DOJ spending area prior to the finalisation of 2015-16 budgets. All spending areas have now been asked to update their Plans, based on their final budget allocation, including section 75 equality impacts. A final version of the consolidated DOJ Savings Delivery Plan will then be presented to the Justice Committee and published.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice what steps are being taken to reduce prison costs.
(AQW 42262/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Prison Service is taking all steps possible to reduce costs in prisons, and to live within current budget allocations. Some of the actions taken and underway include the Voluntary Early Retirement Scheme, reduction in estates and utilities expenditure, a review of Headquarters functions, and a review of service providers.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice what rate Prison Service staff are paid for excess leave.
(AQW 42354/11-15)

Mr Ford: I refer the Member to the answer provided to AQWs 34595, 34596 and 34597.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice what policy the Prison Service has in place for payment of excess leave to staff; and to outline the rationale for the policy.
(AQW 42355/11-15)

Mr Ford: I refer the Member to the answer provided to AQWs 35321 and 35323.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice who many hours per annual leave day were paid to Prison Service staff, who had remained in service, compared to those who had left under the voluntary retirment scheme, as per the Northern Ireland Civil Service; and to outline the reasons for any difference in the rates.
(AQW 42356/11-15)

Mr Ford: I refer the Member to the answers provided to AQWs 34595, 34596, 34597, 35321 and 35323.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Justice to outline the impact of the proposed closure of Newtownards courthouse.
(AQO 7616/11-15)

Mr Ford: With permission Speaker/Deputy Speaker I will take questions 1, 9, 11, 12 and 13 together, and I will require an additional minute for this answer.

On 29 January I launched a consultation exercise aimed at seeking the views of the public on the closure of up to eight courthouses across Northern Ireland. The consultation has been launched against the backdrop of the Executive's Programme for Public Sector Reform and Restructuring.

In the context of a significant reduction in funding available to my Department it has been necessary to reduce budget allocations to all spending areas including the NI Courts and Tribunals Service. It is simply no longer sustainable to operate 20 courthouses in a place the size of Northern Ireland.

In response the NI Courts and Tribunals Service has established a Modernisation Programme aimed at ensuring the organisation is structured and resourced to provide an efficient and effective service that is affordable.

The Programme will involve a comprehensive review of current processes and practices with a view to designing an enhanced, integrated and affordable service delivery model. NICTS is also seeking to rationalise the court estate in order to deliver efficiencies and to ensure that a reduced estate is used to its maximum potential.

The recently published consultation document explains in detail how rationalisation could be achieved. The NICTS has strategically reviewed the current court estate to identify venues which could be closed and business transferred to an alternative court venue with minimal impact and ensuring continuing efficient and effective service delivery.

The proposals seek to make greater use of the more modern or larger court buildings within the court estate. The transfer of business from Newtownards to Laganside Courts, for example, will afford court users, including victims and witnesses, a better standard of facilities and accommodation. There is also a proposal for a dedicated Family Court Centre in Belfast.

In relation to impact and delays, there are no proposals to reduce the current number of scheduled sittings. Capacity will therefore be unchanged. In addition the colocation of judges dealing with a particular type of business offers greater scope for the judges to work collaboratively and deal more effectively with the cases before them.

Under the proposals there would be a number of Local Government Districts, including Mid and East Antrim, which will not have a court building. It is important to note that there is no requirement for each council area to have a courthouse, nor is it the case that there is a courthouse within each of the existing local government districts.

I look forward to receiving and will consider carefully the views of the public following the closure of the consultation exercise on 30 April.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the development of facilities for female prisoners at Hydebank Wood.
(AQO 7610/11-15)

Mr Ford: Following approval of the Strategic Outline Case by the Department of Finance and Personnel in July 2014, NIPS Officials are in the process of finalising an Outline Business Case for a new women's facility at Hydebank.

I am pleased to advise the House that work to construct a step-down facility on the Hydebank Wood site for women prisoners nearing the end of their sentence and preparing to return to the community has started. This facility should be available by the late summer.

Work to upgrade the facilities in Ash House was completed in September 2014. The new facility, known as Ornella, provides a range of additional educational, training and support services for female prisoners.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Justice when he will publish a response to the consultation process on the termination of pregnancy in respect of lethal foetal abnormality and sexual crime.
(AQO 7611/11-15)

Mr Ford: A large number of responses to the consultation have been received, including detailed submissions from the relevant medical professional bodies. Although the process of analysing these responses is not yet complete, and I do not want to pre-empt the outcome, it is my understanding at this stage that the main professional medical bodies have not raised any issues about the ability of clinicians to diagnose accurately foetal conditions which are lethal.

A full assessment of these responses will be reflected in the summary document which I hope to publish as soon as possible.

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the changes made to the Police Pension Reform.
(AQO 7612/11-15)

Mr Ford: Pension Reform is not a DOJ proposal. My Department is simply putting in place regulations to give effect to the Public Service Pensions Act (Northern Ireland) 2014, as agreed by the Assembly.

The new 2015 police pension scheme which gives effect to the Public Service Pensions Act (Northern Ireland) 2014, as agreed by the Assembly, will mirror much of the existing pension scheme.

The main changes are:

- The new pension scheme is upon career average revalued earnings, rather than final salary; While normal pension age is 60, members may retire at age 55 with actuarial reduction; and will be given the option to work beyond 60 with actuarial advancement.

The Regulations are subject to the negative resolution process and it is anticipated that they will be laid next week.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Justice to outline the role the National Crime Agency will have in tackling diesel laundering operations especially in border areas.
(AQO 7614/11-15)

Mr Ford: Excise evasion on fuel is a reserved matter and, therefore, is already within the remit of the National Crime Agency. The lead agency is HM Revenue and Customs. It can call on the National Crime Agency for support and additional expertise where necessary.

There are however many areas the NCA has been unable to undertake since 7 October 2013, including operational support to PSNI and civil recovery in the devolved arena.

Department for Regional Development

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the estimated cost to repair the broken street lights in North Down.
(AQW 40880/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): The estimated cost to repair the broken street lights in North Down is typically in the range of £30 to £50 per inoperative light. The actual cost will depend on the type and wattage of lamp or other components required, and factors such as the lantern mounting height and traffic management arrangements.

Most street lighting lamp replacements can be completed under ‘mobile working’ arrangements, with minimal signing. However, in certain cases where traffic conditions demand it, additional traffic management arrangements must be established which adds to the costs.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development what the average time period is for the repair of faulty street lights, following the fault having been reported.
(AQW 40966/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In normal circumstances, the majority of street lighting repairs are carried out within five working days of the fault being reported.

However, as you will be aware, due to the pressures on my Department’s resource budget, I had to suspend the use of external contractors for routine street lighting repairs on 8 August 2014, but my Department’s staff continued to fix as many street lights as possible and a significant backlog of defective lights has been developing since last August.

This is not the service that my Department wished to provide, however, I could not spend money that I did not have. I made bids for the money needed to repair street lighting at every possible opportunity throughout this financial year, but it was only in the latest Monitoring Round in January that the Executive finally provided the funding required, allowing the normal street lighting repair arrangements to resume.

I have immediately reinstated the use of external contractors to carry out street lighting repairs, to supplement my Department’s internal resources, and I am committed to having the backlog cleared as quickly as possible.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on his Department’s plans for a Holywood arches bypass.
(AQW 41227/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Belfast Metropolitan Transport Plan identified the Holywood Arches Bypass and the Connsbank Link as works to be provided by private developers seeking improved linkages to Titanic Quarter. Protection lines were included in the Belfast Urban Area Plan and draft Belfast Metropolitan Area Plan. However, the funding source originally envisaged for both schemes no longer remains in place and in the current economic climate with no funding identified for their delivery, neither of these proposals will be taken forward.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development what is meant by the term 'income generating options for NI Water' in his Budget 2015-16.
(AQW 41515/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As part of the 2015-16 Budget Consultation process my Department requested that NI Water assess the impact of operating with substantially less funding than indicated through the Price Control process. I asked the Company to consider all options which could potentially reduce that gap including additional savings and increasing their income stream from current activities and charging levels. I would clarify that this would not involve the implementation of water charges for domestic customers which the Executive has decided to continue to defer.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the consideration of extending the railway line from Portadown to Dungannon, Omagh, Enniskillen and Sligo.
(AQW 41577/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I am committed to the future development of our rail network and will be exploring all funding opportunities to deliver the proposals of the Railway Investment Prioritisation Strategy, including proposals for feasibility studies of a number of possible extensions. The extent to which such feasibility studies can be taken forward will be very much dependent upon the availability of additional funding in future budgets.

As stated in my strategy document however the costs of providing rail services directly to Enniskillen and Strabane are likely to be prohibitive over the lifetime of this strategy. Extensions west along the road network on the A6 in the vicinity of the Castledawson roundabout and either the M1/A4 or A3/A29 corridors in the vicinity of Dungannon and Armagh could provide more affordable and viable options, particularly given the significant number of commuters currently using the A6 and A4 corridors.

Furthermore extending rail links across the border into Donegal and Sligo would only be an option if the Irish Government created the lines to link with those in Northern Ireland. I note that Irish Rail in the company's "2030 Rail Network Strategy Review" stated that the proposal to create new rail connections from the west into Northern Ireland would not be economically viable.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development what monies are included for his Department in the final 2015/16 budget; and how this will impact upon funding for Translink town services.
(AQW 41625/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Final Budget provided my Department with £333.6 million non-ring fenced resource and £328.3 million Capital. However, as you will be aware substantial cuts have been enforced across all departments through the Budget 2015-16 settlement. In the case of my own Department we are facing non-ring fenced Resource DEL pressures in the region of £65 million, around 19% of my Department's non ring fenced DEL. This makes the task of maintaining public transport services a very difficult one, particularly when balanced against maintaining other essential services provided by my Department and its ALBs, including water, sewerage, streetlighting and road maintenance, all of which have considerable implications for public health and safety.

The additional £5 million allocation provided in the Final Budget for 'town bus services and road repair programmes' is a welcome one and will considerably ease the impact on town services across Northern Ireland.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the future sustainability of the Newcastle and Downpatrick Translink town services, in light of the recent budget announcements.
(AQW 41626/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: During the draft budget consultation for my Department one possible result of the drastic reduction in budget highlighted was the potential withdrawal of some town services and potential service reductions and consolidation of others.

The financial constraints are so great next year there are no doubt difficult decisions ahead.

The detailed implication of the budget for 2015/16 is yet to be worked out. There will be difficult decisions to make.

In light of the new agreed budget position Translink is currently reviewing its overall levels of service provision, with all local bus services currently being considered, with the aim of conducting consultation with local representatives in due course.

Details will be advised via the Translink website, by correspondence directly to elected representatives and locally in Translink passenger facilities.

It is anticipated that this process will be communicated in the near future.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development, following the planning application by NI Water for an Integrated Constructed Wetland operation at Shackleton Barracks, Ballykelly, what is the estimated cost of the (i) installation; and (ii) annual running costs.
(AQW 41659/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water's Integrated Constructed Wetland application for the Shackleton Barracks site at Ballykelly has an estimated cost for installation of £3.4 million. Annual running costs are estimated to be approximately £45,000.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development for a gender breakdown of the directors, including non-executive directors, serving on (i) Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company; (NITHC); (ii) the eight companies under the remit of the NITHC; and (iii) NI Water.
(AQW 41694/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can advise that the current Board of the Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company (NITHC) comprises six Non-Executive Directors (5 male and 1 female) and two Executive Directors (both male). The Board members also act Directors for NITHC's subsidiary companies.

The current Board of Northern Ireland Water consists of five Non-Executive Directors (all male) and four Executive Directors (3 male and 1 female).

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the value of capital investment in roads in each region over the last ten years.
(AQW 41695/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department analyses capital investment in road infrastructure by District Council. Details of expenditure, in each of the last ten financial years, are provided in the table below:

Following the Northern Ireland Civil Service move to International Financial Reporting Standards in 2009-10, and to comply with International Accounting Standards (IAS 16), the structural maintenance activities of resurfacing, reconstruction, surface dressing and structural drainage were reclassified as capital expenditure. These were classified as resource expenditure prior to 2009-10.

It should also noted that while the actual investment may be within one district council area, the benefits of such investment are not confined to the district council, constituency or county in which they are located.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of buses operated by Translink which have caught fire in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41697/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The details are as follows:

Year	Number of Buses
2010	1
2011	7
2012	5
2013	7
2014	3

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of reports of breaches of the regulations relating to trespass on railways and level crossings in each of the last five years.
(AQW 41698/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can confirm that Translink have advised that the following breaches of the regulations relating to trespass on railways and level crossings, as recorded on Translink's TSMIS (Translink Safety Management Information System) are as follows:

Trespass incidents recorded on TSMIS (NIR)

2014	530
2013	492
2012	555
2011	542
2010	721
2009	493

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail (i) the number of septic tanks in each district council area; (ii) septic tanks in each council area which have received a desludge in each of the last three years; and (iii) the number of septic tanks have not received a septic tank desludge or domestic treatment plant desludge in the last five years.
(AQW 41724/11-15)

Mr Kennedy:

(i) NI Water and the Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) have informed me that this information is not available by District Council area. NIEA however have confirmed that the total number of consented domestic septic tanks is 113,735.

(ii) NI Water provides a septic tank desludging service upon request. NI Water does hold records of the desludging requests received and attended to but this information is not held in District Council area. They have however provided me with the number of septic tanks visited and desludged in the last three financial years, which I have set out below.

- 2011/12 - 28162 tanks
- 2012/13 - 29831 tanks
- 2013/14 - 31793 tanks

(iii) Unfortunately, neither NI Water nor the Northern Ireland Environment Agency holds this information.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the road safety measures undertaken by Transport NI at each post-primary school in North Down, over the last five years; and to outline any future plans for improving road safety at post-primary schools in the area.
(AQW 41730/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is currently preparing its work programmes for 2015/16, details of which will be published in TransportNI's Spring and Autumn Reports to Councils. Once completed, the Council Reports for the 2015/16 financial year will be published on my Department's internet site.

Information on completed roads schemes can be found in TransportNI's Spring and Autumn Reports to Councils. These reports can be accessed from my Department's internet site at the following web address: http://www.drdni.gov.uk/index/publications.htm

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the road safety measures undertaken by Transport NI at each primary school in North Down, over the last five years; and to outline any future plans for improving road safety at primary schools in the area.
(AQW 41731/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer the Member to my answer to his Assembly Question AQW 41730/11-15.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development when the water treatment works will be increased in capacity to meet the needs of developers in the Kilrea area.
(AQW 41755/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Kilrea is one of 71 Wastewater Treatment Works (WwTW) with a population equivalent (PE) greater than 250 with no headroom at the start of the PC15 regulatory period (April 2015). It is anticipated that at the end of the PC15 period (March 2021), 58 WwTWs > 250 PE including Kilrea will remain subject to headroom and planning constraints.

There are however some caveats which may influence the extent and need for the continuation of constraints:

- NI Water cannot make a final commitment on the PC15 Final Determination (FD) until there is clarity on budget allocation and as such, the Company is presently unable to make a full commitment to delivery; and
- NIW is presently reviewing the headroom constraint data to ensure an accurate representation of constraint is provided. This work entails checking the individual elements of treatment through the WwTW and the operational issues being encountered. It would be expected that some amendment will be made to the number of locations with planning constraints. NIW anticipates completion of this review by the end of March 2015.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development what alternative means of sewage disposal is available to developers in Kilrea seeking planning approval for new dwellings.
(AQW 41756/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In Kilrea, where the public sewerage system has a negative headroom capacity, NI Water will not make a recommendation to DOE Planning Service in favour of a new sewer connection to the public sewerage system. The decision to approve or refuse a planning application is the responsibility of DOE Planning Service.

NI Water will approve a connection from a new development if there is 1) a planning approval still in existence, 2) the proposed development reduces the loading both biologically and hydraulically on the sewer network, or 3) the development has a like for like discharge in the event of brown field redevelopment.

DOE Planning Service may make a decision in favour of a conditional approval where the applicant proposes an alternate means of disposal in the interim period until the public infrastructure has been updated. This may be by means of a private package waste water treatment works. This will be at the developers own cost and compliance with the other statutory agencies.

NI Water has no role in approving or adopting private temporary waste water treatment works, but will recognise this within an agreement for future adoption of the sewers within a development. The operation and maintenance of a temporary waste water treatment works remains with the developer until the permanent connection is made to the upgraded public sewerage system

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development what is the financial cost of the recent deal between NI Water and trade unions; and how it will be funded.
(AQW 41797/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by Northern Ireland Water (NI Water) that an initial agreement on potential settlement terms has been agreed with the Water Group of Trade Unions (WGTU) on a without prejudice basis. This has allowed WGTU to agree to a suspension of the current industrial action.

NI Water is now in the process of completing Business Cases and Pay Remit documentation for submission to DRD and DFP for review and approval. Details of the financial cost of the deal, and how it will be funded cannot be provided at this time.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Regional Development, in relation to the flood alleviation scheme in Finaghy, whether his Department considered placing storm tanks within Balmoral Golf Course to minimise the negative impact on the course.
(AQW 41804/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by NI Water that Balmoral Golf Club has proposed a buried concrete storm tank within their grounds, located within an unused area of the course, to retain flood water. Whilst this option is unlikely to be economically viable, NI Water welcomes the input and suggested use of the site. NI Water designers are continuing to work with the club to further refine an option that will contain flood waters as close as possible to the existing flood plain and not impact on the normal use of the course.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department has considered other locations or alternative options for the flood alleviation scheme at Finaghy should Balmoral Golf Club not accept the current option.
(AQW 41805/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water follows Department of Finance and Personnel procedures for public expenditure in relation to the appraisal and evaluation of capital investment projects. A detailed appraisal study was undertaken for this phase of the Glenmachan Strategic Project, which included a scheme to alleviate flooding in the Finaghy area.

This process requires the assessment of a range of options and the recommendation of an option to be developed, based on a broad range of criteria such as the assessment of monetary costs and benefits, risk appraisal, as well as non-monetary costs and benefits including sustainability, disruption, environmental considerations and ease of implementation.

I have been advised by NI Water that alternative options for the flood alleviation scheme at Finaghy were considered and assessed within this appraisal and evaluation process. However, alternative options were not recommended, due mostly to the significantly greater costs and the wider scope of engineering works required to meet the project's needs and its primary objective of reducing the risk of flooding to homes and businesses within the area.

NI Water continues to work with Balmoral Golf Club to refine the option and endeavour to reach an amicable agreement.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Regional Development whether Balmoral Golf Club was consulted, prior to the abandonment of other sites, to measure the reaction or acceptability of the flood alleviation scheme in the area.
(AQW 41807/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I have been advised by NI Water that the Golf Club Committee was advised of the concept options under consideration during the appraisal process. Once the recommended option was identified, the detailed design was developed as is normal practice. At present, NI Water designers are continuing to work with the club to further refine an option that will contain flood waters as close as possible to the existing flood plain and not impact on the normal use of the course.

Mr Gardiner asked the Minister for Regional Development for the number of times rail lines have been disrupted by security alerts in the past year; and the location of these alerts.
(AQW 41823/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The table below details instances of disruption to rail services due to security alerts in the period 1 January 2014 to 31 December 2014.

Date	Line	Total Closure
03/02/14	Portadown line	2 hr 06 mins
27/02/14	Portadown line	1 hr 20 mins
28/04/14	Portadown line	3 hr 04 mins
20/12/14	Portadown line	45 mins

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline the criteria that community groups are required to fulfil in order to be eligible for rural transport support through the Rural Transport Fund; and how an assessment of eligibility is carried out.
(AQW 41829/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department currently administers a Voucher Scheme from the Rural Transport Fund (RTF). This scheme provides a voucher to the value of £100 towards their travel costs, to Community groups where more than 17 people are travelling.

The criteria for eligibility is that the group must have a formal Constitution for their organisation; be charitable / non-profit making; include 17 or more people travelling; and be based in a rural area (at least 50% of the group members from a rural area). Priority is given to elderly and disability groups; in line with the overall priorities of RTF funding.

Rural Community Transport Partnerships (RCTP's) also operate a Group Hire Transport Service either self drive or driver provided to Member Groups who meet the membership criteria requested by the partnerships.

We are currently assessing the overall budgetary context for next year and this may impact on the services listed above.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the departmental and arm's-length body buildings that are equipped with defibrillators; and how many staff in each of these buildings are trained in (i) the use of defibrillators; and (ii) C.P.R.
(AQW 41859/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department currently meets its legislative requirements for the provision of first aid (including Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR)) in all buildings under its control. Whilst there are no defibrillators in departmental buildings at present, one is currently being installed at Ballymena County Hall and a project group has been established to consider the potential for introducing these at further DRD locations. A total of 79 DRD staff have received first aid training, which includes training in CPR.

I am advised that defibrillators are currently installed in 11 of Northern Ireland Water's premises, with training in their use (including CPR training) having been received by a total of 94 staff.

I understand that Translink provides defibrillators at six key transport locations and has a small number of volunteer staff at each of these premises who are trained in both the use of this equipment and in CPR.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the Craigantlet Hills road safety improvements.
(AQW 41869/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can confirm that my officials are continuing to discuss this scheme with colleagues from Planning NI and in particular the potential impact on the local environment.

Once this process has been concluded, I will make an announcement on the most appropriate way forward.

In the interim, my Department is currently implementing a Collision Remedial scheme for the existing road layout. This will comprise of high friction surfacing and additional signs. The new surfacing has already been laid and the signs should be erected within the next four weeks.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much money has been spent on upgrading footpaths in the Beechfield and Ashfield estates in Donaghadee, over the last four financial years.
(AQW 41955/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can advise the Member that my Department has invested approximately £145,000 upgrading footways/footpaths in the Beechfield and Ashfield estates in Donaghadee over the last four financial years.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development who (i) plans; (ii) manages; and (iii) controls the NI Water mechanical and engineering staff on a (a) daily; and (b) weekly basis during normal business hours, while they carry out work on, or at, NI Water sites and depots.
(AQW 41958/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water (i) plans the work activity, (ii) manages and (iii) controls all mechanical and electrical staff on a (a) daily and (b) weekly basis by a combination of Field Managers and Work Control Centre staff using a Mobile Work Management System to collate, prioritise, allocate and record work activities.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development who (i) planned; (ii) managed; and (iii) controlled all embedded contract staff engaged under tender C0 71 and CO 58 on a (a) daily; and (b) weekly basis during normal business hours, while they carried out work on, or at, NI Water sites and depots.
(AQW 41960/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water Mechanical and Electrical (M&E) staff (prior to the company's change in status, DRD Water Service M&E staff) (i) planned the work activity; (ii) managed through the provision of direct instruction; and (iii) controlled through the allocation of work all contract staff engaged under tender C071 and C058 on a (a) daily and (b) weekly basis during normal business hours, while they carried out work on NI Water (previously DRD Water Service) sites and depots. In the latter stages of these contracts, the respective employers took on an increased responsibility for the day-to-day management of their employees.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development who (i) plans; (ii) manages; and (iii) controls the embedded contract staff engaged under tender C527 on a (a) daily; and (b) weekly basis during normal business hours, while they carry out work on, or at, NI Water sites and depots.
(AQW 41963/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water Mechanical and Electrical staff and Work Control Centre staff (i) plan work and (ii) manage this group through the provision of work instruction on a (a) daily and (b) weekly basis. Control of this group is delivered in part by NI Water staff who provide work instruction and in part by the employer (TES Ltd) who, in conjunction with NI Water staff, carry out associated work quality and health and safety compliance checks on a (a) daily basis; and (b) weekly basis.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) how NI Water ensures, monitors, controls and enforces that all mechanical and engineering staff have two sets of hand tools for working at clean and dirty water sites in order to prevent cross contamination; and (ii) whether he has made the NI Environment Agency is aware of the situation.
(AQW 41965/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water has guidelines in place relating to the avoidance of cross-contamination. The guidelines state that an additional set of designated tools will be procured for each craft fitter, electrician and technician and these restricted tools should be stored appropriately and separately from other possible sources of contamination. Tools or equipment that are shared and are at risk of providing cross contamination should be disinfected prior to use on clean water sites using an appropriate disinfectant. NI Water monitors compliance with its procedures through routine checks in order to ensure that separate tools are available if required or that suitable disinfection has taken place. The Drinking Water Inspectorate (DWI) monitors NI Water on behalf of the Northern Ireland Environment Agency and any incidents of cross contamination must be reported to the DWI.

Mr McAleer asked the Minister for Regional Development, in light of the additional funding received in the January monitoring round and the 2015-16 final budget, whether his Department will carry out the street light schemes on Moylagh and Laragh Roads, Beragh, Co. Tyrone.
(AQW 42000/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The additional funding received following January monitoring round is being targeted towards the repair of existing street lighting and is not being used to extend the street lighting network.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development what assurances he has had from Translink that Enniskillen will continue to receive a town bus service adequate to the needs of its people.
(AQW 42007/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: During my Department's draft budget consultation, it was highlighted that one possible result of the drastic reduction in my Department's budget may be the potential withdrawal of some town services, and reduction and consolidation of other services.

The financial constraints are so great next year there are no doubt difficult decisions ahead. The detailed implication of the budget for 2015/16 is yet to be worked out.

However the Executive has allocated my Department some additional funding specifically for town bus services and this will help to mitigate the impacts of the substantial cuts for Translink passengers and maintaining, as far as possible, Translink's provision of much needed town services. Translink is currently reviewing its overall levels of service provision, with all local bus services currently being considered. It will engage in a consultation exercise soon.

I can advise that details will be communicated in writing directly to elected representatives and locally in Translink passenger facilities and recorded on the Translink website.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the support that Ballymena, Ballymoney and Moyle Councils provide to established community groups, in relation to salt boxes or salt to cater for their own area's needs.
(AQW 42024/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department does not maintain information on Ballymena, Ballymoney or Moyle Council's interaction with local community groups in relation to salt boxes or salt provision and my local officials are unaware of any current winter service support arrangements provided by these Councils to established community groups within these areas.

My Department undertakes an assessment and provides salt boxes on public roads where a need is identified and current policy is met.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the impact on water services of inadequate funding for the operational and capital costs of NI Water.
(AQW 42054/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Final decisions on the Departmental 2015/16 public expenditure budget allocation for NI Water have not yet been taken.

In response to my Department's consultation on the Draft Budget, NI Water had highlighted that if it was required to live within the PE allocation identified in the Draft Budget document, this would not be adequate to deliver the outputs required under the PC15 Final Determination and could have a significant detrimental impact on the services provided to customers. Further detail is provided below.

My Department will work closely with NI Water and the Utility Regulator in order to provide adequate funding to seek to maintain the regulatory environment which provides sustainable high quality water and sewerage services to the public.

Consequences of Draft Budget 2015-16 Resource DEL

The company has identified that in an effort to protect water quality, the most significant impact would be borne by the wastewater side of the business. This could increase out of sewer flooding and pollution incidents.

In addition, to achieve the levels of reductions in operational costs anticipated in the Draft Budget, loss of service could occur on the drinking water side of the business. Instances of low pressure and supply interruptions could be experienced as a result of a cessation of out-of-hours and proactive leakage detection. Water quality at the tap could deteriorate and measures such as cessation of orthophosphate dosing could result in lead failures.

There will be a consequential increase in customer contacts and complaints and a decrease in satisfaction with the service being provided.

Consequences of Draft Budget Capital DEL

The level of Capital DEL indicated by the DRD Social and Environmental Guidance is already significantly constrained in terms of improving services to NI Water customers to match services in Great Britain.

The Draft Budget document identified a reduction of £23m in the 2015-16 capital budget and this level of funding would result in a significant number of enhancement schemes being delayed. There will continue to be constraints on connecting developments to the wastewater network in many areas and plans to address flooding in some areas could be impacted.

NI Water would need to consult with the environmental regulators on projects which it would propose to delay to achieve the draft capital budget. These will have significant impacts on customers, development and the environment. The projects will need to be reviewed by the environmental regulators however, due to the limited scope of funding and the short timescale, it will be difficult to reduce the impacts significantly.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development how much the Executive subsidises NI Water in lieu of domestic water charging.
(AQW 42055/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department pays the subsidy to NI Water on behalf of the Executive on an annual basis. The most recent published figures are for the year 2013/14 when NI Water was paid £275.4m in the absence of domestic water charging; in addition an amount of £2.2m was paid in respect of the septic tank emptying subsidy which is unregulated.

The current estimate for 2014/15 is £278.4m for domestic water subsidy plus £2.4m for the septic tank emptying subsidy.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) how NI Water ensured, monitored, controlled and enforced that all contract staff engaged under tenders C0 71 and CO 58, had two sets of hand tools for working at clean and dirty water sites to prevent cross contamination; and (ii) if not, to detail the reasons; and (iii) whether the NI Environment Agency was aware of the position.
(AQW 42056/11-15)

Mr Kennedy:

(i) NI Water Mechanical and Electrical (M&E) Field Managers were required to carry out routine checks on all contract staff that included verifying the requisite sets of tools were available in accordance with cross contamination guidelines. NI Water M&E Field Managers were also required to communicate any associated deficiencies to the relevant employer to enable suitable corrective action.

(ii) Not applicable.

(iii) The Drinking Water Inspectorate (DWI) monitors NI Water on behalf of the Northern Ireland Environment Agency and any incidents of cross contamination must be reported to the DWI.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) how NI Water ensures, monitors, controls and enforces that all contract staff engaged under tender C 527, have two sets of hand tools for working at clean and dirty water sites to prevent cross contamination; and (ii) if not, to detail the reasons; and (iii) whether the NI Environment Agency is aware of the position.
(AQW 42057/11-15)

Mr Kennedy:

(i) NI Water Mechanical and Electrical (M&E) Field Managers were required to carry out routine checks on all contract employees, which include verifying the requisite sets of tools were available in accordance with cross contamination guidelines. NI Water M&E Field Managers were also required to communicate any associated deficiencies to the employer (TES Ltd) to enable suitable corrective action. Additionally, the employer (TES Ltd) was required to carry out routine checks that include verifying the requisite sets of tools were available and address any deficiencies accordingly.

(ii) Not applicable.

(iii) The Drinking Water Inspectorate (DWI) monitors NI Water on behalf of the Northern Ireland Environment Agency and any incidents of cross contamination must be reported to the DWI.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development whether NI Water breached any of the terms and conditions of the CO 71 and CO 58 contracts; and to detail the nature and impact of any breaches.
(AQW 42058/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: No contractor engaged in either the C071 contract or the C058 contract has alleged that NI Water breached the terms of either contract.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development whether NI Water breached any of the terms and conditions of the C 527 contract; and to detail the nature and impact of any breaches.
(AQW 42059/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The contractor engaged under the C527 contract has not alleged that NI Water has breached the terms of the contract.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) to list the information that NI Water currently holds and records on its databases, spreadsheets or other, in relation to the embedded contract staff engaged under tender C0 71 and CO 58; and (ii) why it is necessary for NI Water to hold this information.
(AQW 42060/11-15)

Mr Kennedy:

(i) NI Water is not aware of holding information on any contractor employee who was engaged under the C058 or C071 contracts and is not currently engaged via the current C527 contract.

(ii) Anonymised TUPE-related information associated with the C527 contract has been retained as it forms part of the contract award process.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Regional Development who has responsibility for the payment of transport services which enable people with a range of disabilities, to access rural charitable community day centres.
(AQW 42089/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department provides funding from the Rural Transport Fund (RTF) for the Dial A Lift scheme, managed by the Rural Community Transport Partnerships (RCTP's). Dial A Lift is aimed at reducing social exclusion in rural areas for people with reduced mobility. This service is provided to all members of the scheme including people with disabilities who can avail of transport for various purposes that would include transport to rural charitable community day centres. Decisions on the use of grants are the responsibility of the RCTP's.

Demand for Dial A Lift services has grown over the last number of years and each Partnership now has to prioritise services to ensure that transport is available to its most vulnerable members.

Mr Anderson asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department will investigate the need for traffic calming measures at Whinny Hill, Gilford.
(AQW 42114/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department assesses all requests for traffic calming measures using established criteria. The assessment considers traffic speed and volume as well as the nature of the local environment and recorded injury collision information provided by the PSNI. This ensures the large number of requests are treated fairly and equitably.

I can confirm that Whinny Hill, Gilford has recently been assessed for traffic calming which indicated the proposal does have merit, however, there are other sites in the Banbridge District Council area which attract a higher priority rating. As such, a scheme is not being taken forward at this time but the request will remain on record for potential inclusion in future work programmes.

I am pleased to be able to confirm that work to increase the size of the speed limit roundels has been completed recently at this location.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Regional Development how many route options were considered for the A8; and what were the estimated costs for each of these options.
(AQW 42124/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can confirm that eighteen route options were considered during the development of the A8 Belfast to Larne Dualling scheme. These options were assessed against the Government's five overarching objectives for Transport, i.e. safety, environment, economy, integration and accessibility. The estimated cost, based on Q1 2009 prices, for these options ranged from £108 million to £119 million.

Further information on each of the options considered is contained within the Stage 2 Assessment Report for the scheme which can be downloaded from: www.drdni.gov.uk/index/roadimprovements/schemes/a8belfastlarne.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what was the operating cost of the Ministerial car in each of the last three financial years.
(AQW 42137/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The operating cost of the Ministerial car in each of the last three financial years is set out in the table below:

	2012/13	2013/14	2014/15 (at 31 January 2015)
Operating Cost (£)	£7,040	£5,780	£5,148

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) to list the information that NI Water currently holds and records on its databases, spreadsheets or other, in relation to the embedded contract staff engaged under tender C 527; and (ii) why it is necessary for NI Water to hold this information.
(AQW 42141/11-15)

Mr Kennedy:

(i) NI Water holds the following details in relation to contractor employees engaged under contract C527. Name (Surname, initials etc), NI Water Cost Centre, NI Water Working Area, Linked NI Water Depot (where applicable), Craft Discipline (Mechanical, Electrical ICA Technician), employer details, start date, Mechanical and Electrical (M&E) associated Field Manager, M&E associated Area Manager, Telephone number, Address, Standby status.

(ii) This information has been retained to enable (a) suitable costing to be applied, (b) work activity to be appropriately allocated based upon normal geographical working area and home address and (c) suitable means of contact both during the normal working day and periods of standby work outside normal working hours.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development whether TUPE regulation 1981 applied to the NI Water tender contracts CO 71 and CO 58 and the supplier; and if not, why this was the case.
(AQW 42142/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water was not responsible for determining if TUPE applied to contracts C058 and C071.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development whether TUPE regulation 1981 applied to the NI Water tender contract CO 527 and the supplier; and if not, why this was the case.
(AQW 42143/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water was not responsible for determining if TUPE applied to contract C527.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development whether fixed-term employees regulations, on the prevention of less favourable treatment, applied to the NI Water tender contracts CO 71 and CO 58 and the supplier; and if not, why this was the case.
(AQW 42144/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: It was the responsibility of the relevant employer to determine whether fixed-term employees regulations, on the prevention of less favourable treatment applied to these contracts.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development whether fixed-term employees regulations, on the prevention of less favourable treatment, applied to the NI Water tender contract CO 527 and the supplier; and if not, why this was the case.
(AQW 42145/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: It was the responsibility of the relevant employer to determine whether fixed-term employees regulations, on the prevention of less favourable treatment applied to these contracts.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Regional Development for a gender breakdown of (i) train drivers; and (ii) conductors employed by Northern Ireland Railways.
(AQW 42151/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can confirm that Northern Ireland Railways (NIR) currently employ 117 train drivers. Of this 7 are female and 110 male. NIR also employs 109 conductors; 16 of which are female and 93 male.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development how many departmental staff are deployed to fill grit boxes in North Down.
(AQW 42170/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The manpower deployed to filling salt bins in North Down will vary according to the prevailing weather conditions, the weather forecast and the relative priority of other work activities as determined by the North Down & Ards Section Office.

When no winter hazards are prevailing or forecast, a routine replenishment may involve a two-man squad. In circumstances where significant winter hazards are continuing, manpower deployment could be increased to a further ten two-man squads. This would be at the expense of all other work activities from the local Balloo depot.

My Department also has the option to temporarily deploy additional staff from neighbouring depots to assist with the North Down efforts, should circumstances warrant it.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Regional Development how many grit boxes there were in North Antrim, in each of the last three years.
(AQW 42192/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The number of grit boxes provided by my Department in North Antrim, in each of the last three years is as follows:

2012/2013	315
2013/2014	317
2014/2015	322

Mr Devenney asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the number of street lights awaiting repair in the Londonderry and Strabane council areas; and what timeframe is in place to have these repaired.
(AQW 42201/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Currently, 1364 lights are out in the Strabane District and Derry City Council areas. This backlog should be cleared in approximately 14 working days.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development how a breach of the C 527 contract would impact on the C 527 contract.
(AQW 42224/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The outcome of any breach would depend on the nature of the breach. It is therefore not possible to provide a more detailed response.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development, during the term of the CO 71 and CO 58 contracts, whether NI Water instructed Mechanical and Engineering and ICA Field Managers and Area Managers to (i) distance themselves from embedded contract staff engaged under contract CO 71 and CO 58; and (ii) no longer approve embedded contract staff leave, given that these same staff approved this leave when their posts were classed as Mechanical and Engineering Professional Technical Officer and Higher Professional Technical Officer, under the Water Service, and since NI Water's inception.
(AQW 42225/11-15)

Mr Kennedy:

(i) NI Water confirms that Mechanical and Electrical (M&E) staff were not instructed to distance themselves from contractor employees engaged under contract C071 and C058. NI Water M&E staff have been reminded of the importance of promoting the employer-employee relationship which should exist between contractor employees and their contractor employer.

(ii) NI Water also confirms that the practice adopted by its staff and previously by Water Service staff of approving leave requests for contractor employees engaged under C058 and C071 ended with approval of leave being undertaken by the respective employers.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development whether NI Water has instructed Mechanical and Engineering and ICA Field Managers and Area Managers to (i) distance themselves from embedded contract staff engaged under contract C 527; and (ii) no longer approve embedded contract staff leave, given that these same staff approved this leave when their posts were classed as Mechanical and Engineering Professional Technical Officer and Higher Professional Technical Officer, under the Water Service, and since NI Water's inception.
(AQW 42226/11-15)

Mr Kennedy:

(i) NI Water confirms that Mechanical and Electrical (M&E) staff were not instructed to distance themselves from contractor employees engaged under contract C527. NI Water M&E staff had been reminded of the importance of promoting the employer-employee relationship which should exist between contractor employees and their contractor employer.

(ii) NI Water is not aware of any instances of its M&E staff approving leave for contractor employees under contract C527 as the approval of leave for all contractor employees engaged under this contract was undertaken by the contractor employer.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) what assurances he can give that tender C 527 represented best value for money; and (ii) to outline the process followed in carrying out the tender evaluation, including who carried out the evaluation and at what level.
(AQW 42227/11-15)

Mr Kennedy:

(i) C527 was tendered in compliance with the Utilities Contracts Regulations 2006 (as amended). As such, the contract was awarded to the bidder who presented the most economically advantageous tender. The tender was advertised in the Official Journal of the European Journal.

It is NI Water's policy not to disclose the names of staff below the grade of senior manager. All staff involved in the actual tender development and evaluation were below senior manager level. The two senior managers who performed a quality assurance role on the tender process were:

(ii) Jane Mellor (Head of Operational Procurement) and Terry Quinn (Head of Mechanical and Electrical Services). The contract award was approved in accordance with NI Water's Financial and Procurement Delegations, which required the contract award to be approved by NI Water's Board of Directors.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Regional Development for his assessment of the likely cumulative impact of roadworks at Ballyhackamore, Upper Newtownards Road and Mersey Street on transport in east Belfast from 16 February 2015.
(AQW 42231/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The roadworks in the Ballyhackamore area, associated with the Belfast Rapid Transit scheme, are scheduled for completion on 1 March 2015. Until this time, in order to keep traffic disruption to a minimum the contractor is only permitted to work on the road outside of the peak periods. In addition, full closure of the carriageway, to allow the resurfacing to be completed, is restricted to overnight and Sundays.

The site staff have been fully briefed in relation to the potential for traffic disruption and have been asked to ensure appropriate traffic management measures are applied.

NI Water is currently completing essential sewerage upgrade works in the Mersey Street area of East Belfast. This essential improvement work will improve the local storm water sewerage infrastructure.

Due to the nature of the work, a certain amount of disruption will be inevitable. However, every effort will be made to mitigate this and keep such disruption to an absolute minimum.

A road closure will be required to allow safe access to the site at Mersey Street. The road closure will be between the junction of Parkgate Avenue and Dee Street. Traffic diversions will be in place for all other traffic, with routes clearly signposted, and vehicle access for residents will be maintained as far as possible. These diversionary routes will direct traffic away from the Ballyhackamore diversionary routes.

It is estimated this scheme will be completed in June 2015.

Any customer with any queries or special requirements relating to access should contact Waterline on 08457 440088.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Regional Development how many apprentices Translink has taken in each of the last three years; and in which work categories have they been placed.
(AQW 42235/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: A detailed breakdown of Translink apprenticeships for each of the last three years is as follows:

Year	Job Title	Division			Cumulative Total
		Bus Services	Infrastructure / Property	Rail Services
2012	Apprentice Body Trades	3	-	-	3
	Apprentice Fleet Technician	-	-	6	6

Department for Social Development

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how much funding the Ulster-Scots Agency received from his Department in the last three financial years.
(AQW 40998/11-15)

Mr Storey (The Minister for Social Development): Within the last three financial years the Department for Social Development has not received any applications from the Ulster Scots Agency seeking funding. Therefore, no funding from the Department has been provided.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development, in relation to the £70 million set aside to compensate for losses due to social welfare cuts, what procedures or process have been agreed to implement this policy.
(AQW 41566/11-15)

Mr Storey: I brought a paper to a meeting of the Executive on the 22 January 2015. That paper set out the detail of what had been agreed during the inter-party talks in Stormont Castle on the 19th December 2014. The Executive agreed the recommendations contained in my paper including a commitment that my department bring forward a number of schemes which are intended to support claimants adversely impacted by the changes to the welfare system. The Executive also agreed that they would wish to consider the detail of the schemes before they would be issued for public consultation and before the subordinate legislation is drafted for scrutiny by the Assembly. These schemes will detail the modalities of how claimants are to be supported by the Executive.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development whether the Housing Executive plans to replace wooden eves in Willowbrook, Bangor.
(AQW 41595/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that their properties in Willowbrook estate in Bangor are due to have External Cyclical Maintenance works carried out in a scheme which is currently programmed to start in the last quarter of 2015/16. Any repairs or replacement of eaves deemed necessary will be included in the scheme. In the meantime any defects reported will continue to be addressed through response maintenance.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the Supporting People Programme; and whether a new strategy will be developed in the future.
(AQW 41683/11-15)

Mr Storey: Supporting People is my Department's programme for housing related support which aims to help vulnerable people live as independently as possible in the community.

The Supporting People Programme was introduced in April 2003 and has been central to the development and provision of quality accommodation and support services that have improved the lives of some of the most vulnerable members of our society, tackling social exclusion by preventing crisis and more costly service interventions.

Supporting People currently manages a budget of £71.58m and funds 100 providers to deliver housing related support through around 800 services to over 23,000 people across Northern Ireland.

The original strategy "Supporting People, Changing Lives" covered the period 2005-2010. Its aim was 'to commission housing support services aimed at improving the quality of life and independence of vulnerable people'. Since then significant progress has been made in raising quality standards in existing services and commissioning new housing support services in line with strategic priorities to meet identified needs.

The current "Housing Related Support Strategy (2012-2015)" sets out to ensure that "there are sufficient and suitable housing related support services for vulnerable people so that they can live as independently as possible in their own communities". The objectives of the strategy are that:

- Services are affordable and of good quality

- Services are targeted at the areas of most need
- Services provide value for money
- Services are able to respond to individual needs and preferences
- Services are accessible to those who need them
- Services promote independence and prevent loss of independence
- Services are planned and delivered in partnership

Some of the achievements over the duration of the current strategy have included:

- The extension of floating support services across a range of client groups to support homelessness prevention.
- Funding of criminal justice workers for domestic violence clients.
- The extension of supported accommodation options for offenders in partnership with the Probation Board of Northern Ireland (PBNI).
- Extension of accommodation and support options for young homeless and care leavers through joint commissioning structures.
- The delivery of a range of housing and support services in partnership with health and social care to enable the resettlement of long stay patients with learning disabilities and mental health issues from hospital to housing options in the community.

The Supporting People Programme is currently subject to a Department for Social Development (DSD) led review of the Supporting People Policy and Legislative framework. The review will:

- provide an overview of existing provision and current expenditure broken down by category of service, and an assessment of the extent of which needs are being adequately met;
- evaluate the Supporting People Policy and Programme and the extent to which it has met its core aims in an economic, efficient and effective way since its launch in 2003;
- consider whether an adequate strategic, legislative and administrative framework is in place for the efficient and effective delivery of the Supporting People Policy and Programme in future; and
- where appropriate, make recommendations to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the service.

The review is expected to complete during 2015 and a future Strategy, informed by the findings from the review, will then be developed.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of houses which have benefitted from housing support services through the Supporting People Programme, in East Londonderry, since 2012.
(AQW 41685/11-15)

Mr Storey: Supporting People is my Department's programme for housing related support which aims to help vulnerable people live as independently as possible in the community. Programme information is, therefore, focused on the number of vulnerable people benefitting.

There have been a total of 38 Supporting People schemes active in East Londonderry for the duration of the period from April 2012 to present.

35 of these schemes have offered accommodation-based support and 3 schemes have offered floating support (to clients in their own homes).

The total capacity of these schemes, which is the total number of people who can be helped at one time, has grown over the period and is currently 772 people. This is summarised in the table below:

	Capacity at April 2012	Capacity at February 2015
Accommodation-based Service	667	670
Floating Support	57	102
Total	724	772

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) organisations that received Neighbourhood Renewal monies to provide nursery places; (ii) the amount of money each listed organisation receives annually; and (iii) how many nursery places each organization is funded to provide, in each of the last ten years.
(AQW 41690/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department does not specifically fund nursery places through its Neighbourhood Renewal Investment Fund, however it does support a number of projects by way of salaries and running costs which facilitate the provision of childcare across various age ranges. These projects range from those that are designed to address barriers to employment that allows parents to access education and training to homework/afterschool clubs.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the amount of housing benefit paid directly or indirectly to private landlords in Fermanagh District Council in each year since 2008/09.
(AQW 41736/11-15)

Mr Storey: The table attached provided by the Housing Executive, shows private Housing Benefit expenditure in the Fermanagh District Council Area in each year since 2008/09.

Year	Amount of Housing Benefit Paid
2008/09	£6,383,524.98
2009/10	£8,011,147.86
2010/11	£9,143,841.00
2011/12	£10,055,178.23
2012/13	£10,483,828.95
2013/14	£10,991,620.92
Total	£55,069,141.94

Note: The Housing Executive currently reports Housing Benefit expenditure on the basis of public sector (NIHE) tenants and private sector (non NIHE tenants). The private sector expenditure figure in the table therefore includes expenditure for Housing Association related housing benefit claims. It is not currently possible to report private sector landlords payments separately.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 40866/11-15, what evidence he has been given that The Charity Commission for Northern Ireland's review process is "straightforward, quick and cost-effective"; and how many reviews of statutory inquiries have The Charity Commission for Northern Ireland overturned.
(AQW 41743/11-15)

Mr Storey: The process of asking the Commission for a review of its decision is straightforward, quick and cost effective as the individual simply has to ask the Commission to review its decision, this is at no cost and the process usually takes 2 to 3 months.

The Charity Commission does not review statutory inquiries. The opening of a statutory inquiry by the Commission is a matter reviewable by the Charity Tribunal.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 40866/11-15, for his assessment of the significant savings resulting from The Charity Commission for Northern Ireland adopting a more supportive approach to charities, as is the case in England and Wales, instead of instituting statutory inquiries with all of the associated legal costs; and whether he intends to commission an independent review to compare practice with England and Wales to see what lessons can be learned.
(AQW 41744/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Charity Commission for Northern Ireland has investigated nearly 400 concerns to date, instituting 7 statutory inquiries. I have made no assessment around the potential for savings associated with the approach to regulation adopted in England and Wales.

I do not intend to commission an independent review to compare practice with England and Wales.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Social Development, in relation to the Landlord Registration Scheme, to detail the rationale behind landlords who are joint owners of a property each paying the registration fee.
(AQW 41761/11-15)

Mr Storey: Article 3(2) of the Landlord Registration Scheme Regulations 2014 states that, where a dwelling house is jointly owned by more than one individual, each individual is required to register, provide all of the information and pay the required fee. This is because each owner has both joint and individual responsibility for adhering to the landlord's duties as laid out in the Private Tenancies (Northern Ireland) Order 2006. As such, to comply with legislative and council requirements, there is no facility to nominate a lead landlord.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development to list the groups who have benefitted from funding through the Supporting People Programme, each year since 2012 ; and how they are likely to be impacted if funding is cut.
(AQW 41762/11-15)

Mr Storey: The classification of the main groups of people who have benefitted from the Supporting People Programme each year since 2012 is as follows:

- Learning Disability
- Homeless
- Mental Health
- Older People (including with Mental Health Problems / Dementia)
- Domestic Violence
- Young People at Risk
- People with addictions including alcohol problems
- Criminal Justice, Offenders or People at risk of Offending
- Physical Impairment
- Multiple / Complex Needs
- Ethnic Minorities

It is difficult to comment in view of the number and variety of Supporting People services what would happen if the level of Supporting People funding were to be reduced and not replaced by funding from other sources but at present there are no plans to reduce funding from current levels.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on his plans for the future of the Housing Executive.
(AQW 41767/11-15)

Mr Storey: No decisions have been made with regard to social housing reform. The Social Housing Reform Programme has a mandate to explore the potential for reform of housing structures and policies in NI which includes the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. It will present a range of proposals for consultation throughout 2015.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of homes, including their current value, that have been transferred to Housing Associations in (i) Foyle; and (ii) Northern Ireland in the last two years.
(AQW 41768/11-15)

Mr Storey: Stock transfer is overseen by the Housing Executive and they have advised that during the past two years no properties have been transferred to Housing Associations in Foyle and 125 properties have been transferred in Northern Ireland. The table on the following page sets out the details regarding the 125 transferred properties including the value as at the date of transfer/ purchase.

Date Transferred	NIHE Region	Address/ Reason for Transfer	Housing Association	No. of Properties	Transfer Value/ Purchase Price
March 2013	Belfast	Village Rehabs Phase 1	Fold	9	£155k
March 2013	Belfast	Lower Oldpark Rehabs	Clanmill	26	£350k
June 2013	North	3 Renown Court, Antrim (SPED)	Apex	1	£55k
November 2013	South	27 Ardcaoin Drive, Poleglass (SPED)	Connswater	1	£50k
March 2014	Belfast	Village Rehabs Phase 2	Fold	12	£175k

November 2014	North	4 Ballinderry Road, Coagh (vacant cottage)	Triangle	1	£35k

The Housing Executive has indicated that the value of the properties at Bloomfield at the time of transfer is as follows:

- Open Market Valuation (i.e. assuming vacant possession) - £2.175m;
- Existing Use Valuation (i.e. social tenants in occupation) - £1.135m.

The Bloomfield Bungalows transfer was initiated in 2012 as a second pilot scheme in advance of a proposed Stock Transfer Programme – the Programme aimed to secure capital investment from Housing Associations to deliver much needed major improvements to Housing Executive properties without public subsidy.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 40866/11-15, to detail (i) whether decisions to institute statutory inquiries under the Charities Act (Northern Ireland) 2008 are taken by the Charity Commissioners; (ii) his assessment of whether it would be a breach of natural justice for those Commissioners to review their own decisions, given that no person should be a judge in their own cause; and (iii) where a statutory inquiry has been instituted, the only proper route of appeal open to charities is the Charities Tribunal.
(AQW 41780/11-15)

Mr Storey:

(i) Decisions to institute statutory enquiries are approved the Charity Commissioners.

(ii) The Commissioners do not review their own decisions. The opening of a statutory inquiry by the Commission is a matter reviewable by the Charity Tribunal.

(iii) The decision of the Tribunal can be appealed to the High Court on a point of law.

(AQW 41824/11-15)

The Social Fund Enquiry number is dedicated to handling enquires about Social Fund while the Crisis Loan Claims number is used by customers wanting to make a claim to a Crisis Loan by telephone. Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 27240/11-15, what steps have been implemented to improve the Crisis Loan telephone service.
(AQW 41825/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Social Fund Crisis Loan Service remains primarily a face to face service delivered at the front office; in addition claimants can also make an application for a crisis loan by telephone. Having recognised that the telephony service did not provided an acceptable standard of service, the Social Security Agency has made a significant investment to modernise and support an improved delivery of its telephone service. A new telephony service for claims for Crisis Loans is being delivered from Omagh Jobs and Benefit Office, with the service expected to be fully operational by April 2015.

Claimants who cannot currently access the Crisis Loan telephony should call into their local Social Security Office.

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister for Social Development whether the Programme for Government 2011-15 target to improve thermal efficiency of Housing Executive stock and ensure full double glazing in its properties will be met by March 2015.
(AQW 41838/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has confirmed that, in line with the Programme for Government target, all relevant double glazing schemes will have commenced by the end of March.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development whether the Housing Executive plans to replace kitchens in the Jubilee area of Bangor.
(AQW 41852/11-15)

(AQW 41853/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that all dwellings in the Jubilee estate, Bangor are programmed to have External Cyclical Maintenance works carried out during 2015/16. Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the Bangor and Holywood Public Realms Scheme.
(AQW 41854/11-15)

Mr Storey: On-site construction works on the £8 million public realm scheme in Bangor and £2.4 million public realm scheme in Holywood commenced in early May 2014. The schemes are progressing as planned with Holywood on schedule to complete in April 2015 and Bangor in the Spring of 2016. These works will address all aspects of street design including new paving, kerbstones, street furniture, lighting and planting.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the Queen's Parade Project, Bangor.
(AQW 41855/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department is taking the lead to progress proposals for the comprehensive development of the Queen's Parade. Over recent months good progress has been made and the Department has agreed the purchase on a number of properties required to complete the proposed site boundary and negotiations to acquire the remaining property are ongoing with owners. In March 2014 DSD appointed Turley Associates to work with officials to develop a planning application and attain planning permission for the Queen's Parade scheme by March 2015.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the departmental and arm's-length body buildings that are equipped with defibrillators; and how many staff in each of these buildings are trained in (i) the use of defibrillators; and (ii) C.P.R.
(AQW 41871/11-15)

Mr Storey: At present the Department (including its Arms Length bodies) does not provide defibrillators in its Offices. As such there are no staff trained in their use. Defibrillators are used to compliment cardiac pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) and are not an alternative or substitute for CPR itself. CPR is included in the First Aid at Work (FAW) training courses attended by the Department's staff and there are trained First Aiders in all of the Department's buildings with a First Aider for every 50 staff, approximately.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Social Development what policy measures are under consideration to increase the security of tenure provided to tenants in the private rented sector.
(AQW 41892/11-15)

Mr Storey: Increased security of tenure is one of a number of issues that will be considered as part of the review of the role and regulation of the Private Rented Sector which is currently underway.

The purpose of this review is to identify ways in which the sector can be enabled to provide a viable, attractive and good quality housing option for a broad range of households.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development when single glazing units will be replaced by double glazed units in Tigers Bay, Belfast, specifically in Alexandra Park Avenue, Hogarth Street, Limestone Road, Mervue Street, Parkmount Street, Ponsonby Avenue, Syringa Street and Upper Mervue Street.

The Cliftonville/Cavehill scheme, which is currently on site, includes further dwellings in Alexandra Park Avenue, Limestone Road and Mervue Street.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development whether a business case in respect of the stock transfer at Rinmore, Londonderry was presented to his Department; and if so, when.
(AQW 41905/11-15)

Mr Storey: Savills plc was commissioned by the Department to undertake an Economic Appraisal Report regarding the improvement of 55 dwellings at Rinmore which were owned and managed by the Housing Executive. The Report was presented to the Department in March 2010.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of cold weather payments since 1 November 2014, broken down by constituency.
(AQW 41961/11-15)

Mr Storey: The information is not available in the format requested as Cold Weather Payments cannot be broken down by constituency. A Cold Weather Payment is triggered when the average temperature has been recorded, or is forecast to be zero degrees centigrade or below for 7 consecutive days between November and March at any of Met Office's seven weather stations. The weather stations are located across Northern Ireland and cover a range of designated post code areas. Only those eligible claimants living in the postcode areas covered by the relevant weather station where the average temperature has been recorded or forecast to be zero degrees centigrade or below for 7 consecutive days will receive a payment.

One Cold Weather Payment has been triggered since 1 November 2014 based on temperature recordings at the Katesbridge weather station during the period 16-22 January 2015. An estimated 15,055 people living in postcode areas BT24-26 and BT30-34 have received the £25 payment.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how much has been spent on the Small Pockets of Deprivation programme for Rathgill Estate in Bangor, since funding was awarded.
(AQW 41988/11-15)

Mr Storey: Since the commencement of the Small Pockets of Deprivation programme, the amount spent on Rathgill Estate in Bangor has been £475,681.90. The annual breakdown of this spend is set out in the attached table.

Details of the actual spend for 2014/15 will not be available until financial year end, however I can confirm that Rathgill Community Association was awarded funding of £69,818.05 for this financial year.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on measures taken to resolve technical issues which have arisen recently with the cladding and window replacement works in Cuchulainn House in North Belfast; and to outline the timescale for the roll-out of these works to other multi-storey blocks.
(AQW 42043/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that as the overcladding and window replacement works progressed, a technical issue arose with fixing the cladding panels to the existing concrete framed structure. The Housing Executive is currently assessing the suitability of a range of products to remedy this defect and this has caused a delay. The cladding and window replacement element of the works should recommence in the very near future. The Housing Executive has notified all Cuchulainn residents of the current situation by letter.

The timescales for these schemes and the need for this type of work in other blocks will be determined through the new Tower Block Strategy that is currently being developed. This strategy will set out how the Housing Executive intends to invest in all of the blocks in the years ahead, and will be an integral part of a new Asset Management Strategy that will emerge primarily from the work that is currently being undertaken by Savills (UK) Limited as part of the Department for Social Development/Housing Executive's Asset Management Commission.

However, whilst this work is ongoing and awaited, I tasked the Housing Executive to prepare an interim investment priorities plan based on their current understanding of the stock. This Priorities Plan is built around a number of themes, including bringing forward work to be carried out to a number of multi -storey tower blocks. The purpose of the interim approach is to effectively bridge the gap that exists between now and the development of a comprehensive strategy for maintaining all of the Housing Executive's housing assets leading, in turn, to a clear long term funding strategy.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on kitchen replacement schemes for multi-storey blocks, broken down by constituency.
(AQW 42044/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that there are a number of kitchen schemes that are currently being considered for several of the multi-storey flats blocks. These include: -

- Belfast East - Woodstock, Willowbrook and Kilbroney Houses;
- Belfast South - Moylena House;
- Belfast North - Mount Vernon and Ross Houses; and
- Lagan Valley - Parkdale, Ferndale, Riverdale, Coolmoyne and Rathmoyne Houses.

The timescales for these schemes and the need for this type of work in other blocks will be determined through the new Tower Block Strategy that is currently being developed. This strategy will set out how the Housing Executive intends to invest in all of the blocks in the years ahead, and will be an integral part of a new Asset Management Strategy that will emerge primarily from the work that is currently being undertaken by Savills (UK) Limited as part of the Department for Social Development/Housing Executive's Asset Management Commission.

However, whilst this work is ongoing and awaited, I tasked the Housing Executive to prepare an interim investment priorities plan based on their current understanding of the stock. This Priorities Plan is built around a number of themes, including bringing forward work to be carried out to a number of multi -storey tower blocks. The purpose of the interim approach is to effectively bridge the gap that exists between now and the development of a comprehensive strategy for maintaining all of the Housing Executive's housing assets leading, in turn, to a clear long term funding strategy.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 41334/11-15, whether his Department liaised with the PSNI regarding their investigation; and if so, whether the police pursued any legal action in relation to the missing funds.
(AQW 42075/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department did not liaise with the PSNI regarding the investigation. As I noted in my previous answer, my Department's investigation was unable to secure sufficient evidence to determine how much, if any, of the funds provided by the Department were not properly expended. Furthermore, there was insufficient evidence to determine whether criminal activity had taken place. Since there was no clear evidence either that any funds had gone missing or that criminal activity had taken place, there were no grounds for passing the case to the PSNI.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Social Development to list the consultancy firms that provided financial services to his Department in each of the last five years; and the amount paid to each firm for these services.
(AQW 42093/11-15)

Mr Storey: The information requested is included in the table below and relates to strategic finance and operational finance services provided to my Department including the Social Security Agency, the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development, in relation to community care grants in Foyle, to detail (i) the number of (a) successful; and (b) unsuccessful applicants; and (ii) the amount paid in the last three years.
(AQW 42118/11-15)

Mr Storey: The number of total applications, successful applications, unsuccessful applications and amount paid in the last three financial years in Foyle are set out in the table below.

Year	Applications	Successful	Unsuccessful	Amount
2011-12	5,340	3,430	1,910	£1,550,000
2012-13	4,840	3,210	1,630	£1,480,000
2013-14	4,900	3,340	1,560	£1,902,000

* Frequencies rounded to the nearest 10, Amounts rounded to nearest £1,000. Totals may not sum due to roundings.

The figures in this table are based on applications instead of applicants as a person can make more than one application for a Community Care Grant during the year.

The information provided is an Official Statistic. The production of all such statistics is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by the UK Statistics Authority.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Social Development whether people who receive welfare benefits will be given an assurance that they will not be disadvantaged by any changes to the welfare system.
(AQW 42173/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department is continuing to develop proposals for providing additional financial support to those claimants that will be adversely impacted by the Welfare Reforms. Work is ongoing to determine appropriate eligibility criteria and the level of payments that can be made from within allocated funds to each claimant group affected.

I can provide an assurance that, following agreement with Executive colleagues, the details of any scheme will be issued for public consultation. My department will also be communicating with claimants and the general public in Northern Ireland on the details of the changes to the benefit system brought about by the Welfare Reform Bill.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the groups that received funding under the Women's Centres Childcare Fund in 2006.
(AQW 42208/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Women's Centres Childcare Fund commenced in April 2008.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the business case which would allow the Housing Executive to pay an employee a salary increase of 2.2 per cent and a one-off non-consolidated payment of £100.
(AQW 42223/11-15)

Mr Storey: I can confirm that the business case for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, allowing the Executive to pay the required salary increases to staff has now been approved.

Northern Ireland Housing Executive officials have been notified and work is ongoing to ensure that NIHE staff receive their payments as soon as possible.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development what is the total in benefits paid to families expected to benefit from compensatory payments in consequence of the £26,000 benefits cap; and how many families are expected to receive such payments.
(AQW 42251/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department is continuing to develop proposals for providing additional financial support to those claimants that will be adversely impacted by the Welfare Reforms. Work is ongoing to determine appropriate eligibility criteria and the level of payments that can be made from within allocated funds to each claimant group affected.

I will be bringing a paper to the Executive in the near future setting out how it is proposed to move forward with the modalities of implementing the different schemes agreed at Stormont House.

It is currently estimated that 470 households will be impacted by the benefit cap.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Social Development whether the removal of the proposed bedroom tax will be accounted for in the calculation of any proposed hardship top up fund.
(AQW 42285/11-15)

Mr Storey: The provisions within the Welfare Reform Bill (NI) 2012 which enables the calculation of the maximum housing benefit payable to those claimants whose tenancies are deemed to meet the eligibility criteria for the Social Sector Size Criteria, sometimes referred to as the bedroom tax, passed consideration stage in the Assembly on 11th February 2015. The Executive has agreed as part of the Stormont House Agreement to mitigate the impact of these provisions by creating a separate Discretionary Housing Payment.

Officials are finalising proposals which will be brought to the Executive for approval on how such a mitigation scheme could be made available.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Social Development whether there is a cap on how much an individual can claim from the proposed hardship top up fund.
(AQW 42379/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department is continuing to develop the eligibility criteria and level of payments that could be made under the different schemes which the Executive has agreed as part of the Stormont House Agreement. This work is considering a number of different payment scenarios to identify the levels of support that could be provided to affected claimants being made available to fund the different schemes.

At this time it is not possible to confirm whether there will be a cap on the level of payments made to individual claimants.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Mr Anderson asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether they discussed Welfare Reform with the Prime Minister at their meeting in July 2014 to review progress on the joint economic pact.
(AQO 6540/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): We met with David Cameron on 2 July 2014. The main focus of this meeting was to discuss and review progress on the 'Economic Pact, Building a United and Prosperous Community' one year on from its publication. Members will be aware that within that pact, a series of measures were agreed which are consistent with the Executive's Economic Strategy and our shared objective to rebalance the economy and build a shared future. One year on from the publication of that package, the meeting provided an opportunity to reflect on the progress made in areas such as job promotion, research and development, investment and infrastructure, and consider the further challenges that lie ahead. We also updated him on other key aspects of the pact, including shared campuses and the United Youth Programme and reaffirmed our continuing commitment to work towards a prosperous and united community here.

While it was not the purpose of this meeting, the issue of Welfare Reform did arise, which provided an opportunity to outline both the challenges its presents and express concerns directly with David Cameron on this matter.

Mr Nesbitt asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how the capital allocations for Together Building a United Community in 2015/16 will be allocated to each project; and whether the resource requirements have been factored into the 2015/16 draft Budget.
(AQW 39428/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The 2015-16 Budget allocates some £10m of revenue funding to Together: Building a United Community. OFMDFM is presently working with departments to finalise the cost profiles of work to be taken forward across the 7 Headline Actions during 2015/16. These profiles will be categorised under Resource and Capital expenditure and will inform decision making.

With the challenging public expenditure environment it is essential that departments work together to ensure that resources are targeted and spent in a way that maximises their impact and ensures progress against actions and commitments.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister why a baseline budget has yet to be established for Together: Building a United Community.
(AQO 7229/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: OFMDFM is working with departments in respect of their plans to deliver against their actions and commitments as set out in the Together: Building a United Community Strategy. This work also involves determining each departments' resource requirements, capital and revenue, necessary to deliver their actions and commitments. Given the position of some of the headline actions and commitment it is not possible to determine the full cost implications at this stage and therefore a baseline budget cannot yet be established.

That said however, the 2015/16 budget includes a baseline allocation of £10 million to progress T:BUC actions and commitments during 2015/16.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what will the Implementation and Reconciliation Group, as anticipated in the Stormont House Agreement, do for the first five years of its existence.
(AQW 40962/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: As indicated in the Stormont House Agreement, the Implementation and Reconciliation Group will oversee themes, archives and information recovery and promote reconciliation.

Mr Lunn asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the United Youth programme of Together: Building a United Community.
(AQW 41415/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: One of the seven core headline actions committed to within Together: Building a United Community is the development of the United Youth Programme.

To date there has been comprehensive and detailed engagement with youth related organisations and young people themselves to ensure the programme has maximum buy-in and consensus.

The co-design process begun, by OFMDFM, is being continued by the Department for Employment and Learning (DEL) and is being supported by a Design Team which includes representation from DEL, OFMDFM, the Department for Social Development, the Department of Education, Community Relations Council, Youthnet, Youth Council, International Fund for Ireland, Public Health Agency and Education and Library Boards.

The First Pilot to help inform the design for the United Youth Programme which was rolled out by Springboard has concluded and has now been evaluated. A call for concept proposals to deliver pilot projects was issued in early September. Following a development phase in the Autumn, over 150 pilot applications were submitted in December. An assessment of these proposals was completed with assistance from the programme's Design Team.

As a result, 50 successful organisations (57 proposals) have been selected to proceed to a further development stage, following which a number of pilot schemes will be operational during the 2015/16 financial year. It is expected that the selected pilot projects will be aimed at the 16 – 24 age group who are not in education, employment or training and offered to approximately 300 young people. By summer 2016 the programme will extend the eligible age range to the 14 -24 age group.

Mr Lunn asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the removal of interface barriers, in line with the commitment to have all of barriers removed by 2023.
(AQW 41418/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: At the outset there were a total of 59 interface barriers, 22 of which were owned by the Housing Executive. Work to date has reduced this number to 52 and engagement is currently ongoing with around 40 of the 52 remaining areas.

Mr McElduff asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the range of schemes and services available to assist children and young people, in areas of social deprivation which do not qualify for Neighbourhood Renewal or Sure Start provision.
(AQW 41569/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: There are a number of schemes and services provided by various Executive departments, including OFMDFM to assist children and young people in areas of social deprivation, in addition to that provided by Sure Start and Neighbourhood Renewal. Within these different policies and schemes the pool of people in need will invariably be different. The entitlement criteria may be defined by reference to the individual, groups, or areas or a collaboration of all three.

