1. INTRODUCTION

This reading list, Brexit Outcomes and Northern Ireland, has been prepared to assist Members of the Legislative Assembly (MLAs) and others in considering developments arising from the United Kingdom's withdrawal from the European Union and their continuing implications for Northern Ireland.

The publication of this edition follows a period of continuing evolution in UK-EU relations. Since June 2026, political developments in the United Kingdom, including the appointment of a new Prime Minister, have prompted renewed discussion regarding the future direction of UK-EU cooperation and the operation of post-Brexit arrangements.

For Northern Ireland, Brexit-related issues continue to have particular significance given the region's unique arrangements under the Withdrawal Agreement and the Windsor Framework. During the summer and autumn of 2026, discussion remained focused on the practical operation of the Windsor Framework, including arrangements governing the movement of goods between Great Britain and Northern Ireland, the application of relevant EU law, and mechanisms for consultation and oversight.

The economic and constitutional implications of Northern Ireland's post-Brexit position also remain the subject of debate. Discussion has continued regarding Northern Ireland's access to both the UK internal market and aspects of the EU Single Market for goods, often described as "dual market access". Differing perspectives continue to be expressed on the opportunities and challenges associated with these arrangements, including their impact on trade, investment, governance and Northern Ireland's place within the United Kingdom.

More broadly, Brexit continues to intersect with wider discussions concerning devolution, North-South cooperation, constitutional relationships within the United Kingdom, and the future development of UK-EU relations. Against this backdrop, governments, businesses, academics and commentators continue to assess the longer-term economic, social and political consequences of Brexit, more than a decade after the 2016 referendum.

In this context, this reading list brings together a selection of relevant commentary, analysis and source material. It focuses particularly on Northern Ireland while situating developments within the wider framework of UK-EU relations. The list draws upon a range of sources, including academic research, policy analysis, official publications, think-tank commentary and media reporting.

Given the breadth of material relating to Brexit outcomes, this reading list is not intended to be exhaustive. Rather, it seeks to provide a curated selection of resources to support informed consideration of issues affecting Northern Ireland in the post-Brexit period. RaISe will continue to review and update the list in light of future developments.