For example, in relation to schemes and services provided by OFMDFM, the Bright Start Childcare Grant Scheme aims to create childcare provision in the top 25% most disadvantaged Super Output Areas as identified using the Income Deprivation Affecting Children Measure. It is available in some areas of social deprivation which do not qualify for Neighbourhood Renewal or Sure Start provision, but there is clearly some overlap.

There is also a range of schemes and services available in areas of social deprivation which use wholly, or in part, non-area based criteria to target children and young people in need. Examples of such schemes initiated by OFMDFM include:

- The Delivering Social Change Signature Programmes for Literacy and Numeracy and Family Support Hubs;
- Summer schools and camps during school holiday periods as set out in the Together: Building a United Community Strategy; and
- The £80 million Social Investment Fund, which aims to improve social conditions and encourage economic growth in areas where there is poverty, unemployment and dereliction, directly or indirectly assisting children and young people.

Mr Campbell asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the number of Confucious Institute arrangements in the rest of the United Kingdom in addition to the Northern Ireland project; and whether development plans by the Chinese authorities for each are organised separately.
(AQW 41649/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We understand from information available from Hanban, the office of Chinese Language Council International, in Beijing that there are 25 Confucius Institutes across the United Kingdom. This figure includes the Confucius Institute based at the Ulster University in Belfast. Associated with the Institutes are 92 Confucius classroom hubs in schools, which are spread geographically across the UK, of which 8 are located in Northern Ireland.

The management and governance arrangements for Confucius Institutes are the responsibility of Hanban.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what are the arrangements and scales of payment applicable to legal representatives appearing before, and on behalf of, the Historical Institutional Abuse Inquiry, specifying whether brief fees or daily attendance fees, or both, are paid, and whether preparation time is separately remunerated.
(AQW 41686/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The legislative framework governing expenses is set out in primary and subordinate legislation, namely: sections 14 and 15 of the Inquiry into Historical Institutional Abuse Act (Northern Ireland) 2013 ("the Act"); and rules 22-34 of the Inquiry into Historical Institutional Abuse Rules (Northern Ireland) 2013 ("the Rules").

Section 6(1) of the Act states: "Subject to any provision of this Act or of rules under section 21, the procedure and conduct of the inquiry are to be such as the chairperson may direct." Rule 35 of the Rules states: "Save as otherwise expressly or by necessary implication provided by these Rules, the chairperson shall decide the procedures to be followed by the inquiry and the inquiry team ...."

The Historical Institutional Abuse Inquiry is, of course, independent from the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister, so we cannot answer questions on its behalf. However, you may be interested to note that the Inquiry has its own Costs Protocol, which is published on the Inquiry's website.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the review of good relations indicators.
(AQW 41785/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We are currently considering a revised set of good relations indicators. This set was drafted following a public consultation period and with the assistance of an Advisory Group, comprising internal and external stakeholders.

Mr Lyttle asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the delivery of good relations funding.
(AQW 41786/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Department allocates good relations funding through a number of different funding schemes. A list of the funding schemes and the allocation to each scheme for 2014/15 is as follows:

Fund	Amount Allocated
District Council Good Relations Programme	£3,268,975
North Belfast Strategic Good Relations Programme	£750,000
Central Good Relations Fund	£1,621,514
Summer Interventions/Pilots	£700,000
Contested Spaces	£747,899
Total	£7,088,388

The level of funding allocated clearly demonstrates our commitment to the delivery of Together: Building a United Community and to achieving good relations outcomes across our society.

Mr McMullan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the departmental and arm's-length body buildings that are equipped with defibrillators; and how many staff in each of these buildings are trained in (i) the use of defibrillators; and (ii) C.P.R.
(AQW 41934/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: OFMDFM shares Castle Buildings with DHSSPS and DOJ and we are able to access defibrillators and trained staff in those departments as detailed in the table below.

	No. of defibrillators	staff trained to use defibrillators	staff trained in C.P.R
Castle Buildings	3 (DHSSPS)	8 (DHSSPS)	10
Stormont Castle	2	3	5
NSMC	1	8	1

Across other buildings where there are currently no defibrillators, a further 35 staff are trained in CPR.

Mr Dallat asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to list the consultancy firms that provided financial services to their Department in each of the last five years; and the amount paid to each firm for these services.
(AQW 41936/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: No consultancy firms have provided financial services to the Department in any of the last five years.

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail any discussions which have taken place in relation to achieving City Deal status in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 42189/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Executive Ministers have ongoing discussions with the UK Government in respect of a range of measures to support local economic development, including those agreed as part of City Deals.

For example, as part of the June 2013 Economic Pact, the Government agreed to the establishment of an Enterprise Zone here, with Coleraine confirmed as the location in Budget 2014.

More recently, as part of the Stormont House Agreement, the Government committed to taking forward the legislation to devolve responsibility for Corporation Tax rate setting powers.

City Deals have been developed in the context of the roles and responsibilities of local government in Great Britain which is a matter for the Department of the Environment here.

Mr Nesbitt asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what discussions have taken place regarding, or consideration given to, using Peace IV money to fund the comprehensive Mental Trauma Service referred to in paragraph 27 of the Stormont House Agreement.
(AQW 42206/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: There are ongoing discussions between our officials and DHSSPS on how best to provide and fund a Mental Trauma Service for the benefit of victims and survivors.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister whether their Department will use Intermediary Funding Bodies to implement the Social Investment Fund; and to detail who these bodies are and their role.
(AQW 42245/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Intermediary Funding Bodies will not be used to implement the Social Investment Fund (SIF).

SIF funding has been awarded to 33 projects managed by either a lead partner or project promoter, who will, depending on the type of project, tender for either design teams or delivery agents. These teams/agents will be paid directly by the project and not the Department.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how many successful applicants of the Social Investment Fund in the Northern Zone received a letter of offer; and further to the receipt of a letter of offer, how many have received funding.
(AQW 42246/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Four projects in the Social Investment Northern Zone have received Letters of Offer. These are Coleraine Rural and Urban Network (CRUN), Fuel Poverty, Community Capacity Hubs and Employment through Education. Of these only CRUN has begun, the remainder are working on the pre-conditions which must be met before they can be given permission to start.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what are the identified themes further to the completion of the Social Investment Fund application process.
(AQW 42311/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The high level strategic concept, objectives and overall methodology of the Social Investment Fund can be found on the OFMDFM website at http://www.ofmdfmni.gov.uk/social-investment-fund. Details of the Social Investment Fund projects can also be found there.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the Minority Ethnic Development Fund.

Ms Sugden asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the role of the Northern Ireland Executive within the Social Mobility and Child Poverty Commission.
(AQW 42333/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: There is currently no role for a representative of the Northern Ireland Executive within the Social Mobility and Child Poverty Commission.

Mr McQuillan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the projects funded by the Social Investment Fund.
(AQO 7568/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Funding of approximately £50million has been committed, or is about is be committed, to 33 projects across the 9 Social Investment Zones. This represents 63% of the £80million allocated to the Fund.

To date two capital projects, the Coleraine Rural and Urban Network in the Northern Zone and Bryson Street Surgery in the Belfast East Zone have commenced. Six revenue projects from across the Zones are tendering for delivery agents and four capital projects from the Western and South Eastern Zones are due to go to tender shortly for design teams. Others will follow.

On 20 January, we announced a further 9 projects and issued 7 Letters of Offer. The remainder will issue shortly.

Considerable effort is being invested in all remaining projects to get them through the necessary appraisal process and to the Letter of Offer stage as soon as possible.

Details of all projects prioritised within the funding allocation for each of the nine Social Investment Zones are available on the OFMDFM website.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what actions have been taken pursuant to section 28D of the Northern Ireland Act 1998.
(AQW 42393/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Executive business and all aspects of the Executive decision-making process are confidential.

Ms Ruane asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline any progress made in the development of the Gender Equality Strategy, including any associated budget to see the Strategy realised.
(AQO 7570/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The current Gender Equality Strategy, which is due to end in 2016, sets out an overarching framework to promote gender equality.

A review of the Strategy was undertaken during 2013, and in January 2014 we approved the development of a new Gender Equality Strategy.

Work on a Strategy is underway and a pre-consultation period has commenced. A number of meetings have taken place with a range of key stakeholders and the Gender Advisory Panel, to update them on progress and involve them in the development of the new Strategy.

Officials briefed the OFMDFM Committee on the progress of the Review of the Gender Equality Strategy on 12 February 2014 and provided a further written update on 3 June 2014.

Whilst there is no associated budget with the current Gender Equality Strategy, we will work closely with departments, their agencies and other relevant statutory authorities in developing a new Action Plan that will give effect to and enable the achievement of the aims and objectives of the new Strategy through a variety of departmental initiatives.

The new Strategy will be subject to a full 12 week period of public consultation and following Committee consideration will require Executive approval. The current Strategy will remain in place until a new one is developed and operational.

Mr I McCrea asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the benefit the £1.4 million allocation from the Social Investment Fund to community hub projects will bring to Mid Ulster.
(AQO 7571/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: On 28 January 2015 the Letter of Offer for the Northern Zone's Community Capacity Hub Project was issued. It was worth £1,129,021.

The project aims to regenerate community facilities which have fallen into disrepair and have substantial energy efficiency issues. SIF money will permit their upgrade to full community usage and also address statutory requirements related to Disability Discrimination and the Energy Efficiency Directive (2012).

The buildings are 5 Orange halls and 2 community halls across the Zone.

Mr Clarke asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister how they intend to improve victims' services.
(AQO 7572/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We are committed to ensuring that victims and survivors receive the best services we can provide and that funding goes to those who need it most. To this end, funding for the victims sector for 2015-16 has been increased with over £14 million being provided to support the Victims and Survivors Service and the Commission for Victims and Survivors. This includes the highest ever opening budget for the Victims and Survivors Service and reflects our continued commitment to victims and survivors.

In collaboration with key stakeholders, our Department plans to examine the service delivery model which currently provides services to Victims and Survivors. The collaborative design programme of work will help to design and inform the types of services required for victims and survivors.

The input from stakeholders gleaned through this collaborative programme coupled with the valuable feedback from the recent reviews of the Victims and Survivors Service on what is working well and the areas which require further analysis will provide a useful steer to build on the improvements to services which have occurred in recent months.

Mr Poots asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the implementation of their departmental responsibilities for the Stormont House Agreement.
(AQO 7573/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: A number of the commitments in the Stormont House Agreement fall specifically to our department, particularly in relation to the establishment of a Commission on Flags, Identity, Culture and Tradition; support for victims; institutional reform; and civic engagement. Our officials have commenced work on all of these issues in accordance with the timescales set out in the Agreement and an Implementation Plan which has been drawn up for each of its provisions.

Mr Buchanan asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when they will publish the restructuring plans for Executive Departments.
(AQO 7574/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Stormont House Agreement contains a commitment to reduce the number of departments from 12 to 9 in time for the 2016 Assembly elections, with the new allocation of departmental functions to be agreed by the parties. The restructuring is the subject of ongoing consideration and we will bring forward details of the proposed restructuring once they have been finalised.

Mr Hussey asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister for an update on the Racial Equality Strategy.
(AQO 7575/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: We completed a 16 week public consultation exercise to ensure the detail of the revised Racial Equality Strategy is relevant to the needs and hopes of our minority ethnic population and the broader community.

Officials are currently analysing the responses to the consultation and these will inform the new Strategy. Officials are due to report to the OFMDFM Committee on the outcome of the consultation on 18 March.

Mr McCallister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when a legislative programme for 2015/16 will be published.
(AQW 42400/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Executive's legislative intentions for the remainder of the current Assembly mandate are being reviewed and further consideration will be given as to how best these might be conveyed to the Assembly.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many staff, at Deputy Principal grade and above, based in Dundonald House have indicated their willingness to relocate to Ballykelly.
(AQW 41098/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): A total of 18 staff, at Deputy Principal and above, based in Dundonald House have indicated their willingness to relocate to Ballykelly. A further 16 staff, at Deputy Principal and above, have indicated that they may move.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development which breeds of dogs are required to be muzzled and on a lead when in public.
(AQW 41917/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Control of Greyhounds Act 1950 requires any greyhound, whippet and any breed, strain or cross thereof to be muzzled and kept on a lead in a public place.

Under the Dogs Order 1983, as amended, Council Dog Wardens may impose certain control conditions on a dog, where the Dog Warden has reasonable cause to believe that an offence has been committed in respect of that dog such as attacking a person, livestock or certain other animals. These control conditions include the requirement to keep that dog muzzled, and on a lead, when in a public place.

You may wish to note that in the south, 11 breeds of dog, and every other strain or cross of those breeds, must be kept on a short lead and securely muzzled. These breeds are the American Pit Bull Terrier, Bull Mastiff, Doberman Pinscher, English Bull Terrier, German Shepherd (Alsatian), Japanese Akita, Japanese Tosa, Rhodesian Ridgeback, Rottweiler, Staffordshire Bull Terrier, and Ban Dog.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what is the rationale for the requirement for greyhounds to be muzzled and kept on a lead when in public.
(AQW 41918/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Control of Greyhounds Act 1950 was introduced to prevent the possible distressing attacks by greyhounds on other animals and people in public areas.

To be a successful courser or racer, a greyhound's instinct to pursue and, if possible, kill a small animal must be highly developed. Consequently greyhounds are bred and trained to have those characteristics which are rare amongst domesticated dogs in general. Moreover greyhounds are necessarily large, powerful and fast moving.

The Control of Greyhounds Act 1950 provides for the muzzling and control of any greyhound in a public place to prevent it from biting or otherwise injuring any human being or other animal and to ensure that proper control is exercised over the greyhound by the person leading it.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what regulations, or departmental guidance, advises that greyhounds should (i) not be kept as pets; (ii) not be encouraged for rehoming; and (iii) be kept in external kennels.
(AQW 41919/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department has not made any regulations or issued any guidance advising that greyhounds should (i) not be kept as pets; (ii) not be encouraged for rehoming; or (iii) be kept in external kennels.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development why there are legal distinctions drawn between greyhounds and other domestic breeds of dogs.
(AQW 41920/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Control of Greyhounds Act 1950 was introduced to prevent the possible distressing attacks by greyhounds on other animals and people in public areas.

To be a successful courser or racer, a greyhound's instinct to pursue and, if possible, kill a small animal must be highly developed. Consequently greyhounds are bred and trained to have those characteristics which are rare amongst domesticated dogs in general. Moreover greyhounds are necessarily large, powerful and fast moving. That is why there is specific legislation for their control.

In instances in which a dog of another domestic breed reveals itself to be dangerous, it may be dealt with under the provisions contained within the Dogs Order 1983 as amended. Therefore there are now legislative requirements on all dog owners for better dog control in public places, not just the owners of greyhounds.

All dog owners have a responsibility to ensure that their dog does not become a problem to themselves or other people.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the prevalence of bovine viral diarrhoea in cattle.
(AQW 41983/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Production diseases such as BVD can have a significantly negative impact on productivity but as they are not subject to a national control programme my Department does not formally record their prevalence. It is the responsibility of industry to take the lead in tackling such diseases.

Animal Health and Welfare NI (AHWNI) has been set up by industry to lead on the development and promotion of programmes to tackle such diseases and has already initiated a voluntary BVD programme of 'tag and testing', which began in January 2013.

If it is helpful AHWNI can be contacted through:

Mr Sam Strain, Chief Executive, 97 Moy Road, Dungannon, Co. Tyrone BT71 7DX

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what actions are being taken to eradicate bovine viral diarrhoea from cattle.
(AQW 41985/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Production diseases such as BVD can have a significant negative impact on productivity and are not subject to a national control programme. It is the responsibility of industry to take the lead in tackling such diseases. Animal Health and Welfare NI (AHWNI) has been set up by industry to lead on the development and promotion of programmes to tackle such diseases and has already initiated a voluntary BVD programme of 'tag and testing', which began in January 2013.

My Department provided start-up funding of up to £125,497 to help AHWNI deliver this voluntary BVD eradication programme and contribute towards the development of a Johne's disease control programme. Previously I announced to the industry that I was minded to introduce legislation to make it compulsory for herd keepers to test new born bovines for BVD. Since then, my Department has been working closely with industry representatives in developing a legislative framework to support an eradication programme. Subsequently the legislation has been considered by the EU Commission under the Technical Standards Directive and could now be entered into the legislative process here. This would involve consideration by the ARD Committee and the Executive before it can become law.

However, before I can introduce legislation here, it will be necessary for AHWNI to demonstrate to my Department that they have sufficient industry funding to enable them to maintain the implementation of the eradication programme going forward without the need for further public funding. This is particularly important, not only because of the pressures on available public funding, but also because of the need for industry to lead in tackling this production disease. I am aware that AHWNI is currently preparing a viability and sustainability plan for the organisation which will be considered by my officials on completion.

Under this arrangement AHWNI will have responsibility for implementing aspects of the legislation and they need to be able to demonstrate that they have an IT System that is fit for this purpose. This system is currently under development and I am hopeful that they can conclude this work soon so as to allow me to introduce the legislation later in 2015.

Using the Tag and Test method of identifying those cattle that are persistently infected with BVD enables farmers to remove those animals from their herd. This method will lead to a ten-fold economic benefit, based on the initial herd keeper outlay and recognising that these financial benefits can be recovered within a very short period of time.

I would urge all farmers to join the voluntary programme right away even before legislation can be introduced. This would help ensure that they would not be competitively disadvantaged compared with herd keepers elsewhere in the EU who have BVD eradication programmes under way.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development why there is no independent monitoring body for the greyhound racing industry; and whether she has any plans to establish such a body.
(AQW 41987/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I have no plans to establish an independent monitoring body for the greyhound racing industry.

The Welfare of Animals Act 2011 provides legal protection for all animals, including greyhounds, from unnecessary suffering. This is enforced by local Councils, which will investigate any animal welfare concerns, including any in relation to the greyhound racing industry.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development who is responsible for the regulation of the greyhound racing industry.
(AQW 41989/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Greyhound racing has traditionally been self-sustaining and unregulated in the north.

As greyhound racing is not regarded as an agricultural activity and does not take place on agricultural land, my Department's only interest in it is from an animal welfare perspective in relation to statutory obligations under the Welfare of Animals Act 2011. While the Act provides legal protection for all animals from unnecessary suffering, it contains no specific provisions relating to the greyhound racing industry.

The Irish Coursing Club is the industry representative body for greyhound racing and has published a best practice guide for the care and welfare of greyhounds. It checks the activities of its members to ensure adherence.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether she has any plans to update legislation on the control of greyhounds.
(AQW 41991/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Whilst no specific Department has responsibility for the Control of Greyhounds Act 1950, my Department has policy and legislative responsibility for animal welfare, dog control, the identification and licensing of dogs and dog breeding.

Any amendment to the Control of Greyhounds Act 1950 would need to be taken forward through the Assembly, and any decision about whether to bring forward an amendment would be preceded by an examination of the available evidence on greyhounds and engagement with stakeholders, particularly Councils given their role in enforcing dog control legislation here.

I am already committed to the introduction of a number of pieces of legislation in the Assembly in this current mandate and have no plans to bring forward additional proposals in relation to this issue.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what consideration has been given to microchipping greyhounds rather than the current identity method of tagging the dogs' ears.
(AQW 42066/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: From 1 January 2013, under the Dogs (Licensing and Identification) Regulations 2012, all dogs, including greyhounds, kept under a block licence issued on or after 9 April 2012 have had to be microchipped from eight weeks of age. In addition, anyone applying for a block licence, on or after 1 January 2013, must have any dog aged eight weeks or over mircochipped before they apply for the licence.

Any dog, including a greyhound, which is not kept under a block licence, must be microchipped in accordance with the Dogs Order 1983 as amended.

If a dog is not microchipped in accordance with the Dogs Order 1983 or the Dogs (Licensing and Identification) Regulations 2012, it is not considered licensed, which is an offence liable to prosecution.

Greyhounds are not required under legislation to be identified by ear marking.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what proposals her Department has to improve the genetic quality of the beef stock herd.
(AQW 42109/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I am very much aware of the opportunities that genetic tools can bring in achieving permanent and cumulative improvement in the competitiveness of livestock production, and in animal health.

The need to address the relatively low levels of genetic progress being achieved, particularly in the beef and sheep sectors, has been highlighted in several strategic industry reports, including Going for Growth. To address this important issue, the Agri-Food Strategy Board has recently established a sub-group to provide strategic direction and co-ordination of work on livestock genetics. My officials are represented on this key group.

AFBI research and development, funded by DARD and co-funded by AgriSearch, has led to the development of important innovations for the industry to inform breeding and management decisions and in doing so drive forward production efficiency. These projects are addressing a broad range of issues affecting the sustainability of the industry, and by highlighting them I want to acknowledge the important research work that is taking place and the significant investment my Department is placing in this work.

CAFRE also provides training programmes and assists farmers to adopt relevant technologies which lead to genetic improvement within their farm business.

There may be opportunities for the new RDP to assist the industry overcome some of the barriers to genetic progress which exist, particularly in the red meat sectors. We have therefore ensured that there is sufficient flexibility within our draft RDP submitted to the Commission and other workstreams to accommodate further developments.

I am aware of Minister Coveney's announcement last autumn to increase support for the use of genomics in the south for beef genetic improvement. I will keep a watching brief on the outcomes of that work and explore how our industry can benefit from the new knowledge that will be generated.

Achieving genetic improvement in the beef sector is an important challenge and in addition to any support my department can offer, it will require a combined effort from producers, processors, researchers and farm advisors to move the industry forward.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what proposals have been agreed with the EU Commissions in Brussels to ensure the sustainability of family based farming enterprises, within the parameters of the Single Farm Payment and the new Rural Development programme.
(AQW 42110/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Since the introduction of decoupled support in 2005, the Single Farm Payment under CAP Pillar I has not sought to promote or sustain agricultural production levels or agricultural productivity. CAP Pillar I direct payments seek to support agricultural incomes. Under the latest CAP Reform, this general approach continues.

The draft Rural Development Programme 2014 – 2020 has not yet been agreed with the European Commission. It was submitted to the Commission on 14th October 2014 and we are awaiting the EU Commission formal observation letter on the proposed content of the Programme.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what role her Department will have to play to ensure a successful implementation of statutory based rural proofing.
(AQW 42111/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The policy proposals for a Rural Proofing Bill are currently out for public consultation. The proposed Bill would place a statutory duty on all government departments and local councils to consider the needs of rural dwellers in the development and delivery of policy and public services. This duty will help to ensure that rural proofing is carried out effectively across government.

The proposed role of my Department would be: to promote rural proofing across government, which would help improve awareness and consistency of approach; to provide advice and guidance, which would help build capability across government; and to gather and compile information on rural proofing and publish a monitoring report to be laid before the Assembly, which would provide an accountability mechanism for the process and greater transparency on the extent to which rural proofing is carried out.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what reform proposals are envisioned for her Department in order for it to be more farmer centred, with less cumbersome bureaucracy.
(AQW 42112/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In recent years, DARD has achieved a 10.4% overall reduction in bureaucracy across what are considered to be the ten most burdensome areas of agri-food regulation. I want to build on this encouraging work.

Despite my desire for a simpler CAP regime, the new schemes are greater in number and more complex. However, my officials are working to ensure that they are as easy as possible to understand with information and tools available to help farmers and others comply with the least amount of bureaucracy attached as possible.

Given the budgetary pressures facing my department and the significant staff reductions that will occur over the next number of years, work is ongoing to re-design the Department's operational structure. To inform this process we are reviewing key aspects of the Department including the inspection regime, advisory services and corporate functions.

I want to utilise the opportunity to make the Department a more modern, leaner and more efficient organisation that reflects the needs of the agricultural industry. In particular, this will mean extending digital delivery of services. For example, I want to provide greater on-line provision so that the modern day busy farmer can complete their administration at a time of their choosing and not just when our offices are open. This type of 24/7 access is important in supporting an industry that is ambitious and wants to grow.

I want to provide digital services that are so good that customers who can use them prefer to do so. It means designing systems that are focused on customer needs and simplifying processes so that the services are easy to use. Where customers are having difficulty making the switch to digital, there will be support to ensure they can receive the same benefits as others.

My Department provides a wide range of advisory and educational services to farm businesses and the wider rural community through CAFRE and will continue to provide a valuable support service to the farming community through our network of DARD Direct offices. These regional offices are specifically designed to improve the delivery of DARD services for customers by ensuring that the majority of enquiries are satisfactorily answered at the first point of contact, whether by telephone, online or in person.

The new office in Strabane will be a welcome addition to the DARD service provision and completes the roll-out of DARD Direct. It will ensure that the farming community in the North West benefits in the same way as others have across the north.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how the Young Farmers Entrance Scheme is being progressed.
(AQW 42113/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: A Guidance booklet for the Young Farmers' Payment was published on the DARD website on 6 February 2015. It contains detailed information on eligibility criteria and the evidence young farmers will need to submit in support of their application.

Farmers who qualify for the Young Farmers' Payment (including those who never held entitlements and those who will otherwise establish entitlements with a unit value below the regional average) may also be eligible to apply to the Young Farmers' category of the Regional Reserve to have entitlements allocated at the annual regional average value or the value of entitlements increased to the regional average. A Regional Reserve guidance booklet will be published by the end of February.

My Department has published these guidance booklets in advance of the Single Application Form (SAF) application period so that potential applicants have time to consider whether the Young Farmers' Payment and/or an application to the Reserve is appropriate to their circumstances and draw together the necessary documentation.

A Young Farmers' Payment registration process and Regional Reserve application process will open from mid March to 15 May 2015. During this time, young famer applicants will be required to complete a Young Farmers' Registration Form, a Reserve application form if appropriate and submit their supporting evidence in person at a DARD Direct office. They must complete a SAF, including applications to the Basic Payment Scheme and the Young Farmers Payment. The closing date for applications is 15 May 2015.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how much in Single Farm Payment funding was paid to farm businesses in each constituency, in the last year for which data is available.
(AQW 42116/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The amount of Single Farm Payment paid during the 2014/15 financial year, by constituency, is detailed in the table below:

* The constituency information is drawn from the postcodes of businesses that received Single Farm Payments in the 2014 / 2015 financial year. The "No Constituency" figure represents businesses that either do not have a valid postcode recorded against their business or are businesses where the addresses held is outside the 18 constituencies listed above.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what steps she has taken to identify the ownership of the two high risk reservoirs discussed at a recent Committee for Agriculture and Rural Development meeting; and when their ownership will be identified.
(AQW 42119/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As part of developing the policy on Reservoir safety, my officials made every effort to identify the owners of the 151 reservoirs considered to come under the scope of the Reservoirs legislation when enacted. The steps taken included searches of land registry records, the scrutiny of farm subsidy maps and examination of impoundment licence registrations held by the NI Environment Agency. These efforts have resulted in ownership being established for all but the two reservoirs in question, however it must be stressed that responsibility for providing information to the department will ultimately rest with the Reservoir Managers, as they will be required to register their structures when the legislation comes into force.

Attempts will continue to establish the owners of the two reservoirs in question until the formal registration process begins following the commencement of the Bill.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the efficiency of her Department in processing Single Farm Payments in 2015 compared to 2014.
(AQW 42132/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department has delivered record payment performances for Single Farm Payments over the last two scheme years. For the 2014 scheme year, a record 95% of claims were finalised in December including the majority of inspection cases. Payments continue to be issued on a daily basis in 2015. The December 2013 equivalent was 90% - itself a record at that time.

My Department has achieved a greater level of efficiency for the 2014 scheme year compared to 2013 as these improvements were delivered without engaging additional staff. My Department is continuing to finalise the remaining claims as quickly as possible. It is anticipated that all remaining inspection cases will be processed for payment by the end of March 2015.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what was the operating cost of the Ministerial car in each of the last three financial years.
(AQW 42138/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The table below outlines expenditure on fuel costs and routine maintenance which includes servicing, tyre replacement and cleaning, incurred in operating the Departmental car used by the Minister in each financial year:-

Year	Cost
2011/12	£5,718.16
2012/13	£8,937.14
2013/14	£6,739.35

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to list the consultancy firms that provided financial services to his Department in each of the last five years; and the amount paid to each firm for these services.
(AQW 42146/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The consultancy firms that provided financial services to DARD, and the amounts paid to each firm, in each of the last five years were:

Financial Year	Consultancy Firm	Expenditure £
2009/10	Hymans Robertson	827.00
2009/10	Pricewaterhouse Coopers	52,700.00
2010/11	Deloitte	13,011.25
	Pricewaterhouse Coopers	1,275.00
2011/12	Nil	Nil
2012/13	Deloitte	13,500.00
2013/14	Deloitte	19,000.00

The information provided includes expenditure by the Department, including Agencies and NDPBs/other Arms Length Bodies.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether Rivers Agency would consult with Waterways Ireland on a decision to change the differential water levels between Upper and Lower Lough Erne by three feet at one time; and what impact such a change would have on the ability of cruisers to safely navigate Lough Erne.
(AQW 42150/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Prescribed water levels for both Upper and Lower Lough Erne have been in place since 1950 and were arrived at after consideration of the potential impacts on a range of relevant stakeholders, including recreational users of the Lough. More recently, the water level management regime was the subject of examination as part of the Ministerial Taskforce, following the flooding in Fermanagh in 2009. This work confirmed that the current approach to water level management is the best compromise, given the competing needs of some of the user groups, therefore Rivers Agency has no plans to consult with Waterways Ireland on changes to the prescribed water levels.

Rivers Agency does, however, regularly discuss the management of the Loughs with Waterways Ireland through liaison meetings between the two organisations and also when the control structure at Portora is in operation to ensure that leisure and other craft can safely navigate the lock gates.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what discussions she has had with Executive colleagues on the retention of the Supporting People Programme; and for her assessment of the importance of support in rural communities to facilitate independence and tackle isolation.
(AQW 42211/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I have had no formal discussions with Executive colleagues on the retention of the Supporting People Programme. However I recognise the importance of support for rural communities and the benefits that programmes such as the Supporting People Programme can provide for vulnerable people living in rural areas.

My Department continues to operate the Tackling Rural Poverty and Social Isolation (TRPSI) Framework which aims to reduce poverty and social isolation in rural areas through a range of measures targeted at helping the most vulnerable groups. Projects operating under the TRPSI Framework such as the Maximising Access in Rural Areas (MARA) project (which aims to maximise access to benefits, grants and local and regional services for vulnerable rural dwellers) and the Connecting Elderly Rural Isolated (CERI) project (which operates in the Western Trust Area and assists the elderly with shopping support and individual support services such as chaperoning, minor home maintenance services and befriending) have made a real and positive impact on the lives of some of the most vulnerable rural dwellers.

I continue to lead on two other complementary rural initiatives, rural proofing and the Rural White Paper Action Plan, which are aimed at improving the quality of life for rural dwellers. All Departments are signed up to rural proofing and DARD is currently consulting on proposals for legislation which will help ensure that the needs of rural communities are routinely considered by government both in policy making and in the delivery of services. I have also asked my Executive colleagues to identify new and challenging actions by their Departments for inclusion in a refreshed Rural White Paper Action Plan which I hope to finalise later this year.

Ensuring that vulnerable rural dwellers have access to the necessary support is a key priority of mine and I continue to work with my Executive colleagues to ensure that all Departments fulfil their responsibilities in rural areas.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what representations she has made to the UK Government regarding its participation in the analysis of member states implementation of the Birds & Habitats Directive, ahead of the proposed refit of this directive.
(AQW 42266/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I have made no representations to the British Government regarding its participation in the analysis of member states implementation of the Birds and Habitats Directives.

However, my Department does engage with the NI Environment Agency, which has lead responsibility for the implementation of the Birds and Habitats Directives, in relation to the protection and management of areas designated under these Directives.

Agri-environment schemes implemented by my Department make an important contribution to the management of areas designated under the Directives.

Land in these areas was prioritised for entry into the NI Countryside Management Scheme under Rural Development Programme (RDP) 2007-2013. In addition, the Targeted Level of the Environmental Farming Scheme, the new agri-environment scheme under RDP 2014-2020, will aim to support appropriate management of environmentally designated land.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail to legalities of using barbed wire or similar wire products on fencing in fields where animals are kept.
(AQW 42267/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Farmers are required to ensure that livestock are kept securely, and that welfare standards are observed in accordance with the Welfare of Animals Act 2011and the Welfare of Farmed Animals Regulations 2012, as amended. The use of barbed wire is acceptable as a means of establishing stockproof boundaries in fields however boundary fencing should be selected according to the type of stock which will utilise the field.

DARD agri-environment schemes provide funding for participants to erect protective fencing to facilitate the management of a farmland habitat, to protect newly planted trees from grazing livestock or to protect field boundary restoration which has been funded under the Scheme.

Normally a woven wire (sheep) fence with two strands of barbed wire is the minimum requirement for all types of fencing and this must be completed to at least BS 1722 and both barbed wire and woven wire must comply with BS 4102. Where public access or livestock requirements may require an alternative form of fencing such as the use of plain wire, this must be agreed in advance of any approval for funding.

Farmers are advised to seek approval from DRD, Roads Service, before new fences are erected alongside roadways.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development whether any research has been undertaken on the impact on animal welfare of using barbed wire in fields where animals are kept.
(AQW 42268/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department is not funding any research, or is aware of any research being conducted elsewhere, regarding the impact on animal welfare of using barbed wire in fields where animals are kept.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 41182/11-15, why there have been no discussions with the Department of the Environment on river pollution by fuel launderers and subsequent possible poisoning of water sources available to livestock and destruction of fish stock.
(AQW 42284/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I have had no discussions with the DOE Minister as policy relating to environmental damage is the responsibility of his Department.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, pursuant to AQW 41001/11-15, how many of the 2,748 assisted households were in East Londonderry.
(AQW 42395/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: 243 of the 2,748 rural households that benefitted from DARD supported fuel poverty interventions up to the end of December 2014 were in the East Londonderry constituency.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the Rural Youth Entrepreneurship Programme; and whether it is on course to reach its Tackling Rural Poverty and Social Isolation framework objective by March 2015.
(AQW 42397/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The Rural Youth Entrepreneurship Programme is an innovative initiative that aims to help reduce youth migration and increase the sustainability of rural communities by encouraging rural young people to consider self-employment and entrepreneurship as a viable career path. At present 167 participants are engaged in the RYE Programme and work is well underway to achieve the target of 450 participants leading to 100 new Business Action Plans and onward referrals by 31 March 2016.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the Rural Borewells Scheme; and whether she has plans to open the scheme for applications in 2015.
(AQW 42401/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Sixty-three borewells have been drilled for eligible applications received in 2012 and 2013. Site-works for the twenty-six eligible applications received in 2014 have also commenced.

A decision on whether to open again in 2015 must take account of departmental priorities within both DARD and DRD and also the level of demand for the Rural Borewells Scheme. A review of the Scheme is currently being undertaken by DARD and DRD officials. This review will influence the decision on future delivery of this Scheme; a decision which I anticipate will be made within the coming weeks.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline her proposals for the expansion of the Forest Service to help meet the demand for native timber by the construction industry.
(AQO 7650/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In 2006 the forestry strategy set a long term aim of doubling the area under forest. A Public Opinion survey in 2014 found that 96% of respondents believed that forestry was worth supporting, to provide places for wildlife to live and for recreation. 79% of respondents said that they would like to see more woodland locally.

The role that conifer forests play in producing home grown timber is different. The Forest Service sells £8.0 million worth of trees to produce 400,000 cubic metres of logs which sawmills turn into construction timber, wood fuel pellets and the like. Over 300 jobs in sawmills depend on the home grown timber industry, to say nothing about jobs in forests and timber haulage. The income varies according to market forces, and goes towards the costs of replanting forests and other expenses including public access, conservation and, increasingly, plant health measures.

There are risks to sustaining this level of production, from plant diseases, the storms of recent years, and because the programme of tree planting reduced considerably from the 1970's onwards.

My policy vision remains that there should be more forests to provide a broad range of public benefits.

To do this, we brought in a new Forestry Act. This created public rights of pedestrian access, controlled tree felling, and broadened the scope of forestry activity. We brought information about the extent of woodland up to date so that we know that forests cover 8% of the land area. We published a map showing areas where additional tree planting was most likely to be environmentally acceptable. Since 2007 the Rural Development Regulation funded planting of 2,700 hectares of woodland, of which 200 hectares are coniferous plantations intended to produce construction timber.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on Going for Growth.
(AQO 7653/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: First of all I am pleased to say that the DETI Minister and I have recently re-appointed the current Chair and Members of the Agri-Food Strategy Board for a further two years. Our decision to reappoint the Board recognises the significant contribution and commitment Tony and his Board members have already made to growth of the sector and their continued role as we progress implementation.

As you will be aware, Going for Growth is a comprehensive strategic action plan and contains over 100 recommendations directed to both government and the industry. In our Executive Response, published last year, we set out actions to be taken by government departments and agencies over the short, medium and long term to address over 80 of those recommendations.

My Department has already made progress on a number of fronts, addressing key priorities of marketing, innovation, sustainable land use and, of course, developing proposals for a Farm Business Improvement Scheme, worth up to £250 million, to improve competitiveness and productivity in farming through up-skilling, knowledge transfer, advice and capital investment. Proposals for FBIS, a complementary Agri-Food Processing Investment Scheme, an Environmental Farming Scheme and a Land Management Programme have been included within the draft RDP 2014-2020, and work is continuing to develop these schemes and associated business cases.

The Board will continue to play a leading role in taking forward agreed industry actions to deliver its vision of a sustainable, profitable and integrated supply chain, focused on delivering the needs of the market. The Chair and members will also be a valuable sounding-board for government as we seek to progress our actions to support the industry's growth aspirations. I look forward to continuing to work closely with them.

Ms Fearon asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how her Department is contributing towards the development of access to broadband for rural dwellers.
(AQO 7654/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: By the end of March 2015, my Department will have invested £7.5m in rural broadband. This investment has already helped some 17,000 rural dwellers, farms and businesses to access broadband services. The NI Broadband Improvements Project, which is led by DETI, and to which I am contributing £5m, has already been responsible for an additional 7,000 rural premises being able to connect to broadband if they wish.

Broadband is a priority of mine. I now want to encourage as many rural dwellers as possible to connect to broadband to give themselves and their families the same opportunities as those living in urban areas. My Department is looking to see how we can encourage more and better use of broadband so that rural businesses and farmers can benefit from the wide range of government services now available on line.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many young farmers from South Antrim are currently studying for the Level II Qualification in Agriculture in order to attain eligibility for the Young Farmers' Scheme.
(AQO 7655/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: Within the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise (CAFRE) there are currently 107 students from the South Antrim area enrolled on the Open College Network (NI) Level II Qualification – Agriculture Business Operations. This number includes students whose addresses have postcodes within the South Antrim Parliamentary Constituency.

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how her Department plans to develop an export market for Northern Ireland beef in the USA.
(AQO 7656/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I am keenly aware that access to the US market for exports of beef from the north of Ireland is a key priority for local producers and processors and I was delighted when the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) lifted the EU wide BSE ban in March 2014. Considerable effort has already been made by my department to expedite the market access process for beef exports from the north.

I am pleased to confirm we have submitted a final version of the Self Reporting Tool (SRT) on 5 February which represents a key stage in accessing this market. The SRT outlines our controls on beef production and how government and industry will ensure the US specific export standards will be met. The next stage in the process is an inspection of our controls by the US authorities.

I am anticipating this inspection in the first half of 2015 and two meat processing establishments in the north will be visited. In preparation for the audit my officials participated in a mock inspection of processors by ex USDA inspectors in November 2014. They are continuing to work with industry to ensure that they are fully prepared to meet the stringent USDA requirements.

A successful inspection will see our production and audit systems approved for exports and will allow my officials to audit and approve other processors in the north interested in this market without the need for another inspection by the US authorities. I am pleased to note that the USDA have agreed that this inspection team will also visit a lamb processor in the north in anticipation of the US lifting their ban on EU lamb in the second half of 2015. Access will give the north an early foothold into this market ahead of other Member States.

Mr McCarthy asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for her assessment of the impact on local mussel producers should Northern Ireland fail to meet its obligations under the EU Water Framework Directive.
(AQO 7658/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The EU Water Framework Directive is the responsibility of the Department of the Environment. I understand that most of the water bodies containing shellfish businesses are on target to meet Good Status in 2015. However, 4 water bodies are likely to meet moderate status by 2021. These are Inner Dundrum Bay, Inner Belfast Lough, Strangford Lough South and Carlingford Lough.

The shellfish businesses within Belfast, Strangford and Carlingford Loughs consistently meet at least Class B classification and remain productive. The Water Framework Directive classification is not compromising mussel producers. This is because these water bodies are failing to meet 'good' on their nutrient status. Mussels continue to grow well in nutrient-rich areas.

Inner Dundrum Bay is the only site which struggles to meet Class B consistently under the EU Food Hygiene Regulations. The regulatory authorities are working closely with NI Water (NIW) to ensure that improvements continue to be made to the sewerage network and waste water treatment works. This is NIW's highest priority waste water improvement scheme in 2015.

The mussel sector is a key component of the aquaculture industry in the north. In 2013, the Mussel Industry produced over 3300 tonnes of mussels with a value to the economy of £5.7 million.

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline the increase in woodland cover since 2007.
(AQO 7659/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In 2006 the forestry strategy set a long term aim of doubling the area under forest. A Public Opinion survey in 2014 found that 96% of respondents believed that forestry was worth supporting, to provide places for wildlife to live and for recreation. 79% of respondents said that they would like to see more woodland locally.

The role that conifer forests play in producing home grown timber is different. The Forest Service sells £8.0 million worth of trees to produce 400,000 cubic metres of logs which sawmills turn into construction timber, wood fuel pellets and the like. Over 300 jobs in sawmills depend on the home grown timber industry, to say nothing about jobs in forests and timber haulage. The income varies according to market forces, and goes towards the costs of replanting forests and other expenses including public access, conservation and, increasingly, plant health measures.

There are risks to sustaining this level of production, from plant diseases, the storms of recent years, and because the programme of tree planting reduced considerably from the 1970's onwards.

My policy vision remains that there should be more forests to provide a broad range of public benefits.

To do this, we brought in a new Forestry Act. This created public rights of pedestrian access, controlled tree felling, and broadened the scope of forestry activity. We brought information about the extent of woodland up to date so that we know that forests cover 8% of the land area. We published a map showing areas where additional tree planting was most likely to be environmentally acceptable. Since 2007 the Rural Development Regulation funded planting of 2,700 hectares of woodland, of which 200 hectares are coniferous plantations intended to produce construction timber.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what proposals she has to help grow Northern Ireland's fruit and vegetable industry.
(AQO 7660/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: It is anticipated that there will be opportunities for our fruit and vegetable industry to avail of public support through the new Rural Development Programme (RDP), including the proposed Farm Business Improvement Scheme (FBIS).

The Agri-Food Strategy Board in its Going for Growth report, recommended a £250 million 'Farm Business Improvement Scheme'. The Scheme is the major recommendation addressed to DARD with the objectives to improve competitiveness and productivity in farming through increased efficiency, up-skilling on farm, farm modernisation and a commitment to working with supply chain partners to improve performance.

Officials are continuing to develop the proposed Farm Business Improvement Scheme, which is subject to the necessary approvals, both internally and at the European Commission.

In rolling out the FBIS, it is proposed that the early focus will be on making advice and support available to farmers to help them clearly identify their needs and make the right decisions about developing their business.

A number of horticulture projects which are aligned to the DARD Strategic Goal to improve Performance in the Marketplace are being funded under the DARD / Agri-Food Biosciences Institute's (AFBI) Evidence and Innovation Research Programme including projects aimed at improving Performance in the Marketplace and Improvements in Plant Health Research.

Mr Lynch asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the processing of unpaid Single Farm Payments for applicants in Fermanagh/South Tyrone.
(AQO 7661/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I am pleased to say that some 94%, or 4,795 of 5,077, claims from farm businesses in the Fermanagh and South Tyrone constituency have been finalised. A total of £37.7m has been paid. Of the 282 outstanding claims, 77 have been subject to inspection. This is a remarkably low number at this stage in the processing cycle.

My Department has delivered another record payment performance for the 2014 Single Farm Payment year. In December 2014, 95% of claims overall were finalised for payment, exceeding a target of 93%. A total of £234.6 million was paid to local farmers in December.

To date, 98% of claims have been finalised for payment and £245.8 million has been paid out with the lowest number of outstanding claims that there has ever been.

My Department is continuing to finalise the remaining claims as quickly as possible. It is anticipated that all remaining inspection cases will be processed for payment by the end of March 2015. This again is earlier than ever before. A number of claims are outstanding due to factors outside my Department's control such as probate proceedings, disputes between farmers and information, such as bank account details, not being provided by farm businesses.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what budget has been set for the new Liofa book clubs initiative; and whether this comes out of the libraries budget.
(AQW 42540/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): The cost for the new Líofa Book Club initiative is £5,100. This funding will not come out of the libraries budget.

Mr Newton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether she is planning to work with the Linen Hall Library as part of the creation of a Troubles legacy project.
(AQO 7662/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: There are no plans in place to work with the Linen Hall Library during the creation of its Troubles Legacy project as this initiative is fully funded.

I understand that the Linen Hall Library holds over two hundred and fifty thousand items within its political archive. This is a unique resource and no other institution in a localised conflict is known to have systematically collected such a volume of material collected from all sides.

Given the historical significance of this archive, the Linen Hall Library is currently involved in a project to digitise a selection of this archive for future generations.

The project's total cost is likely to be four hundred thousand pounds. The Heritage Lottery Fund is contributing three hundred and seventy four thousand pounds of this amount, and the Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade in Dublin is providing nineteen thousand pounds.

The Linen Hall Library's Director has informed me that this Project will be entirely funded from these sources. As such, as I previously mentioned, there are no plans to approach my Department for funding or other assistance.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline any discussions she has had with the Minister for Employment and Learning following the decision by Ulster University to remove approximately 20 courses linked to film studies as a result of budget cuts.
(AQO 7666/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am aware of the Ulster University's recent announcement in relation to its plans to cut 53 undergraduate courses. I have concerns about the potential impact of the removal of courses linked to film studies given the thriving and successful film production sector here. It is important to ensure there is a pipeline of highly skilled and talented individuals graduating from our universities and colleges to work in and support the creative sectors.

The Minister for Employment and Learning has accepted an invitation to meet with me as part of the Ministerial Action Group on the Creative Industries where we can explore the issue further.

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure, following the recent pollution incident, to outline any discussions she has had with the Minister of the Environment with regard to re-stocking the Sixmilewater River.
(AQO 7670/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: A significant fish kill occurred on the Sixmilewater near Ballyclare on the 29th of October 2014. The cause of the incident is being investigated by the Environment Agency and my Department's Inland Fisheries staff assisted in this by collecting, counting, and identifying the dead fish and confirming the stretch of river affected. As this is an on-going investigation I cannot comment any further on the details of the incident.

I can confirm that my Department's Chief Fisheries Officer met with representatives of the local angling club on 12 February to discuss a number of issues following on from the fish kill. Inland Fisheries staff will also be available to discuss the potential for the future reinstatement of the affected stretch of the Sixmilewater.

In the event that someone is made amenable for the fish kill, my Department will prepare costings on re-stocking and reinstatement of the affected stretch, to inform the court on making on order for damages.

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether all departmental arm's-length body buildings are equipped with defibrillators.
(AQO 7671/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: My Department is responsible for a number of arm's length bodies (ALBs). There are three ALB buildings equipped with defibrillators which are:- Waterways Ireland headquarters; Armagh Observatory; and Sports Institute NI.

In addition to this Sport NI, Libraries NI and Foras na Gaeilge are undergoing a procurement exercise for the supply of defibrillators for the House of Sport, Tollymore National Outdoor Centre, a number of libraries and Foras na Gaeilge in Belfast.

At present National Museums has not equipped its sites with defibrillators. However, for events which attract large audiences it engages first aiders from the Red Cross or St John's Ambulance Service ensuring that defibrillators are available.

In addition, Heartsine one of the sponsors of the 2013 World Police and Fire Games, provided defibrillators at venues. On completion of the Games the 45 defibrillators were gifted for distribution to local schools.2013 WPFG Ltd ran a competition which was open to all local schools and designed to improve awareness and understanding of Sudden Cardiac Arrest and the value of defibrillators.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline any discussions she has had with OFCOM regarding the devolution of further broadcasting powers.
(AQO 7672/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I have had no discussions with OFCOM regarding the devolution of further broadcasting powers as this is largely a political matter.

I have written to Ed Vaizey, Minister of State for Culture and the Digital Economy to ask that the North of Ireland be given parity with Scotland in regard to the particular recommendations made in relation to broadcasting in the recent Smith Commission Report and I await his response.

I believe there is a huge accountability gap with government responsibility for broadcasting held in Westminster and that our Assembly should have a say on the future of broadcasting here. I believe that the licensing of broadcasters, or Charter in the case of the BBC, must at the very least include a mechanism that makes broadcasting companies accountable and answerable to the Assembly.

Mr Boylan asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the progress of an overarching strategy for the arts.
(AQO 7673/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am developing an Arts and Culture strategy to ensure recognition is given to the value the arts have in enriching the lives of individuals, communities and wider society. Recent developments include the establishment of a Ministerial Arts Advisory Forum and an inter-Departmental Steering Group to help inform the development of the Strategy. I attended the inaugural meeting of the forum which has now met on two occasions while the Steering Group has met on one occasion.

My vision for the strategy is that it is fully inclusive and I have asked the forum to ensure that all stakeholders including arts groups, communities and individuals play an active part in the creative development of the strategy during this co-design phase which will lead to a public consultation starting early summer 2015.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on the Ulster Scots Language, Heritage and Culture strategy.
(AQO 7674/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: In line with the 2011-15 Programme for Government, I published a Strategy to Enhance and Develop the Ulster-Scots Language, Heritage and Culture 2015-2035 on the 30 January 2015.

The Strategy had been revised and strengthened following a comprehensive public consultation exercise and was also informed by engagement with other Executive Ministers. The crucial role of stakeholders and the community has been reflected in the Strategy.

The Strategy set out a roadmap for Ulster Scots language, heritage and culture over the next 20 years in a wide range of areas. The Strategy seeks to promote increased awareness about Ulster Scots and highlight the positive and significant role of Ulster Scots for all our community.

The next steps will involve establishing the structures for implementing the Strategy as set out in the Implementation Section of the Strategy. I will work closely with the other Departments, all of whom will have a role to play in delivering the Strategies.

Mr Cree asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the departmental and arm's-length bodies' capital assets that are available for disposal in 2015/16.
(AQO 7675/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I am very conscious, especially in the current budgetary environment, of the need to identify surplus assets and to dispose of these in the most appropriate way- either to other public bodies, to community organisations or on the open market.

Regular reviews to identify surplus assets form an important part of the asset management plans of my Department and its ALBs.

Three former Library properties are currently surplus to requirements and are for sale. No other assets have been identified at this point for disposal in 2015/16

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to outline the steps she intends to take to achieve support across communities for an Irish Language Act.
(AQO 7676/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: As I have stated previously legislation to provide protection and equality for the Irish language should not be viewed as divisive or a threat to any member of our community.

Based on the experience of other jurisdictions, legislation will be an effective way of protecting Irish and according it proper equality and status.

I am greatly encouraged with the level of interest in Irish that already exists among the Unionist community and want to build on this. I have taken a number of steps to break down the negative preconceptions that some have about the Irish language including:

My Department through Foras na Gaeilge funds the Irish Language Officer post in East Belfast Mission and Irish language lessons are held regularly there. My Department's Líofa Development Officer has met with East Belfast Mission to discuss how we can assist their work and provide practical support. The Líofa initiative is about making Irish accessible to people of every background. Such developments indicate an increasing interest in the language among those from Protestant and Unionist backgrounds.

Líofa took part in a major cross-community event in Derry organised by the Grand Orange Lodge and the GAA to bring together young people from Protestant and Catholic schools to explore our cultural richness including the Irish language through sharing and learning. Such events provide a good opportunity to promote Irish to all communities.

During the consultation, my officials will respond to requests to engage with all sections of the community and others in order to provide clarification on issues relating to the proposals for an Irish Language Bill. This will include officials attending meetings and other relevant events as requested.

Department of Education

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of Education to detail the (i) number of schools who have benefited from the School Building Programme and/or Minor Works investment in South Down, and schools that serve South Down, in each of the last eight years, broken down by (a) school; and (b) investment received.
(AQW 41397/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): I have arranged for the information requested to be placed in the Assembly Library.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Education what measures his Department have implemented in recent years to (i) protect frontline services; (ii) target social need; and (iii) increase investment in new school builds.
(AQW 41972/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department has implemented the following measures in recent years as follows:

(i) Protection of frontline services

As part of the budget settlement for the 4 year period 2011-12 to 2014-15, the Education budget had to be managed with a significant shortfall against anticipated requirement. I agreed an approach which protected spend on my Departmental priorities; bore down on unnecessary bureaucracy; and protected, as far as possible, funding for front line services. This included protection of a number of areas such as Special Education, Extended Schools, Counselling, Youth & Early Years. The Education and Library Boards (ELBs) were required to deliver savings in identified areas, and to protect frontline services as much as possible in the management and control of the funding allocated to them from my Department.

(ii) Targeting Social Need (TSN)

A key focus of changes implemented to the funding arrangements for schools in 2014-15, following a fundamental Review, was to enhance the funding arrangements to support those identified as most in need in schools.

Alongside changes to the focus for TSN funding to reflect Social Deprivation in primary schools, I injected an additional £10 million into school budgets, to help schools with the greatest concentrations of disadvantage to address underachievement among their disadvantaged pupils.

In addition to the formula funding changes, I have introduced a change (from September 2014) in the entitlement criteria for post-primary age pupils, to bring these pupils into line with eligibility criteria that previously applied only to nursery and primary-age pupils. Consequently, the funding arrangements to target social needs applies equally to pupils at all stages.

For early years children Sure Start offers support to parents and children under four from the most disadvantaged areas to promote their physical, intellectual social and emotional development. Sure Start services are provided in at least the top 20% most disadvantaged wards in the north of Ireland with expansion to the top 25% most disadvantaged wards underway (as resource allows) over this CSR period 2011-15. The annual budget for Sure Start is now approximately £25 million.

The Department currently provides funding to a mix of approximately 160 playgroups, early years centres and crèches through the DE Early Years Fund. Funding, which is administered by the Early Years Organisation (EYO), under SLA with DE, is approximately £1.7 million for 2014/15. The funded groups provide direct early years care and education to children in areas of low provision, disadvantaged areas, or where the service is considered critical for children.

DE currently funds the Toybox project for travellers. Toybox is delivered by the Early Years Organisation (EYO) to Traveller families across the North of Ireland in nine localities. Funding is £356k for 2014/15.

A key action in "Learning to Learn" provides eligible voluntary and private providers in the Pre-School Education Programme with the same opportunities to help address barriers to learning as those eligible for Extended Schools funding in nursery schools. Settings eligible for this funding have been identified because they draw the majority of their children from areas of disadvantage or a significant proportion of their children are entitled to Free School Meals. 94 out of 396 non-statutory funded pre-school settings were eligible for the funding which has a total budget of £196,700.

The eligibility criteria for free school meals were extended in 2010/11, on a phased basis, to nursery and primary school pupils in low income working families and were further extended to post-primary pupils from September 2014. This has resulted in around 23,000 additional nursery and primary pupils and 12,000 post-primary pupils becoming eligible for a free meal. With the exception of nursery school pupils this entitlement also generally brings with it an entitlement to receive the school uniform grant.

In conjunction with the Department for Employment and Learning (DEL) the Education Maintenance Allowance Scheme was revised in 2013/14 to ensure that it was better targeted to provide more effective support to those families most in need. In addition, funding of £1.85 million in 2013/14 and £3.6 million each year from 2014/15 has been transferred from the DE budget to DEL to ensure that the bonus payments are retained as these have played a particularly important role in incentivising young people to remain in education.

(iii) Increased Investment in new School Builds

Since I took up the role of Minister for Education in May 2011, my Department has:

- Introduced a rolling programme of capital builds during this mandate and into the next;
- Introduced and published a new project selection protocol that decouples development proposals from capital projects therefore allowing announced projects to be delivered more quickly;
- Introduced a streamlined economic appraisal preparation and approval process;
- Introduced a 'client advisor' role to identify and resolve technical and practical issues as early as possible in the project to help speed up the planning and construction process.

This has resulted in 56 major capital investment projects being announced since 2012 with one completed and eight currently on site. All of the other projects are being actively progressed and are either in the process of procurement or planning.

The recent and anticipated capital investment in major works is as follows:

- £15.5m in 2013/14;
- £23.4m projected in FY14/15;
- £55m budgeted spend in FY15/16.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education how many mainstream post-primary schools in Fermanagh and South Tyrone have (i) failed; and/or (ii) had concerns noted, following Special Educational Needs inspections in each of the last two academic years.
(AQW 42078/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Of the mainstream post-primary schools in Fermanagh and South Tyrone which were inspected during the last two years (since January 2013) none has:

i failed or

ii. had concerns noted

following inspection of their special needs provision.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of Education to detail the cost of building Fairhill Primary School, Kinallen.
(AQW 42241/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Fair Hill Primary School, Kinallen was originally built in 1997.

The combined capital spend of all the works capitalised at the school since its initial construction in 1997 until 31 March 2014 is £1,089,245.10.

This included a new Nursery Unit in 2011/12 and a two classroom extension with Storage, Toilets & PV Panels in 2013/14.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of Education to detail the cost of placing any additional mobile classrooms since the building of Fairhill Primary School, Kinallen.
(AQW 42242/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The North Eastern Education and Library Board (NEELB) who has responsibility for capital minor works at Fairhill Primary School, has advised that the cost of placing any additional mobile classrooms since the building of the school is as follows:-

2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14	2014/15	Overall Total
£10,661	£1,100	*£-438	£23,610	£0	£0	£0	£34,933

* relates to accrued expenditure

 costs have only been provided for a period of six financial years in addition to the current financial year in line with the record retention policy of the NEELB.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of Education to detail the cost of building Donacloney Primary School, Donacloney.
(AQW 42243/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Donacloney Primary School was originally built in 1979.

The combined capital spend of all the works capitalised at the school since its initial construction until 31 March 2014 is £1,820,802.71.

This included a new Nursery Unit in 2008/09, a refurbishment and extension in 2009/10 and a Traffic Management Scheme in 2013/14.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of Education to detail the cost of placing any additional mobile classrooms since the building of Donacloney Primary School, Donacloney.
(AQW 42244/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The North Eastern Education and Library Board (NEELB) who has responsibility for capital minor works at Donacloney Primary School, has advised that the cost of placing any additional mobile classrooms since the building of the school is as follows:-

2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14	2014/15	Overall Total

 costs have only been provided for a period of six financial years in addition to the current financial year in line with the record retention policy of the NEELB.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of pupils considered ineligible for inclusion in the Summary of Annual Examination Results exercise in a (i) grammar school; and (ii) secondary school because the pupil (a) has died; (b) was unable to sit any examinations, either through serious illness, including mental health issues, or pregnancy; (c) has transferred to another school or has emigrated; (d) is in a special unit approved by the Department; (e) has a statement of Special Educational Needs; (f) has been placed in the EOTAS1 scheme; (g) has serious welfare issues that have culminated in the inability to sit any examinations; or (h) has been withdrawn from the school with the consent of their parent or guardian, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 42250/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The information requested is detailed in the table below;

Source: Summary of Annual Examination Results

Notes:

1 '*' denotes fewer than 5 pupils.

2 '#' figure not disclosed under rules of statistical suppression.

Reasons for Ineligibility:

1 A pupil has died

2 A pupil, either through serious illness (including mental health issues) or pregnancy, was unable to sit any examinations. - In the case of pregnancy, please indicate if the pupil was referred to the School Age Mothers programme.

3 A pupil has transferred to another school or has emigrated.

4 A pupil is in a special unit approved by the Department.

5 A pupil has a statement of special educational needs.

6 A pupil has been placed in the EOTAS scheme. – Please note that only pupils placed in EOTAS through the Education and Library Board referral service will be deemed ineligible.

7 A pupil has serious welfare issues that have culminated in the inability to sit any examinations. - Please indicate in the return if the pupil was referred to the ELB or any other agency for support.

8 A pupil has been withdrawn from the school with the consent of their parent/guardian. - Pupils will only be deemed ineligible under this reason code if this return is accompanied by documentary evidence, such as a letter signed and dated by the parent/guardian. (DE Circular 2013/13 provides advice on the removal of a pupil from the school register).

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Education whether he will consider convening a cross-party working group to devise a more sustainable approach to the transfer system.
(AQW 42257/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The majority of our post-primary schools (138 for Transfer 2015) already use a sustainable approach to transfer from primary school to post-primary. A minority of post-primary schools (65 for Transfer 2015) continue to use so-called academic selection. These schools have made a conscious decision to do so. They have made a conscious decision to make pupils who apply to their schools sit either two tests under GL or up to three under AQE. They continue to do so despite the fact that all schools now teach to the same curriculum and, under the Entitlement Framework, all schools are now required to offer access to a broad range of subjects.

What is needed is an end to excuses being made for schools which consciously choose to practise a system of academic selection and rejection of 10 and 11 year old children when in fact another system is in place and operational.

Those opposed to academic selection need to actively campaign for its end in all schools to ensure equality of educational opportunity for all children.

Mr McKay asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 41585/11-15, how many pupils in each Education and Library Bard waited longer than 9 months from the referral from the school until their first appointment with an educational psychologist in 2014.
(AQW 42277/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Library Boards have advised that the number of pupils who had their first appointment with an educational psychologist, at Stage 3 of the Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs, in the calendar year 2014 and who had been waiting longer than 9 months for that appointment is as follows:-

BELB	*
NEELB	26
SEELB	14
SELB	10
WELB	0

* denotes fewer than five pupils suppressed due to potential identification of individual pupils.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education whether his Department plans to raise with Translink the lack of a direct bus service between Bangor and the Ards Peninsula for school pupils and their parents.
(AQW 42314/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department of Education has no duty with respect to transport for ineligible pupils and parents. With respect to eligible pupils, I would refer the Member to my answer to AQW 39806/11-15 which was tabled by Steven Agnew MLA and published in the Official Report on the 18 December 2014.

Mrs Overend asked the Minister of Education to detail the proportion of female headteachers to total headteachers in primary schools with (i) under 700; and (ii) over 700 pupils.
(AQW 42316/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The table below details the proportion of female principals to total principals in primary schools split by school size.

	700 or more pupils	Fewer than 700 pupils
Percentage of female principals	*%	56.7%

* Percentage suppressed as based on a number fewer than 5

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of quangos linked to his Department on (i) 8 May 2007; and (ii) 11 February 2015; and how many people served on the quangos on these respective dates.
(AQW 42329/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There were 14 public bodies linked to my Department on 8 May 2007 and according to the Public Appointments Annual Report there were 259 public appointees serving on these bodies as at 31 March 2007.

There are currently 14 public bodies linked to my Department (although this will drop to 9 on 1 April 2015) and 150 public appointees serving on them at 11 February 2015.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education whether any application to the Change Fund was made to promote science, technology, engineering, and mathematics subjects in primary schools or to give further resources to Sentinus.
(AQW 42330/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: An application was made to the Executive Change Fund to promote STEM in primary and post-primary schools. This application was unsuccessful.

No application was made to the Executive Change Fund to give further resources to Sentinus.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education where in Northern Ireland teachers can be trained specifically for Special Educational Needs skills; and if they have to travel to Birmingham for training, what financial support is given to help them attend the course.
(AQW 42331/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In order to support pupils' special educational needs across school sectors, there is a wide range of training courses available to teachers across the north of Ireland. Training is offered by providers from the statutory, private and voluntary/community sectors. It is for each school principal to work in partnership with the relevant Education and Library Board to identify the most appropriate method for meeting the training needs identified for teachers in their school.

Each Education and Library Board will consider funding, on an individual basis, for a teacher who wishes to attend SEN training in Birmingham, or elsewhere outside of the north of Ireland.

Furthermore, student teachers in our local universities and colleges are educated in and expected to demonstrate understanding of the SEN Code of Practice. Their training covers the recognition of pupils' special needs and focuses on strategies to meet those needs.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 42098/11-15, how many of the 21 temporary Senior Executive Officer posts created within the Western Education and Library Board during 2014 were made permanent.
(AQW 42341/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Pursuant to AQW 42098/11-15, 5 of the 21 temporary Senior Executive Officer posts created within the Western Education and Library Board during 2014 were made permanent.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Education to outline his Department's efforts, working with higher education institutions and the Irish government, to reduce the obstacles, relevant to his Department, to student mobility between north and south and to implement the recommendations of the IBEC-CBI Joint Business Council report on student mobility.
(AQW 42345/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The IBEC-CBI Joint Business Council report has made a positive contribution to this issue, as have the recommendations it contains, the majority of which fall under the policy remit of the Department of Employment and Learning (DEL).

The main focus for my Department has been Recommendation 6, which relates to the issue of A Level grades and their recognition in the south. My Department has tasked the Council for the Curriculum, Examinations and Assessment (CCEA), as the regulator of general qualifications here, to take forward this issue with the Irish Universities Association (IUA). Discussions are ongoing regarding entry requirements to Higher Education Institutions in the south and the Central Applications Office (CAO) policy on tariff points.

There have been a number of positive developments by Trinity College Dublin, Dublin City University and most recently, by the National University of Ireland (NUI) Galway, to address the issues that have arisen in relation to students from here applying to universities in the south. I welcome these initiatives and I hope that this will encourage other universities in the south to follow suit.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 41364/11-15, for an update on the pilot Full Service Programmes and whether the Full Service approach will be pursued further by his Department in 2015.
(AQW 42396/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department has continued to fund the Full Service Extended Schools programme in place at the Belfast Boys Model and Belfast Model School for Girls in North Belfast and the Full Service Community Network in West Belfast. Both programmes received £385k in the 2014/15 financial year.

I am currently finalising my 2015-16 spending plans and the continuation of any Full Service funding beyond 31 March 2015 will be considered in the context of my overall spending plans for education which I hope to announce in the near future.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education to detail the total number of children who were awarded pre-school places funded by each Education and Library Board in 2013/14.
(AQW 42408/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The aim of the Pre-School Education Programme (PSEP) is to provide one year of funded pre-school education for children who have reached three years and two months and are in their final pre-school year. The PSEP is non-compulsory and places are available in nursery schools and units attached to primary schools and in voluntary and private settings.

Under current legislation, statutory nursery education is available to children who are two years old but who have not reached compulsory school age. Only children in their pre-school year can be admitted to voluntary and private pre-school settings.

The table below shows the total number of children and the total number of two year olds in pre-school places broken down by Education and Library Board:

Board	BELB	WELB	NEELB	SEELB	SELB	Total
Total no. of Children*	3565	3939	5244	4874	5542	23164
No of 2 year olds*	96	137	236	119	107	695

* Information source - School Census 2013/14

For the reasons set out below, it is not possible to specify actual costs for pre-school children: identifiable funding available for pre-school education in 2013/14 was, however, approximately £56m

Budgets for grant-aided schools include nursery schools and nursery units attached to primary schools and it is not possible to disaggregate funding for nursery class pupils in primary schools from the overall budget delegated to the primary school.

In addition, funding for schools is based on year-group enrolment totals and, for grant-aided pre-school settings, it is not possible to disaggregate funding elements for age-specific pupils.

Schools receive a fully delegated budget and it is for each school's Board of Governors to determine spending priorities, in meeting the needs of all pupils within the school.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education to detail the total number of two year old children who were awarded pre-school places funded by each Education and Library Board in 2013/14.
(AQW 42409/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The aim of the Pre-School Education Programme (PSEP) is to provide one year of funded pre-school education for children who have reached three years and two months and are in their final pre-school year. The PSEP is non-compulsory and places are available in nursery schools and units attached to primary schools and in voluntary and private settings.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education to detail the total cost of (i) all funded pre-school places; and (ii) funded pre-school places for two year olds in 2013/14, broken down by Education and Library Board.
(AQW 42411/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The aim of the Pre-School Education Programme (PSEP) is to provide one year of funded pre-school education for children who have reached three years and two months and are in their final pre-school year. Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education to outline the decision making process and criteria used by each Education and LIbrary Board when awarding a funded pre-school place to a two year old child.
(AQW 42412/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The aim of the Pre-School Education Programme (PSEP) is to provide one year of funded pre-school education for children who have reached three years and two months and are in their final pre-school year.

The PSEP is non-compulsory and non-sectoral. Places are available in nursery schools and units attached to primary schools and in voluntary and private settings.

Under current legislation, statutory nursery education is available to children who are two years old but who have not reached compulsory school age. Two year olds may be offered a funded pre-school place once the pre-school admissions process reaches stage two and only in the statutory sector: they should, however, not be offered a place which could accommodate a target age child.

Admissions criteria are a matter for individual schools and are applied when a school offers places to two year olds. Legislation, however, requires that the top criterion for each provider prioritises children from socially disadvantaged backgrounds.

Evidence and experience have shown that many two year olds are not at a stage of development where they can benefit from the pre-school experience provided through the PSEP and when I launched Learning to Learn – a Framework for Early Years Education and Learning in late 2013 – I, therefore, announced my intention to bring forward a Bill, subject to the necessary approvals, to legislate to ensure that only children in their immediate pre-school year can be admitted as pupils for the purposes of the Pre-School Education Programme..

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education to detail the average cost of referring a child to Educational Psychology Services.
(AQW 42413/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Due to the breadth of services delivered across each of the five Education and Library Boards' Educational Psychology Services (EPS), it is not possible to accurately separate the costs associated with referring a child to a Board's EPS. A meaningful calculation for an average cost cannot, therefore, be provided.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of teaching posts that will be declared redundant in the next academic year.
(AQW 42451/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department does not employ teachers. Teachers are employed by the relevant Board of Governors for each school setting. They are responsible for determining decisions regarding their staffing complement and are currently considering staffing requirements for the 2015/16 academic year, taking into account such factors as curricular demand, pupil enrolment and the financial projections for the school setting.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Education what steps have been taken to ensure that school meals are, and continue to be, nutritional following reductions in funding.
(AQW 42452/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Nutritional Standards for school lunches have been in place since September 2007 and are compulsory for all grantaided schools. Standards for other food and drinks provided in schools (breakfast clubs, tuck shops, vending machines etc) were introduced in April 2008 and schools are expected to adhere to them. These Standards have changed the approach to school catering services ensuring that all school meals and other food provided in schools are healthier and more nutritious. Both schools and the catering service will continue to implement the Standards by seeking to achieve greater efficiencies in providing school food.

Schools will also continue to play an important role in educating children and young people in the importance of a balanced diet and a healthy lifestyle, providing healthy and nutritious food choices and giving consistent health messages.

I am still in the process of finalising my 2015-16 spending plans for education and hope to announce these in the near future.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of (i) males; and (ii) females excluded from post-primary schools in the last five years, broken down by school.
(AQW 42453/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department's website publishes statistics on pupil expulsions, providing the three most common reasons for expulsion. These figures are provided annually by the Education and Library boards (ELBs) and the total numbers of expulsions in the last five years are as follows:

Year	Number of Expulsions
2009/2010	22
2010-2011	38
2011/2012	24
2012/2013	19

Year	Number of Expulsions
2013/2014	29
Total	132

The majority of pupils expelled from in each year were male and of post- primary age.

These statistics cannot be broken down in any further detail as doing so would potentially allow for the identification of individuals, due to the small numbers involved. This reflects the Statistics Authority Code of Practice on Official Statistics, in particular Principle 5, relating to confidentiality.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Education whether his Department has any plans to introduce permanent English as an Additional Language teaching posts in post-primary schools.
(AQW 42454/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department is not the Employer of teachers.

Teachers are employed by Employing Authorities (EAs) such as the Education and Library Boards (ELBs) and the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools (CCMS), or in the case of Voluntary Grammar and Grant Maintained Integrated Schools, the individual Boards of Governors.

The decision to introduce permanent English as an Additional Language teaching posts is at the discretion of the Employing Authority or Board of Governors for individual schools.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education what progress has been made in advancing the 22 new build projects announced on 22 January 2013.
(AQW 42455/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I was pleased to announce 22 new build projects in January 2013 to a value of £220m. There are currently 8 business cases approved and work is progressing well on the remainder. Eight of the projects are currently expected to move to site in 2015/16 subject to availability of capital budget in subsequent years.

It is anticipated that the remaining business cases will be approved in the next financial year. Regular project meetings are being held to ensure momentum is maintained.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education what progress has been made in advancing the fifteen new build projects announced on 24 June 2014.
(AQW 42456/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I was pleased to announce 15 new build projects on 24 June 2014 and a further project announced on 3 July 2014 to a total value of £170m. Most of these projects are at an early stage of development. A business case has been approved for one project and it is anticipated that a further 2 business cases may be approved by the end of this financial year. These projects are all progressing and initial meetings with stakeholders have taken place.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education what facility his Department has to enable schools to understand where they are in the waiting list to receive capital funding for new build projects, or the schools enhancement programme.
(AQW 42458/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Currently I am not holding a waiting list of New Build capital projects or Schools Enhancement Programme projects.

Also, with the constrained capital budget position I currently have no plans for a further capital announcement. The timing of any future announcement will be dependent on the capital budget available to Education in the next budget cycle (April 2016 onwards).

In relation to Major Works and Schools Enhancement Programme projects that are currently underway, funding for the capital works will be allocated on completion and approval of all design stages, in line with the available capital budget at that time.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 41968/11-15, whether he will take action to increase the number of Special Educational Needs inspections in these instances, on the grounds that seven years between inspections is too long and may not even be enough to ensure the requirements of a special needs pupil are being met adequately in the duration of their time at the school in question, even if they remain in the same school for the minimum five years.
(AQW 42501/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: As part of the ETI's proportionate risk-based approach towards inspection, any school can and may be inspected sooner than seven years should the need arise. Also, schools that are in the follow-up inspection process as a result of having an inspection with an outcome of satisfactory or below will automatically have a follow-up inspection within 18 to 24 months.

In addition to the formal inspection activity, all post-primary schools receive routine inspection visits by their district inspector.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 40927/11-15, what discussions his departmental officials have had with looked after children throughout the development of the policy.
(AQW 42502/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I had the pleasure of meeting with a group of young people in care last year. They shared with me their experiences of education, some good, some not so good. They also gave me some ideas on how things could be improved and what was important to them.

The looked after children policy, which my officials are currently developing, will encompass the good work that has already been undertaken and provide the platform to consider the suggestions and ideas given to me during that meeting.

My officials have been listening to the voice of young people through looked after children teams in the Education and Library Boards (ELBs) and the Health and Social Care Trusts (HSCTs) and through engagement with Fostering Network and VOYPIC. They plan to engage directly again with looked after children and young people as the policy is developed.

My officials are also revising the guidance on Personal Education Plans along with the DHSSPS, the Health and Social Care Trusts (HSCTs) and ELBs. Young people in care have assisted with redesigning their contribution to the Personal Education Plan to make it more user friendly and meaningful for them.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 41103/11-15, to detail when the 2014/15 Entitlement Framework Audit data will be available.
(AQW 42503/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am advised that validated data from the 2014/15 Entitlement Framework Audit will shortly be provided to the Department. Upon receipt of this officials have a process to follow in order to analyse the data and they expect to have this completed by the end of March 2015.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education what assessment has been made of the Special Educational Needs Early Years Capacity Building Programme in the South Eastern Education and Library Board.
(AQW 42524/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The South Eastern Education and Library Board (SEELB) Early Years pilot is part of a wider pilot across all ELBs, which finished in pre-school settings at the end of September 2014. This was followed by an evaluation phase, which ended in December 2014.

An interim report from the Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI) found that some progress had been made by the pilot teams; a final report is expected shortly. As an interim measure, pending the final ETI evaluation, arrangements have been put in place until 31 March 2015 across all ELBs to enable some of the earlier momentum to continue.

In advance of the Early Years interim arrangements ending in March, the Department in conjunction with the ELBs, is considering the future shape of SEN early years provision subject to resources being available.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Education how many (i) full time; and (ii) part time teaching positions were available in each of the last three years.
(AQW 42527/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Each year the Department commissions the Teacher Vacancy Return, which asks schools how many vacancies that existed at the end of the previous academic year and by the first Monday in November are either filled or unfilled. These are also broken down by full-time/part-time and permanent/temporary.

The table below details the number of full-time teaching vacancies in each of the last three years.

Table 1: Full-time teaching vacancies; 2012/13-2014/15

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education when the construction will begin of new premises for the next primary and post-primary schools in the controlled sector in East Londonderry.
(AQW 42547/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There are currently no new school builds planned in the controlled sector for East Derry, however, in July 2014 I announced the first of three projects to be taken forward under the Shared Education Campuses Programme, one of them being Limavady. This project will provide two shared facilities, a shared sixth form centre on the St Mary's High School site and a shared Science, Technology, Engineering and Maths (STEM) centre on the Limavady HS site. Work is currently underway on the Feasibility Study/Business Case for the scheme and exact costs and timescale for commencement of the builds will be determined once this has been finalised.

With the constrained capital budget position I currently have no plans for a further capital announcement. The timing of any future announcement will be dependent on the capital budget available to Education in the next budget cycle (April 2016 onwards).

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how much funding has been provided to Rathgill Community Association for delivering Sure Start Programmes.
(AQW 42606/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Rathgill Community Association does not deliver Sure Start programmes. Bangor Sure Start rents premises from the Association from which they deliver stay and play programmes. Bangor Sure Start has been delivering services since September 2014. Prior to this date, a similar rental arrangement was in place between the Association and Ards Sure Start.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Education how many children benefited from the Delivering Social Change Improving Literacy and Numeracy Signature Programme.
(AQW 42650/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Delivering Social Change Improving Literacy and Numeracy Signature Programme is now in its second year providing support to Key Stage Two primary school pupils and post-primary pupils taking GCSE English and maths.

In the 2013/14 academic year pupils received support as follows:

In the primary sector -

- 1561 pupils received support for literacy;
- 1402 pupils received support for numeracy;
- 79 pupils received support for Irish; and

In the post-primary sector -

- 3023 pupils received support for English;
- 3635 pupils received support for Maths;

The number of pupils receiving support this academic year is not yet available but it is estimated that a similar number of pupils are being supported.

Mr Anderson asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of primary school teachers, broken down by gender.
(AQW 42707/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The number of primary school teachers broken down by gender is published annually as part of the Teacher Workforce Statistical Bulletin and the most recent bulletin, published June 2014, is available at the below link. The information requested is contained within Table 6. http://www.deni.gov.uk/workforce_stats_press_release_for_web_revised.pdf

Department for Employment and Learning

Mr McCausland asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many Protestant staff are employed at St Mary's University College, Belfast.
(AQW 41776/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): My Department does not collate information regarding the religious affiliation of staff at higher education institutions.

However, my official contacted St. Mary's University College and it has confirmed that as of 6 February 2015 the College employs 12 members of staff from the Protestant background.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what consideration he has given to the addition of the Queen's University Belfast and Ulster University to the CAO system as well as the UCAS system to increase the number of students from across the border attending these two universities.
(AQW 41813/11-15)

Dr Farry: Universities are responsible for their own policies and procedures including those concerned with admissions criteria and student application services.

As members of UCAS, Queen's University Belfast and Ulster University have advised that they are required to fully comply with the UCAS terms and conditions of service as set out below:

- A provider that is a member or customer of UCAS must recruit to all its full-time and sandwich first degrees through UCAS.
- Anyone, from the UK, rest of EU or rest of the world applying to a provider that is a member of UCAS for any of its full-time first degree and other full-time undergraduate level courses, including those applying for admission with credit, must apply through UCAS.

The Universities cannot, therefore, use both systems.

However, both Queen's and Ulster University are taking a number of actions to increase the number of students from across the border. Ulster University, as part of its marketing programme promotes its activities in both Northern Ireland and in the Republic of Ireland attending a range of recruitment events in the Republic of Ireland, for example, 'Higher Options' and 'GradIreland'. Talks at schools are also provided, especially those in the border counties.

Queen's University Belfast also engages in extensive student recruitment activities including: attendance at the 'RDS Higher Options' event in September 2014; engagement with border county and Dublin schools, domestic recruitment staff visits to schools; and attendance at careers events. Queen's has also issued invitations to border county schools to attend the Careers Teachers' Event in March 2015.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on his consideration on dealing with zero hour contracts; and when he will bring forward legislative proposals.
(AQW 41863/11-15)

Dr Farry: I am currently consulting with Executive colleagues on the findings of the public consultation on zero hours contracts and a range of specific legislative proposals that I wish to bring within the scope of the Department's Employment Bill. The Employment Bill is being drafted for potential introduction to the Assembly before the end of June 2015.

My officials briefed the Employment and Learning Committee on 18th February 2015 as to how I intend to proceed regarding zero hours contracts in the light of the public consultation responses and quantitative and qualitative research evidence.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the cost of the Steps 2 Success programme, broken down by region.
(AQW 41926/11-15)

Dr Farry:

1 The Steps 2 Success contract values for the initial contract period of four years are forecast by the Department to be as follows:

   - Contract Lot One: £29,001,851
   - Contract Lot Two: £27,362,035
   - Contract Lot Three: £25,437,249

   The above figures are based on a forecast number of participants expected to join the programme and expected contractor performance over the initial contract period of four years. Actual programme expenditure will be dependent on programme performance by each of the contractors and the actual number of participants who join the programme.

2 The Department does not hold this information in the format requested.

3 The Department does not hold this information in the format requested.

4 The Department does not hold this information in the format requested.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the cost of the Steps 2 Success programme in each of the centres in Contract Area 1.
(AQW 41929/11-15)

Dr Farry:

1 The Steps 2 Success contract values for the initial contract period of four years are forecast by the Department to be as follows:

- Contract Lot One: £29,001,851
- Contract Lot Two: £27,362,035
- Contract Lot Three: £25,437,249

The above figures are based on a forecast number of participants expected to join the programme and expected contractor performance over the initial contract period of four years. Actual programme expenditure will be dependent on programme performance by each of the contractors and the actual number of participants who join the programme.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the cost of the Steps 2 Success programme in each of the centres in Contract Area 2.
(AQW 41931/11-15)

Dr Farry:

- Contract Lot One: £29,001,851
- Contract Lot Two: £27,362,035
- Contract Lot Three: £25,437,249

The above figures are based on a forecast number of participants expected to join the programme and expected contractor performance over the initial contract period of four years. Mr McMullan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the departmental and arm's-length body buildings that are equipped with defibrillators; and how many staff in each of these buildings are trained in (i) the use of defibrillators; and (ii) C.P.R.
(AQW 41935/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department for Employment and Learning does not have any departmental buildings equipped with defibrillators or any staff trained in the use of defibrillators. There are 101 departmental staff trained in CPR.

The Labour Relations Agency (LRA), 2-16 Gordon Street, Belfast, and the Ulster Supported Employment Limited (USEL), Cambrai Street, Belfast, have advised they have one defibrillator in each building. LRA has eight staff trained in the use of the defibrillator and USEL has two.

LRA has four staff trained in CPR; USEL has three and the Construction Industry Training Board (CITB), Nutts Corner Training Centre, 17 Dundrod Road, Crumlin, has three.

The department does not hold information on the number of defibrillators or staff trained in their use for the two universities, university colleges and further education colleges. You may wish to contact them directly.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to list the consultancy firms that provided financial services to his Department in each of the last five years; and the amount paid to each firm for these services.
(AQW 41940/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department and its Non-Departmental Public Bodies have spent a total of £204,805 on financial services provided by consultancy firms (rounded to the nearest pound) in the last five years to 31 December 2014. The breakdown per supplier is attached at Annex A.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 40429/11-15, (i) how many applications were received to the previous round of funding; and how many of the 135 applications were succesful; and (iii) to list the groups that were successful in reaching Stage 2 of the application process.
(AQW 41967/11-15)

Dr Farry:

(i) Under the last call for applications to the ESF Programme 2007-2013, 112 applications were received.

(ii) The assessment process for the call for applications to the new ESF Programme 2014-2020 is currently ongoing and therefore I am unable to confirm the number of successful applications until the assessment process is complete.

(iii) Under the Data Protection Act 1998 my Department would not be in a position to publish the list of groups that were successful in reaching Phase 2 of the application assessment process.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning why former employees of City Link, Nuts Corner are facing delays in receiving basic payments from the National Insurance Fund administered by the Redundancy Payments Service in the Insolvency Service.
(AQW 41976/11-15)

Dr Farry: The member's assertion that former City Link employees face delays in receiving basic redundancy payments is incorrect. My Redundancy Payments Service's published commitment is to have all redundancy applications processed within 6-8 weeks from the date of receipt. My Department received 18 applications from former NI employees of City Link, 15 of which were received between 15th & 26th January 2015. My Department started making payments directly into the bank accounts of eligible applicants w/c 16 February 2015, well within our published customer service level commitment.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many groups' application to the current round of the European Social Fund have been rejected at Stage one for failure to include management accounts.
(AQW 42010/11-15)

Dr Farry: 43 organisations applying to the European Social Fund, for whatever reason, did not submit their most recent management accounts. Those affected by the decision to reject their applications on this basis believe that failure to produce the requested information was due to a lack of clarity in the guidance notes concerning what constitutes management accounts.

Taking account of representations on this issue I have now decided to allow those organisations which did not submit their most recent management accounts with their applications to do so at this stage.

Applicants affected have now been contacted by the Department and notified of the process which they now need to follow.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether he has launched an investigation into tendering process for applications to the European Social Fund.
(AQW 42011/11-15)

Dr Farry: Along with officials in my Department I have reviewed the first phase of the European Social Fund assessment process in relation to the submission of management accounts.

A significant proportion of organisations applying to the European Social Fund, for whatever reason, did not submit their most recent management accounts. Those affected by the decision to reject their applications on this basis believe that failure to produce the requested information was due to a lack of clarity in the guidance notes concerning what constitutes management accounts.

Taking account of representations on this issue I have now decided to allow those organisations which did not submit their most recent management accounts with their applications to do so at this stage.

Applicants affected have now been contacted by the Department and notified of the process which they now need to follow.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many organisations have appealed the decision to eliminate them from the latest European Social Fund application process.
(AQW 42012/11-15)

Dr Farry: Further to my response to AQW 42011, and as the assessment process is ongoing, it is not possible to confirm the exact number of appeals received on the basis of decisions to eliminate organisations from the European Social Fund application process.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how community voluntary sector organisations, which do not keep management accounts, can apply to the European Social Fund.
(AQW 42013/11-15)

Dr Farry: Eligible community and voluntary sector applicants to the European Social Fund which are sufficiently financially robust to be supported should be able to provide management accounts. My Department's ESF Managing Authority can provide advice and guidance to any applicant who is unsure as to what should be contained in their management accounts.

For the purpose of the financial capability assessment to be undertaken as part of the European Social Fund application process, the most recent management accounts should consist of a balance sheet and a year to date income and expenditure statement.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many applications to the European Social Fund were received either in full, or in part, after the deadline for submissions.
(AQW 42036/11-15)

Dr Farry: There were 2 applications to the European Social Fund received after the closing date of noon on the 9th January 2015.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the appeals process for European Social Fund applications.
(AQW 42046/11-15)

Dr Farry: Any applicant to the European Social Fund receiving a letter of rejection is afforded the right of appeal which will require the applicant to demonstrate that; the outcome was a decision no reasonable person would make on the basis of the information provided in the application, and/or there was a failure in adherence to procedures or systems.

The Department allows applicants five working days for appealing any application rejection decision.

Once a written appeal is received this is reviewed by an independent appeals panel.

The applicant is then informed of the appeals panel decision.

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what is the formal process and timeline for projects entering the appeals process for the present funding round of the European Social Fund programme.
(AQW 42071/11-15)

Dr Farry: Any applicant receiving a letter of rejection is afforded the right of appeal which requires the applicant to demonstrate that: the outcome was a decision no reasonable person would make on the basis of the information provided in the application; and/or there was a failure in adherence to procedures or systems.

The Department allows applicants five working days for appealing any application rejection decision.

Once a written appeal is received, this will be reviewed by an independent appeals panel.

A significant number of appeals were received from organisations which had not submitted their most recent management accounts with their applications. In view of the large number of such organisations and the possibility that the guidance for applicants was not sufficiently clear on this point, I have now given these organisations a further opportunity to submit these documents. This will impact on the overall timescale for the appeals process, but I would expect it to be concluded by mid-March.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister for Employment and Learning when the appeal process into applications which failed at stage one of the European Social Fund will conclude.
(AQW 42120/11-15)

Dr Farry: As a result of addressing the issue of management accounts for applicants to the European Social Fund Programme the timeframe for the completion of appeals to the European Social Fund has had to be revised. It is anticipated that the appeals process for Phase I of the assessment process will now be concluded by 16 March 2015.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether he will ensure a co-ordinated approach by the Regional Colleges in the analysis of the success of jobs fairs that they host or help to organise, so best practice is replicated across the sector.
(AQW 42131/11-15)

Dr Farry: Job Fairs that are hosted by my Department is subject to a full evaluation process following the event. Information is analysed to assess the success of the event and comments received from Employers and Jobseekers are used to improve future events.

This area of work is standard practice for all of my Job Fairs and is carried out by staff from the Employment Service Division of my Department.

Regional Colleges do not play any role in the hosting, organising and analysis of any of my Department's Job Fairs.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of quangos linked to his Department on (i) 8 May 2007; and (ii) 11 February 2015; and how many people served on the quangos on these respective dates.
(AQW 42185/11-15)

Dr Farry: There are currently 15 bodies classified as NDPBs of the Department for Employment and Learning. On 8 May 2007, there were eight. The increase is accounted for by the change in status of the six colleges of Further Education and the University Colleges, plus the creation of one additional advisory post. This has been offset by the formal cessation of a statutory employment training organisation, and the abolition of a non-executive advisory body.

The total number serving on these NDPBs, not including support staff, was 301 on 8 May 2007, and 402 on 11 February 2015. You will wish to note that all but one of the 108 Members and judiciary who serve on the Fair Employment Tribunal also serve on industrial tribunals and are therefore double-counted. Further information may be found in the 'Public Bodies &

Public Appointments Annual Reports' published by OFMDFM and available from the Assembly Library.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what was the operating cost of the Ministerial car in each of the last three financial years.
(AQW 42218/11-15)

Dr Farry: The operating cost of the Ministerial car in the last three financial years was as follows:

- 2012-13: £4,419
- 2013-14: £4,017
- 2014-15 (to 31 January 2015): £3,741

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many external students St Mary's Teacher Training College has accepted solely to complete the Catholic Certificate of Religious Education, in each of the last five years; and the facility from which each student transferred to complete the qualification.
(AQW 42237/11-15)

Dr Farry: No external students have requested to be admitted to St Mary's University College in the last five years solely for the purpose of completing a programme leading to the award of the Certificate of Religious Education.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the pilot Welding Academy which he launched in partnership with Harland and Wolff and Belfast Metropolitan College.
(AQW 42258/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department worked with Harland and Wolff and local Further Education colleges to set up a Welding Academy, beginning in September 2014, as a first step to upskill local unemployed welders to the Harland and Wolff specification.

The Welding Academy, facilitated by Belfast Metropolitan College and Northern Regional College, had an intake of eighteen people.

Of the eighteen Welding Academy trainees who successfully completed training, six are now employed by Harland and Wolff, with five of these on probationary contracts with a view to extending, if satisfactory.

A further cohort of five trainees is to commence a two week placement from Monday 23 February, with a view to contracted employment thereafter.

This is an important first step in addressing the welding skills need identified by the engineering sector and its success will help determine further initiatives. The skills and certification these individuals have gained through the Welding Academy will allow the local skills base to grow with highly skilled welders that can support not only Harland and Wolff, but other specialist manufacturers.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether the provisions for employees who are dismissed on the insolvency of their employer, contained in the Employment Rights Act 1996, apply fully in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 42305/11-15)

Dr Farry: The provisions for employees dismissed on the insolvency of their employer, as set out in the Employment Rights Act 1996, are replicated in Northern Ireland by the Employment Rights (Northern Ireland) Order 1996.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether Northern Ireland residents have the same employment and redundancy rights in law as other UK citizens, in terms of protection in cases where their employers become insolvent and enter administration.
(AQW 42306/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Employment Rights (Northern Ireland) Order 1996 sets out the procedure for handling redundancies (consultation, protective award, compliant to Tribunal, notification): Insolvency of employers (for example, employee's rights). Employers proposing to dismiss between 20 and 99 employees should begin consultation at least 30 days before the redundancy notices take effect. Where 100 or more employees are concerned, consultation must begin at least 90 days before the redundancy notices take effect. If employers fail to carry out collective redundancy consultation, affected employees may claim a protective award from an industrial tribunal

The Employment Rights Act 1996 sets out the procedures applicable to the UK. The minimum consultation periods provided are 30 day minimum period for redundancies affecting between 20 and 99 employees and 45 day minimum period for redundancies of 100 or more.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether he will promote other courses of potential economic benefit to fill spaces left by the withdrawal of full-time and part-time undergraduate courses from the Ulster University prospectus.
(AQW 42343/11-15)

Dr Farry: While my Department sets the strategic direction for the higher education sector, each university is responsible for its own course provision and curriculum.

Ulster University has advised that the decision to withdraw a number of full-time and part-time courses in 2015/16 is part of the normal annual cycle. In making the decision the University has taken account of a number of factors including the needs of the economy, student demand and my Department's priorities, in addition to potential budget constraints.

I have also received assurance from the University that it has followed a request from my Department to protect STEM numbers, so where a STEM related course may close, the numbers will increase in other relevant STEM courses.

The University has advised that the course closures do not equate to subject closures and that a decision on final student numbers has not yet been made. This decision will be made when the university has had the opportunity to consider the final budget allocation.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many complaints have been received, in each of the last five years, in the Coleraine Campus of the Ulster University regarding actions or decisions taken by senior management personnel; and how many of these are unresolved two years after the initial complaint.
(AQW 42346/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department does not hold the information you have requested. The University is responsible for its own policies and procedures on complaints and it may collate information on the number of complaints received. You may wish, therefore, to contact Ulster University directly on this matter.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning, pursuant to AQW 40118/11-15, for further details on the review of higher education funding, including (i) the commencement and completion dates; (ii) the areas to be reviewed; and (iii) the individuals or groups who will carry out the review.
(AQW 42347/11-15)

Dr Farry: The higher education funding review commenced in September 2013 and was being taken forward internally by my Department. The review focussed on five main policy areas: the higher education teaching funding model; the Maximum Student Number (MaSN) mechanism; alternative providers of higher education; student finance; and postgraduate awards. Prior to the budget negotiations, my officials had prepared a consultation document with detailed policy proposals to be launched towards the end of last year, with any policy decisions resulting from the consultation process to be announced in June 2015.

However, in December 2014 it was agreed that it would not be appropriate to undertake a consultation of the funding review amidst uncertainties about my Department's future budgets, particularly given the extent of the cuts which had been proposed within the draft budget for the 15-16 financial year. The consultation was therefore put on hold until the outcomes of the budget settlement for 15-16 became clearer.

The higher education sector, as result of the budget settlement, is facing a one-year budget reduction of 8.4%, and this situation is unlikely to improve beyond 15-16. This equates to a reduction of £16.1million in the 15-16 financial year. This has led to serious questions over the future financial sustainability of the higher education sector in Northern Ireland, which I do not believe can be addressed through the limited scope of the higher education funding review.

Resultantly, I have identified the need to have a wider discussion with all stakeholders about how Northern Ireland can support a financially sustainable and internationally competitive higher education sector. The work that had been undertaken in regard to the higher education funding review will be crucial in informing and facilitating this wider discussion.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning (i) to detail (a) the Maximum Student Numbers (MaSN); (b) the number of full time students, for each of the higher education institution in each of the last three years; (ii) when the review of MaSN will commence; and (iii) who will carry out the review.
(AQW 42348/11-15)

Dr Farry: MaSN Allocations

Tabled below are the MaSN allocations for Queen's University Belfast (QUB) and the Ulster University (UU) over the last five years. The MaSN cap applies to Northern Ireland and non-UK EU domiciled full-time undergraduate enrolments only. The university colleges are not subject to the same MaSN controls as the universities. Instead they receive student number allocations for both initial teacher education (ITE) student places and non-ITE student places; the former are set by the Department of Education.

Table 1: MaSN allocations 2010/11 to 2014/15

Year	QUB	UU	Total
2010/11	11,311	12,668	23,979
2011/12	11,284	12,646	23,930
2012/13	11,259	12,676	23,935
2013/14	11,388	12,870	24,258
2014/15	11,510	13,098	24,608

Full-time Enrolments

Tabled below are the full-time enrolments at each Northern Ireland higher education institution over the last three years for which data is currently available. Over and above those enrolments subject to MaSN controls, total full-time enrolments also comprise postgraduate students and those domiciled elsewhere in the UK and outside of the EU.

Table 2: Full-time enrolments 2010/11 to 2012/13[1]

	QUB	UU	Stranmillis	St Mary's	Total
2011/12	16,600	18,565	935	885	36,985
2012/13	16,655	18,405	900	880	36,845
2013/14	17,020	18,650	970	865	37,505

1. Full-time enrolment figures for 2013/14 and 2014/15 are not yet available. To prevent the identification if individuals, figures are rounded to the nearest 5, with 0, 1, and 2 rounded to 0. Due to rounding, the sum of numbers in each row may not match the total shown.

The Review of the MaSN

The review of the MaSN commenced in September 2013 as a constituent part of my Department's review of higher education funding, and it was undertaken internally by my Department. Prior to the budget negotiations, a review had been carried out and a consultation document with detailed policy proposals had been prepared. It was my intention to launch a consultation period towards the end of last year and announce any policy decisions resulting from that process in June of this year.

However, due to my Department's challenging budgetary position it is now my intention to facilitate a much wider discussion about the sustainability of our higher education funding system, which will commence in the coming months. This discussion will further inform the review of the MaSN mechanism.

Student Mobility

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail his Department's efforts, working with higher education institutions and the Irish government, to reduce obstacles to student mobility between north and south and to implement the recommendations of the IBEC-CBI Joint Business Council report on undergraduate mobility.
(AQW 42351/11-15)

Dr Farry: I have made a commitment in my Department's higher education strategy, to facilitate cross-border co-operation and student mobility. A project group which includes representation from the Irish Higher Education Authority and the Institutes of Technology has been established to take this forward.

The project team has considered the relevant recommendations (1, 4, 6 and 9) of the IBEC-CBI report on undergraduate mobility and progress has been made in the following areas:

- in relation to improving information (recommendation 1), careers teachers and my Department's careers advisers have received additional training on the higher education opportunities available in the Republic of Ireland and on the Central Applications Office processes. Extensive information, to support our local students in their higher education decisions and also to act as a gateway for other students, including from the Republic of Ireland, who may be interested in studying in Northern Ireland, is now available through the NIDirect portal;
- the recommendation in relation to student funding (recommendation 4) has been achieved as Northern Ireland students studying in the South now have access to funding support;
- in relation to A Level and Leaving Certificate grades (recommendation 6), the project group has received updates from the Department of Education that discussions between CCEA and Irish Universities Association are still ongoing. However the group has noted the progress made by individual institutions e.g. Trinity College Dublin and Dublin City University; and
- in relation to the impact of future demographics on cross border student flows (recommendation 9), my officials have been working with officials in the Department for Education and Skills to research and analyse the current position in order to inform future policy development. A joint report is being finalised and will form the basis for the next project team meeting.

Last year I met with Minister for Education and Skills, Ruairi Quinn, and later his successor, Jan O'Sullivan, to discuss a number of areas where there could be greater cross border collaboration including the issue of student mobility. I will continue to meet with Minister O'Sullivan in the future to discuss progress on these issues and my officials will continue to work closely with their counterparts in the South on these and other cross border issues.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) when Industrial Tribunals started to digitally record its substantive hearings; and (ii) why this practice began.
(AQW 42459/11-15)

Dr Farry: Industrial Tribunals started to record substantive hearings in November 2011 as a pilot scheme to establish whether the digital recording system was fit for purpose.

Following the conclusion of the pilot scheme, on 7 May 2012, the President of the Tribunals issued a Practice Direction which outlined when and how a transcript of such recordings might be provided to claimants.

The discretionary power to issue practice directions is conferred upon the President by industrial tribunal procedure regulations. The issuing of such directions is entirely a matter for the President.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) whether all substantive Industrial Tribunal hearings are digitally recorded; and (ii) the criteria applied in determining whether or not to digitally record a hearing.
(AQW 42460/11-15)

Dr Farry: Not all substantive industrial tribunal hearings are digitally recorded.

The decision as to whether to make a digital recording of a hearing lies within the discretion of the chairman of the tribunal hearing the case. Industrial tribunal procedure regulations do not prescribe any particular requirements in relation to this issue; rather, they confer general case management powers, giving chairmen wide discretion to proceed as they consider appropriate in relation to each case before them.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) the number of litigant requests for digital recordings of Industrial Tribunal hearings since practice directions were issued on 7 May 2012; and (ii) the number of digital recordings subsequently issued to litigants.
(AQW 42461/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Office of Industrial Tribunals and the Fair Employment Tribunal does not maintain a record of litigant requests for digital recordings or a record of the number of digital recordings subsequently issued to litigants involved in industrial tribunal hearings.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the training programmes available for unemployed people between the ages of 18 and 64 years.
(AQW 42465/11-15)

Dr Farry: This programme is open to those who have attained the minimum school leaving age, are either entering or already in employment and contracted to work a minimum of 21 hours per week. Apprentices follow a national training framework which leads to attainment of a competence-based and knowledge-based qualification at Level 2 or 3 and Essential Skills. The frameworks are designed by Sector Skills Councils and Industry Representative Bodies to meet the need of each particular sector.

Off- the- job training is 100% funded, by the Department, for 18-24 year olds in all sectors and 50% funded for apprentices aged 25+ in defined economically important sectors.

Training for Success (TfS) 2013

The Department provides a guarantee of a training place to those who are unemployed and in the 16 & 17 year old age group, and there is extended eligibility criteria in TfS for those aged under 22 with a disability; and under 24 for those young people who qualify under the Children (Leaving Care) Act (NI) (2002).

The programme provides training to give young people the tools and skills they need to secure employment. The training offers participants the opportunity to gain relevant work experience and qualifications as well as the personal and behavioural skills required to progress into work.

Steps 2 Success

The Department's new employment programme, Steps 2 Success (S2S) commenced on 20th October 2014. Its primary purpose is the delivery of a flexible personalised service tailored to meet individual need which will help people move into and remain in employment. Training within the programme is matched to individual job goals. S2S is available to all eligible jobseekers irrespective of their employability need or age.

Clients who are in receipt of Jobseeker's Allowance (JSA) and aged between 18 and 24 will be mandated onto S2S after 9 months on benefit and those aged 25+ and on JSA for 12 months will be mandated onto the programme after 12 months on benefit. Early entry for all other JSA claimants, clients on Employment Support Allowance (Work Related Activity Group) (ESA (WRAG)) and existing ESA clients is available with the agreement of their Employment Service Adviser. Industrial Tribunal

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether there is provision for waiver of Industrial Tribunal fees for litigants of limited financial means.
(AQW 42496/11-15)

Dr Farry: Whereas fees have been introduced to access and proceed through Employment Tribunals in Great Britain, together with an associated remittance scheme, no fees are payable for the use of industrial tribunals or the Fair Employment Tribunal in Northern Ireland.

Initial engagement with stakeholders as part of my Department's employment law review led me to conclude that it would not be appropriate to introduce tribunal fees here at this time.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how many students have qualified as (i) primary; (ii) post-primary teachers, in each of the last three years.
(AQW 42533/11-15)

Dr Farry: The number of Northern Ireland domiciled students that have gained a teaching qualification from a Northern Ireland Higher Education Institution in the preceding three academic years is detailed below.

- 2011/12 (i) Primary 220 (ii) Post-primary 340
- 2012/13 (i) Primary 235 (ii) Post-primary 300
- 2013/14 (i) Primary 225 (ii) Post-primary 295

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what public consultation or equality impact assessments were completed prior to the decision to end support for the Learner Access and Engagement Programme.
(AQW 42550/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department has consulted on the overall draft Departmental Budget 2015-16, including proposed cuts to further education funding. Equality screening was undertaken in support of the decision to close the Programme. The conclusions from the equality screening were that there were no impacts on section 75 groups and that an equality impact assessment was not required.

The Learner Access and Engagement (LAE) programme was initially introduced in 2008 as a pilot programme to engage with and encourage those most hard to reach and to provide learner support and subsequently mainstreamed following an evaluation in 2012. The last full year of the pilot programme recorded a total of 3,359 enrolments. However, since mainstreaming, enrolment figures have been steadily declining, with 2013/14 activity reflecting a total of 1,698 enrolments, against a target of 4,500. Third party providers have not been as successful in attracting and retaining learners on the programme.

One of the significant impacts of the programme has been that further education colleges themselves, outside of LAE and within mainstream provision, have since built the capacity, awareness and expertise in targeting and engaging those most hard to reach into further education provision and increasing retention and delivering successful outcomes. There is evidence to support that the sector is engaging as many, if not more, students from the lower quintiles and in addition the sector's retention rates on mainstream Essential Skills programmes for example, have been consistently higher than those being achieved by third party providers on LAE. Taking account of these issues and the continued decrease in enrolment numbers on the LAE programme, the Department took the decision to discontinue the Programme with effect from 31 March 2015. Officials are working with colleges and providers to ensure all those currently enrolled can complete their course of study and gain their qualifications.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the childcare provision in each regional college, including the number of places and the cost to students of a place.
(AQW 42601/11-15)

Dr Farry: Two of the six regional further education (FE) colleges have childcare facilities, the details are provided below:

FE College	Number of Places	Cost to Students
South West College has independent crèche facilities in the Dungannon and Omagh campuses.	23 places in Omagh and 26 places in Dungannon .	£138 per week or £6 per hour.
Belfast Metropolitan College has its own day care centre at the Castlereagh Campus.	22 full-time places. The college currently has 40 children registered at the centre due to differing student timetables.	£130 per week (full-time 5 days per week). £65 per week (part-time up to 2 and a half days per week).

My Department provides financial assistance towards childcare costs to eligible full and part-time students enrolled in an FE college with dependent children in registered or approved childcare through the FE Awards, college Hardship Funds and the Care to Learn (NI) Scheme. The FE Awards and college Hardship funds are means tested and how much a student receives depends on their household income. The maximum amount paid to students from these funds is detailed below:

- FE Awards – full-time students aged 19 and over can receive up to maximum of £130 per week for one child and up to £220 a week for two or more children. Part-time students aged 19 and over can receive up to a maximum of £65 per week for one child and up to £110 a week for 2 or more children.
- Hardship Fund - full-time students aged 18 and over can receive up to maximum of £110 per week for one child and up to £188 a week for two or more children. Part- time students aged 18 and over can receive up to a maximum of £56 per week for one child and up to £95 a week for 2 or more children.
- Care to Learn (NI) Scheme – applies to full and part-time students aged 16–19. The maximum assistance available is up to £165 per week for each child, with payment based on actual costs and where reductions are granted for more than one child.

Those students participating in higher education in further education colleges can access two support schemes.

- The Childcare Grant allows students to apply for 85% of the actual childcare costs during term times and holidays. The grant is dependent on household income and a student can receive up to £148.75 a week for one child or up to £255 a week for more than one child.
- The Parents' Learning Allowance is up to £1,538 a year and is intended to help with course-related costs if a student has dependent children. The amount paid is based on the income of the student, their partner and any dependents.

Students availing of crèche facilities in colleges are eligible to apply for funding support under the schemes identified above.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether Queen's University, Belfast and Ulster University accept Essential Skills qualifications as acceptable alternatives to GCSEs.
(AQW 42602/11-15)

Dr Farry: Queen's University, Belfast accepts Level 2 Essential Skills in Communication in lieu of a grade C in GCSE English Language. However, applicants whose first language is not English are required to pass an approved English Language test. Level 2 Essential Skills in Communication does not satisfy this requirement.

Whether Level 2 Essential Skills in Application of Number is a suitable alternative to GCSE Mathematics Grade C is decided by Queens's University on a case by case basis. An applicant's overall academic profile and any additional qualifications in numerically related subjects are also taken into account. However, for Social Work, Nursing and Midwifery courses Essential Skills in Application of Number will not be accepted. Queens has advised that this will be reviewed in the event of changes to the specifications or content of either the GCSE or Essential Skills qualification.

Essential Skills in Communication at level 2 or above and Essential Skills in Application of Number at level 2 or above satisfy Ulster University's general entry requirement for English and Mathematics respectively. Ulster University has advised that whilst these are general entry requirements a higher level of achievement (in English and/or Mathematics) is required for some courses.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the number of employment tribunal cases involving (i) teachers; and (ii) non-teaching members of school staff where the decision taken by the school Board of Governors has been rejected following input from a third party organisation; and to provide the name of third party organisations who would provide input into an employment tribunal.
(AQW 42632/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Office of Industrial Tribunals and the Fair Employment Tribunal does not collate information by occupation type or employer type.

Furthermore, the requested information could not be ascertained from a general inspection of claim forms received by the Office.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of staff employed by InterTradeIreland, broken down by religion.
(AQW 41885/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): As at 9 February 2015 the number of staff employed by InterTradeIreland broken down by religion is

- Protestants - 7
- Roman Catholics - 31
- Non- determined - 1

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what support her Department can provide to local newspapers, given their importance to the local community.
(AQW 41953/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI's role is to grow the local economy by helping new and existing businesses to compete internationally, and by attracting new investment to Northern Ireland.

As local newspapers are existing businesses focussed on their local communities, and not directly exporting outside of Northern Ireland, they are unlikely to be eligible for direct financial support from Invest NI.

However, all businesses can avail of a range of advisory assistance and free workshops from Invest NI on a number of business related topics including sales & marketing, design and finance. Further information, advice and tools for businesses are also available and can be accessed via the nibusinessinfo website.

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 40788/11-15, whether the £1.2million cost of the investigation into the NI Events Company included the £166,084 spend by the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure on audits, reviews of financial transactions and contracts.
(AQW 42041/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The £1.2 million cost of the company inspection of the Northern Ireland Events Company does not include the £166,084 spend by the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure on audits, reviews of financial transactions and contracts.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the analysis undertaken to arrive at the aspiration to make tourism a £1billion industry in Northern Ireland by 2020.
(AQW 42047/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The long term aim of achieving visitor expenditure of £1 billion by 2020 came out of the extensive consultation on tourism undertaken in 2010. The intention was to grow income from visitors faster than visitor numbers, and a challenging target was set to double the income Northern Ireland earns from tourism in the decade to 2020.

The visitor expenditure target was set following independent analysis of past tourism performance back to 2001 and modelling of growth projections for visitor numbers from key target markets and increases in average spend per visitor during the period from 2010 to 2020. The aim was to increase average spend per visitor across all markets and to identify growth markets and target these for higher than average growth in visitor numbers.

Interim targets for tourism expenditure were set in Programme for Government (PfG 2011-15) to ensure our long term goals are achieved. All PfG targets on tourism have been achieved to date.

The latest full year Official Statistics on tourism are for 2013 and these figures show that the PfG milestone target on expenditure was met with visitor expenditure of £723 million against a target of £637 million.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether her Department will undertake an assessment of any new council tourism targets, to ensure that her Department meets her aspiration of making tourism a £1billion industry by 2020.
(AQW 42048/11-15)

Mrs Foster: In order to meet our overarching targets, tourism growth must be realised right across Northern Ireland and Tourism Northern Ireland has been engaging closely with the 11 new Councils to determine tourism development priorities in each of the new Local Authority areas.

This is in line with key recommendations from the Hunter Review which point to the need to strengthen relationships within the tourism sector and for Tourism Northern Ireland to develop new strategic partnerships with Councils. As a statutory partner Tourism Northern Ireland will support the new Councils in developing their Tourism Plans as part of their Community Planning role.

The Community Plans will identify the long term objectives and will be aligned to destination plans and development themes reflecting Northern Ireland strategic tourism priorities.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the performance of the small business loan fund.
(AQW 42068/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The NI Small Business Loan Fund has distributed more than £2.5 million across 124 loans. The fund has helped support companies from a very wide range of sectors including IT, food processing, construction, leisure, tourism and many others.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what consideration has been given to extending the gas network in the East Down area to Newcastle.
(AQW 42117/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Utility Regulator is considering the issues involved in providing natural gas to a number of towns in East Down.

Any potential extensions to the gas network must be assessed on grounds of economic viability, with the need for sufficient gas loads to justify the cost of providing new gas networks.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for a gender breakdown of (i) senior management; and (ii) junior management employed by InvestNI.
(AQW 42152/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Within Invest NI there are:

(i) 15 males and 6 females employed at senior management level (Grade 5 and above); and

(ii) 218 males and 186 females employed at junior management level (SO to Grade 6).

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what steps must be taken to facilitate the establishment of an enterprise zone in Derry.
(AQW 42165/11-15)

Mrs Foster: There are currently no plans to designate other Enterprise Zones in other areas of Northern Ireland.

The Enterprise Zone announced by the Chancellor in his Budget statement in March 2014 is a pilot project in the Coleraine area focusing specifically on Enhanced Capital Allowances.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment when the assessment of the pilot enterprise zone designated for Coleraine will be completed.
(AQW 42166/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department's role in establishing the pilot Enterprise Zone in Coleraine has been as a facilitator to ensure designation of the Enterprise Zone by HM Treasury once all negotiations have concluded between relevant stakeholders.

As those discussions have not concluded, the pilot Enterprise Zone has not yet been formally designated by Treasury. It is therefore too early to say when an assessment will be undertaken.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether she will take steps to extend the operations of URICA to Northern Ireland, to support small businesses with slow payment problems.
(AQW 42167/11-15)

Mrs Foster: URICA is an independent company which use an online supply chain platform that improves customer cash flow and provides early payment to suppliers. As such, neither I nor the British Business Bank would have any direct influence on their operations.

However the British Business Bank has indicated that URICA are seeking to develop their platform and welcome new introductions from suitable companies which may consider using this type of chain funding.

The Business Bank is raising awareness of all alternative sources of finance, including offerings such as URICA, by holding events such as the upcoming "The Future of Funding: Northern Ireland" event in Belfast on 26 February 2015.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 41056/11-15, whether InvestNI has a role in the evaluation or processing of tourism grant payments in the Rural Development Programme.
(AQW 42168/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI does not have a role in the evaluation or processing of tourism grant payments in the Rural Development Programme.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 41057/11-15, whether the fund will be on a match funding basis with individual councils.
(AQW 42169/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The development of a Tourism Growth Fund will be taken forward over the next year as part of the Hunter Review Action Plan.

The new Chairman and new Chief Executive of Tourism Northern Ireland, when appointed, and in collaboration with the new super councils, will develop the specifics of the Fund.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, pursuant to AQW 40905/11-15, to detail the Departmental infrastructural projects which have been put out to tender; and for an update on each project.
(AQW 42247/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Details of all Capital projects including infrastructure projects that my Department has put out to tender can be found on the Investment Strategy Northern Ireland website at www.isni.gov.uk.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the grant aid awarded by InvestNI to Firstsource for its Derry plant; and whether this grant aid was conditional on the plant operating for a period of time without a reduction in employee numbers.
(AQW 42293/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Invest NI has offered Firstsource Solutions Selective Financial Assistance of £8,259,200 since November 2006 to support the creation of 1,061 jobs specifically at its premises in Londonderry.

It is a condition of the offer that the company uses its best endeavours to maintain that employment.

The average employment is monitored over a 5 year control period, which currently extends until 31 May 2019. If the company fails to maintain average overall employment in line with the Letter of Offer then Invest NI would be in a position to initiate clawback of grant.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what actions are being taken to encourage competition and compel transparency in pricing in the domestic gas supply market.
(AQW 42304/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The natural gas market in Greater Belfast is fully open to gas supply competition. The gas market in the "10 Towns" licence area outside Belfast is already open to supply competition for larger energy users and will open fully for all consumers from April 2015.

Unlike the situation in Great Britain, prices of incumbent gas suppliers in Northern Ireland are subject to regulation. The Utility Regulator's spring 2015 reviews of Airtricity Gas Supply and firmus energy, the incumbent gas suppliers in Greater Belfast and the "10 Towns" respectively, are underway. These reviews scrutinise the constituent elements of retail gas tariffs, ensuring transparency, and providing assurance for consumers.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether there is any regulation that requires retailers, particularly large retailers, to provide seating for customers.
(AQW 42319/11-15)

Mrs Foster: DETI is not responsible for any regulation that requires retailers to provide seating for customers.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline any action taken by her Department to encourage cable companies to expand their services to provide greater consumer and business choice in broadband provision.
(AQW 42320/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I and my officials have met with representatives of cable companies to encourage network expansion and offer advice and information that would help achieve that outcome.

However, the telecommunications market is fully privatised and independently regulated and at present there is no Universal Service Obligation on providers to deliver broadband services. Network operators make investment decisions based on commercial considerations and, while my Department can make interventions to encourage such investment, this must be taken forward on a competitive and technology neutral basis.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether she will take the necessary steps to create an Enterprise Zone, around and including the current the JTI site in Ballymena.
(AQW 42406/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The decision to designate a particular area offering ECAs is ultimately for HM Treasury.

The Enterprise Zone announced by the Chancellor in his Budget statement in March 2014 is a pilot project in the Coleraine area focusing specifically on Enhanced Capital Allowances.

There are currently no plans to designate other Enterprise Zones in other areas of Northern Ireland.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the differences between conventional and unconventional drilling specifications on a drilling licence application.
(AQW 42410/11-15)

Mrs Foster: In the oil and gas industry the terms conventional and unconventional are usually applied to the types of reservoir in which oil or gas may be trapped. In conventional reservoirs (e.g. sandstones, naturally fractured limestones) the oil or gas is trapped in well-connected spaces (pores) between the grains of the rock and flows readily from the rock into and up the well. In contrast, in unconventional reservoirs the hydrocarbons may be adsorbed (attached) onto the grains or trapped in poorly connected micropores and fractures. In this case High Volume Hydraulic Fracturing (HVHF) is used to enhance the fracture network so that the hydrocarbons will flow from the reservoir into the well at the required rate.

The drilling specifications for an exploration well will depend on the design of the well including the inclination, total depth and the lithologies (rock types, including aquifers) through which the drill will pass. It will make little difference whether the target is a conventional or unconventional reservoir.

However, if the well is intended to test an unconventional shale gas reservoir, for example, the application for consent to drill would include an HVHF programme followed by flow testing of any hydrocarbons present.

When a conventional reservoir is tested the oil or gas may flow to surface naturally or reduced permeabilities may inhibit this flow. Drill stem tests and mini fall-off tests may be used to evaluate the reservoir properties and procedures such as an acid wash and squeeze and conventional hydraulic fracture stimulation may be used to initiate or increase the flow of hydrocarbons from the reservoir. Before drilling it is impossible to predict which of these procedures will be required but they would be included as options in the application for consent to drill.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, following recent announcements of price reductions by Electricity Companies, whether she plans to have any discussions with gas companies as to when they hope to be in a position to reduce their prices.
(AQW 42470/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Utility Regulator is currently engaged in a review of regulated gas tariffs in respect of Airtricity Gas Supply (for the Greater Belfast area) and firmus energy (for the Ten Towns area). My Department and the Consumer Council are consulted as part of this process. It is expected that these reviews will conclude soon to allow any changes to gas bills to take effect from 1 April 2015.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for a breakdown of the £2.1 billion pound bid submitted to the European Investment Fund by her Department's Energy Division.
(AQW 42536/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The EU President Juncker's 'Investment Plan for Europe' published on 26 November 2014 proposed measures to increase investment across the EU, including creation of a European Fund for Strategic Investments to guarantee new lending volume by the European Investment Bank (EIB).

Money from the existing EU Budget and EIB will be used as a guarantee for the proposed €315bn investment. The focus is on private investment. There remains considerable uncertainty about how the Commission intends to use EU Budget money for this purpose and where money will be reallocated from to establish the guarantee. The Commission has also published limited information on the type of projects that would be considered strategic, how they will be assessed and when.

Against this backdrop my Department was asked to identify a range of energy proposals as part of the initial response to the announcement. The proposals put forward are aligned to priorities set out in the Strategic Energy Framework and cover security of supply, interconnection, gas networks and conversion, smart grid/meters, energy storage and electricity grid reinforcements. They have not been developed in any detail or been subject to assessment of costs/benefits in the absence of clarity on the EU investment proposal.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment (i) what postcode areas are included on the final list for roll out of the Broadband Improvement Scheme; (ii) what is the expected time of completion for each postcode area; (iii) what improvements will be made in each area; and (iv) what infrastructural change this will entail.
(AQW 42544/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I would refer the member to the NI Direct website at www.nidirect.gov.uk/broadband-improvement-project where the implementation plan for Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project can be found. This site includes a postcode checker where constituents can find out if and when upgrades are due to be completed in their area.

The project is being delivered in eight phases each of which requires an extensive survey and design process which takes account of technical feasibility, quality of existing infrastructure in the area, reasonable costs, number of anticipated customers etc and seeks to achieve the greatest value for money and the highest number of beneficiaries. It is this process which determines the speed of service that can be delivered and the technology to be deployed.

It is anticipated that by project completion in December 2015, improvements will have been delivered for at least 45,000 premises across many areas of Northern Ireland resulting in the provision of basic wire-line broadband services of at least 2 Megabits per second in areas that previously had no service and improvements in the availability of superfast fixed-line broadband services (24 Megabits per second or higher) in areas where choice is poor or broadband speeds are low.

Changes to infrastructure includes the installation of equipment that runs fibre optic cables from the telephone exchange to premises or to an existing/ new roadside cabinet which then connects to customers premises over existing telephone lines to provide broadband.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how the Northern Ireland Tourist Board intends to market the Temple art project by David Best, which takes place in Derry between March 14 and 21 March 2015.
(AQW 42592/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Tourism Northern Ireland is currently promoting the event through a range of channels.

The event is listed on Discover Northern Ireland's website at www.discovernorthernireland.com/Temple-by-Artichoke which is expected to receive 3.7 million visits in 2015/16 and will also be promoted through a series of posts on Tourism Northern Ireland's suite of Social Media channels in the run up to the event.

Tourism Northern Ireland is also working closely with colleagues in Tourism Ireland in London to facilitate a media visit to the event of up to 5 journalists. It is hoped they will be joined by media from the Republic of Ireland.

Mr Douglas asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment which airline routes from Belfast provide provision for pet travel.
(AQW 42711/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The provision for pet travel is a commercial matter for the airlines.

While DETI does not hold this information, I understand that airlines such as Thomson may make provision for pet travel.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment when will she answer AQW 42406/11-15.
(AQW 42771/11-15)

Mrs Foster: AQW 42406/11-15 has already been answered.

Department of the Environment

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment whether the full extent of the mineral extraction currently taking place at 17 Shinnagh Road, Mullaslin, Carrickmore, County Tyrone (i) has planning permission; (ii) is fully compliant with all necessary regulation; and (iii) has been screened for environmental effects under the Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012.
(AQW 41910/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): Planning approval at Shinnagh Road was granted under K/2009/0807/F for 'Proposed mineral extraction of sand and gravel with associated passing bays and entrance with reinstatement to agricultural land afterwards' and K/2012/0585/F for 'Re-positioning of access to previously approved application K/2009/0807/F'.

Planning approval for the access issued in July 2013 but the original quarry permission required extraction to cease in July 2014. The operator did not apply to extend this time period.

Officials are currently investigating operations beyond the conditioned time limit of July 2014 and more recently the allegation that the operator is extending beyond the approved boundary and I have asked that this is expedited.

Both applications were screened pursuant to The Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (NI) 2012.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment whether there are any concessions for Republic of Ireland taxis and wedding cars operating in Northern Ireland, in terms of obligations to fully comply with Northern Ireland regulations; and if so, for his assessment of whether this would distort fair competition.
(AQW 42025/11-15)

Mr Durkan: There are no regulatory concessions for taxis or wedding cars registered in Ireland which cross the border during their work; nor are there any regulatory concessions for operators established here who cross the border into Ireland during their work.

My officials have engaged with colleagues in the Irish Department of Transport, Tourism and Sport about cross-border operations of this nature, seeking a means by which to regulate journeys which cross the border (in either direction) in an appropriate and proportionate manner, to ensure that passenger safety is protected and that fair competition is maintained. I intend to raise this issue at the next Transport Sectoral meeting of the North South Ministerial Council in order to progress appropriate arrangements.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 22801/11-15, for an update on the action taken to date to address the issue of the disused building formerly known as Drumglass Hospital.
(AQW 42090/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I understand that you received an update in regard to urgent repair works at Drumglass House (27 May 2013), in response to AQW 22801/11-15, followed up by further update in response to AQW 25623/11-15 (19 September 2013).

This department's Historic Buildings Unit (HBU) issued several 'Urgent Works' 'warning' letters in 12/2013 to the last known owners of this property.

In July 2013, the department's Environmental Crime Unit (ECU) sought to identify the buildings' owners, and a letter was received by ECU advising that it is the understanding of the Liquidator 'that the property reverts to the Crown'.

Further legal advice was sought, and officials subsequently contacted the [then acting] Chief Executive of Dungannon Council on 26 February 2014 about the possibility of the Council becoming actively involved in taking on a role in securing key derelict listed buildings in Dungannon, particularly Drumglass Hospital. No reply has yet been received in respect of Drumglass House.

To conclude, the building is essentially 'ownerless'. The building certainly requires urgent attention to prevent further loss of fabric. I am advised that my officials have recently contacted the local Council to establish what may be done in this instance.

I must note, however, that in circumstances such as these, combined with the unprecedented financial restrictions that my department is currently facing, it will be very difficult to enforce the maintenance of this property.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of the Environment to list the consultancy firms that provided financial services to his Department in each of the last five years; and the amount paid to each firm for these services.
(AQW 42092/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The table below provides details relating to payments made by my Department to 4 consultancy firms that provided financial services to my Department in the last five financial years.

	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14

* CIPFA - Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy

The total amount is comprised of: £128,090 for work undertaken by CIPFA in relation to the commissioning of the annual accounting direction to councils and the provision of technical accounting support services to councils; £18,975 for work undertaken by Brown Mack Accountants who provided assistance to this Department and DRD during the implementation of the Account NI Project; £2,475 for technical accounting advice provided to the Department in relation to the implementation of International Accounting Standards; and £1,000 for advice provided to NILGOSC in relation to corporation tax.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister of the Environment what steps his Department is taking to address the illegal dumping of tyres in New Mossley, Newtownabbey.
(AQW 42123/11-15)

Mr Durkan: NIEA received notification of two separate incidents involving the illegal dumping of tyres from Newtownabbey Borough Council on Wednesday 4 February 2015 and Friday 6 February 2015. Both cases related to the dumping of tyres and wooden pallets in the New Mossley area.

The NIEA is working with Newtownabbey Borough Council to see if the source of the waste and those responsible for producing it and transporting it can be identified.

Staff from NIEA have inspected the area and will continue to monitor the situation with a view to obtaining investigative opportunities that would allow both the source of the waste and those responsible for dumping it to be identified.

If evidence is forthcoming, the NIEA will use its powers under the Waste and Contaminated Land (NI) Order 1997 to investigate and take enforcement action.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of the Environment what level of income will be derived in the first year of the increased carrier bag levy.
(AQW 42130/11-15)

Mr Durkan: From 19 January 2015, retailers are required to charge 5p for all carrier bags which are sold for less than 20p, effectively extending (not increasing) the levy beyond single use bags to cheaper reusable bags. The extension of the scope of the levy to include cheaper reusable bags is intended to encourage shoppers to change their attitudes and to halt the negative behavioural pattern which saw the use of these bags increase significantly since the levy was introduced.

There was limited information on which to base a receipt calculation from the extension of the levy to reusable's but it is anticipated that the additional receipts will be relatively small. Official validated statistics (including revenue paid to the Department) for the second year of the levy will not be released until August 2015. These figures will cover the period 1 April 2014 – 31 March 2015 and as such will only incorporate two months of levy business that has been conducted under the amended legislation. Official validated figures for year 3 of the levy will be released in August 2016 which will cover the period 1 April 2015 – 31 March 2016.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment which statutory agency has lead responsibility for the collection of litter and enforcement action in relation to the illegal dumping of litter in to Lough Erne.
(AQW 42153/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The district councils have this responsibility. The Litter (Northern Ireland) Order 1994, as amended by The Clean Neighbourhoods and Environment Act (Northern Ireland) 2011, contains a number of legislative measures to improve the quality of the local environment by giving district councils powers to deal with litter, including enforcement powers.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of the Environment whether the Environmental Impact Assessment relating to drilling for gas adjacent to Woodburn Reservoir is complete; and whether it considered the presence of the reservoir.
(AQW 42175/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department carried out an Environmental Impact Assessment determination for the operation which considered the potential impacts on the local hydrology, fresh water aquifers and wider water environment. The Department concluded however that the exploration drilling will have no significant environmental impact.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the number of quangos linked to his Department on (i) 8 May 2007; and (ii) 11 February 2015; and how many people served on the quangos on these respective dates.
(AQW 42178/11-15)

Mr Durkan: At 8 May 2007, the Department of the Environment was responsible for the following public bodies:

- The Northern Ireland Local Government Officers' Superannuation Committee (NILGOSC);
- The Local Government Staff Commission for Northern Ireland (LGSC);
- The Council for Nature Conservation and the Countryside (CNCC);
- The Historic Buildings Council (HBC); and
- The Historic Monuments Council (HMC).

At 11 February 2015, this position has not changed. Please note that the Local Government Staff Commission will be wound up in 2017.

The number of members serving on each of the bodies at 8 May 2007, and at 11 February 2015 is detailed in the table below.

Public Body	Number of Members at 8 May 2007	Number of members at 11 February 2015
NILGOSC	11 (Chair & 10 members)	13 (Chair & 12 members)
LGSC	15 (Chair & 14 members)	12 (Chair and 11 members)
CNCC	19 (Chair, Deputy Chair & 17 members)	12 (Chair, Deputy Chair and 10 members)
HBC	17 (Chair & 16 members)	15 (Chair and 14 members)
HMC	15 (Chair & 14 members)	15 (Chair and 14 members)
Total	77	67

Mr Devenney asked the Minister of the Environment for an update on the current planning application for North West One in Londonderry; and what timeframe is in place for a decision.
(AQW 42196/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The consideration of both planning applications is ongoing. Further Environmental Information was received by my Department in January 2015 with the 4 week period for the submission of public representations expiring on 25th February 2015.

DRD Transport NI is currently reviewing the most recent submission from the applicant's Transport Consultant and shall respond directly to my officials. Once this consultation response has been received my officials will finalise both reports and forward to me for my consideration.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment what was the operating cost of the Ministerial car in each of the last three financial years.
(AQW 42219/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The table below provides details of the operating cost of the Ministerial car for the years 2011-12 to 2013-14.

	2011-12 £	2012-13 £	2013-14 £
Maintenance Costs	250	1,011	728
Fuel Costs	1,097	3,652	5,482

	2011-12 £	2012-13 £	2013-14 £
Total Costs	1,347	4,663	6,210

The increase in fuel costs reflects increases in distances travelled by different Ministers.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the groups in North Down that have received funding from the carrier bag levy; and the funding each group received.
(AQW 42259/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In North Down 8 groups received Carrier Bag Levy monies through the 2013/14 NGO Challenge Fund. They successfully completed 10 projects in March 2014.

This year 6 groups have been offered funding to complete a further 7 projects in North Down. Each group's level of funding has been outlined in Appendices 1 and 2.

This year's Challenge Fund programme is due to complete in March 2015 and I look forward to again seeing the positive environmental and community outcomes this support enables.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of the Environment what assessment he has made of the delivery of services for users in Northern Ireland of driver and vehicle licensing functions.
(AQW 42260/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) holds the prestigious Customer Service Excellence® standard, which tests in great depth those areas that research has indicated are a priority for customers, with particular focus on delivery, timeliness, information, professionalism and staff attitude. The DVA obtained the standard in December 2010 and retained it in 2011, 2012 and 2013. A further assessment is to be carried out later this month.

However, I also recognise that there are improvements that can be made to the delivery of services for drivers in Northern Ireland, for example the IT system that is currently used by the DVA cannot deliver online services. Therefore, the DVA has begun a project to develop a new IT system, to be introduced by April 2016, which will improve the customer experience, deliver service efficiencies and will enable a range of online services.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of the Environment to detail any rivers polluted by fuel launderers, including fish kills as a result of the pollution, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 42288/11-15)

Mr Durkan: A list of incidents related to fuel laundering attended by Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) Water Quality Inspectors by council area and river name is attached. NIEA's old water pollution incidents database did not provide data in a readily accessible form, therefore data for the last 3 years is presented.

No fish kills have been caused as a result of fuel laundering.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the options open to his Department if it discovers it has granted a planning permission unlawfully; (ii) the mechanisms that exist for it to rectify that error; and (iii) whether he is aware of any precedent in Northern Ireland where a decision maker has sought to challenge and quash its own planning decision.
(AQW 42375/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The question of whether a planning permission has been granted unlawfully falls to the Courts to determine. The permission is presumed to have been lawfully granted unless a court of competent jurisdiction decides to the contrary.

Decisions to grant planning permission are susceptible to challenge by way of judicial review on standard administrative law grounds, that is to say illegality, irrationality and procedural impropriety. On occasion, the Department may consent to the High Court (in the event of a remedy being granted by the Court) quashing a particular permission, or declaring that the permission was not lawfully granted.

The Department also has the power under Article 38 of the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991 to make an order revoking or modifying a planning permission, prior to it being implemented, where it considers it expedient to do so, having had regard to the development plan and any other material considerations (which include financial implications). Revocation or modification of a permission may enable an applicant to claim compensation.

The power in Article 38 can only be used before the development is complete. After that date, the Department can order discontinuance under Article 39 of the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991. Again, liability to pay compensation may arise.

My officials have advised that they are not aware of a time when my Department has sought to challenge one of its own planning decisions through the courts. The Planning Appeals Commission is also a planning decision maker in Northern Ireland. It is, however, an independent appellate body. Given its status, it is not appropriate that I comment on their behalf. By way of assistance, you may wish to seek an answer directly from the Commission on this matter. Correspondence should be addressed to:

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 30406/11-15, whether an estimated total cost of the clean up operation at Campsie has been reached; and who will pay for the clean up.
(AQW 42381/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The remediation and clean up solution for the Campsie waste sites has not yet been finalised and therefore the associated potential costs are not known.

The Department initiated a new project in January 2015 that aims to collect new site data to (i) further inform the potential risks arising from the illegal waste deposits to the environment, (ii) implement necessary short-term leachate management works, (iii) implement a 12 month environmental monitoring and (iv) to identify potential remediation options to manage the environmental impacts with whole life costs. Details on these potential remediation options and associated costs are expected by August 2015.

Implementation of potential remediation measures will be subject to a separate procurement and contract arrangement pending further clarification of who will pay.

Who will pay for the clean-up is being investigated. Possible mechanisms for the polluter to pay are being explored with viable options to be identified for consideration.

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister of the Environment whether any guidelines have been produced and applied in planning applications for hydro-electric schemes in rivers; and whether restrictions, other than extraction distances, are in place regarding the number and location of dams, weirs and turbines.
(AQW 42422/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The policy context for the assessment of hydro-electric schemes is set out in Planning Policy Statement (PPS) 18 'Renewable Energy' and the accompanying Best Practice Guidance (BPG) which were published in August 2009. The aim of the PPS is to facilitate the siting of renewable energy generating facilities in appropriate locations within the built and natural environment in order to achieve Northern Ireland's renewable energy targets, and to realise the benefits of renewable energy.

Planning policy does not place restrictions on the number and location of dams, weirs and turbines associated with hydro-electric schemes. Each scheme is determined on its own merits having regard to matters such as the scale and location of the proposal, its siting and design, environmental and cumulative impacts of multiple schemes, impacts upon protected species, the proximity of development sites to protected areas and mitigation measures. Where necessary, this assessment will be informed by consultation with a number of bodies including the Northern Ireland Environment Agency, the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure and Loughs Agency.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the current enforcement position in relation to unauthorised sand extraction from Lough Neagh Special Area of Protection.
(AQW 42528/11-15)

Mr Durkan: This matter is currently the subject of a current enforcement investigation and it would be inappropriate to comment further at this stage.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment how many staff will be transferred to the new Ards and North Down council from the Planning Service.
(AQW 42572/11-15)

Mr Durkan: A total of 25 Professional & Technical Officers and 8 administrative staff will transfer from Planning to the new Ards & North Down Council on 1 April 2015.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister of the Environment what plans his Department has put in place to process planning applications for sites that will move from Castlereagh Council into Belfast City Council as a result of RPA.
(AQW 42591/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My preparations for the transfer of planning functions to the new 11 councils have involved a major programme of work which is now almost complete.

In addition to changes to legislation, policy and guidance, my Department has put in place plans to ensure that the necessary systems and structures are in place for the successful transfer of planning functions.

These plans have involved a considerable amount of work on the ground, identifying key issues to be addressed and actions to be taken forward. The local planning offices have been restructured in line with the new 11 council model and staff allocated to the relevant councils. The creation of the 11 planning offices requires changes to IT services and accommodation as well as the transfer of equipment and files. Of the 6 councils who have decided that planning staff should move from their existing offices to council premises, 4 (including Lisburn and Castlereagh) have completed the moves and the remaining 2 will have moved by the end of March. All of my Department's work takes into account not only the amalgamation of existing councils but also the changes to council boundaries, such as to those between Belfast and Castlereagh.

Until 1 April 2015 all applications will continue to be determined by the Department, irrespective of which council area they belong to. After 1 April, applications will be processed by planning staff located in the relevant council area; the changes in council boundaries referred to in your question means that Belfast City Council planning staff will determine all relevant applications that have moved from Castlereagh to Belfast.

Whilst the programme is on track there is still work to be done. My staff are continuing to work closely with the local government sector to ensure that all transitional arrangements are in place and also to ensure the necessary practical issues, relating to matters such as accommodation, IT and communications, are addressed.

I am confident that the preparations I have made will ensure that a fast, fair and fit for purpose planning system transfers on 1 April 2015 and that councils are equipped to fulfil their new planning functions from day one.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of the Environment what recent engagement he has had with district councils in respect of utilising council space which will now be vacant following the reformed council structures, from April 2015.
(AQW 42611/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The rationalisation of the current configuration of 26 councils to create 11 new councils will require the transfer of ownership of council accommodation from the current councils to the new councils.

Provisions have been included in the Local Government Act (NI) 2014 to facilitate the transfer of the legal title of the assets, and the liabilities associated with those assets, to the new local government structure without incurring any costs to either the existing or new councils.

Any decision regarding the use of current council accommodation will be a matter for the new councils, and will be one of the issues that new councils should be considering. I have encouraged the new councils to be ambitious in how they can maximise the use of their estate to cut costs, whilst maintaining the levels of service that ratepayers deserve.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of whether people who will see an increase in their rates through Reval 2015 NI will be those who have suffered the consequences of the recent recession most heavily.
(AQW 41882/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): The current Valuation List was compiled in 2003 based on 2001 rental values and the updating of these values is long overdue. The purpose of the revaluation is to achieve a fairer redistribution of the rating burden amongst non domestic ratepayers using up to date market rental values.

These new values reflect current economic conditions and the relative success or decline of trading locations and sectors of business. Clearly this has been affected by the recession but the changes that are picked up by the Revaluation go further back than this to 2001.

Generally speaking, locations and sectors that have not fared so well over this longer period should experience a reduction in rate liability rather than an increase.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to list the consultancy firms that provided financial services to his Department in each of the last five years; and the amount paid to each firm for these services.
(AQW 41937/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The following consultancy firms provided financial services to the Department in the last 5 years:

	2013-14 £000	2012-13 £000	2011-12 £000	2010-11 £000	2009-10 £000

Brownmack Chartered Accounts	-	-	-	8	66
Institute of Revenues Rating and Valuation	-	-	-	-	13
Goldblatt McGuigan	20	-	-	-	-
Not disclosed	-	-	-	3	-

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he will carry out a structural review of the business rates system in Northern Ireland, following the announcement of a review of the business rates system in England by the Chancellor of the Exchequer.
(AQW 41948/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: In November 2013 I first stated to the Assembly that I was committed to a full review of the non-domestic rating system, which was well before the Chancellor's announcement. At that time I outlined that this would begin after the non-domestic revaluation has bedded in, which will be before the summer.

I would like the review to consider if the current system is fit for purpose and whether there are alternative ways of raising revenue from those who do business in Northern Ireland; either as a complete replacement or as a means of reducing the bills of those who currently pay business rates.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of how the rise of e-commerce is likely to impact upon the current high street business rates system in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 41959/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Although the Revaluation has redistributed the rating burden in a way that is helpful to High Streets in many parts of Northern Ireland, it has not had the effect that many expected in some areas.

I would like this year's review of non-domestic taxation to consider if the current system is fit for purpose and whether there are alternative ways of raising revenue from businesses in Northern Ireland.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he will publish the business case related to the Executive's Voluntary Exit Scheme.
(AQW 42003/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I do not intend to publish the business case related to the Northern Ireland Civil Service (NICS) Voluntary Exit Scheme.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether the flexibility to use £200 million borrowing for a Voluntary Exit Scheme, identified for the 2015/16 budget period, can be carried forward into later years if it is not utilised in 2015/16.
(AQW 42006/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: There is no scope to carry forward flexibilities relating to the use of borrowing for a voluntary exit scheme.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, should Corporation Tax powers be devolved, how decisions on the domicile of corporations will be made.
(AQW 42026/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The transfer of Corporation Tax rate setting powers to the Northern Ireland Assembly does not alter the residency status of any business. However, the new rules would provide for the allocation of certain trading profits to be charged at the Northern Ireland rate. This profit allocation will be based primarily on where the trading profits of affected companies are generated.

All UK trading profits from qualifying activities of a Small and Medium sized Enterprise will be subject to the Northern Ireland rate of Corporation Tax provided that at least 75% of the company's UK employment is based in the region.

Larger firms will need to demonstrate that they have a regional establishment in Northern Ireland, that is, a permanent place of business or a dependent agent acting on their behalf. They must then allocate to Northern Ireland the profits which the Northern Ireland part of the company would have earned if it was a distinct and separate enterprise.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 33958/11-15, to detail the estimated costs of the proposal; and whether it has been budgeted for in 2015/16.
(AQW 42030/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The paper I circulated to Executive colleagues put forward a range of potential options for payment for Executive consideration: estimated costs will depend on an Executive decision not only to make a payment but also on the criteria and scope of any such scheme.

Until this issue is discussed and the criteria determined, a budget cannot be settled, therefore no money is budgeted in 2015/16 to make such payments.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 33958/11-15, whether his proposal paper has been discussed by the Executive, including whether discussions have concluded; and to outline any indicative schedule for the resolution of this matter.
(AQW 42031/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: I await the agreement of Executive colleagues for the paper to be brought forward for discussion. I am unable therefore to outline an indicative schedule for resolution of this matter.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 39830/11-15, to detail the number of people who died in their own home during 2013, broken down by constituency.
(AQW 42104/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: By way of context, a total of 14,968 deaths were registered during 2013. The attached table details the 4,014 deaths (26.8 % of all deaths) that occurred in the deceased's own home during 2013.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he will take steps to extend the operations of URICA to Northern Ireland to support small businesses in dealing with slow payments.
(AQW 42161/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: URICA currently operates in Northern Ireland and its system is accessible to local businesses.

As regards small businesses' dealings with government, a range of measures is in place to ensure prompt payment, including the Northern Ireland Executive's commitment to paying suppliers as quickly as possible, within 10 days. A fair payment charter is also included in the code of practice for government construction clients and their supply chains.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel when he will approve the business case which would allow the Northern Ireland Housing Executive to pay their employees the agreed salary increase of 2.2 per cent due 1 January 2015 and a one-off non-consolidated payment of £100, pro-rata for part time staff, which was due in December 2014.
(AQW 42181/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Public Sector Pay approval process requires that pay remits are approved by both the sponsor department, in this case DSD, and the Finance Minister.

I can confirm that I approved the NIHE pay remit on 13 February 2015. This was within the best practice 15 day target set for such approvals. It is for DSD to implement the pay remit.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) when the Northern Ireland Housing Executive salary increase of 2.2 per cent payable from 1 January 2015 will come into effect; and (ii) when the one-off non-consolidated payment of £100, pro-rata for part time staff, due in December 2014 will be paid.
(AQW 42182/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Public Sector Pay approval process requires that pay remits are approved by both the sponsor department, in this case DSD, and the Finance Minister.

I can confirm that I approved the NIHE pay remit on 13 February 2015. This was within the best practice 15 day target set for such approvals. It is for DSD to implement the pay remit.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel why he has not given final clearance to the pay remit for Housing Executive staff for their salary increase of 2.2 per cent, which was due in January 2015.
(AQW 42183/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Public Sector Pay approval process requires that pay remits are approved by both the sponsor department, in this case DSD, and the Finance Minister.

I can confirm that I approved the NIHE pay remit on 13 February 2015. This was within the best practice 15 day target set for such approvals. It is for DSD to implement the pay remit.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the delay in processing salary increases for Northern Ireland Housing Executive staff; and to detail when a resolution to this matter is expected, including when increases and arrears will be paid to those affected.
(AQW 42187/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Public Sector Pay approval process requires that pay remits are approved by both the sponsor department, in this case DSD, and the Finance Minister.

I can confirm that I approved the NIHE pay remit on 13 February 2015. This was within the best practice 15 day target set for such approvals. It is for DSD to implement the pay remit.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of public procurement as a means of stimulating innovation.
(AQW 42203/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Public procurement has a track record of securing innovative approaches including strategic partnerships, design and build, and exploiting the potential of technology as part of public sector reform.

A recent Innovation Lab run by the Department explored how in the future we can further stimulate innovative products and services through public procurement. It highlighted the role of those who are commissioning procurements in framing outcome-based specifications that provide options for innovative approaches; the importance of market engagement; and the need for a proportionate approach to risk management.

Public Contracts Regulations 2015, coming into effect on 26 February, provide for new Innovation Partnership models. Moreover, I am proposing that the Northern Ireland Public Governance Review, led by OECD, will take public procurement as one of its case studies, focussing, amongst other points, on the objectives that can be pursued through procurement. I also await with interest the publication of a NICVA report on innovation and procurement in March. In the meantime, CPD is drawing up plans to offer further support to commissioners in exploiting commercial knowledge and using procurement as a tool for change.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what discussions he has had with his Executive colleagues on the retention of the Supporting People Programme.
(AQW 42210/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Minister for Social Development is responsible for the Supporting People Programme. As part of the Draft Budget consultation process, I discussed the Supporting People Programme with the Minister for Social Development at a budget bilateral meeting held on 15th December 2014.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the outstanding wage settlements in the public sector.
(AQW 42234/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: This information is not held by the Department of Finance and Personnel.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for an update on the equal pay claim from Northern Ireland Office and PSNI administrative staff; and to outline the reasons for the delay.
(AQW 42252/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It has been established that there are no valid equal pay claims for both PSNI and NIO staff upon which to base a settlement. The paper I circulated to Executive colleagues before last summer recognises the moral argument put forward, and I hope it will satisfactorily resolve the issue for this group of staff.

However, my recommendation and any associated expenditure require the approval of the Executive. Until Executive colleagues agree that the paper can be brought forward for discussion, no further update can be given.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 37627/11-15, for an update on the resolution of equal pay claims for PSNI and former Northern Ireland Office staff.
(AQW 42265/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It has been established that there are no valid equal pay claims for both PSNI and NIO staff upon which to base a settlement. The paper I circulated to Executive colleagues before last summer recognises the moral argument put forward, and I hope it will satisfactorily resolve the issue for this group of staff.

However, my recommendation and any associated expenditure require the approval of the Executive and I therefore await the agreement of Executive colleagues for the paper to be brought forward for discussion.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant of AQW 39683/11-15, to detail the mechanism in place for allocating Northern Ireland's share of the financial resource identified in dormant accounts.
(AQW 42275/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Under The Dormant Bank & Building Society Accounts Act (2008), my Department may make provision restricting the purposes for which, or the kinds of person to which, the distribution of Dormant Accounts money for meeting Northern Ireland expenditure be made.

Having reviewed the proposals for the Northern Ireland Dormant Account fund, my Department intends to issue a public consultation exercise. Following this process, it is my intention to lay before the Assembly a Statutory Rule which shall detail how Dormant Accounts funding in Northern Ireland will be utilised.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the likely impact on the community background of the public service of a 20,000 staff reduction through a voluntary exit scheme.
(AQW 42300/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Given that any exit schemes will be voluntary, it is not yet known what the impact will be in terms of the community background of those staff choosing to exit.

It will be for individual public sector organisations to consider the equality implications of their particular voluntary exit scheme(s). This information is not held centrally.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel for his assessment of the likely impact on the community background of the Civil Service of a 20,000 staff reduction across the public service through a voluntary exit scheme.
(AQW 42301/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The NICS comprises only 13% of the public sector workforce in Northern Ireland. An equality impact screening assessment has been carried out on the NICS Voluntary Exit Scheme which determined that an Equality Impact Assessment was not required. However, due to the voluntary nature of the scheme and the fact that virtually all permanent NICS staff are eligible to apply, it is not possible to determine the likely impact on the community background of the NICS until applications are received and selected.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel how many Prison Service staff, who left under the voluntary early retirement scheme on 31 March 2012, have subsequently been told that their pension was miscalculated; and what action has been taken to rectify this problem.
(AQW 42353/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: One member of Prison Service staff who left under the scheme on 31 March 2012 has subsequently been told that their pension was miscalculated.

The individual concerned has been advised accordingly and additional checks put in place for such cases.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the estimated cost of (i) the refurbishment of the premises currently occupied by the headquarters of the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) at Dundonald House; and (ii) the temporary relocation costs of DARD headquarters, if the relocation to Ballykelly were not to proceed and Dundonald House had to be retained.
(AQW 42380/11-15)

Mr Hamilton:

i) The cost of works to refurbish Dundonald House to Workplace NI standard is estimated to be £35,850,000 (this excludes any decant costs).

ii) This cost has not been calculated.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what are the contractual terms, including the financial arrangements, pertaining to the use of the Stormont Estate for the Ice Cross Downhill World Championship.
(AQW 42391/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Red Bull was required to agree and sign a standard contract for the use of the Stormont Estate. This contract details the provisions that must be met including the provision of sufficient liability insurance for the event and agreement that Red Bull will pay for whatever restoration work is necessary to restore the Estate grounds to their original condition at no cost to the public purse. Before Red Bull fully vacates the Estate on 2 March 2015, a full inspection will be carried out by the Estate Management Unit to identify areas requiring repair. All remedial work for damage done to the Estate will then be carried out by the Department's contractors at Red Bull's expense.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether he will place a copy of the business case for the 20,000 staff exit scheme across the public service in the Assembly library.
(AQW 42392/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: There is no single business case for the Public Sector Voluntary Exit Scheme. Each public sector organisation will prepare individual business cases to support bids to the Public Sector Restructuring Fund. The NICS business case for the Voluntary Exit Scheme covers the NICS only.

There are no plans to place copies of all business cases for such schemes in the Assembly Library.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the objectives and expected outcomes of the Northern Ireland Civil Service Voluntary Exit Scheme for Administrative Assistants and Administrative Officers.
(AQW 42437/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It is anticipated that in the region of 2,400 staff will be required to exit the NICS via the Voluntary Exit Scheme. Departments have indicated they expect approximately 150 will be Administrative Assistants and approximately 560 will be Administrative Officers.

As the scheme is voluntary and almost all permanent NICS staff are eligible to apply it is not possible to predict the profile of applicants by grade.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether his Department intends to carry out an economic impact assessment of the Civil Service Voluntary Exit Scheme.
(AQW 42440/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: This question has been referred to me by the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment as it refers to the NICS Voluntary Exit Scheme. An economic impact assessment of the Northern Ireland Civil Service (NICS) Voluntary Exit Scheme has not been made, since the scheme has been designed with the objective of facilitating significant pay bill reductions required to live within their 2015/16 Budget allocations. This is a voluntary scheme and so any impact can only be analysed once the scheme has closed and numbers and profile of applicants is known. Civil Service Voluntary Exit Scheme

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what impact assessment has been carried out on the likelihood of the Northern Ireland Civil Service having a younger age and experience profile following the proposed Voluntary Exit Scheme.
(AQW 42442/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Due to the voluntary nature of the NICS Exit Scheme and the fact that virtually all permanent NICS employees will be eligible to apply, it is not possible to assess the likelihood of the NICS having a younger age and experience profile until applicants have been selected to leave under the terms of the scheme.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what plans are in place for Departments to transform their business practices to ensure that, following the Voluntary Exit Scheme, permanent benefits and value for money improvements can be achieved and staffing numbers stay reduced in the long term.
(AQW 42491/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The objective of the NICS Voluntary Exit Scheme is to secure a permanent paybill reduction, therefore suppressed posts will not be replaced. Maintaining those reductions will therefore require departments to manage their staffing numbers, business and service delivery within their budget allocations.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the information available on civil servants' skills, performance and experience; and how this will be used to make decisions on retention and departure in the proposed Voluntary Exit Scheme.
(AQW 42492/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Voluntary Exit Scheme is part of a Paybill Reduction Strategy for the NICS. Those selected to leave will have the decision based on value for money considerations. This is not a strategic workforce planning exercise and skills, performance and experience are not, therefore, selection criteria for the scheme. A range of measures, including redeployment provisions and maximum numbers to be released within grades will contribute towards protecting business delivery within departments.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether Executive Departments have finalised detailed workforce plans ahead of the proposed Voluntary Exit Scheme.
(AQW 42493/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: It is a matter for Ministers in their respective departments to comment in relation to their detailed workforce plans, but I can confirm that the scale of the NICS Voluntary Exit Scheme was informed by workforce planning exercises undertaken by departments in the context of living within their 2015/16 budget allocations.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the governance arrangements associated with the Voluntary Exit Scheme; and whether decisions on departures will be peer reviewed, signed off at Permanent Secretary level and where necessary subject to internal audit.
(AQW 42494/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The NICS Voluntary Exit Scheme has been developed and managed under robust project management arrangements, with a Senior Responsible Owner, Project Board and Project Manager in place to oversee the scheme. The business case for and terms of scheme have been subject to robust examination and have secured the necessary approvals at Permanent Secretary and Ministerial level.

Selection panels, made up of staff from departments, will be used to quality assure the selection process. Permanent Secretaries' Group will have an oversight role. This Voluntary Exit Scheme, in line with any area of my Department is subject to examination by Internal Audit at any time.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether the Head of the Northern Ireland Civil Service will work with Permanent Secretaries to provide strategic oversight and active monitoring of the proposed Voluntary Exit Scheme.
(AQW 42495/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Head of the NI Civil Service chairs the Public Sector Restructuring Steering Group comprising senior officials from each department nominated by their Ministers to provide oversight of the process for allocation of the funding for voluntary exit schemes across the public sector over a four year period.

The Voluntary Exit Scheme for the Northern Ireland Civil Service has been subject to consideration at Permanent Secretaries Group at all stages under the chairmanship of the Head of the Civil Service.

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what economic assessment has been carried out to consider the impact the Voluntary Exit Scheme will have on the number of people registered as unemployed and in receipt of unemployment benefits.
(AQW 42832/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: An economic assessment has not been made of the Northern Ireland Civil Service Voluntary Exit Scheme, since the objective of the Scheme is to secure a permanent pay bill reduction within the 2015/16 Budget allocations agreed by the Executive in January 2015. This is a voluntary scheme, which will compensate staff who choose to apply and are selected to leave.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Mr Clarke asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in relation to his recent statement to the Assembly advising that his Department provides funding to Trade Unions, to detail (i) how much is paid annually to Trade Union Officials; (ii) how many officials this payment covers; and (iii) how much it costs to administer Trade Unions dues.
(AQW 40327/11-15)

Mr Wells (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): This response refers to the costs borne by the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety and its arms length bodies:

(i) the total annual amount paid during 2013/2014 was £1,840,540;

(ii) this represents the salaries of 58 (WTE) Trade Union Officials;

(iii) the administration of Trade Union dues is undertaken through payroll as part of the overall HR Connect/ Human Resources Payroll, Travel and Subsistence (HRPTS) payroll services and it is not possible to estimate the cost.

Legislation requires employers to make provision for trade union activity, however the level of such spend by the Department and across the HSC is one of the areas being reviewed as I endeavour to fund frontline services, in the current challenging financial climate.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the progress of the Adoption and Childcare Bill.
(AQW 40582/11-15)

Mr Wells: The draft Adoption and Children Bill is cross-cutting in nature and Executive approval to consult on the Bill is required. A draft Bill has been prepared and I intend to write to Executive colleagues seeking agreement to consult.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of (i) beds; (ii) doctors; and (iii) nurses in each of Northern Ireland's Type 1 Emergency Care Departments, in each of the last ten years.
(AQW 40850/11-15)

Mr Wells: The HSC Trusts have provided the below figures to show the number of beds, doctors, and nurses in each of Northern Ireland's Type 1 Emergency Departments (EDs).

It has not been possible in all cases for Trusts to provide figures from before their creation in 2008 (following the Review of Public Administration). Staffing numbers are provided as at 1 December in each year.

Most emergency care departments do not have beds as such, but will use flexible trolleys for multiple purposes in response to the individual needs of patients. Patients may move through cubicles during periods of assessment or observation, or for other care requirements.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the total expenditure on MFDs and print related services by each Health and Social Care Trust over the last three years.
(AQW 41518/11-15)

Mr Wells: Expenditure by HSC Trusts on MFDs and printed related services can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he will direct the Health and Social Care Board and Health and Social Care Trusts to publish waiting times for audiology services.
(AQW 41521/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Department currently publish information on patients waiting for an audiology (pure tone audiometry) diagnostic service by weeks waiting. This information is published quarterly by Hospital Information Branch (HIB) in the 'Northern Ireland Waiting Time Statistics: Diagnostic Waiting Times' statistical bulletin and is available on the DHSSPS website at the following link:

http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/index/statistics/hospital/waitingtimes/waitingtimes-diagnostic.htm

The Department is currently assessing newly developed information on waiting times for hearing aids and when considered as being of robust quality it will be published as official statistics.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40119/11-15, to detail the Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme payments received by the Health and Social Care Board; and how these payments have been used.
(AQW 41808/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme (PPRS) 2014 started on 1 January 2014. Returns to Northern Ireland from year one of the scheme are detailed in the following table.

	Quarter 1 (Jan –Mar)	Quarter 2 (Apr-Jun)	Quarter 3 (Jul-Sep)
Amount	£3.53 m	£3.83 m	£3.92 m

I have beenadvised by HSCB that returns from the PPRS have been re-invested to assist with financial pressures and service development priorities across HSC.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why has he allowed the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust to action the full closure of the Bangor GP Ward when it was originally proposed for temporary closure.
(AQW 41816/11-15)

Mr Wells: The decision to temporarily close the Bangor GP Ward was taken by the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust as part of its financial contingency plan to break even in 2014/15 while maintaining patient safety. This came into effect on 1 December 2014. In the meantime a full option appraisal has been carried out by the Trust, identifying a preferred option for the reconfiguration of intermediate care services in the North Down and Ards area which, if implemented, would include the permanent closure of the GP Ward. In line with my Department's guidance on Personal and Public Involvement, the Trust is currently consulting on these proposals. The Trust is committed to engaging fully with stakeholders on this matter and I will await the outcome of that consultation before commenting further.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40951/11-15, to detail the stations that will benefit, including the number of replacement vehicles each will receive.
(AQW 41860/11-15)

Mr Wells: The table below indicates the stations allocated replacement vehicles in 2014/15 and the types of vehicles allocated. Three of the replacement vehicles are still to be confirmed to a station.

Ambulance station	Accident & Emergency Ambulance	Patient Care Service Ambulance	Rapid Response Vehicle
Antrim	1	1	1

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what protocols and guidelines he will issue to GP practices to improve patient appointment requests within acceptable limits.
(AQW 41866/11-15)

Mr Wells: Under the terms of their GMS Contract GPs are required to provide essential primary medical services during core hours (8am-6.30pm Monday to Friday) to their registered patients, who are ill or believe themselves to be ill, in a manner determined by the Practice in discussion with the patient, and provide immediately necessary treatment for any medical emergency.

The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB), as the commissioning organisation, is responsible for monitoring the performance of GP Practices to ensure that they are meeting their contractual obligations. It supports improved access to GP Services through Local Enhanced Services (LES) for Additional Surgeries and Demand Management.

The Additional Surgeries LES is designed to fund further clinical support to address the increased demand for appointments and home visits from November 2014 to March 2015. This enables GP Practices to run additional surgeries, either in hours or in the evenings, or to put in place initiatives to manage acute demand and home visits for their patients. The service is designed to increase capacity, by incentivising GPs, to provide additional sessions out of normal contracted hours, or part time doctors to provide additional sessions beyond their normal weekly working hours. It is anticipated that this additional funding will result in approximately 3,500 additional GP surgeries, at which it is expected that 38,000 patients will receive a consultation with either a GP or Nurse

The Demand Management LES is a quality improvement programme to manage workload, demand, capacity and responsiveness within primary care. Over the last two years this enhanced service has enabled GP practices to measure and shape demand, match capacity to demand and plan for contingencies by reviewing and making changes in the following areas:

- Use of Telephone Triage
- Development of a Practice Website
- Use of alternatives to standard GP appointments
- Use of Telephone Consultation and call-backs
- Review of existing GP and nurse surgeries
- Review of treatment room services
- Review of staffing levels for answering telephone, telephone lines and equipment
- Patient education, self-management and the use of GP services by patients

- Did Not Attend (DNAs) policy and use of appointment reminders
- Improvement to Telephone Call handling and customer care
- Review of staff roles and competencies
- Use of Check-in screens and electronic displays

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the progression of a Children's Palliative Care Strategy, following the public consultation that ended on 28 March 2014.
(AQW 41933/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department has finalised its draft Strategy for Children's Palliative and End-of-Life Care. The draft strategy will shortly be referred to the Health and Social Care Board to prepare an Implementation Plan to be published with the final strategy subject to my approval. I expect this work to be concluded for publication by May 2015.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the state and condition of ambulances.
(AQW 41938/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Ireland Ambulance Service has a rolling fleet replacement programme which aims to replace ambulance vehicles on a five-year cycle. The A&E ambulance fleet age profile is outlined in the table below.

Age of vehicle (years)	0-1	1-2	2-3	3-4	4-5	5-6
Number of vehicles	15	23	22	22	24	10

A&E ambulances currently average about 36,000 miles per year. Older vehicles will tend to do less than the average miles while newer vehicles will do higher mileage than the average in the first few years.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the business case and timeline for investment in the Clark Clinic, Belfast.
(AQW 41978/11-15)

Mr Wells: I intend to make an announcement about my final decision on the International Working Group's recommendations for the future delivery of congenital cardiac services in early March 2015. I will also announce the details of how proposals for a Specialist Children's Cardiology Centre in Belfast will be taken forward. My Department is working with officials from the Belfast Trust, Health and Social Care Board, Public Health Agency and patient representatives to establish the framework in which this can be taken forward with the appropriate senior representation from each organisation.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) what steps have been taken by the Western Health and Social Care Trust to liaise with parents of children who were given the wrong vaccination at Omagh Academy; (ii) the background to the mistake; (iii) what steps have been taken to ensure this does not happen again; and (iv) whether the results of the investigation by the Public Health Agency be published.
(AQW 41982/11-15)

Mr Wells: I have been made aware that a letter was issued by the Western Health and Social Care Trust on 26 January 2015 to every parent/carer of a child vaccinated on 12 January 2015 in Omagh Academy providing points of contact, to facilitate parents/guardians contacting the Trust. The School Health Lead in the Trust has been in constant direct contact with both the school and parents answering any queries.

The Public Health Agency have informed me that the investigation is being dealt with as a Trust Serious Adverse Incident and the guidance for the investigation of Serious Adverse Incidents is therefore being followed. The investigation is being led by the Trust with appropriate input from the Public Health Agency. The findings will be shared with the parents of the pupils, the school and the education and library board. Any findings and learning points from the investigation will be shared by the Public Health Agency/Health and Social Care Board with all HSC Trusts to ensure that a similar incident does not occur in any other Trust.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps he is taking to ensure that telephone numbers provided to patients to access specialists nurses for information and advice are not diverted to answer phone for prolonged periods; and whether he will ensure that when staff are on leave that these numbers will be answered by appropriate nursing staff.
(AQW 41993/11-15)

Mr Wells: This is a matter for the Health and Social Care Trusts responsible for the individual services concerned. It is important that where the specialist nurse is unable to answer patients' calls straight away, answer phone or voicemail calls are checked frequently and returned within a reasonable timeframe. Arrangements will vary depending on the specialty concerned, but broadly speaking, messages are checked regularly by the specialist nurse or a member of the team and calls returned as soon as possible. If the specialist nurse is on leave, the message on the answer phone or voicemail will be updated to indicate an alternative way to contact the specialist team, or a suitably qualified nurse will provide cover to ensure patients have access to advice and guidance.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40741/11-15, for his assessment of the real term benefits of collating data on GP waiting lists to ascertain the likelihood of potential increases in Emergency Department attendance.
(AQW 42016/11-15)

Mr Wells: A survey of patients attending Emergency Departments will be conducted during the next few months; this will include the question why patients attend Emergency Departments.

The outcome of the survey should prove useful as it will illustrate if patients are attending Emergency Departments because they were experiencing difficulty getting an appointment with their GP.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40408/11-15, to detail the number of cancer patients transferred to GB for specialised treatment, broken down by cancer type, in the last three years.
(AQW 42017/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on patients referred to Great Britain (GB) for specialised treatment is collected by the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB), as the commissioner of such services.

The number of cancer patients transferred to GB for specialised treatment is not collated centrally by the HSCB. Extra Contractual Referrals (ECRs) are considered on the clinical rationale for treatment and the applications submitted do not always include a definitive cancer diagnosis. As such, the requested information would require a case by case analysis involving a manual trawl of case notes and could only be provided at disproportionate cost. The HSCB have however estimated that approximately 5% of 1074 approved Extra Contractual Referral to GB providers in 2013/14 were for cancer related assessment and/or treatment. Please note that this is the number of ECRs approved by the HSCB, rather than the number of patients who actually travel for treatment.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the current level of reserves of each Health and Social Care Trust, including how these reserves are utilised.
(AQW 42023/11-15)

Mr Wells: The HSC Trusts' reserves for the period ending 31 March 2014 are summarised in the following table and have been extracted from the latest Statements of Financial Position contained within the 2013/14 audited annual accounts:

	Revaluation Reserve(1) £000	SoCNE Reserve(2) £000	Charitable Trust Funds(3) £000	Total Reserves £000
WHSCT	67,990	308,436	3,668	380,094
BHSCT	108,101	770,026	42,889	921,016
SHSCT	40,540	183,158	2,783	226,481
SEHSCT	47,845	341,458	6,385	395,688
NHSCT	56,029	251,818	5,590	313,437
	320,505	1,854,896	61,315	2,236,716

Notes:

(1) Revaluation Reserve: This reserve is created when the value of an asset becomes greater than the value at which it was previously carried on the Statement of Financial Position. It is used for accounting purposes to record the underlying value of the trusts' assets.

(2) SoCNE Reserve: The Statement of Comprehensive Net Expenditure Reserve is used for accounting purposes to record the accumulated balance of investment by the Department.

(3) Charitable Trust Funds: Charitable Trust Funds are managed independently of normal HSC Trust operations and are utilised for the purpose intended by the benefactor.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 40038/11-15, to outline the terms of reference for the review into the clinical negligence settlement management process.
(AQW 42086/11-15)

Mr Wells: The options being considered are still policy under development and I am not in a position to outline them at present. The Terms of Reference for the review into the clinical negligence settlement management process will be developed once all the options have been considered.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the appropriateness of the blanket policy of the Health and Social Care Board to reimburse only those expenses incurred in relation to treatment by an independent healthcare provider where this is part of a local waiting list initiative, given that some patients who are on waiting lists in areas where such initiatives have ceased.

(AQW 42103/11-15)

Mr Wells: Due to the financial pressures faced by my Department the Health and Social Care Board introduced a regional pause on referring patients to the Independent Sector for treatment in autumn 2014. While I regret this action it was however necessary and entirely appropriate given the scale of the financial challenges.

Individuals who chose to seek treatment privately are entitled to do so. However, it would not be an appropriate use of resources for the Health and Social Care Board to reimburse those individuals as this would be unfair to patients on HSC waiting lists.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether he has considered the merits of extending to Northern Ireland the recently announced programme to screen newborn babies in England for four rare genetic disorders.
(AQW 42105/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Newborn Bloodspot Screening Programme currently in place in Northern Ireland and in the rest of the United Kingdom offers screening for phenylketonuria (PKU), congenital hypothyroidism (CH), cystic fibrosis (CF), MCADD (medium chain acyl CoA dehydrogenase deficiency), and sickle cell disorders (SCD).

In 2014 the UK National Screening Committee (NSC) recommended that every newborn baby in the UK should be screened for four additional conditions. This would involve expanding the existing Newborn Bloodspot Screening Programme to include screening for: Homocystinuria (HCU), Maple Syrup Urine Disease (MSUD), Glutaric Aciduria Type 1 (GA1) and Isovaleric Aciduria (IVA). Screening for these four other inherited metabolic diseases is being rolled out in England. Wales is also extending its bloodspot programme to include these four additional conditions. I too would hope to be in a position to do this in Northern Ireland and on new service development funding becoming available, expansion of the Newborn Bloodspot Screening Programme will be prioritised and considered. A decision has not yet been taken in Scotland.

It is recognised the early identification of these rare disorders (approximately 3 in Northern Ireland every two years) can prevent death and significantly improve the quality of life for those living with these conditions.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what differences exist in the screening of newborn babies in Northern Ireland and the rest of the United Kingdom for genetic disorders.
(AQW 42106/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Newborn Bloodspot Screening Programme currently in place in Northern Ireland and in the rest of the United Kingdom offers screening for phenylketonuria (PKU), congenital hypothyroidism (CH), cystic fibrosis (CF), MCADD (medium chain acyl CoA dehydrogenase deficiency), and sickle cell disorders (SCD).

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update to AQW 35542/11-15, in view of his indication of a decision in early 2015.
(AQW 42107/11-15)

Mr Wells: I am currently considering a detailed briefing paper from my officials on a proposed way forward and I plan to my announce my decision shortly on how best ILF users will be supported following the closure of the Fund in June 2015.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the number of hospital beds in the Foyle constituency dedicated to mental health patients; and how this number compares to (i) two; (ii) five; and (iii) ten years ago.
(AQW 42126/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the number of hospital beds in the Foyle constituency dedicated to mental health patients is not available.

However, information is available on the number of available beds within the mental health programme of care (POC) in the Western Health and Social Care (HSC) Trust. The number of available beds is the number of beds on each ward open overnight that were actually available for patients, measured at midnight. Beds reserved solely for day care admissions or regular day admissions are not included as these patients do not stay overnight.

The table below details the average number of available beds within the mental health POC in the Western HSC Trust over the last ten years.

Available Beds within the Mental Health POC Source: KH03a

2004/05	2005/06	2006/07	2007/08	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14
221.6	219.3	182.3	175.4	170.1	154.4	150.4	125.5	98.2	98.0

The Bamford vision is that people with a mental illness should be treated in the community close to their families and friends, unless there is a clinical reason for not doing so. Transforming Your Care supports this approach. Accordingly, developments in mental health in recent years have been focused on community based services such as crisis response teams, home treatment teams and community mental health teams. Improvements in community mental health services in turn reduce dependency on inpatient care, and therefore acute mental health beds have reduced and will continue to reduce in the future.

Between 2004/05 and 2013/14, the average number of available beds within the mental health POC in the Western HSC Trust decreased by 55.8% (123.6), from 221.6 to 98.0.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the percentage of his budget spent on hospital meals.
(AQW 42127/11-15)

Mr Wells: In 2013/14, the HSC Trusts spent £6.6m on hospital meals (for patients only), which represented 0.18% of total Trusts expenditure in that year.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the emergency ambulance provision for the Derry city area.
(AQW 42133/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Ireland Ambulance Service (NIAS) HSC Trust has a station based at Altnagelvin Area Hospital with a deployment point based at Northland Road Fire Station which will provide cover in the Londonderry City area. It should be noted that NIAS deploys its emergency response resources using a tactical deployment plan to ensure the nearest available resource responds to an incident, and this may come from another area such as Limavady or Strabane.

The following cover is provided at Altnagelvin Ambulance Station:

- 2 A&E ambulances 24/7 cover
- 1 A&E ambulance Monday to Sunday 07:30 to 17:30
- 2 A&E ambulances Sunday to Thursday 20:00 to 08:00
- 3 A&E ambulances Friday and Saturday 20:00 to 08:00
- 1 Rapid Response Vehicle Monday to Friday 08:00 to14:00 and 20:00 to 24:00
- 2 Rapid Response Vehicles Monday to Friday 14:00 to 20:00
- 1 Rapid Response Vehicle Saturday to Sunday 09:00 to 15:00 and 20:00 to 24:00
- 2 Rapid Response Vehicles Saturday to Sunday15:00 to 20:00

A&E resources are dispatched to the Northland Road deployment point on a daily basis.

Information about the number of occasions in each of the last three years when emergency ambulance provision in the Derry city area fell below standard levels, if this occurred, is not readily available and could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

(AQW 42180/11-15)

Mr Wells: Staffing figures for each Arm's Length Body (ALB) of my Department, with the exception of the Northern Ireland Fire & Rescue Service (NIFRS), are processed on a quarterly basis; figures on the dates requested are therefore unavailable. Notes:

1 All staffing figures were sourced from the HSC's Human Resources Management System (HRMS) for 2007 and Human Resources, Payroll, Travel and Subsistence (HRPTS) for 2014, with the exceptions of the NI Medical & Dental Training Agency (2007 only), Health Promotion Agency and the Fire & Rescue Service. These figures were obtained directly from the organisations.

2 HSC staffing figures exclude bank staff, members/chairs of Boards, members of staff on career break, members of staff with a WTE of less than 0.03, and home help/domiciliary care staff. NI Medical & Dental Training Agency figures include trainee GPs who are paid via NIMDTA's payroll but are not employees of NIMDTA. Retained Firefighters are included in Headcount figures, but not WTE. Agency staff in NIFRS Support roles are excluded from March 2007, because figures were unavailable.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what discussions he has had with Executive colleagues on the retention of the Supporting People Programme.
(AQW 42213/11-15)

Mr Wells: I have recently been in correspondence with Minister Storey on the Supporting People Programme, and we have agreed to meet to discuss the Programme when the Supporting People budget for 2015/16 is agreed.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 41316/11-15, to detail the current number of audiology consultants employed in each Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 42214/11-15)

Mr Wells: Trusts have advised that the consultants dealing with audiology issues are Ear, Nose & Throat (ENT) specialists and have provided figures for ENT consultants in the table below.

HSC Trust	Headcount	Whole-time Equivalent
Belfast	9	7.98
Northern	5	5.0
South Eastern	4	4.0
Southern	6	6.0
Western	6	6.0

Most patients referred for audiology services are not waiting to see a consultant, but are waiting to see audiology staff, who are healthcare scientists. Trusts have provided figures for audiology staff below.

HSC Trust	Band	Headcount	Whole-time Equivalent
Belfast	Audiology Assistant Band 2-3	8	5.06

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 41318/11-15, for his assessment of the real term benefits of collating data concerning patients transferred for specialist treatment in GB.
(AQW 42216/11-15)

Mr Wells: The timely collection of accurate cancer patient data relating to occurrence, modality of treatment and the outcome of treatment is of benefit in real terms for the delivery of services, planning and research. This is the case for all NI cancer patient data regardless of where patients are treated.

Through the Extra Contractual Referrals process, patients may be referred to providers outside NI for assessment or treatment which cannot be provided locally due to its specialist nature, or can be provided locally but clinical reasons exist for treatment outside NI.

The Health and Social Care Board maintains a database of all Extra Contractual Referral submissions, which includes the reason for treatment, the specialty and the outcome of the submission.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of Recommendation 8 of the Donaldson Review into Health and Social Care governance arrangements, specifically on the lack of system-wide data.
(AQW 42217/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Donaldson Report recommendations are far reaching in their implications and in my Oral Statement to the Assembly on 27 January I outlined a number of urgent actions to be taken but also that there needed to be time to give fuller consideration to the Report recommendations as a whole. Given the significance of the recommendations, it is important to ensure that stakeholders across NI have the opportunity to give their views and participate in a debate about how we take forward health and care services in the future.

As such, a consultation has been launched on the recommendations, including recommendation 8, from the Donaldson Report to allow people to give their views. This consultation can be accessed on the DHSSPS website and closes later in May 2015.

Currently my Department monitors quality and safety through a range of metrics at Regional, Trust and clinical service level. Standards and indicators for key quality and safety metrics are specified in the Commissioning Plan Direction and Indicators of Performance Direction issued to the Health and Social Care Board and the Public Health Authority. These metrics draw on best practice internationally, and are aligned as far as possible with equivalent metrics used elsewhere in the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland. The metrics are reviewed annually to ensure they remain up-to-date and relevant.

Mr Lunn asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether there are any plans to introduce a podiatric surgery facility in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 42230/11-15)

Mr Wells: A surgical podiatric service for foot and ankle surgery is in development; and the roll out of this initiative in 2015/16 will be considered by the Health and Social Care Board in the context of available resources and competing priorities on these resources.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what steps each Health and Social Care Trust is taking to increase the amount of recycling and reuse to increase efficiencies.
(AQW 42269/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Department of Health and Social Services does not hold information centrally relating to the operational procedures of individual Health and Social Care Trusts. The Health and Social Care Trusts were asked to submit details on their recycling arrangements and these responses are attached in Annex A.

Annex A: Trust Responses to information request

HSC Trust	Trust Response to Information Request No. AQW 42269/11-15
Belfast	Belfast Trust is pro-active in the reduction, recycling and reuse of its waste. The Trust's waste policy includes the key objectives that: ■ The creation of waste is minimised. ■ All waste streams are separated to minimise disposal costs and associated environmental impact. To achieve this the Trust provides mandatory waste training which highlights good practice to staff and emphasises the importance of waste reduction and use of correct waste segregation practices. Information on waste reduction is regularly promoted on the Trust Intranet and through internal publications. The Trust's Waste Manager monitors waste tonnage produced to ensure reduction targets are achieved and continually looks for opportunities to achieve further reductions. The following is an indication of the level of reduction, recycling and reuse across each waste stream. General/Domestic Waste ■ Working in partnership with our waste contractor SITA, Belfast Trust has introduced a dry mixed recycling stream for domestic waste - separating recyclable items at source such as paper, cardboard, cans, plastic bottles etc. As a result the percentage of such waste going to landfill from Jan 2014-Jan 2015 was only 3.34%. 58.32% of waste was recycled and 38.34% was recovered. Clinical Waste ■ From June 2014 all Clinical waste residue (flock following thermal heat treatment process) from Belfast Trust has been diverted from landfill for 100% recovery and electricity conversion, resulting in zero landfill. Confidential Waste ■ All confidential paper waste removed from the Trust is 100% recycled via licensed contractor.
	WEEE - Waste Electrical & Electronic Equipment ■ All electrical waste goes for recycling as per W.E.E.E. regulations via licensed contractor. Furniture & Equipment ■ The Trust has a furniture store for desks, chairs, ward furniture, catering equipment etc to reduce the requirement to purchase new items. Any furniture not suitable for reuse within the Trust is donated to charity.

HSC Trust	Trust Response to Information Request No. AQW 42269/11-15
Southern	Over the last 2-3 years the level of recycling has been approximately 11-13%. This excludes the Trust general/domestic waste which is taken to the contractor's site where waste is segregated so that at least 75% of waste is diverted from landfill. Recycling is promoted throughout the Trust as part of staff mandatory waste e-learning training. Staff also receive information through the Trust e-brief and from waste audits of ward(s)/department(s). Recycling is undertaken throughout the Trust and it is planned to increase levels at Acute sites from April 2015 by increasing promotion of recycling in wards/departments and implementing the introduction of same where possible. At main hospital sites cardboard waste is segregated and recycled. Where possible the Trust currently recycles waste including: ■ Batteries ■ Printer toner cartridges ■ Fluorescent tubes ■ Confidential waste paper ■ Waste Electronic and Electrical Equipment (WEEE) ■ Chemicals

Western	Policy and Procedures 1 The WHSCT has an Environmental Policy in place which has been approved by the Trust Board; this details a commitment to 'promote waste minimisation by segregation, reuse and recycling, and reduce environmental impact through safe disposal of the residue' 2 The Policy commitment is implemented by procedures documented in Trust 'Waste Manual' Segregation and Disposal 3 The Trust segregates waste produced in accordance with HTM07-01for separate collection, recycling and reuse and the key waste streams include: Waste Stream — Colour of Containment Clinical waste (orange) Non-Recyclable (black) Mixed Recycling (blue) Compostable (brown) Confidential waste (white) Waste Electronic and Electrical Equipment (WEEE) Chemicals, Oils & Paints 4 The Trust has waste disposal contracts in place for removal, recycling and/or safe disposal of hazardous (infectious and non-infectious) and non-hazardous waste; these have been arranged through BSO/PALS, the relevant Centre of Procurement Expertise (COPE)) Both PALS and the Trust's Environment Manager meet regularly with contractors to review recycling/ reuse performance. 5 Waste segregation and recycling information (including posters) are posted in all wards/ departments/facilities across Trust.
	Quality Assurance, Audit and Training 6 The WHSCT has a full-time Environment Officer who undertakes an annual programme of 'Environmental Audits' across the Trust which includes monitoring compliance with waste procedures in Waste Manual, and identifying and implementing areas for improvement. 7 The Environment Officer also undertakes an annual environmental training programme for key Trust staff involved in handling waste, e.g. Nursing, Support Services. 8 The WHSCT has an Environmental Management System (EMS) in place, which is externally accredited to ISO14001 Environmental Management Standard and covers Waste management activities as outlined above.

Northern	Over the last 3 years recycling has steadily increased, due to promotional information and staff training, as well as contractors' facilities being improved allowing the removal a higher percentage of recycled material. There is also a higher percentage of recovery of the remaining material from the recycling process to be processed into a fuel source. This has helped to further divert waste from landfill, with some Northern Trust Hospitals and community facilities achieving 100% recycling and with a total Trust recycling rate of 84% (Jan 2015 figures). The majority of Trust Hospitals have balers to compact cardboard, which reduces the amount of recycling bins and creates space in compactors, resulting in less collections and lorries on the road. Across all of the Trust Hospitals 172.88 tonnes of cardboard was baled and recycled during 2013-14 (141.5 tonnes from April 2014 to Jan 2015). A new efficient domestic waste compactor (which contains recyclable waste) was installed at Causeway Hospital during January 2014 with a higher load capacity reducing collections from once a week to once a month, further reducing lorries on the road and collection charges. Recycling has now expanded to include other items such as clothes, scrap metal, batteries and toner cartridges. The Trust has collaborated with local Social Enterprise schemes to recycle cooking oil from the catering departments into biodiesel and up-cycling and reupholstering furniture that would otherwise be disposed of. At present information is being gathered with regard to food waste quantities at both acute and community facilities with the aim of adopting either separated food waste collections for composting or to install de-watering food waste equipment which will reuse the treated food waste as a fuel. Food waste is disposed of via black bags i.e. non-recyclable waste but is processed at our contractor's recycling plant to recover recyclable material and also to process the waste into fuel. Even though this waste is recycled and recovered for fuel it is still classified as non-recycling. The Trust's average annual recovered waste to energy is 4%. With the introduction of separate food waste collections we hope to increase the recycling rate by 5-10%
South Eastern	Waste Contracts: All SEHSCT waste contracts are regional contracts let by BSO PaLS and all emphasise compliance with NI Waste Management Strategy with the aim of zero to landfill. Non-hazardous waste: All black bag and mixed dry recyclable waste is taken for sorting and recycling to one of two Material Recovery Facilities, there is no direct disposal to landfill. There is source segregation of mixed dry recyclables at a number of SET facilities and there is a programme in place to extend this to achieve financial efficiencies. At the sites where the volume of cardboard waste is sufficient to justify it, cardboard is compacted and baled for onward recycling – the current market rate is paid to the Trust by the contractor. Confidential Waste: Following security shredding by our authorised contractor, this waste is sent for onward recycling Bulky Skip Waste: The current contractor achieves approx. 40% recycling rate of bulky items – furniture etc. When this contract is due for renewal, continual improvement of recovery rates will be specified as one of the KPI's. Clinical Waste: The tender process is currently underway for the regional contract for the collection and treatment / disposal of clinical waste. A 'zero to landfill' solution has been emphasised. Training: South Eastern HSC Trust has an e-learning module on 'Environmental and Waste Awareness'. This includes an explanation of the Waste Hierarchy, emphasising waste elimination and minimisation before reduction, recycling, recovery, etc. This module forms part of the mandatory induction programme for all new staff and is also available as a refresher for existing staff. Food Waste: Relevant South Eastern HSC Trust staff are aware of the new NI Food Waste Regulations and will be working on projects to ensure the Trust will be fully compliant by the designated dates.
NIAS	The Northern Ireland Ambulance Service HSC Trust uses the regional waste contract wherever possible and segregates domestic waste into general waste and "Mixed recyclables". Packaging at our central stores is bundled and recycled. Disposable Batteries are recycled. Electrical waste is disposed of in accordance with WEEE regulations Specialist equipment is disposed of via the supplier. Garage waste, batteries, tyres, oil are disposed of via specialist contractors.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the implementation of the General Practitioners Work Force Planning Group Report recommendations.
(AQW 42276/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department is currently considering the recommendations of the General Practitioners Work Force Planning Group Interim Report. Increasing the number of GP trainees would, of course, require increased funding, and any decision would need to take account of the overall financial position of my Department. Therefore, no final decision will be taken until this work has been completed.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 41185/11-15, to detail the developmental options being considered.
(AQW 42321/11-15)

Mr Wells: The options being considered are still policy under development and I am not in a position to outline them at present. The Terms of Reference for the review into the clinical negligence settlement management process will be developed once all the options have been considered.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 41053/11-15, for his assessment of the equality implications of such decisions that restrict services from a departmental and regional perspective.
(AQW 42322/11-15)

Mr Wells: As indicated in my response to AQW 41053, each HSC Trust is a public authority for the purpose of Section 75 of the Northern Ireland Act, and accordingly is required to have its own equality scheme in place setting out its arrangements for implementing the statutory equality duties. The decision taken by the South Eastern HSC Trust to change its community meals service does not have implications outside the Trust area. I am satisfied that the South Eastern HSC Trust has complied with its duties in accordance with its own equality scheme. It completed an equality screening exercise in January 2013 on the proposed community meals service. A further equality screening exercise was undertaken in January 2015 following the award of the tender. The Trust is committed to monitoring the implementation of the proposal on an ongoing basis, and if necessary will reassess the equality screening in light of that monitoring.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the review into the Supplement for Undergraduate Medical and Dental Education.
(AQW 42323/11-15)

Mr Wells: A review into the Supplement for Undergraduate Medical and Dental Education is scheduled to be carried out by my Department in 2015-16. The review will consider a range of issues associated with the current SUMDE funding allocation model.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when the Health and Social Care Board will make a decision on residual demand funding for Health and Social Care Trusts, specifically in relation to Action on Hearing Loss Hear to Help services operating in each Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 42324/11-15)

Mr Wells: In view of the current financial challenges, my Department and the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) are jointly reviewing all non-recurrent funding.

I understand that depending on confirmation of funding for 2015/16 the HSCB is actively considering whether existing projects including “Hear to Help” could still be supported for a further period to provide the opportunity for evaluations to take place.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of children in the Western Trust Health and Social Care Trust with high medical needs, such as complex disabilities, life limiting diseases and terminal illnesses.
(AQW 42335/11-15)

Mr Wells: This information is not held centrally and was requested from the Western Health and Social Care Trust. They informed me that at 20th February 2015 there were 60 children on the caseload of the Community Children’s Nursing Team that would be considered to have complex healthcare needs in the Western Health and Social Care Trust area. This figure has not been validated by the Department.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on supported living provided by South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust at the former Ravara House in Kilcooley, Bangor.
(AQW 42337/11-15)

Mr Wells: The South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust has advised that it hopes to be in a position to resubmit a business case to the NIHE Supporting People Programme in the coming weeks.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the future of all nursing and residential care comes which fall under the auspices of each Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 42358/11-15)

Mr Wells: All Health and Social Care Trusts have completed their evaluation of the future role and functions of their statutory residential care homes against the regional criteria agreed by the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) in June 2014, following an extensive consultation process. In line with the regional process, all Health and Social Care Trusts have submitted their proposals to the HSCB. The Department is now working with the HSCB to consider how these proposals should be brought forward for consultation.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 41519/11-15, for his assessment of the health benefits and potential savings of implementing National Institute for Health and Care Excellence Clinical Excellence Guidance CG32.
(AQW 42359/11-15)

Mr Wells: In my previous answer I advised that The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) Clinical Guideline 32 (CG32) regarding Nutritional Support for Adults was published in February 2006 and that, as this predates the Department's formal links with NICE, CG32 has not been endorsed by the Department.

The Department has not, therefore, reviewed CG32 for its applicability and implementation within Northern Ireland at this time.

NICE are due to review CG32 in March 2016 and the Department will consider the guidance at that stage.

My Department continues to support the improvement of nutritional care of adults in Northern Ireland through 'Promoting Good Nutrition: A Strategy for Good Nutritional Care for Adults on all Care Settings in N Ireland; 2011-2016' which makes specific reference to NICE CG32.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the projected implications his Department's 2015/16 budget will have on community and voluntary organisations and their subsequent ability to provide vital frontline services to the public.
(AQW 42360/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department currently provides grant funding totalling £4,452,244 to voluntary and community organisations, some of which is allocated to the delivery of services. My officials are currently considering in detail what is provided, to whom and for what purpose and will provide me with an options paper on a way forward in 2015/16.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on Recommendation 2 of the North South Feasibility Study.
(AQW 42378/11-15)

Mr Wells: Substance misuse is an issue that affects jurisdictions right across the UK, British Isles, and Europe. It is therefore important that we work together to take consistent and co-ordinated action to prevent and address the harm related to substance misuse, and to tackle this societal issue. However, it should be noted that policies and strategies in the two jurisdictions differ, as do mechanisms for the commissioning and provision of services.

In order to look at areas of mutual interest, a joint North/South conference on alcohol misuse took place in January 2012. Following the event, at request of the Chief Medical Officers in NI and RoI, a North/South Alcohol Policy Advisory Group was established to assist collaboration. This Group's work, facilitated by the Institute of Public Health, is supporting information sharing, discussion and joint action. A paper on the availability of alcohol, on which the Group focussed initially, was presented to the NSMC Health and Food Safety Group for consideration. In addition, work is underway on joint protocols to address Hidden Harm and a joint project on alcohol outlet density mapping. I am also pleased that the two Health Departments jointly commissioned a research report on the potential impact of introducing a Minimum Unit Price for alcohol in both jurisdictions.

The British-Irish Council Substance Misuse Sectoral Group also provides a forum for discussing and taking forward joint work on substance misuse across all member jurisdictions. This has included identification, information sharing and agreeing a joint position on New Psychoactive Substances and supporting the development of agreed positions on EU, UN and International policy developments.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 32034/11-15, to detail the latest figures for (i) the number and value of unfitted insulin pumps; (ii) the date these pumps were purchased; and (iii) the date these pumps will become obsolete as a result of the removal of the manufacturer's warranty due to excessive storage periods, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 42385/11-15)

Mr Wells: The information is not collected centrally and was requested from the five Health and Social Care (HSC) Trusts. Their responses are provided below:

(i)

HSC Trust	Warranty
Belfast	From 1st April 2015, all Medtronic and Roche insulin pumps will have a 4 year warranty regardless of whether they are in storage or in use by a patient. Adult Animas insulin pumps will have a warranty of 2 years regardless of whether they are in storage or in use by a patient. Paediatric Animas insulin pumps have all been replaced with the latest version launched at the end of 2014. These have been given a 2 year warranty. From 1st April 2015, paediatric Animas pumps purchased in future will have a 4 year warranty.
Northern	Roche pumps have a 5 year warranty from date of commencement. From April 2015, Medtronic pumps will start a 4 year countdown warranty. From June 2015, Animas pumps will have a 2 year warranty.
South Eastern	The warranty on the eight remaining pumps expires at the end of March 2015.
Southern	The warranty on the remaining pumps expires on 1st April 2018.
Western	Roche and Animas pumps have a 4 year warranty from the date of pump start. Medtronic pumps have a delayed 4 year warranty which will start in April 2016.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the guidance from the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence on the use of insulin pumps is being fully implemented in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 42386/11-15)

Mr Wells: The NICE Technology Appraisal 151 on insulin pumps was endorsed by the Department in June 2009.

Insulin pump therapy has been implemented across Northern Ireland since 2010/11.

In 2011/12 an additional 1050 new and replacement pumps were purchased to be implemented over the following 4 to 5 years.

The most recent figures available show that 327 children and 450 adults are using insulin pumps. Further expansion in numbers using insulin pump users will continue for the next 2 years when the situation will be reviewed.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action he is taking to ensure the availability of insulin pumps in each Health and Social Care Trust meets the levels of demands and that resources will be available to protect the public investment by transferring pumps to other Trust areas where demand exists.
(AQW 42387/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is the responsibility of the Health and Social Care (HSC) Board and the HSC Trusts to ensure the availability of insulin pumps in each HSC Trust meets the level of demand. There is no impediment to HSC Trusts transferring pumps to other Trust areas where conditions allow and there is mutual agreement.

In 2011/12 an additional 1050 new and replacement pumps were purchased to be implemented over the following 4 to 5 years.

The most recent figures available show that 327 children and 450 adults are using insulin pumps. A further expansion in the number of patients using insulin pumps will continue for the next 2 years when the situation will be reviewed.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 32034/11-15, to detail the difference between insulin pumps that have been designated for adults and those designated for paediatric use.
(AQW 42388/11-15)

Mr Wells: Insulin pumps used by adults and children share the same technology and approach. The only difference between insulin pumps used by adults and children is the size of the pump and the accompanying consumables (e.g. tubing).

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, following the public rally supporting the Downe Hospital, whether he can provide an assurance that all services will be fully restored at the hospital and existing services safeguarded.
(AQW 42407/11-15)

Mr Wells: During that debate recent debate in the Assembly, when the future of both the Downe and Daisy Hill Hospitals were discussed, I referred to the assurances I have received from the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust that the Downe Hospital will continue to play a vibrant and vital role in the acute network which will deliver essential hospital services now and in the future. I am strongly of the view that the Downe Hospital is crucial to the local community and that it will continue to be an absolutely key component of healthcare for this area.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether, in relation to acute mental healthcare, (i) there is no suitable space, accommodation or environment at the South West Acute Hospital site; and (ii) the Tyrone and Fermanagh Hospital site continues to offer the appropriate environment and physical setting for the care of patients with acute mental health issues and if his Department will commit to this site for the delivery of acute mental health services into the future based on the excellence of patient care and the effective and efficient spending of public money.
(AQW 42447/11-15)

Mr Wells: The location of second mental health unit in the southern sector of the Western Health and Social Care Trust is subject to a business case which is currently being developed by the Trust. The business case will, as required, include a full options appraisal taking into account the essential requirements for high quality safe, effective, and robust adult mental health services for the people of Fermanagh and West Tyrone. This will include an evaluation of suitable space, accommodation and environment in reaching a determination on the preferred option.

Until this business case process is concluded, I will not be in a position to commit to the suitability or otherwise of any current facility.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether there is funding available within the Western Health and Social Care Trust to provide specialist wheelchairs and other necessary equipment for patients who are bed bound as a consequence of suffering from ME and/or Fibromyalgia.
(AQW 42449/11-15)

Mr Wells: Western Health and Social Care Trust (WHSCT) advised that dthe edicated funding is available for the provision of specialist wheelchairs and appliances for all clients whose functional skills and mobility are impaired through illness or injury and whose equipment requirements cannot be met through the Trust's Community Appliance Service.

The funding for the 2014/15 financial year has already been allocated and this has meant that some clients are experiencing delays in receiving specialist non-stock appliances. Trust staff endeavour to provide alternative solutions to minimise any risk to clients. Clients and carers with urgent needs are prioritised.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the approximate number of prescriptions issued in each of the last five calendar years.
(AQW 42463/11-15)

Mr Wells: The number of prescription forms and the number of prescription items, for which a prescription was written, dispensed by a community pharmacist, dispensing doctor or appliance supplier, and presented for payment in each of the last five calendar years, are shown in Table 1 below. Not all prescriptions issued are subsequently dispensed and presented for payment, so the number of prescriptions issued is not known centrally.

The figures shown are presented by the calendar year in which the prescription was paid to the pharmacist; it should be noted that there may be a time lag where prescriptions have been dispensed by the community pharmacist in a particular year but paid the following year. The data provided only covers drugs dispensed in primary care, as drugs prescribed and dispensed in hospital cannot be captured centrally due to the use of different hospital IT systems.

Table1: Number of prescription forms and prescription items dispensed in each of the last five calendar years

Calendar Year	Number of Prescription Forms	Number of Prescription Items
2010	20,149,112	35,366,062
2011	20,572,383	36,322,851
2012	21,424,191	37,841,141
2013	21,677,596	38,661,481
2014	22,235,510	39,687,529

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to outline the measures which have been taken to produce a targeted health promotion approach to raising awareness of the health and social care needs arising from sexual violence and abuse, since 2011.
(AQW 42486/11-15)

Mr Wells: Since 2011, my Department has brought forward a range of measures which provide support to victims of sexual violence and abuse and raise awareness of their health and social care needs. These measures include: the provision of the government 24 Hour Domestic and Sexual Violence Helpline; the development and establishment of The Rowan, Sexual Assault Referral Centre; and the provision of a regional sexual abuse counselling service through Nexus NI. My Department also established Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland and partners with the Children and Young People's Strategic Partnership to protect children at risk.

My Department's Sexual Health Promotion Strategy aims to improve, protect and promote the sexual health and well-being of the population of Northern Ireland, and provide information and training on the Sexual offences (Northern Ireland) Order 2008 to those in the HSC and voluntary and community sectors working in the field of sexual health.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given that it is proposed that the 95 per cent exceptionality criteria be removed in respect of access to specialist drugs, whether he anticipates any other percentage threshold.
(AQW 42505/11-15)

Mr Wells: My statement of the 17th February 2015 makes clear that is reasonable to expect clinicians to demonstrate some level of clinical exceptionality in order to allow wider access to this group of unapproved drugs. What we are seeking, and my Department's proposals reflect this, is that clinicians and other experts work together to agree an accepted definition of clinical exceptionality.

My Department is conducting a public consultation exercise on the proposed changes to the Individual Funding Request process. That consultation process will run until 8 May and following this we will aim to set out the details of the process going forward.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety when the first patient will receive access to medicine through the new Drugs Fund he announced on 17 February 2015.
(AQW 42523/11-15)

Mr Wells: I will be exploring every possible option for ensuring that the specialist medicines fund, announced on the 17th February, is established as quickly as possible. Officials are conducting a public consultation exercise on the question of the use of prescription charges to support a specialist medicines fund. That consultation process will end on 8 May. I can assure you that once the public has had its say on this important matter I will bring it to the Executive as a matter of urgency.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, given The Association of the British Pharmaceutical Industry statement at the recent Committee for Health, Social Services and Public Safety meeting that income to Northern Ireland from the Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme is likely to rise by an additional £30M next year, whether these additional funds could be used to fund a Specialist Drugs Fund.
(AQW 42543/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is not known how the £30 million figure referred to has been calculated. The payments made under the PPRS are based on primary care data for the spend on licensed branded medicines. It is then apportioned to each of the devolved administrations on the basis of the prescribing data for that country for the same period as the income relates. As the amount we will receive depends on the total amount we actually spend on licensed branded medicines it is not possible to calculate how much we are likely to receive next year.

I wish to establish a Specialist Medicines Fund on a sustainable basis for the longer term. Returns from the PPRS will continue to be re-invested to support pressures across HSC including those associated with the growth in branded specialist medicines.

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what care is available in each Health and Social Care Trust for people diagnosed with (i) ME; and (ii) Fibromyalgia Symposium.
(AQW 42584/11-15)

Mr Wells: Health and Social Care Trusts do not provide a specialist CFS/'ME' service, but GPs may refer to a wide range of specialists such as cardiology or neurology depending on the most prominent presenting conditions by the individual patient. Provision of services are determined on a case-by-case basis and tailored to the patient's need. Services for fibromyalgia are also provided on the same basis.

The Northern Health and Social Care Trust has completed a pilot condition management programme for CFS/ME. Emerging findings are positive and the option of replicating the service as part of a regional clinical network for CFS/ME is being considered, subject to discussion and available resources.

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety why the Northern Health and Social Care Trust changed their admission policy for adults with severe learning difficulties attending residential respite facilities.
(AQW 42588/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust has advised me that it has not made any changes to its admission criteria for any service users who are assessed as needing, and availing of, residential respite services.

The Trust is currently reviewing its provision of respite services in general with a view to improving respite provided to families caring for a service user with learning disabilities.

The Trust has been discussing this with service users and carers. The review has not been completed and will be subject to consultation thereafter.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether the failure to introduce the Meningitis B Vaccine Bexsero, following its recommendation by The Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation, is a breach of the National Health Service Constitution.
(AQW 42693/11-15)

Mr Wells: All four UK Health Ministers accepted the JCVI recommendation to introduce a Men B vaccination programme, subject to the vaccine being procured at a cost effective price.

At present the Department of Health England, acting on behalf of the whole UK, is engaged in a procurement process with the vaccine manufacturer. This process has taken longer than expected and is still ongoing.

DH England has a legal obligation, under the 2010 NHS Constitution, to offer new vaccines and make changes to existing programmes to the public that are recommended by JCVI and which are shown to be cost effective. The NHS Constitution only applies to NHS England and therefore any breach of the NHS Constitution would be a matter for the Secretary of State for Health, Jeremy Hunt.

Northern Ireland is under no obligation to implement any JCVI recommendation, however to date we have always implemented JCVI recommendations, subject to a vaccine being procured at a cost effective price.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of patients transferred from the South West Acute Hospital to other hospitals in the last twelve months, broken down by (i) treatment type; and (ii) reason for referral.
(AQW 42778/11-15)

Mr Wells: The number of patients transferred from the South West Acute Hospital to other hospitals in 2014 (1st January to 31st December), broken down by specialty is provided in the table below.

Specialty Description	Transfers
General Surgery	119
Anaesthetics	16
General Medicine	232
Rehabilitation	2
Cardiology	183
Paediatrics	25
Geriatric Medicine	67
Obstetrics	21
Gynaecology	4
Northern Ireland	669

Department of Justice

Mrs Hale asked the Minister of Justice whether he can ensure that all staff who availed of the Voluntary Exit Scheme were provided with the correct holiday entitlement.
(AQW 41999/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): All leavers, irrespective of their reason for leaving, have been paid excess annual leave at the rate stipulated in the Northern Ireland Civil Service HR Handbook.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Justice for his assessment of Prison Service staff morale.
(AQW 42052/11-15)

Mr Ford: Prisons can be difficult places to work and as a result staff morale can change from day to day. I understand this and greatly appreciate the work of the dedicated staff of the Northern Ireland Prison Service who deliver frontline services in that context.

There are a range of ways staff morale is kept under review including mechanisms which facilitate staff engagement with senior management. This is done at a local level (full staff briefings) and as part of the front-line forum meetings. The Director General and Director of HR visit each prison as part of the front-line forum meetings which bring together a cross section of staff – this is in addition to the regular visits to the prisons by the leadership team.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Justice how many Prison Service staff are currently on sick leave; and how this compares to each of the last five years.
(AQW 42053/11-15)

Mr Ford: The table below details the average working days lost per member of staff in each of the last five years.

The official absence figure for 2014/2015 is not yet known, however, absence levels to date in this year would indicate that there will be an increase when compared to the previous year.

NIPS Average Working Days Lost during the period 2010/11 – 2013/14

Period	Average Working Days Lost to Sickness Absence
2010/11	14.5
2011/12	15.2
2012/13	14.5
2013/14	13.8
2014/15 (April – January)	14.4

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, given prosecuting counsel in crown court matters are self-employed and drawn from a panel, whether they are bound by a set fee, a maximum fee or whether they command their own fee, in each case undertaken; and which area within his Departmental budget meets these fees.
(AQW 42074/11-15)

Mr Ford: The setting of fees for prosecuting council is a matter for the Public Prosecution Service. You may wish to direct your question to the Director of Public Prosecutions.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, following the dissident republican prisoner actions in Roe House and the associated protest outside HMP Maghaberry on Monday 1 February 2015, how many staff are, or have been, off sick as a result.
(AQW 42160/11-15)

Mr Ford: As fewer than five members of staff are on sick absence as a result of the incident at Maghaberry Prison on Monday 2 February 2015 the actual number has been withheld. This is to protect the identity of the individuals concerned as disclosure would be contrary to the Data Protection Act 1998.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41235/11-15, and with reference to the Compensation Payments – April – September 2013 publications on his Department's website, to detail the compensation paid to officers since October 2013 as per the format outlined to include the category, number of claims closed, compensation and costs.
(AQW 42163/11-15)

Mr Ford: The information in the format requested is contained in the tables below.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to offences being committed inside a prison facility, how the Prison Service decides what is to be adjudicated internally and what is a court matter
(AQW 42164/11-15)

Mr Ford: Where an alleged offence against prison discipline may constitute an offence in criminal law, due to the type and/or severity of the offence, it is referred to the Police Service for Northern Ireland for investigation with a view to considering criminal prosecution. In these cases the internal proceedings are adjourned, pending the outcome of the PSNI investigation.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice where court cases, that would have been held in Newtownards courthouse, will be held if the courthouse is closed.
(AQW 42171/11-15)

Mr Ford: As is made clear in the current consultation document, it is proposed that all criminal, civil and family court cases which originate within the Petty Session Districts of Ards and North Down will transfer to Belfast.

The published document also proposes that those Crown Court cases originating from the Petty Session Districts of Ards and North Down and currently heard at Downpatrick Courthouse, will transfer to Belfast. This will result in shorter journeys for many defendants, legal practitioners, jurors, victims and witnesses involved in these types of cases.

Likewise family court cases originating from within the Petty Sessions District of Downpatrick currently heard in Newtownards will, under the proposals, revert to Downpatrick courthouse. Again this should mean shorter journeys for many of those involved in these cases.

The consultation period runs until 30 April 2015 and I will listen carefully to the matters raised during this time. I intend to issue a response to the consultation, including decisions on the closures, in June 2015.

I do not expect that any closures will take place until 2016.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice to outline the timescale and consultation and decisions on the proposal to close a number of courthouses.
(AQW 42172/11-15)

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice how many prisoners are currently housed in HMP Maghaberry.
(AQW 42220/11-15)

Mr Ford: As of 18 February 2015, the number of prisoners in Maghaberry is 957.

There are currently 43 prisoners within Maghaberry who have satisfied the criteria to be held within Separated Republican Accommodation.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice how many prisoners housed at HMP Maghaberry are categorised as republican.
(AQW 42221/11-15)

Mr Ford: As of 18 February 2015, the number of prisoners in Maghaberry is 957.

There are currently 43 prisoners within Maghaberry who have satisfied the criteria to be held within Separated Republican Accommodation.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice what were the total running costs of HMP Maghaberry, in each of the last three financial years.
(AQW 42222/11-15)

Mr Ford: The direct running costs of Maghaberry Prison for the last three financial years are listed in the table below:

	2011-12 £'000	2012-13 £'000	2013-14 £'000
Net Expenditure	56,785	54,941	51,065

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Justice how his Department will measure any impact on crime rates of the budget cuts to Railway Street drug addiction service.
(AQW 42233/11-15)

Mr Ford: Discussions are ongoing with the Northern Health and Social Care Trust regarding future provision of the Railway Street Addiction Service.

The Chief Constable is operationally responsible for tackling crime and resourcing each policing district to do so. The PSNI will continue to measure crime in the Ballymena area and publish these figures.

However, it should be recognised that there are many factors that influence offending and crime rates. Substance misuse is one of those factors and this leads to difficulties in isolating any one factor which impacts on crime rates. Other factors may include crime prevention initiatives already in place.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, if Magherafelt Magistrates Court cases are to transfer to Dungannon Court House for hearing, how the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service intends to cope with the additional vehicles in a car park which is not currently accommodating existing vehicle levels.
(AQW 42238/11-15)

Mr Ford: Under the court rationalisation proposals, it is expected that the transferring business from Magherafelt Magistrates' Court will generally be accommodated on those days which currently have lower volumes of court users attending court. In this context I would not anticipate that the proposals will impact substantially on the current levels of traffic which might be expected on an individual day.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41235/11-15 and with reference to the Compensation Payments – April – September 2013 publication on the departmental website, to detail the compensation paid to paid to prisoners, civilian staff and members of the public, since October 2013 as per the format outlined and to include, Category, Number of Claims Closed, Compensation and Costs,
(AQW 42239/11-15)

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether an offence committed by a prisoner, that is adjucated within the prison facility in which the offence was committed, is added to the prisoner's criminal record.
(AQW 42240/11-15)

Mr Ford: The adjudication process within the prison system is used as a means of addressing breaches against Prison Rules. It is not run as a court of law and therefore offences against discipline are not added to a prisoner's criminal record.

On occasions where the offence committed against Prison Rules is deemed of a serious nature, the Governor has the discretion to refer the matter to the PSNI; in these instances, if the matter is progressed through the court system, it may be added to an individual's criminal record.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice how many prisoners are currently housed in HMP Magilligan.
(AQW 42279/11-15)

Mr Ford: The prisoner population in Magilligan prison on 20 February 2015 was 526.

Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) establishments do not have a maximum operational capacity. Each establishment has a Certified Normal Accommodation figure and NIPS accommodates people in custody based upon the requirements of the courts.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice what is the maximum amount of prisoners that can be housed at HMP Maghaberry.
(AQW 42280/11-15)

Mr Ford: There is no maximum operational capacity for Maghaberry Prison. As Northern Ireland's only adult male committal prison the Prison Service is required to house all prisoners committed to Maghaberry from the courts.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice what is the maximum amount of prisoners that can be housed at HMP Magilligan.
(AQW 42281/11-15)

Mr Ford: The prisoner population in Magilligan prison on 20 February 2015 was 526.

Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) establishments do not have a maximum operational capacity. Each establishment has a Certified Normal Accommodation figure and NIPS accommodates people in custody based upon the requirements of the courts.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice how many prison officers are employed at HMP Maghaberry.
(AQW 42282/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are currently 672 prison officers employed at Maghaberry Prison. Not all of these staff work full-time hours so this equates to 668.54 Full Time Equivalents.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Justice how many prison officers are employed at HMP Magilligan.
(AQW 42283/11-15)

Mr Ford: There are currently 298 prison officers employed at Magilligan Prison. Not all of these staff work full-time hours so this equates to 297.20 Full Time Equivalents.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41604/11-15, whether all departmental and courts service staff are aware of the requirement not to abuse disabled parking bays, even on private departmental property.
(AQW 42286/11-15)

Mr Ford: Staff are not formally made aware of the requirement not to use disabled parking bays. However, there is an expectation that staff will respect the purpose for which these bays are provided.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41129/11-15, whether the prisoner in question will be held liable for these costs; and if so, as opposed to an immediate warrant situation, whether they could be recouped from prison earnings.
(AQW 42287/11-15)

Mr Ford: The only cost to the Northern Ireland Prison Service (NIPS) in this case was for returning this prisoner from Belfast City Airport to Maghaberry Prison in a Prisoner Escorting and Court Custody Service (PECCS) vehicle.

PECCS is responsible for the transportation of prisoners throughout Northern Ireland including to hospital when prisoners have self- harmed or transportation to Courts when they have been charged with other offences.

These, together with returning prisoners to custody, from periods of UAL, are normal operational duties and NIPS will not seek to recoup these costs.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41406/11-15, whether the Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service and his Department consider the extra 12 vehicles were (i) obstructive and restrictive to the flow and manoeuvring of traffic; and (ii) placing the car park at over capacity.
(AQW 42289/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service does not consider that the 12 additional vehicles parked outside of designated parking bays were obstructive or restrictive to the flow and manoeuvring of traffic. G4S Secure Solutions (UK) Ltd staff were present in the sanger to monitor car parking and the review of the Closed Circuit Television shows vehicles moving freely through the car park. The car park is marked for 96 spaces and the overflow of cars was facilitated by using the limited additional capacity of kerbside parking.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41411/11-15, to address points (i) and (ii) of the question in respect of the differences in sentencing outcomes if brought to court by charge sheet or Public Prosecution Service summons.
(AQW 42291/11-15)

Mr Ford: Summonses and charge sheets are no more than the mechanisms to bring cases before the magistrates' courts. A charge sheet will be used for a person who has been arrested and charged with an offence. Where a person is not charged, they may be reported for prosecution to the Public Prosecution Service, who may then initiate proceedings by way of summons. The decision to charge or submit a file to the Public Prosecution Service is an operational matter for the police.

Sentencing is a separate consideration based on the outcome of the prosecution, not how the case was brought to court.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41078/11-15, to detail the breaches of the rule of being in possession of an unauthorised article in each prison, over the last four years.
(AQW 42294/11-15)

Mr Ford: The statistics requested are set out in the table below:

	2011	2012	2013	2014
Maghaberry	239	328	626	392
Magilligan	169	183	208	251
Hydebank	297	227	343	327

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41134/11-15, to detail (i) the finds which caused concern; and the (ii) actions taken as a result.
(AQW 42296/11-15)

Mr Ford:

(i) Examples of finds that would give concern would be illicit drugs, prescribed medication (illicitly held), weapons, mobile phones or cash.

(ii) These matters are dealt with as a breach of prison rules; the Governor will consider each case at adjudication. Awards for guilty verdicts can range from a caution to a maximum of 14 days cellular confinement as well as loss of other privileges. Serious matters, e.g. finds of significant amounts of drugs, will be referred to the PSNI.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Justice how many young offenders in each of the last three years were from a foster care background.
(AQW 42357/11-15)

Mr Ford: When Young Offenders are committed to Hydebank Wood they are inducted through a committal process. However, this does not include researching if they have a foster care background.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41712/11-15, why this is not suitable for consideration given the role of prisons is purportedly to rehabilitate, but also from the perspective of responsibility of public safety.
(AQW 42369/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Criminal Justice (NI) Order 2008 changed the law introducing determinate, indeterminate and extended custodial sentences. Where the court has imposed an indeterminate or extended sentence for public protection, release is at the discretion of the Parole Commissioners in Northern Ireland. They must be satisfied before directing release that it is no longer necessary, for the protection of the public from serious harm, for the offender to continue to be confined to custody.

To create a statutory provision to attach release to a requirement for rehabilitative engagement may in effect turn every prison sentence into an indeterminate sentence.

The approach allows the Northern Ireland Prison Service and its partners to work with individuals to address their offending behaviour, support rehabilitation, and promote desistance from crime on release into the community.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice what past experience the Northern Ireland Prison Service change managers have in situations such as Roe House, compact arrangements for separated prisoners and prisoner stand-offs to the degree which recently occurred in HMP Maghaberry; and what is the role of the change managers in respect of these matters.
(AQW 42370/11-15)

Mr Ford: The incident on 2 February reinforced the challenges of having separated areas for some prisoners in Maghaberry Prison. These are unique challenges and their successful management is dependent upon the combined skills and experience of all senior managers in the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

The Organisational Change Manager for the Northern Ireland Prison Service is part of the senior management team that leads that response.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41713/11-15 , given this figure is extremely low against the number of court bail breaches in which sureties are lodged, will he take action to ensure that such sureties are seized.
(AQW 42372/11-15)

Mr Ford: The estreatment of bail against either the principal parties or sureties in a case is a judicial decision.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice when he will be in a position to table proposals to the Executive regarding securing the necessary capital funding to rebuild Magilligan Prison.
(AQW 42383/11-15)

Mr Ford: NIPS Officials are continuing to work closely with Finance colleagues from the DOJ, following approval of the Outline Business Case for the Redevelopment of Magilligan on 9 January 2015.

I will continue to engage with the Minister for Finance and Personnel colleagues on the options available to deliver this important project.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to the case of Dwayne Mullan and his sentencing at Dungannon Magistrates Court in November 2014, for his assessment of the Pre-Sentence Reports compiled by the Probation Board of Northern Ireland, and the various recommendations by a number of agencies contained therein.
(AQW 42434/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Probation Board for Northern Ireland is operationally independent of my Department. A Pre-Sentence Report is provided by a Probation Officer at the request of the Courts in order to assist Judges with their sentencing decisions.

It would not be appropriate for me to comment on the content of an individual Pre-Sentence Report.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Justice to detail the amount of money spent on Limavady Court House on maintenance and repairs in each of the last five years.
(AQW 42467/11-15)

Mr Ford: Total costs for maintenance and repairs for Limavady courthouse in each of the last five years are outlined below. The spend includes planned maintenance works which consist of statutory testing in relation to Legionella prevention and Fire Alarm testing. Grounds maintenance, pest control and external cleaning also fall under the maintenance spend. Work carried out between 2009 - 2011 included security enhancements.

	Maintenance and Repairs (£)
2009-10	107,594
2010-11	94,294
2011-12	29,790
2012-13	19,166
2013-14	10,958
Total Spend	261,802

Limavady Courthouse is not a listed building. The Northern Ireland Courts and Tribunals Service will work closely with Land and Property Services to ensure the courthouse is disposed of in accordance with Department of Finance and Personnel guidelines on the Disposal of Surplus Public Sector Property in Northern Ireland.

Mr Dallat asked the Minister of Justice what plans will be put in place to protect Limavady Court House as a listed building.
(AQW 42468/11-15)

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Justice what protocols are in place in prisons if a Prison Officer or staff member receives injuries due to (i) an incident with, or assault by, prisoners; and (ii) an accident at work; and how are these incidents or accidents are recorded.
(AQW 42479/11-15)

Mr Ford: The response protocol for all injuries, whether to staff or prisoners, will be proportionate to the injuries received. Major incident protocols include an initial response from local First Aiders, support from local Healthcare staff and calling the Emergency Response Services.

Minor incidents can be dealt with by First Aid staff with staff released to attend either their GP or A&E department if required. Sufficient First Aid staff and kits are available throughout work locations.

All accidents or incidents are recorded in accident books and monitored by the local health and safety staff at each establishment. Local line managers complete health and safety documentation on individual accidents and incidents.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to the community placement of John McDermott, (i) whether an error was made in this matter; (ii) whether a review has been conducted into its handling; and if so, (iii) what is the nature and purpose of the review.
(AQW 42480/11-15)

Mr Ford: As has been stated previously, the Probation Board for Northern Ireland does not comment on individual cases.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, given his release was subject to stringent terms, why Eamon Foley has not been returned to custody for refusing to sign the Sex Offender Register.
(AQW 42481/11-15)

Mr Ford: The alleged breach of notification requirements under the Criminal Justice Act 2003 was brought before the courts by PSNI. The decisions in relation to these proceedings are entirely a matter for the court.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41232/11-15, whether this Risk Assessment template is standard for all prisoners seeking temporary leave.
(AQW 42483/11-15)

Mr Ford: This Risk Assessment template is specific to life sentence prisoners applying for temporary leave.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41789/11-15, for a breakdown of the category of sex offender in each district.
(AQW 42487/11-15)

Mr Ford: The data requested is provided in the table below:

Police District	A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H
Category 1	115	265	137	141	162	107	147	114

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 42083/11-15, whether this is being dealt with as an internal prison charge or a an external court matter.
(AQW 42625/11-15)

Mr Ford: The prisoner charged with the offence of "Disobeys a Lawful Order (Rule 32 Paragraph 22)" as a result of the incident in Roe House on 2 February 2015 will be dealt with as an internal charge against prison discipline.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41875/11-15, whether there was no verbal communication of mistaken identity.
(AQW 42627/11-15)

Mr Ford: As outlined in my answers to all the previous questions on this matter, Probation Board for Northern Ireland does not comment or issue statements in respect of specific cases.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Justice to clarify the legal position in relation to non payment of parking charge notices issued by private companies on private lands such as retail parks.
(AQW 42730/11-15)

Mr Ford: This is not a matter for the Department of Justice. My responsibility for parking on private land is limited to ensuring that those who carry out vehicle immobilisation are properly licensed by the Security Industry Authority. I have no remit in relation to parking issues.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Justice for an update on the future of the site of the former Donaghadee police station.
(AQW 42759/11-15)

Mr Ford: The management of the PSNI estate is an operational matter for the Chief Constable, for which he is accountable to the Policing Board. I am committed to respecting the operational independence of the Chief Constable and the role of the Policing Board.

I would refer you to the Chief Constable.

Department for Regional Development

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Regional Development how much NI Water has spent on (i) diaries; (ii) calendars; (iii) advertising; and (iv) other merchandising items, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 40566/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): In the last five financial years NI Water has not incurred any expenditure on diaries and calendars in connection with advertising the company. Nor has there been any expenditure on "other merchandising".

In total, NIW has spent £1,111,134 on various forms of advertising over the last five financial years. This spend has been divided between statutory public notices and spend on major public awareness campaign such as the 'Beat The Freeze' campaign, the 'Don't Wait, Insulate' campaign, the 'Water Efficiency' campaign and the 'Bag it and Bin It' campaign.

Details of spend on advertising is set out in Table 1.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) how many employees of Translink are entitled to free transport; (ii) whether free transport is also available to their families; (iii) if so, how many families can access free transport; and (iv) what was the cost in each of the last five years.
(AQW 40793/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The provision of free travel to staff and their dependants is the industry norm for transport companies and is part of agreed staff terms and conditions in Translink. It is important to say that Translink has advised that when it became an integrated organisation in 1995-96 it carried with it staff travel concessions similar to other public transport operators. The travel concession is considered to be common practice in the transport sector. The subsequent extension of the scheme for spouses and partners was introduced in June 2001 and extended to dependants with effect from September 2006. These concessions have formed an integral part of the wage offer negotiated with Union representatives.

(i) There are currently 3,972 employees of Translink who are entitled to free transport;

(ii) Free transport is available to their families.

This facility is extended to spouses and partners of staff, as well as dependent children from 5 – 16 years. This entitlement comes into effect once a member of staff has satisfactorily completed a 6-month probationary period. Travel is restricted for dependants to Monday – Friday after 18:00 hours, all day Saturday and Sunday, all day during school holiday periods.

(iii) 1,098 families have access to free transport;

(iv) In relation to the cost of travel made using these cards to the organisation, Translink does not extract this type of usage data from its information management systems for this group of individuals. The number of individual journeys made using such passes is recorded as part of its periodic passenger journey information, which is sufficient for business needs. For these reasons quantification of the cost is very difficult.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 38745/11-15, (i) how much has been spent on the resurfacing works on the Sandown Road, east Belfast, to date; and (ii) what appraisal mechanisms are in place to ensure the standard of the work is of a sound and consistent nature.
(AQW 41490/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: To date, my Department has spent £292,139.36 on resurfacing of the Sandown Road and a further £15,000 has been spent on the construction of a new Toucan Crossing at the Comber Greenway.

My Department employs a number of procedures to ensure that resurfacing works are carried out to a high standard. The Department employs quality assured contractors who have the appropriate technical expertise and experience, and the necessary resources to undertake this type of resurfacing work. The resurfacing materials specified for the Sandown Road are in accordance with national design standards e.g. the Design Manual for Road and Bridges. This helps to ensure the performance and durability of the carriageway. Officials supervise the resurfacing works using trained and experienced staff to make sure that resurfacing materials are laid and compacted in accordance with good industry practice. During this operation officials undertake a number of on-site tests to ensure the quality of the resurfacing material used. Based on the on-site supervision of the works and post completion inspection, I can confirm that the recent resurfacing works on the Sandown Road have been undertaken in accordance with industry good practice. Officials will inspect the completed works during the two year maintenance period to identify any possible defects and arrange for appropriate remedial action, should any be detected.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Regional Development whether the proposed flood alleviation scheme at Finaghy can be enforced under legislation; and whether it is subject to planning approval.
(AQW 41806/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: NI Water does have powers under the Water and Sewerage Services (Northern Ireland) Order 2006 to enforce the proposed flood alleviation scheme; however it is endeavouring to reach an amicable agreement with the Golf Club Committee to accelerate delivery of the project.

The requirement for Planning approval is dependent on the final design but following initial scoping meetings with DOE Planning Service, the majority of the works would not be subject to planning approval.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development how much money has been spent on upgrading footpaths in the Kilcooley estate in Bangor, over the last four financial years.
(AQW 41956/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department completed a footway reconstruction and upgrading scheme in Kilcooley Estate in 2011/12, at a cost of £145,000.

This work was in addition to the routine maintenance repairs carried out in the Estate over the past four years for which cost information is not readily available.

Mrs Hale asked the Minister for Regional Development whether there are any plans to extend the 30mph speed limit from Culcavy Road onto the Halftown Road, given its residential status.
(AQW 42184/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: One of the factors officials take into account when determining the appropriate local speed limit is the mean driven speed of vehicles on the road in question. Indeed, speed survey equipment is presently gathering such data for this stretch of road.

I have asked my officials to contact you with a view to arranging a meeting to discuss this matter as soon as the data has been analysed and a full speed limit review completed.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Regional Development what can be done to provide wheelchair accessibility from Adelaide Street Railway Station to Windsor Park football ground, given that there are two footbridges to cross when travelling to and from the stadium.
(AQW 42194/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can advise you that Translink is considering a project to redevelop Adelaide Halt and has appointed a design team to carry out a feasibility study. The aims of the project include:

- improving halt access and passenger facilities;
- making improvements to accessibility and Disability Discrimination Act compliance; and
- improving access and integration with proposed pedestrian path to Windsor Park Football Stadium.

Translink would intend to commence construction in 2017 and complete the project in 2018. However, the necessary approvals and funding must be secured before this can happen.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 36903/11-15, for an update on funding for a new Transport Hub at the former Waterside Train station.
(AQW 42228/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The creation of a mixed use transit hub which integrates and enhances the transport and travelling infrastructure of the city and its hinterlands is predicated upon securing a suitable site, and funding from European sources.

In this regard, my Department has worked extensively with official colleagues in Scotland and the Republic of Ireland to secure the inclusion of a €40 million Sustainable Transport thematic objective in the 2014-2020 INTERREG VA Territorial Co-operation Programme, which has recently been approved by the European Commission.

I expect calls to open for the INTERREG VA programme later this year and, subject to appropriate call criteria, my department intends to present a funding application for the project at this, or a subsequent, call.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the introduction of resident parking schemes.
(AQW 42253/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: In Belfast, my officials carried out a formal consultation on the implementation of Residents' Parking Schemes in the Lower Malone and the College Park Avenue/Rugby Road areas, between 29 October 2014 and 19 November 2014.

During this time they received a significant number of objections and representations on the two proposed schemes. Officials are currently considering and dealing with these objections and representations and plan to have met with the objectors by the end of March 2015. However, they cannot complete the remaining part of the legislative process for either scheme until the issues raised have been fully considered and dealt with. The earliest a scheme could be implemented on the ground in these areas would be within the 2015/2016 financial year, although this very much depends on a positive outcome to the consultation process.

In Londonderry, my Department is currently finalising the draft legislation for a Residents' Parking Scheme in Rossville Street prior to progressing to the consultation stage. The consultation period for this scheme is due to commence in March 2015. The timeline for delivery of the scheme will be dependent upon the outcome of the consultation exercise and nature of any objections. In the absence of any significant objections, the implementation process to deliver the scheme could commence in spring 2015.

A similar situation exists in Antrim, where the public consultation period is due to commence in early 2015. Once again, the timeline for the delivery of the scheme will be dependent upon the outcome of the consultation and nature of any objections.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development, in view of the number of fatalities on the stretch of the A26 from Dunsilly to Ballymena, whether he will commission a full safety review of this road.
(AQW 42254/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would firstly like to take this opportunity to express my sympathy to the family of the victim of the recent collision at the Woodgreen junction. I can assure you that road safety is my Department's TransportNI's highest priority.

As you will appreciate the exact circumstances of this collision are still under investigation by the PSNI, and my officials will be meeting with the relevant PSNI officers in the near future to determine if any additional traffic measures are appropriate at this location.

With regard to a safety review of the A26 from Dunsilly to Ballymena, I can confirm this dual carriageway will also be given detailed consideration, in conjunction with the PSNI, and that some initial investigatory work has already been undertaken.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the number of quangos linked to his Department on (i) 8 May 2007; and (ii) 11 February 2015; and how many people served on the quangos on these respective dates.
(AQW 42255/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department has responsibility for two arm's length bodies (ALBs): the Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company (NITHC); and Northern Ireland Water (NIW). Both of these ALBs were in existence in 2007.

NITHC is a public corporation; at 8 May 2007 its Board consisted of one Executive Director and seven Non-Executive Directors. At 11 February 2015 the NITHC Board consisted of two Executive Directors and six Non-Executive Directors.

NIW is a government-owned company; on 8 May 2007 its Board had three Executive Directors and four Non-Executive Directors; and on 11 February 2015 its Board had four Executive Directors and five Non-Executive Directors.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department plans to raise with Translink the lack of a direct bus service between Bangor and the Ards Peninsula.
(AQW 42317/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink, which has operational responsibility in regard to bus scheduling under its licence, has advised that there is a significant number of bus services that operate from the Ards Peninsula to Newtownards in particular and onwards to Bangor using a number of connections available. Full details of these are available on the Translink website, www.Translink.co.uk.

For Translink to provide additional services it would require evidence of demand to ensure any new service is financially viable. Translink continues to hold local stakeholder events such as the Meet the Manager Programme to monitor this.

However given the unprecedented financial pressures the budget available may result in an impact on frequency of some public transport services. Translink is currently reviewing its service provision in light of these funding constraints.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant AQW 41408/11-15, whether this taxi rank is available for the use of all taxis and not exclusively for the contracted firm.
(AQW 42371/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: As part of the fee paid by the contracted firm to Translink it has exclusive rights to access the taxi rank at Central Station.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development (i) how much has been spent on road resurfacing work on the (a) Upper Newtownards Road; (b) Sandown Road in the last twelve months; (ii) for his assessment of the work undertaken; and (iii) whether there are any plans to repair any remaining bumps or potholes.
(AQW 42374/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The works currently being carried out on the Upper Newtownards Road are associated with the Belfast Rapid Transit scheme and involve widening the carriageway slightly, associated utility alterations and resurfacing of the footways and carriageway. To date, £476K has been paid to the contractor with overall construction costs anticipated to be £855K.

To date, my Department has spent £292,139.36 on resurfacing of the Sandown Road and a further £15,000 has been spent on the construction of a new Toucan Crossing at the Comber Greenway.

The resurfacing materials specified for the Upper Newtownards Road and Sandown Road are in accordance with national design standards; for example, the Design Manual for Roads and Bridges. This helps to ensure the performance and durability of the carriageway. Officials supervise the resurfacing works using trained and experienced staff to make sure that resurfacing materials are laid and compacted in accordance with good industry practice. During this operation officials undertake a number of on-site tests to ensure the quality of the resurfacing material used. Finally, officials will inspect the completed works during the two year maintenance period to identify any possible defects and arrange for appropriate remedial action, should any be detected.

The Sandown Road and Upper Newtownards Road are inspected on a 4-week cyclical basis and anything which is considered to be hazardous to the public is identified and programmed for repair in accordance with established maintenance standards.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development what arrangements are in place to ensure that stones and gravel are cleared from the cycle lanes; and how often the cycle lanes on the Sydenham by pass and on the A2 Belfast to Bangor road are swept.
(AQW 42376/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The local Council is responsible for clearing stones and gravel from cycle lanes as part of its street cleansing function. Should my officials note any issues is relation to debris on the cycle lanes, or are made aware of any issues by members of the public, these are immediately notified to the appropriate local Council for action.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development what approximate percentage of Translink's annual expenditure is spent on (i) salaries, pensions and other associated costs; and (ii) fuel.
(AQW 42382/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The approximate percentage of Translink's annual expenditure for the relevant items is as follows:

	Percentage of Translink's Annual Expenditure
Salaries, wages, pensions, etc.	65%
Fuel	15%

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Regional Development what input his Department has had on the new P1 for planning application E/2013/0093/F, in relation to the number of traffic movements through local communities and villages considering the volume of water to be used and the volume of waste water produced.
(AQW 42419/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department was initially consulted on planning application E/2013/0093/F in August 2013. Since the original consultation there have been detailed discussions with the applicant's traffic consultants regarding haul routes, auto tracking, improvement to the junction of Ballinlea Road and Kilmahamogue Road, and improvements to the Kilmahamogue Road.

DOE Planning received an Environmental Statement and revised P1 form and my Department was further consulted on 19 February 2015. My officials will now be carrying out an assessment of the revised submission in terms of traffic generation and impact on the public road network.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the approval of a business case and funding allocation for Phase 3 of the replacement and extension of the Rossory Wastewater Pumping Station's existing pumped sewer.
(AQW 42421/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Phases 1, 2 and 3 of the Rossory Wastewater Pumping Station Project concentrate on sewerage system repairs and upgrading, as well as localised containment of odours.

Phase 3 involves replacement and extension of the Rossory Wastewater Pumping Station's existing pumped sewer to improve its hydraulic performance. This will also provide the benefit of diverting odorous sewage flows away from the problematic trunk sewer to a new discharge location. Site investigations and draft designs for two route options are now complete and both options are undergoing detailed consideration.

This project is funded within NI Water's PC15 Business Plan (2015 to 2021) and is part of the Utility Regulator's final determination. NI Water remains fully committed to addressing the odour problems customers are experiencing in the area as soon as practicable through the short, medium and long term measures.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what new road resurfacing schemes in Bangor are planned between now and the end of this financial year.
(AQW 42430/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would remind the Member that information on completed and proposed roads schemes for the current financial year can be found in my Department's Spring and Autumn Reports to Councils. These reports can be accessed from my Department's internet site at the following web address:

http://www.drdni.gov.uk/index/freedom_of_information/customer_information.htm

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what new road resurfacing schemes in Donaghadee are planned between now and the end of this financial year.
(AQW 42433/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer the Member to the answer provided in response to AQW 42430/11-15.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 41458/11-15, what assurances he can give that no public announcements made on trains or at Central Station advising that onward journeys are available through use of said taxi company as a transport partner, preferred operator or similar.
(AQW 42436/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised that it does not currently make any such public announcements, either on trains or in the Central Station concourse.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 41255/11-15, when the finished report into the project will be published; and whether there will be a consultation carried out.
(AQW 42466/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The final Route Optimisation Project report is currently scheduled to be available in August 2015. As the project does not involve a change to my Department's winter service policy, a consultation is not required.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Regional Development whether the report on the cause of the flooding in the Toome Road and Queen Street area of Ballymena has been published; and what potential solutions have been found.
(AQW 42534/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My answer under AQO 7446/11-15 advised that, at the request of the Flood Investment Planning Group, NI Water was preparing an investigatory report to look at the root cause of flooding and to develop potential solutions.

This report is now complete and a series of options to reduce the risk of flooding in the Ballymena area are being considered. NI Water will present the report to the Flood Investment and Planning Group at its next meeting in March 2015 to recommend a preferred option. On confirmation of the preferred option the scheme will then be progressed to detailed design stage.

It is estimated that a construction project could be ready to commence in 12 months with a further 12 month period required for construction. This outline timeframe will be subject to obtaining any statutory approvals, land purchase and the availability of funding.

Department for Social Development

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development whether the Housing Executive are allowed to source European funding for stock insulation issues.
(AQW 41336/11-15)

Mr Storey (The Minister for Social Development): The Housing Executive has not previously sought European funding for stock insulation issues. Advice was therefore sought from the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment and the Department of Finance and Personnel. I understand that the Northern Ireland European Regional Development Fund (ERDF) Programme for Investment in Growth and Jobs (2014-2020), which has recently been approved by the European Commission, provides no scope for funding stock insulation. In addition, the Northern Ireland ERDF Sustainable Competiveness Programme (2007-2013) is already fully allocated and therefore provides no scope for funding stock insulation.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 38453/11-15, to detail (i) the identity of the nine local providers that were market tested; (ii) how specifically each of these were market tested; (iii) the outcome or feedback of each of the market tests; (iv) the officials in the Northern Ireland Housing Executive that carried out market testing; (v) the most recent costs and companies involved with providing vehicles under a hire or lease agreement; (vi) the status of the arrangement with the two companies; and (vii) whether the contract has since been tendered through the traditional exercise, and if not, to outline the reasons.
(AQW 41581/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that in relation to:-

(i) The nine providers that were market tested were:

- Fleet Financial
- Lease Options
- Northgate
- Rent a Merc
- Van Hire Belfast
- Corrigans Vehicle Hire
- DFC
- Bridge Commercials
- Comber Commercial Centre

(ii) The Housing Executive's Corporate Procurement Unit telephoned each of the providers listed above. A brief description of the requirement was discussed and the providers were asked if they had the capacity and ability to meet the requirement in the necessary timeframe. At this stage four providers stated that they would not be able to meet the need and declined the opportunity to bid. The remaining five providers expressed an interest and were subsequently sent a brief specification stating the requirements on 9th April 2013. The five providers were Lease Options, Corrigans Vehicle Hire, DFC, Bridge Commercials and Comber Commercial Centre.

(iii) Of the providers who expressed an interest only two bids (Corrigans Commercial and Comber Commercial Centre) were subsequently received and logged.

(iv) The market testing was conducted by the NIHE's Purchasing Manager for Supplies and Services Procurement within the Housing Executive's Corporate Procurement Unit.

(v) The costs of the current agreements are commercially sensitive. The companies currently providing vehicles under hire or lease agreements are Corrigans Commercial and Ogilvie Fleet. Corrigans Commercial was the successful bidder at time of the market test. The vans currently provided by Ogilvie Fleet are as a result of the Housing Executive having to take over the delivery of a contract when a Contractor went into administration. The vehicles were part of an agreement between the previous Contractor and Ogilvie Fleet. The vans were essential in delivering services to tenants in these circumstances.

(vi) The two companies continue to provide vans on contract hire agreements.

(vii) The contract has not been tendered through a traditional exercise. This is because the Housing Executive was in the process of conducting a review of the number of vans required in the future for the delivery of essential services and the potential business structures for delivery of services. The Housing Executive has now confirmed the business need and a tender is currently being developed to test the market using a traditional tendering approach. It is estimated that this will take place in March 2015.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the support provided by the Social Fund and Community Care Grants system to working parents on a low income, who have a child with a disability.
(AQW 41862/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Social Fund scheme comprises a regulated element which provides entitlement to maternity, funeral, cold weather and winter fuel payments and a discretionary element made up of, Community Care Grants, Budgeting Loans and Crisis Loans. Subject to working parents on a low income satisfying the relevant qualifying conditions, they may be entitled to Cold Weather Payments, Community Care Grants, Budgeting Loans and Crisis Loans to meet the specific needs of a disabled child.

My Department's Annual Report on the Social Fund was published on 17 December 2014 and provides details of the £82 million paid out from the discretionary element of the Social Fund during 2013/14. The report highlights that over:

- 129,000 Budgeting Loans were awarded totalling £53.69 million
- 103,000 Crisis Loans awards totalling £14.45 million were made
- 20,000 Community Care Grants awards totalling £13.69 million were made

Information is not recorded separately on applications specifically related to disabled children, however, these figures are a clear indication that for thousands of people across Northern Ireland who are on low incomes, the Social Fund provides valuable assistance in helping them cope with unforeseen emergencies and managing unanticipated expenditure.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development to detail all planned scheme works for Mount Vernon, Belfast.
(AQW 41896/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that two major schemes are planned for Mount Vernon, Belfast in 2015 as follows:-

- Double glazing replacement scheme for approximately 110 dwellings;
- New fire door replacement scheme in Mount Vernon and Ross House.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development why the Warm Homes Scheme contract cannot be extended beyond 31 March 2015; and why it is suggested that rules of procurement are a barrier.
(AQW 41904/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Warm Homes Scheme contract was awarded to Bryson Energy and H&A Mechanical Services in July 2009 for 3 years with an option to extend the contract for 2 further years ending in June 2014. The Warm Homes Scheme contract was further extended by single tender award to 31st March 2015 to allow the new Affordable Warmth Scheme to bed in. There is no need to consider another extension of the Warm Homes Scheme as the new Affordable Warmth Scheme will be fully operational from 1st April 2015. If the Department had decided to continue with the Warm Homes Scheme beyond 31st March 2015 in favour of the Affordable Warmth Scheme then procurement of a new contract would have been necessary.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Social Development how much has been spent on repairs to damp in multi-storey flats in the last five years, broken down by constituency.
(AQW 42039/11-15)

Mr Storey: The table attached, provided by the Housing Executive, details the amount they have spent on repairs to damp in multi storey flats in the last five years (1 January 2010 to 31 December 2014) broken down by constituency.

Constituency	Total Spent
Belfast East	£2,461.99
Belfast North	£11,120.06
Belfast South	£22.50
Belfast West	£240.15
East Antrim	£359.13
Lisburn	£12,873.00
Strangford	£1,823.54
Total	£28,900.37

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Mr Spratt asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on management surveys carried out on multi-storey flats to assess the properties for asbestos.
(AQW 42040/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that their policy regarding asbestos is to have a survey carried out for all their properties and any other properties for which they have a maintenance responsibility. This includes tenanted, leasehold and communal shared spaces of multi storey flats. All 32 of their multi storey blocks have had a management survey completed for the communal shared spaces and surveys have also been carried out in a large number of individual flats. This will continue until all the flats have been surveyed. The Housing Executive has further advised that they maintain an asbestos register and manage asbestos and any works to be carried out in compliance with their obligations under legislation.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of households in fuel poverty in North Down.
(AQW 42070/11-15)

Mr Storey: This estimation is provided using the Fuel Poverty figures for Councils using the 2011 NI House Condition Survey.

It is estimated that in North Down in 2011, between 38% and 42% of households were in Fuel Poverty, this equates to between approximately 12,400 and 13,700 households.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 39423/11-15, whether landlords in receipt of housing benefit for tenants must be registered under the Landlord Registration Scheme; and if not, whether registered payments have been stopped or if there a final date for registration from the date of the introduction of the scheme or a timescale from the purchase of tne property to let to complete the registration.
(AQW 42077/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that receipt of Housing Benefit is not conditional on registration under the Landlord Registration Scheme.

Landlords are required to register either immediately prior to the letting of a new tenancy or by 25 February 2015 where there is an existing tenancy. Therefore by 25 February all private landlords should be registered and have provided information about the properties they let.

The Department's advertising campaign is encouraging all tenants to check that their landlord is registered and to report unregistered landlords to their local Council.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development what short term support grants are available for small voluntary charitable community groups to help cover the cost of providing transport for clients to and from day centres.
(AQW 42079/11-15)

Mr Storey: There is no specific funding to bring people to and from day centres.

DSD's Volunteering Small Grants Programme provides support direct to frontline volunteering organisations. The programme provides support to volunteer providing organisations to cover volunteer out-of-pocket expenses travel or equipment costs. In excess of £1.4m of funding has been allocated over the last two years supporting over 1300 organisations. The next phase of this programme is planned to launch in April / May 2015.

The Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) has confirmed that they work with the Department for Regional Development (DRD) to provide support for the Elderly and Disabled. Individuals receive concessionary travel on Rural Community Transport Partnership vehicles and DARD currently provides support to community and voluntary groups in rural areas.

In addition, the Health and Social Care Board has confirmed that they do not operate a grants scheme. However, some Health and Social Care Trusts may have service level agreements with local voluntary and community groups. These agreements may have statutory transport provided or have a transport element reflected in the contract or are designed for people who make their way independently to the Day Centre.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development what provision exists for small voluntary charitable community groups to enable them to bring people with psychological, physical and learning disabilities to and from day centres.
(AQW 42080/11-15)

Mr Storey: There is no specific funding to bring people with psychological, physical and learning disabilities to and from day centres.

DSD's Volunteering Small Grants Programme delivers support direct to frontline volunteering organisations. The programme provides support to volunteer providing organisations to cover volunteer out-of-pocket expenses travel or equipment costs and over £1.4m has been allocated over the last two years supporting over 1300 organisations. The next phase of this programme is planned to launch in April / May 2015.

In addition the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) has confirmed that they work with the Department for Regional Development (DRD) to provide support for the Elderly and Disabled. Individuals receive concessionary travel on Rural Community Transport Partnership vehicles and DARD currently provides support to community and voluntary groups in rural areas.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development, following the success of the renovation of a number of derelict dwellings in Ballysally, Coleraine, what progress is being made in the renovation of the remaining derelict dwellings in the estate.
(AQW 42129/11-15)

Mr Storey: Choice Housing Ireland has advised me that the Contract Notice for Phase 2 for the final 15 houses has been published in the European Journal (OJEU) for contractor applications. This closes next week and Choice Housing Ireland plan to issue the tender documentation to short listed contractors in the first week in March.

The Contract is expected to be awarded by the end of March 2015 with an anticipated completion date of October 2015.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Social Development when an adjustment is made to household income via tax credit, how the Housing Benefit Section within his Department is updated.
(AQW 42174/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that changes to Tax Credit awards made by HM Revenue and Customs are notified to the Housing Executive's Housing Benefit department via an automated electronic system known as ATLAS.

Files of information are received by the Housing Executive on a daily basis and over the course of a year approximately two million transactions are notified via ATLAS. Approximately 85% of the notifications are processed automatically and Housing Benefit awards adjusted accordingly by the Housing Benefit system with the remaining notifications being reviewed and updated manually by Housing Benefit staff in each of our Housing Benefit Service Centres. Whether a notification can be processed automatically or requires manual intervention depends on the type of change being notified.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of houses that have benefited from Housing Support Services through the Supporting People Programme in North Down since 2012.
(AQW 42176/11-15)

Mr Storey: Details of Supporting People schemes active in North Down, as at April 2012 and at present, are summarised below. These schemes have offered accommodation-based support and floating support (to clients in their own homes).

The information is based on schemes within the North Down and Ards Borough Councils - the two council areas which relate to the North Down parliamentary constituency.

The total capacity of these schemes has grown over the period as summarised in the table below:

	Capacity as at April 2012	Capacity at February 2015
Accommodation-based service	1,273	1,342
Floating Support	166	219
Total	1,439	1,561

I hope this information is useful.

The Information provided in this response is governed by the Principles and Protocols of the Code of Practice for Official Statistics. This is enforced by UK Statistics Authority.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Social Development how many Housing Executive properties are vacant in (i) North Down Borough Council; (ii) Donaghadee and Millisle; and (iii) Northern Ireland.
(AQW 42177/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that at 31 January 2015 in relation to:-

(i) There were 39 properties vacant in the North Down Borough Council area;

(ii) There were five properties vacant in Donaghadee and Millisle; and

(iii) There were 1,195 properties vacant across Northern Ireland.

The number of vacant properties listed includes those awaiting imminent relet, difficult to let, undergoing major repairs/ decanting, pending sale, pending demolition etc.

Mr Devenney asked the Minister for Social Development what his Department is doing to ensure that advice services such as the Citizens Advice Bureau are sustained with the possibility of an increase in demand following Welfare Reform.
(AQW 42197/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department provides funding of £2.9 m each year for advice services to organisations such as Citizens Advice Bureau and other independent advice providers. This includes provision of frontline advice services in over 45 locations across Northern Ireland which are free to the user.

Social Security Agency officials have met with representatives from the Northern Ireland Advice Services Consortium (NIASC) to discuss implementation of the Welfare Reform Bill. Officials and NIASC will continue to work together to explore the way forward.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on a strategy for the delivery of generalist advice services.
(AQW 42199/11-15)

Mr Storey: Work on developing the new strategy 'Advising, Supporting, Empowering – A strategy for the delivery of generalist advice services in Northern Ireland 2015 – 2020' is at an advanced stage. Consultation with members of the public and other stakeholders has now been completed and it is anticipated that the new strategy will be launched in early summer 2015.

Mr McCallister asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the claim that Supporting People saves the public purse in excess of £125m per annum; and what discussions he has had at Executive level on the retention of the Programme.
(AQW 42229/11-15)

Mr Storey: The study "The Financial Benefits of the Supporting People Programme in Northern Ireland" commissioned by the Northern Ireland Council for Voluntary Action (NICVA) used a methodology which offers estimates based on a range of assumptions. While the approach does not offer the necessary rigour required to provide a firm basis for making public spending decisions, it does helpfully point to the importance of the Supporting People Programme and the role it plays in transforming people's lives for the better.

At present the Department is carrying out a Review of the Supporting People policy which will be completed by the summer. This review will help to determine the future shape of the Supporting People Programme. To date I have not discussed the Programme at the Executive.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Social Development what is the total cost to Northern Ireland of not levying the bedroom tax as happens in England and Wales.
(AQW 42256/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Welfare Reform Bill has now completed both Consideration Stage and further Consideration Stage and the Assembly has approved the provisions which provide the power to restrict the maximum amount of housing benefit payable in specific circumstances. The Executive has also agreed a scheme that should be developed which will protect both existing and new tenants from the impact of this specific provision. They have also agreed to create a separate fund for this purpose and my officials are currently finalising the detail of how such a scheme could operate.

This will be subject to a public consultation and regulations brought forward to put the scheme into operation. Whilst the initial estimated costs put the costs of this type of scheme in the region of £17 million for existing tenants, my officials will not be able to finalise the costs until the impact of new tenants and increased rents have been included in the estimates.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development whether there are any changes planned to the protected tenancies scheme before May 2016.
(AQW 42261/11-15)

Mr Storey: There are currently 1,065 protected tenancies on the rent register. These are tenancies which are controlled by the Rent Officer for Northern Ireland. The majority of tenants in protected tenancies are elderly people who have been resident in these properties for decades.

As a result of the measures introduced under the 2006 Private Tenancies Order protected and statutory tenancies are gradually being phased out. Rather than immediately abolishing protected tenancies the gradual phasing out has the advantage of eventually removing these tenancies, that some landlords may feel are restrictive, whilst still allowing the tenant their day in the property. This approach protects existing vulnerable tenants whilst at the same time reforms a process that is viewed, by some, as antiquated and outdated.

On a separate note, Rent Control is one of a number of issues that are under consideration in the review of the role and regulation of the private rented sector which I announced in November 2014. Any proposals as a result of this review will be issued for public consultation in autumn 2015.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Social Development how many sanctions, which have resulted in financial penalties, have been applied to people claiming benefits, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 42271/11-15)

Mr Storey: The information is not available in the format requested.

Information on the number of sanctions applied where claimants fail to comply with the prescribed conditions for receiving a particular benefit is only available from May 2011. The details are set out in Table 1 below.

Details of the number of Administrative Penalty and Loss of Benefit sanctions that have been applied in respect of benefit fraud offences are set out in Tables 2 and 3 below. Information on loss of benefit sanctions was only captured from September 2012.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 40785/11-15, whether the eligibility criteria for receiving measures to increase energy efficiency under the Warm Homes Scheme has changed since 2012/13.
(AQW 42332/11-15)

Mr Storey: The eligibility criteria for the Warm Homes Scheme have not changed since 2012/2013.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 41066/11-15, what recent engagement he has had with members of the Joint Government/Voluntary and Community Sector Forum; and to detail the number of times the Joint Forum has met in the last twelve months.
(AQW 42334/11-15)

Mr Storey: In October 2014 I met with Anne O'Reilly and Marie Cavanagh, who are the Voluntary and Community Sector Co-Chairs on the Joint Forum.

I also attended the most recent Joint Forum on 18 February 2015 and on both these occasions emphasised the importance of closer working relationships and partnership working between Government and the Voluntary and Community Sector.

The Joint Forum has met on three occasions in the last twelve months.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the housing association new build for the Kilclief Gardens area of Kilcooley, Bangor.
(AQW 42336/11-15)

Mr Storey: Ark housing continues to progress plans to deliver 16 general needs social homes on Housing Executive owned land at Kilclief Gardens, Bangor. Ark's application for Project Approval to the Housing Executive's Development Programme Group which was submitted on 13th February 2015 is currently being assessed.

Ark's Planning application (submitted June 2014) has been "streamlined" and we therefore expect Planning Approval to be achieved before the end of March 2015.

The Housing Executive is also working closely with Ark to finalise the land transfer and we anticipate that this scheme will start on site before the end of March 2015. Completion is currently estimated for June 2016.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development how many houses have yet to be allocated in Clanmil Housing Association's new development in Bloomfield Estate, Bangor.
(AQW 42338/11-15)

Mr Storey: Clanmil Housing Association has confirmed that all of their properties in their development in Bloomfield estate, Bangor have been allocated.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the progress of the pensioners' bungalows at Ballyree Drive in Bloomfield Estate, Bangor.
(AQW 42339/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive transferred the ownership of 72 bungalows at Ballyree Drive in the Bloomfield Estate in Bangor to OakleeTrinity in June 2014. Although ownership has transferred, the Housing Executive is committed to holding regular meetings with OakleeTrinity to monitor the progress of the improvement scheme.

OakleeTrinity have provided the following update on the progress of the scheme:

- Contract Start date: Monday 30th June 2014
- Duration: 83 Weeks
- Expected Completion Date Monday 01 February 2016

The Programme is approximately 12 weeks behind schedule due to some delays in Phase 1 and difficulties with utility connections. The project is approximately 20% complete with work progressing at 24 (33%) of the properties.

Phase 1 of the works (12 properties) is nearing completion and these are expected to be handed over in early March 2015. Phase 2 (12 properties) is progressing well with an expected handover date in early April 2015.

Tenants have been decanted to vacant units in Bloomfield and Rathgill for the duration of the works to their homes. Ten properties in Phase 1 will be void on completion and it is proposed to offer the decanted tenants in Phase 3 a permanent move.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development whether any housing associations have plans for new build housing in the Rathgill area of Bangor.
(AQW 42340/11-15)

Mr Storey: Fold Housing is currently progressing plans to deliver 102 new general needs social homes on Housing Executive owned land in the Rathgill area of Bangor.

Fold's application for Project Approval to the Housing Executive's Development Programme Group which was submitted on 13 February 2015, is currently being assessed.

Fold's Planning Application (submitted October 2014) was endorsed at Council on 10 February 2015 and we expect Planning Approval to be achieved before the end of March 2015.

The transfer of the land from the Housing Executive to Fold is expected to complete in time to allow the scheme to start on site before the end of March 2015. Completion is currently estimated for July 2017.

Phase two of the development, currently programmed for 2016/17, is for 50 units and this will also be delivered by Fold on Housing Executive owned land.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) what procurement process the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland is required to follow in respect of the appointment of an interim manager; and (ii) under what circumstances the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland is required to seek Ministerial approval.
(AQW 42364/11-15)

Mr Storey:

(i) The Charity Commission for Northern Ireland complies with Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) policies and procedures.

(ii) The Charity Commission for Northern Ireland is not required to seek Ministerial approval regarding the appointment of an Interim Manager.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development to detail (i) what procurement process was followed in respect of the appointment of an interim manager for the Disabled Police Officers Association of Northern Ireland; (ii) the engagement of the same firm to carry out a forensic audit of the Association and the engagement of an IT security firm to extract information from the Association's computer and mobile telephones; (iii) why tendering was not considered appropriate; and (iv) what consideration was given to whether a conflict of interest might have been created.
(AQW 42365/11-15)

Mr Storey: The question concerns a matter, which is the subject of an ongoing investigation by the Charity Commission in respect of an organisation of which Mr Hussey is a member, therefore it would be inappropriate to make any comment at this time.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development who in the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland is responsible for any failure to follow correct procurement procedures.
(AQW 42366/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Chief Executive of the Charity Commission, as Accounting Officer, is responsible for the administration and control of the Charity Commission.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 40865/11-15, whether he will review his response more specifically by (i) referring to the interim manager rather than the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland; (ii) by referring to any power to share information with persons other than public bodies; and (iii) whether any such order was actually made by the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland.
(AQW 42398/11-15)

Mr Storey: I refer the Member to my answers to AQW 40865/11-15 and AQW 41570/11-15.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Social Development whether the proposed hardship top up fund will fully compensate any individuals who may lose all their benefits as a result of Welfare Reform.
(AQW 42424/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department is continuing to develop the eligibility criteria and level of payments that can be made from the allocated funds. This includes working through a number of different payment scenarios to identify the maximum level of support that can be provided to all affected claimants.

At this time it is not possible to confirm if claimants will receive a payment equivalent to the total loss in benefits that may be experienced as a result of Welfare Reform.

I can provide an assurance that, following agreement with Executive colleagues, the detailed proposals for providing additional financial support to those claimants adversely impacted by the Welfare Reforms, will be issued for public consultation.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development, following recent media coverage regarding the possible adverse consequences of retro fit cavity wall insulation, for his assessment of the impact this will have on homes in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 42462/11-15)

Mr Storey: Savills have been commissioned to undertake an extensive stock condition survey comprising of approximately one in four homes managed and maintained by the Housing Executive. This survey exercise will record the current condition of the Housing Executive's portfolio as well as considering issues such as thermal performance; it will not however involve intrusive investigations into cavity walls.

Through the asset commission, the Housing Executive has asked Savills for some general views in relation to the issues and challenges associated with cavity wall insulation. Savills has advised the Housing Executive that throughout the UK, social landlords almost without exception manage issues arising from cavity wall insulation on a responsive basis and this is the approach currently adopted by the Housing Executive.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Social Development to detail all works planned by the Housing Executive in Ballykeel, Ballymena in the next three years.
(AQW 42476/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that there are two External Cyclical Maintenance schemes planned for Ballykeel, Ballymena in the next three years.

These are:-

- A scheme involving 326 properties and 83 garages (Ballykeel and rural) is currently programmed to commence in May 2016; and
- A scheme involving 299 properties in Ballykeel is currently programmed to commence in November 2016.

Any properties that meet the criteria for a heating or kitchen upgrade will be identified by the Housing Executive's local office for inclusion in future schemes.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the rationale used to reduce the funding provided to the Areas at Risk programme for Beechfield Estate, Donaghadee.
(AQW 42490/11-15)

Mr Storey: Beechfield Estate, Donaghadee was allocated funding of £67,766.00 from the Areas at Risk programme for the 2 year period 1 April 2011 - 31 March 2013 (subsequently extended to 31 March 2014 at the request of the local community group). The allocation was increased to £85,207.84 following the decision to extend the Areas at Risk programme to 31 March 2015.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the criteria for the distribution of funds from the hardship top up fund.
(AQW 42504/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department is continuing to develop the eligibility criteria and level of payments that can be made from the allocated funds. As the criteria are not yet confirmed it is not possible to provide any further details at this time.

I can provide an assurance that, following agreement with Executive colleagues, the details of any scheme will be issued for public consultation. My department will also be communicating with claimants and the general public in Northern Ireland on the details of the changes to the benefit system brought about by the Welfare Reform Bill.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Social Development who will be responsible for the distribution of the hardship top up fund.
(AQW 42542/11-15)

Mr Storey: The arrangements necessary for the effective administration of the additional support identified as part of the Stormont House Agreement, will be dependent on the Executive agreement to the proposals which my department is currently developing. The current working assumption is that the Department for Social Development will have responsibility for the future administration of the additional support.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 41744/11-15, what assessment he has made of the impact on charities of the different approaches to the regulation of charities adopted in England and Wales and in Northern Ireland; and whether this approach to investigation adopted by the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland represents value for money.
(AQW 42545/11-15)

Mr Storey: I have made no assessment of the impact on charities of the different approaches to the regulation of charities adopted in England and Wales and in Northern Ireland.

The Charity Commission for Northern Ireland has a statutory function to identify and investigate apparent misconduct or mismanagement in the administration of charities and take remedial or protective action.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development whether funding for Small Pockets of Deprivation for Rathgill Community Association, Bangor will continue in 2015/16.
(AQW 42608/11-15)

Mr Storey: All government departments including DSD have had to take difficult decisions on how to allocate reduced resources. It is too early for me to say which projects will be supported during 2015/16 however my Department will allocate resources in line with its priorities and in doing so will seek to take account of the priorities of the new Councils.

Mr Ross asked the Minister for Social Development what sanctions are available for breaches of (i) liquor; and (ii) restaurant licences.
(AQW 42646/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Licensing (Northern Ireland) Order 1996 (the Order) is the legislation regulating the retail sale of alcohol in Northern Ireland.

There are 11 categories of premises which may be authorised by licence to sell alcohol. A restaurant is one of these categories.

Sanctions include fines, penalty points, imprisonment, and suspension of liquor licence.

Schedule 10A of the Order contains a table of offences which attract penalty points and also provides the general nature of the offences and level of fine. A copy of Schedule 10A is attached.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Social Development how he plans to ensure that the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and housing associations meet their obligations to address complaints of anti-social behaviour.
(AQO 7640/11-15)

Mr Storey: I am concerned about the serious problems that can be caused by anti-social behaviour. Community safety is a quality of life issue which impacts on all of society, individually and collectively and, whilst there are no easy solutions, I want to ensure that the Housing Executive and Housing Associations use all the powers available to them deal with this issue.

I would point out that Housing legislation in Northern Ireland provides all social housing landlords, including registered Housing Associations, with a common set of statutory tools for tackling Anti-Social Behaviour affecting or caused by their tenants or others residing with or visiting their tenants.

However, it should be recognised that Anti-Social Behaviour is not an issue which can be dealt with by one statutory agency working in isolation. It requires the intervention of all the relevant government bodies working closely with the community to deliver real results.

With regard to the Housing Executive, a Community Safety Strategy has been in place since 2008 and a public consultation in 2014 led to the development of “Safer Together”, the Housing Executive’s Community Safety Strategy 2015-17. This will be subject to bi-annual review at the Housing Executive’s Board level.

Non- statutory interventions include warning letters and mediation and the Housing Executive estimates that 70% of reported Anti-Social Behaviour cases cease following initial interview and the issue of a warning letter. Use is also made of an Acceptable Behaviour Contract – this is a voluntary written agreement between the Housing Executive and a person who has been involved in Anti-Social Behaviour.

The Housing Executive also tackles community safety issues through formal partnership working with Community Based Restorative Justice groups and involvement with Policing and Community Safety Partnerships.

Statutory Interventions include eviction, though this is viewed as a last resort. A range of interventions will be used in an attempt to keep the individual within their home, whilst at the same time addressing the offending behaviour. However, if these interventions do not work there are legal powers available to ensure victims of Anti-Social Behaviour are protected and the unacceptable behaviour is stopped. These range from injunctions to stop the nuisance or repossession of the property.

Turning to Housing Associations, my Department’s Housing Association Guide sets out the standards expected of all registered Housing Associations. The Guide places a requirement on all registered Housing Associations to have published policy and procedures for dealing with anti-social behaviour and provides a model statement of policy and procedures by way of guidance.

Within the Department’s inspection process, the Inspection Team reviews the anti-social behaviour policies and practices in place within registered Housing Associations to ensure that they comply with the Department’s guidance and that they are being applied effectively and consistently.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development why the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland considers it necessary to institute statutory inquiries at an early stage of its investigations.
(AQW 42747/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Charity Commission for Northern Ireland will institute a statutory inquiry under section 22 of the Charities Act (Northern Ireland) 2008 where there appear to be issues of substantial or serious risk to the assets or beneficiaries of a charity. Before the opening of a statutory inquiry is approved, at least three Charity Commissioners will consider the investigation to date, the nature of the areas of concern and the risk to the charity and the charity’s property. Where the charity trustees refuse to cooperate with the Commission in its investigations, the risk level increases and this is a factor in any decision to open a statutory inquiry.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on social housing development in Ballymena.
(AQO 7633/11-15)

Mr Storey: I thank the Member for his question.

I am aware that there is significant social housing need in the Ballymena area. The current projected housing need for 2014 to 2019 for the Ballymena District Council area is 566 units.

Work is ongoing to address this and I can advise you that to date, as part of the 2012/2013 to 2014/15 Social Housing Development Programme, 95 social housing units have been completed.

The Housing Executive is working with Housing Associations to ensure that the remaining 83 units programmed for delivery in 2014/15, will start on site before the end of this financial year. A further 377 units are planned between now and 2018, subject to budget.

Unfortunately, as is regularly the case, some schemes have slipped from the programme but it is expected that these will start on site as part of the 2015/16 programme.

Mr Hazzard asked the Minister for Social Development whether he will make up the current shortfall in the Neighbourhood Renewal budget for 2015/16.
(AQO 7634/11-15)

Mr Storey: Neighbourhood Renewal provides services to people living in our most deprived communities. In this difficult financial climate I am seeking to protect those projects which demonstrate most effectively that they are meeting the objectives of the programme. The process of assessing applications on the basis of evidence of need and impact of each project is currently ongoing.

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister for Social Development how any budgetary settlement will affect Town Centre Regeneration projects.
(AQO 7636/11-15)

Mr Storey: All government departments including DSD have had to take difficult decisions on how to allocate reduced resources. It is too early for me to say which projects will be supporting during 2015/16 however my Department will allocate resources in line with its priorities and will seek to take account of Council priorities.

Allocations for budgets to be transferred on 1 April 2016 have yet to be determined. These will be revisited during 2015 and the final decision on the budget allocations will be taken in the context of the Executive's budgetary processes at that time.

Mr Rogers asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the number of people on the current waiting lists of services in each Women's Aid refuge shelter.
(AQO 7641/11-15)

Mr Storey: Women's Aid refuges do not operate waiting lists given the crisis nature of their service. In the event that someone presents to a Women's Aid refuge where no accommodation is available each refuge will make efforts to find alternative accommodation solutions for the individual including making a referral to the local Housing Executive office to discuss temporary accommodation options.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the proposed pay increase for Northern Ireland Housing Executive staff.
(AQO 7643/11-15)

Mr Storey: I can confirm that the proposed pay settlement for Housing Executive staff has now been approved by the Finance Minister.

Housing Executive officials have been advised accordingly and work is ongoing to ensure that NIHE staff receive their payments as soon as possible.

Mr Clarke asked the Minister for Social Development how many properties in South Antrim are not fit for allocation as a result of repairs not being carried out.
(AQO 7644/11-15)

Mr Storey: I assume the Member is referring to social housing in South Antrim. The Housing Executive has advised that they have a total of 41 void properties in South Antrim:-

- 29 properties are void due to extensive repairs; and
- 12 properties are void due to operational schemes and projects.

Housing Associations have reported no void properties in South Antrim.

Ms McCorley asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the timeframe for the roll out of his Department's Tower Block Strategy.
(AQO 7645/11-15)

Mr Storey: The new Tower Block Strategy is currently being developed and will set out how the Housing Executive intends to invest in all of the blocks in the years ahead and will be an integral part of a new Asset Management Strategy that will emerge primarily from the work that is currently being undertaken by Savills (UK) Limited as part of the Department for Social Development/Housing Executive's Asset Management Commission.

Savills is currently carrying out a stock condition survey of the Housing Executive's properties and this includes an inspection of the structure, mechanical and electrical installations, internal elements of all the tower blocks and an assessment of their short, medium and long term investment requirements. Technical survey reports for the Housing Executive's tower blocks are due by March 2015 and a draft multi-storey (tower blocks) asset management strategy is then due around May 2015.

However, whilst this work is ongoing, I tasked the Housing Executive to prepare an interim investment priorities plan based on their current understanding of the stock. This Priorities Plan is built around a number of themes, including bringing forward work to be carried out to a number of tower blocks. The purpose of the interim approach is to effectively bridge the gap that exists between now and the development and delivery of the comprehensive strategy for maintaining all of the Housing Executive's housing assets leading, in turn, to a clear long term funding strategy.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development what steps have been taken by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive to identify land available for new social housing in Upper Bann.
(AQO 7646/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive who manage the Social Housing Development Programme, carry out annual housing needs assessment of all districts councils in order to examine the supply and demand of new social housing. This assessment is then used to determine the Housing Executive's unmet housing needs prospectus, which identifies locations where there is general unmet housing need beyond the schemes included in the Social Housing Development Programme and where it has not been possible to secure new build sites.

Based on statistics covering the March 2010 - 2014 period, the projected housing need for the Upper Bann Constituency up to 2019 was 228 new social housing units. However, following recent social housing development and proposed development the new forecasted housing need for the area has been reduced to 116 units.

North Lurgan has the highest unmet housing need for 120 units. In order to address the housing need, the Housing Executive instigated a Site Identification Study to assist Housing Associations source suitable development sites for social housing. A North Lurgan study boundary was agreed and resulted in the identification of a possible 28 sites in private ownership, which may be suitable for social housing development.

Over the last year Housing Associations have submitted a number of scheme proposals for sites within the North Lurgan area some of which have been programmed which will further reduce the unmet housing need figure for the area to 48 units.

In addition the Housing Executive also maintains a Landbank Register of Undeveloped Land and Existing Open Spaces. Through this register a site at Gilpinstown Road in North Lurgan has been identified. A feasibility study is currently being carried out to establish the development potential at a site. If acceptable, the site has the potential to provide up to 30 units.

The Housing Executive has also been working with the Planning Service in developing the Banbridge/Newry and Mourne Area Plan 2015 which has also resulted in a number of sites throughout both districts having a Key Site Requirement for social housing placed on them. For instance, in Banbridge town, zonings were placed on sites at Dromore Road, Castlewellan Road and Edenvale totalling 41 social housing units. Clanmil Housing Association is currently investigating the Dromore Street site.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the current Volunteer Strategy for Northern Ireland; and whether it is on schedule to meet all of its objectives by 2016.
(AQW 42768/11-15)

Mr Storey: Launched in March 2012 the 5 year volunteering strategy aims to provide the conditions which enables volunteering to flourish and ensure its impact on life in Northern Ireland is maximised.

In order to determine if the strategy is on schedule to deliver on its objectives my department has commissioned independent consultants to carry out an interim evaluation. This will provide an assessment of the strategy and whether it is on schedule to meet all of its objectives by 2016. This evaluation is planned to be completed by April 2015.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Social Development, if the Charity Commission is found to have placed information into the public domain contained within a final report into a charity, whether the Charity Commissioner or the Commission's Chief Executive would be held responsible.
(AQW 42786/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Charity Commission for Northern Ireland, a body corporate established under section 6 of the Charities Act (Northern Ireland) 2008, is responsible for the content of an inquiry report published by it under section 22(6) of that Act.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Social Development why the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland, in the interests of ensuring accuracy, do not submit a draft final report to a charity which it has investigated prior to releasing the final report into the public domain.
(AQW 42787/11-15)

Mr Storey: It is the policy of the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland that a charity which has been subject to a statutory inquiry will always be afforded the opportunity to see and comment on the facts contained in a statutory report before publication.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Mr Allister asked the Assembly Commission what involvement it had, and with what return, in respect of the grant of the use of Stormont grounds and facilities for the Ice Cross Downhill World Championship.
(AQW 42426/11-15)

Mr Ramsey (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): In response to the question, please find the following;

On the 17 September 2014, a request from Red Bull Ireland was received by the Minister of Finance and Personnel seeking permission to use the Stormont Estate to host the “Red Bull Crashed Ice” event in February 2015. The Minister approved the use of Stormont Estate in order to host this major event.

Subsequently, the Assembly Commission received a request for the use of Parliament Buildings upper plateau, front steps and lawns. The Assembly Commission granted permission for use as requested. No costs have been incurred by the Assembly Commission in staging the event.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Assembly Commission what was the cost to the Assembly of staging the Red Bull Crashed Ice event.
(AQW 42594/11-15)

Mr Ramsey (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): In response to the question, please find the following;

On the 17 September 2014, a request from Red Bull Ireland was received by the Minister of Finance and Personnel seeking permission to use Stormont Estate to host the “Red Bull Crashed Ice” event in February 2015.

Subsequently, the Minister approved the use of Stormont Estate. The Assembly Commission also granted the use of Parliament Buildings upper plateau, front steps and lawns in order to host this major event.

To date, the Assembly Commission has not incurred any cost in staging the Red Bull Crashed Ice event.

Mr Allister asked the Assembly Commission where the silver maces from the Northern Ireland Commons and Senate are now located.
(AQW 42813/11-15)

Mr Ramsey (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): The maces have been on the walls of the Speaker’s office since 2008. The current Speaker has expressed his preference that the maces continue to be displayed in his office.

Written Answers to Questions

Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail the level of cuts proposed to the budget of the North South Ministerial Council by their Department's budgetary proposals.
(AQW 39917/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness (The First Minister and deputy First Minister): The North South Ministerial Council (NSMC) does not have a dedicated budget. However, the work of the NSMC is supported by a Joint Secretariat which is funded on a 50/50 basis by the Irish Government and the Stormont Executive.

The Executive's contribution to the Joint Secretariat is channeled through OFMDFM and will be considered as part of OFMDFM's overall budget for 2015-16.

The draft OFMDFM budget for 2015/16 is under consideration within the department and the exact make-up of the budget is not yet agreed, however the proposed level of cut for the NSMC Joint Secretariat is in line with reductions in other parts of the department.

Mrs Overend asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister, pursuant to AQW 38186/11-15, to detail which Department is co-ordinating a cross departmental action plan on Female Genital Mutilation to which they are contributing.
(AQW 40811/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Given the nature of Female Genital Mutilation (FGM), there is no one department co-ordinating a cross departmental action plan on this matter.

Following a public consultation exercise last year, the Department of Finance and Personnel (DFP) published multi-agency guidelines on FGM. These guidelines state that it is unlikely that any single agency will be able to meet the multiple needs of someone affected by FGM. The guidelines set out a multi-agency response and strategies to encourage agencies to co-operate and work together.

A copy of the Guidelines has been placed in the Assembly library.

Mr McCallister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to detail delivery against targets in the Play and Leisure Implementation Plan to date.
(AQW 42037/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Play and Leisure Implementation Plan (PLIP) was launched in September 2011 and is scheduled to run until 2016, in line with the Ten Year Strategy for Children and Young People. The PLIP contains 41 actions, to be delivered by a range of departments, to support the commitments made in the Executive's Play and Leisure Policy Statement of January 2009 and obligations under Article 31 of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child.

To date, 17 actions have been achieved and 17 remain ongoing. Actions that have been achieved include the delivery of awareness sessions on play for policy makers and professionals; publication of guidance on the community use of schools; and research into children and young people's experiences in public spaces.

There are 7 actions which have a financial outlay. These actions include the potential audit of workforce needs; the development and dissemination of information on the benefits of challenge and risk in play; and the establishment of a professional bodies working group. Progress on these actions is subject to funding availability.

Mr Eastwood asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the process to secure City Deal status from Westminster in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 42188/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Executive already has responsibility for powers comparable to those included as part of the series of City Deals in England and Scotland.

In addition, the transfer of Corporation Tax rate setting powers will provide the Executive with much greater potential to support private sector growth and employment than what is being considered for other regions.

However, if there are any individual aspects of City Deals which through their success would be expected to bring significant benefit to the local economy, then the Executive will consider whether these should be sought.

Mr McGlone asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister to outline the current position in relation to the continued financial support for the Delivering Social Change Improving Literacy and Numeracy Signature Project.
(AQW 42290/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Delivering Social Change Improving Literacy and Numeracy Signature Programme is a two year programme scheduled to finish at the end of June 2015. We are currently considering the future of the programme.

Mr McCallister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister when a Programme for Government 2015/16 will be published.
(AQW 42399/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: Work is currently underway to extend the current Programme for Government, to include the 2015/16 year. We intend to bring forward an Executive Paper on this subject in the coming weeks, and following Executive approval and Committee notification, the revised Programme for Government will be published.

Mr Allister asked the First Minister and deputy First Minister what support has been given from the Social Investment Fund to projects in North Antrim.
(AQW 42507/11-15)

Mr P Robinson and Mr M McGuinness: The Fuel Poverty project was awarded funding of £1.8million in 2014 and Employment through Education recently received Letter of Offer for £3.5million. Both projects will bring benefits throughout the Northern Zone including the North Antrim constituency.

Department of Agriculture and Rural Development

Mr G Robinson asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what action her Department is undertaking to ensure local community groups will be supported to locate to the former MOD base at Ballykelly.
(AQW 42318/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill (The Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development): The Shackleton site at Ballykelly was transferred to the Office of the First Minister and deputy First Minister in 2011. The development of the wider site is an objective of that Department, and it plans to dispose of the remaining parts in due course. I have been advised that meetings between OFMDFM officials and the local community association in Ballykelly have been positive, and discussions have taken place regarding the community benefits which could be derived from the future development of the Shackleton site.

OFMDFM advise that any plans for the future development of the site will be expected to demonstrate how community needs have been identified and will be met. There are various ways in which this could be achieved, including the location of community facilities on the site, but other options may be acceptable.

I visited the Ballykelly site recently to view the preparatory work being undertaken for my new headquarters and had an opportunity to meet local community and business representatives. I will continue to ensure that there is engagement with local representatives throughout the development of my new headquarters.

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development following the recent Common Agricultural Policy reform, what action she is taking to address the concerns of potato farmers, who are unable to acquire sufficient conacre land to continue their business.
(AQW 42389/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: From 2014, both I and my officials have sought to address the concerns of potato farmers regarding the impacts of CAP Reform through stakeholder meetings, direct correspondence with farmers, articles in the farming press, farmers' meetings and by the publication of information on the DARD website. Most recently, I published details of possible solutions which are available on the DARD website at http://www.dardni.gov.uk/area-based-schemes-2015.htm and these are outlined below.

The farmer who owns the land and the conacre farmer seeking land could agree a land exchange for 2015. In this context, the potato grower would, for example, rent in a 5ha field from a livestock farmer to grow potatoes and establish entitlements. The livestock farmer would rent in a 5ha field from the potato grower for grazing and cutting and establish entitlements. The net effect of the transaction is that both farmers are able to establish five entitlements in 2015. As entitlements are not attached to land, in 2016 the livestock farmer is able to use the five entitlements established on the potato grower's land to claim on his own land and vice versa. It is essential that this arrangement be reflected on the ground and not simply be a paper exercise. I can see the scenario working best where the farmers are geographically close.

A second option could be for the potato grower to establish entitlements on conacre land in 2015 and transfer these back to the farm business owning the land in 2016. It may be possible for two businesses to come to an agreement on this prior to the renting of the land. The farming landowner will want to compare the conacre rent offered in 2015 to the income forgone by not establishing entitlements in 2015 (and the impact across the CAP Reform period). In addition to this, entitlements will be tradable again in 2016 and the two parties could agree that the entitlement could be transferred back to the landowner in 2016. It is recommended that both parties seek legal advice before entering any such agreement.

A third option could involve the potato growing business altering its traditional rotation for one year and growing a greater area of potatoes on owned land. It would then establish entitlements on that land in 2015. It is anticipated that land availability will not be as big an issue in 2016 as, once entitlements are established in 2015, other farmers would be free to lease land with entitlements.

Whatever the solution adopted, farmers need to be mindful of the need to adhere to greening requirements and compliance with the Nitrate Regulations.

I encourage all farmers to use the online calculator available on DARD Online Services and seek advice from local crops and countryside management advisors where necessary.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the number of applications from each constituency received by the Rural Borewells Scheme in (i) 2013; and (ii) 2014; and the number which were successful. (AQW 42390/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In 2013, thirty eight applications were submitted into the Rural Borewells Scheme. A further fifty five applications were submitted in 2014. Twenty one applications passed the initial eligibility criteria set for the 2013 Scheme, with nineteen of these achieving a wholesome water supply. Twenty six applications passed the initial eligibility criteria for 2014 and site works have now commenced. A detailed breakdown of applications from each constituency is provided in the table below.

Constituency	Number of applications received in 2013	Number of eligible applications received in 2013	Number of applications received in 2014	Number of eligible applications received in 2014

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the number of quangos linked to her Department on (i) 8 May 2007; and (ii) 19 February 2015; and how many people served on the quangos on these respective dates. (AQW 42577/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill:

(i) At 8 May 2007 DARD sponsored 7 public bodies, namely: - the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute, the Agriculture Wages Board, the Drainage Council, the Livestock and Meat Commission, the NI Fishery Harbour Authority, the Pig Production Development Committee and the Research and Education Advisory Panel. A total of 62 people were serving on these bodies on that date.

(ii) At 19 February 2015 DARD sponsored 5 public bodies, namely: - the Agri-Food and Biosciences Institute, the Agriculture Wages Board, the Drainage Council, the Livestock and Meat Commission and the NI Fishery Harbour Authority. A total of 42 people were serving on these bodies on that date.

In addition DARD has two Ad Hoc Advisory Groups. The Agri-Food Strategy Board, which is jointly sponsored with DETI, has 9 people serving on the Board. The TB Strategic Partnership Group has 5 people serving on its Board.

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what steps her Department is taking to maximise the potential of the equine industry, and open it up to new markets such as China.
(AQW 42587/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In 2012, I secured a meeting with a senior representative of the Chinese equine industry in Beijing to begin the process of relationship building, as required in Chinese business culture, and apprised him of the opportunities for educational collaboration between China and the north of Ireland.

My Department provides education and training for the future leaders of the equine industry at the Enniskillen Campus of the College of Agriculture, Food and Rural Enterprise (CAFRE). This provision covers both the Sport Horse and Thoroughbred sectors of the industry. Enniskillen Campus offers courses from Level 2 Diploma to Honours Degree level and produces graduates who are highly qualified and skilled to lead the equine industry and help it achieve its potential. CAFRE's Enniskillen Campus enjoys excellent support from the equine industry across Ireland through bursaries (including those from world renowned organisations such as Coolmore and Darley), workplace training, visits and mentoring.

Enniskillen Campus has secured lucrative opportunities for some of its students to complete their workplace training on Paca Paca Stud Farm in Japan and at Coolmore's Australian operation. It has also developed links with the Chinese equine industry and in 2014, I was delighted to host a cohort of 13 Chinese equine interns from Sheikh Mohammed bin Rashid Al Maktoum's (Darley) Dubai International Thoroughbred Internships (DITI) programme during their visit to CAFRE. I look forward to welcoming another cohort in April 2015.

In terms of new markets, I represent all sectors of the agriculture industry in my ongoing relationship building with the Chinese including at my meeting last week with Ms Wang, the Chinese Consul-General.

I am pleased to confirm that an Export Health Certificate for live equine exports from the north to China was approved in May 2014 following a meeting between Minister Zhi, General Administration of Quality Supervision, Inspection and Quarantine (AQSIQ) and my Deputy Chief Veterinary Officer.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for an update on the status and progress of the Trap, Vaccinate and Release programme.
(AQW 42628/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: I wish to advise that we do not have a Trap, Vaccinate and Release programme. However, we do have the Test and Vaccinate or Remove (TVR) Wildlife Intervention Research Project.

The TVR Year 1 fieldwork ended on 24 October 2014 and data obtained through TVR field activities is currently being analysed. TVR is a five year research project and during this period considerable data will be accumulated. Care will be taken in relation to the release of interim results as this could lead to premature, and potentially inaccurate, speculation about TVR and its effects. Some information may become available as the TVR research project progresses but this is likely to be quite limited so we do not compromise the validity of the research study. However, my officials are currently preparing a Year 1 Report for the TVR wildlife intervention research project and, when completed, it will be placed on my Department's website.

A final report on TVR will not be completed until the TVR field activities are fully completed (late 2018) and only after the accumulated data has been analysed, interpreted and understood. It is anticipated that the final report on the TVR research project could be available by late 2019.

You may be interested to know that in Year 1 of TVR, some 94% of farmers and landowners who have responded in the TVR area gave access permission to allow Department staff to implement the TVR research project on their land. During the TVR badger capture period last year 280 unique badgers were captured, although a further 350 recapture events also took place, with some badgers caught on more than one occasion. The 280 badgers were all sampled, identified by microchip, vaccinated and released. The recaptured badgers were released following an identity check.

TVR is expected to recommence in June 2015, during which all TB test positive badgers will be removed. The TB test negative badgers will be vaccinated, even if they were captured and vaccinated in Year 1, and then released.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development, in relation to her departmental headquarters relocation to Ballykelly, which procurement contracts have been awarded to suppliers (i) based in East Londonderry; and (ii) in the third sector.
(AQW 42725/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: All contracts for the redevelopment of the site for my new departmental headquarters at Ballykelly will be awarded through DFP's Central Procurement Directorate (CPD) in line with Executive policy.

I can confirm that the contract for the 'site enabling works' has been awarded by CPD to a supplier with a base in Coleraine. This contract covers site clearance and demolition works.

I can also confirm that no contracts to date have been awarded to the third sector.

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail her Department's financial investment in South Down in each year since 2007, including the (i) organisations that have received funding; and (b) investment they received.
(AQW 42726/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: The table below provides details of the funding invested in South Down since 2007:-

Total	£ 227,425,359

Further detailed information, including organisations that have received funding, has been provided in the attached table, a copy of which has been placed in the Assembly Library.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how much funding her Department has awarded to the Rural Women's Network in each of the last three years.
(AQW 42756/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department has not provided any direct funding to the NI Rural Women's Network (NIRWN) in any of the last three financial years (April 2012 to March 2015).

My Department has, however, helped to support the needs of rural women by providing funding alongside the Department for Social Development (DSD) to the Consortium for the Regional Support for Women in Disadvantaged and Rural Areas. DARD has provided £75K funding to the Consortium in each of the last three years. NIRWN are part of this Consortium, which is overseen by DSD, to ensure that the needs of women in both rural and urban areas are addressed.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development how many meetings of the Rural Women's Network have been held in (i) North Down; and (ii) Ards Borough Council areas in each of the last three years.
(AQW 42757/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As the NI Rural Women's Network (NIRWN) is an independent organisation with no regulatory links to DARD my Department does not hold the information that you request.

I would therefore advise you to contact NIRWN directly for this information.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to detail the number and location of Rural Women's Network meetings, in each of the last three years.
(AQW 42758/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: As the NI Rural Women's Network (NIRWN) is an independent organisation with no regulatory links to DARD my Department does not hold the information that you request.

I would therefore advise you to contact NIRWN directly for this information.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development what is her Department's target time for the removal of bovine tuberculosis reactors from a farm once they have been diagnosed; and what is the average time taken.
(AQW 42784/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: My Department's target time for removal of bovine TB reactors is within 15 working days of TB test completion.

Rather than an average value, a median value for working days estimated from calendar days is routinely used to monitor reactor removal times, and is published monthly on the DARD internet as part of the Tuberculosis Disease Statistics in the north of Ireland. http://www.dardni.gov.uk/tbstats-december-2014pdf.pdf

According to the most recently published statistics, the median TB reactor removal time from farm during 2014 was 8.9 working days.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development to outline any plans for the future of AFBI Plant Testing Station, Crossnacreevy.
(AQW 43023/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In common with the rest of the public sector, both my Department and AFBI face significant budgetary pressures in 2015/16 and beyond.

DARD officials have, therefore, undertaken significant work with AFBI colleagues to develop a way forward for the organisation and to ensure that it remains viable and sustainable in the future.

At this stage, there are no definitive plans to close AFBI's Crossnacreevy site and its future is being considered within the above context.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of Agriculture and Rural Development for a breakdown by slaughter house of animals slaughtered under halal conditions, in each of the last two years.
(AQW 43043/11-15)

Mrs O'Neill: In 2013, 181323 sheep were processed for the halal market and in 2014, 193470 were processed. All animals were pre-stunned before slaughter.

Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what funding her Department has provided to Foras Na Gaelige in each of the last three years.
(AQW 42551/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín (The Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure): Foras na Gaeilge receives 25% of its funding from the Department of Culture Arts and Leisure (DCAL).

Since 2009 the Colmcille initiative (a tri partite arrangement between the Executive, the Southern government and the Scottish government) has been administered by Foras na Gaeilge and Bòrd na Gàidhlig. Foras na Gaeilge receives equal amounts of funding for this from the Executive and the Southern government.

In 2014 DCAL also provided funding to Foras na Gaeilge for the development and maintenance of the Líofa website and e-learning packages.

The funding provided by the DCAL to Foras na Gaeilge for the last three years is shown in the table below.

Year	Amount 25% of Annual Budget	Colmcille Funding	Líofa website	Total
2012	£3,605,080	£114,679	-	£3,719,759
2013	£3,502,961	£137,631	-	£3,640,592
2014*	£3,095,150	£61,424	£55,495	£3,212,069

The financial year used by both agencies of the North South Language Body equates to a calendar year.

*The accounts for 2014 have not yet been audited.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure how much funding Foras Na Gaelige received from the (i) Executive; and (ii) Irish Republic's government, in each of the last three years.
(AQW 42552/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: Foras na Gaeilge receives 75% of its funding from the Department of Arts, Heritage and the Gaeltacht (DAHG) and 25% of funding is received from the Department of Culture Arts and Leisure (DCAL). The two sponsor departments have been the only sources of funding for Foras na Gaeilge in the last three years.

Foras na Gaeilge also receives funding from DAHG for the Clár na Leabhar Gaeilge programme which is delivered solely in the south.

Since 2009 the Colmcille initiative (a tri partite arrangement between the Executive, the Irish government and Scottish government) has been administered by Foras na Gaeilge and Bòrd na Gàidhlig. Foras na Gaeilge receives equal amounts of funding for this from the Executive and the Irish government.

In 2014 DCAL also provided funding of £55,495 to Foras na Gaeilge for the development and maintenance of the Líofa website and e-learning packages.

All funding received in the last three years is shown on the table below.

Year	DAHG 75% Annual Budget	DCAL 25% Annual Budget	Colmcille Total	Clár na Leabhar Gaeilge	Líofa Website	Total
2012	£10,671,549	£3,605,080	£231,717	£1,021,039	-	£15,529,385
2013	£10,519,432	£3,502,961	£250,878	£994,527	-	£15,267,798
2014*	£9,285,449	£3,095,150	£121,651	£900,732	£55,495	£13,458,477

The financial year used by both agencies of the North South Language Body equates to a calendar year.

*The final accounts for 2014 have not yet been audited.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what funding her Department has provided to the Ulster-Scots Agency in each of the last three years.
(AQW 42553/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The Ulster-Scots Agency receives 75% of its annual funding from the Department of Culture, Arts and Leisure (DCAL). The funding provided by DCAL to the Ulster-Scots Agency in each of the last three years is shown in the table below.

Year	Amount
2012	£2,022,487
2013	£1,914,095
2014*	£1,188,732

The financial year used by both agencies of the North South Language Body equates to a calendar year.

*The final accounts for 2014 have not yet been audited.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure for an update on a Government E-strategy for Northern Ireland.
(AQW 42561/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: E-safety is an issue of relevance to a number of Northern Ireland departments requiring a cross-government response. It has been agreed that the Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland (SBNI) should be formally commissioned to develop a Northern Ireland e-safety strategy and produce an e-safety action plan on behalf of the Northern Ireland Executive. My Department has committed to a financial contribution to facilitate the development of the e-strategy and action plan.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure whether her Department plans to reintroduce funding for reimaging projects.
(AQW 42569/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The current Re-imaging scheme which ends in June is managed by the Arts Council NI and is funded through IFI, SEUPB Peace III and the National Lottery. Currently Arts Council is not planning to drawn down any PEACE IV funding.

The Department has no plans at present to provide funding for re-imaging projects.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure what will be the cost of the consultation on the Irish Language Bill.
(AQW 42570/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: The estimated cost of the consultation on proposals for an Irish language Bill is between £10k and £15k.

Mr McCausland asked the Minister of Culture, Arts and Leisure to place a copy of the business case for the new Liofa book clubs initiative in the Assembly library.
(AQW 42605/11-15)

Ms Ní Chuilín: I do not intend to place the Business Case in the Assembly Library; however, the Business Case can be accessed through the Department's website

Department of Education

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 40818/11-15, whether he will ensure that each withdrawn patrol is reassessed in relation to the risks posed to pupils cycling or walking to and from each school.
(AQW 41747/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd (The Minister of Education): The provision of school crossing patrols is a discretionary function. Patrols are, therefore, provided in support of the parental duty to ensure the safety of their child(ren) when walking to school. Patrols are provided where a location has been assessed as exceeding the threshold(s) set out in assessment guidelines. The guidelines are based on those of Road Safety GB, previously Local Authority Road Safety Officers Association (LARSOA). These guidelines incorporate elements from the existing widely adopted criteria for the assessment of potential zebra and pelican crossing sites, and consider factors such as traffic flow and the number of pupils crossing. Therefore, patrols are usually established at locations where there are high numbers of pupils and a heavy volume of traffic. Additionally, school crossing patrols are only permitted to marshal pedestrians and not cyclists.

Reassessments of patrols are routinely conducted when a patrol person leaves their post. School crossing patrols may be removed where a location no longer exceeds the threshold(s) set out in the guidelines.

With regard to the impact upon pupils following the removal of a patrol, Boards ensure that the reassessed crossing point is within tolerances experienced by pupils on any other route without a crossing patrol.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education whether he will provide, or place in the Assembly library, a copy of the figures for the 2014/15 census of primary and post-primary pupils with Special Educational Needs, broken down by Education and Library Board.
(AQW 42292/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The 2014/15 school census final figures were released on 26th February 2015. A breakdown of special educational needs in primary and post-primary schools by ELB can be found overleaf.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education to detail the capital budget for new builds and the schools enhancement programme for 2015/16.
(AQW 42457/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Initial indicative allocations of £55m and £40m have been made for Major Works and School Enhancement Programme projects respectively for the 2015/16 financial year, however, these figures will be subject to revision following review of the overall capital budget position.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education how many places (i) are reserved; and (ii) have been appointed for Catholic Church representatives on the Board of Governors of Integrated Schools in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 42525/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Under Article 89 of the Education Reform (NI) Order 1989, the Trustees of Catholic Maintained schools are entitled to nominate, to the relevant Education and Library Board for appointment, one seventh (1/7th) of the Governors of a Controlled Integrated school.

There are 21 controlled integrated schools and 42 governor posts to which the Trustees of Catholic Maintained schools can make nominations. Of these, 6 governor posts have been filled by nomination from the Trustees of Catholic Maintained schools.

Where the right to nominate is not exercised, the relevant Education and Library Board may, in accordance with Article 89 (2) (a) of the Education Reform (NI) Order 1989, fill the posts to which nominations have not been made. There are 36 posts filled by this means.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 42159/11-15, whether there is a policy within his Department or the Education and Library Boards whereby only Stage 5 SEN pupils are permitted to be considered for classroom assistance.
(AQW 42559/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: There is no policy within either the Department of Education or the Education and Library Boards (ELBs) which states that only pupils at Stage Five of the Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs can be considered for classroom assistance. Current legislation does not prevent a school or Board from considering classroom assistance for a pupil at any stage of the Code of Practice.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Education what programmes exist within secondary level education to raise awareness of cyber bullying and social media exploitation.
(AQW 42562/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department takes these issues very seriously and issued an e-Safety Guidance Circular to all schools in December 2013. It stated that 'eSafety must be built into the delivery of the curriculum' and recommended that schools use external expertise, where appropriate, to help address these complex issues. It is, however, a matter for each school to determine which programmes and resources best suit their particular needs.

All secondary schools promote the personal development of pupils as part of the topic 'Learning for Life and Work' (LLW). Bullying/cyber-bullying and e-safety are widely covered during LLW. LLW resources for schools have been developed by CCEA, which include 'safety and managing risk' in the real world and online. Other materials on specific e-safety issues have been prepared and made available to all teachers through the Classroom 2000 (C2K) network.

Awareness raising programmes, training and resources are provided by a range of organisations such as the PSNI and the NI Anti-Bullying Forum. Voluntary organisations also support schools by providing talks to pupils and parents on these issues.

As part of "Safer Internet Day 2015", a toolkit was provided to schools which included information, advice and lesson plans on issues including sexting, using webcams, using Social Networks, inappropriate content and chatting with strangers online.

Specialist training and support are also available to schools via the Education and Library Boards' child protection, education welfare and behaviour support services; and from the Child Protection Support Service to Schools (CPSSS).

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Education to detail the spending per pupil, broken down by constituency, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 42619/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Every school receives a fully delegated budget, distributed under the Common Funding Scheme and the Local Management Schools funding arrangements.

The Department does not hold information on spending per pupil. Alongside delegated budgets, schools may receive other centre funding support including resources for Statemented pupils, programme funds etc. and other costs (such as transport and administrative costs) that are not readily identifiable at phase or Constituency level.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education when the provision of an additional classroom for Kilbride Primary School will be realised, as detailed in the Planned School Enhancement Programme.
(AQW 42672/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: As a controlled primary school in Ballyclare, the North Eastern Education and Library Board (NEELB) has responsibility for capital works at Kilbride Primary School.

The NEELB has confirmed that the school's enrolment is 137 pupils and as such Kilbride PS is a 5-class base school. Currently the school is operating as a 7-class base school however this is a decision for the school and does not impact on the school's infrastructure entitlement. There are no plans to provide additional classrooms in excess of entitlement.

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 40862/11-15, for an update on the timeline for the establishment of the amalgamated primary school in Lower Mourne.
(AQW 42742/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I would refer the Member to my response to AQW 40862/11-15 on 27 January 2015 where I advised that I approved a development proposal for the amalgamation of the Lower Mourne schools on 23 September 2014; effective from September 2015. Should the Mourne Primary Schools project be successful in any future major capital investment announcement a timetable for the establishment of an amalgamated primary school will be commissioned at that stage. In the meantime I understand that the Trustee, Principals and Chairs of Governors of the schools involved are continuing to meet to discuss the amalgamation.

Ms Ruane asked the Minister of Education to detail the number of Special Educational Needs Co-ordinators in each post-primary school; and whether they are teaching or acting as Special Educational Needs Co-ordinators in a full time capacity.
(AQW 42777/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Code of Practice on the Identification and Assessment of Special Educational Needs states that all mainstream schools should have a Special Educational Needs Co-ordinator (SENCO).

The Belfast Education and Library Board has advised that there were less than five non-teaching SENCOs identified in its last audit in March 2014.

The remaining Education and Library Boards (ELBs) have advised that this detail is not held at ELB level.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of Education how much European funding his Department has received in each of the last two financial years; and from which funding streams.
(AQW 42818/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department's ability to access EU funding is directly linked to the applicability of EU funding streams to the core business of the Department.

My Department's main focus during the period in question has been on maximising the support available from the EU's Comenius and Youth in Action Programmes which ended on 31 December 2013 and the EU's Erasmus+ programme which was launched on 1 January 2014.

The British Council was the National Agency for the Comenius and Youth in Action programmes and the British Council in partnership with Ecorys, is the National Agency responsible for delivering the EU's Erasmus+ programme. The education service here has been able to benefit from £1.6m drawn down by the National Agency in the 2012/13 financial year an estimated £2.2m* in the 2013/14 financial year.

*Drawdown for the Erasmus+ programme is provisional as details of drawdown provided by the British Council signifies their intention to award funding. Drawdown is not final until organisations applying for EU funding have signed a contract and final figures are awaited.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 42078/11-15, how many mainstream post-primary schools in Fermanagh and South Tyrone have (i) failed; and/or (ii) had concerns noted, following Special Educational Needs inspections, in their last seven year inspections cycles.
(AQW 42821/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI) evaluates and reports on the quality of education and states explicitly the areas for improvement that need to be addressed in the interest of the pupils.

Special educational needs (SEN) is inspected as an integral part of all mainstream post-primary inspections and reported on within the body of the published inspection report. Since 2007, based on their last inspection or follow-up inspection, SEN was evaluated as good with areas for improvement that the school demonstrated the capacity to address in 14 mainstream post-primary schools. In a further three schools, SEN was evaluated as satisfactory with areas for improvement.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education what changes he envisages to the Pre-School Education Advisory Groups with the advent of the Education Authority on 1 April 2015.
(AQW 42823/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Learning to Learn, a Framework for Early Years Education and Learning, which I launched in late 2013, includes an action to review current arrangements for the delivery of all funded pre-school services to achieve maximum benefit from a single authority, including reviewing the role of the Pre-School Education Advisory Group (PEAG).

This action will be the responsibility of the Education Authority in due course.

In the interim, the PEAGs will continue to be responsible for managing the funded pre-school places required to meet the Programme for Government commitment to ensure that at least one year of pre-school is available to every family that wants it

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education what scheme will be used to appoint Principals of controlled schools when the Education Authority comes into existence on 1 April 2015.
(AQW 42824/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Work on developing a Teaching Appointments Scheme (TAS) for the Education Authority (EA) is underway. A draft Transitional Teaching Appointments Scheme, along with a guide to the selection process and a Scheme of Management for controlled schools is being developed in the first instance to make provision for those appointments that must be made in the first months following the establishment of the EA. This will allow time for a longer-term TAS to be agreed once the EA has been established.

Miss M McIlveen asked Minister of Education whether all current Education and Library Board staff will be protected under the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 2006 when transferring to the Education Authority on their existing permanent grade.

(AQW 42825/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: You have clarified that this question also relates to staff who are on temporary promotion (TP) and whether they will transfer to the Education Authority (EA) in their TP grade or revert to their substantive grade.

My Department is currently working on an "Education Authority – Staff Transfer Scheme", which will detail and set in place the arrangements for the transfer of staff currently employed in the ELBs and the SCELB.

If staff are acting up on 31 March 2015, irrespective of the duration, and have not been advised by their current employer that this arrangement will cease on or before 31 March 2015, they will transfer to EA in their acting up position. They will continue to act up in accordance with the arrangements that relate to their acting up post where there is a continuing need for the work to be done.

EA will review acting up arrangements in due course on the basis of available funding, new organisational structures and future business needs.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Education, pursuant to AQW 42455/11-15, to detail the eight schools which have had their business cases approved and can, subject to finance, progress to building stage in 2015/16.
(AQW 42856/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The eight schools that are currently anticipated to move to site in 2015/16 (subject to availability of finance) are:-

- Edenderry Nursery School, Belfast
- Omagh Integrated PS
- St Joseph's and St James' Primary School, Poyntzpass
- St Patrick's Academy, Dungannon
- Parkhall Integrated College, Antrim
- Devenish College (enabling works)
- St Bronaghs PS, Rostrevor
- St Mary's PS/ Glenravel PS
- Two of the above projects still have business cases to be approved.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education what frameworks will be used by the Education and Training Inspectorate to evaluate shared education programmes, including raising the educational standards of pupils.
(AQW 42862/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Over the four years of the Signature Project relating to Shared Education, ETI will use a framework to evaluate Shared Education which it has developed, in consultation with key educational stakeholders.

In practice, ETI will evaluate the quality of:

- the strategic aims and objectives of the partnership through the school development plan, action plans and discussion with senior management;
- the outworking of the partnership ethos through the learning environment and pastoral provision, policies and practice:
- the leadership and management of shared education provision at all levels within the school and of the Shared Education partnerships between that school and other schools;
- learning and teaching through direct classroom observation – achievement and standards, knowledge, understanding, skills, thinking, attitudes and dispositions:
- pupils' work: oral; written, multimedia and displays.

Discussions will also be held with pupils, parents, teachers, senior management, governors and community representatives.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education whether integrated schools of the same management type, and those of different management type, will qualify for shared education programmes.
(AQW 42863/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Funding opportunities through the DSC Signature Project and Peace IV funding programme will be open to all schools who meet the eligibility criteria.

The DSC Shared Education Signature Project is aimed at schools that have already engaged in shared education provided they meet other criteria as outlined in the call for applications (see www.sepni.gov.uk for details). Each application will be assessed on a case by case basis.

The Peace IV programme will target those schools that are not already engaged in sharing. Subject to EU agreement, this is expected to launch later this year.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education for an update on the Strategic Review of Integrated Education.
(AQW 42864/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am currently considering the need for and scope of a future review of integrated education.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education, pursuant AQW 41469/11-15, what 'Gateway' checks did Priory College not meet.
(AQW 42865/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Priory College did not meet the 'sustainability' gateway check. The school enrolment at the point of assessment was 430 pupils in years 8 to 12, and 70 pupils in year 13 (sixth form). The school also had an intake of only 83 pupils in year 8. The 'Schools for the Future, Policy for Sustainable Schools' recommends that the minimum enrolment for Years 8 to 12 should be 500, sixth forms should have a minimum of 100 and the minimum average annual intake should be 100 pupils. The policy may be viewed a the following hyperlink; http://www.deni.gov.uk/a_policy_for_sustainable_schools-2.pdf.

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Education where the schools in North Down due for a rebuild are on the waiting list for capital funding.
(AQW 42888/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: With the constrained capital budget position I currently have no plans for a further capital announcement. The timing of any future announcement will be dependent on the capital budget available to Education in the next budget cycle (April 2016 onwards).

In relation to Major Works projects that are currently underway, funding for the capital works will be allocated on completion and approval of all design stages, in line with the available capital budget at that time.

Mr McGlone asked the Minister of Education for a progress update on additional nursery places at Primate Dixon School, Coalisland.
(AQW 42907/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Development Proposal (DP) no. 323, was published by the Southern Education and Library Board on 22 January 2015 at the request of the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools. The proposal is to establish an additional fulltime nursery unit at Primate Dixon Primary School, to increase pre-school admissions numbers from 1 September 2015, or as soon as possible thereafter.

Following the publication of a DP, a statutory twomonth objection period begins, which affords all interested and affected parties an opportunity to submit their comments on the proposal to the Department of Education. The statutory objection period on DP 323 ends on 23 March and I hope to be able make a decision as soon as possible thereafter.

A record of all current development proposals and recent decisions are listed on my Department's website. These records are updated following my decision on a proposal.

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Education when phase 1 applicants will be notified if they have been accepted for the shared education Delivering Social Change Signature project.
(AQW 42911/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Applications to Phase 1 of the DSC Share Education Signature Project are subject to an assessment process being undertaken by ELBs. Recommendations from ELBs will be in considered for endorsement by the Project Board which is scheduled to meet on 10 March 2015. Applicants will be notified when this process has been complete.

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Education when phase 2 of the shared education Delivering Social Change Signature Project will open; and whether schools that have taken part in previous shared education programmes will be eligible.
(AQW 42912/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: It is expected that the applications to phase 2 of the Delivering Social Change Shared Education Signature Project will be invited before the end of the current financial year. Work is currently in progress to refine the application process following lessons learned from the phase 1. The Project is aimed at schools that have previously engaged in shared education, including those that previously participated in such programmes (subject to meeting other criteria as outlined in the call for applications - see www.sepni.gov.uk for details).

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of Education which recommendations from the Committee for Education's Report on Education and Training Inspectorate will be taken forward.
(AQW 42913/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department's response to the Committee for Education's Report on the Education and Training Inspectorate and School Improvement can be found on the Assembly website at the following link.

http://www.niassembly.gov.uk/assembly-business/committees/education/calls-for-evidence/inquiry-into-the-education-and-training-inspectorate-eti/

It provides details of whether each recommendation has been accepted, in full or in part, and, where relevant, details of current actions being taken.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education for an update on when he will make a final decision on approving Principals release for Nursery schools.
(AQW 42963/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I am considering the proposals submitted by the National Association of Head Teachers (NAHT) in support of their request to fund Nursery Principal Release Time.

Given the current challenging budgetary constraints, I must assess the cost to my Department and, subject to affordability, I will make my final decision.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education when the Controlled Schools Support Council will be fully operational.
(AQW 42965/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department has provided funding to support the Working Group which will establish the Controlled Schools' Support Council. This group has submitted an application for funding of costs associated with the establishment and running of the Controlled Schools' Support Council. My officials have requested further information to support this claim and will progress the necessary appraisal and approvals on receipt of this information.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education for his assessment of the General Teaching Council for Northern Ireland paper, Striking the Right Balance - Towards a Framework for School Accountability in the 21st century.
(AQW 42966/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The document 'Striking the Right Balance' was part of the evidence provided by GTCNI during the Inquiry into the work of the Education and Training Inspectorate and School Improvement conducted by the Education Committee, and as such was considered in deliberations.

I welcome all constructive contributions from key stakeholders who are working on behalf of all of our learners.

Miss M McIlveen asked the Minister of Education for an update on progress in relation to his dashboard of measures for measuring school performance.
(AQW 42967/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: To date the work on the dashboard has primarily encompassed desk research, literature reviews and internal discussion on the range of indicators that might be included.

The Department has written to key stakeholders inviting them to be part of a panel which will work with departmental officials to consider what should be included in the Dashboard of Measures, how it can be presented and the timescales for implementation.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education to detail who sits on the regional project management board for the Delivering Social Change Shared Education Signature Project.
(AQW 42997/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Project Board for the Delivering Social Change Shared Education Signature Project comprised representatives of the funders and the Education and Library Boards who are responsible for delivery. Membership is as follows:

- Faustina Graham (Chair), Department of Education
- Padraic Quirk, Atlantic Philanthropies
- Linsey Farrell, OFMdFM
- Andrew Bell, Department of Education
- Ray Gilbert, NEELB
- Paddy Mackey, WELB
- Arlene Kee, SEELB
- John Unsworth, SELB
- Paul Lawther, BELB

It should be noted that ELB members of the Project Board may be subject to change post March 2015 to reflect the new structure of the Education Authority.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education whether he can provide an assurance that should the Community Relations, Equality and Diversity fund be phased out, that those schools who are in receipt of the Community Relations, Equality and Diversity monies and do not meet the criteria of the Shared Education Signature Project, will still be able to avail of resources to carry out diversity work.
(AQW 42998/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Addressing diversity issues is part of the curriculum which all schools are required to deliver. Earmarked funding was provided to support the initial implementation of the Community Relations Equality and Diversity (CRED) policy, in particular capacity building and the sharing of good practice. Any decision to end CRED earmarked funding would be with a view to all schools continuing to carry out diversity work within their Local Management of Schools (LMS) budget allocation.

Shared Education funding will support schools in collaborating on a cross community basis with the aim of improving educational standards and reconciliation outcomes. While the two policies are complementary, they are not the same.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education why the development proposals for nursery units by St Malachy's Primary School in Kilcoo and Randalstown Central Primary School were treated differently, in that the former was marked 'urgent' within the Department and the latter 'routine'.
(AQW 43018/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The timescale indicated on submissions sent to me by Department of Education officials takes account of the individual circumstances of each Development Proposal. They are marked 'routine' unless they need to be considered quickly, in which case an 'urgent' marking will be used.

The submission for the Development Proposal for St Malachy's PS, Kilcoo was sent to me on 11 July 2014 and the proposed implementation was September 2014. In this case, it was marked "Urgent" as it was considered necessary to clarify the position for interested parents as soon as possible.

The submission for the Development Proposal for Randalstown Central PS was dealing with a proposed variation from the normal format for statutory nursery provision. This required additional consideration which took it past the proposed implementation date of September 2014. It was sent to me on 22 January 2015 and in this case, it was not considered that there was an immediate urgency associated with the submission as the proposed implementation date had passed and the children were placed for the 2014/15 academic year.

I consider submissions sent to me without undue delay, and in both of these cases I was able to make my decision within 7 working days.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education how many school Development Proposals since May 2011 have been marked in his Department as (i) urgent; and (ii) routine, broken down by school sector.
(AQW 43020/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I wish to emphasise that the marking on any submission made to me by my officials is an administrative tool to assist the smooth operation of my Private Office. These markings do not relate to the importance attached to the subject matter of the submission.

There have been 164 Development Proposals (DPs) published since May 2011 on which I have made a decision. The details of submissions made to me on these DPs which have been marked 'Urgent' or 'Routine' are contained in Tables 1 and 2. Some proposals have alternative markings such as "immediate" depending on the circumstances pertaining at the time of consideration. See Table 3 below.

Decisions on DPs have a significant impact on pupils and local communities and I endeavour to make my decisions without undue delay regardless of officials' markings. My focus is always on the best interest of children and young people.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education, in circumstances where it is proposed to convert an existing pre-school reception class into a nursery unit of the same size, while using the same premises and staff, whether this is considered a sufficiently significant change as to require the submission of a proposal to his Department under Article 14 of the Education and Libraries (NI) Order 1986.
(AQW 43021/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department considers that the establishment of a nursery unit represents a significant change to a primary school and therefore requires the publication of a development proposal. Guidance on the Publication of Development Proposals was published by my Department on 26 September 2014. Section 4 of the Guidance relates to the Need for a Development Proposal and Paragraph 4.8 is specific to nursery schools and units in Primary Schools.

A link to the Guidance is as follows:
http://www.deni.gov.uk/de1_14_202314__development_proposal_guidance_-__english_version__issued_26_09_14.pdf

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Education whether it is only the impact on other grant-aided schools, as opposed to play groups, which must and can be taken into account in considering a proposal under Article 14 of the Education and Libraries (NI) Order 1986.
(AQW 43022/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Article 14 of The Education and Libraries (NI) Order 1986 is the main legislation governing the statutory Development Proposal process, by which schools are established or closed, or have significant changes made to them.

The Department's assessment of a Development Proposal takes account of all relevant Departmental policies and I make my decision on proposals taking account of all pertinent information.

To put this in context with regard to nursery proposals, the Pre-school Education Programme (PSEP) is a partnership between statutory and voluntary/private pre-school providers and both sectors are equally valued for their contribution to the education of pre-school children.

If a Development Proposal involves a significant change to an existing nursery school or unit, or the establishment of a new nursery school or unit, careful consideration is given to its impact on existing providers, including voluntary/ private pre-school playgroups, which offer funded places under the PSEP.

Mr Byrne asked the Minister of Education when schools will receive their budget allocation for the 2015/16 academic year.
(AQO 7697/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Schools were notified of their overall delegated budget shares and total budget allocations for 2015/16 on Wednesday 25 February 2015. The information for all schools has been placed on the Department's website.

Schools will, in due course, be provided with formal budget statements of their delegated funding shares by their respective Funding Authorities, along with allocations from other programme budgets available for distribution at that time.

Mr Ramsey asked the Minister of Education what discussions has he held with the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety regarding the forthcoming Special Educational Needs and Disability Bill.
(AQO 7693/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I have engaged in discussions with the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety on a range of matters relating to provision for children with special educational needs, during the development of the current policy proposals for the way forward on special educational needs and inclusion.

My core SEN proposals were considered and agreed by the Executive in July 2012 and I have proceeded with the drafting a Bill to reflect this agreement. In February 2015, I brought a Special Educational Needs and Disability Bill to the Executive for consideration. The Bill contains clauses covering both the core proposals, as agreed in 2012, and a number of associated policy areas which I had advised I would consider; all are aimed at enhancing the current SEN policy framework. In advance of each of these Executive meetings, I circulated the draft proposals to all Executive colleagues.

There has also been ongoing engagement at official level as proposals of the Review of SEN and Inclusion were being developed. A number of meetings have taken place and presentations given on the key elements proposed for inclusion in a draft Bill.

Mr Nesbitt asked the Minister of Education whether he will publish a list of the approximately 100 schools that require new builds.
(AQO 7694/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: I do not hold a list of schools that are deemed to require a new build.

Schools in the estate have differing and ever changing needs for investment. Changes to enrolment numbers, the condition and suitability of the premises to deliver the curriculum, the use of temporary accommodation and the social needs of the pupils all need to be assessed within the context of area plans at the point when announcements of projects to proceed in planning are made.

I have announced lists of projects to proceed in planning for new builds in 2012, 2013 and 2014. Projects are selected from a long list of potential projects submitted by Boards and school planning authorities on the basis of a protocol that is applied at the time the announcement is made. A list of potential projects is not retained for future announcements, rather the protocol will be applied again at the point when I deem there is sufficient budget available to warrant initiation of planning and design work on a further tranche of projects.

Unfortunately, given the constrained capital budget I currently have no plans to make a further capital announcement. The timing of any future announcement will be dependent on the capital budget available to Education in the next budget cycle commencing April 2016.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education how he will ensure that no integrated school is disadvantaged if Community Relations, Equality and Diversity funding is discontinued.
(AQW 43069/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: As per my answer to AQW 42998/11-15, any decision to end Community Relations, Equality and Diversity (CRED) earmarked funding would be with a view to all schools continuing to carry out diversity work within their Local Management of Schools (LMS) budget allocation. If this decision is taken, schools of all management types will be treated equally.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Education to outline the process by which two schools can move to joint management; and whether two schools can move to joint management without the two churches' agreement.
(AQW 43070/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Guidance for jointly managed schools is still under development and will be published in due course. Once published, the guidance will outline the process by which schools can move to joint management as well as stressing the pre-requisite for community support.

Mr G Kelly asked the Minister of Education to outline the procedure used by schools when deciding to close for a snow day.
(AQO 7700/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: The Department recognises that decisions on whether or not to close a school can only be made at local level by the Principal who has the knowledge and experience to assess the situation affecting their school. The specific procedure for deciding whether or not to close will therefore vary across schools.

To support Principals in making their decision, the Department has provided schools with a checklist which includes a list of the issues they need to consider when deciding whether or not to close their school. The main consideration is the possibility of risks to the health and safety of pupils and staff.

Each year the Department issues a letter to all schools to remind them of the need to have an action plan in place detailing how schools will deal with any exceptional closures that may arise and this reminder signposts them to the checklist which is available on the Department's website.

Ms McCorley asked the Minister of Education how his Department will utilise Peace IV funding opportunities.
(AQO 7701/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: My Department has worked closely with Special European Union Programmes Body (SEUPB) to shape proposals for Peace IV funding that includes a Shared Education thematic area. It is proposed that this funding is aimed at those 24% of schools, as identified in Schools Omnibus Survey in 2013, who stated that they have not engaged in delivery of Shared Education. Additionally the proposal includes extending eligibility for shared education funding to the early years and youth service sectors as well as capacity building across the educational workforce.

This funding stream will complement the existing Delivering Social Change Shared Education signature project which is aimed at those schools that have had significant experience of sharing opportunities.

Together the outcomes of these funding streams will inform policy for the way forward for Shared Education.

Mr Newton asked the Minister of Education how his Department promotes science, technology, engineering and mathematics subjects in primary and post-primary schools.
(AQO 7702/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: At primary level, the curriculum provides for science, technology and engineering within "The World Around Us".

The Education and Training Inspectorate (ETI) conducted a review of 'World Around Us' recently and found that most of the science and technology lessons observed by inspectors (86%) were evaluated as good or better. Over half of the lessons were evaluated as very good or outstanding. The report makes a number of recommendations and I have asked my officials to consider how these can be taken forward.

My Department supports the development of the cross-curricular skills of Communication, Using Maths and Using ICT. These core skills are central to our curriculum and they are acquired and used throughout a child's education and beyond.

My Department also has a number of STEM intervention programmes to complement the curriculum. It provides annual core funding of £400 thousand pounds to Sentinus, the Department's front line STEM delivery partner which delivers 57,000 interventions to primary and post-primary pupils every year.

Sentinus has also developed an important initiative called 'IT's Your Choice', to excite and enthuse young people of all ages about computer programming.

Together, I believe my policies and programmes are having a positive impact in terms of pupils pursuing STEM subjects as evidenced by the 3 percentage points increase in the number of STEM A-level entries between 2007 and 2012.

Mr Irwin asked the Minister of Education whether he will prioritise a new build at Markethill High School, Co. Armagh.
(AQO 7703/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: Market Hill High School will be assessed for a new build along side any other applications for a new build ahead of my proposed announcement.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Education how many pupils in post-primary schools have studied Design and Technology at GCSE level since 2011.
(AQO 7704/11-15)

Mr O'Dowd: In the academic years 2010/11 to 2012/13, 14,481 year 12 pupils made examination entries in GCSE design and technology.

Department for Employment and Learning

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what representations have been made on behalf of former employees of City Link, Nutts Corner to the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills to accelerate their claims for National Insurance Fund redundancy payments.
(AQW 41975/11-15)

Dr Farry (The Minister for Employment and Learning): I understand that there may have been some representations at a political level on behalf of former employees of City Link, Nutts Corner to the Department for Business Innovation and Skills (BIS); but I can confirm that my Department has received no request from BIS to accelerate their claims for redundancy payments. BIS has no remit or responsibility for the provision or administration of the Northern Ireland Redundancy Payments Service (RPS). That remit and responsibility falls to my Department. I can confirm that in response to this regrettable announcement over the Christmas/New Year period, staff in my RPS implemented an action plan to ensure that redundancy applications from eligible employees in this jurisdiction were expedited as quickly as possible, with the intent of minimising any financial hardship.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning which (i) full-time; and (ii) part-time undergraduate courses have been withdrawn from the Ulster University prospectus since the 2012/2013 academic year, broken down by campus.
(AQW 42344/11-15)

Dr Farry: Ulster University regularly reviews its course provision with the latest review having been carried out in December 2014 and noted by the university committee in February 2015. The university makes decisions by looking at a number of factors including the number of applications, employability statistics and national student satisfaction scores.

Ulster University has provided the following information regarding courses which have been withdrawn from its prospectus since the 2012/13 academic year. The University has stated that course closures do not necessarily equate to subject closures, as different courses in the same subject area will still be available to prospective students.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the opportunities identified by each of the higher education institutions in teaching and learning in accordance with Graduating to Success.
(AQW 42350/11-15)

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail the (i) higher and further education courses associated with transport management that have been cut from the syllabi; (ii) employment rates of former students on these courses; and (iii) process by which education institutions decided to cut these courses.
(AQW 42384/11-15)

Dr Farry: In researching the higher and further education courses associated with transport management, officials have identified two level 3 courses entitled OCR Level 3 Certificate of Professional Competence for Transport Managers (Passenger Transport & Road Haulage) available at Northern Regional College. The statistics show that in the academic years 2011/12 and 2012/13 there were no enrolments for these courses, however, there were six enrolments in the academic year 2013/14 all of which relate to the Certificate of Professional Competence for Transport Managers (Road Haulage). I can also confirm that my department does not hold information on employment rates of former further education students on these courses.

While the Department sets the strategic direction for the Further Education Sector, each College is responsible for its own curriculum offer colleges are not required to consult when they propose to discontinue a course.

In regard to higher education courses, Ulster University has withdrawn a single honours programme in Transportation.

Approximately 15 students per year have graduated from this course in the last number of years. Using the national graduate destination statistics (which are collected 6 months after graduation) the average employment rates over the last 3 years have been:

- in employment (not necessarily in the transport sector) – 80%
- in further study – 4%
- doing voluntary unpaid work – 4%
- unemployed 12%

In reviewing this course the University stated that it took into account a range of performance measures, including: the number of applicants selecting a course as their firm (first) choice through UCAS; UCAS tariff points achieved by entrants to the course (eg ‘A level grades); first year retention (drop out rates); performance in the National Student Survey and employability.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to detail (i) the number of litigant requests for written transcripts of Industrial Tribunal hearings since practice directions were issued on 7 May 2012; and (ii) the number of written transcripts subsequently issued to litigants.
(AQW 42498/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Office of Industrial Tribunals and the Fair Employment Tribunal (OITFET) does not maintain a record of all litigant requests for written transcripts of industrial tribunal hearings.

OITFET has issued seven transcripts of industrial tribunal hearings to litigants since practice directions were issued on 7 May 2012.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning why appropriate guidelines were not issued for the appeals process for applications to the European Social Fund.
(AQW 42516/11-15)

Dr Farry:

(i) All applicants who had their applications rejected through Phase I of the European Social Fund (ESF) assessment process received a letter which outlined the appeals process. This was also outlined in the Guidance Notes for Applicants issued at the time of the ‘Call for Applications’ to the Programme.

(ii) Each application which was rejected was afforded an opportunity to appeal the decision to reject the application within 5 working days. Applicants rejected for reasons other than financial capability assessment were notified earlier as the process of financial capability assessment took longer than anticipated to complete.

(iii) The Department intends publishing the list of successful applicants to the ESF Programme once the full assessment process has been completed. It is not common practice to issue a list of unsuccessful applicants, and would involve breaching commercial confidentiality.

(iv) In the current ESF Programme 2007 – 2013 the Department supported the Apprenticeship Programme and therefore as detailed in the NI ESF Operational Programme 2014-2020, which was approved by the European Commission, my Department will continue to fund the Apprenticeship and Youth Training Programmes with 40% of the ESF allocation. The remaining 60% of funding will be awarded through the open call for applications. This is where the voluntary and community sector will play a key role in delivering the additionality that is required from this type of activity to support the unemployed; economically inactive; young people not in education, employment or training; people with disabilities; and provision for community family support.

(v) My officials are working under challenging circumstances to ensure that the new ESF is operational from 1 April 2015 and there are no contingency plans for gap funding.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning why separate appeal dates were issued for European Social Fund applications (i) rejected on technicalities; and (ii) rejected as being financially unviable.
(AQW 42517/11-15)

Dr Farry:

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the rationale for using European Social Funds for core departmental responsibilities; and whether his Department considers the European Social Fund to represent additionality.
(AQW 42519/11-15)

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what is the time scale for a decision by the Department of Finance and Personnel on the business case for the expansion of Ulster University's Magee campus.
(AQW 42522/11-15)

Dr Farry: I refer to my answer in response to Oral Question No. AQO 7714/11-15 on 3rd March 2015.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the Employment Service Support Programme; and whether it will be extended beyond March 2015.
(AQW 42560/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Employment Service Support (ESS) was introduced on 2 June 2014, to support the continued delivery of Executive funded initiatives and facilitate the continuity of provision leading to the introduction of a new adult return to work programme, Steps 2 Success (S2S).

ESS initially comprised the following six strands of provision:

- ESS Into Work Skills;
- ESS Short Accredited Training Courses;
- ESS YES Work Experience Strand;
- ESS YES Skills Development Strand;
- ESS First Start; and
- ESS Step Ahead 50+.

The programme was expanded in October 2014 to accommodate the introduction of an additional strand - ESS Self Employment Test Trading.

S2S was successfully launched as my Department's new adult return to work programme on 20 October 2014.

While validated statistical information is not yet available on ESS, management information collected on the various strands indicates that, at 20 February 2015, over 4,600 clients have accessed this provision in order to assist them to return to work. These initial statistics are very encouraging, however, it will not be possible for an accurate assessment of the performance of ESS until statistics become available on the numbers finding employment following completion of their ESS provision.

Whilst it is not possible for ESS to continue in its existing format beyond March 2015, the Employment Service is committed to offering a quality all age service to help jobseekers overcome barriers to work and to move towards, and into, work at the earliest opportunity.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how much funding is committed to the current European Social Fund programme.
(AQW 42579/11-15)

Dr Farry:

(i) The current ESF Programme 2007-2013 has a financial allocation of €189,777,300 which is fully committed.

(ii) There is no projected underspend at this time for the current ESF Programme 2007-2013.

(iii) There are no plans to extend the current ESF Programme. All expenditure under the Programme must have been incurred and the process of claiming it from the Commission, including all verification and audit work, must be completed by the end of 2015.

(iv) My Department has applied the Freedom of Information Act 2000 Section 43 (commercial interests) to the applicants that have applied to the ESF Programme and, therefore, I am unable to provide detailed information on further education colleges applications.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning whether there are minimum class sizes for Essential Skills courses.
(AQW 42603/11-15)

Dr Farry: My department's current operational guidelines for the delivery of Essential Skills recommend that in terms of good practice, class sizes should have a minimum of eight learners.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the role played by Charter NI in the success of the recent Jobs Fair in Kilcooley.
(AQW 42667/11-15)

Dr Farry: You will be aware that Charter NI was one of the stakeholders working in partnership with my Department to organise and facilitate the delivery of the successful Work Placement event in Kilcooley Community Centre on Thursday 13 November 2014.

The event was well attended, and I am advised that Charter NI played a key role by providing transport to and from the event for a considerable number of their clients. Indeed, this service generated approximately 50% of the attendees on the day.

In addition, it was clear that Charter NI have established good working relationships and a rapport with their clients, which enabled their mentors to provide onsite support to assist with the completion of application forms and preparation for employer interviews.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on Project Ten of Graduating to Success and the establishment of a university base at one of the further education colleges.
(AQW 42673/11-15)

Dr Farry: The aim of Project 10 of Graduating to Success is to pilot a number of initiatives and approaches aimed at increasing access to, and participation in, HE provision locally, with a particular emphasis on up-skilling those in employment. The pilot is being run in two further education colleges, the South West College (SWC) and the Southern Regional College (SRC). These colleges were selected for pilot purposes because, geographically, they are furthest from university campuses in Northern Ireland.

Both colleges are engaged in information technology infrastructure developments, including the production of online learning materials and delivery platforms, which will facilitate flexible delivery of higher education provision using a blend of distance learning and more traditional face to face learning.

SWC is working in partnership with both the University of Ulster (UU) and Queen's University Belfast (QUB). Subject to final higher education validations, the college plans to have a recruitment to a BSc (Honours) Sustainable Construction course with UU, and a recruitment to a BSc (Honours) Sustainability course with QUB, both commencing in September 2015.

SRC and UU are partnering in the development of a blended learning framework that will define future blended learning arrangements across all higher level provision within the college, and the development and implementation of e-tutoring arrangements are being piloted currently within the higher level apprenticeship in Applied Industrial Science. The Foundation Degree in Applied Industrial Science is the underpinning knowledge for this higher level apprenticeship. Similarly, the Foundation Degree in Accounting and Finance has also been developed with UU.

Both colleges are engaged in on-going discussions with the universities to identify further opportunities to use technology in innovative ways to facilitate the local delivery of higher education provision.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for details on the compliance of the (i) universities and university colleges; and (ii) higher education providers have adopted the Higher Education Achievement Report HEAR as stated in Graduating to Success by 2014 and 2015.
(AQW 42675/11-15)

Dr Farry: Work in relation to Project 6 of Graduating to Success aims to – 'Enhance the employability prospects of graduates'. The project contains a number of outcomes, is progressing well and I am pleased to report that Ulster University, Queen's University, and Stranmillis and St Mary's University Colleges have all adopted the Higher Education Achievement Report (HEAR). My officials are currently working with the other higher education providers, namely our further education colleges and the Open University, with a view to adopting the HEAR in 2015.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the commitment within Graduating to Success to carry out a Research Excellence Framework assessment in 2014; and to detail the results of the assessment.
(AQW 42678/11-15)

Dr Farry: As part of 'Graduating to Success: Higher Education Strategy for Northern Ireland', my Department, along with the other UK funding bodies, committed to introducing the Research Excellence Framework (REF) as a system for assessing the quality of research in UK universities. The results of REF 2014 were published in December 2014 and demonstrated the high quality and enhanced international standing of research conducted by our universities. REF 2014 shows that the quality of submitted research outputs has improved significantly since the last assessment exercise in 2008.

Queen's University Belfast and the Ulster University had a very positive outcome from the REF. They performed to an exceptionally high standard in a number of areas, with some top 5 and top 10 positions in a UK context in relation to their 4* and combined 3* and 4* assessments.

Stranmillis University College can also be proud of its achievements and the significant increase in particular in its overall 4* rating. St Mary's submission to the REF was its first participation in this type of assessment and it has achieved an assessment that indicates that 87% of its submitted research is at a standard that is recognised internationally or nationally.

A more detailed assessment of our universities' performance in REF 2014 will be provided to the Committee for Employment and Learning in due course.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning why the European Social Fund roadshows made no mention of management accounts.
(AQW 42695/11-15)

Dr Farry: The ESF Roadshows were organised to provide information to potential applicants on the application, assessment and implementation processes for the new ESF Programme 2014-2020. It was clearly stated at the roadshows that the Programme might be subject to changes as its development was still underway. Attendees at the roadshows were advised that detailed guidance notes for applicants would be issued along with the application form. No specific reference to management accounts was made at the roadshows as this level of detail is outlined in the guidance notes.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the rationale for his Department's interpretation of EU guidelines on 10 per cent assests in its European Social Fund guidlines.
(AQW 42700/11-15)

Dr Farry: In the new ESF Programme the European Commission has limited the upfront advance payment to the Department to 1% as opposed to the previous programme advance of 30%.

Given that actual ESF expenditure has to be paid out in full by an ESF project before submitting a claim to the Department, a project must therefore have access to the relevant cash resources. It is therefore imperative that a project has net cash assets to fulfil this requirement. If a project has no net cash assets then they would not be able to comply fully with the ESF financial claims process.

Therefore, for the new ESF Programme, the Department requires that sufficient net cash assets must be demonstrated as part of the financial capability assessment before a project commences activity.

To assist with the financial capability assessment, a potential project applicant must have net cash assets of at least 10% of the value of the application. This amount would equate to £10,000 net cash assets for a possible ESF applicant seeking £100,000 funding per year.

This would allow projects to have sufficient cash resources to implement their project and reduce any potential risk of getting into financial difficulties during the implementation of the programme.

Should a project not have sufficient cash assets they would not be able to pay staff salaries and therefore not provide sufficient audit documentation to claim funding. All funding is paid retrospectively so it is important that net cash assets are available.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for the managing authority's definition of finacial capacity and viability in relation to the European Social Fund application assessment process.
(AQW 42701/11-15)

Dr Farry: The financial capability assessment is required because of very stringent financial requirements both at EU and Northern Ireland level and also due to the fact that, unlike in the current ESF Programme, a change in EU rules means that projects will not be able to access a prepayment advance of 30% of project costs.

For the purpose of the financial capability assessment to be undertaken as part of the European Social Fund application process, the most recent management accounts should consist of a balance sheet and a year to date income and expenditure statement. In addition annual accounts are examined.

The ESF guidance notes stipulated that the Net Cash Assets needed to be 10% of the annual cost of the project. The accounts were reviewed to see if an applicant met the criteria.

A review of the annual accounts including the notes to the accounts, the directors' report and the auditors' report was undertaken to see if there was anything identified in these that would need to be considered in the financial capability assessment. For example, a "Going Concern" note.

The current ratio (Current Assets/Current Liabilities) was calculated for both years in the annual accounts and the management accounts to assess the ability of the organisation to pay their current liabilities with their current assets.

For each project a cash flow was prepared to ascertain whether the applicant organisation would be likely to run into any cash flow difficulties.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what acknowledgement his Department makes of the not for profit circumstances of voluntary and community groups when considering their financial capability in European Social Fund applications.
(AQW 42702/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Department assesses each applicant to the European Social Fund based on the criteria that were fully outlined in the Guidance Notes for Applicants and in an open and transparent process. Applications were encouraged from applicants that fully met the criteria, and a large number of voluntary and community sector organisations submitted applications. All applicants must have sound financial capability to enable financially viable projects to be selected. It is entirely possible for not for profit organisations to meet these financial capability requirements.

Mr Newton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how he is addressing the essential skill needs of adults within the Belfast constituencies; and how he plans to address this need.
(AQW 42753/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Essential Skills for Living strategy continues to provide Essential Skills programmes for adults throughout Northern Ireland, including Belfast.

Essential Skills remains a priority for my department and provision is integrated within all our funded programmes in further education, training and employment. Belfast Metropolitan College (BMC) is the main provider of Essential Skills tuition in its five principal sites across the Belfast area, offering free literacy, numeracy and information technology (ICT) courses from entry level through to level 2. In each of the last three years BMC has enrolled in excess of 5,000 Essential Skills learners.

The college also provides an extensive Essential Skills Community Education Programme through its partnerships with a wide range of community, voluntary and statutory agencies and is also one of the largest providers of Essential Skills through the Learner Access and Engagement Programme which is aimed at those learners facing significant barriers.

Through the Union Learning Fund, my department also encourages trade union members to take advantage of Essential Skills courses. Under the auspices of the Fund, trade unions, employers and BMC collaborate to deliver Essential Skills in the workplace.

Finally, my department's Employment Service provides a comprehensive range of work focused support as part of the client offer. For those individuals whose lack of achievement in Essential Skills is identified as an impediment to gaining and retaining employment Advisers will signpost to an Essential Skills provider.

I am confident that the Essential Skills provision available in Belfast, and throughout Northern Ireland, is helping to address an important aspect of underachievement in our economy.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how much European funding his Department has received in each of the last two financial years; and from which funding streams.
(AQW 42895/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department receives direct European funding in respect of the European Social Fund, which is one of the Structural and Investment Funds. My Department received £15,824,016 in the financial year 2012/13 and £26,578,620 in 2013/14 from the European Commission for the Northern Ireland ESF programme.

My Department also facilitates the drawdown of competitive European funding by its Arms Length Bodies (ALBs) and third party organisations through various European funding programmes.

In 2012/13, my Department facilitated ALBs and third party organisations in drawing down approximately £4.5 million for research under Framework Programme 7 (FP7) and £3.5 million for mobility under the Lifelong Learning Programme.

In 2013/14, my Department facilitated ALBs and third party organisations in drawing down approximately £6.3 million under FP7 and £3 million under the Lifelong Learning Programme.

My Department continues to support these organisations in accessing EU funding through targeted promotion and investment in infrastructure, particularly in respect of the new Horizon 2020 and Erasmus+ programmes.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Employment and Learning when staff in the Northern Regional College will receive their 2014/2015 incremental pay award.[R]
(AQW 42922/11-15)

Dr Farry:

(i) The current ESF Programme 2007-2013 has a financial allocation of €189,777,300 which is fully committed.

(ii) There is no projected underspend at this time for the current ESF Programme 2007-2013.

(iii) There are no plans to extend the current ESF Programme. All expenditure under the Programme must have been incurred and the process of claiming it from the Commission, including all verification and audit work, must be completed by the end of 2015.

(iv) My Department has applied the Freedom of Information Act 2000 Section 43 (commercial interests) to the applicants that have applied to the ESF Programme and, therefore, I am unable to provide detailed information on further education colleges applications.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Employment and Learning when he expects the Department of Finance and Personnel to make a decision on whether the business case for the expansion of Ulster University's Magee campus represents value for money.
(AQO 7714/11-15)

Dr Farry: The business case for the expansion of Ulster University's Magee campus is currently being scrutinised within my Department. Once it is approved by my Department it will then be passed to the Department of Finance and Personnel for its review. As I do not know what issues or queries it will raise on the business case, I am not in a position to say when it will make its decision.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the level of co-operation and interaction between the STEM Centre in the Dungannon Campus of the South West College and local schools to meet the criteria of the Entitlement Framework.
(AQO 7710/11-15)

Dr Farry: The Centre at South West College is a teaching facility focused exclusively on delivering educational and interactive activities, in the areas of Science, Technology, Engineering and Maths.

Activities are offered to school pupils at Key Stage 2 and 3 and since the centre opened, I am pleased to report, teachers, educationalists and parents, as well as over 12,000 young people have attended, including over 3,000 pupils from over 30 post-primary schools.

Approximately 650 pupils were surveyed in the last year based on their attendance, 76% stated their visit has encouraged them to study a STEM subject, and 79% stated it made them more aware of STEM careers.

The centre is providing co-operation and interaction with local schools in a number of ways, these include: delivery of activities for promotion of STEM subjects and teacher training days in conjunction with the Southern Education and Library Board.

In addition, the centre supports the College contribution to the Department of Education's Entitlement Framework Programme.

Pupils who attend from local schools aim to achieve a GCSE in a vocational area and the centre is used as a tool to enhance the curricula pupils are learning in the college.

The stylish and relaxed environment is designed to capture and attract the imagination of young people and promote interest in the vast range of career paths and options available to scientists, technologists, engineers and mathematicians.

The skills developed are wholly relevant to the school curriculum and complement the syllabus currently studied by students in schools and college.

Finally, the college has achieved the Association of Colleges award for College and School Partnerships for their work inspiring pupils towards further study and careers in science, technology, engineering and maths.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister for Employment and Learning how his Department engages with the Agri-Food Strategy Board.
(AQO 7711/11-15)

Dr Farry: My officials and I have engaged with the Agri-Food Strategy Board since its inception.

My Department is represented on the Inter Departmental Steering Group which has played a vital role in assessing the recommendations contained in this Plan.

Since the Executive endorsement of Going for Growth, the Group's focus has naturally shifted somewhat and it now assists in monitoring government's progress against implementation of the Plan. My Department reports progress against the relevant objectives on the Plan on a quarterly basis.

Tony O'Neill and I jointly Chair the Food and Drink Manufacturing Skills Group. This Group was established by my Department in 2011 as our route of engagement with this economically important sector. The Group brings together government, local employers and education providers to identify the key skills issues facing the sector and to develop solutions to help address these skills challenges.

Tony O'Neill is also the Chairman of the Agri-Food Strategy Board and his involvement in the Skills Group provides a mechanism for progress on skills issues to be communicated to the Board, thereby facilitating effective coordination between the two bodies.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what steps he is taking to discuss skills needs with local businesses.
(AQO 7712/11-15)

Dr Farry: In support of the Skills Strategy, my Department actively engages with local businesses in a range of ways to help them to identify and overcome skills issues and contribute to upskilling the workforce. We focus, in particular, on the skills needs of sectors which are a priority for economic growth, and small and medium sized enterprises.

My Department manages the Employer Support Programme – InnovateUs, the programme's key objective, is to deliver a unique, tailored training solution to meet the identified innovation skills needs of owners, managers and employees in SMEs with 50 or less employees.

The Assured Skills programme is another vehicle through which we address the skills needs of local business. The academy model is a short-term intervention which we have already used successfully to meet urgent and identified skills needs in areas such as software testing, cloud computing and data analytics.

I also chair Working Groups related to economically important sectors, such as ICT, Food and Drink Manufacturing, and Advanced Manufacturing and Engineering Services. Each Group involves employers and short term Action Plans have been produced to address the skills needs of the relevant sectors.

Furthermore, the Northern Ireland Strategy on Apprenticeships articulates a blueprint for the future of apprenticeships here. It will have a transformative impact on the supply of skills, particularly at higher levels for employers. It is being driven by strategic partnerships; putting employers at its very heart through a Strategic Advisory Forum and sectoral partnerships. This will ensure that apprenticeships help businesses address skills gaps providing vital skills benefiting employers of all sizes.

Similarly, as outlined in the recent review of youth training consultation, the future youth training system will also include employers in its design and delivery, to better match supply and skills.

Mrs Cameron asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on the provision of training for young people with special educational needs, once they reach the age of 19.
(AQO 7713/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department is committed to ensuring that all young people with special education needs who can benefit from training, can avail of the opportunities on offer.

Training is offered through a range of education, skills and employment provision.

My Department offers these young people a number of options through a range of programmes and services. This includes Training for Success, Apprenticeships, Further and Higher Education, the European Social Fund programme, Careers guidance and employment support services.

I am well aware that young people with special education needs can face a range of barriers that prevent them from availing of the opportunities on offer.

That is why my Department and its providers place great importance on offering support facilities right across our services.

Our aim is straightforward. We want to provide tailored support and assistance that helps these young people achieve their desired training, skills or employment outcomes.

Our support provides financial help and targets assistance at individuals. The individual assistance can include adaptations to training or learning environments, the provision of a support worker, extended eligibility criteria or more flexible participation arrangements.

In addition to our current provision, in recent times I have initiated a number of strategic approaches which cumulatively will enhance our provision.

This includes the outworking of the review of careers support, the review of Youth Training, an Employment and Skills Strategy for People with Disabilities, the delivery of wide ranging support services under the new European Social Fund programme and also the new Economic Inactivity Strategy.

The initiatives will put in place new and improved provision which young people with special education needs can access in order to achieve their skills and employment goals.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Employment and Learning what protection he can provide to professional and vocational courses available at local colleges and universities.
(AQO 7715/11-15)

Dr Farry: In light of the particularly difficult budgetary settlement, my Department is in discussions with further education colleges regarding budget allocations and the proposed curriculum.

The Department sets high level targets in respect of the curriculum to be delivered and agrees targets with individual colleges through the college development planning process.

This process aims to achieve a balance between provision that strengthens economic and workforce development and provision that enhances social cohesion. Although my Department sets the strategic direction for the sector, colleges are responsible for their own curriculum, including high level skills provision, and for curriculum change. It is the responsibility of colleges to meet the needs of learners and employers.

Around 97% of funding for colleges' provision at level 3 and below is in respect of courses leading to professional, technical and academic qualifications on regulated qualification frameworks. In considering the 2015/16 curriculum offer, colleges have to ensure that at least 90% of funded provision must be vocational in nature.

The higher education sector is facing similar budgetary constraints to that of the further education sector.

While my Department sets the strategic direction for the higher education sector, each University is responsible for its own course provision and curriculum. Before making decisions regarding course provision, universities take a number of factors into account including my Department's priorities, the needs of the economy and student demand. While there is no specific protection for professional and vocational courses at the universities, I have requested that the universities protect narrow STEM related courses.

I am committed to protection of current and future apprenticeships and youth training programmes. Funding will continue to be allocated in line with demand. In recognising the importance of this provision, I have also secured additional funding of £7.5 million, through the Change Fund, to deliver pilot schemes in high level apprenticeships and youth training later this year.

Mr Douglas asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for his assessment of the recent difficulties surrounding applications to the European Social Fund.
(AQO 7716/11-15)

Dr Farry: My Department recently invited applications for funding to the Northern Ireland European Social Fund Programme, 2014-2020.

With each signed application an organisation had to submit a number of key documents including its most recent management accounts by the closing date for applications of noon on 9 January 2015.

This was clearly outlined in the ESF Guidance Notes for Applicants.

In the same guidance it was also clearly stated that failure to provide any of the requested documents would result in an application being rejected.

Management accounts were requested in order for the Department to conduct a financial capability assessment on each organisation applying and hence to enable financially viable projects to be selected.

This assessment is required because of very stringent financial requirements both at EU and Northern Ireland level.

The ESF Guidance Notes for Applicants stated clearly that failure to provide any of the requested documents would result in an application being rejected at the first phase of the process.

However, 43 of the organisations applying, for whatever reason, did not submit their most recent management accounts. Those affected by the decision to reject their application on this basis believe that failure to produce the requested information was due to a lack of clarity in the guidance notes concerning what constitutes management accounts. Taking account of representations on this issue, I allowed those organisations which did not submit their most recent management accounts with their applications a further opportunity to do so.

Applicants affected were contacted by my Department and afforded an opportunity to submit those documents.

Those applications are now being further examined by my Department in Phase I of the assessment process. Any applicants passing Phase I will then be examined by an assessment panel at Phase II.

Although challenging for officials in my Department it is anticipated that the overall assessment and appeals process will be completed by the end of March 2015.

This will allow funding to be awarded and successful applicants to be supported by 1 April 2015.

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister for Employment and Learning for an update on applications to the European Social Fund.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Employment and Learning to outline the steps he is taking to tackle the increasing numbers of economically inactive adults.
(AQO 7719/11-15)

Dr Farry: As part of the Programme for Government 2011 – 2015, my Department and the Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment, in conjunction with a number of other departments, have been developing a strategy to reduce economic inactivity in Northern Ireland. This is in direct response to the historically high levels of economic inactivity experienced in Northern Ireland.

Extensive research, development and consultation with stakeholders has been undertaken and a final draft strategy and implementation plan will be presented to the Executive for consideration shortly.

The final strategy will seek to help a number of specific economically inactive groups to make the transition towards, and into, the labour market. The final strategy will also seek to contribute to an increase in the employment rate in Northern Ireland through a reduction in the proportion of working age adults classified as economically inactive.

This will be the only dedicated government strategy in the United Kingdom targeted specifically at addressing the major socio-economic issue of economic inactivity.

This is a reflection of the significance placed by my Executive colleagues and me in seeking to tackle the issue on a sustainable basis across Northern Ireland.

Department of Enterprise, Trade and Investment

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether a cost benefit analysis has been carried out on the various options for reducing Air Passenger Duty.
(AQW 42342/11-15)

Mrs Foster (The Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment): My Department, in conjunction with DFP, commissioned the Northern Ireland Centre for Economic Policy (NICEP) to conduct a detailed economic impact assessment on the impact of air passenger pricing, including short haul Air Passenger Duty. The report is available to download from the DETI website at http://www.detini.gov.uk/economic_impact_assessment_of_air_passenger_duty.pdf

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the number of quangos linked to her Department on (i) 8 May 2007; and (ii) 19 February 2015; and how many people served on the quangos on these respective dates.
(AQW 42576/11-15)

Mrs Foster:

(i) Four Quangos were sponsored by DETI at 8 May 2007, namely: - Invest Northern Ireland, Northern Ireland Tourist Board, General Consumer Council for Northern Ireland and Health & Safety Executive for Northern Ireland. A total of 46 people were serving on the boards of these bodies at that date.

(ii) Five Quangos were sponsored by DETI at 19 February 2015, namely: - Invest Northern Ireland, Tourism Northern Ireland (previously the Northern Ireland Tourist Board), General Consumer Council for Northern Ireland, Health & Safety Executive for Northern Ireland and the Agri-Food Strategy Board. This fifth body is jointly sponsored with DARD. A total of 49 people were serving on the boards of these bodies at that date.

Mrs McKevitt asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to outline the routes of the two races organised for the Giro Gran Fondo on 21 June 2015.
(AQW 42590/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The routes are fully available to view on www.granfondogiroditaliani.com

The Mourne route is a 177km ride that will challenge the fittest riders by providing tough climbs and inspire each rider by bringing them through some breath taking scenery.

The Mourne route can be viewed here: http://www.discovernorthernireland.com/attachment.aspx?attachmentID=1912

The Strangford route is a 58km loop touching the shores of Strangford Lough and is achievable for beginner and novice cyclists.

The Strangford route can be viewed here: http://www.discovernorthernireland.com/attachment.aspx?attachmentID=1911

More detailed maps of both routes will be released in the coming weeks, along with exact locations of food and hydration stops.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how much funding was allocated to companies in each constituency by InvestNI for staff development and training, in each of the last five years.
(AQW 42604/11-15)

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment to detail the eligibility criteria for the Broadband UK Connection Voucher Scheme.
(AQW 42624/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The Super-connected Cities Programme is managed by Broadband Delivery UK (BDUK), a unit within the Department for Culture, Media and Sport.

Business premises, within the Belfast and Londonderry council areas, who meet the eligibility criteria at https://www.connectionvouchers.co.uk/superconnected-cities/can apply for grants up to £3,000, to cover the cost of high speed broadband installation.

The Super-connected Cities Programme is being extended to include other council areas. This presents an opportunity for our new Super-Councils to apply for a voucher scheme, similar to those that exist in Belfast and Londonderry council areas.

My Department facilitated an information event on 23 February 2015 to advise council representatives of further details.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment whether Invest NI funding offers contain any stipulations regarding trade union membership.
(AQW 42629/11-15)

Mrs Foster: No. Invest NI funding offers do not contain any stipulations regarding trade union membership.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment what additional support her Department can offer to businesses in the hospitality industry in rural areas to provide greater access to broadband services.
(AQW 42770/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department is currently implementing the Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project (NIBIP). The project is progressing according to schedule and by 31 December 2014 just over 17,500 homes and business premises across Northern Ireland had benefited from the improvements.

By project completion in December 2015, it is anticipated that improvements will have been delivered for at least 45,000 homes and businesses across Northern Ireland, resulting in the provision of basic wire-line broadband services of at least 2 Megabits per second in areas that previously had no service and improvements in the availability of superfast fixed-line broadband services (24 Megabits per second or higher) in areas where choice is poor or broadband speeds are low.

In addition, my Department has just signed a contract with BT for the Superfast Roll-out Programme Phase 2 (SRP2) project, which seeks to further increase the coverage of superfast broadband services across Northern Ireland by 2017.

Business premises, within the Belfast and Londonderry Council area, who meet the eligibility criteria at https://www.connectionvouchers.co.uk/superconnected-cities/can apply for vouchers up to the value £3,000, to cover the cost of high speed broadband installation from the Super-connected Cities Programme, managed by the Department for Culture, Media and Sport.

This Programme is being extended to include other council areas. This presents an opportunity for our new Super-Councils to apply for a voucher scheme, similar to that which exists in the Belfast and Londonderry Council areas.

My Department facilitated an information event on 23 February 2015 to provide council representatives with further details.

Mr D Bradley asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment which Department will pay the costs of the £1.2million cost of the investigation into the NI Events Company.
(AQW 42841/11-15)

Mrs Foster: My Department has paid the £1.2million cost of the investigation into the Northern Ireland Events Company.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the value of City Deals being used as an economic lever.
(AQO 7723/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The City Deals initiative is aimed at giving a number of cities in England and Scotland greater control in relation to decisions that affect their area. It includes measures in relation to greater local flexibility on the use of resources for economic development, infrastructure investment and support for skills.

The Executive already has responsibility for powers comparable to those included as part of the series of City Deals in England and Scotland. In addition, the transfer of Corporation Tax rate setting powers will provide the Executive with much greater potential to support private sector growth and employment than what is being considered for other regions. The transfer of functions to the eleven new councils as part of the Review of Public Administration will also see more responsibility devolved to local areas.

Given the arrangements in Northern Ireland it is not apparent that there would be any benefit in the City Deals initiative being extended to Northern Ireland. However, if there were specific aspects of City Deals which could potentially bring significant benefit to the local economy, then these could be explored.

Mr G Kelly asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the current number of hotel beds in Belfast, in relation to anticipated future demand.
(AQO 7726/11-15)

Mrs Foster: There are currently twenty nine hotels in the Belfast City Council area, providing six thousand six hundred and seventy eight bed spaces.

The Northern Ireland Statistics and Research Agency figures show that the annual average room occupancy of Belfast hotels was seventy six per cent in 2013. This can be significantly higher during the summer months and peak periods.

Occupancy levels for beds are lower and this also reflects the significant level of business visitors to Belfast booking single occupancy rooms.

These figures suggest that the current number of hotel rooms, and subsequently beds, in Belfast may be insufficient to meet any significant increase in future demand. However, further development will depend on commercial decisions by potential investors or developers.

Mr Hilditch asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of the latest labour market statistics.
(AQO 7727/11-15)

Mrs Foster: I am pleased that the latest labour market statistics show that our economic recovery is continuing.

The number of people claiming unemployment benefits has fallen for a twenty fifth consecutive month, with January's decrease of one thousand seven hundred the single largest monthly fall in over fifteen years.

We have also seen consistent job growth with almost thirty thousand net new jobs added to the local economy since the end of 2011.

However, I am not complacent despite these positive figures and recognise that we still have a number of labour market challenges to address.

Mr Humphrey asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment how the extension to the Waterfront Hall in Belfast will benefit the tourism industry.
(AQO 7728/11-15)

Mrs Foster: One of the main aims of the project is to place Belfast as a key National and International conference destination and develop the local business and leisure tourism sector.

It aims to generate Gross Value Added of almost ten million pounds in wider economic benefits.

This project has been awarded total financial assistance of eighteen and a half million pounds.

This is broken down into thirteen million, eight hundred and seven thousand pounds of European Regional Development Fund element and four million, seven hundred and fifty seven thousand pounds of Tourism NI core element.

Construction job targets include the creation of approximately two hundred construction jobs over the length of the project as well as the provision of new jobs upon completion.

The contractor has thirty five people currently employed on site and this is due to rise to over one hundred in the next month.

Other targets include attracting fifty thousand annual conference delegates, doubling the existing baseline, by 2020, comprising thirty five thousand out of state delegates, from the existing baseline of five thousand, seven hundred and fifty.

This project is progressing well. The main contractor commenced work in late September 2014, with construction completion due in March 2016.

Mr Kinahan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for her assessment of Tourism Ireland's performance in attracting visitors from both the rest of the UK and overseas to Northern Ireland.
(AQO 7729/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Figures published recently by NISRA show that the number of visitors to Northern Ireland from Great Britain and overseas increased by plus three per cent for the January to September period last year. More importantly, there was a marked increase in holidaymakers from Great Britain and overseas, compared with the same nine-month period in 2013.

We saw growth of plus twelve per cent in holidaymakers from Great Britain, and growth of plus twenty one per cent in holidaymakers from North America.

Holidaymakers now make up one third of all visitors to Northern Ireland, compared to fourteen per cent in 2002.

During 2015 Tourism Ireland will continue to highlight Titanic Belfast, the Giant's Causeway and our unique National Trust properties as well as maximising the tourism potential of events such as the return of the Tall Ships to Belfast , the Irish Open and the Gran Fondo. Game of Thrones, the Causeway Coastal Route and driving holidays to Northern Ireland will also be promoted widely as well as City breaks to Belfast and Londonderry.

Mr Sheehan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the availability of Grade A office accommodation in Belfast.
(AQO 7730/11-15)

Mrs Foster: The availability of suitable office accommodation is an important part of Northern Ireland's investment proposition.

At the end of 2014 there was a reported nine hundred and sixty eight thousand square foot of office space available in Belfast.

Of this amount, three hundred and twenty thousand square foot was classified as being of typical Grade A standard of which two hundred and fifty thousand square foot was located within Belfast City Centre.

In recent months the Belfast property market has seen a number of positive announcements after a long period of inactivity.

Mr McMullan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on improvements to rural broadband provision in East Antrim.
(AQO 7731/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Building on previous interventions, my Department is currently implementing the Northern Ireland Broadband Improvement Project which seeks to provide wire-line broadband services of at least 2 Megabits per second in areas that previously had no service and improve the availability of fixed line broadband services of 24 Megabits per second or higher in areas where choice is poor or broadband speeds are low. The project is progressing according to schedule and by 31 December 2014 almost seventeen thousand five hundred premises across Northern Ireland had benefited from the improvements being delivered, including just over one thousand in the East Antrim Constituency. By project completion in December 2015, it is anticipated that improvements will have been delivered for at least forty five thousand premises across Northern Ireland.

Ms McGahan asked the Minister of Enterprise, Trade and Investment for an update on the Irish Rugby Football Union's bid to host the 2023 Rugby World Cup.
(AQO 7732/11-15)

Mrs Foster: Since the announcement on 5th December 2014 that the Irish Government and the Northern Ireland Executive are supportive of the Irish Rugby Football Union bid to host the Rugby World Cup 2023, the bid group has commenced work on compiling the bid, with the support of the two administrations and their agencies. To oversee progress on the bid and guide the bid preparation, an Overview Group will be appointed and I hope to be in a position to announce the details of the group in the near future.

Department of the Environment

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the amount spent on retrieving litter from Lough Erne from (i) January to June 2012; and (ii) January to June 2013.
(AQW 42154/11-15)

Mr Durkan (The Minister of the Environment): Responsibility for retrieving litter from Lough Erne lies with the local district councils. The Northern Ireland Environment Agency (NIEA) has spent no money on retrieving litter from Lough Erne for either period; January to June 2012 or January to June 2013.

Mr Wilson asked the Minister of the Environment whether he, his Special Advisor or his immediate predecessor, is, or has been, a member of Friends of the Earth or any other environmental organisation; and if so, to detail the environmental organisation and when any membership ceased.
(AQW 42362/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Neither I nor my Special Advisor have ever been members of Friends of the Earth or any other environmental organisation. The Department does not hold this information in respect of the former Environment Minister, Alex Attwood MLA.

Mr Wilson asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the dates he has met with Friends of the Earth, including the purpose of the meetings.
(AQW 42363/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I have hosted four meetings where a representative of Friends of the Earth was in attendance. Details are set out below.

Date	Purpose of meeting
17 October 2013	Planning Bill Environmental Stakeholders Group
17 December 2013	Meeting with objector about Dalradian Goldmine planning application
27 January 2014	Climate Change Environmental and NGO Stakeholder
23 July 2014	Meeting to discuss implementation of two European Directives

Mr Rogers asked the Minister of the Environment whether he has any plans to review the tractor speed limit and the maximum weight limit for tractors and trailers in the light of the recent statement by the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Transport.
(AQW 42394/11-15)

Mr Durkan: I am aware of the recent announcement by the Department for Transport that, from 9 March 2015, in Britain, the maximum combination weight of an agricultural tractor towing an agricultural trailer will be 31 tonnes, increasing from 24.39 tonnes; and also tractors currently restricted to 20 miles per hour will be able to travel at 40 kilometres per hour (approximately 25mph).

My Department plans to review the maximum weight limit for tractors and trailers in Northern Ireland. Speed limits fall under the remit of the Department for Regional Development (DRD) and my officials are liaising with their DRD colleagues to consider whether it would be appropriate to conduct a joint public consultation to decide whether similar increased agricultural combination weights and tractor speeds should be introduced in Northern Ireland.

I would expect to make further announcements on this matter in the coming weeks.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment, if specified on a planning application, to detail the differences between conventional and unconventional drilling.
(AQW 42403/11-15)

Mr Durkan: In the oil and gas industry the terms conventional and unconventional are usually applied to the types of reservoir in which oil or gas may be trapped. In conventional reservoirs (e.g. sandstones, naturally fractured limestones) the oil or gas is trapped in well-connected spaces (pores) between the grains of the rock and flows readily from the rock into and up the well.

In contrast, in unconventional reservoirs the hydrocarbons may be adsorbed (attached) onto the grains or trapped in poorly connected micropores and fractures. In this case High Volume Hydraulic Fracturing (HVHF) is used to enhance the fracture network so that the hydrocarbons will flow from the reservoir into the well at the required rate.

The drilling specifications for an exploration well will depend on the design of the well including the inclination, total depth and the lithologies (rock types, including aquifers) through which the drill will pass.

If the well is intended to test an unconventional shale gas reservoir, for example, the application for consent to drill would include an HVHF programme followed by flow testing of any hydrocarbons present.

When a conventional reservoir is tested the oil or gas may flow to surface naturally or reduced permeabilities may inhibit this flow. Drill stem tests and mini fall-off tests may be used to evaluate the reservoir properties and procedures such as an acid wash and squeeze and conventional hydraulic fracture stimulation may be used to initiate or increase the flow of hydrocarbons from the reservoir. Before drilling it is impossible to predict which of these procedures will be required but they would be included as options in the application for consent to drill.

My Department is currently assessing one application for a borehole development that may include a conventional hydraulic fracture. There are currently no applications in the North for an unconventional hydraulic fracture.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) how many staff are employed in the Driver and Vehicle Standards Agency (DVSA) in Northern Ireland; and (ii) what interaction takes place between DVSA NI and DVSA UK.
(AQW 42482/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Driver and Vehicle Standards Agency (DVSA) operates in Britain and is responsible for HGV vehicle testing and driver testing arrangements. It does not operate in Northern Ireland and does not employ any staff here.

The functions of the DVSA reflect some of the responsibilities of the Driver Vehicle Agency (DVA) in Northern Ireland.

Details of the various interactions between the Driver Vehicle Agency (DVA) in Northern Ireland and its counterpart Driving Vehicle Standards Agency (DVSA) in the UK are outlined below:-

- Driver Certificate of Professional Competence – DVA and DVSA are joint-signatories of a UK-wide Drivers Certificate of Professional Competency service agreement and work closely together on the accreditation and quality assurance of training centres and their courses. Details of Northern Ireland vocational drivers are shared with DVSA to facilitate the production of Driver Qualification Cards.
- Driver Testing & Instruction – DVA and DVSA work closely together on a range of driver testing matters including: Approved Driving Instructor related issues including the mutual recognition of certificates; driver testing policies and standards; examiner training; EU legislation; and driving test related publications.
- Theory Test - DVA and DVSA are joint-signatories of the UK-wide theory test contract and work closely together on a range of contract and service management matters, and on wider theory test development initiatives.
- Vehicle Testing - DVA interacts with DVSA on vehicle testing matters of mutual interest, including vehicle testing standards and policies, testing procedures and guidance, legislation and future vehicle technology.
- Driver Licensing – For drivers wishing to acquire a Northern Ireland driving licence, who passed a test in Great Britain, DVA liaise with DVSA to establish their test results and licence entitlements.
- Product Group Meetings - DVA attends DVSA Product Group meetings on a quarterly basis to keep up to date with developments in GB to ensure that, where possible, DVA deliver a consistent compliance and enforcement approach across the UK Member State.
- Tripartite meetings – DVA meet regularly with DVSA and the Irish Road Safety Authority to review enforcement interactions between the agencies involved and to identify synergies from a co-ordinated enforcement approach in the following areas:
    - Optimising resources and effective scheduling of operations, at times and in locations where efforts can be concentrated on high risk operators and drivers;
    - Targeting/profiling of high risk operators;
    - Joint training opportunities;
    - Joint exchanges with specific themes;
    - Sharing of information on enforcement equipment;
    - Conduct of checks – best practice;
    - Raising profiles of checks.
- Information Sharing Agreement – there is a Memorandum of Understanding in place with DVSA to share information including Goods and Passenger Operator Licensing, Annual Test Outcomes and roadside enforcement encounters.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of whether any decision made in relation to E/2013/0093/F will set precedence for other similar applications.
(AQW 42508/11-15)

Mr Durkan: No decision has been made in connection to planning application E/2013/0093/F. My officials are in the process of reviewing the Environmental Statement and consulting with the necessary bodies.

In terms of precedence, I can advise that each application is assessed on its own merits and is subject to the full scrutiny of the planning process.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment whether he plans to develop a Strategic Environmental Impact Assessment that would encapsulate any future applications similar to E/2013/0093/F.
(AQW 42509/11-15)

Mr Durkan: A Strategic Environmental Impact Assessment is a process which is applied to plans and programmes. It is not a process which is applied to individual projects.

Application E/2013/0093/F is subject to an Environmental Impact Assessment under Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012. My officials are currently in the process of reviewing the Environmental Statement and consulting with the relevant bodies.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment what due diligence is undertaken on companies prior to the granting of planning permission as detailed in E/2013/0093/F, specifically in relation to their environmental performance track record.
(AQW 42510/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Each planning application is processed taking into account the information that accompanies the submission. The Department is charged with securing the orderly and consistent development of land and the planning of that development.

As planning permission is attached to the land and not the applicant, a company's environmental performance is not deemed to be a material planning consideration.

Mr Swann asked the Minister of the Environment what cognisance is taken of the 'flaring effect' as detailed in the P1 of E/2013/0093/F.
(AQW 42513/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The issue of flaring is being assessed as part of the processing of planning application E/2013/0093/F. The Department in currently consulting with the relevant bodies in relation to the information supplied in the Environmental Statement.

At this time, no decision has been made in relation to the application.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 40835/11-15, to confirm his Department's position that, for the purpose of Environmental Impact Assessment screening, an urban development project, as defined within Schedule 2.10(b) of the Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012, only applies to proposals located within defined settlement limits.
(AQW 42529/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Departmental position is that an urban development project, as identified within Schedule 2.10(b) of The Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012, does not only apply to proposals within defined settlement limits.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 40835/11-15, whether the construction of a development of 19 dwellings comprising an area greater than 0.5ha and located within a defined settlement requires an Environmental Impact Assessment (EIA) determination, whereas that same development outside of any settlement, located within an Area of High Scenic Value, adjacent to a Special Area of Conservation, does not require screening for EIA.
(AQW 42530/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Any residential proposal that meets the relevant thresholds/criteria set out in Schedule 2.10(b) of The Planning (Environmental Impact Assessment) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 2012, will require EIA screening. However, a residential proposal that is not within a sensitive area and does not meet the relevant thresholds/criteria set out in Schedule 2.10(b) of the Regulations may not necessarily require EIA screening. The Department considers all applications and the necessity for EIA screening on a case by case basis.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to outline all current applications for Judicial Review of decisions made by (i) his Department's Planning Office; and (ii) the Northern Ireland Environment Agency.
(AQW 42532/11-15)

Mr Durkan:

(i) Table 1 outlines the details of all current applications for judicial reviews of decisions made by DOE Planning.

(ii) Table 2 outlines the details of all current applications for judicial reviews of decisions made by the DOE's Northern Ireland Environment Agency.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment whether the new councils are prepared to take on local planning issues. (AQW 42571/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The councils are ready and prepared to take on their new planning responsibilities, with almost all of the necessary arrangements in place and the final tasks to be completed during March.

My preparations for transfer have involved a major programme of work to ensure that the systems, structures and resources are in place for a successful handover.

The local planning offices have been restructured in line with the new 11 council model and staff allocated to the relevant councils. The transfer of planning staff to council premises commenced in September last year, and 4 of the 6 councils that are relocating planning staff have completed the moves. The 2 remaining transfers, Belfast and North Down and Ards, will take place in March. My staff are continuing to work closely with the local government sector to ensure that all outstanding transitional arrangements and practical issues are addressed.

My Department has completed an extensive capacity building programme for local government. The programme will help to ensure that councillors have the confidence as well as the competence, to make prompt, sound planning decisions from day one. Planners transferring are also receiving additional training to ensure that every council has staff equipped with the necessary professional skills to fulfil the full range of planning functions.

Advice and guidance has been prepared for the councils on a wide variety of planning matters. This includes, for example, guidance on the operation of planning committees and on the application of the councillors' code of conduct in relation to planning, as well as practice notes on the operation of the new 2-tier planning system.

Finally, in January this year my Department informed each of the new councils of the financial allocation for their new planning and other transferring responsibilities. Councils now have certainty on the finance being transferred and can tailor their budgets accordingly.

I am confident that the preparations I have made will ensure that a fast, fair and fit for purpose planning system transfers on 1 April 2015 and that councils are equipped and resourced to fulfil their new planning functions from day one.

AQW 42573/11-15

The planning powers that will transfer to the councils are as follows:

- Local development planning;
- Development management - determining the vast majority of planning applications except for regionally significant and called-in applications;
- processing applications for non-urgent development on Crown land (non-regionally significant applications or applications which do not raise national security issues);
- entering into planning agreements on council determined applications;
- enforcement – enforcing against all breaches of planning control, issuing injunctions;
- approving non-material changes to planning permission;
- temporary listing of buildings of special architectural or historic interest;
- control of demolition or works to listed buildings (following consultation with the Department);
- conservation area designation;
- control of demolition in conservation areas;
- urgent works to preserve listed buildings and buildings in conservation areas;
- determining hazardous substances consent applications;
- applying tree preservation orders;
- determining tree preservation order consent applications;
- preservation of trees in conservation areas;
- control of advertisements;
- review of old minerals permissions (once powers commence);
- issuing completion notices (subject to confirmation by the Department);
- preparing simplified planning zone schemes;
- revoking, modifying or discontinuing planning permissions and consents (may require confirmation by the Department);
- compensation liabilities arising from council functions (mainly enforcement, listed buildings control, revocation, modification and discontinuance);
- responding to purchase and blight notices;
- issuing certificates of alternative development value; and
- maintaining a register of applications, consents, notices, certificates etc.

Mr Easton asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the planning powers that will transfer to local councils. (AQW 42573/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The councils are ready and prepared to take on their new planning responsibilities, with almost all of the necessary arrangements in place and the final tasks to be completed during March.

My preparations for transfer have involved a major programme of work to ensure that the systems, structures and resources are in place for a successful handover.

The local planning offices have been restructured in line with the new 11 council model and staff allocated to the relevant councils. The transfer of planning staff to council premises commenced in September last year, and 4 of the 6 councils that are relocating planning staff have completed the moves. The 2 remaining transfers, Belfast and North Down and Ards, will take place in March. My staff are continuing to work closely with the local government sector to ensure that all outstanding transitional arrangements and practical issues are addressed.

My Department has completed an extensive capacity building programme for local government. The programme will help to ensure that councillors have the confidence as well as the competence, to make prompt, sound planning decisions from day one. Planners transferring are also receiving additional training to ensure that every council has staff equipped with the necessary professional skills to fulfil the full range of planning functions.

Advice and guidance has been prepared for the councils on a wide variety of planning matters. This includes, for example, guidance on the operation of planning committees and on the application of the councillors' code of conduct in relation to planning, as well as practice notes on the operation of the new 2-tier planning system.

Finally, in January this year my Department informed each of the new councils of the financial allocation for their new planning and other transferring responsibilities. Councils now have certainty on the finance being transferred and can tailor their budgets accordingly.

I am confident that the preparations I have made will ensure that a fast, fair and fit for purpose planning system transfers on 1 April 2015 and that councils are equipped and resourced to fulfil their new planning functions from day one.

AQW 42573/11-15

The planning powers that will transfer to the councils are as follows:

- Local development planning;

- Development management - determining the vast majority of planning applications except for regionally significant and called-in applications;
- processing applications for non-urgent development on Crown land (non-regionally significant applications or applications which do not raise national security issues);
- entering into planning agreements on council determined applications;
- enforcement – enforcing against all breaches of planning control, issuing injunctions;
- approving non-material changes to planning permission;
- temporary listing of buildings of special architectural or historic interest;
- control of demolition or works to listed buildings (following consultation with the Department);
- conservation area designation;
- control of demolition in conservation areas;
- urgent works to preserve listed buildings and buildings in conservation areas;
- determining hazardous substances consent applications;
- applying tree preservation orders;
- determining tree preservation order consent applications;
- preservation of trees in conservation areas;
- control of advertisements;
- review of old minerals permissions (once powers commence);
- issuing completion notices (subject to confirmation by the Department);
- preparing simplified planning zone schemes;
- revoking, modifying or discontinuing planning permissions and consents (may require confirmation by the Department);
- compensation liabilities arising from council functions (mainly enforcement, listed buildings control, revocation, modification and discontinuance);
- responding to purchase and blight notices;
- issuing certificates of alternative development value; and
- maintaining a register of applications, consents, notices, certificates etc.

Mr Girvan asked the Minister of the Environment what steps his Department has taken to ensure the safety of horse riders using the roads; and whether he would consider introducing legislation to make it compulsory for all riders to wear a riding hat and high visibility clothing.
(AQW 42586/11-15)

Mr Durkan: Horse riders, along with pedestrians, cyclists and motorcyclists, are a vulnerable group due to their lack of protection. The Highway Code contains general rules for using the road as well as rules and advice which apply specifically to horse riders. The Rules about Animals section includes specific rules for horse riders (Rules 49 to 55). It outlines legal requirements and provides advice on many issues including safety equipment and other clothing as well as road positioning and procedures to be followed at roundabouts.

One of the Action Measures contained in the NI Road Safety Strategy to 2020 is to extend road safety website material to include new approaches and further advisory information, for example including information on horse riders and their safety. As such, in the last few months, an information and advice page has been developed for the NI Direct website and can be accessed at the link below.

www.nidirect.gov.uk/index/information-and-services/motoring/road-safety/horse-safety-on-the-road.htm

My Department has also developed a new leaflet entitled ‘Horse Sense for Riders and Motorists’. This leaflet was produced with the contribution and approval of The British Horse Society and Road Safety Scotland. The leaflet can be downloaded at:

www.nidirect.gov.uk/index/information-and-services/motoring/road-safety/road-safety-leaflets.htm

All of our campaigns are available to view on YouTube. Road safety weekly blogs in the form of e-mail messages, and Facebook and Twitter accounts, offer regular topical reminders for all road users, including horse riders.

My Department’s road safety campaign ‘Share the Road To Zero’ was launched in April 2013. The core message of this campaign is that if we all share the road, shouldn’t we all share the responsibility? The opening scene shows several road user groups and the main crash scene takes place on a rural road and involves a driver moving out to pass a horse and rider. This campaign encourages all road users to act appropriately on the roads and explicitly references the potential dangers when encountering horse riders on the road.

I believe that this material and communication provides positive advice for all road users, including horse riders and those encountering them on the roads. Given the activity already in place, and the low numbers of horse riders involved in road traffic collisions, I am not at this stage persuaded that making the wearing of helmets and high visibility clothing compulsory is appropriate or necessary.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of the Environment whether he plans to introduce legislation to ban the hunting of wild animals with dogs.
(AQW 42612/11-15)

Mr Durkan: As this does not fall within the responsibilities of my Department, I have no plans to bring forward legislation on the matter.

Ms Lo asked the Minister of the Environment, pursuant to AQW 41705/11-15, to confirm, that unlike the Champion v North Norfolk District Council case, planning approval K/2013/0072/F was subject to Appropriate Assessment; and for his assessment of the Court of Appeal ruling that there is no material distinction between the test for Environmental Impact Assessment and the test for Appropriate Assessment as regard the threshold of likelihood of significant effects.
(AQW 42630/11-15)

Mr Durkan: My officials have sought legal advice in relation to this question. I will provide a response at the earliest opportunity.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment for his assessment of whether fine and ultra-fine particles between PM2.5 - 0.1u microns are particularly damaging to human health by inhalation; and what assurance can provide to residents in East Belfast that the incinerator proposed by Bombardier will not release such particulates into the atmosphere.
(AQW 42652/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Full Circle Generation Ltd facility at Bombardier is regulated by a permit which implements the requirements of the Directive 2010/75/EU on Industrial Emissions (IED). Within the IED there are technical provisions laid down relating to the emission limit values for any such plant operating within the EU. The IED includes a total dust emission limit value from such facilities of 10 mg/m3 and does not distinguish between the differing fractions of dust. This limit has been included within the facilities permit and will be continuously monitored to ensure compliance.

My officials consulted with the Public Health Agency during the process of determining the permit application, as required under the legislation and no concerns were raised regarding the human health effects of this facility

The European Directive on Industrial Emissions does not, at present, specifically deal with nanoparticles produced from energy from waste plants. It is recommended that the question of fine and ultra-fine particles being particularly damaging to human health by inhalation should therefore be directed to the Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, who are likely to be in a better position to advise on this aspect.

There is a wide range of research activity surrounding the risks of such particles to human health at an E.U. and U.K. level. Our links to the E.U. and Defra ensure that, in Northern Ireland, we maintain policy measures and control to be consistent with current understanding.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment what is the safe level for emissions of fine and ultra-fine particles between PM2.5 - 0.1u microns from the proposed Bombardier incinerator.
(AQW 42653/11-15)

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) the amount of ash that will be produced annually from the Bombardier incinerator; (ii) the types of ash; (iii) the chemical composition of the types of ash; and (iv) the toxicity of the types of ash.
(AQW 42654/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Bombardier incinerator will be operated by Full Circle Generation Ltd. There are two main ash streams produced by this type of plant – bottom ash and fly ash. The plant is currently permitted to process 120,000 tonnes per annum of refuse derived fuel and is expected to produce 22,850 tonnes per annum of bottom ash and 7,150 tonnes per annum of fly ash respectively.

Until the plant is operational the chemical composition and toxicity of the ash cannot be determined. However, typically bottom ash would be regarded as non-hazardous waste and may be suitable for recovery routes such as aggregates. Fly ash is considered hazardous waste and would be sent to a suitable landfill. NIEA will ensure the recovery or disposal of both ash streams are fully compliant.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of the Environment to detail all costs associated with processing, printing and posting vehicle test reminder letters in each of the last three years.
(AQW 42671/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Driver & Vehicle Agency (DVA) issues vehicle test reminder letters to its customers, as a courtesy service, in advance of the vehicle's test due date. The costs associated with the reminder service in each of the last three (calendar) years are set out in the table below.

Year	Number of Reminders	Processing / Printing	Postage	Total
2012	745,983	£58,186.67	£198,995.77	£257,182.44
2013	758,204	£59,139.91	£219,437.05	£278,576.96
2014	779,954	£60,836.41	£236,658.09	£297,494.50

Mr Anderson asked the Minister of the Environment to detail the level of training his Department has provided local councillors in relation to planning given its imminent transfer to local councils.
(AQW 42704/11-15)

Mr Durkan: A series of training events were rolled out across Councils from early September 2014 to late January 2015. The sessions covered an overview of Planning for councillors; development plans and working with the community; practical Planning and propriety and outcomes for the Code of Conduct.

The training was facilitated and delivered by senior planning staff; staff from other Departments and outside bodies, including NI Housing Executive, and representatives from other jurisdictions with knowledge and experience of similar planning systems. The training programme was developed to help prepare those attending to understand the new planning system, the processes involved in making planning decisions and the need to comply with ethical standards.

At a local level, the Department continues to work closely with the new councils to provide training and guidance through, for example, working with the shadow Planning Committees or facilitating mock planning committee meetings which planning staff and councillors have attended.

The area planning managers are also taking responsibility for preparing, training and educating their staff for the change. Ongoing training for planners on the new two-tier planning system will continue to be delivered over the coming months to ensure that all involved in the new system have the necessary skills and competence to ensure the system is effectively delivered from day one.

Locally each new council has developed a training plan and has been allocated £100k to meet needs identified in that plan. This will provide training to cover new councillor induction and governance arrangements, as well as organisational design.

As well as the training given by councils and Planning HQ, regional training continues, covering areas such as community planning, via a contract with Community Places, and the new councillor code of conduct. Funding has also supported community planning workshops for all stakeholders involved in the process. Added to this, funding has been made available for developing a communications strategy in preparation for the transfer.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of the Environment to detail (i) whether his Department is aware of a Habitats Regulation Assessment carried out for Lough Neagh Special Protection Area by the extraction industry; (ii) for his assessment of whether the extraction industry fulfils the definition of a competent authority capable of carrying out an Habitats Regulation Assessment; and (iii) whether his assessment influenced his Department's decision not to enforce against unauthorised extraction.
(AQW 42709/11-15)

Mr Durkan: The Department is aware of a document titled Lough Neagh Sand Extraction Operations, Impacts of Sediment Rich Discharges, Preliminary Article 6 Assessment, Test of Likely Significance (April 2009).

This document was produced by a consultant acting on behalf of the Lough Neagh Sand Operators. It does not constitute a Habitats Regulations Assessment which must be completed by a 'competent authority' as defined by Article 5 of The Conservation (Nature Habitats, etc.) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1995 (as amended):

Competent authorities generally

5. For the purposes of these Regulations the expression "competent authority" includes government departments, district councils and statutory undertakers, and any trustees, commissioners, board or other persons who, as a public body and not for their own profit, act under any statutory provision for the improvement of any place or the production or supply of any commodity or service.

It is clear that the sand extraction operators do not constitute a competent authority as defined in the regulation above.

The document was not used as a HRA to grant any permission, consent or other authorisation for the industry. The information it contained was used, along with information from other sources, to determine the potential impacts on Lough Neagh from the discharges of the sand traders land based operations.

As detailed in previous responses, enforcement investigations on Lough Neagh are on-going.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of the Environment whether he will launch a public education campaign to inform consumers on the operation of the taxi industry in Belfast, given the non-implementation of the regulations aimed at giving effect to single tier licensing.
(AQW 42892/11-15)

Mr Durkan: During the annulment debate on 3 February 2015, a number of speakers noted the need to reach agreement and compromise on the regulations, to bring certainty for the taxi industry and its customers. I committed to play my part in this.

My Department will shortly be writing to all taxi drivers to update them on the legislative position. We will provide clear communication to the public on taxi licensing arrangements once agreement has been reached on the arrangements and prior to their implementation.

Department of Finance and Personnel

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the locations of the automatic teller machines that benefit from the rural area rates exemptions.
(AQW 40757/11-15)

Mr Hamilton (The Minister of Finance and Personnel): Automatic telling machines that benefit from the rural rates exemption are valued separately for rates (i.e. they are not located at a bank or building society premises) and are situated in a ward designated as rural under the Rates (Automatic Telling Machines) (Designation of Rural Areas) Order (Northern Ireland) 2006. That designation was made in line with the Report of the Inter-Departmental Urban-Rural Definition Group.

The location of the machines that benefit from the exemption are:-

Mr Weir asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what is his Department's definition of a rural area for the purpose of qualification for the rates exemption of automatic teller machines.

Mr Hamilton: Automatic telling machines that benefit from the rural rates exemption are valued separately for rates (i.e. they are not located at a bank or building society premises) and are situated in a ward designated as rural under the Rates (Automatic Telling Machines) (Designation of Rural Areas) Order (Northern Ireland) 2006. Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, within the context of the normal process of natural wastage and the experience of recent years, how long it would have taken to reduce the public service by 20,000 without an exit scheme, relying rather on a recruitment freeze.
(AQW 41238/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Natural wastage in the NICS has in recent years been in the region of 3.7% which equates to an annual reduction of around 1,000 employees. Information about natural wastage in the wider public sector is not held centrally. It is neither possible to predict what future natural wastage will be in the NICS nor to meaningfully extrapolate current NICS natural wastage figures to the wider public sector.

The Executive faces a range of financial pressures which require early action to reduce costs, particularly salary costs. The Executive has agreed to deploy a range of measures to reduce paybill costs including voluntary exit schemes, pay restraint and moratoria on recruitment.

This approach is similar to that which has been adopted in Scotland and in England and Wales where a combination of a moratorium on recruitment and voluntary exit schemes has achieved significant reductions in costs. In these jurisdictions, VE schemes have been used successfully to accelerate the staff reduction process. The Executive will be deploying VE schemes in a similar way to incentivise people to leave quickly and to minimise disruption through timely and planned use of redeployment.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail the number of quangos linked to his Department on (i) 8 May 2007; and (ii) 11 February 2015; and how many people served on the quangos on these respective dates.
(AQW 42179/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: At 8 May 2007 my Department was responsible for 8 arm's length bodies.

At 11 February 2015 my Department was responsible for 6 arm's length bodies.

At 8 May 2007 there were 208 staff serving on the arm's length bodies. There were 84 at 11 February 2015.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the business case/pay remit currently with his Department for approval for staff of the Housing Executive; (ii) when this issue was presented to his Department for consideration; and (iii) when he expects to make a decision on this matter.
(AQW 42405/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Public Sector Pay approval process requires that pay remits are approved by both the sponsor Department, in this case DSD, and the Finance Minister. I can confirm that I approved the NIHE pay remit on 13 February 2015. This was within the best practice 15 day target set for such approvals.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel to detail (i) the number of people (a) available for work; and (b) in work; and (ii) the number of job vacancies in each of the last three years.
(AQW 42526/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The estimated number of persons aged 16 or over who describe themselves as (a) available for work and (b) in employment is provided in Table 1 below.

The number of vacant positions notified by employers to the Department for Employment and Learning in 2011/12 and 2012/13 is presented in Table 2 below.

The statistics do not relate to the total unsatisfied demand for staff by employers, but to only those vacant positions that have been notified by employers to DEL.

Table 2 – Number of notified vacancies 2011-12 to 2012-13

Financial Year	Notified Vacancies
2011/12	48,658
2012/13	58,890

In December 2013 improvements were made to the methodology for recording and validating data on vacancies. These changes led to a break in the time series for vacancy statistics. A new series of vacancy statistics commenced in 2015. This data should not be directly compared with previous figures. The number of vacant positions notified to the Department for Employment and Learning in the first three quarters of 2014/15 is presented in Table 3 below.

Table 3 – Number of notified vacancies April-June 2014 to October-December 2014

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what steps he has taken to promote gender equality in most senior positions across the Northern Ireland Civil Service.
(AQW 42674/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The Northern Ireland Civil Service is committed to gender equality at all levels including at the most senior positions in the organisation where women are known to be under-represented. A variety of actions have been taken to improve the gender balance at senior levels such as in-depth reviews into the gender profile of all grades in the Northern Ireland Civil Service to identify areas of concern; the use of statements in job advertisements for senior posts welcoming applications from women; the establishment of a senior women's network and the decision in 2013 to fill vacancies at grade 3 and grade 5 by open recruitment rather than promotion.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 42202/11-15, to detail the percentage of government procurement spend which has been with Small and Medium Enterprises, in each year, since 2011.
(AQW 42717/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: CPD publishes an annual Procurement Activity Report, which details the value of contracts awarded by the Centres of Procurement Expertise to Small and Medium Enterprises (SMEs).

SMEs won 56% of the value of contracts awarded in the 2011/2012 year and 62% in the 2012/2013 year. This equates to 80% of the number of contracts awarded in each year.

The Procurement Activity Report for the 2013/14 year is currently being compiled.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel, pursuant to AQW 42202/11-15, to detail any specific training which is provided by the Central Procurement Directorate, for community and voluntary organisations, which offers financial advice and guidance on developing business plans and contract tendering.
(AQW 42719/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: CPD does not directly provide any training to suppliers. It does however, publish procurement guidance notes on its website that aim, amongst other things, to help third sector organisations develop their capability to compete successfully for public sector contracts.

CPD works closely with InterTradeIreland, and other partner organisations such as Invest NI, to ensure that resources and training are available that would potentially help community and voluntary sector suppliers compete for public sector contracts. More information on this is available on the websites of the respective organisations. CPD regularly provides speakers for tendering workshops provided by local councils and business network organisations such as the Federation of Small Businesses.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what plans he has to ensure staff are supported in their decision making as to whether to avail of the Voluntary Exit Scheme.
(AQW 42793/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Staff have been encouraged to read the Scheme information booklet, published on 2nd March, which launched the Scheme, sets out the terms and how to apply. Further guidance has been provided to typical queries, in the format of answers to Frequently Asked Questions and these will be regularly updated.

For staff working full time, an on-line calculator is available for them to work out what they may get under the terms of the Scheme. Staff who work part-time recently received a letter from Civil Service Pensions providing them with their likely compensation under the Scheme.

Other existing support mechanisms, including employment-related information, are also available to staff choosing to leave via the Voluntary Exit Scheme and while these will be signposted for staff, it is a decision for the individual as to whether to avail of the Voluntary Exit Scheme.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what is being done to prepare staff who might leave through the Voluntary Exit Scheme for the outside job market.
(AQW 42794/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The overarching objective of the NICS Voluntary Exit Scheme is a permanent NICS pay bill reduction in the 2015/16 financial year. It is a voluntary scheme, which will compensate staff who choose to apply and are selected to leave.

The normal support mechanisms to anyone wishing to seek alternative employment are available to staff choosing to leave via the Scheme, for example through the Department of Employment and Learning Careers Service and Employment Service. While sources of information already available, including employment-related information, will be signposted to staff, it is entirely a decision for the individual as to which future career path, if any, they wish to pursue on leaving the NICS.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what is being done to harness the skills of staff who will avail of the Voluntary Exit Scheme to ensure they are not lost but are marketed properly externally.
(AQW 42795/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The normal support mechanisms to anyone wishing to seek alternative employment are available to staff choosing to leave via the NICS Voluntary Exit Scheme. While these will be signposted to staff, it is entirely a decision for the individual as to which future career path, if any, they wish to pursue on leaving the NICS voluntarily.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel whether any Department would have the capacity to deliver support services for staff leaving through the Voluntary Exit Scheme, given the recent budgetary constraints.
(AQW 42797/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: The overarching objective of the NICS Voluntary Exit Scheme is a permanent NICS pay bill reduction in the 2015/16 financial year. It is a voluntary scheme, which will compensate staff who choose to apply and are selected to leave.

A wide range of support services which are already provided within existing departmental capacity, are available to staff choosing to leave via the Scheme. One example is the Department of Employment and Learning's Career and Employment Service and such sources of information will be signposted to staff.

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Finance and Personnel what plans are being put in place to prepare managers, who will not be leaving through the Voluntary Exit Scheme, to manage change.
(AQW 42891/11-15)

Mr Hamilton: Responsibility for managing change as a result of the NICS Voluntary Exit Scheme rests with individual departments. I am confident that managers within the NICS have the resilience and ability to deal with the challenges that will arise as a consequence of the pay bill reduction required in the current financial year. Furthermore, the Department will agree a comprehensive training programme with the Centre for Applied Learning, the NICS generic provider for Learning and Development, to support mangers at all levels across the organisation to manage change.

Department of Health, Social Services and Public Safety

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the total spent on each of the (i) capital; and (ii) other projects which have not proceeded since May 2007, including the loss resulting from each project.
(AQW 39838/11-15)

Mr Wells (The Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety): The information requested is presented below for projects exceeding £500,000, where a business case has been produced and approved, and where a decision has been taken to either not proceed or stop the project.

There are 2 projects which have not proceeded since May 2007.

Business case approval granted authority to spend capital of £2,620,655 on the construction of a replacement fire station in Ballycastle. This approval expired in February 2013, and as yet the project has not progressed. A small spend-to -date of £2,497.25, relates to legal fees and Land and Property Service fees. £14,280.24 was also spent on exemplar design works and a feasibility study for the fire station, under the Emergency Services Investment Programme (ESIP).

In October 2007, a decision was taken to stop the tender process for the Person Centred Community Information System Project (PCIS) project without award of contract. By that time the total recorded capital spend on the project was £9.3m of which £7.7m was spent by Trusts, and the remaining £1.6m was incurred by the Department. Of that spend Trusts recorded an impairment of £0.88m in their 2007/08 accounts in respect of this project and DHSSPS recorded an impairment of £0.34m. The remainder of the spend was considered to be of benefit to the project having provided access to computers for an additional 4000 staff together with improved systems and working practices in a number of community services.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 41050/11-15, whether he has any plans to proceed with those bids submitted to the Change Fund that were not accepted
(AQW 42087/11-15)

Mr Wells: The final budget settlement for my Department in 2015/16 presents significant financial challenges and does not currently facilitate funding of service developments, including the bids submitted to the Change Fund that were not accepted.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the financial resource rebate received by his Department through the Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme; and for a breakdown of where this resource will be, or has been, allocated.
(AQW 42361/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme (PPRS) 2014 started on 1 January 2014. Returns to Northern Ireland from year one of the scheme to date are detailed in the following table.

	Quarter 1 (Jan –Mar)	Quarter 2 (Apr-Jun)	Quarter 3 (Jul-Sep)
Amount	£3.53 m	£3.83 m	£3.92 m

Returns from the PPRS will continue to be re-invested to support pressures across HSC including branded medicines.

Ms Maeve McLaughlin asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what progress has been made with regard to the 5-7 hospital networks recommended in Transforming Your Care.
(AQW 42377/11-15)

Mr Wells: I would refer the Member to my statement in the Assembly on 27 January 2015 concerning Sir Liam Donaldson's report on his review of the Quality of Care in Northern Ireland, when I said:

"This is a time for those who are committed to the delivery of high-quality health and social care services to engage in open, honest, intelligent debate about how we move forward. The report should force us collectively to raise the standard of our debate on health and care and to focus on the prize, which is a world-class health and care service. We need to recognise the realities that we face and to arrive at the right decisions, beginning by ensuring that we are asking the right questions. Too often, discussion about the health service can be overly simplistic and focused on a simple choice between closing or keeping open a particular facility. In this context, the reaction of the local community is understandable and instinctive: a save-our-service mentality. In reality, though, it is not about saving a service, but saving a structure. The real choice that we face is an uncomfortable one for us all, including political representatives. It is this: do we want a world-class service or a service on our doorstep, which, while convenient, may be sub-optimal and compromise quality and safety? The discussion about the right structure for our services and hospitals has been going on for many years under different administrations and under the leadership of Ministers from different political parties. The message from Sir Liam is clear — I need to emphasise this point — we now need a mature debate and we need to strive for political consensus to empower us collectively to make the right choice. Borne out of a desire for that mature debate, I have chosen to place this report in the public domain and to address the Assembly at an early stage in the interests of openness and transparency. I want to allow a wide range of stakeholders the earliest possible opportunity to reflect on the report and to begin to formulate solutions to meet the challenges in it. These solutions can only be informed by openness and honesty about where we are now and what has to be done to deliver the changes needed. Whilst we are moving ahead with some of the recommendations that I have outlined today, I am also asking for written comments on the recommendations to be submitted to the Department by the end of April 2015. That gives an opportunity for stakeholders to reflect and engage with one another, political representatives and the Department".

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the number of patients receiving dialysis in each Health and Social Care Trust in each of the last three years; and for his assessment of the capacity of each Trust to meet demand within their respective catchment area.
(AQW 42402/11-15)

Mr Wells: The number of patients receiving haemodialysis in each Health and Social Care Trust in each of the last three calendar years is set out in the table below. The Belfast Trust is included in a separate table as the information has been collected by financial year.

	2012	2013	2014
SEHSCT	107	110	102
NHSCT	125-130	125-130	125-130
WHSCT	139	117	124
SHSCT	213	174	163

	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14
BHSCT	210	208	180

The Northern Trust is currently operating at full capacity. As a result, approximately 50 patients receive their Haemodialysis treatments in neighbouring Trust units.

Each of the other Trusts is currently operating within capacity.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 41251/11-15, for further details on the advice provided in AQW 38677/11-15 on 'the efforts that are being made to address' the difficulties recruiting staff for a pain management clinic.
(AQW 42404/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Western Health and Social Care Trust's Pain Management Service currently supports a comprehensive range of chronic pain management through Consultant Anaesthetists based at both the Tyrone County Hospital and Altnagelvin Hospital sites. These include outpatient clinics at Altnagelvin and Tyrone County Hospital, interventional techniques at Altnagelvin and Tyrone County Hospital and a pain management programme based at Tyrone County Hospital.

The Trust has been developing a "hub-and-spoke" model for chronic pain management within the Trust. This would centre pain activity and resources in Tyrone County Hospital with satellite activity in the South West Acute Hospital and Altnagelvin.

While there are presently no pain clinics at the South West Acute Hospital, the principal limiting factor to the expansion of clinics is the availability of medical staff with expertise in pain management. Recruitment remains challenging and suitably trained specialists are expected to remain in short supply.

I appreciate that a small number of patients have to travel to avail of this service; however, the current service is meeting the clinical care needs of patients and will continue to do so.

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many elective surgeries have been cancelled in each Health and Social Care Trust in each of the last twelve months.
(AQW 42415/11-15)

Mr Wells: The number of elective operations cancelled by the hospital on the day of, or up to two days prior to, the planned operation, in each month between 1st February 2014 and 31st January 2015 is provided in the table below. The data have been differentiated by cancellations made for clinical or non-clinical reasons.

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many patients, who have had elective surgery postponed in the last year, are still waiting; and how long each patient had to wait for their surgery to be rescheduled, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 42416/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the number of patients, who have had elective surgery postponed in the last year, that are still waiting; and how long each patient had to wait for their surgery to be rescheduled, is not available.

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the (i) type; and (ii) number of elective surgery cancelled within the twelve months, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 42417/11-15)

Mr Wells: The number of elective operations cancelled by the hospital on the day of, or up to two days prior to, the planned operation, between 1st February 2014 and 31st January 2015 is provided in the table below. The data have been differentiated by cancellations made for clinical or non-clinical reasons.

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what measures he is taking to reduce pressure on the Emergency Department at the Royal Victoria Hospital; and what plans he has in place to increase bed capacity in the Belfast Health and Social Care Trust to ease pressure in Emergency Departments.
(AQW 42418/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department, through the work of the unscheduled care task group has been working closely with the HSC to ensure that our emergency care services are better prepared this winter. In addition, I have allocated £5 million of additional funding to the HSC this winter and a further £750,000 has been made available from the Health and Social Care Board. Within the Belfast Trust, funding has been used to provide additional Emergency Department and Acute Medical Unit consultants, AHP and pharmacy staff, and a Hospital Ambulance Liaison Officer.

The Belfast Health and Social Care Trust has been developing a programme of change and improvement to its unscheduled care services. The Trust is working to improve discharge processes to ensure the sickest patients have the quickest access to beds; and it has the ability to open additional beds if required at times of increased pressure in emergency departments. The Trust operates BCH Direct, a direct access assessment unit in the Belfast City Hospital for GPs who refer frail elderly patients via ambulance and by-passing the emergency department; the Trust has created extra capacity for imaging at weekends; and has Rapid Access Neuro Clinics in the Royal Victoria Hospital for people presenting to the emergency department with seizures.

The Trust has also recently physically moved 12 wards and six clinics in the Royal Victoria Hospital (308 beds) by co-locating specialisms in order to reduce outliers and further improve the efficiency of bed management.

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many additional staff have been employed to increase the capacity of the Emergency Department at the Royal Victoria Hospital.
(AQW 42420/11-15)

Mr Wells: Belfast HSC Trust has provided whole-time equivalent (WTE) figures for medical and qualified nursing staff at the Royal Victoria Hospital's Emergency Department since 2011. The figures in the table below are as at 1 December in each year.

Year	Medical WTE	Qualified Nursing WTE
2011	30	39.74
2012	34	44.36
2013	38	106.39
2014	35	103.56

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) the number of patients who suffer from ME and Fibromyalgia; and (ii) the availability of specialist consultants and support services for local patients who suffer from these illnesses.
(AQW 42448/11-15)

Mr Wells: Data is not collected in a suitable format to determine the number of patients who suffer from Myalgic Encephalopathy (ME) and Fibromyalgia.

Health and Social Care Trusts do not provide a specialist Chronic Fatigue Syndrome/ME service, but GPs may refer to a wide range of specialists such as cardiology or neurology depending on the most prominent presenting conditions by the individual patient.

The provision of services are determined on a case-by-case basis and tailored to the patient's need. These include, for example, physiotherapy and pain management.
The services for fibromyalgia are also provided on the same basis.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of whether his Department could achieve greater efficiencies in the future by opening up to public tender the awarding of pharmacy tenancies within local hospitals.
(AQW 42471/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department is committed to the efficient and effective use of resources to sustain frontline health and social care services. However, this type of arrangement has not been explored to date and I have no immediate plans to do so.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how much has been spent on Genitourinary Medicine Clinics in each of the last three financial years, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 42473/11-15)

Mr Wells:

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, in relation to the current £27 million spend on cancer drugs, for a breakdown of expenditure by (i) name of drug; (ii) type of cancer it is applicable to; and (iii) the number of recipients of each drug.
(AQW 42537/11-15)

Mr Wells: The total cancer drug expenditure in 2013/14 was £27m. This expenditure relates to a number of specialist cancer drugs which can be used across a large number of different indications. The information requested on the breakdown of spend by name of drug, type of cancer and number of patients is not available as the current clinical oncology information system (COIS) does not provide this level of detail. However, work is well underway in relation to the launch of a new regional information system for oncology and haematology (RISOH) and this system will provide detailed prescribing information by tumour site and indication. It is expected that this system will be fully operational across all Health and Social Care Trusts by summer 2016.

The projected total cancer drug expenditure for 2014/15 is approximately £30m

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of whether the proposed specialised medicines fund will result in patients in Northern Ireland having restricted access to specialised cancer drugs when compared with those in England and Scotland.
(AQW 42538/11-15)

Mr Wells: The proposed specialist medicines fund for Northern Ireland has not yet been established and it is therefore not possible at this stage to provide the detail requested. The proposed fund for Northern Ireland will have a different remit and objectives than drug funds in other jurisdictions e.g. there is no single specialist drugs fund in England to compare with.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, with regard to the proposed specialised medicines fund, to detail (i) the projected annual spend on specialised drugs under the fund; and (ii) the estimated projected income that would be received from prescription charges.
(AQW 42539/11-15)

Mr Wells: It is planned to use the proposed Specialist Medicines Fund to finance increased access to unapproved treatments through the revised Individual Funding Request (IFR) process and also to contribute to pressures on growth in specialist medicines approved by NICE.

The estimated annual cost of the revised IFR system is expected to be between £4.8m and £9.5m. In 2015/16, the projected growth in new NICE approved specialist medicines is £3-5 million.

My Department is conducting a public consultation exercise on the question of the use of prescription charges to support a specialist medicines fund. That consultation process runs until 8 May.

My Department is currently finalising work on the detail and projected income of possible charging models and I am aiming to make this information available in the coming weeks.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the drugs and treatments that will be provided to patients under the proposed specialised medicines fund.
(AQW 42541/11-15)

Mr Wells: Given the large number of new innovative drugs and treatments coming to the market each year it is not possible at this stage to provide the detail requested.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what are the latest food hygiene ratings for the public eating areas in each of the acute hospital.
(AQW 42548/11-15)

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the predicted time-scale for the placement of a Consultant Neurologist Multiple Sclerosis Specialist in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 42564/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Health and Social Care Trust (NHSCT) provides a generalist neurology service for patients with a range of neurological conditions including MS, Epilepsy and Parkinson's diseases.

A second NHSCT neurology generalist consultant has been funded by the commissioner and the Trust is actively seeking appointment to this post. The timeframe for appointment is dependent on the availability of a suitable neurologist.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 39822/11-15, whether he can confirm the location of the mental health unit for the southern sector of the Western Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 42566/11-15)

Mr Wells: As previously advised, the Western Health and Social Care Trust is currently developing a business case to assist in determining the need for and location of the second mental health unit for the Western Trust area. No decision on location will be taken until the business case has been completed.

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many specialists in ME and Fibromyalgia Symposium are currently employed in Northern Ireland.
(AQW 42583/11-15)

Mr Wells: There is currently one (1.0 whole-time equivalent) specialist Occupational Therapist employed in the Chronic Fatigue Syndrome/ME service within the Belfast HSC Trust.

There are no staff specifically employed to provide services only to patients with fibromyalgia. However, GPs may refer individuals to consultant rheumatologists, neurologists, etc. Where clinically required, patients with this condition can also access the services of relevant Allied Health Professions.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the follow-up appointment arrangements following a Duchenne Muscular Dystrohphy patient receiving treatment with Translarna; and how this impacts on the availability of physiotherapy treatment for other children.
(AQW 42589/11-15)

Mr Wells: Translarna has not been made available for the treatment of people with Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy other than as part of a clinical trial(which is being undertaken by the drug company). It is therefore not possible to provide details regarding the follow up appointment arrangements for Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy patients receiving this treatment or how it may impact on the availability of physiotherapy treatment for other children.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what was the average waiting time for a hip replacement operation in each of the last three years; and what efforts are being made to reduce waiting times.
(AQW 42596/11-15)

Mr Wells: Waiting time information is collected on the basis of how long patients are currently waiting for inpatient admission and not the completed length of time they waited before admission. Information relates to patients still waiting for inpatient admission at the end of each quarter.

The average number of weeks waiting for hip replacement surgery, at 31st December 2014, the most recent quarter for which official statistics are available, and the position at the end of the same quarter in each of the two years previous, is detailed in the table below.

	Average number of weeks waiting for a hip replacement operation
	At 31st December 2012	At 31st December 2013	At 31st December 2014
Northern Ireland	16.5	17.8	20.0

The Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) continues to work with Health and Social Care Trusts to address the increasing demand for orthopaedic procedures. For example, the HSCB has recently agreed an additional investment of £4m in the trauma and orthopaedic service for the Southern Trust which will increase capacity and help reduce waiting times.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety how many firefighter work related deaths have occurred in each of the last five years; and how this compares with other regions of the UK.
(AQW 42597/11-15)

Mr Wells: There have been no firefighter work related deaths in Northern Ireland in the five year period 1 April 2009 to 31 March 2014. Statistics for firefighter fatalities in other regions of the UK over the same period are not readily available.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what support the Fire and Rescue Service is being given to invest to save.
(AQW 42598/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) are responsible for the delivery of an efficient and effective Fire and Rescue Service in Northern Ireland and as such have responsibility for identifying areas requiring investment to ensure efficiency.

My Department provides both oversight and support through the development and progression of all business cases seeking investment.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what non-statutory services would be cut in the the event of a 5 per cent reduction in the Fire and Rescue Service budget.
(AQW 42599/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service (NIFRS) have been asked to finalise efficiency plans before submission to my Department.

NIFRS savings proposals must be prioritised on the basis of those that minimise the impact on service delivery, and ensure the continued safety of both the public and the firefighters who deliver the service.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what action he will take to improve the availability of out-of-hours doctors to alleviate the pressure on the Emergency Department at Craigavon Area Hospital.
(AQW 42600/11-15)

Mr Wells: Consistent with the position across most Emergency Departments, Craigavon Hospital's Emergency Department has experienced an increase in attendances over the winter period. The Southern Health and Social Care Trust has responded to these pressures and maintained their Emergency Department performance against key targets. Alongside the pressures at Emergency Departments there has been an 18% increase in demand for out-of-hours doctors over the past five years.

Both the Health and Social Care Board (the Board) and the Southern Trust have recognised this challenge and have been working to meet it.

The Board has also invested an additional £1.5m in out-of-hours services across Northern Ireland. It is working with all of the out-of-hours providers in order to boost the number of out-of-hours shifts that are filled.

More broadly, the Board allocated £550k of additional funding to the Southern Trust to support measures to respond to increased demand for winter pressures, including additional shifts and enhanced payments to GPs for difficult to fill shifts particularly at weekends and bank holidays. It has also provided funding to the Trust for recruitment of additional acute physicians to implement a new model for acute medicine in Craigavon Area Hospital.

I understand the Southern Trust has an on-going recruitment process for both sessional and contracted GPs and is exploring the potential to recruit suitably qualified GPs from overseas. It has also undertaken a nurse recruitment process with 30 triage nurses and 5 advance nurse practitioners appointed to date. The advance nurse practitioners are already in post and are in process of training the 30 nurses who are gradually commencing work. These nurses will provide triage and resolution of calls by telephone and face to face consultations at out-of-hours bases.

During March the Trust will be piloting a scheme which will offer a contribution to sessional GPs to help with indemnity insurance in return for a minimum commitment of 20 clinical hours per month.

The Trust is also currently seeking IT solutions to facilitate GPs in triaging calls at home and is exploring the use of remote telehealth for home consultations by a paramedic/nurse.

In addition the Trust has commenced a 6 month pilot project in which pharmacists will work in the out-of-hours service, to support and streamline service delivery such as responding to calls related to medication issues. This pilot project commenced on 1st March, with the recruitment of 9 pharmacists to provide a service between (11-4pm) Saturday, Sunday and Bank Holidays.

As a second phase of on-going continuous improvement the Trust put in place a Service Improvement Lead until 31st March 2015. The Trust has also appointed a Service Improvement Lead whose role is to undertake a rapid modernisation and improvement project for the Trust's out-of-hours service.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assessment has been made of the number of Fire Service appliances that are unavailable for a proportion of the day due to the lack of staff resources.
(AQW 42609/11-15)

Mr Wells: The availability of Retained fire appliances during day time hours, Monday to Friday, is an issue which impacts on Fire and Rescue Services across the UK. The Northern Ireland Fire and Rescue Service's (NIFRS) approach to monitoring Retained availability and assessing any impact on service delivery reflects national best practice.

NIFRS has conducted a review of operational contingency arrangements to support day-time availability of Retained fire appliances and a dedicated Working Group has been tasked with developing policies and procedures which will enhance the use of existing resources going forward.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what changes recipients of the Independent Living Fund will see after 30 June 2015; and whether he can provide an assurance that current users will not have their support reduced.
(AQW 42631/11-15)

Mr Wells: I am currently considering a detailed briefing paper from my officials on a proposed way forward and I plan to my announce my decision shortly on how best ILF users will be supported following the closure of the Fund in June 2015.

My Department will do all it can to ensure that those disabled people in Northern Ireland who are most in need of our care and support are not disadvantaged by the Department of Work and Pension's decision.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 38678/11-15, to provide further details on the acute coronary care unit in the South West Acute Hospital, including (i) the services provided by this unit; (ii) the treatments provided by this unit; (iii) how many patients received treatment in the unit in each of the last four quarters; (iv) how many surgeons are on call and based within the unit; and (v) how this compares with the situation in Altnagelvin Hospital.
(AQW 42677/11-15)

Mr Wells:

(i) The acute Coronary Care Unit in the South West Acute Hospital, accepts acute coronary admissions.

(ii) The Unit provides invasive treatment, including CT, MRI, echo, transoesophageal echo, ambulatory BP, ECG monitoring and DC cardioversion.

(iii) The number of patients treated in each of the last four quarters is set out in the table below.

	South West Acute Hospital Coronary Care Unit
Year 2014	Admissions	Day Cases
Quarter 1	136	16
Quarter 2	150	11
Quarter 3	138	20
Quarter 4	196	15

(iv) There are no cardiac surgeons in the South West Acute Hospital or any other hospital in Northern Ireland except Belfast.

(v) The number of patients treated in Altnagelvin Hospital Coronary Care Unit in each of the last four quarters is set out in the table below.

	Altnagelvin Hospital Coronary Care Unit
Year 2014	Admissions	Day Cases
Quarter 1	224	13
Quarter 2	179	12
Quarter 3	176	10
Quarter 4	187	9

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of budget reductions at the (i) Health and Social Care Board; and (ii) Public Health Agency, in terms of (i) staffing levels; and (ii) service quality.
(AQW 42679/11-15)

Mr Wells: The HSCB and PHA are currently developing specific proposals for the Department's consideration to address their savings targets of 15% of their administration budgets in 2015/16. Where possible, these will be focused on non-public facing areas and will seek to minimise the impact on front line service delivery. It is also anticipated that savings can be identified through the Permanent Secretary-led Review of Administration.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 42274/11-15, to detail the action plans for each Integrated Care Partnership.
(AQW 42681/11-15)

Mr Wells: As set out in AQW 42273/11-15, ICPs in the Belfast, Northern, South Eastern, Southern and Western areas have produced action plans for their areas. Whilst there is some variation in the format and content of these action plans, the following key elements are reflected across the majority of action plans:

- Details of proposed actions to facilitate care pathway implementation and enhanced service provision;
- Allocation of lead responsibilities for implementation of individual actions;
- Planned investment proposals for specific ICP initiatives;
- Arrangements for reporting/monitoring; and
- Planned outcomes and outputs.

These action plans are supported by details of current and proposed care pathways and locally-focussed review of opportunities to address gaps in existing service provision.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 42274/11-15, to provide a financial breakdown of the current expenditure on Integrated Care Partnerships, including (i) the projected spend; and (ii) the actual spend, within the current financial year.
(AQW 42682/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Southern Education and Library Board (SELB) who has responsibility for capital minor works at Donacloney Primary School, has advised that the cost of placing any additional mobile classrooms since the building of the school is as follows:-

*2008/09	2009/10	2010/11	2011/12	2012/13	2013/14	2014/15	Overall Total
£25,129	£10,354	£0	£0	£0	£0	£0	£35,483

*costs have only been provided for a period of six financial years in addition to the current financial year in line with the record retention policy of the SELB.

Details of projected and estimated actual spend for Integrated Care Partnerships for the current financial year are:

2014/15	Projected Spend as per 2014/15 Commissioning Plan	Full Year Forecast at 18th Feb 2015	Actual Expenditure at 31st Jan 15
Integrated Care Partnerships	£3.5m	£2.8m	Not available until mid March 15*

The estimated underspend reflects lower than anticipated costs from ICP committee members and Business and Clinical Support Teams as well as the fact that some service initiatives have not started as quickly as anticipated.

* The actual expenditure figures to the 31st January 2015 are currently awaiting the submission of Trust returns, not all of which have been received at the time of this response.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment for the need to conduct up-to-date research on current and future dependency levels on the needs of recipients of domiciliary care provision and of residents in nursing and residential care homes.
(AQW 42685/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Department and HSC bodies draw on a range of currently available data sources to ensure that the future needs of the population are planned for.

Previous patterns of demand are valuable for indicating possible demand trends and can be used to inform future service planning. It is clear that with an ageing population the demand for domiciliary care and nursing home care will continue to grow while residential care will continue to provide an important role.

The Health and Social Care Board, the Public Health Agency, Local Commissioning Groups, and HSC Trusts work together to ensure that the current and future needs of the population are planned for.

However, as demands upon services increase, such new demands must be accommodated within a fixed budget allocation. As a consequence, decisions about service eligibility and the prioritisation of client need are increasingly important issues in the planning of future service delivery.

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the location of the pancreatic cancer centre.
(AQW 42712/11-15)

Mr Wells: Northern Ireland patients with suspected pancreatic cancer are referred to the regional hepato-pancreato-biliary multi-disciplinary team. Surgery for cancer of the pancreas is carried out in the Mater Hospital, Belfast.

Systemic anti-cancer treatments are provided by oncologists at Altnagelvin Hospital, the Ulster Hospital, Dundonald, Craigavon Area Hospital and Belfast Cancer Centre.

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what funding is available for the Regional Hepato-Pancreato-Biliary Surgical Service.
(AQW 42713/11-15)

Mr Wells: I refer the member to my reply to his previous question concerning this service, AQW 39652/11-15.

Mr Buchanan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety whether pancreatic cancer will be highlight in the new cancer awareness campaign.
(AQW 42714/11-15)

Mr Wells: Pancreatic cancer is not one of the cancers to be highlighted in the Public Health Agency's Be Cancer Aware public information campaign. This campaign was launched on 24 February 2015 and the first phase is focussing on the top three most prevalent cancers in Northern Ireland (lung, breast and bowel). Together these three cancers accounted for 55% of new cancers diagnosed in Northern Ireland in 2012 (excluding non-melanoma skin cancer).

It is envisaged that a later phase of the campaign will include other new tumour sites but the selection of these has yet to be determined.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the outcomes of the pilot scheme providing rural community pharmacies with extra funding.
(AQW 42716/11-15)

Mr Wells: The Health and Social Care Board funded a pilot scheme to support access to pharmacy services in predominantly rural areas. The purpose of the pilot was to support patient access to pharmacy services and as such the pharmacies were required to provide services for a minimum of 40 hours per week over six days. A total of 74 pharmacies received funding.

The Board has completed an evaluation to assess the impact of the financial support. The evaluation has demonstrated that 9.4% of the pharmacies did not meet the requirement to provide services for a minimum of 40 hours per week over six days and that there was no increase in opening hours in 82% of the pilot pharmacies. However, the funding enabled 56% of pilot pharmacies to increase their staffing – primarily through an increase in pharmacy support staff hours.

The volume of dispensing increased by an average of 22% in pilot pharmacies, compared with an average increase of 18% across all other pharmacies. Twelve (16%) of the pharmacies reported that the funding had enabled them to remain open/ financially viable.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 42023/11-15, to detail (i) which elements of these reserves are cash reserves; and (ii) how cash reserves are being used, for example, whether there are financial investments involved.
(AQW 42743/11-15)

Mr Wells: The cash balances reported by the HSC trusts as at 31 March 2014 were as follows:

	£m
WHSCT	3.3
BHSCT	21.4
SHSCT	2.2
SEHSCT	2.1
NHSCT	5.0
	34.0

HSC Trusts do not retain financial investments and draw down their estimated cash requirements from the Department on a weekly basis in order to meet ongoing operational business needs (such as the payment of wages, salaries and other bills). Cash balances therefore vary from day to day depending on timing and value of payment cycles.

Financial investments made by Charitable Trust Funds as at 31 March 2014 are summarised in the table below. Charitable Trust Funds are managed independently of normal HSC Trust operations and are utilised for the purpose intended by the benefactor. They are therefore not available for utilisation by the Trusts as part of its routine operational requirements.

	Investments[1] £000	Short Term Investments [2] and Deposits £000	Cash £000
WHSCT	2,112	1,595	28
BHSCT	41,253	972	659

SEHSCT	6,703		365
NHSCT	1,676	3,500	470
	54,422	6,167	1,620

Notes:

(1) Investments are primarily held by the Common Investment Fund operated by the BHSCT on behalf of the HSC.

(2) Funds retained in short term investment or interest bearing bank accounts.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 42360/11-15, to detail all organisations which have benefited from this funding in the last financial year.
(AQW 42779/11-15)

Mr Wells: I refer to my response to AQW 39553/11-15, which lists all the voluntary organisations funded by my Department, both from the core funding budget and from other programme funds.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the impact of the proposed fifteen per cent reduction in the Public Health Agency budget and the subsequent impact this will have on (i) staff levels; and (ii) public health initiatives.
(AQW 42781/11-15)

Mr Wells: The PHA is currently developing specific proposals for the Department's consideration to address its savings target. Where possible, these will be focused on non-public facing areas and will seek to minimise the impact on front line service delivery. It is also anticipated that savings can be identified through the Permanent Secretary-led Review of Administration.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the total value of private donations made to each Health and Social Care Trust in each of the last three years.
(AQW 42782/11-15)

Mr Wells: The total value of 'Charitable Donations and Other Contributions to Expenditure' for each HSC trust for the last three years is as follows:

	2011/12 £000	2012/13 £000	2013/14 £000

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail all sources of income generation utilised by each Health and Social Care Trust in each of the last three years; and to provide the total financial amount derived from each source.
(AQW 42783/11-15)

Mr Wells: The total external income generated by each HSC trust in the last three years is detailed in the following tables:

Mrs Cochrane asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail (i) what his Department is doing to address audiology capacity issues in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust and the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust, which are severely impacting upon waiting times in these areas; and (ii) whether the Action on Hearing Loss Hear to Help aftercare service could be utilised as a means to alleviate pressures on these audiology services.
(AQW 42791/11-15)

Mr Wells:

(i) Across Northern Ireland the demand for audiology services exceeds the capacity that Health and Social Care Trusts (HSCTs) have to deliver through 5 audiology posts. This is predominately in the Northern Health and Social Care Trust and the South Eastern Health and Social Care Trust. The Health and Social Care Board has plans in place with both HSC Trusts that will address these gaps and this will ensure that the audiology service across Northern Ireland is fully resourced to meet the demand for services. It should be noted however that currently there is a recruitment and retention difficulty with audiologists across Northern Ireland and as a result Trusts have a number of vacant posts, resulting in longer waiting times for patients.

(ii) In view of the current financial challenges, my Department and the Health and Social Care Board (HSCB) are jointly reviewing all non-recurrent funding including pilot funding provided by the HSCB to Action On Hearing Loss' Hear to Help Service.

Once funding for the 2015/16 financial year is confirmed, I understand that the HSCB will actively consider continuation funding for existing projects including "Hear to Help" to enable appropriate evaluation to take place of the particular service that they provide.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety to detail the Agenda for Change banding of the 1,058 nurses categorised as district nurses in the departmental workforce census of March 2014.
(AQW 42800/11-15)

Mr Wells: The information requested is shown in the table below.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what is the protocol for action to be taken by a GP if a patient makes a direct threat to attempt suicide.
(AQW 42822/11-15)

Mr Wells: A GP will assess the mental state of patient, taking appropriate clinical action dependent upon the severity of assessed symptoms and risk present in each individual case. If a GP determines the patient has a serious mental illness or is at high risk of suicide, immediate referral to secondary specialist psychiatric services should be made for further assessment and management. If an individual, because of the nature and degree of their mental disorder, places themselves and/ or others at risk and they are deemed unwilling or unable to accept care and treatment, the law places a responsibility on the GP (and other health and social care professionals) to intervene. The action taken is framed by the legislation, 'The Mental Health (Northern Ireland) Order 1986'. If the GP determines there is no immediate risk to either the patient or the public they may arrange to review the patient themselves. The time frame will depend on the clinical situation.

GPs are guided in evidence based clinical practice by published guidance such as NICE guideline CG16 "Self-harm: The short-term physical and psychological management and secondary prevention of self-harm in primary and secondary care", (published 2004) and the 2014 the Royal College of General Practitioners / Royal College of Psychiatrists guidance "Suicide Mitigation in Primary Care Factsheet". Guidelines and Audit Implementation Network (GAIN) has issued Northern Ireland guidance "Guidelines for Northern Ireland for the Care of Seriously Mentally Ill Patients under the Mental Health Order 2006".

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for his assessment of the current health provision to treat and support people who are recovering from eating disorders; and what funding has been allocated to programmes and facilities that provide this care, in each of the last three years.
(AQW 42847/11-15)

Mr Wells: Eating Disorder Services are provided through a stepped care approach which ranges from early detection and intervention, to community-based treatment, to specialist inpatient provision.

Community-based Specialist Eating Disorder Services are available across all five HSC Trusts (with Belfast Trust providing services for the South Eastern Trust) for both adults and children and young people.

Inpatient treatment for adults with an eating disorder is facilitated in existing hospitals with in-reach support provided by specialist community-based eating disorder teams. This ensures a continuum of care when patients are discharged.

Inpatient care for children and adolescents with eating disorders is usually provided at Beechcroft, the Regional Child and Adolescent Mental Health Inpatient Unit. If the patient's condition is primarily physical, clinicians may decide that the best place for treatment is an acute hospital setting.

If a patient requires more intense specialist treatment for anorexia, Trusts can access beds in England, Scotland and Ireland through the Extra Contractual Referral (ECR) process.

A total of £2 million per annum is allocated to specialist Eating Disorder Services, and this has been the case since 2008/09. This figure does not include inpatient care or the cost of treatment for eating disorders provided outside Northern Ireland.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for an update on the Support For Parents Delivering Social Change Signature Programme, including the number of families who have benefited from this programme since 2012.
(AQW 42919/11-15)

Mr Wells: Significant progress continues to be made on four parenting support programmes being delivered through the Public Health Agency (PHA) as part of the Delivering Social Change programme. These provide additional high quality support to new and existing parents living in areas of deprivation through positive parenting programmes.

Two of the four programmes are delivered direct to families. By the end of December 2014 26 Parenting Your Teen programmes have been delivered to 313 parents and 632 children, with 89% of families completing the programme. A further 117 families had completed the Strengthening Families programme.

The remaining two programmes aim to improve the quality of services delivered to families. Funding is being used to increase the number of organisations who deliver the Incredible Years programme in NI to the highest quality and adherence to programme fidelity standards. In addition, by the end of December 2014, a total of 342 early years and HSC professionals had undertaken Infant Mental Health training through one of 3 new training programmes being funded. The investment in Infant

Mental Health Training has also enabled the establishment of a regional Infant Mental Health Plan that will determine the level of investment required beyond the current scale of training resourced under Delivering Social Change.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 42323/11-15, for a financial breakdown of Supplement for Undergraduate Medical and Dental Education funding over the last three years, broken down by Health and Social Care Trust.
(AQW 42947/11-15)

Mr Wells: The funding provided to HSC trusts over the past three financial years under the Support for Undergraduate Medical and Dental Education is set out in the attached table.

Year	hsc trust	allocation
2014/2015	Belfast HSC Trust	£22,485,127
	South Eastern HSC Trust	£1,931,988
	Northern HSC Trust	£1,804,770
	Southern HSC Trust	£1,930,374
	Western HSC Trust	£2,189,638
2013/2014	Belfast HSC Trust	£22,880,437
	South Eastern HSC Trust	£1,801,862
	Northern HSC Trust	£1,621,735
	Southern HSC Trust	£1,782,898
	Western HSC Trust	£2,125,037
2012/2013	Belfast HSC Trust	£23,293,184
	South Eastern HSC Trust	£1,799,613
	Northern HSC Trust	£1,582,629
	Southern HSC Trust	£1,645,931
	Western HSC Trust	£1,982,769

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 42323/11-15, for his assessment of benefits of reforming Supplement for Undergraduate Medical and Dental Education allocation as a means to attract a greater number of students into the GP specialism.
(AQW 42948/11-15)

Mr Wells: One of the objectives of the impending review of the Supplement for Undergraduate Medical and Dental Education (SUMDE) will be to enhance the accountability and transparency of the very considerable investment made by my Department in supporting undergraduate medical and dental education. The Department will seek to explore ways in which the funding allocations can be made more flexible and responsive to any future developments in the undergraduate medical curriculum.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety for a breakdown of waiting times for Occupational Therapists across each Health and Social Care Trust area, over the last year.

Mr McKinney asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant of AQW 42323/11-15, to outline the cause of the delay in this review.
(AQW 42950/11-15)

Mr Wells: Pursuant to AQW 42323/11-15, the timing of the review of the Supplement for Undergraduate Medical and Dental Education is subject to the necessary resources being identified to take it forward in light of other competing Departmental priorities.

Mr Lyttle asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety what assessment his Department has made of Applied Behavioural Analysis as an appropriate and effective intervention for children with autism.
(AQW 43046/11-15)

Mr Wells: My Department recognises that there are a number of interventions for autism, including Applied Behaviour Analysis (ABA), but does not advocate any particular approach. This is a decision for clinicians to make, based on individually assessed needs and good practice evidence.

The range of individually tailored programmes which HSC Trusts provide, are drawn from a wide body of research and evidence. Many of these interventions use approaches from the theoretical frameworks which contribute to ABA (e.g. positive behaviour management strategies and understanding of communicating through behaviour). Following assessment Trusts work collaboratively with children and their families to provide a systemic-based therapeutic intervention, which includes working with children, young people and their families in their communities.

It should be noted that, while most ABA programmes focus solely on the child, the approach adopted by HSC Trusts means they can work with the child but also the parent (focussing on developing supports, effective and consistent parenting strategies, etc) or the school, to support the young person with autism.

Mr McGimpsey asked the Minister of Health, Social Services and Public Safety, pursuant to AQW 42416/11-15, why the information is not available and whether each Health and Social Care Trust indicated that it is not available.
(AQW 43128/11-15)

Mr Wells: Information on the number of patients, who have had elective surgery postponed in the last year, that are still waiting: and how long each patient had to wait for their surgery to be rescheduled, is not available as it is not collected centrally on a single computer system either within the Department or any of the Health and Social Care Trusts.

To obtain such information a manual linking exercise would need to be undertaken to link patient records across a number of computer systems. Given the manual nature of this exercise it would involve extensive resources, and therefore could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

This has been confirmed by each Health and Social Care Trust.

Department of Justice

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41792/11-15, whether he will order a review into why legal aid was granted to the level of senior counsel for each defendant in this case.
(AQW 42368/11-15)

Mr Ford (The Minister of Justice): The decision to grant criminal legal aid, and accordingly the granting of two counsel, is a matter for the Court. While it is inappropriate for me to comment on individual judicial decisions, this case involved charges which could have resulted in life imprisonment for the defendants, and therefore is the type of case category where it could be expected that this level of representation would be appropriate.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 40980/11-15, to provide the final costs, or an estimate of same, of translators for this case.
(AQW 42435/11-15)

Mr Ford: The estimated cost of interpreters for this case is provided in the table below.

Cost Type	Estimated Cost
a) Legal Aid	£128.50
b) Prosecution	£369.90
c) Court Costs	£9,454.12
Total	£9,952.52

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, pursuant to AQW 41355/11-15, to detail any similar school visits made in each of the previous two years.
(AQW 42438/11-15)

Mr Ford: As stated in AQW/41355/11-15, the Northern Ireland Prison Service did not visit schools during 2012 and 2013. However, the Northern Ireland Schools and Colleges Association as part of the 'Experience of Work' programme delivered, on behalf of NIPS, a presentation in approximately 20 schools showing the work of NIPS to promote careers in the service. The presentation was delivered prior to the launch of the 2013 Prisoner Custody Officer and Custody Prison Officer recruitment campaigns. In addition, NIPS was represented at a number of Further Education Careers Fairs to promote NIPS as an employer of choice.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) whether lawyers are self-regulated in claiming funds from legal aid; and if not (ii) to outline the accountability of the Legal Services Agency NI or his Department to scrutinise legal aid claimed in both criminal and civil cases to ensure they fully meet the criteria and all actions, advices and expenses claimed for were fully carried out, particularly in cases of high cost.
(AQW 42439/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Northern Ireland Legal Services Commission is responsible for scrutinising claims submitted for payment from the Legal Aid Fund. Claims must be submitted in a prescribed format, often against Rules and Regulations which set out the basis upon which the Commission can authorise payments. In addition, certain claims are subject to scrutiny and approval by the Taxing Master, as an independent judicial officer.

The Commission performs a range of detailed checks to satisfy itself as to the propriety and regularity of all claims.

The Legal Services Agency Northern Ireland, which will be established on 1 April 2015, will have the same responsibilities for scrutinising claims before payment. The Department will shortly legislate to establish a Statutory Registration Scheme for all providers of publicly funded legal services. This will serve to strength the governance and accountability around legal aid. Practitioners wishing to continue to provide publicly funded legal services will be required to formally register with the Agency, adhere to a Code of Practice and facilitate examinations by the Agency to ensure compliance with the Code, including claiming remuneration.

Mr Frew asked the Minister of Justice what assurances he can give that the Transmission X-Ray Full Body Scanners proposed to be used in prisons detect non-metallic items and smaller packaged items like drugs.
(AQW 42478/11-15)

Mr Ford: Under the legislation for the use of ionising radiation the Northern Ireland Prison Service must complete a full justification process and obtain a licence.

That licence must be obtained prior to any evaluation of the effectiveness of transmission x-ray search technology in the prison environment.

The justification process is necessarily complex and comprehensive, and work is ongoing. Our application is predicated on the prospect of future advances in technology that would render scanners as a viable alternative to security.

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice for a breakdown of the £17-19m annual cost of Legacy Inquest Cases anticipated in the Stormont Castle Agreement.
(AQW 42497/11-15)

Mr Ford: The estimated annual legal cost of Legacy Inquest Cases, set out in the Stormont Castle Agreement, was based on the historic cost of a typical legacy inquest (£1.5m) scaled up to provide an equivalent figure for all legacy inquests awaiting inquest (£80m) and divided by five to provide an annual figure (£16m) over a five year delivery period. To this was added the estimated annual costs of expanding court support to cover the increased throughput and the higher cost of High Court Judges hearing the more complex cases (£1-3m).

Mr Allister asked the Minister of Justice how much of the £17-19m annual cost of Legacy Inquest Cases anticipated in the Stormont Castle Agreement is funding for legal aid.
(AQW 42500/11-15)

Mr Ford: The estimated annual funding for legal aid for legacy inquest cases is approximately £1.9m.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister of Justice, following the trial of a number of people in connection with the death of Kevin McDaid in Coleraine in 2009, to detail the total cost of the preparation and trial from May 2009 to completion.
(AQW 42549/11-15)

Mr Ford: The estimated cost of the preparation and trial for this case is provided in the table below.

Cost Type	Estimated Cost
a) Legal Aid	£1,648,320
b) Prosecution1	£124,837
c) Court (Judiciary and staff costs)	£26,118
d) Facilities (e.g. courtroom accommodation)	£6,051
e) Police2	-
Total	£1,805,326

1 In the absence of detailed records of time spent on individual cases it is not possible to produce precise or even average costs for a particular case. Some costs are identifiable however, for example the fees paid to prosecuting counsel and expenses paid to witnesses and expert witnesses.

2 It is not possible to quantify the associated PSNI costs in respect of investigation, prosecution and trial as a breakdown of expenditure is not recorded in a readily accessible manner.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many courthouses which have had drop-down bollards installed (i) have reported operational issues with the bollards; and (ii) do not have all bollards fully functioning.
(AQW 42555/11-15)

Mr Ford: It is not the policy of my Department to comment in detail on security matters. However, I can confirm that the supplier of the drop down bollards was not involved in their installation. On-going maintenance and repair is the responsibility of Properties Division within the Department of Finance and Personnel. The cost to install drop down bollards throughout the Estate was £219,800 at a maintenance cost to date of £26,107.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether the supplier of the drop-down bollards at courthouses also carried out the installations; and who is responsible for ongoing maintenance and repair.
(AQW 42556/11-15)

Mr Ford: It is not the policy of my Department to comment in detail on security matters. However, I can confirm that the supplier of the drop down bollards was not involved in their installation. On-going maintenance and repair is the responsibility of Properties Division within the Department of Finance and Personnel. The cost to install drop down bollards throughout the Estate was £219,800 at a maintenance cost to date of £26,107.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to list the courthouses which have had drop-down bollards installed; and to detail cost of (i) installation; and (ii) maintenance at each courthouse.
(AQW 42557/11-15)

Mr Ford: It is not the policy of my Department to comment in detail on security matters. However, I can confirm that the supplier of the drop down bollards was not involved in their installation. On-going maintenance and repair is the responsibility of Properties Division within the Department of Finance and Personnel. The cost to install drop down bollards throughout the Estate was £219,800 at a maintenance cost to date of £26,107.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice what further consideration has been given to the introduction of Sarah's Law; and what challenges or difficulties would be faced in introducing and enforcing such a law.
(AQW 42558/11-15)

Mr Ford: Ongoing review has shown that the current administrative disclosure arrangements are working well.

Disclosure of information to protect children already takes place and will continue under normal police operating practices. Parents and others who have immediate concerns about any individual whom they fear is posing a risk to the safety of a child should go to the police or social services at any time about their concerns. The PSNI have in place local public protection teams to deal with these issues. Children's services in Health and Social Care Trusts also have a role to protect children and work closely with police where a risk to a child is identified, under the Protocol for Joint Investigation by Social Workers and Police Officers of Alleged and Suspected Cases of Child Abuse – Northern Ireland. Social Services are also represented on the local public protection teams.

The relevant criminal justice agencies have not raised any recent public protection concerns that need to be addressed by making changes to the arrangements. I have, therefore, no current plans to alter the administrative system of disclosure at this time as there are no pressing reasons for legislative provision. I will, however, continue to keep the arrangements under review.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister of Justice how his Department is working with arm's-length bodies to address cyber bullying and harassment.
(AQW 42563/11-15)

Mr Ford: The Department of Justice, through the local Policing and Community Safety Partnership (PCSP) network, has done much to develop internet safety and tackle the growing prevalence of cyberbullying and some of its very harmful consequences.

This work is directed at safeguarding young people in the digital world and educating them so they feel safe when accessing e-technologies. PCSPs, in partnership with Health Trusts and PSNI, have developed a range of e-safety resources for children, parents and practitioners on internet and on-line safety, sexting, cyberbullying and reporting abuse.

The Youth Justice Agency is represented, at committee level, on the Safeguarding Board for Northern Ireland which has been commissioned to develop a Northern Ireland e-safety strategy on behalf of the Northern Ireland Executive. I look forward to the publication of this strategy and will consider how my Department can best contribute to its success.

Harassment and bullying are already criminal offences in Northern Ireland, whether perpetrated directly or in the form of cyber bullying. The maximum penalty for harassment is two years imprisonment, which may be increased to seven years where there is the threat of violence, or 10 years where a person threatens to kill another.

In addition, recent changes to the law introduced by the Criminal Justice and Courts Act 2015 have increased the penalties for certain offences under the Malicious Communications Act 1988 to a maximum of two years imprisonment.

Whilst I have no further plans to change our laws at this time, along with my officials, I will be keeping developments in other jurisdictions under review.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many cases are currently within the court system in which human trafficking is a charge or charges, broken down by court division.
(AQW 42637/11-15)

Mr Ford: The number of cases, currently before the court, in which human trafficking forms an element of the charge are set out in the table below.

County Court Division	Number of Active Cases
Antrim	1
Craigavon	2
Total	3

Mr Ross asked the Minister of Justice (i) how many (a) prosecutions; and (b) convictions have been secured for a breaches of a (i) liquor license; and (ii) restaurant license, in each of the past ten years; (ii) for what reason did the breach occur; and how many restauranteurs have been (a) prosecuted; and (b) convicted for charging customers corkage fees, in each of the past ten years.
(AQW 42649/11-15)

Mr Ford: Offences in relation to breaches of liquor licences may be prosecuted under the Licensing (Northern Ireland) Order 1996 and the Registration of Clubs (Northern Ireland) Order 1996.

Databases held by the Department do not contain detail on the business type of the defendant and so it is not possible to distinguish whether a breach relates to a restaurant, or to some other type of establishment. In the tables provided, offences related to breach of liquor licences have been aggregated into groups relating to the general category of specific offence description.

There is no specific offence related to charging customers corkage fees. It has therefore not been possible to provide this information from data held.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice, in relation to courthouse closure proposals, (i) whether he plans to list specific divisional sittings into the host courthouses whilst keeping them under jurisdictional judges; (ii) if so, whether this will lead to additional sitting days; (iii) whether cases will be merged into existing lists under the resident judges; (iv) if so, what impact this will have on on staff working hours; and (v) whether court sittings will have to be extended to accommodate larger lists. (AQW 42684/11-15)

Mr Ford: In respect of parts (i), (ii) and (iii), the consultation paper sets out an illustrative calendar for those courthouses receiving business being transferred from a closing courthouse. The proposals do not envisage any change or reduction in the current schedule of sitting days and judicial allocation. The listing of court business and allocation of judiciary to court sittings is a matter for the Lord Chief Justice. The Lord Chief Justice and the presiding judiciary periodically review court calendars to ensure effective and efficient listing practices, which may result in an increase or reduction in the number of court sitting days for certain business types.

In respect of parts (iv) and (v) the proposals will have no impact on the contracted working hours of any court staff and it is intended that the size of court lists will reflect the ordinary hours of sittings of each court as set out in rules of court or by direction of the Lord Chief Justice.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many cases passed through Magistrates court in the 2013/14 financial year, broken down by court division; and how this compares to the 2010/11 financial year.
(AQW 42690/11-15)

Mr Ford: Details of business disposed in the Magistrates' Court during the financial years 2010/11 and 2013/14, presented by Court Division and business type, are outlined in the table below.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice how many applications were granted at magistrates courts for legal aid to be extended or certified to cover senior counsel in 2014, broken down by court division.
(AQW 42691/11-15)

Mr Ford: There were two applications granted at the Magistrates' Court during 2014 for legal aid to be extended or certified to cover senior counsel, both in the Craigavon Court Division.

Mr McNarry asked the Minister of Justice to detail (i) the number of awards of damages made by High Court Judges over the last four years; (ii) the amount of each of these awards; and (iii) the reason for the award.
(AQW 42706/11-15)

Mr Ford: Details of Queen's Bench Writs for damages, which have been disposed of by High Court Judges, by the amount awarded and cause of claim are outlined in Tables 1–4 below.

Unliquidated claims include cases where the amount awarded is not known or recorded, for example where terms were endorsed or agreed between the parties. To provide a reason for each individual award would require a manual review of court records and incur a disproportionate cost. For presentational purposes the amount awarded has been grouped rather than providing details of each individual case.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice whether the proposal to close a number of courthouses will lead to a reduction in the number of district judges; and if so, whether this is a cost-saving exercise.
(AQW 42761/11-15)

Mr Ford: The proposals to rationalise the court estate will not lead to a reduction in the number of district judges.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice in how many Magistartes' court cases in the 2014 calender year was legal aid granted for certification for (i) junior counsel; and (ii) senior counsel for the purposes of a Preliminary Investigation or mixed committal, broken down by court division.
(AQW 42762/11-15)

Mr Ford: The information requested is detailed in the table below.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice (i) whether Prison Service staffing levels have led to any facilities operating below acceptable staffing levels during the last two years; if so, (ii) what impact his had on health and safety of staff and prisoners; and (iii) how often risk assessments are conducted to ensure adherence to health and safety requirements.
(AQW 42763/11-15)

Mr Ford: Work Area Risk Assessments and Regime Delivery Quotas (RDQs) are in place and kept under review for all residential areas in prisons in Northern Ireland. If there is not the full complement of staff on duty RDQs give guidance on the regime that can be delivered to prisoners in line with the numbers of staff on duty.

Lord Morrow asked the Minister of Justice to outline the process for applications for funding from the Offender Levy; and who is eligible and ineligible to apply.
(AQW 42806/11-15)

Mr Ford: Revenue from the Offender Levy is allocated through the Victims of Crime Fund to support the delivery of the Department's five-year victim and witness strategy and may include local initiatives taken forward by groups working with victims and witnesses in the community. Funding of strategic initiatives is allocated through the Victim and Witness Steering Group. Funding of local initiatives, when initiated by the Department, is channelled through Policing and Community Safety Partnerships and is directed specifically towards the start-up funding of new projects or one-off funding to new time-limited projects. The Victims of Crime Fund is not an open competition grant scheme.

Department for Regional Development

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development to detail the (i) number; and (ii) percentage of public transport passengers, across the three Translink service providers, who will be affected by higher fare increases due to differential pricing changes to different routes than the headline averages of 5.3 per cent for Metro, 4 per cent for Ulsterbus and 4.5 per cent for NI Railways.
(AQW 40464/11-15)

Mr Kennedy (The Minister for Regional Development): The Translink fare increase implemented on 16th February 2015 was the first increase since May 2013.

Translink holds statistics on passenger journeys rather than passengers so the percentages referred to below relate to journeys as opposed to passengers.

The potential number and percentage of public transport passenger journeys which could be affected by a higher than average increase for each of the three operating companies is shown in the table below. It is important to say that the percentages shown relate to all journeys undertaken but excluding concessionary journeys. It is also important to say that the percentages are based on existing customer behaviour and could change.

Company	No. of Passenger Journeys Potentially Affected by a Higher than Average Fare Increase	% of Passenger Journeys Potentially Affected by a Higher than Average Fare Increase
Ulsterbus	7,913,946	52
Metro	12,010,439	61
NI Railways	4,667,046	44

Translink makes a considerable effort to advise customers of the best fares for their particular travel options and encourage passengers to move to better value ticket. This is achieved through a variety of means including customer engagement programmes that promote best value ticket options, leaflet information available at stations, online lookup facilities on the Translink website. Advice and information can be obtained through the ‘What Ticket’ and ‘Special Offers’ sections of Translink’s website.

Mr Flanagan asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQW 28743/11-15, for an update on the independent review of the project consultant’s work in respect of the completion of the Appropriate Assessment process and the adequacy of the screening work previously carried out by Mouchel on the A5 Western Transport Corridor project.
(AQW 42425/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department commissioned an independent consultant to review the environmental work associated with the A5 scheme carried out by the project consultant, Mouchel.

The review was carried out in two phases. To minimise the delay to the scheme, the first phase looked forward at the proposed methodology to comply with the EU Habitats directive.

Four draft reports to inform the Appropriate Assessment under the Habitats Directive in relation the impact of the A5WTC on designated environmental sites were reviewed and approved by the independent consultant in advance of their publication. Public consultation on three of the reports concluded on 13 June 2014 and consultation on the fourth report concluded on 28 November 2014.

An Environmental Scoping Report, informing the new Environmental Statement, was also reviewed and accepted by the independent consultant. The first phase was completed in autumn 2014.

The second phase of the review was to report on the Habitats Directive screening work carried out by Mouchel prior to the court judgement in April 2013. An initial draft report has been received by my officials and it is expected this work will be finalised in the next month or so.

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister for Regional Development how much (i) salt; and (ii) grit is currently in stock for the winter treatment of roads.
(AQW 42428/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department currently has approximately 70,000 tonnes of Rock Salt in stock. Rock salt is the primary material used in the delivery of the winter service programme and is the material used to provide precautionary treatments of the main road network. Rock salt is a specialist material which is only available from specialist suppliers.

Grit is used for many applications by my Department and is freely available from local quarries and suppliers. It is not frequently used as part of the precautionary winter treatments of the main road network and is not stocked in large volumes as it can be sourced as and when required. Currently there are approximately 2000 tonnes of Grit in stock.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development for an update on the progress of the proposed new through road from Beechfield Estate, Donaghadee to the Newtownards Road.
(AQW 42429/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department does not have any current proposals to provide a new through road from Beechfield Estate, Donaghadee to the Newtownards Road.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what new road resurfacing schemes in Holywood are planned between now and the end of this financial year.
(AQW 42431/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer the Member to the answer provided in response to AQW 42430/11-15.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what new road resurfacing schemes in Millisle are planned between now and the end of this financial year.
(AQW 42432/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer the Member to the answer provided in response to AQW 42430/11-15.

Mr Weir asked the Minister for Regional Development what criteria is used by his Department to define a bridge.
(AQW 42445/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: While there are many published definitions for a bridge, the definition used by my Department is contained in BD 63/07 – Inspection of Highway Structures, a constituent part of the Design Manual for Roads and Bridges.

In the document, the term "bridge" is one of a number of similar types of structure which have a common definition. Other types of structure covered by this definition would include buried structures, subway underpasses and culverts.

The common definition applied to these structures is:

> "A structure supporting the highway as it crosses an obstacle (e.g. river, valley or flood plain) or a service (e.g. local road, railway or canal) OR a structure supporting the passage of a service (e.g. local road, railway, canal) over the highway."

A similar definition for a bridge, from British Standard BS ISO 6707-1:2014, is:

> "civil engineering works that affords passage to pedestrians, animals, vehicles and service(s) above obstacles or between two points at a height above ground."

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister for Regional Development, pursuant to AQO 7060/11-15, what is the alternative route for the A6 referred to in his answer.
(AQW 42450/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Preferred Route, presented by my officials at the Public Inquiry, bypasses Dungiven to the south of the town. The alternative route, which was presented by a third party on the final day of the Public Inquiry, deviates from the preferred line over a length of 2.8 km, also to the south of Dungiven in the vicinity of the Rivers Roe and Owenrigh.

Mr McElduff asked the Minister for Regional Development whether his Department will investigate, in association with other relevant agencies and Departments, the availability of land in public ownership on the Brookmount Road Omagh, in close proximity to St Conor's Primary School, for the purposes of providing additional parking capacity in that area.
(AQW 42472/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My officials are aware of the significant demand for parking at St Conor's Primary School at pupil drop-off and pick-up times, a situation which is common to the vast majority of schools across Northern Ireland. Whilst I am content for my officials to provide advice in relation to the layout and operation of any off-road parking facility, I consider it would be more appropriate for the Department of Education rather than my Department to take the lead on this issue as the parking requirement is clearly linked to the school.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what new footpath resurfacing schemes in Donaghadee are planned between now and the end of this financial year.
(AQW 42511/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer the Member to my answer to AQW 42430/11-15.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what new footpath resurfacing schemes in Millisle are planned between now and the end of this financial year.
(AQW 42512/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer the Member to my answer to AQW 42430/11-15.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what new footpath resurfacing schemes in Holywood are planned between now and the end of this financial year.
(AQW 42514/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer the Member to my answer to AQW 42430/11-15.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what new footpath resurfacing schemes in Bangor are planned between now and the end of this financial year.
(AQW 42515/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer the Member to my answer to AQW 42430/11-15.

Mr Agnew asked the Minister for Regional Development when he was first presented with the findings of the public local inquiry into the proposed duelling of the A6 Derry to Dungiven strategic roads proposal; and for an update on the status of this proposal.
(AQW 42568/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The Inspector presented the report to me on 13 March 2013. One of the Inspector's recommendations was to examine a suggested alternative route for the Dungiven Bypass, put forward by a third party on the final day of the Public Inquiry, and we are currently quality assuring that route.

The work is nearing completion and, when I am satisfied that all of the issues have been appropriately reviewed, I will issue a Departmental Statement.

Progression of the project would then, subject to final approval of the business case, be reliant upon funding being made available by the Executive.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Regional Development when the residents' parking scheme in the Bogside area of Derry will be implemented.
(AQW 42595/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department is currently finalising the draft legislation for the Rossville Street Residents Parking Scheme in Londonderry prior to progressing to the consultation stage. It is anticipated the consultation period for this scheme will commence in March 2015.

The timeline for delivery of the scheme will be dependent upon the outcome of the consultation exercise and nature of any objections. In the absence of any significant objections, the implementation process to deliver the scheme could commence in spring 2015.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development what major new road projects are planned for the 2015/16 period.
(AQW 42616/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would advise the Member that the contract for the construction of the A26 Dualling scheme, awarded to the BAM/McCann Joint Venture (JV), had a formal contract start date of 19 January 2015. Site set-up and mobilisation commenced in February and the main works are due to start in April 2015.

The contract for the A31 Magherafelt Bypass was awarded to the BAM/McCann JV on 18 February 2014. Construction is expected to commence in March 2015.

Work is also well advanced to appoint a contractor in 2015 to develop the design of the A6 Randalstown to Castledawson scheme, thereby allowing construction to commence at relatively short notice when funding becomes available in the future.

In addition, the A8 Belfast to Larne Dualling scheme is at an advanced stage and due to open to traffic by the end of May 2015 and the A2 Shore Road, Greenisland scheme is on programme for completion in late summer 2015.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Regional Development when the passing loop on the Londonderry to Coleraine railway line will be complete.
(AQW 42658/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The passing loop is part of the overall construction work (including signalling) to be undertaken. As set out last year in my communication on this issue a timetable for completion at the end of 2016 is in place. This remains the case.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Regional Development what further input his Department has had on the site entrance and changes to road condition of the new P1 for planning application E/2013/0093/F.
(AQW 42659/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: My Department was initially consulted in August 2013 on a planning application from Rathlin Energy Ltd for the drilling of an exploratory borehole at Ballinlea Road, Ballycastle. Since this initial consultation, my officials have attended a number of meetings with the applicant's consultants and have commented on a number of revised submissions.

The applicant has now submitted an Environmental Statement along with a revised P1 form. The Environmental Statement contains a substantial amount of traffic and road related information and is currently being assessed by my Department.

Mr Swann asked the Minister for Regional Development, in relation to planning application E/2013/0093/F, where the applicant will source the water for their processes; and where they will dispose of their waste water as detailed in the new P1.
(AQW 42660/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The site is in close proximity to the existing water distribution source. It is anticipated that there will be demand for a water connection for domestic purposes to the site huts and offices and some limited demand on the distribution system for operational usage perhaps from on-site storage. This is in keeping with previous applications for similar exercises in the past.

NI Water has no public sewers in the area, and waste disposal will therefore require on-site disposal, e.g. chemical toilets, septic tank, cess pit etc. However this is not within the remit of NI Water.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Regional Development to outline any potential new road calming measures planned for the Holywood area.
(AQW 42670/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I would refer the Member to the answer provided in response to AQW 42669/11-15.

Mr McKay asked the Minister for Regional Development when the 20mph signage will be erected at Leyland Meadows, Ballycastle.
(AQW 42737/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Whilst my Department is not currently in the process of erecting 20mph signage at Leyland Meadows, I can confirm that the scheme to introduce a 20mph speed limit at Whitehall in Ballycastle is substantially complete, with all 20mph signs erected. Some red surfacing work has still to be completed and this will be carried out when weather conditions permit. This speed limit is now in place and is enforceable.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Regional Development how long Translink is tied into the price it is currently paying for fuel.
(AQW 42816/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: Translink has advised that its 'fuel forward purchasing' arrangement is in place up to March 2017.

This arrangement caters for about 90% of the volumes required up to end September 2016 and approximately 50% of the volumes required from October 2016 to March 2017.

The current fall in the cost of fuel will be reflected in fuel costs incurred by Translink beyond those timeframes.

Translink engages in fuel forward purchasing in order to provide certainty around its fuel costs, as part of its corporate planning process, and to prevent both it and its customers from being exposed to sudden significant increases in fuel prices.

Mr Ó hOisín asked the Minister for Regional Development when community transport providers, that receive grant support through the Rural Transport Fund and the Transport Programme for People with Disabilities, will receive confirmation of funding levels for the 2015-16 financial year.
(AQW 42834/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: The budget for the Rural Transport Fund (RTF) and Transport Programme for People with Disabilities for 2015-16 is part of the overall Departmental budget which I have only recently agreed. In view of the financial position there will have to be reductions in funding to community and rural transport. It would be expected that through improvements in service delivery there should be a limited impact on the level of service provided.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister for Regional Development what investigations have been undertaken on the potential use of the Larne Railway Line for the purposes of freight, connecting Larne port with the wider railway network.
(AQW 42838/11-15)

Mr Kennedy: I can advise you that no specific investigations have been undertaken by NI Railways in respect of freight operations on the Larne line. However there are no capacity restrictions on the current rail network that would prevent NI Railways in carrying rail freight, should a demand arise.

The Northern Ireland rail network is, and always has been, open to existing and new rail operators to seek to offer services including freight, and no application has ever been received from other operators interested in providing freight or passenger services.

The Railway Investment Prioritisation Strategy which sets out the strategic direction for future railways investment over the next 20 does not envisage a demand for the development of rail freight facilities to any of Northern Ireland ports within its timeframe.

Department for Social Development

Mr McAleer asked the Minister for Social Development to outline his plans for investment in rural areas.
(AQW 41996/11-15)

Mr Storey (The Minister for Social Development): The position in respect of 2015/16 budget has now been finalised by the Executive and Departmental finance staff are currently working through internal allocations. I am currently considering my plans for investment in rural areas.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development to explain the various options and elements deployed in Table A of Annex A of the Stormont Castle Agreement.
(AQW 42506/11-15)

Mr Storey: At further Consideration Stage debate on the Welfare Reform Bill, I outlined for the Assembly the main elements contained in Table A of Annex A of the Stormont Castle Agreement.

I am unable to provide any further detail on the different elements as they remain to be agreed by the Executive. Following that agreement the Social Development Committee will be briefed and the detail issued for public consultation.

Mr Hussey asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 42075/11-15, (i) to detail the debt involved; (ii) to publish the asset register; (iii) what publicly funded items were recovered; (iv) what reviews and inspections were completed by his Department over the three years prior to this organisation failing; (v) what steps have been taken in relation to the office holders who oversaw this collapse; and (vi) what lessons have been learned by his Department.
(AQW 42565/11-15)

Mr Storey:

i There was an outstanding debt of £95,982 owing to HM Revenue & Customs (HMRC). As noted in my previous answer, it has not been possible to determine how much, if any, of the outstanding HMRC liability was in respect of the funding provided by my Department.

ii. The Department does not hold any other records relating to the organisation's asset register. The Community Centre at Tullyally was the only asset leased to the Tullyally and District Development Group Ltd. The Community Centre has since been taken back into the control of the City Council.

iii. My Department's support for the organisation covered salaries and running costs only. No physical assets were grant-funded by my Department. Therefore, there were no publicly funded items which could be recovered by my Department.

iv. Reviews and inspections by my Department included monitoring and evaluation in accordance with the Contract for Funding. During the period of funding, my Department monitored quarterly progress reports, carried out a number of monitoring visits on the organisation, and vouched relevant original invoices and salary records (P11s) to allow for the processing of payments.

v As noted in my previous answer, there was insufficient evidence to determine whether criminal activity had taken place in respect of funding from my Department. The Tullyally and District Development Group Ltd ceased trading in January 2012.

vi. As a result of this case and the risks around HMRC payments which have been highlighted by it, my Department has introduced a new system of controls to ensure that funded groups are meeting their obligations. Funded organisations are now asked to provide proof to the Department that HMRC payments are up to date by submitting their most recent HMRC real time PAYE record showing payments and outstanding balances for their employees.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development, pursuant to AQW 41798/11-15, and if the report on Rinmore was presented to the Board of the Housing Executive at its meeting on 15 December 2010, why is there no reference to the report in the minutes of that meeting.
(AQW 42574/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that a paper regarding Rinmore was submitted at the Housing Executive Board meeting on 15th December 2010. They have further advised that the paper and minutes were confidential at the time due to the status of proposals for stock transfer in Rinmore and were, therefore, not in the public domain.

Mr Easton asked the Minister for Social Development why the Social Return on Investment report for Rathgill in Bangor has not been published.
(AQW 42607/11-15)

Mr Storey: My officials commissioned Northern Ireland Housing Executive to carry out an evaluation of the Small Pockets of Deprivation programme, which included Social Return on Investment reports for all 17 SPOD areas. I understand that the final reports will be submitted to my Department shortly, and once these have been received and the overall programme evaluated I would be happy to make available to you the SROI report on Rathgill Estate, Bangor.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the Boiler Replacement Scheme; and what consideration has been given to extending the scheme in 2015.
(AQW 42610/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Boiler Replacement Scheme has been a hugely successful scheme and up to 31 January 18,481 households had installed a new more energy efficient boiler. The scheme has also provided work for over two thousand local installers. In my budget for the 2015/16 year I have allocated £2 million to allow the Boiler Replacement Scheme to be extended into the 2015/16 year.

Mr Eastwood asked the Minister for Social Development whether there are plans to re-evaluate the 25 per cent margin of change required in gross income before a reassessment is carried out to determine the amount payable in Child Maintenance Service payments.
(AQW 42614/11-15)

Mr Storey: As part of our Child Maintenance Reforms, a process of Annual Review has been introduced for all applications on our new Statutory Scheme. The purpose of this Annual Review is to take account of any income or household changes in the past 12 months that may affect the Child Maintenance assessment.

Any income changes outside of this process will only affect the assessment if they are significant, exceeding 25%. That is a fundamental aspect of the new scheme and there are no plans to review it. Parents who make their own Family Based Arrangements, are of course free to take account of any income changes as and when they occur.

Mr Allister asked the Minister for Social Development what funding has been provided to lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender groups by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive since 2011.
(AQW 42635/11-15)

Mr Storey: I would refer the Member to the answer provided in AQW 39719/11-15

Mr Rogers asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the additional protections afforded to private tenants, that are not already covered by existing legislation, by the introduction of the Landlord Registration Scheme.
(AQW 42648/11-15)

Mr Storey: Prior to the introduction of the Landlord Registration Scheme there was no central database of private landlords. Therefore when a landlord was not complying with the law and a tenant reported this to the local council environmental health department it was often difficult for enforcement action to be taken, specifically because they could not access up to date contact details for the landlord.

With the introduction of Landlord Registration existing and prospective tenants are encouraged to check if the landlord is registered and ensure the property is included in a registered landlord's portfolio. In addition, council environmental health officers can access the full information on the Register to enable them to proactively enforce private tenancy law.

On registration landlords receive a toolkit which details their obligations and duties under private rented sector law. Landlords are kept up-to-date with any proposed changes and can be involved in policy development.

As of 25 February 2015, over 33,000 landlords have registered providing details of over 70,000 tenancies.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Social Development to outline the rights of family members, or others, who (i) reside; and (ii) do not reside in a property as successor tenants to (a) Housing Executive; and (b) Housing Association properties following the death of the tenant or if the tenant moves permanently into a residential home.
(AQW 42720/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that there are two aspects to this issue which are: -

Succession - this takes place following the death of a tenant;

Assignment - this takes place when a Landlord agrees to a tenant assigning his/her tenancy to another person.

The Succession and Assignment Rights detailed below apply to both the Housing Executive and Housing Associations.

The Housing Selection Rules which govern Successions are: -

Succession to a Tenancy - Rule 73.

Succession to a tenancy only occurs where the existing tenant has died.

The Landlord will fully comply with the statutory provisions with regard to succession as set out in the Housing (N.I.) Order, 1983. Paragraphs 74 and 75 apply only if there is no statutory entitlement to succeed.

Succession to a Tenancy – Rule 74.

Where there is no statutory entitlement to succeed, the following people will be potentially eligible to succeed: -

1 A partner of the deceased if they have been living together for a year.

2 A carer, only if he/she was living with the deceased for a time in order to care for him/her and for that reason had sold a dwelling or given up a tenancy or licence in relation to a dwelling. (For the purposes of this paragraph, a tenancy or licence shall be ignored if the carer had been granted the said tenancy or licence by a relative).

3 The potential successor has accepted responsibility for the deceased tenant's dependants.

Succession to a Tenancy – Rule 75.

Those persons who are potentially eligible to succeed as set out at paragraphs 74 (1–3) above shall not be eligible to succeed if the deceased tenant was himself/herself a successor unless the deceased tenant was the spouse/civil partner, parent, brother or sister of the potential successor. (For the purposes of this paragraph, in deciding whether or not the deceased tenant was himself/herself a successor, any change from a sole tenancy to a joint tenancy, or vice versa, shall be ignored).

In relation to Assignments.

An assignment of tenancy occurs when the existing secure/introductory tenant in effect transfers his/her tenancy rights to someone else.

The Housing Selection Scheme Rules which govern assignments are detailed below: -

Assignment of Tenancy – Rule 76.

The Landlord will fully comply with its statutory obligations with regard to assignment. The rules set out in the next paragraph apply subject to, or in the absence of, any such statutory obligations.

Assignment of Tenancy – Rule 77.

As a general rule, the Landlord will not consent to any assignment. The very exceptional circumstances where the Landlord may exercise discretion to consent to assignment are as follows: -

1 Where it is not practicable for the existing tenant to continue to act as such, (for example extreme illness).

2 If the existing tenant leaves and someone else undertakes responsibility for any dependent children left in the household.

3 If the existing tenant goes into a residential home on a long term basis and other member(s) of the household remain in the property and wish to become tenant(s). In such circumstances all of the following conditions must exist:-

   a) The tenant has had to go into a residential home, and

   b) The tenant is unlikely to be able to return to the relevant dwelling within the next twelve months, and

   c) The potential assignee was living with the tenant in the dwelling when the tenant had to go into residential home, and

   d) The potential assignee would have had statutory entitlement, or an entitlement under the policy rules, to succeed to the tenancy if the tenant had died instead of entering the residential home.

4 If the tenant has to be rehoused in sheltered/special needs accommodation and other member(s) of the household remain in the property and wish to become tenant(s) and the following conditions exist:-

   a) the tenant needs to go into sheltered/special needs accommodation, and

   b) the tenant's tenancy of the new accommodation is indefinite and the tenant is unlikely to be able to return to the original dwelling within the next twelve months and such accommodation would not be able to house all of the tenant's current household, and

   c) the potential assignee was living with the tenant in the dwelling when the tenant had to go into sheltered/special needs accommodation, and

   d) the potential assignee would have had statutory entitlement, or an entitlement under the policy rules, to succeed to the tenancy if the tenant had died instead of entering the sheltered/special needs accommodation.

In relation to Succession and Assignment, if there are no statutory grounds or entitlement under the rules of the Housing Selection Scheme, consideration/ approval may be given if there are exceptional circumstances, by the Director of Landlord Services in the Housing Executive or equivalent officer for Housing Associations.

Mr Campbell asked the Minister for Social Development how many landlords have been prosecuted as a result of not registering as existing landlords since February 2014.
(AQW 42721/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Landlord Registration Regulations (2014) allowed private landlords who had no changes to existing tenancies and no new tenancies until 25th February 2015 to register.

Since February 2014, any landlord with a new tenancy or changes to an existing tenancy was required to register immediately. Within the first year of the Scheme, councils have issued two Fixed Penalty Notices to landlords who were in breach of these regulations.

The Registrar continues to work closely with councils to ensure that they are proactive with enforcement action.

Mr Beggs asked the Minister for Social Development what lessons have been learnt from the Scottish Mortgage Shared Equity Scheme and the Mortgage Relief Scheme in England; and whether he plans to introduce a scheme which would advise and assist home owners who are in financial difficulty.
(AQW 42727/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Repossessions Taskforce's conference in November 2014 brought together experts from Scotland, England and the Republic of Ireland to share their experience of developing and delivering mortgage rescue schemes in their respective jurisdictions. These sessions were accompanied with discussions from policy and academic professionals on a range of other innovative approaches, such as Assisted Voluntary Sales, which provide a structured transition out of homeownership.

The Taskforce has combined these valuable insights with a number of evaluations, which are publically available, of mortgage rescue schemes in other jurisdictions. Notable examples within this body of literature include the National Audit Office's report on the Department for Communities and Local Government's Mortgage Rescue Scheme and the Scottish Government's 'Interim Review of the Home Owners Support Fund'.

A common theme of successful rescue schemes is that they are targeted on the most vulnerable homeowners and utilised as a last resort. While the number of households 'rescued' through a scheme may be limited, the availability of a scheme can be a catalyst for disengaged borrowers contacting their lender or an advice provider. While the funding and delivery structures of mortgage rescue schemes vary across jurisdictions there is detailed analysis in each case on the policy's evidence base, achieving value for money and securing buy-in from the key sectors. The evaluations also illustrate that although a mortgage-to-shared-equity scheme is a seemingly a viable solution for distressed households, downward stair casing is not a popular option.

My Department has commissioned the Northern Ireland Federation of Housing Associations to analyse the full range of lessons learned from other jurisdictions and to complete a feasibility study on a potential mortgage rescue scheme in Northern Ireland. The findings from this exercise will be reported in spring 2015.

Mr Frew asked the Minister for Social Development what is the policy when a tenant in a Housing Executive property dies or moves permanently into full time nursing care; and what assessment is completed on the property and works are completed.
(AQW 42765/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that when it is made aware that a tenant is deceased the local Housing Executive office will check the property records to establish if anyone was living with the tenant. If so, the local Housing Executive office will investigate the potential for succession and request completion of succession application form if appropriate. If a succession is granted the person inherits the tenancy including the deceased tenant's tenancy conditions.

If the Housing Executive records indicate that the tenant lived alone, staff from the local office will call to the property to establish contact with the next of kin to arrange vacant possession.

If the tenant goes into residential care on a long term basis and other member(s) of the household remain in the property and wish to become tenant(s), the Housing Executive will assign the tenancy to the household member(s) in accordance with the rules of the Housing Selection Scheme.

From a maintenance perspective the Housing Executive has an obligation to carry out an inspection to determine if there are any outstanding repairs necessary that are the responsibility of the Housing Executive and also to ensure there are no Health and Safety issues. Any outstanding repairs or Health and Safety issues, particularly with regard to heating appliances and electrical installation, would be carried out.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the funding allocated to each volunteer centre in Northern Ireland by the Volunteer Bureau Initiative, since 2012, broken down by centre.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the specific role of the Northern Ireland Volunteer Bureau Initiative.
(AQW 42769/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Volunteer Development Agency was originally funded to administer revenue core funding to 15 Volunteer Centres across Northern Ireland under the Volunteer Bureaux Initiative (VBI).

Following an evaluation of Volunteer Bureaux Initiative new arrangements were developed to support volunteering infrastructure across Northern Ireland and the Volunteer Bureaux Initiative ceased to exist on 30 September 2013.

Mrs Dobson asked the Minister for Social Development to whom the Charity Commission for Northern Ireland are accountable if they publish information following conducting an investigation of a charity into the public domain which later turns out to be inaccurate.
(AQW 42785/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Charity Commission is accountable to the Northern Ireland Commissioner for Complaints (Northern Ireland Ombudsman) about the service provided by the Commission, and to the Information Commissioner's Office about how personal information has been handled by the Commission.

Mr Dickson asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the policy in regards to the preferred energy source for heating in Housing Executive owned homes.
(AQW 42829/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has advised that their heating policy states:-

- Gas remains the preferred option offered in heat replacement schemes in gas areas;
- Oil heating is the preferred option outside a gas area;
- Tenant choice outside the gas area is increased to include wood pellet boilers as a potentially viable alternative to oil; and
- Economy7 electric systems may be retained by tenant choice.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development to detail the role of the programme board overseeing the strategic implementation of Portrush Regeneration Strategy initiatives, including; (i) how many times they have met since 2013; (ii) which Departments and agencies were represented at meetings; and (iii) the outcomes of these meetings.
(AQW 42844/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Portrush Regeneration Programme Board was established in October 2013. The purpose of the Board is to oversee the implementation of the family of projects to be delivered in Portrush. This will involve ensuring that projects are started at the appropriate time, that proper management arrangements have been put in place and that they are meeting their key milestones and targets. The Programme Board will also identify and analyse the interdependencies between the projects – for example, where delays on one project might affect another – and ensure that arrangements are put in place to effectively manage and co-ordinate these so that the overall objectives of the Programme are met.

The Programme Board has met on 4 occasions:

(i) 30 October 2013; 31 January 2014; 10 April 2014; and 10 November 2014.

(ii) The meetings of the Programme Board were attended by senior staff from the Department for Social Development, Coleraine Borough Council, the Department of the Environment's Planning Service and Marine Divisions, the Department of regional Development's Roads Service, the Northern Ireland Tourist Board and the Strategic Investment Board

(iii) Outcomes of the meetings were as follows:

- The meeting of 30 October 2013 agreed the purpose, scope and membership of the Programme and the structure of the relationship between the Programme Board and Projects Boards which will be established to manage the individual projects to be delivered.
- The meeting held on 31 January agreed a draft vision and set of regeneration objectives for consideration by Ministers.
- The meeting held on 10 April 2014 defined the projects to be included within the Programme, agreed the first draft of the risk register for the programme and discussed the draft terms of reference for a hotel feasibility study.

- The meeting held on 10 November 2014 considered an initial draft of the terms of reference for a study to examine the options around a proposal for the redevelopment of Portrush Harbour and the content of a paper on the way forward for the regeneration of Portrush which I propose to issue to the Executive in the near future.

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development for his assessment of the Joint Ministerial Initiative, the Portrush Regeneration Strategy Western Peninsula; and to detail how they are providing indoor leisure facilities in Portrush.
(AQW 42848/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department has taken the lead in a number of regeneration initiatives in Portrush over the past few years and has provided investment to allow Coleraine Borough Council to complete several public realm improvement schemes.

The announcement that Royal Portrush Golf club will host the Open Championship as early as 2019 brings with it huge opportunities not only for Portrush but also for the wider Northern Ireland economy. To make the most of these opportunities however it is recognised that a number of major infrastructure projects would need to be delivered. This includes projects like the development of the harbour, the re-location of the train station and potentially the development of a 4* hotel.

To help progress this programme of works a Ministerial sub-group has been formed to include those Departments who would have input into the decision making process in the above projects. The Ministerial sub-group has representation from DSD, DETI, DRD and DOE. My assessment is that the arrangements have delivered a number of key improvements in Portrush over the past five years and offer an effective mechanism to take forward other prioposals to regenerate the resort.

Neither the Ministerial Sub-Group collectively nor my Department individually have a role in the provision of indoor leisure facilities in Portrush. This is a responsibility which falls to the local Council.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development (i) whether there are any accredited courses for private landlords in Northern Ireland; if so (ii) how many landlords have been accredited; and (iii) whether there are plans to use to the landlord registration fee to subsidise accreditation costs.
(AQW 42909/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Chartered Institute of Housing (CIH) offer an accredited course for private landlords in Northern Ireland.

104 private landlords have been awarded either a “Level 2 Award for Landlords” or a “Level 2 Award in Letting and Managing Residential Property”.

There are no current plans to use to the landlord registration fee to subsidise accreditation costs as the fee is being used to recoup the setting up and running costs of the Landlord Registration Scheme.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development how much has been spent on extending the Warm Homes Scheme from June 2014 to March 2015.
(AQW 42925/11-15)

Mr Storey: The Housing Executive has paid the Warm Homes Scheme Managers a total of £6,752,563 between July 2014 and January 2015. It is anticipated that further payments will be made of £3,540,751 for February and March 2015. This will bring the total cost of the Warm Homes Scheme contract extension to £10,293,314.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development what steps his Department is taking to ensure that local councils have the appropriate measures in place by 1 April 2015 to deliver Affordable Warmth.
(AQW 42926/11-15)

Mr Storey: Following two successful pilots in 2012 and 2013 my Department introduced the new Affordable Warmth Scheme on 15 September 2014. Both of these pilots provided sufficient information to determine the resources required by councils to deliver the new Affordable Warmth Scheme.

While the Affordable Warmth Scheme is at an early stage, it is already being effectively delivered across all council areas. Each of the 11 councils has signed a Service Level Agreement with the Department demonstrating their commitment to delivering the new scheme. All councils have appointed a Co-ordinator and support staff for the scheme. Officials from my Department meet regularly with lead council officers to monitor progress, receive feedback and provide additional support where necessary. My officials will continue to work closely with each of the 11 councils to ensure they have appropriate resources in place to deliver their part of the Affordable Warmth Scheme.

Mr B McCrea asked the Minister for Social Development whether his Department prepared a business case for the move from the Warm Homes Scheme to Affordable Warmth; and whether he will publish this business case.
(AQW 42927/11-15)

Mr Storey: My Department did prepare a Business Case for the new Affordable Warmth Scheme. This Business Case was approved by my Department’s Economist and the Department of Finance and Personnel. Whilst it is not Departmental policy to routinely publish a Business Case, the Affordable Warmth Business Case is available by request should anyone wish to obtain a copy.

Mrs D Kelly asked the Minister for Social Development for an update on the review of the Allocation of Social Housing. (AQW 43031/11-15)

Mr Storey: The public response to many of the proposals in the independent research, published by my Department, was positive. My officials are now considering the way forward.

Any proposals arising from the review will be subject to a full public consultation.

Northern Ireland Assembly Commission

Mr Flanagan asked the Assembly Commission whether it has been approached by Tourism Ireland with regards to the prospect of Parliament Buildings joining the Global Greening Initiative; and (ii) whether it has considered participating in the Initiative. (AQW 42423/11-15)

Mr Ramsey (The Representative of the Assembly Commission): In response to the questions, please find the following;

(i) To date, the Northern Ireland Assembly Commission has not been approached by Tourism Ireland or other organisations requesting Parliament Buildings to join the "Global Greening line up for St Patrick's Day 2015".

(ii) At its meeting on 11 November 2014, The Assembly Commission agreed to proceed with the work required to install an external lighting system enabling Parliament Buildings to be "colour washed" and approved the "Northern Ireland Assembly use of external lighting policy at Parliament Buildings (2014)" in order to manage this system; due to be fully installed later in 2015. A copy of the policy is available overleaf for your perusal.

To date, the Assembly Commission has neither scheduled a day (policy paragraph 5a) nor received a request (policy's paragraph 5c) for the Global Greening Initiative in line with the policy.

The Commission is actively discussing its approach to the specific days on which the lighting system will be used.

Northern Ireland Assembly use of External Lighting Policy at Parliament Buildings (2014)

Introduction

1 In addition to the financial and environmental benefits to be gained by the LED external lighting system, it also has the ability to "colour wash" the facade of Parliament Buildings. This, by controlling the brightness and colour of the external lamps, consequently a wide variety of effects can be obtained ranging from subtle light, shade and colour effects highlighting the building's architectural features to a full "colour wash" of the building for special events and other functions.

2 These features, if properly and tastefully used, clearly have the potential to enhance the appearance of our iconic building and its public perception. However, there is an obvious concern that over-use could adversely affect the image and reputation of Parliament Buildings.

Purpose statement

3 Parliament Buildings being theParliament Buildings is home to the Northern Ireland Assembly, the legislative body for Northern Ireland established under the Belfast Agreement 1998 (Good Friday Agreement). home of the Northern Ireland Assembly, the legislative body for Northern Ireland established under the Belfast Agreement 1998 (Good Friday Agreement), it is therefore essential that this policy utilises the full capacity of the enhanced lighting system to best effect, but will do so in a way which is in keeping with the purpose, history and use of the building.

Scope

4 This policy will affect all set "enhanced" external lighting features ("colour-wash") including black –outk –out[6] requests scheduled and ad-hoc request by Members when sponsoring a 3rd party organisations event. No request from individual members of the public will be considered under this policy.

Policy Statement & Responsibilities

5 In order to maximise the use of the system it is therefore proposed that:

a) The Commission will schedule up to 4 days (consecutive or not) during a calendar year for event(s) of its choice in line with the policy.

b) The Northern Ireland Charity of the year will have access to the system for up to 5 days (consecutive or not) during its 12 months term.

c) The Assembly Commission will grant up to another 8 days for events during a calendar year when requests are made (paragraphs g) in line with the policy (1 day per event).

6 Earth Hour / Lights-out Initiative (outbreak of WWI)

Altogether there will be up to 17 days scheduled per year in line with the policy with potential extraordinary ad-hoc requests as specified at paragraphs h) & i).

d) There are also a considerable number of internationally recognised days including some 140+ UN specific days including Holocaust day, Suicide Prevention Day, World Aids Day, Autism, Diabetes etc.

http://www.un.org/en/events/observances/days.shtml

In many cases these carry political connotations or are not associated with a specific colour. These days will therefore not be yearly marked except where specifically requested in line with the policy or have been chosen by the Commission as part of its annual 4 days (paragraph a).

e) No more than 4 days of featured external lighting for separate events will be permitted per calendar month.

f) Only Events organised at Parliament Buildings or within the Stormont Estate (DFP approved) will have access to the lighting system for 1 or several consecutive days.

g) Due to the perceived appetite from 3rd party organisations to utilise the system only charitable, community and non-profit organisations based in or having a significant connection to Northern Ireland, celebrating a significant anniversary (1st, 5th, 10th, 25th, 50th etc..) or occasion may be permitted to have Parliament Buildings illuminated in a special colour in line with paragraph c).

Extraordinary events not organised by the Northern Ireland Assembly but which may legitimately be regarded as of significant benefit to the Assembly/province from a tourism/engagement perspective may also be granted permission. (example:

h) Giro d'Italia 2014).

i) Approval for external lighting in line with the policy should be sought from the Assembly Commission no less than 2 calendar months before the event is taking place. This will be agreed by consensus in line with "Historic Anniversaries" (Minutes of Commission meeting held on 08/05/12).

This, unless in exceptional circumstances when it will be granted by the Speaker: i.e. in the event that a recognised sporting team or organisation with a significant connection to the Assembly/province and which has achieved a significant accolade (winning an international competition etc.) may also be granted permission if a request is made.

j) A monthly monitoring of request to lit up Parliament Buildings will be submitted to the Commission in order to support all of the Policy requirements including that no more than 2 events are supported within any given month.

k) Organisation wishing to use the external lighting feature will apply for the use of this facility directly to the Events Office in line with both this policy and the Events policy.

Organisers will then be advised to seek triple signature sponsorship from Members showing cross-designation support.

The events Office will submit this application to the Commission for approval in line with paragraph c).Within its submission the Events Office will indicate whether a requested date / set of dates falls on a designated day for flying the Union Fag on Parliament Buildings. This will enable the Commission to assess whether a request might cause detriment to the Assembly or raise public concern therefore risk to the Assembly and/or a Member.

Definitions & Abbreviations

6 "Colour-wash": full coverage of the main facades of Parliament Buildings in one single colour. No combination of colours or projection of images available

7 LED: Light Emitting Diode

8 UN: United Nations

9 External Lighting feature Day: from dusk to dawn on a set date with partial diming from 2am or as specified by onsite technical team.

Day Centres: Transport

Ms Sugden asked the Minister for Social Development what provision exists for small voluntary charitable community groups to enable them to bring people with psychological, physical and learning disabilities to and from day centres.
(AQW 42080/11-15)

Mr Storey (The Minister for Social Development): There is no specific funding to bring people with psychological, physical and learning disabilities to and from day centres.

DSD's Volunteering Small Grants Programme delivers support direct to frontline volunteering organisations. The programme provides support to volunteer providing organisations to cover volunteer out-of-pocket expenses travel or equipment costs and over £1.4m has been allocated over the last two years supporting over 1300 organisations. The next phase of this programme is planned to launch in April / May 2015.

In addition the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development (DARD) has confirmed that they work with the Department for Regional Development (DRD) to provide support for the Elderly and Disabled. Individuals receive concessionary travel on Rural Community Transport Partnership vehicles and DARD currently provides support to community and voluntary groups in rural areas.

DHSSPS has confirmed that some Health and Social Care Trusts may have service level agreements with local voluntary and community groups to bring people to and from day centres. These agreements may have statutory transport provided or have a transport element reflected in the contract or are designed for people who make their way independently to the Day Centre.

The criteria for statutory transport provision is provided in the Transport Strategy for Health and Social Care Services in Northern Ireland - August 2007 (http://www.dhsspsni.gov.uk/a_transport_strategy_for_health_and_social_care_services_in_northern_ireland.pdf). Annex 2 of this Strategy sets out the specific eligibility criteria for the provision of transport to facilitate access to social care services (adult services).

Division

Motion – McCreesh Park

Proposed:

That this Assembly expresses its concern at the decision by Newry and Mourne District Council to approve again the naming of the Patrick Street Play Park in Newry after convicted IRA terrorist Raymond McCreesh; notes that the vote was taken prior to the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland making a final formal ruling on the matter; further notes the seemingly lethargic approach of the Equality Commission for Northern Ireland in pursuing this case; and calls on the Minister of the Environment to respond to the vote in light of the requirement for councillors to act in a way that promotes good relations by providing a positive example for the wider community to follow and, crucially, acting in the interest of the whole community.

Mr W Irwin
Mr N McCausland
